Origin of the Rule "At the time of the definite emergence of the Hearsay rule—that is, by the end of the 1600's there remained in existence a practice more or less loose, of receiving the reports of the common people as evidence of fact. . . . The jury could in any case have considered, had they otherwise known of it, would be unnatural and improbable. But with the final shaping of the Hearsay rule's limits, and the conscious statement of specific exceptions, in the first half of 1700's and with the progress and final doctrine that the jury could consider evidence in Court, the use of common

by the

Subjective Relevancy—Adequate knowledge Unless the situation presented to a presiding judge is such that knowledge on the part of a given declarant as of general

Barrel, C M
L R Ir
cen, 75 L J
with respect

Ev.

imu-

the

ving

that from their situation they probably were conversant with the matter of which they were speaking" Bow v Allensdown, 34 N H, 351, 366. When however, the circumstances show that the declaration is made otherwise than upon the declarant's own knowledge it will, even when relating to a public right, be inadmissible (Devonshire v Neill supra) Plap Ev 286

Scope of the Section "Evidence is to be admitted from old persons . . . of what they have heard other persons affecting classes of the community cannot be excluded, or relaxation the

S. 32. rule against the admission

If the question were have a right to use and the that evidence of reputation for follow

individu

in but t

U J in

excludin

tion, or c

interest,

in which

J in Hall v Mayo 97 M 416, Green v Chelsea, 21 Pick 80; Dunbar v Llewellyn, 15 Q B 791, Queen v Bedfordshire, 1 E & B 535. But the d i tion must relate to the general right, and not to particular facts which app or negative it. R v Bliss, 7 A & E, 550; Crease v Barrel, 1 C. M & R 919.
R v Berger (1891) 1 Q B 823, Merce v. Denne (1905) 2 Ch 303, 81
Ratcliff v Marsdon 72 J P 475, Fouke v Berrington, (1914) 2 Ch 303, 81 13, Fay § 617 Phy Ed 7th Ed 287

The best way to
as far back as living regard to the preceding is not however essen

any evidence of modern admissibility of such evidence. Crease v Barrel, 1 C M & R 919, 920, 921, raton v Llewellyn 1 Q B 791 (801); Wills Ed 229. Facts in issue are relevant facts within the meaning of section 32 of the Evidence Act, and statements made by deceased persons about facts in issue are admissible under the section.
Raghunath v Vithalaram; 34 Ind Cas 875, disapproving Fulcher v Lewis
15 B 565

This clause permits proof to be given of a statement of a deceased person that in his family or in the community of the estate to which he belonged and such a been likely statement to be Parbati v C
to give his grounds of that opinion, information derived from deceased persons, and must be the expression of an independent opinion based on hearsay.

2 L R Ir 159 60, Phy Ed 7th Ed 286

Statement of an individual was always regarded such is always receivable

R 14. So also maps are also receivable. R v Milton, 1 C. & K. 62; Wigmore 3d Ed 111, Alcock v Cook, cited, 1 Ph Ed 251.

The same rule is applicable in

Dow 297; Smith v Earl Brounlon

2 Ch 303. Maps prepared by o matter may also be received. Hammond v Bradstreet, 10 L R 111, Fulcher 1 E & E, 111. Copies of Court rolls can also be admitted under section. Plaxton v Dare, 11 B. & C 17; Mt. Gen v. Emerson, (1871) 1 C 649, Flow v Parker, 5 F. R 26. So also deeds and leases, between persons

In Brisco v it is as good certainly different reputation, for a jury are summoned from the country at large, and are not themselves likely to know of the matter. Yet where the matter has been before went by default. Neil v Devonshire, supra. Similarly judgments, decrees, and orders of Courts and of similar bodies, if final, are admissible as evidence of reputation. Step Dig Ev Art 30. But here also the persons acting as Judges had no knowledge of the thing. Rogers v Wood v. Villebois, 13 M & W 198; but in this section it is stated that the fact that no one in the region had ever heard of the right, custom, or boundary being as alleged should be admissible as a negative reputation. Drinkwater v Porter, 2 C & K 182; Anglesey v Hatherton, 10 M & W 239; Wigmore § 1095.

Declarations as to public or general interest. In proof of public or general rights or customs or matters of public or general interest, statements

32. Hickie, 15 Q B which some class of which are based on the customs of manors (Barrett, 1 R 919), parishes (Berry v Danner, Per 106, Evans v Mithyr, 1 connected hamlets (Thomas Jenkins, 1 manors (Barnes Dawson 1 M & S 77), Wills 2nd Ed 222 For the purpose of the rule, the test what is public is as to whether the subject in question is sustained, and, as it were, spirited decisions at a correct opinion Where although it is of public interest and forms the

must be

subject matter of the suit

The question next arises, about what is received as trustworthy The principle already examined is that the nature of the reputation is an active, constant and intelligent discussion by trustworthy conclusions As a rule should be one of public, or general or public interest, and the common phrasing though it varies loosely But this is still only a rule of thumb To decide difficult cases it is necessary still to seek the living principle and ask anew whether the matter is of such general interest to the community that by the thorough sifting of active, constant and intelligent discussion a fairly trustworthy reputation is likely to arise Wignore 1086 see also R v Bedfordshire, 4 E & B 793 R v Bedfordshire, 4 E & B 533 Declarations made ante mortem by persons who are now dead in respect of a question relating to a matter of general or public interest even if they be no more than evidence of reputation or hearsay evidence, are admissible Busoid v Aenay, A I R 1929 Cal 533-534 C W N 439

Interest The term 'interest' here does not mean that which is inherent in gratifying curiosity or a love of information or amusement, but that in which a class of the community have a pecuniary interest or some interest in which their legal rights or liabilities are affected Per Lord Campbell, C J in Queen v Bedfordshire, 4 E & B 533 The interest spoken of in the rule is that of ownership or some lesser property in the chattels land or franchises in which an individual may possess a public more or less extended interest from ownership is no ground for assertions regarding it Chambers v Evans, 1 E & B 534

Boundaries An extra-jurisdictional boundary, being on a matter of public interest, to have been made by one person in an assumption may be made in favour of any person resident in the community affected by the position of a public of actual knowledge may at any time be demanded by the presumption Chamberlayne's 1 E & B 2793

Public custom Where a house in a village is privately sold, proof of a custom in the remainder of the village gets one-fourth of the purchase price of a similar custom with regard to the purchase of a house in a village 147 (18) F R 147

Sivanatha, 17 N W 100 heads of districts are often accepted as evidence Ev 190, see also Paul Bai v Iam Hu, 1 N W 100 Mahomed, 3 N W P 204

Opinion What is offered must be in effect a reputation, not the mere assertion of an individual But reputation includes and is often learned from witness was "What have you heard old men, now deceased, say as to the reputation on this subject?" Thus, though in form the information may be merely what deceased persons have been heard to say about a custom, yet in effect it comes or ought Wymore § 1581, see also Porter,

2 C. & K 182, Earl of Lebanh v
Thompson, (1903) 2 Ch 3; putation from deceased persons. But "reputation is no other than the hearsay of those who may be supposed to have been acquainted with the fact, handed down from 180 it is heard E 679.

In Mercer v Denne (1904) 2 Ch 534, the suit was for enforcing fishing rights. 1639, under an information by the Attorney-ich the s-a extended was excluded In rejecting it p 543 "I am of opinion that these depostitions are not admi

right which the Crov
the depositions of
on the question to witnesses in other actions are admissible against strangers amongst other cases, if they relate to a custom where reputation would be evidence, but then those putation and not of matters of iorities .. that reputation as also Ireland v Powell, cited in

Itq v Bliss, 7 Ad & E 555 In Ireland v Powell, supra, the question was whether a turnpike stood within limits of a town, and though evidence of reputation was received to show that the town extended to a certain point, yet declarations by old people since dead that those houses formerly stood he ground that those Denne, (1905) 2 Ch

(1914) 2 Ch 303 So the reputation :
"I know the right and custom to understand the general acceptance of the custom by the community to be such and such" is admissible The deceased individual declarant is merely the mouthpiece of the reputation Whenever, therefore, individual declarations are

S. 32.

Birell, 1 C M & R 925, Drunk case
v Porter, 7 C & P 181 But in Barraclough v Johnson, 8 A & E 93 Lord Denman C J said 'I do not agree that it is necessary for persons giving an opinion as to the publicity of a way to state that they found them-reputation although reputation The at some extent' In I establish that altho matters of public
 an inference of fact allows evidence of opinion in respect of any matter of public or general interest, the test being whether the deceased person expressing the opinion was likely to have had knowledge In the case of Mobants, even if they may have had knowledge by means of oral tradition handed down from Mobant to Chela, the opinion would be relevant but not particular facts. Rini Prasad v Shiro 12 Lib 497-A 1 R 1931 Lah 16

Opinion must be of competent person, The reputation to be admissible must obviously have been formed among a class of persons who were in a position to have sound sources of information and to constitute intelligently to the formation of the reputation Wignmore § 1591 In Weeks v Sparks 1 M & S 693, Le Blanc J said "And the only evidence of reputation which was received was that from persons connected with the district The rule generally adopted upon qu after a foundation is on the evidence of reputation what old persons who were in a situation to know what these rights are been heard to say concerning them "Evidence of reputation upon general points is receivable, because all mankind being interested therein, it is natural that they would discourse together about it information Per Lord Kenyon in More is thus laid down by Parke B in Crease v

hood But where the right is really public—a claim of right interest which seems difficult to which all are concerned but of course it would be shown to have some frequently using the road in dispute See also Duke of Buccleugh v 4 Frob 467 (469), Daniel statement untrustworthy to the admissibility before the dispute

S. 3

has

3 C

B

C

9 P.

respl

have had a personal knowledge of the facts, and to have stood quite disinterested are received in evidence. In cases of general rights, which depend upon immemorial usage, living witnesses can only speak of their own knowledge to what has passed in their own time, and to supply the deficiency, the law receives the declarations of persons who are dead. Therefore, however, the witness is them would lead to the most dangerous consequences. Accordingly, I know no rule better established in practice than this, that such declarations shall be excluded. With respect to questions of prescription, I have known many be made before even the existence of any actual controversy, concerning the subject matter of the declaration. Davies v Loundes, 6 M & G 473 (518). So a dispute was

G, 30 L J P

eclaration, has

on 3 Camp at

(are admitted) upon public rights, made ante litem motam, when there was no existing dispute respecting them, is that these declarations are considered as disinterested, dispassionate and made without any intention to serve a cause or mislead posterity, but the case is entirely altered post litem motam, when a con-

might tend to support the declarant's own title will not of itself be sufficient to exclude them. Doe v Davies, 10 Q. B. 314. Halsbury Vol 13 469. So "there must be, not merely facts which lead to a dispute, but a lis mota, or suit, Shamlal v Radha, 1 C. L. R. 173; Anadi v Nandlal, 16 A 665. So also where Act Sangram Singh v Rajan Bhai, 12 C 219=12 I A 183 (P C). But this clause does not cover statements of facts made by interested parties in denial, in the course of litigation, of pedigrees set up by the opposite parties Narain v. Chandt, 9 A 467=A W N 1897, 118. "The statement declared to be relevant by the 5th clause is a statement relating to the existence of any relationship between persons alive or dead (the language imposes no restriction), is special means of by the Calcutta and corresponding rule in which the question can certain persons

Ram Chandra v Jogesua
Oriental G S Company
 Oudh Select Case 265
 admission of what for the whether a particular person survived another, and it is obvious that this clause does not justify the man was at the time
 his family Parbati v
 of relationship, the statements of the deceased relations, servants and dependants every instance, it must be a question of fact as to whether the person who made the statement had special means of knowledge Rama Krishna v Tirunarayana, A. I R 1932 Mad 193=62 M L J 116. The effect of the section is to make a S. 32. Scope of Clause (6). evidence on questions of relationship.

Held, that verring the

ment I
to the I 32 of ti
ontries marriage ledge
the horo
five to decide is not Similarly in a suit tendered in mother and of his marri
nient on it,
that the horoscope was not admissible under s. 32, cl 6 of the Evidence Act Ramnarain Kalia v. Monu Bibee, 9 C 613. In delivering the judgment J. said "The document tendered is not a statement relating to the existence of any relationship by blood, marriage, or adoption, between persons deceased It only purports on the face of it to be a statement of relationship between a deceased person and a living such a case. It is not sug to the affairs of the family age of a person who is al of a family pedigree. But I am of opinion that it does not come within the words in the sub-section. But there is another objection to the admission of the document which is fatal. Section 32 says that 'statement written or verbal, uncorroborated' may be admitted in certain cases. On the plain face evidence it appears that he does not write the horoscope, or the endorsement on it, and therefore cannot be found, or become in the opinion that the document is Lal, supra, Petharam C. J. observed that in the case of a horoscope, the statement is not a statement of relationship, but a statement of fact.

which any tombstone, made" For

Pedigree
from gener.

or was born, but were drawn upon a particular occasion for a specific purpose.

in a family pedigree, such statements are usually family records handed down few member of the family dead mentary evidence on which the plaintiff relies is found to be reasonable, especially if and reliable the oral evidence which consists mainly of the depositions of the members of the family should also be accepted as trustworthy, being consistent with the documentary evidence. On the other hand if the docu mentary evidence is not of the character mentioned above the oral evidence

Mathura Prashad, 13 C W N 1-10 Bom L R 1088-8 C 14. Cus. 175 (P C). The point of view with which the decision of the question as to proof of a certain pedigree should be approached is that if the documentary evidence on which the plaintiff relies is found to be reasonable, especially if and reliable the oral evidence which consists mainly of the depositions of the members of the family should also be accepted as trustworthy, being consistent with the documentary evidence. On the other hand if the documentary evidence is not of the character mentioned above the oral evidence

Ind Cas
an Evidence lawful by Sadik Ali, 2

O. C 115

English Law. Declarations relating to pedigrees are allowed where they were made, before the commencement of the suit, by a deceased person provided the person making them was related by blood to the person to whom they refer, or was the husband or wife of such person. McKilley's Est 271, see also Shrewsbury Peerage Case, 7 H. L. Cas at p. 26 Under the term 'Pedigree' are but when marriage, others or 447 In even on the words the declarations of deceased persons respecting the places where their relatives were born, and where they were married, resided, went to, or died, cannot be received. But in Shields v Boucher, 1 De G & S 40, Sir J L Knight Bruce V C said. 'If the place of birth in Rex v Erith, had been a genealogical fact as it was not,—had been material namely for any genealogical purpose, which it was 's Bench might possibly have v Deauchamp, Hurl Est of Monkton v Att Gen, 1 Deg 38 So 'declarations of the affinity only, when the pa in short, which is strictly speaking, matter of pedigree, may be proved as matter relating to the condition of the family by the declarations of deceased ously Per such rejected with, the question of pedigree, or when they are not required for some genealogical purpose (Haines v Guthrie, 13 Q B D 818) they will be rejected Phip Est 7th Ed 298

(2) like statement in a deed or will relating to the affairs of the family or in any family pedigree etc when made before the question in dispute was raised Section 50 provides that when the Court has to form an opinion as to relationship of one person to another the opinion expressed by conduct as to the existence of such relationship of any person who, as a member of the family or otherwise, has special means of knowledge on the subject is relevant Per Mullick J in Bibi Fatma v Abdul Kasim, A I R 1928 Pat 539-110 Ind Cas 428 In India it is difficult to prove such facts as the date of birth after the lapse of many years, and it would be unreasonable to demand such a class of evidence as would justly be demanded in England But the evidence must be such as to carry conviction to the mind Nawal Sha b a Begam v Nanhi Begam 11 C W N 130 (P C) = 1 M L T 429

(by) requiring the facts from the mouth of the witnesses who has the knowledge
I, E A.—71

§. 32. of them In cases of pedigree, therefore, recourse is had to a secondary sort of evidence,—the best the nature of the subject will admit, enabling the descent from Peerage Case, & Camp being impossible to prove the declarations of the reputation must proceed on particular facts, such as marriages, births and the like, from the necessity of the thing, the hearsay of the family as to the particular facts is not excluded” In the same case Laurence J observed the family is of which would

In Sturges v pose the ground is that they were matters relating to long time past, and that it was necessary to relax the strict rules of evidence for the purpose of doing justice” so declarations under clauses 6 and 7 are admissible when the evidence is not procurable. Vide Ram Narayan v Monce, 9 C. 613; Surjan v Sardar, 5 C W 19 P. C.

Circumstantial guarantee

ness of such a statement is thus :

Ves 511 “It was not the opinion tradition, generally, is evidence persons having such a connection natural and likely, from their speaking the truth, and they could that: declarations in the family, descriptions upon monuments, descriptions in Bibles and registry books,—all are admitted upon principle that they are the natural effusions of a party who must know the truth, and who speaks upon an occasion when his mind stands in an even position, without any temptation to exceed or fall short of the truth” In R v Erusnell, 3 T R 720, Ashhurst J said “It is natural for persons to talk of their own situations and of their families. The evidence is in its nature of an unsuspicious kind, it is generally them are proved to be dead or incapable of giving evidence Mahomed, 81 Ind Cas 927=6 Lah L J 299=A L R 1925 Lah 63, see Prohlad v Ramsaran, 38 C. L J 213.

two points to be illustrated at differs from of a person evidence is that (5) refers to (6) refers to

of things, such as genealogical trees, tomb stones etc. Clause (5) refers to relationship between any persons (living or dead) whereas clause (6) refers to do

er
in
is nt
-- 18

S. 3

"not necessary that it should have been made by a person who had special means of knowledge, but it must be contained in a will or deed relating to the affairs of the family to which any such deceased person belonged, or in a family pedigree, or upon tombstone, family portrait or other thing on which statements are usually made" Field's Evidence 6th Ed. p 139, Norton v 188

the to consi
or by whether the statement offered be an individual's assertion or the family repute.
Wigmore § 1195; see also Colbel's Estate, 51 Mont 453, Young v State, 36 Or. 417.

Tr 1166, 1179, 1181,
son in the neighbour-
Wood, 14 East p
remember the case of plaintiff to J F In delivering his judgment Best C J said "Consanguinity, or affinity by blood, therefore, is not necessary, and for this obvious reason, that to be informed of the state of the family of relation who is distantly connected by deceased persons to have been made made post litem, in

Moo & Rob. 28) Similarly in Crispin v Daghton, 3 Sw & Tr 44, Sir Cress-

32. well Creswell observed "I can well understand that where a matter is likely to be discussed and well known in a family, a member of the family may be allowed to give evidence of it, but in this case the plaintiff according to his own by o
with But
would
of the fact connection however the adoption
that in a

and also of persons who though not related by blood or marriage to the deceased were intimately acquainted with its members and state, shall be admitted to give evidence after the death of the declarant to the extent as those of deceased members of the family.

The law presumes against a declaration made by a person who is not a member of the family, and is strongly in favour of marriage. It will not be admitted unless it is made in a ceremony is invariably insisted upon as to the class to which the parties belong. The law therefore relaxes the rules of evidence and in the absence of other evidence presume marriage on the statements of persons; the behaviour of the couple and their general reputation. 50 of the Evidence Act

Statement made during the course of a trial of trustworthiness must have been made ante litem motam. Wigmore § 1451 In the Case of Camp 401, Mansfield C J said "In the Inglesea Cause many declarations of deceased persons were given in evidence, but after an attentive examination I can not find that any of these had been made after the dispute had occurred. I am not aware of any other authority upon the subject in our law, but the distinction of declarations ante litem motam and post litem motam is clearly taken in a foreign treatise of great learning, entitled De Probationibus. You must have now only to notice the observation that to exclude declarations you must show that the litem mota was known to the person who made them. There is no such rule. The line of distinction is the origin of controversy and not the commencement of the suit. After the controversy has originated all declarations are to be excluded, whether it is known or not known to the witness. If an enquiry were to be instituted in a controversy was or was not known would be wasted and great confusion. I conceive that the deposition now taken in the same case the reason for the exclusion, is thus stated by Heath and their manner of contest has originated and not the fact of the declaration or the other person by & M 160 Brougham L C observed "If there be litem mota or a contestation has precisely the same effect upon a person's mind with litem contestatio what person's declaration ceases to be admissible. It is no longer strong if he be a party to the contestation. Lord Eldon calls it a natural effect.

Wigmore § 1483 So where declarations are made post litem

not admissible, and not to have in Doc v Ranta adoption of the question of adoption was directly in issue, such statements should not be admitted in evidence in the present suit under subsection 5 section 32, as they are not made before the question is disputed was raised Ramkrishna v Tiru-
M L J 116 Declarations as to the inadmissible in evidence if made post ore the commencement of legal proceedings, but before even the existence of any actual controversy concerning the is made in the obvious interest of the Mahomed I. v Sarid Mahomed, to Roman law, but the term lis mota cument of the action, and was not t in our law the term lis is taken controversy, and by this lis mota in versy, and not the commencement of the suit Tay § 692, see also Berkeley Pec age Case, 1 Crump 417 Monltou v 111 Gen 2 Russ & My 161 Gee v Warl, 7 L & B 509 The ground on which evidence of this description is excluded is the supposition that, when a ly to range themselves or to have imbibed their would become tainted at its very source Goolers Cump 417, Mr Justice Laurence said 'W and even good will, tempt many who , to deviate from the truth in the laxity of conversation Can it be presumed that a man stands perfectly indifferent, upon an existing dispute respecting his kindred? His declarations post litem motam—not merely after the commencement of the law suit, but after the dispute has arisen, for that is the primary meaning of the word lis—are evidently more likely to mislead the jury than to direct them to a

by a man who has an interest

It was once said by Baron Alderson in Wallis v Beauchamp 6 C & P 561 that it was sufficient if at the time of the declaration the state of facts existed (for example the birth of a child) as to which the controversy afterwards arose is to the controversy and to Although the dictum of Baron

Scott N R

111 Gen 30

L C said

nce is not the existence of a

v Lowndes,

facts which

may lead to a dispute, but a lis mota or suit, or controversy preparatory to a suit actually commenced, or dispute arisen and that upon the very same pedigree or subject matter which constitutes the question in litigation See also Stanel v Wade, 1 Myl & Cr 338 (306), Butler v Mountgarret, 7 H L Cas 633, Fredrick v 111 Gen 41 L J P & M 1 In Bahadur Singh v Mohar Singh, 24 A 94 (107) P C the principal oral evidence consisted of statements made by the plaintiff as to their descent the information as to which they had received from their ancestors Objection was taken that such of these statements as were made since 1847 were inadmissible in

S. 32. evidence under clauses 5 and 6 of section 32 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) and that they were a family dispute.

exclusion would not apply to what was done in prevention of dispute, even were it in support of the title of the declarant; and although in the belief that his title would be affected by the same circumstances as the party seeking to avail himself of the declaration. Thus in Goodrich v Mass, Cowper, 591, Lord Mansfield in receiving such evidence said "I have known advice given to a father and mother to make attested declarations in writing under their hand of the precise state of the truth."

In Moncton v Att Gen, 2 Russ & My. 161, Lord Brougham ascribed Lord Mansfield's view of admissibility to the principle that the declaration was made with a view to their own interest, but to preserve a constant record of facts peculiarly within their knowledge (which is one of the grounds of admitting such hearsay evidence); see Forrest Peerage Case, L R App Cas 1, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000.

Narain Kaur v Chandu Din, 9 A 467. So also depositions made for the purpose of another suit are inadmissible if the same point was in issue, otherwise Wills v Wills (1870) 10 L R 101. Per Lord Freeman in Devonshire, whose deposition was open to him at the time it was made, was inadmissible for a party claiming through her. Devonshire v Devonshire, 10 L R 101.

but he admits that this principle must not be pushed too far. According to section 32, clauses (5) and (6) such evidence is admissible although the question is not directly in issue.

some feeling of interest, which will often cast suspicion on the declaration. It has never been held to render them inadmissible. Again, any controversy to exclude must be on the particular subject in issue, controversy in a merely analogous one, but not the issue itself, not necessarily carrying with it the elements of mistrust. Thus in a case respecting copy where the point in controversy is foreign to that which was before controverted, there never has been, a lis mota, and consequently the objection does not apply."

1 law, that knowledge
Russ & M.
pressed, that it is given

in evidence as hearsay must only respecting the such distinction.

the party knew

of his own personal knowledge, or as is much more frequently the case, to what he heard from others to whom he gave credit; for they are only adduced as evidence of reputation in the family, and that is the only mode in which the tradition in a family can be proved, and the subject matter of that tradition can

511 (514); Sheddén v. Att. Gen., 50 L. J. P. M. 217. But if instead of being matters within their personal knowledge Tay. § 639, see also Doe v. Randall, 2 M. & P. 20, Staney v. Wade, 7 Sim 611, Robson v. Att. Gen. 10 Cl. & Fin. 500. So also proof by one of a family, that many years before, a younger brother of the person last seised had gone abroad, that the reputation in the family was that he had died there, and that the witness had never heard in the family of his having been married, is presumptive evidence of his death without issue. Doe v. Griffin, 15 East. 293.

not therefore necessary. Monkton v. Att. Gen. 2 Russ. & M. 160; Berkeley

32. Peerage Case, 1 Camp 116. The difficulties, then that arise are concerned with the line between declarants that may fairly be supposed to be thus qualified like? Secondly, shall any be for example, according as the consanguinity or by affinity?

be supposed to be present when, and how, and by what means, and by what facts, having an opportunity to know the facts, or holding a relation rendering it very probable that he would learn them truly? If it is so the line need not be drawn strictly at relatives. But in the language of Lord Erskine in the interest of the person in knowing the connections of the family (Wolfe v Young, 13 Ves 140) does require the line to be drawn there, excluding non-relatives" Wigmore §§ 1486, 1487. See also Annesley v Ingless, 17 How St Tr 1160; Roos v Wolsey, 2 Lee Eccl, 135; Duchess of Kingston's Trust, 20 How St Tr 355; Berkeley Peerage Case, 1 Camp 401; Walker v Hume, 18 Ves 443; Johnson v Lawson, 2 Bing 88; Casby v O'Shaughnessy, 1 Jur 140; Polins v Gray, L R 13 Ch D. 126. But "such a narrow test seems too narrow. Even in England, where so much of personal advancement and material prosperity for the individual depended upon his family rank and his rights of inheritance, it seems too much to say that only those who have an immediate property interest in learning the family history can possibly have adequate information; for family physicians and chaplains, old servants, and intimate friends may, in cases be equally and sufficiently informed." Wigmore § 1487. The only

Lauson, 2 Bing the family for rejection said it would be a namely, the consanguinity, affords such evidence as testimony could of intimacy or confidence that subsisted between the party and the declarant.

"It may be noted," says Prof Wigmore "as to this reasoning, first, that the result is inconsistent with the general language used in the earlier judicial opinions, and is supportable only on the narrow test of Lord Fraser before mentioned, secondly, that the special reason given, namely, the inconvenience of an investigation into sources of knowledge, is anomalous in the law of Evidence, for no Court is allowed to decline to investigate the source of a witness's qualifications so far as may be necessary, while in each case the Judge's discretion permits, and old would surely be no more found to be" Wigmore § 1487. A statement admits of

Special means of knowledge names of persons from whom they

Dev Kariappa, 6 Mys. L J 375 A existence of relationship, the person having special means of

as to the ledge and called
p. 3
see
C. 3
by able not bold
v. 3

267-123 Ind. Cas 907. Family birds have special means of knowledge regarding the facts of the relationship between the different members of the families of their jajmans. Consequently statements made by them as regards the relationship between members of the family would be admissible in evidence under 32(5). Anandi v Nand Lal, 22 A L J 657-46 A 665. It is the business of a muasi, who is a hereditary family bard, to acquaint himself recounts in song hearsay does not Abdul Ghafer v I
 L. J. 583 (P C)
 Court had special
 cannot be received in evidence and it cannot be accepted as evidence that he had knowledge. Proof of special source of knowledge is a pre requisite to the admission of the document in evidence and until the document is received in evidence no presumption can be made from the statement contained in it. Bhima v M Sender, 9 O L J 186-4 U P L R (O C) 79. Before a pedigree said to have been prepared by a deceased member of family can be admitted in evidence under section 32 (5) it must be proved that it was either prepared by the deceased or that the deceased had that personal knowledge and belief which must be presumed in any statement of the deceased person which is admissible in evidence. Mahomed v. Sayid, A I R 1931 Oudh 147-8 O W N 349.

Qualifications of the declarant. Upon the general principle of testimonial knowledge, the qualifications of the deceased declarant—his relationship, or whatever is relied upon as equipping him with information—must be shown in advance. Banbury Peerage Case, 2 Selw N P 764, see also Taylor § 640, Wills Ev 213 214. In India the existence of special means of knowledge in the

he does not come

It no where appears that he had any other knowledge than as mulhtear acting for these ladies. He was not shown to have been a member of the family, to have been intimately connected with it, or to have any special means of knowledge of the family concerns. Therefore in their Lordship's opinion he does not come within the description of a person having special means of knowledge. See also Bijay Bahadur v Bhupendra declarant has sufficient tion is. Wignore § 14 priest as to the relation clause 5 of section 32

Lal v Radha Bibee, 4 C
 ment Court is admissible in evidence under s 3, cl 5 of the Evidence Act, wf3

 h 10
 one efore ence
 tion

32

suit, in which she stated, "I have no issue or any near relative Mail oral is related to me as a daughter's son and Khawati Lal is my husband's younger brother. These are my relatives on the husband's side." In admitting the evidence Lord Shaw observed, "In this situation their Lordships are of opinion that, in the most solemn form, this lady had declared facts which must have been within the scope of her knowledge. If the facts be sound, there can in their judgment appeal from is correct."

obtained in his deposition and in affidavits filed by him are admissible evidence under section 21 (1) read with section 32 (5) of the Evidence Act, made by a person having special means of knowledge, whether personal or hearsay. Tarathur v. Maru Gopu, 33 Ind. C.S. 269. Where the Court below had rejected the evidence of certain witnesses on the ground that it was hearsay only and had not conformed with section 32 of the Evidence Act and on the face of the evidence it was sometimes uncertain whether the witnesses were speaking from their own knowledge or from information derived from others, it is not in law an error to admit it in whole.

nor in the latter case to question the manner in which the Court has applied the provisions of section 32. Safimunissa v. Shaban, 20 A. 331 = 9 C. W. N. 105 P. C. So where the witness is speaking from hearsay he must show that his knowledge is derived from the person whose statement is admissible under the section. Vile Jugalal Singh v. Tejshutar Singh, 25 A. 43 = 7 C. W. N. 49.

Statements are admissible to prove the facts contained in the statement on any issue. In England declarations are admissible only in cases in which the pedigree to which it is only relevant to the issue is only admissible in England, not where they are admissible in Scotland. Thus in James v. Guthrie, 13 Q. B. D. 318, see also James v. Guthrie, 11 L. J. Q. B. 46. This rule thus interpreted, says that declarations otherwise satisfactory, can nevertheless be used in those cases only where the issue involves a material question of pedigree, or genealogy, or the therefore inheritance cases. Higmore § 1503. This view seems to have its origin in the observation of Lord Ellenborough, C. J. in R. v. Enth, 5 East 56, where he observed, "This was a case in which the question was, whether the declaration of the father of a bastard child, as the place of his birth, the bastard's birth was competent of that fact? The only doubt which has been introduced into this case has arisen from improperly considering it as a question of pedigree. The controversy was not as in a case of pedigree, from what parents the child has derived its birth, but in what place an undisputed birth derived from known and acknowledged parents, has happened. The point thus stated turns on a fact, and is therefore not falling within the rule." and is Settl. Cr.

Just Pe.
Tuchal,
to make.

These declarations were first made in England in inheritance cases directly a part of the issue, but in litigation ought to have no bearing on the admission or exclusion of evidence. A deceased father's entry in a family Bible is equally trustworthy, whether the issue subsequently arising happens to be framed upon a der-or torically

ed in promissory note, or in application majority of American jurisdictions are now admitted whatever the general nature of pedigree, or de-cent, Inhabitants of War

of the authorities

pedigree, and when the incidents of cases, whenever they become Similarly in the colonies the ru D. 818, was not followed In section 32(5) of the Indian Evidence Act such evidence is admissible In Dhanumal v Ram Chunder, 1 C W N 270=24 C 265, a plaint in a former suit, verified by a deceased member of a family and as such having special knowledge, was held admissible under section 32(5) of the Evidence Act, to prove the order in which certain persons were born and their ages In delivering the judgment of the Court Pelham C J said It was contended on the part of the plaintiff on the authority of the English cases that as the question at issue in this case did not relate to the existence of any relationship by blood marriage the statements were excluded by the at point the law in India under England, and that the effect of the sons of Sumbho Nath were born and their ages, and when admitted to my mind, satisfactorily proves that the defendant was the son who was born on the 6th June, 1868 Similarly in Ram Chandra v Jogeswar 20 C 753, for the purpose of the decision of a question of limitation it was necessary to prove the date of the plaintiff's birth The plaintiff and one of his witnesses each spoke to statements made to him by relations of the plaintiff who were since deceased relating to the date of the plaintiff's birth The defendant objected to such

Bipan Behary Dey v Sreedam Chunder, 13 C 42 has been practically overruled by Dhanumal v Ram Chandra, supra

among upon
s the com
t and 19-73

s. 32.

Stephens, Kent Assizes .
 it has been said "Here
 when he married, and what children he had, etc., of which it is not necessary to presume I have better evidence. So to prove my father, mother, cousin & other relations, beyond the set, dead; and the common reputation and belief of it in the family gives credit to such evidence." On the authority of R v Frith 5 East 539, the place of birth or death—something more than the fact birth or death—has by some Courts been thought to be inadmissible. But question was finally settled in England in Shields v Boucher, 1 Dig & Sm where Knight Bruce said "If the place of birth in Rex v Frith had been a genealogical fact, as it was not,—had been material, namely, for any general purpose which it was not. Lord Ellenborough and the Court of King's Bench differently." See also Lord & M 176 where he observed ship of consanguinity or of affinity only,

 are not admissible;
 pedigree,
 the declaration
 have been previously connected with the family respecting which their tions are tendered." Moreover since the proof of a particular relation here depends on the proof of some specific fact, such as birth, marriage or death, the date or place of
 place of residence;
 history these facts
 of the rule when Wills 12 212, Monkton v 1st Gen 2 Russ & Myl 147, 150; Dell v Ir, C L 17, A statement as to the age of a member of a family, made by a ceased person having special onship within the meaning of section 2 Narasimha Chari, 25 M 183, 219-21 see also Ram Chandra v Jogeswar Narain, 20 C. 758; Byambharr v Sarda

 18 C 42

Contemporaneity of the Statement It is not necessary to show that the declarations were contemporaneous with the events to which they relate as Lord Brougham has well observed "a statement which would defeat the 1st Gen, 2 Russ & Myl, 157, 158, Tay Ev § 639

of ge only to sup dead

excluded "In cases living nine years and

right of way, or of fact which would support reputation must proceed on like, from the necessity of the particular facts is not excluded neighbourhood, and family transactions among the relations of Therefore, what is thus dropped in conversation upon such subjects may be presumed to be true." Per Lord Mansfield in Berkeley Peerage Case 4 Camp. S. 3 401.

Cases under clause (5) Very liberal interpretation should be given to the words "when the statement relates to the existence of any relationship by blood family about certain majority of members of ishna Lal v Raj Kumar, 104 Ind Cas 299=1 Luck C 97=A. I R 1927 Oudh. 278 A statement as to the existence of a relationship is admissible even though it was made in a clause Chandreswar, v

mark of the party, appellant in his own

s 11, if not under s 32 (5) whether it is shown that the application was filed by a person who was admittedly the testator's nephew and claimed also to be his adopted son and therefore was in a position to know the date of his death and the age
Lachin
T. 891
relativ 532;

any

that his father was
'6 Before a pedigree
made by a person

relates to the existence of relationship by adoption Danabati v Balsundara, 36 M 19=18 Ind Cas 989 A pedigree filed in a Settlement Court for the preparation of Kheuat cannot be put in evidence as a family pedigree under a

S. 32 32 (6) It can be admitted only under s. 32 (5) for which purpose it must be proved that the document represents statement as to the existence of a certain relationship by blood or marriage made by a person who had special means of knowledge in respect of the matters thus stated and made before the question now in dispute was raised. Mithu v Bhulan, 15 O C 364, see also Srinivas v Filok Chant, 36 Ind Cis 66. A statement in a will made by the father describing his adopted son, aged 10 and so as the sole beneficiary is admitted to prove the age of the boy, under s. 32, cl. 5 and 6 of the Evidence Act. Krishnamachariar v Veeravalli, (1913) 11 W N 35, = 13 M L T 350. L J 517 = 19 Ind Cas 152. The question for decision was whether the plaintiff was the legitimate daughter of one K and R. The respondent contended that R was not the legally married wife of K, and in proof of it produced a compromise and a decree between R and another person by which R obtained only a small amount as maintenance. He also relied upon a statement made by R on a certain occasion admitting that she was the concubine and not married wife of K. It was held that the statement of R was admissible evidence under section 32 clauses (3) and (5). Parbat v Maharaj Singh, 19 Ind Cas 188. A statement made by a person before a public officer as to his age is admissible.

v Kondu

maternal

age Dec

Settlement

that the

had a special

199 Hearsay evidence is not admissible under section 32 clause Evidence Act, to prove the case of fosterage, in as much as, even if it be a statement of that connection by fosterage can amount to relationship in any sense of the term the relationship is not by blood, marriage or adoption. Prinsep v Louab Qudus, 21 Ind Cas 612. The term 'relationship' in clause (5) of section 32 of the Evidence Act.

relationship between

meaning of the other child

meaning of clause (5) of section 32. Achutananda v Jagannath, 21 C L J 739 = 20 C W N 122. Statements contained in the plaintiff's statement within the meaning of section 32 of the Evidence Act.

statements contained in the plaintiff's statement within the meaning of section 32 of the Evidence Act.

A L J 349 = 39 A 426. Where the question is whether A born on a certain date is of age an entry in a book containing the record of births, deaths and marriages in the family kept by his father who is dead that he was born on a particular date, is admissible under this clause. Mohamed Syedol v Garl, 21 C W N 257 = (1913) 11 W N 35, = 13 M L T 350. L J 517 = 19 Ind Cas 152. A statement by a person to X, as the sole wife of a person having special means of knowledge. Krishna Iyengar, 1913 W N 35, = 13 M L T 350. L J 517 = 19 Ind Cas 152.

1

1

statement = admissible

Ab Justice Mookerjee

that the section

should be excluded, first because it relates not to the existence but to the non existence of a relationship, and, secondly, because the relationship is not

■ Mohunt and his chela is not a relationship by adoption On behalf of the defen- S. 32

13 C 42, Satish Chandra v. Mohendra Lal, 17 C. 849 and Ram Arishna v. Manindra Mohun, 20 C L J 302. It is not necessary for our present purpose to determine whether the fluctuation of judicial opinion indicated in the two sets of decisions mentioned, is more apparent than real, and whether they may not be reconciled by a recognition of the principle that a statement as to the time of commencement of relationship is so indissolubly associated with the existence itself of the relationship, that it may be rightly regarded, without undue stretch of language, as a statement which relates to the existence of that relationship. Oriental etc Co Ltd v Narashimha 25 M 183, and Patambar Kuru v Raman, 2 that question, it

tion, viz, first, is it by adoption, and, secondly, is a statement that A has one chela B, and has no other chela, a statement relating to the existence of a relationship? We are of opinion that both these questions should be answered in the affirmative. In the first place, there is no reason why the term 'adoption should be interpreted in a restricted sense, that the expression that A has adopted B as his chela is found in judicial decisions of the highest authority. In the second place, the expression 'relates to the existence' is obviously very comprehensive and need not be

The statement was treated as admissible in evidence but was held not to be conclusive evidence under ship by blood,

A document containing a statement of a deceased person as to the mode of succession obtaining in a particular family is also admissible in evidence Patambar Kuru v Raman 24 Ind Cas 519, see also Sheo Lal v Gour Narain, 7 Ind Cas 218

25 A. 236-5 Bom L R 410-30 I. A. 91 See also Kedarnath v Muthumal, 40 C 555 (P C) The legal presumption as to paternity raised by s. 112 of the Evidence Act is applicable only to the offspring of a married couple. A person claiming as an illegitimate son must establish his

32

Ghurneeb Mossam v. C
the age of a person, the entry of
be statements of his deceased father ection 35 Munna Lal v. Kaneshan furni that y

to w held

Act, but, in the case of an entry in the register in question, there is no showing by whom the statement entered was made, much less that the person making the statement had any special means of knowledge. Mr Collier v Mrs L Bawn, 2 N L R 31. In an application for letters of administration the rights of the applicants to be considered the next heirs of the deceased depended on proof that the relationship between their great-grandfather and the deceased was that of full brother and sister.

of
in

or deed of exchange, dated the 17th January, 1902, and Kurisnama as to the relationship were produced by the applicants. The Kurisnama was held admissible in evidence Shazadi v Secretary of State for India 100 C 1059 P C.

Cases under clause (6) Entries made by a parent or relation in Bible, prayer books, missals, almanacs, or indeed in any other books or in any document or paper, stating the fact and date of the birth, marriage, or death of a child, or other relations are also received as the written declarations of the deceased persons who respectively made them. Tay Ev § 630 These adoptions may be made by the declarant's own writing, or by assenting to or adopting the true statement of another. Id. If a person is adopted, the adopter must be a competent witness. Id. An entry in a pedigree book is not good evidence. Id.

formal one—as, a deed or will—does not make the ^{an} Murray v Mulner, L R 12 Ch D 845; Doe v. Pembroke, 11 East 504. Such statements ^{inward} them, or did anything that amounts to showing that they reposed

"A pedigree, whether in the shape of a genealogical tree or map, or contained in a book, or moral or monumental inscription, if recognised by a deceased member of the same family, is admissible, however early the period from which it purports to have been deduced. On what ground is this admitted? It may be that the simple act of recognition of the document, and consequent members of the family, is his information may stated to be relations, or of information received by him from some deceased member of what the latter knew, or heard from other members who lived before his time. And if so, it may well be contended, that, if, the facts rebut that presumption, and show that no part of pedigree was derived from proper sources of information, then the whole of it ought to be rejected, and so also if there be some, but an uncertain and undefined part derived from improper sources. But when the

to that extent, the statements in the
, and are good evidence of the relation adopted son that statement the testator Chandressuar book regarding the relationship of parties are admissible under this clause Amrit Sarai v Prabli Dial, 89 Ind Cas 989.

wills or deeds are admis-
D 845, Smith v Tebbit, L
he principle that they are the natural effusions of a party who must know the truth, and who speaks upon
, without any temptation Deloch v Baker, 13 Ves a Case 4 Camp 418. But become admissible must

614 A written
has been set aside
10 M 362. So
7) does not render o not purport or
it states only past
under section 32,
v Mulim Chand
does not prove 371. But when ma macharriar v Government v Subramanian

of parentage is been allowed
d members of e, 11 East, 501 Dos v Ormerod
and signature

32. 16 So recitals of descent, and description of parties in deeds or other family instruments, will be received, provided the deeds come from proper custody and are proved or may from age be presumed, to have been executed by a member of the family to which the statements refer. Marmayon Peerage Pr Min 111; Hastings Peerage Pr Min 200; Bonthicld Peerage Pr Min 61; Hengate v Gascoigne, 2 Coop 117; De Roos Peerage, 2 Coop 541, 548; Davies, 1 Mason 269 cited in Tay Et § 651. But the execution of the deed by a relation is an inadmissible requisite. Slaney v. Wale, 1 Myl & Cr 200; Port v Clarke, 1 Russ 604; Tay Et § 651. Though a person cannot claim title under an unproved will he can rely upon a statement contained in it indicating the relationship of the parties. Hutnarin v Rambarai, 7 Pat 750; 1 Pat L 7484-A I R 1928 Pat 159. A statement, in a will left by a deceased person, to the effect that he and his brothers were living, earning and holding property separately, is not admissible in evidence under any clause of Act 32 nor under any other section of that Act. Goluddas v Chandibai, 4 S L J 225=10 Ind Cas 907.

Fam. .
mansion . . .
The word . . .
the stand . . .

ance for to time it is and of the part of living tially . . .

motive for preparing and preserving a record of family traditions see 114

as a occur
be up (

observed "Nor do we think that the first portion of the observation of Lordships is intended to lay down an exhaustive definition of 'family pedigree' as used in cl 6 s 32, Indian Evidence Act 1872. The two words simply indicate the highest and the best type of family pedigree. The decision does not show that a pedigree not conforming to that standard cannot be a family pedigree."

pseuinness Inden v Yellaba 100 I L J 600 '81 The mention of . . .

and the sons are found to be in joint possession of the property the presumption is that the common ancestors held the property see Nur v Juan, A I R 1928 Lah 964. A family pedigree may be a pedigree kept by a member of the family or by another person on its behalf and it can be admitted in evidence, if it is written by a family bard for the purpose of keeping a record of the family even for its use and the use of the family. Such a record can be admitted even though not signed by the person making it.

665=A I R 1921 All 575, see also S. 3
Ind Cus 235-24 Bom L R 289

of a Harduar purolat is valuable on a question of a family pedigree Lauya Singh v Allah Ditta, 133 Ind Cus 874=A I R 1931 Lah 722

It is valid to presume after the dea

v Rhetat, 21 Ind Cus 274 A pedigree was filed before the Settlement Court in

Gubaj, 16 Ind Cas 625 Although a Evidence Act may be made with respect to :

32 (5) of the Evidence Act, though the entries in it were not of great value
Ram Din v Kanestha Patshala 25 Ind Cus 823 up were not any of the descriptions in section 32 of the Indian Evidence Act Sorjon v Sardar Singh, 23 A 72-2 Bom L R 492-5 C W N 49-27 I A 183 P C Where the a family governed by the custom of re can be no motive in the prepara of the first born as the first born would b status w eldest = but that Oudh 2

members of the family made anté litem motam before there was anything to

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT.

S. 32. throw doubt upon them, the evidence to prove pedigree. And such statements by deceased members of the family may be proved not only by showing that they acted upon them or ascribed to them, or did anything that amounted to showing that they recognized them. If any man . . . who presumably would . . . pedigree, that evidence . . . instances Abdul Ghaffur
J 583 P C . . . 13 A. 188=12 Lrb 336=60 M L

Horoscope—evidentiary value of. A horoscope may be tendered under clause 5 or clause 6 of section 32 or under s. 17 18 of the Evidence Act. Under clause (6) of section 32 . . .

the writer "is dead or . . . to come within this clause . . . had

Lat, 17 C

this clause

Then the

been admitted as coming within section 32 of the Evidence Act and within clause 6 of that section. That clause makes entries made by persons, evidence of questions of relationship by blood, marriage, or adoption, where the deceased person had some special means of knowledge. As to that it is enough to say that it is not shown that the person who had made this horoscope had any special means of knowledge, and that the question which we have to decide is not one either of relationship by blood or . . .

no special

tendered u

to follow d

questions of relationship, the interpretation is also not sound. Id. supra, also 11 C W Evidence Act p 336 I Note. A horoscope is receivable in evidence under section 32, clause (5) of the Evidence Act and not under clause (2) or of that section but the party making it must have had special means of knowledge. Ravi Nathan v Murugappa 33 Ind Cas 269=1916 M W N 41. see also Gopal Chauh Hori . . . Rattan 17 C stated to could be refreshing

So a hor
under secti
it was writ
140 A h
Goudan, 1

In Amardyal Singh v P . . .
511=58 Ind Cas 72, a
one Ram Nandan Ram who his son to be in his father's scope could be admitted in evidence to admitting the horoscope Miller C J relationship between any of the parties . . .

ments as to age made by deceased persons in the circumstances contemplated in the section were admissible. The horoscope, however, is merely evidence and is not conclusive and in face of the other conflicting evidence in the case I should have been inclined to remand the case for further consideration on this point.

the life of the son admissible in evidence
a relationship Anna

malai v Annamalai 10 L. W. 687=52 Ind. Cas. 456. Horoscopes deeds of adoption or of initiation as chet are admissible if the person writing them or hearing them read soon after their preparation is examined. Shankergir v Chinnaji, 71 Ind. Cas. 140=A. I. R. 1923 Nag. 1. Horoscopes containing date of birth and prepared by a person having special means of knowledge and who is dead is admissible to prove date of birth. A. I. R. 1927 Pat. 271=8 P. L. 1 730=103 Ind. Cas. 449.

Principle of authentication. The principle of authentication is applicable to proof of the execution or genuineness of a writing is in general applicable to a writing offered under the present exception. Slater v Wade 1 My. & Cr. 338. Tracy Peerage 10 C. & F. 154. No special considerations here need attention except as regards the necessity of proving the handwriting of entries in family Bibles or the like. The fundamental idea of authentication der

an nly try t a 76
of 16
wn

to the family, and therefore may be presumed to possess that authenticity which is derived from the tacit and common assent of those interested in the facts which they record. But such public exposure of the writing is not needed when it contains the signature of a specific member of the family and his signature is authenticated. So a signed chart of a family was admitted. Montlon v inscription on a tomb in the mansion are all used in all those cases the existing—the want of a ring or the Bible with presumption—it would only did not more or less in case of family Bible, there is no necessity of proving the handwriting of the entries. Proof of the handwriting or authorship of the entries is not required when the book is shown to have been the family Bible or Testament for then the entries as evidence derive their weight not more from the fact that they were made by any particular person than that being in that place a family registry they are to be taken as assented to by those in whose custody the book has been kept. Alley J in Jones v Jones 43 Md. 160, Waggoner § 1496. Berkley Peerage Case 4 Cump. 421 per Lords Ellenborough and Redesdale JJ. Hubbard v Lees 35 L. J. 1 x 169. Goodright v Moss, 2 Cowp. 521. Slater v Wade, 7 Sm. 595, Shrewsbury Peerage, 7 H. L. 1.

Value of statements under clauses (5) and (6). Statements of the kind referred to in section 32, clause (5) of the Evidence Act may be evidence, but or rights may be given under clause (4) and not under this clause In England to private titles? How is it possible concerns only these private titles? In rights as well as customs can be proved relate to any such transaction as is mentioned in section 13, clause (a). On principle there is nothing to object to the reception of such evidence Under this clause private boundaries, titles or possession can be proved "If such evidence may be offered to show customs and boundaries of a private manor, boundaries of a parish, tithes dues (Stell v Pricett, 2 Stark 466, per Abolt which a number of it is in substance So in Weeks v a multitude of per

in England this tendency of extending to private rights was checked by 2 B 809 (1850) and an arbitrary d private property rights was laid down. In that case he said "Reputation is not admissible in the case of such separate rights, each that, because there We think this positive is to cause number of v Bedford shire, 4 E & B 535, Doe v Thomas, 14 East, 323

But in America the result is otherwise The earliest English practice had clearly been to admit reputation as to private titles, and it is therefore natural regularly admitted Cas Ex 421 note, of the principle is be so evidenced is conceded Ibid

Old maps and old surveys so far as they have been used and resorted to by the community in dealing with the land, may be taken as representing, after the test of use and criticism, the settled reputation of the community as to the correctness of the tenor of the map or the survey R v Milton 1 C & K. 62, Hammond v Brad Street, 10 Ex 390, Pipe v Fulcher, 23 L J Q B 12, Daniel v Wilkin, 7 Ex 429, Bullen v Welch, 4 Dow 297, Smith v Earl Brownlow, L R 2 Eq 252, Ibuke v Berrington, (1914) 2 Ch 303, Freeman v Reed, 4

32. M & M 418; Curzon v. Lomax, 5 E-p 60; Doe v. Whitcomb, 1 H. L. C. 419, Carnation v. Vellebous, 13 M. & W. 313; Beaufort v. Smith, 1 Ex. 400, Wilford v. § 1592

In R v. Milton, 1 C. & K. 58, upon the trial of an indictment against a parish for the non repair of a highway, where, in order to show that the road in question was not within the parish, a map was produced which had been made by a surveyor, from information derived from an old map, but to him the boundaries, Edlin J. held that the old map's death, the map would be admissible as evidence to come from the chest of the parish.

Nort. Ev. 190

Clause (7) of section 32 does not declare all reputation to be relevant, but only that which consists of statements contained in a deed, will or other document relating to any transactions.

modified, recognized, a sort of existence. The clause therefore evidence of reputation in it are admissible under this clause, judgment and decrees are not in the least important. Field Ev. 6th Ed. 11

703 But where the question is of a Bhakti system of rent, and it is in a hebanama executed by a tenant's deceased grandfather, held that the hebanama was inadmissible in evidence under s. 32 (7) read with section 13 (a) of the Evidence Act. Bansi v. Mir Amir, 11 C. W. N. 703 present plaintiffs and by the suit. Held that the deed though they could themselves admit it, the custom as against the defendants must be proved. Hurronath v. Nittanand, 10 B. L. R. 263

Ancient possession. In England the rule has always been that proof of things and the finding them in such a place is a presumption they were honestly obtained, and reserved for use and are free from suspicion of

Doe v. Pulman, 3 Q. B. 622. In Malcolmson v. O'Dea, 10 H. L. Cas. laid down that the true ground for admitting a lease is that it shows an act of ownership. Thus, the production from proper custody of an ancient lease granted by A is evidence of an act of ownership over the land by A at that date, and is presumptive evidence that he was then owner in

also Blandy-to prove a licences on Rogers v.
rights

to which they refer Heath v Dane, (1905) 2 Ch 678. Entries in old parish books are admissible as evidence to prove who were the owners or occupiers of the property at a previous time Smith v. Andrews, (1891) 2 Ch 678; Powell p 287 So it is clear that the existence of a document of ownership of land (a deed, lease, or license) may be evidence that the maker of the document had occasionally said that the incorrect These documents thus explained by Lord m 641, 653, 688; "Old being evidence of facts of at a distant d a person reasonable law permits ancient documents, either with or without evidence of ancient payment of rent, to be given as evidence from which the jury may properly draw an inference that there was such possession For in the ordinary course of things men do not make leases unless they act on them, and lessees do not payment of rent adds laid down the reason always attended with acts of ownership

That rule is, that ancient documents coming out of proper custody, and purporting as a lease or a license, payment of rent under f of possession This it possession is proved to have followed similar documents, or that there is some proof of actual enjoyment in accordance with the title to which the documents relate And certainly in the case of property allowing of continuous enjoyment, without proof of actual exercise of the right any number of mere pieces of paper or parchment purporting to be leases or licenses ought to be of no avail It may be a question whether the absence of proof of enjoyment consistent with such document goes to the admissibility or only to the weight of the evidence, look at this document you find it contains a great deal It shows upon the face of it that Jenkins must have been in possession or else he would not have brought an action of trespass He speaks of trespass the word is used in the document itself. It is not an act of ownership, I agree, but it is a document

S. 32.

possession against it is evidence of This doctrine, however, does not adversely affect except the document
Lson v Wood

5 T. R. 112; Rogers v. Allen, 1 Camp 309; Doe v. Asher, 10 East 520, Co. v. Coether, M. & M. 393; Doe v. Pulman, 3 Q. B. 622 Wigmore § 157

Other cases. A deed of mortgage containing an assertion of title as from in all the High Courts in Fota, 25 Ind. Cas. 747 = (1914) M.

Ind. Cas. 149 = 14 C. L. J. 467 and with transactions affecting of certain lands as malik or brahm title in the will case, which was not inter partes, was not admissible in evidence under section 32 (7) of the Evidence Act will was not admissible in evidence under section 32 (7) of the Evidence Act read with section 13 (a) and that the recital in the judgment not inter partes was not evidence. Satindra v. Krishna, 36 Ind. Cas. 883; Basi Nath v. Jagat Kishore, 35 Ind. Cas. 298 = 23 C. L. J. 583 = 20 C. W. N. 613. Where the validity of the testamentary will is in question, the recital in the judgment is not evidence.

this clause. Nagammal v. Santharappa, 54 M. 576 = A. I. R. 1931 Mad. 115. If a settlement deed under which a promissory note is transferred to the plaintiff is admissible as secondary evidence, may be employed to prove the promissory note under s. 32 (7) read with section 13 (a) since a settlement deed constitutes a transaction in which a right was asserted. Subba Rayappa v. Vengama, A. I. R.
1930 Mad. 742 = 123 Ind. Cas. 107

CLAUSE VIII.

of this clause is that when a number of persons make a common statement, which is one common statement, which is made in their minds at the time of the statement, and is made by the witnesses and is evidence.
These statements are admissible on the general principle that they appear to be natural and sincere. Illustration (a) exemplifies this clause. This illustration is based on the case of Du Puy v. Bessford, 2 C. impression produced on the defence, other spectators not being themselves put into the witness box of the defendant's brother-in-law and the latter very handsomely received the "Beauty and the Beast"
the story

impression produced by the picture on their own minds, viz., that it was intended evidence that Cool v Ward,

 M & P 99, Phil Ev 332 In Chase v Houell, 151 Mass 422 (Am) notice of the rottenness of a tree's root was in issue, and to show knowledge by the city in M military calling

 statement
 different places and afterwards put in second hand before the Court cannot be received as evidence under the clause Queen v Ram Dutt, 23 W R 85 Cr
 "It has been held that if a statement is made by several persons and any of them is dead, each of the persons must be taken to have made the statement for himself or herself and therefore the statement of the deceased person will be admissible under this section Chandra Nilmadhab, 26 C 236 Field Ev 7th Ed 234

the by standers, on seeing a caricature called out 'there is X,' and evidence is given of their words, what is relied on is, not their statements, but the fact of recognition; the fact, that is, that the caricature at once recalls the person X to the minds of those who see it." Mark Ev p 34

S. 33.

could not be admitted under the section. If they were not known or could not be found, it is not easy to see how the fact that there were many of them is material. In the English cases, it does not seem to have been proved that the persons who made the observations could not be called. Cum Et Illa Ed p 85

33. Evidence given by a witness in a judicial proceeding

Relevancy of certain evidence for proving, in subsequent proceeding, the truth of facts therein stated or before any person authorized by law to take it, is relevant for the purpose of proving in a subsequent judicial proceeding, or, in a later stage of the same judicial proceeding, the truth of the facts which it states, where the witness is dead or cannot be found, or is incapable of giving evidence, or is kept out of the way by the adverse party, or if his presence cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which, under the circumstances of the case, the Court considers unreasonable:

Provided—

that the proceeding was between the same parties or their representatives in interest; that the adverse party in the first proceeding had the means and opportunity to cross-examine;

that the questions in issue were substantially the same in the first as in the second proceeding.

Explanation—A criminal trial or inquiry shall be deemed to be a proceeding between the prosecutor and the accused within the meaning of this section

Principle The securities which have been devised by municipal law by Betnam as confrontation Betham's Rationale of Judicial Evidence III, Ch XIX This was established long ago "The other side ought not to be a case for us and a certain

In other words, this secondary advantage is a result accidentally with the process of confrontation, whose original and fundamental object is

It is no essential part of the notion of confrontation; it stands on no better footing than other evidence to which especial value is attached; and just as the party.

attained
People v
W
tion ar fied and have b

remaining alive and actually examined in the cause" See also R v Christopher, 2 O & K 994, 1000 Its weight, however, is of course affected by the loss of the demeanour of the witness Phip Ev 7th Ed 423. Mr Taylor however considers it an exception to the rule excluding secondary evidence of documents, holding that the rule is wide enough to exclude secondary evidence of oral

48 (52), Balgangadhar v. Shrinivas, 39 B 441-19 C W N 729-42 I A 729 (P C)

The rule contained in this section is an administrative expedient for doing justice between litigants in a particular situation as a rational compromise between two well known canons of judicial administration. A presiding judge will require that a party within his power to do so be required to cause a witness admissible facts given on a

33. to the particular witness—It is not essential that the proponent also shows that he can prove the fact itself in no other way. The evidence being in its nature secondary, i.e., inferior in a probative point of view, less decisive and convincing than the face to face testimony of the witness himself, the party tendering the less probative proof must show to the reasonable satisfaction of the judge presiding at the trial that it is impossible for him to procure the attendance of the witness himself. This may be for one of several reasons. The witness may be dead, insane, sick, or absent from the jurisdiction.' Chamberlayne's Ev § 164

in interest, if criminal must retract person McKelvey's Ev § 164. The chief reasons for the exclusion of hearsay evidence are the want of opportunity to cross-examine the witness in the judicial proceedings, and the power to cross-examine being an ordinary test of truthfulness, of parties.
v Beal
 not dead
 insane,
 have been kept away by ill health.
 264, R v Elliswell, 3 T R 111.
 all the objections which are made in Wright v Tatham, 1 Ad & El 313.
E of Winchelsea, 3 C & D 111.
 Court new powers, which require to be exercised with great caution. It is no doubt that it is still necessary to examine every witness at the trial, unless it is possible to produce him, or to be so difficult and unreasonable to insist on its production." Per Macpherson J in v Moulton, 20 W R 69 Cr., R v Piyari, 4 C L R 511, R v Moulton 1864. In England the law on the subject is thus stated: "Agreed in the case, where a person has been examined in chancery, that in a cause at law between the same parties his deposition may be used in evidence if it can be proved that the witness is not able to attend."

ers what the law requires and could not be read at law that the witness could not be read at law. Reus v Palmer, 1 Vea. & B. 272. It specifies what evidence is admissible.

receivable. This is, whatever is delivered in the proceedings or (b) before any person. Oral evidence therefore is as receivable as deposition. Not Ev 194.

The deposition of a witness is not admissible under section 30 of the Evidence Act. The mere admission of the prior deposition is not admissible. Brayaballav v Akhoy, 30 C W R 111, 1 I R 110-111. Cas. 115-A I R 1926 Cal 705, Ghulam Haider v Emperor, 1 I R 110-111.

S.

L. J. 205 Deposition in a civil suit is can only an absent v

 could be extr
 In the Evidence Act,

right and opportunity to cross examine and the questions in issue were substantially the same in the first as in the second proceedings Chakauri Singh v Suraj Kuar, 2 A L J 91. If that fact is a statement made by a person who is not called, or cannot be called, the statement cannot be admitted unless it

78 Ind Cas 178 The Sessions Judge before transferring the deposition of a section a party's deposition in a previous suit can be used against him in a

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT.

S. 33. subsequent suit as his admission. Soojan v. Achmat, 21 W. R. 414, Asst Moharaj, 36 C L J 186; Exp Hall, 19 Ch. D 583.

Relevancy. Even where primary proof is practically unavailable, the secondary actually offered is not necessarily admissible. It must, in addition, be relevant. It is essential that the fact tendered in evidence as secondary proof be relevant, both objectively and subjectively, to the existence of some res gestae or constituent fact. Morgan v. Nicholl, L R 2 C P 117. Objective relevancy, being in the matter of natural law, of the reality of things, is assumed and but little classified or, indeed, discussed. Subjective relevancy is however more carefully scrutinized, in its two essential requisites of adequate knowledge, and absence of controlling motive to misrepresent. When these administrative, and Relevancy are introduced, secondary evidence which was not relevant evidence in the second proceeding.

Small v. Narain, (1819) 13 Q. B 840.

Waiver

A competent

injection is that of a witness received at a trial, they cannot be excluded subsequent trial. In the same way, an observer, "expert" so called, on a fact it cannot be rejected as improper in its admissions, on a subsequent trial. Chamberlayne presiding judge to be further invited in the

It will be remembered that it is frequently a loss to the cause of justice and the rights of the opponent should be made within reasonable time.

Objections

He acknowledges the fact upon his testimony might, and shall stand under oath, and shall be a false statement.

Small v. Narain, 13 Q. B 840; Small v. Welsh, 17 Mass 160 (1867). The opponent can take objection to leading questions (Small v. Narain, 13 Q. B 840); hearsay (R v. Crook, 71 J P Rep 152); or statements of the contents of unproduced documents (Stein Keller v Newton, 9 C & P. 313; 319; Tuften v Whitmore, 12 A & E 370), Phy Ev, 7th Ed. 425. S.

to judge its propriety. Mol Cal 756=32 Cr L J. 233, that under this section the

In order to enable the ground for its
ble the High Court
I. R 1930
It is necessary
in admissible

and fast rule for the application of this section. Each case must depend upon its own facts and the matter is essentially one for the exercise of the discretion on the part of the presiding Judge. Jati Mahi v Emperor, 33 C W N 1215

Affidavit An affidavit of a person who died subsequently and who has not been subjected to cross-examination is not admissible under ss 32 and 33 of the Evidence Act. Doraiswami v Balasundaram, 38 M L T (H C) 275=102 Ind Cas 243=A I R 1927 Mad 507=52 M L J. 477, see also Mir Abdul v Musst Bibi Sona, 2 Ind Cas 897 jointly tried,

on B and the
ee witnesses
not a party to ist, with his is not really witnesses is Abdul Gaffor
I R 1929
117, Ponnu
am v Umar, consent So admitted in ch witnesses

are alive Lakshmi devamma v Krishnah, 39 M L T 198=104 Ind Cas 518 Any irregularity in the admission of such evidence is cured by consent of the parties. Radha Krishen v Kidar Nath, 22 A L J 761=L R 5A 536=48 A 815=80 Ind Cas 874=A I R 1924 All 845, Pannuswami v Shegaram, 41 M. 610 The provisions, of this section are intended for the benefit of a party to a suit and he may waive their benefit at any rate in a civil is involved. Jamab Bibi v Hyler T 23=56 Ind Cas 957=1920 M Gopal, 24 B 591=2 Bom L R 924, J 1 But that is not the rule in criminal matters. Kottammal In re, 69 Ind Cas 636, see also Reg v Bernard, 4 Moo P C N S 460, Queen v Bushnath 12 W R Cr 8, Deputy v Upendra, 12 C W N 140; Mokshed v Emperor, A I R 1930 Cal 756; Ghillum v Crocen, A. I R 1929 Lah 542; Annani v E, 39 M 449

33. Case, the evidence was rejected, because the witness could give the effect only and not the words. But it may be doubted whether such minute particularity is requisite, for the very words could seldom be remembered after a lapse of time. Where a note has been made by a reporter or a short-hand writer he could of course use the note. . . . short-hand writer might . . . A & T 275. Nort Ex . . . prove what is deposed put at the head of a deposition, form no part of it and are no evidence to prove the facts stated. Magbula . . . N 241-6 Bom L R 238, 1 . . . 357; Chalor v Emperor, A. . . . v Abdul, 50 Ind Cas 431. . . . sition, the identity of the person . . . ballav v Akshay, 30 C W N 254

of
 said
 of
 while a written record of what is said abides Litera scripta manet. Some forceful remarks on the superiority of written over oral testimony will be found in the case of Bunwara Lal v Maharajah Hejnaram, 7 M. L. A 156; Nort Ex 194.

Judicial Proceeding. The evidence taken in the proceeding . . . before the revenue authorities (Court to recover possession by person in the revenue Court. Saru Khar 1928 Lah 43. Where certain who had no jurisdiction to conduct a proceeding is inadmissible on a retrial before a competent Court. Buta v Crown, 27 P. L. R. 447-7 Lah 396-397. . . . Cas 752-27 Cr L J 1163-A . . . 3 M 48; see also Empress v 694. The evidence taken in the conditions and for the purpose of 33, previous evidence is . . . the person gave the completed. The moving party may have abandoned the proceedings. Chamberlayne's Ed § 1652.

Nga Pu, 22 Ind Cas. 675-7.

Before any person authorised by law. It is not necessary that the evidence should have been given in a judicial proceeding. Any deposition taken by a Magistrate in his ministerial capacity could be receivable, if not excluded on any one of the grounds mentioned in the section. So a deposition taken before a Coroner (R v Rig, 4 F. & F 1985; State v Campbell, 1 Rich 124, R. v Butt 61 J P. 608; but see R v Cowle, 71 J P. 152), a British Consul of Zanzibar (Empress v Dossay, 3 H 334), a Special Registrar (Jeheto v Jaifanessa, 15 C W N 605. Jeheto v Jaifanessa, 20 Ind Cas 661; Lanka v Lanka, 42 M. L. C. 100), an arbitrator (R v. Amanulla, 12 B. L. R. App. 15), or a Commissioner appointed under Civil Procedure Code to take down evidence (Civil Pro Code, Order XXVI), a revenue officer in a mutation proceeding (Mamta v. Wazir, 65 Ind Cas 308), is admissible in a subsequent case So noted by a Court which Keraga, 54 M. 561 In n by the Commissioner Nundo, 2 C W N. 239; C W N 794) but in compel or not in practice employing cross examination as a part of its procedure rd the er its ration

Judge
As

one of the constitution of Courts and their officers Wigmore § 1376 "It is sufficient if the point was investigated in a judicial proceeding of any kind, wherein the party to be affected by such testimony had the right of cross-examination" Chamberlayne's Ev § 1652

law
law.
and 4-17
of Civil Procedure Code lay down the rules which must be observed in taking down depositions in civil cases When any deposition is taken in accordance with law, the Court shall presume that the document is genuine (Vide s 80 of the Evidence Act) See also Dosghat v Emperor, 52 C 490, Emperor v Phaguna, 89 Ind Cas 1043

When the witness is dead Evidence given by a witness in a previous action proceeds Steph
deceit evident

Wigmore § 1103, Gilbert's Li 60, Lord Morley's Case, Kelying 55, Fry v. Wood

33. 1 Atk 441, R v Castro (Trichborne Case), charge of Chief Justice, II 40. Such depositions cannot be admitted in the subsequent suit when the witnesses are living and their evidence is procurable. Hurish v Tara Chand 2 B L R App 4; Chakauri v Suraj, 2 A L J 91. Bhoobun Moyee v Ambica 23 W R 343, Mahomed v Iatan, 1. The evidence of witnesses given before a Magistrate, if fresh charges have been added: Empress v

Li is well. Chamberlayne § 1634

Absence of a witness permanent, and such as to prevent the deposition upon him may be a sufficient justification

French, 2 C & K 1008. The deposition by a person where he denied on oath that he had presented a certain petition in Court which purported to be from him is held to be inadmissible as evidence when such person might have been brought into Court, but was not. Bhoobun Moyee v Ambica, 23 W R 343.

Illness. Illness, by causing inability to attend has the same effect as death. Lord Morley's Case Kelvin v Wood, 1 Atk 415. R v Savage 5 C & P 143, Ro contra Doe v Evans, 3 C & P 1. The phrase usually employed as the application of the principle should be left to the trial Court's discretion. Thornton v Britton, 144 Pa 130. Gre v need only be in probability such that the trial cannot be postponed is a question for the determination of the Judge. K. B 531, R v Stephenson, L & C. 188. R v able to travel if the only mined testimony or deposition, and would probably be much less. Mathews J in Miller v Russel, 7 Mart N S L 369. Higmore § 1408. also Fry v Wood, 1 Atk 445, R v Savage, 5 C & P 143; R v Harris, 4 C & P 440, R v Harney, 4 Cox C C 441, R v Ullmer 4 Cox Cr 441, R v Stephenson 9 Cox Cr 156, R v Bull, 12 Cox Cr 31, R v Welton 9 Cox Cr 206. R v 12 Cox Cr 206. R v 13 Cox Cr 187. R v

his previous deposition was not admitted. R v Thompson 15 Cox. R v Farrell 12 Cox Cr 606. A temporary illness will not excuse attendance and examination of a witness. Empress v Pyarilal, 4 C L R 501, Empress v Ashgur, 11 C 774=8 C L R 124, Harrison v Blade, 3 Camp 457. R v 5 C & P 143, R v Tail 2 F & F 533, R v Wilson, 12 Cox 622.

Cannot be found. Inability to find the witness is an equally sufficient reason for non production, by the better opinion (Oate's Trial, 10 How 4. Tr 1285, Anon, Godbolt 236; Gilbert Evidence, 60, Buller N P 239, The from State, 33 Ark. precedents (Lord Scaife, 8 Q B is usually and If the witness or the purpose by the party's to recognizing ween party and been no collusion force Wigmore "e dead to him" on Godbolt, 326 This principle has also been accepted by Jeffreys L. C. J. Oates Trial, 10 How. St Tr 1237, on the assurance of Oates to the effect, I cannot any cannot when ent and unsuccessful search 1, Wiedemann v Walpole,

But in England the above R v Scaife, 17 Q. B 238;
v Austen, 7 Cox 55, R v Hogan, 8 C & P 167; Phip Ev 7th Ed. 425.
it in India there is no difference between civil and criminal cases.

Insanity 1
R 707; Mor
miscell,
37 A Court
estimony or r & M 147
nd and the Even tem-
& M 147

also renders Gallagher,
1 Pa 112, Cent R Co v Murray, 97 Ga 326, Eung v Duhl, 76 Pa 373; rayton v Wells, 1 N
ve the same eff
Pa 378; contra,
6, Greenk. Ev
tified of the fact order that this no dispensation
se the deposition or report the testimony as a record of past recollecti Wigmore § 1409; State v N O Water Works Co 107 La 1; Jack v. Woods, La a 378; contra, Cool v Stout, 47 Ill 531; Stearns Lumber Co v Houllett, La E 217.

Loss of faculties necessary for testimony The same result follows a witness loses his voice (R v Cockburn, 7 Cox Cr C 265), hearing (R ockburn, supra), eye sight, so far as necessary for the examination of documents Ansman v Crooke, 1 Ld Raym 1166, Houston v Blythe, 60 Tex 46; or culty essential to the giving of testimony Chamberlayne's Ec Wigmore § 1108. Where evidence was given before a committing

S. 33. but in the Sessions Court the witness proves shy and speechless, this does not apply to the case and the evidence cannot ipso facto be treated as evidence at the Sessions Moti Ram v. Emperor, 75 Ind Cas 152-4 C L J 901.

Incapable of giving evidence The capacity to give evidence mentioned in section 33 of the Evidence Act need not be a permanent one; something of permanent incapacity might satisfy the words of the section "incapable of giving evidence" In the matter of the petition of Asgur Hossein, 6 C 774 C L R 124, but see In the matter of Pyari Lal 1 C L R 504, where it was held that the words "incapable of giving evidence" in section 32, Evidence Act, denotes an incapacity of a permanent kind. The Court has no doubt if it is proved to be either actually impossible to produce him, or so difficult to do so, or if it is unreasonable to insist on his production. In the matter of Pyari Lal, supra

Kept out of the way by the adverse party If the witness has been case where three prisoners were indicted for felony, and a witness, one of them, the Court held that the evidence of the witness against the other two was admissible. R v Scarfe, 2 Den 281-17 Q. B. 238-5 Cox 243 S C, Ex parte Larlin, 1 Arn M & O 403, see also Lord Morley's Case, 6 How St Tr 851; R v Harrison, 12 How St Tr 851; Green v Gatewick, B N P. R v Gutteridge, 9 C & P 473; Taylor § 478. The proposition that the witness be kept out of the way by the adversary, his former statement on oath will be admissible, rests partly, on the authority of several decisions both in civil and criminal Courts, partly on statutory analogy but chiefly on the broad principle of justice which will not allow a party to take advantage of his own wrong. Taylor § 478, Green v Gatewick § 163(g); U S v Reynolds, 1 Lush 322. Where it appeared that the witness who was related to the accused was as part of the evidence in the case, the Court held that the evidence of the witness was admissible. 3 Abbas Mandal v Emperor

131 Ind Cas 855-35 C W N 143-A. I R 1931 Cal 473

Proof of unavailability If the witness is dead or the deposition is of course inadmissible in consequence of the former testimony is offered, 3 Abbas Mandal v Emperor

J in Dunn v Dunn, 11 L. process of the Court, his previous deposition is inadmissible. Blagrove v. Blagrove, 1 Deg & Sim 252, 259 Under this section, the evidence of an absent witness taken in the Magistrate's Court cannot be received in the Sessions Court without proof of the circumstances which make it admissible. Such circumstances should be proved like any other fact by the evidence of witnesses and a mere report that a witness is dead or absent is not sufficient.

Queen Empress v. Nag Po, L B R (1872—1892), 134 Khem Singh v Emperor

S. 3

dia and an argument based on the here Alyan v King-Emperor, 31 C 766—A I B. 1927 Cal 679, R v oakes, (1917) 1 K 581, but see R v Cohen, 34 L J. 623 A previous position can be admitted in evidence only under the provisions of
of the Evidence Act, but before it can be placed on record of a criminal d been made on
at in spite of or that he was incapable of giving evidence, his presence could not high, under the circumstance

Thulam v Emperor, A I R 1929 Lah 542; Annau v Emperor, 39 M 449—v Emperor, A I R 1929 Mad 32=46 M. 117; 437—A I R 1925 Lah 418, Emperor v.
Crs 161=15 Cr L J 713, Falconer v Hanson pole, 1891 Times, June, 15, Bishan Das v. Ram

06 P R 1915.

Official duty etc Inability on the part of a witness to attend a trial owing to requirements of official duty, will usually be deemed sufficient adminisry evidence of his former testimony

of the compel-
ing the attendance of the official wi 1407. But in India such evidence will not be admissible when he can be examined on commission

Presence cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense
It is only in extreme cases of expense or delay that the personal attendance of a wit prisoner

, in the absence of special able Per Phear J in Queen
ness is no ground allowed 4 What delay or expense is stances of each case Of the circumstances of the case, one of the chief which the Judge has and ought to exists, or for which withesses are produced at the trial Per White J in In the matter of Pyari Lal 4 C L R 504 (509—510) But where the absence of the witness is due to temporary causes, his previous deposition cannot be admitted And The more actually impossible to produce him, or to be so difficult to do so, or if it is unreasonable to insist on his production In the matter of Pyari Lal, 4 C. L. R.

3. 33. 534; see also Asiatic Steam Navigation v. Bengal Coal Co 35 C 751; N. 2 B. v. Emperor, 104 Ind. C. 637—A. I. R 1927 Rang 249; R. v. Hogg 6 C & P 176; Beaufort v. Crawshaw, L. R 1 C P. 639. Empress v. Ramu Kadh, 3 W. R. 509. So where a witness is procurable his subsequent deposition is not admissible. Bhoobon v. Ambica, 23 W. R. 343; Emperor v. Nandu, 2 A. L. J. 509. The whole notion of taking depositions is that they are a provision in advance for obtaining testimony from one who will not be available at the time of the trial, i. e., in the traditional phrase, they are taken de bene esse, conditional. If the witness is in fact available at the time of the trial, the principle of confrontation requires that he should be examined in face on the stand. This principle is constantly indicated. Greenl. Ev § 163(i) In certain States of the United States of America, such deposition is admissible where the personal attendance of witnesses would involve them in great pecuniary loss and involve a sacrifice of their personal interest without any person.

534.

A. I. R. Co v. Bussen, 30 C. A. 111. The notion that any witness has a duty to the community is not a part of the common law.

Proviso—Para (1) At common law testimony given by a witness in a civil or criminal proceeding is admissible in a subsequent, or in a later stage of the same trial, in proof of the facts stated, provided that the proceedings are against a person not a party to the first trial.

That cannot be done for this reason because such person has it not in his power to cross-examine. Gooding v. Moss, Cowper, 592. So "examinations upon oath, except in excepted cases, are of no avail unless they are made in a cause or proceeding depending between the parties to be affected by them and where each has an opportunity of cross-examining the witness." Per Lord Kenyon L. C. J. in R. v. Eriswell, 3 T. R. 707. The law on this subject is thus summarised by Chief Baron Gilbert: "When you give in evidence any matter sworn at a former trial, it must be between the same parties, because otherwise you dispossess your adversary of the liberty to cross examine." Gilbert Ev 68. So a deposition cannot be given in evidence against any person that was not a party to the suit; and the reason is because he had not liberty to cross examine the witness, and it is against public policy to allow a witness to be examined in a cause to which he was not a party.

would have been more accurate if it had been "cross-examination and estoppel interest." Here the effect is the same as that of res judicata and estoppel in interest. In fact they are the same. Ev 190. L. T. 510—101 Ind. Cas. 11. Acholl, 2 L. R. C. P. 11. Parties, is really meant personal parties, is really meant personal parties, having different rights and with whom the plaintiff had no privity, and he had no opportunity to examine or cross-examine the witness it would be contrary to the interests by the parties being the same in this case. Per Hunman C. J. in Lord v. Brainerd, 30 Cox 343. Gilchrist J laid down by Gilchrist J testimony be given under oath in a civil or criminal proceeding against the accused is admissible in evidence in a subsequent trial if the witness was not a party to the first trial and the parties to the second trial are different from the parties to the first trial.

igh the pros-cutor in the second case is the Queen Empress v Bhabhutgar, Rat Un

To satisfy the requirements of this section the

unst the same parties or their representatives in interest, at the time when the suits are proceeding and the evidence is given.

Sita Nath v. Mohesh Chunder, 12 C 627; Queen v Ishri, 8 A. 672=A W. N. 1886, 257.

Where the parties of the present suits were not parties or representatives of the parties of the previous suit, in such a case, a deposition made in the former suit is not admissible in evidence in the present suit Mrimoyee v. Bhooban

Moyce, 15 B. L. R 1=23 W. R 42; Queen Empress v. Ishri, ■ A. 672 A W.

Bom L R 599 (601).

1 a former suit when

The parties may be
it may be defendant in

atham, 1 A & E 3

to the competency of discredit or

if Mr W ow if B had

further well

rent, though

it opponent

hrs. Ibid

The parties are deemed to be the same when those between whom the evidence is offered were on opposite sides in the former case, and a judgment or may not have an opportunity to cross examine the witness, yet the person in lity could not be used by the defendant therein, "as a man who cannot be prejudiced by a deposition or proceeding in a suit shall never receive any advantage from it." Gubb Ft. 55; Brown v Johnson, 13 Gratt. 641; Burr Jones § 683.

in both the proceedings Morgan v. Nichol, L R 3 C P 117, see also Fool Assory v. Nobin, 23 C 441, Patinharkurn v Raman, 24 Ind Cas 519 "The requirement of identity" says Prof. Wigmore of parties is after all only an accident or corollary of the requirement as to the identity of issue. It ought, then, to be sufficient to inquire whether the former testimony was given upon such though a different person, had the same property interest that the present former evidence Mutatis Mutandis, the rule is the same where a party whose omission from the record fails to alter the issue or the opposing party's right of cross-examination has been dropped in the second case Chamberlayne's Ev § 1671 been satisfied Moore v Triplett, Va, 23 S E 69 So the general principle is that in all cases where the party has without his own fault or concurrence

Greenl. Ev 163(f) The doctrine requiring a testing of testimonial statements by cross examination has always been or be shaken by cross examination declining, he has had all the benefit of examination of that Moule, 1 Drew 472, law is that no examination of both examine and has if he had cross-examination opportunity of Vaughan, 1 M. & S. 6, Empress v Jhuba, 8 C. 739.

S. 33. "A deposition is considered a partial representation of fact, as to all parties who Per
Dr

taken in former suit depends upon the fact that the adverse party, or those privy with him, had the opportunity, to cross-examine the witness, if it appears that the deposition was taken without authority, or without the sanction of the court or without such chance of cross-examination it should not be received.

proceeding provided that the adverse party in the first proceeding had the right and opportunity to cross-examine. That the accused had the opportunity of cross-examining this witness, is I think quite clear. He was asked to do so but he refused to do so. But I think it is also clear that at the stage at which the case had arrived he had no right to cross-examine. Now as far as I can see the accused in a warrant case has no right to cross-examine the prosecution witness until after the charge is framed... No doubt s. 256 (Cr. Pro. Code) does not prohibit cross-examination at a previous stage but that is not the same as saying that the accused has any right to cross-examine. I am of opinion that no such right is reached the accused has no right to cross-examine in the present case the accused had no right to cross-examine.

under s. 33" But in Manjal, was examined by prosecution the charge it was discovered unable to answer the charge.

must also be right to do so. Das Bahadur v. Bijai Bahadur, A. I. R. 1934 C. F. 9-21 C. W. N. 260. In this case the court held that the accused must also be right to do so. Das Bahadur v. Bijai Bahadur, A. I. R. 1934 C. F. 9-21 C. W. N. 260. In this case the court held that the accused must also be right to do so.

is dead and the opposite party had an opportunity of cross-examination though he did not avail himself of it. Tafiz v. Emperor, 50 C. L. J. 541 (Cal.) 1907 W. R. 117.

but was not cross-examined by the defence, his deposition is admissible under s. 30 in the Session's trial, even when the Sub-inspector does not cross-examine him. Tafiz v. Emperor, 50 C. L. J. 541 (Cal.) 1907 W. R. 117. A deposition taken in an ex parte proceeding cannot be used under this section in a subsequent contested proceeding between the same parties.

where other conditions of the section are satisfied Raj Mungal v Mathura, 13 S. A. L. J. 881.

, if not admitted, must be proved, before

3 The deposition of a witness obtained and forming part of the Evidence Act, provided Empress v Ram Chandra,

19 B 749, see also Queen Empress v Basvanta, 25 B 168=2 Bom L R 761

In an enquiry under Chapter XVIII of the Criminal Procedure Code, a witness was examined by the prosecution but he was not cross examined by the accused had the opportunity to cross examine a witness examined by the prosecution, where the accused did not cross examine any of the prosecution witnesses, and was not asked by the enquiring Magistrate to exercise his right of cross-examination Ibrahim v King Emperor, 17 C W N 230=18 Ind Cas 406=14 Cr L J 70, see also 2 Weir 755 Deposition of a witness can be taken in the absence of an accused who has absconded When such a deposition is to be used in a subsequent case, it is necessary to establish that when that deposition was taken, the accused had absconded, and after due pursuit could not be arrested Queen v Eluarce, 21 W R Cr 12, Queen Empress v Sahib Singh, A W N 1896, 182, see also Ghurbin v Q E, 10 C 109

Failure of cross-examination There may have been an adequate opportunity of cross-examination, so far as depends upon the nature of the tribunal or stances preventing adequate cross examination Wigmore § 1390

S. 33.

who Per
Dr
take privi.
that

oath, or without such chance of cross-examination, it should not be received although if due notice was given, it is not necessary that any cross-examination should have been actually made. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald, 3 Swab & T 5 (1870) also Lawrence v. Maule, 4 Dr 170; Macmillan v. Inton 6 M & G 27 (1811)

33, Evidence Act, the statement of a witness, if relevant in a subsequent proceeding provided that the adverse party in the first proceeding had the opportunity to cross-examine. That the accused had the opportunity of cross-examining this witness, is I think quite clear. He was asked to do so, he refused to do so. But I think it is also clear that at the stage at which the case had arrived he had no right to cross-examine. Now as far as I can see, the accused has no right to cross-examine the prosecution witness at this stage but that is not the same as saying that the accused has any right to cross-examine. I am of opinion that under the stage of the case provided for in s 256 is reached the accused has no right to cross-examine. That being so in the present case the accused had no right to cross-examine. Mr. Value is not admissible in evidence.

dur v. Bazar Bahadur, A 1 R 1929 (where 510, 511)

adverse party had both the right and the opportunity to cross-examine. So a deposition of a witness is admissible under this section when the witness is dead and the opposite party had an opportunity of cross-examining him though he did not avail himself of it. Ind Cas 743=A I R 1929 Q E v Ram, 19 B 749

524=A I R 1929 208 of the Cr P Code is not admissible under s 30 in the Session's trial, even when the Sub-Inspector died at the Session's trial. Tafiz v Emperor, 50 C L J 534=A I R 1904 228 A deposition taken in an ex parte proceeding cannot be used under this section in a subsequent contested proceeding between the same parties.

opponent is also entitled to cross examine the interpreter so as to test the correctness of the translation, and to call other witnesses to verify the interpretation. Wigmore § 1393

Whether the deposition of a witness who cannot be cross-examined on account of some organic defect, such as defects of speech, hearing or the like, should be admitted in evidence, it is for the trial Judge to decide. Quinn v. Halbert, 55 Vt 228. The same principle also applies when the accused is deaf or dumb or blind. Bells v. Murphy, 201 U. S. 123; Wigmore § 1393

Sundry insufficiencies of cross examination Where a party is absent from the Court at the time of the cross examination, but his counsel is present, he can . . . a witness Still in . . . Co. 429, 133 But such . . . a witness taken in his absence is read over to him and liberty is given to him to cross examine the witness R. v. Smith, R & R 374; R v. Forbes, Holt, 599 In R v. Hoke, 1 Cox. Cr 226, Earle J. said: 'The reading of it in the prisoner's presence is equivalent to the taking of it in his presence' The object is to afford to the

Id. Failure to take advantage of a known opportunity for cross examination wishes no ground for modifying the ion that the party in question had no assistance such an opportunity for ces, be a very barren privilege Nor is was embarrassed by the absence of his lawyer and was not afforded an extended time in which to exercise the option to cross examine personally The existence of such informative consideration is not deemed inconsistent with the reception of the evidence upon a subsequent trial Where the party to be affected by the secondary evidence has announced an intention to take no further part in pending proceedings, subsequent tender of opportunity to cross examine is regarded as having been expressly waived cross examine Where a witness leaves the country after the charge and ho xpense, his deposit on before this section Nga Da On v Bur L J 114-A I R 1927 Ring 248

Section 33 whether controlled by s. 350 The general provisions of section 33 of the Indian Evidence Act are not in any way affected by section 350 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Lelal v Crown, 101 Ind Cas 183-28 P. L R 199-28 Cr. L J. 451-A I R 1927 Lah 332-8 Lah 570 an opportunity of examining and cross-examining on the very point on which their evidence is adduced in the subsequent proceeding though separate proceedings may involve issues, of which some only are common both, the evidence of those common issues given in the former proceedings may, on the conditions mentioned in s 33 arising, be given in the subsequent proceedings. Ram Reddi v. Seshu Reddi, 3 M 43-2 Weir 756-2 Weir 451. Unless the issues were then the same as they are when the former deposition is offered, the

s. 33. cross-examination would not have been directed to the same material points of investigation, and therefore could not have been an adequate test for exposure of inaccuracies, and falsehoods Wigmore § 1386 It is absolutely necessary that the former statement was sufficiently tested by cross examination upon the points now in issue. It is sufficient if the issues were the same or substantially the

R v D-J-7 C 12-8 C L R 273, Wig
1 tl
2 f 1
4
in
Dos v Foster, 1 A & E 791; R v.
6 Cox Cr 52; R v Beeston, 6 Cox Cr 1
Castro, Trichborne Case; Brown v. Whit, 2 Cr App. 257, Wig
 thus a deposition on .

grievous bodily harm, facts Phap Fv 7th Ed 124 citing, R v Smith, Rus & W.
4 F & F 63, R v. Beeston, 24 L J M C 5, R v. Dilmore, 6 Cox 52, R v Williams, 12 Cox 101

In R v Beeston, 6 Cox Cr 425, deposition of a witness on a charge of intent to do bodily harm, was admitted on a trial for

he would not same case, and has had full opportunity said. "The question circumstances that the situation" says Prof
 in the application of the rule, and not a narrow and pedantic the whole the judicial already adequately
Wigmore § 1387
 the same, it is always a useful test to see whether the same evidence will prove the affirmative of the issue in both Field Ev 6th Ed 149, Wordroffe Et
Ed 356, R v Rochia Mohala, 7 C 42-8 C L R. 273, Dos v Foster, 1
A & E 791

Depositions of deceased persons are not admissible under s 33 of the Evidence Act unless the subject-matter of the dispute in the two suits is the same and also the subsequent suit is between the same parties or their representatives in interest suit under s 9, Act
 at a former case
 since dead, is admissible
 23 C 441

the purpose of excluding

Markby Ev p 33.
 and on behalf of F
 own behalf for assau
 these charges F
 of the same house under section institution of the civil suit

STATEMENTS MADE UNDER SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES.

34. Entries in books of account, regularly kept in the course of business, are relevant whenever they refer to a matter into which the Court has to inquire, but such statements shall not alone be sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability.

Illustrations.

A sues B for Rs. 1000, claiming that B is indebted to him for Rs. 1000, without other evidence.

Principle. "The reasons justifying the admission of this class of statements are not as clearly defined by the Judges as in other Hearsay exceptions § 1522. It has already been stated as an exception to the Hearsay rule, - circumstantial guarantee of trust-

On the face of it, in this class of

In such a case the situation is nowhere, even though a desire to state falsely may casually have subsisted, related motives which probable trustworthiness habit and system of

real inaccuracies and to counteract since the entries record a regular course of business transactions, and error or misstatement is almost certain to be detected and the result disputed by those dealing with the entrant; misstatements cannot safely be made, if at all, except by a systematic and comprehensive plan of falsification. As a rule, this fact (if no motive of honesty obtained) would

8 Ind. Cas 81-13 C. L. J. 139.

"It is recognized that to use a system of regular accounts to sustain a

S. 34.

In case

... as a party's own kind of evidence ... witness for him ... evidence obtainable from others, certain past statements of his must be admitted by very necessity. Thus the principle of necessity and the principle of circumstantial guarantee were both recognized.

... rule was established before it ... therefore be understood only by keeping Courts in establishing it was precisely more § 150 admissible

in the affairs cases the book it being practi

... of a completed transaction. Chu

... motives for untruth and adding certain ... Per Tindal C. J. in Peole v. Peole 1 Bing N. C. 6

... were living or dead. But there was more abuse of this evidence in "leaving the books uncrossed and any way discreditable and still suing for the claim; moreover, the whole proceeding was paraded as involving the making of evidence for one's self, for 'the rule is a man cannot make evidence for himself.' In 1603, Stat. Jac. I. C. after reciting these considerations, forbade this use of shop books 'in action for any money due for wares hereafter to be delivered or for hereafter to be done," except (1) within one year after the delivery of the wares or the doing of the work, (2) where a bill of debt existed (3) between merchant and merchant, merchant and man," for matters within the

1 C 4 § 22 and 16 Car I

that a man cannot make evidence complete, by refusing to recognize these books at all, after the expiration of the year. In the lower Courts, where the jurisdiction was limited to small used (Vide Thayer, Cases on Evidence, the historical material), and a recent (to an extent somewhat indefinite) in the upper Courts (Rule of Court, 1853, Ord 33, R 3; Ord 30, R 7 as amended by Rules of July, 1902) But before the end of the century of the above Statute, where there was such evidence (entries) by a servant known in transacting the business, such entry, from time to time, re that servant, the servant or agent usually employed in such business, was intrusted to make such entries by his master, (and) that it was the course of trade,—on proof that he was dead and that it was his hand-writing, such entry has been read (which was Sir Bby Lake's Case) And that was going a great way, for there it might be objected that such entry was not by reason of the fact that it was gone so far," rty But already Williams, Comb jory, Perke Add and, 3 B & Ad 890, the matter was placed as of the exception was understood as since deceased, in the ordinary course of fully unconnected with the parties, or the clerk of a party, or a party himself Greenl Ev § 120b

S. 34.

the books of merchants and tradesmen regularly kept and written from day to day, without any blank, when the tradesman has the reputation of probity, constitutes a semi proof and with his supplementary oath are received as proof to establish his demand. Green v. F. & 119 cited in Taylor § 712 The doctrine is familiar in the law of Scotland, others, kept with a certain reason, may be received in evidence, in supplement of such imperfect proof. It seems however that such books or other accounts,

probatio,

273—277,

evidence of a debt being due to him by entries, whether by himself or in his own books, provided the books have been regularly kept in the course of business. Cum. Pr. 10th Ed. 175

therein" So, even by that Act a man was not allowed to make himself by what he chooses to write in his own books behind the back of the parties. But where there was other independent evidence of the truth of a transaction to which the accounts referred they were admissible as corroborative evidence, provided the books were first shown to the satisfaction of the Court to have been regularly kept in the course of business. Nort. Ev. 193, see also Duarka Doss v. Janktee Doss, 6 M. L. A. 88. But such books could not be used as independent evidence. Ras Sri Krishen v. Ras Hurry Krishen, 5 M. L. A. 4. Duarka Doss v. Darika Doss, 2 Agr. 303; Ramkrishna v. Hurrydo, Mar. b. 1919; Jagan Koor v. Raghoonundun, 10 W. R. C. R. 148; Allyat v. Jugul Chund, 13 W. R. C. R. 242, Seth v. Seth, 13 W. R. (P. C.) 36; Sorabjee v. Annamayi, 13 W. R. 29 P. C., Gopal Mundal v. Nabho Krishen, 5 W. R. Act. X Rule 30. Account books are legal evidence to corroborate oral testimony. Rajnarain v. Olivia, 5 W. R. Act. X Rule 30, Ram v. Hurry, Marsh. 219—1 Hay. 21. Ind. Jur. N. E. 11.

fraud, it must be considered binding upon him. Gopce v. Anwar, N. S. 358.

Books of accounts as evidence—American rule. "The 'shop book' rule is that by which shop books and tradesmen's books of account, regularly and fairly kept as books of prima facie evidence, are received in evidence. The rule is regarded to the admission of evidence by the courts. The rule is very old and is in force in many countries."

going into the history of the admission of the shop-book. It is noted that the origin of the shop-book administered in this country was it seems, but from the law of Holland. It has long been the settled law.

that entries made in the regular course of business in shop-books by the clerk or agent of a person are, with proper restrictions, admissible in evidence after the ruling... It has long been the lab

their
In many of the states statutes have been entered account in parties to entries to may be in them, since

states that books of accounts regularly selves to charge any rated they are still missible They are books of accounts are reason with liability

It would be more correct to say that though admissible they do not establish the facts required to be proved, i.e., that a person owned a certain sum of money, present section

instances with no previous ruling an entry relevant under section 34 and one relevant under section 32, cl (2) is that in the former case the person who made the entry may be available as a witness while in the latter case he is not. I find it very difficult to appreciate on Sridhar, 28 B 294 and has been accepted as correct in Daji Bhai Kharis v Govil, Narayan, 10 Bom L R 811, Dukha Mandal v W N Grant, 16 C L J 21 and Allooli v Tarak Nath Ghosh, 17 C W N 774-16 C L J 329, and it is perhaps too late to contest it. If this other view is adopted it should be held

34. Sen v. Bijoy Chand, supra, see also Jainab Biswas v. Sita Kumari Devi, 46 C L J 253=101 Ind Cas 733=A I R 1927 Cal 855, Manichand v. Parakaji, 9 Mys L J 337. It is essential in every case where reliance is placed upon books of account in the course of business; the entries themselves removed by the admission of the opposite party. Bibi Inambandi v. Hira Motasuldi, 15 C L J 621=13 Ind Cas 678. Under the Indian Evidence Act entries in books of account regularly kept in the course of business are admissible in evidence, not only for refreshing the memory of the witness, but also as corroborative evidence of the story which he tells. Books of account which profess to record facts relating only to the particular transaction in question are less reliable than a book where in the same is recorded in common with other transactions in the ordinary course of business. nathan, 29 C 331 P C=6. It is not necessary in a written and that they were kept in regular course of business. If a goma and a member of a firm were examined and depose that the accounts were regularly kept, the accounts may be held to have been proved in the absence of evidence to the contrary. Biccha Lal v. Jas Pershad, 45 P R 1899. A party who calls for an account book is bound by all the entries contained therein. Shib Pershad v. Promotho, 10 W R 193; Rameswari v. Bal Kishun, 9 A 713 P C.

Account books. the Privy Council in Jaswant v. Sheo Nara are instructive as to the variety in account-book al value, but merely a man's private record, p and convenience. "Other accounts may be so kept, and may so tally with external circumstances, as to carry conviction that they are true." And, the Lordships continue, "the Evidence Act, section 34, therefore, enacts that entries in books of evidence, The admis to the general rule laid down in section 34, is that the words "the words paper bound by tearing a p in the sense of portfolio, or clip, or strung together on a piece of twine which is intended at will, would not in the ordinary English, be called a book. But so narrow a signification would not do in India, where accounts are often kept on sheets of paper laced or threaded together in a manner which allows removal of any sheet at any time by the nature of a book. Of this class are the books of practically every Ma in the English Copyright every volume, part or div of music, map chart, or for the convey Act, and w enacting sect even the Ma not made in intended not to be taken apart at any time for any purpose." Idem, supra.

however to say what is not a book for the purpose of section 34, the hesitation in holding that unbound sheets of paper, in whatever quantity, filled up with one continuous account, are not a book of account within the purview of section 34.

account of reli.

ing substantive evidence on which reliance may be placed. A private diary may be most regularly kept and contain made, of the utmost value. It may be used as a witness or refreshing his memory and others of the Evidence Act; for such user does not make the document itself evidence. (Cf. Ramji v. Rangayya, 1 M. H. C. R. 168). It may also come in under section 32 (2) if the requirements of that section are satisfied. But no entry in such a diary can be filed as documentary evidence of the facts stated in it in favour of the person making the entry if he is a party to the suit. It would be excluded by section 21 of the Act, and section 34 provides no exception in favour of it. The reason for such differentiation between a private diary and a private account is manifest. An account, regularly kept necessarily results in a continuity which makes fraudulent addition extremely difficult and dangerous, it is a chain of forged links into which the subsequent interpolation of a link of forgery without discovery is almost impracticable. The man who wishes to defraud his neighbour accounts, or, having kept them, suppresses them. A book of account, on the other hand, with truth in regularly kept account popular, because of the mathematical connection running through them. But these safe-guards of truth are entirely absent in the most regularly kept of private diaries, and subsequent interpolations, to meet an unexpected demand and facilitate fraud, are generally possible without difficulty and danger of discovery. It is clear that the Legislature, which guides itself by human experience, had such considerations before it when it enacted, by section 34, an exception to section 21, in favour of books of account. I am therefore of discovery are not admissible under sec 34." Per Stanyon & J. C. in Mukund Ram v. Dayaram, 23 Ind. Cas. 893 (891, 895) = 10 N. L. R. 44.

... of business
... been kept
... and not as in-
... 'regularly
... kept,' and in-
... and not "proves." It is
... 34 of Act I of 1872 = not
... Act II of 1855, and this seems ... section 31, indicate that the ... regularly kept in the course of business—in the first place, making them relevant whenever they refer to a matter into which the Court has to enquire, and next, providing that when such entries are sought to be used as statements for a particular purpose—namely, to charge any person with liability, they shall not alone be sufficient evidence for the purpose. Section 32, clause (2) makes relevant a statement consisting of an entry made by a person who is not a witness before this Court, in books not necessarily books of account but—kept in the ordinary course of business. A

S. 34.

Per Mookejee J
the old Act I regularly kept

"proved to have been" have been dropped. In the later Act I of 1872 the w in the law. The legislature has dispened with. This amounts to material altera that the book

and as appears on its face to create liability in an account with the party against whom it is offered, and not be a memorandum for other purposes Burr Jones § 570. The entries in the books of account should relate to the business or occupation of the person whose books they are and not to transactions of such person having no relation to his regular business or occupation.
But the admissibility of the book in respect to proper items will not be lost because of the fact that the book contains some entries not connected with the regular business of the party. The character of the entries is not particular, and should itemize the frequently

most elementary struture. Finally, when Ganesh, 95 Ind Cas 100 evidence, but would of course balance and general accuracy of an account-book is not admitted, it must be formally proved. Mukundam v Dayaram, 10 N. L. R. 41-23 Ind Cas 300

They may be kept in the form of a ledger, if this is general mode in which the party keeps his books, provided the entries are original entries. The entries may be made in pencil, or in the form of a time-book, and not only of the labour of the plaintiff.

Cash books in which the entries are not admitted, the issuance of the checks are not admissievidenced by them are admissible in evidence. The statutes do not generally prescribe the form in which books are to be kept, nor the degree of definiteness to be observed in making entries. They have been so framed as to have a very general application. The account-books of an illiterate labourer, as well as those of a tradesman or a banker are admissible in evidence if within the necessary condition, the purposes of which are to secure authenticity and credibility in respect to the evidence, rather than to prescribe the form of it. Whatever may be its form, it is only evidence prima facie of what is shown by it. Supplement- S. ary proof may often be required to make such evidence relevant to particular case. Burr Jones § 570 plaintiff that there were dealings between him and defendant, held, that the dealings were not proved under s. 34, Evidence Act, in the absence of evidence of specific sums having been paid. Bulla v Trilok, 100 Ind. Cas. 862 = A. I. R.

1927 Lah. 903; Narayan v Fithoba, 100 Ind. Cas. 863 = A. I. R. 1927 Nag. 177.
T. not prove anything.
H. account kept in the n with liability. The Firm of Jodha v Ditta, 81 Ind. Cas. 909 = 6 Lah. L. J. 501 = A. I. R. 1925 Lah.

242. This section does not limit in any way at all the nature of the material tements in a book of account.

vouchers, receipts or other

Kallu Mal v Bhairavi, L. R.
6 A. 375 = 83 Ind. Cas. 383 = A. I. R. 1925 All. 742; see also Tesunadiyan v
Subba, 52 Ind. Cas. 704; Abdul v Puran, 82 P. R. 1914 = 277 P. L. R. 1914; Ramaswami v Ramanathan, (1914) M. W. N. 240 = 22 Ind. Cas. 627. Where a claim based on entries in account books is entirely denied, plaintiff must prove the various items of his account by independent evidence, as the entries cannot in themselves charge any person with liability. Ganesht v. The Firm of Mangal Ram Atma Ram, 76 Ind. Cas. 157. In a suit for recovery of water cess, bills entries showing that in previous years the defendant has been paying cess at the rate demanded, are admissible in evidence. Prabhu Dyal v Ram Chander, in slips of paper

the books cannot be rejected on the ground that the entries were not made in them regularly from day to day. Mangal Prasad v Manjir Das, 11 Ind. Cas. 95. Where the plaintiffs can easily produce independent and trustworthy evidence in support of entries in their account books, it would be unfair to defendants and wrong in principle to accept as sufficient proof the entries, uncorroborated by any evidence

one of the plaintiffs to the effect Ganga Rari v Kala Ram, 53

try in the pamphlet alone is not entry which is denied. Keshavan v book, not otherwise suspicious, is supported by prima facie reliable R. 1909. Entries to be admitted for testimony must be made in the to prove that the entries were taken from books which were regularly and correctly kept. Queen Empress v Sayed Sarjatan, Rat. Un. Cr. C. 314 = Cr. Rg. 37 of 1887. Though certain account books are proved not to have been regularly kept in the course of business, yet if they are proved to have been kept on behalf of a firm of contractors by its servant or agent appointed for that purpose, they are relevant as admissions against the firm. Rey v. Harwant, 1 B. 6, 10. If books are kept in pursuance of some continuous and uniform practice in the current routine of the business of the particular person to whom they belong, they are 'books of

S. 34.

that the books were kept up in the regular course of business. It is a matter of intrinsic evidence as to whether the books in question were books of account regularly kept in the regular course of business. Emperor v. Narbada, A. I. R. 1930 All 38. The book should be such a regular and usual account book as explains itself and as appears on its face to create liability in an account with the party against whom it is offered, and not be a memorandum for other purposes. Burr. Jones § 570. The entries in the books of account should relate to the business or occupation of the person whose books they are and not to transactions of such person having no relation to his regular business or occupation. But the admissibility of the book in respect to proper items will not be lost because of the fact that the book contains some entries not connected with the regular business of the party. The charges in the book must be specific and particular, and should itemize the transactions recorded. Such entries have frequently been rejected when they consisted of charges in gross for contracted services. R. v. Jones 8 F. 71.

have no weight. Kesho Ram v. Ganesh 45 Ind. C. 178-A. I. R. 1910, must 407. "FIR see that the supposed, usually called the mahajani system. Their evidential value must depend upon their formality and the checks against fraud secured by method of recording with admissibility. A check will be admissible. As regards of a large bank, and the day-book of a house-keeper. The difference lies in the weight to be given to the entries therein. But where the fact of regular maintenance must be stubs of checks, several days after the issuance of the checks, are not. Cash-books in which the entries were made at the time of the transactions evidenced by them are admissible in evidence. The statutes do not generally respect to the evidence, rather than to prescribe the form of it.

absence of recital in ■

who is not a party

the case of Ram Persh

restricted in the sam

621=13 Ind Cas 678; Ah Nasw Khan v Mamk Chand, 25 A 90=22 A W N 207; Pragdas v Dauallaram, 11 II 257; Debendra v. Arun, 1925 Cal 65; Tarakumar v Arun, 74 Ind Cas 383; Kasam v Hay, 76 Ind Cas 327; Ganga Ram v Lachmi ram, 19 C. W. N. 611=28 Ind Cas 705; Imambandi v. Day Mulsaddi, 28 C L J 409=45 C. 878

s of
the ough
ther

causes they have a suspicious and fraudulent appearance, and are not explained they should be rejected The book may be admitted as to entries which are proved to be original, although other entries in the same book are not original, unless the two classes of entries cannot be distinguished Irregularities in account-books sufficient to justify their exclusion must be gross and palpable Books of account must, however appear to embrace all of the items of account between the parties which are proper subjects of entry The account book must

the power of
of the book
and veracity

give evidence of facts or circum-ok is not fairly and honestly kept as a r routine of business, subject, it is said, to the limitation that the investigation should be confined to a time at or near the period covered by the account in suit Chamberlayne's Ev § 3148

Jama wasil baki papers Where certain entries are admissible under section 32, the position is that there is no statutory obligation to look for anything else in order to found the liability It does not follow that such entries should necessarily, in any event, be regarded as conclusive of the truth of the statements therein made When such entries in the landlord's papers are sought to be used against the tenant, their evidentiary value has got to be carefully evidence to show when and by whom these entries in collection papers were

34. made Held that the collection papers were inadmissible in evidence Attors v Tarak Nath, 16 C L J 378. Jama rasul bai papers have no weight as corroborative evidence Sunomoy v Johur Mahomed, 10 C L R 340. Belaet Khan v Rashbehary, 22 W R 519. Gopal Mandal v Nabokristo 2 W R (Act X) 83. Kherromonee v Beyoy, 7 W R 533; Umed Ali v Habibullah 47 C 266; Yeshuradnyan v Subba Dasler, 52 Ind Cas 704; Dicarka Das v Bahsh 18 A 92. Mahomed Mahmud v Safar Ali 11 C 407. (409), Fanidin Agnikumar, 71 Ind Cas 300, Jonah v Siva Kumar 16 C 733 = A I R 1927 Cal 85; Tr...

Evidence

if the col

Taira Aas

accounts

specifically states that of itself it shall not be considered to be sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability Bhagwat v Prasad 15 R D 401

Account books, entries how to be proved. Where certain accounts were produced in the original Court by the plaintiff, and all that was proved was that they were in the handwriting of his father, and the books were not examined in detail in the original Court, and the particular entries upon which the plaintiff relied were not selected and exhibited it was held that the entries ought to have been pointed out and proved and evidence should also have been given in detail as to the character of the books themselves. Hingmaji v Heramba Chandra, 8 Ind Cas 81 = 13 C L J 139. In that case the Court in delivering the judgment said "It is essential, in every case where reliance is placed upon books of account, to establish that they have been regularly kept in the course of business. It is perfectly true that as laid down by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the case of Deputy Commissioner v Parsad 27 C 118 = 26 I A 251 = 4 C W N 417, they need not be written up from moment to moment or from day to day. But it is obvious that if they have been written up casually once a week or a fortnight, though they may be admitted in evidence, obviously they do not possess the same claim to confidence that attaches to books entered from day to day or from hour to hour. Transactions take place (Uncher Shaw v New Dhurumsay, 4 B 570). The proper procedure to follow therefore, is, as laid down by the Judicial Committee in Duarka Dass v ...

has kept the accounts or prove that the books have been regularly kept. But this is not all that is necessary, section 34 makes the entries relevant if they are entries in a book of account regularly kept. It is therefore not sufficient merely that the entries themselves have to be proved. It is moved by the admission of the original books were produced in the original Court. The plaintiff selected and exhibited at all. Obviously there is considerable laxity to have been pointed out in detail as to the character of the books closely has been applied to use ...

t

r

w or his pred

assured that the

th

ust, therefore, the very lance to show
it and expenses
were disallowed

by him soon after the furd, embodying the expenses, and maskabar, monthly accounts, were prepared. It was found that these latter accounts were kept regularly in the ordinary course of business. The maskabars and rolat books, furd under Mohan, it gave a decree for the plaintiff on the evidence of his account books and of his book-going into the witnessbox was not entitled to succeed. Hira Bhagat v. Gobind Ram, 63 P. R. 1897

to
m n-
at ertain disputed items interpered in the account should not be disallowed no specific evidence
by such fictitious items Hanumanta v. Akbar,
O P. R. 1910-147 P. L. R. 1910-117 P. W. R. 1910. It is not a condition precedent to accepting entries in account books as relevant under section 31, Indian Evidence Act that it should be proved how the accounts came to be written, and necessary to
to be establish who were examined as witness for the defence, was considered sufficient corroborative evidence of the accounts to charge the defendants with liability.
Bichha Lal v. Jas Pershad, P. L. R. 1900, 5. It is unnecessary to prove, by independent evidence, the correctness of every single item of an account extend-

for the decision of the witness likewise observed all account books, but each book contained that amount of difference which was appropriate to its character. The committee also used the better test of genuineness than the correspondence
other evidence,
firmly the deci
I A G P C

Plaintiffs sued to recover money due as balance of a running account and

The various items entered plaintiff, the High Court or this section, sufficient be evidence, however, one of the plaintiffs having given evidence with reference to the account books, stating the amounts advanced to and repaid by the defendant, and no question speaking from his own
lence of a witness for the
was sufficient to uphold Larka Das v. Sant Baksh,

Kalu v. Bhairani, 33 Ind Cas 353-A I R. 1925 All. 742, Abdul v. Firm Ditta, 81 Ind Cas 909, Gopeswar v. Bhoj, 23 B 291, Dhuka v. Grant, 16 C L J. P C, Ganashi v. Firm, 76 Ind Cas. 157; Khumi Mal v. Duarka Das, 1930 A L J. Corroborative proof must be given by evidence, it seems to have been deemed necessary that this corroborative evidence should be furnished if the rule itself is to apply. Confirmation of a particular item may be sufficient. In other words it was necessary for the proponent to call third persons such as those who had dealt with the plaintiffs and found their books to be correct. Where evidence of this produces the best good faith with In this connection. The book to be verified by the testimony of the witness must be the same in which the account in question is entered. Chamberlayne's Lr § 3096. But such entries are evidence against the person making them. Angama v. Bharmajpa, 23 B. 63; Mathilda v. Gaebels, 96 Ind Cas. 429-A I R. 1926 Mad. 955; Jodha Mal v. Ditta, 81 Ind Cas 909-A I R. 1925 Lah 212.

accident. Seth Maganmal v. Darbarilal, 24 N L R. 10-30 Bom. L R. 296-107 Ind Cas. 118-47 C. L J 222-A I R. 1928 P. C 39.

35. An entry in any public or other official book, register or record, stating a fact in issue or relevant fact, and made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty, or by any other person in performance of a duty specially enjoined by the law of the country in which such book, register or record is kept, is itself a relevant fact.

General Principle An exception which in practice is by far the commonest in its employment is the exception admitting statements made by officials in pursuance of official duty. The principle of Necessity, which in one form or another, the death, insanity, or absent, but attendance of the officer is corporally impossible to obtain, there is a high degree of expediency that the public business be not deranged by insisting on the strict enforcement of the Hearsay rule. Wigmore § 162 (m).

S. 35. The second essential for an exception to the Hearsay rule is that some circumstantial guarantee of trustworthiness be found, to take the place of a confrontation and cross-examination so far as may be. Two reasons are given by the Courts as not sufficient in this respect. The first is that public officers do not satisfy the exception.

§ 163 (a) In P.

"The law requires that the law reporter should be a public officer that it presumes they will discharge their duty with accuracy and fidelity."

charge of their public duty may be true, under such a degree of case may appear to require." Sir

"It depends upon the public duty of the person who keeps the register to make such entries in it, after Kennedy, 5 App Cas 623, F 468, Parke B said

by the register
the document
duty exists
will be used
ably the duty

Possibly the officer may not be one from whom in advance an express warranty of office is required. No stress seems to be laid judicially on either of these considerations, nor need they be emphasized. It is the influence of the official duty, broadly considered, which is taken as the sufficient guarantee of trustworthiness, justifying the acceptance of the hearsay statement. Wigram § 1632 making of this particular official statement is hardly amenable to the correction of errors by public inspection—its efficacy must be of the moment, for it is not supposed that the public, or specifically interested members of it, do in fact (whatever their rights may be) ever demand inspection of the vast majority of official records that are made, and there can be hardly any chance of checking or revision from that source. It would seem that the second reason, put forward so definitely by Lord Blackburn, is to be regarded as merely a casual advantage, and not an essential limitation, of the class of documents to be included within the exception." Wigram § 1632.

case at the present, statements in public documents are receivable to prove the facts stated on the general grounds that they were made by the authorized agents of the public in the course of official duty, and that they were made in the public interest or required to be made by the public. Taylor Ev 10th Ed § 1591 "In many cases a lapse of years, it would be impossible to require that the facts contained in such documents were made by the official in the presence of an exception is made to the rule that statements in public documents are receivable to prove the facts stated on the general grounds that they were made by the authorized agents of the public in the course of official duty, and that they were made in the public interest or required to be made by the public. Ghulam Rasul v Secretary of State, 30 C W N 101 (101)-86 Ind Cas 651-52 I. A. 201-23 A. L. J 639 For further discussion vide next topic.

v. Malapat Singh 5 C 714 751, 753-L R 7 I A 63; see also Malibaryna v. Secretary of State, 35 M 31 So the register is admissible irrespective of whether the official who actually wrote the entries had any personal knowledge or whether the register was a copy of a previous register which had become untidy. William Graham v Phanindra Nath Mitra, 19 C W. N 1038; contra Ambalariya v Sree Unakshy, 29 M I. J 217-26 Ind Cas 841-(1915) M. W. N. 76 Now let us examine whether the principle is violated on the ground of want of personal knowledge on the part of the entrant. The argument for excluding the use of entries except for facts necessarily within the entrant's personal knowledge is thus stated by Denman L C J in Doe v Wallaston, 1 Moo & R 389. "The clergy man must be present at the time of the marriage (of baptism, the time of the part of the entrant. "Must we not take it to be the act of the incumbent, who, however he got his information, had satisfied himself of the fact before he sanctioned the entry?" Doe v France, 15 Q B 758 In the same case Wightman J having taken English Comm

1073,
ray, 8
389; (1933);
Wignore

§ 1636
"It is

tion of a personal receivable practical

that the same principle is applied to persons whose hearsay statements are receivable under the exceptions to the Hearsay rule; and the application of the

here as elsewhere, but the principle itself need not be and is not judicially employed to the extent of unpractical strictness; and it has its qualifications and exceptions, based on good sense and practical convenience." Wignore § 1635. So it is at first sight unsatisfactory to accept an entry as evidence of a fact not occurring within the personal knowledge of the entrant. At the same time there city be not confirmed by the usual tests of truth, namely the swearing and the title to this by law to out at se en be difficult to prove them by means of sworn witnesses" Per Bayne J in Games v Pelf 12 How 172, 570, Wigmore § 1631. So "official registers, or books kept by persons in public office, in which they are required to write down particular transactions, or to enrol or record particular contracts or instruments, are generally admissible in evidence, notwithstanding their authenticity is not confirmed by those usual and ordinary tests of truth—the obligation of an oath and the power of cross-examining the persons on whose authority their truth and authenticity may depend. This has been said to be because they are required by law to be kept, because the entries in them are of public interest and notoriety, and because they are made under the sanction of an oath of office or in the discharge of an official duty." Per Fowler J in Ferguson v Clifford, 37 N H, 11 books, etc, 7 books, and keep Nort, E guarantee of reliability to render them admissible if offered in evidence. Vo sufficient Uchler's Ev § 206. The exceptional privilege given to public records by this section cannot be extended to entries which a public officer is not expected to, and is not permitted to make. Ali Nasar v Manikchand, 25 A. 90 (F. B.)—1903 A W N 207; Vadhabrao v Deonah, 21 B 695. There must be might not be admissible. Bhanya Dnyaj v Beni Mahto, 22 C W N 139—23 M L T 382—20 Bom L R 712—28 C L J 1—47 Ind Crs 1 (P. C.) But registers kept under private authority private individuals are inadmissible (1913) 1 Ch 392, Whittunck, v R 303, Doe v Gasacre, 8 C & P 5 it is not the duty of the officer to 14 App Crs 137, Farrell v Maquire, 3 Ir L R 187. A register can be received to prove incidental particulars concerning the main transaction where they (1920) 1 Ch 284 town to be prepared any other person be country, nor has the act or record in absence of proper I II 1930 All.

English Law. Another exception to the hearsay rule consists of statements contained in public or official documents which are admissible as evidence of 291 Statements Royal proclama-

United Ins Co 7 Johns 38; mentary Journal (upon all matters properly before either House, Jones v.

- S. 35. Randall, 1 Cowp 17; Root v matters, Oates Case, 10 How, St 71 not conclusive evidence of the f Frachin, supra, 111-112 Official records is required by entry has been England, a ch
 Church, is admi
 identity of the ch
 or reference, and (2) the cr. Ibid p 293. So in in of the E table had by the evidence of the baptism; but not the time of it to make enquiry about the in e d Draycot v Talbot, 3 Bro P C
May, 2 Stra 1073; Whitham v Law, 3 Star, R 63, D
Larnes, 1 M & Rob 389; Stark, L Eq 373, R v Weaver L R 2 C
 the church of England, from the t

Hubbuck on Succession, 470; 474 in 1644 and 1653 provided for the registration of births, deaths and marriages Scobell's Ordinances, 76 236. Dudley's Case, 2 Sid 71 But these Ordinances were annulled upon the restoration of Charles II And registers kept and ecclesiastical authority continued to be admitted in evidence by the Courts although not required to be kept, nor declared to be evidence by any Statute
 This is probably the meaning of Lord Holt's dictum that such registers are evidence from "the nature of the thing", and of the additional words attributed to him by one reporter of least au Burgesses of Droitwich, 1 Salk 28 the time of the decision of that ca which were repeated

Will IV
 Statutes

register, 13 L J N S Ch 399 of the baptism of the ambassadors and entries in

of their own or of England. Evans v. Ball, 38 L. T. 111; Faylor § 1593; Phip S. Fe 7th Ed. p. 329.

entry must have been contemporaneous. The fact of being under oath, but the official character of the transaction appears to afford a prima facie guarantee for its truthfulness—stronger, perhaps, than that which obtains in respect of books kept in the ordinary course of business. Nort Fx 200 But the entries should be made promptly, or at least without such long delay as to impair their credibility. — Phip Ex 7th Ed 330, Doe v Bray 8 B & C 813

vidence Act, the following documents are public documents—(1) documents forming the acts or resolutions of the Government, (2) documents of the official bodies and departments, (3) documents of the courts of law, (4) documents of the executive, whether of the Government or of the local authorities, (5) documents of the dominions, or of a private documents.

5 App.
whole w
that it

in a corporation book concerning a corporate matter, or something in which all 1d be public within that sense. But it must be made by a public officer. I understand a a document that is made for the purpose of the able to refer to it. It is meant to be where there is a much better way of doing it. It is meant to be where be the

ay be but I

for the purpose of being have access to it afterwards

any cases entries in the entries of that kind,

"public" then, because the common law of England making it an express duty to keep the secret - kept by a public

I think as far
o its accuracy, and

at, in every case
, it has been made

... as a register to be on public" says Prof.

being known or otherwise, and may be equally open to all, capable of persons in general.

persons in 1960: 1

Ind	Cas	125	A	I	R	1926
-----	-----	-----	---	---	---	------

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT.

S. 35.

Other official book, register or record. It is important to observe that whenever it is the duty of a public official, either at common law, or by Statute, to record certain facts in any book which is referred to ever after, it is not only the duty of the official to do so, but it is also the duty of the official to record the facts in the manner in which they are referred to ever after.

kept by any law. The statement of the station writer, the register not being one directed by any law. Mohammad v. Feroze, 23 C. 313-5 C. W.

Cr Pro and the provisions of that section. The certificate of guardianship is no evidence of the age of the person under this section, for it is neither a book nor a register, not a record kept by any officer in accordance with law. Queen Empress, 28 C. 313-5 C. W.

Teishhana papers prepared by the de. Samar Dasadh v. Jaggu, 23 M 492-3. The register (so called from the number of columns in the statement of the station writer) prepared by a person who is called a patwari and submitted to the collector, in accordance with the rules framed by the Board of Revenue under Reg. XII of 1817, is not an official register. Mahhan, 18 C. 321.

consequence that part may not be admissible in evidence under this section. Raj L. 101

Durga v. Deo Bahadur, 22 C W N 439-23 M L T 382-23 C L J 101

Ind Cas 1 (P C)

in this section must be taken

28 Bom L R 1225-50 B 716-A L ..

servant, has not been defined in this Act.

21 of the Indian Penal Code and s 2 (17) of the Indian Evidence Act, 1908. As regards who are public servants, see s 2 (17) of the Indian Evidence Act, 1908. 7 B L R 448-16 W N

Gan, v. Sahargouda, 51 C L J 592

Register or record

in that recorded

it in that it is arises (personally or by its own),

the staten

the staten

the staten

the staten

the staten

the staten

inaction as a separate ex-cause of circumstances that precincts and the

are not fitted for entry in a single office volume Sufficient in that it is preserved in official custody

The return differs from the A further distinction, within s that the former deals with r, while the latter records it has occurred out of his s 1637. It must always be a correspondence which do, and those which do not, fall within the scope of s 35

 But where there is a statutory duty laid upon public officers to investigate and report facts, a report of the facts elicited by their investigation is an official record within the meaning of this section Ramakrishna v Tirunarayana,
 A. I. R 1932 Mad. 198.

It is essential that a register should be 7th Feb p 330, see also Graham v
Winsfield, 18 Vce 143; May v May,
 P 552

Nature of the Duty—General Principles Whether a given statement was made under an official duty will depend chiefly upon the nature of the office, the subject of the statement, and the form of its making (1) It is clear that no they did not occur (7) A statement otherwise admissible is not generally to be excluded where there existed for the declarant a special interest or motive to misrepresent (8) The person having the duty and the person making the statement must on principle be identical Wigmore § 1633

S. 35. birth of a person The entry was admittedly not made by the Chaudhlar & there was no evidence that it was made by any other public servant or that it was the duty of any public servant to make it. Held, that the register was not admissible under s. 35 of the Evidence Act. Ganpat v. Gauri Sanjar, 190 C 68.

Errors of interest

affect the weight of

App Cas 437, Falcon

They do not also affect (1907) 2 Ch 592. So also, the fact that the entry is in the interest of the owner or body keeping the register, affects weight only, not admissibility. Irish Exch. v. Derry, 12 Cl. & F. 611; Phip. Ev 7th Ed. 330, Sturla v. Neccia, L. R. 5 App Cas 623, 628.

Wajib-ul-arz. An entry in the wajib-ul-arz is admissible in proof of the custom under s. 35 and its validity does not depend upon the question whether the wajib-ul-arz

Hasan v. Abdul

village administrator

the statements

rights and customs

of such rights and purport to give the history of the devolution in certain families: when the narrators stand in no better position than any other tradition. When the incidents are not with a safe to accept

4 O W N

have been

is shown by the party alleging it. Manya v. Sitaram, 23 N. L. J. 407-408, App Cas 438-A. I. R. 1927 Nag 147, Wasiq Ali v. Mihar Ali, 110 Ind. Cas. 4-5, I. R. 1928 Oudh 409, Sartaz Koer v. Mahadeo Bux, 29 O. C. 153-92 Ind. Cas. 657-A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 320. S. H. Singh v. Rustam, Singh 3 O. W. N. 121.

or Rinaj Ram should be supported by instances. Bayy Nath v. An entry in a wajib-ul-arz

Singh v. Babu Lal, 21 A. L. J. 822-L. R. 4 A. 557, Sher Anwar v. 78 Ind. Cas. 112.

existed or that had been made

207 Wajib-ul

of 1863 when much more reliable than oral evidence given after the event. 30-53

Ashgar Ali, 57 L. A. 29-52 C. L. J. 183-A. I. R. 1930 P. C. 30-53 in the village records was laid down for his

216 = 13 C. W. N.
Musammal Lali v
= 10 C. W. N. 730;
63; Isri v Gujra,
Moharaja, 2 A. L. arurudhucaya, 15 A
, 16 A 10, Garura-

W. N 33 = 23 A 37; Ali Nasir v. Mamul Chand,

25 A. 90.

Riwaj i am. An entry in a facie proof of the custom Lali 924 = A I R 1927 Lali 241, Ghu Ruwaj i am being a public reco of his duties, is admissible in evidence to prove the facts therein entered and the

Lali. 99 = 1923 Lali 401

fact rana
Ind swam

a judgment,
therefore, an
to a relevant
the judgment
In support
Purno Chunder
15 M 378 and it is contended that the relevancy of judgments is governed by sections 40 to 43 of the Evidence Act and that a judgment not inter partes is not evidence issue or relevant fact, even though the judgment may be between persons who ds" Then after dissenting from the Parbutty Dassi v Purno Chunder Singh Mahpal Singh, 5 C 744 = 6 C L R 593, correctness of this decision (i.e. Parbutty submitted in Sundar Das v Fatimul ul nissa

Apparu, 12 M 9
a judgment not inter
a fact in issue or

I, L. A.—83

5. 35.

tion between the parties.
Ind. Cas 298 = O C W N
Ind. Cas 593 = 43 C 707 =

20 C W N 802 = 11 A L J 121 = 18 Bom L R 490 = 21 C L J 116, see also Asa Singh v Uansa Ram, 621 Ind C, 509 = A I R 1930 Lah 237. On a consideration of the authorities and the provisions of the Evidence Act it is clear that such an entry is admissible.

L. R. 763

relevant under s 35, Indian Evidence Act. Gelumul v. Kurummal, 10 D L J
28 = 35 Ind Cas 551

accepted as conclusive of the dates of the death recorded in the Ranga Swami, A I R 1925 M W N 233 = 88 Ind. Cas 249 = A I R 1925
Mad 1005. The register of deaths maintained under para 807 of the Police Regulations is admissible as evidence of death.

Reddi v. Kotayya, 33 M L J 100 = 111 of 1899, the Registers of Births and Deaths of the Board of Revenue since the year 1865 do not come under this section. Ibid Entry in death register may be rejected when used to prove or disprove death on a particular day, if register is prepared in casual way. Kali v. Sashi, A I R 1930 C P 100. Death Registers are evidence of death.

tribunal Phup v. Phup 7th Ed. 332.

of a partition which affected the public revenue is admissible in evidence for all purposes only. Abdul Haq v. Abdul Khasra is not a record within the meaning of s 35 of the Evidence Act, but is admissible as evidence of the plot in question before the court. Abul Khasra, A I R 1923 P. 163. See also weight cannot be attached to a partition paper in the absence of detailed information. S.

35 of the Evidence Act. Sothi Bhoosan v Girish Chunder, 20 C. 340; see also Ramsarup v. Ramnaram, A. I. R. 1929 Pat. 32. A batuara chitta is not admissible in evidence under s. 35 of the Evidence Act. Isuar Chandra v. Turanath, 1 Ind. Cas. 607. Entries in batuara khasia papers are admissible in evidence, but it is for the Court to decide in each particular case whether the

made in a proceeding under Reg. XIX of 1831 between predecessors of the parties to a suit are good and admissible evidence, quite apart from anything contained in section 35 of the Evidence Act. Khetra Nath v. Mahomed, 23 C. W. N. 48-45 Ind. Cas. 921.

Entry in a certified copy. Under this section an entry made on a certified copy indicating the date on which it was completed is certainly relevant. But when an enquiry as to correctness of such an entry has been started or its report Nizam Din v Mahomed Iqbal, 168 Ind. Cas. 619-A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 643.

Ghosi v. Ajudhia, 14 R. D. 444

Satish Chandra Mukhoficate of guardianship was be a record kept by a

S. 35.

erem So in the province of strict Judge to a guardian made by a public servant in in such record is therefor meer Hasan v Fiaz Hussain Luck. 602

A I R 1929 Oudh 135; see Mehdi Ali v. Walayat Hussain, Luck. 602
O W N 25=121 Ind Cas 277=A I R 1930 Oudh 97 duty

to till
ship
of his official duty and the same was recorded It was held that the statement was admissible in evidence on the question of relation-him under this section Lal Harihar Pratap v Bishesu Ind Cas 422=A I R 1928 C by the surveyor who recorded Its Illce 5 Rnt L I 116=99 Ind Cas 166=A I R 1926 Rang 404; Ali entries in a prescription register maintained by a Government compounder or c in a Government witness. D Cruz Oudh 310 All

final or sole test

Bidya Prasad v Surkhur, 134 Ind Cas 638=A I R 1931 Pat 263 L of Chari Assistant Collector is admisible Gany A report in police diary is admissib witness. Abheraj v Gaj
Singh, A I R 1932 Oudh 137

Where the subdivisional officer directed an enquiry by a Kamnjo of the circle into the matter of the complaint by virtue of s 202 (1) of Cr Pro Code report was admissible

the actual state
for that purpose
being an officer
comes under section 35 of the Evidence Act, and is admissible without formal proof Mohan Singh v Emperor, L R C A 49 Cr =55 Ind. 617=26 Cr L J 551=A I R 1925 All 413 The contents of the report may be used as a corroborative piece of evidence to show that the implication of the accused in the offence is not an after thought. It cannot certainly be used as a substantive piece of evidence Mohan Singh v Emperor, supra

An Inam Register embodies the conclusions of the Inam Commissioner on S. 35

3 Ind Cas 616 = 48 M L J

Protap Chandra Deo v Jayadish Chandra, A. I R 1925 Cal 116. Entries in the Siyohs are made by the Pattars in the ordinary course of business and are

4 M L J 112 = 72 Ind Cas 211. Extracts from Revenue Registers Nos 1 and

Surendra Nath, (1919) Pat 465 = 53 Ind Cas 20

A recital in a public record as to a statement made by a public servant with reference to a particular statement of the grant by the Government may be admitted, under section 35 of the Evidence Act as proving that the public servant made the statement that he is to have made, if the fact that he made such a statement is a relevant fact. Sanharacharya v Manali Saravana Mudaliar, 31 Ind C 876

Revenue Records are not evidence of title for they are kept for fiscal purposes and it is not part of the duty of the Revenue Officer to record title. But

under the Land Acquisition Act Secretary v Satish, 58 C 828 = 35 C W Bh 173 P C

Though survey entries in survey records may not be sufficient evidence to prove that certain land is poramboke they are good evidence where the only question is as to the extent of poramboke land Kalayal v Secretary of State, 2 L W 413 = 29 Ind Cas 154

Officer that the name of this or that person was entered as the occupant of certain lands could be admissible if relevant, but it would not be admissible

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT.

S. 36.

36.

Relevancy of statements in maps, charts and plans.

maps, charts or plans, are themselves relevant facts

Principle This section offers charts generally offered for authority of Government published maps or charts generally offered for public sale, or in maps or plans under the authority of Government, matters usually represented or stated in are in favour of any inaccuracy being challenged and exposed" Field Et 10 (7th Ed) The person or persons who prepared the map in question, being unavailable, both the principle of Necessity and the principle of the Guarantee of Trustworthiness are satisfied. Hence ment surveyor rized to do; an admissible Wigmore § 1665

Scope of the section

charts offered for public sale and entry, etc., and as regards the section refers not helds White's Stat, also boundaries of villages and (in Khassas)

B D 406, 14 Cox C C 436, 6 App Cas 229, 14 Cox C C 546 Lnd rule excluding declarations admissible in Engla Car & P 481, Bridge L R 5 Ch D 709 map is prepared, must be an authority given by statute Gahyo Jagat Pal, 11 C W N 230=9 C L J. 415 But there must be judicial quasi-judicial duty to enquire by a public officer Sturla v Freca, 5 App 623, Irish Society v Derry, 12 C & F 64.

Survey

but as if
-Tet
10 x 12

Evans v Taylor, 7 A & A 617; Wigmore § 1665 These maps were also because they were findings by a

36. expressly consented to the delineation or admitted the correctness of such map; they have no binding effect. Kristomon v Secretary of State, 3 C W N 33. That map is inadmissible as evidence.

18. 110 But a sufficient to prove
 v. Gobind, 9 C.
 Watson & Co, 27
 sought to be set
 an Amin's report.
 v. Gusseshur, 5 W. R. 34 If there has been a Government survey, the survey map must be taken as evidence. R. 12 Choudhazim v. Gadharee, 20 W. R. 11
 25 W. R. 153; Guddadhur v. Tar

7. Falrassa, 15 Ind Cas. 159.

Thakbust man " sketches, in magnetic he made from ■ Dhusan Bane thak author to title or pos v. Secretary of State of C " legitimately be drawn from thak man Ticeन्द्र La and is in possession

the remainder pays
value of such a map is undiscoverable from a mere inspection nor their agents have by their signatures, admitted the correctness of the Joylara v. Mohomed

in the thakbust map, prepared the revenue map by accurate observations made by expert surveyors with scientific instruments. Keshabjee v Sanku Khoson 20 Ind Crs. 1027 = A I R. 1926 P 385. As the object of a thakbust survey and map is to ascertain and delineate the boundaries of the estates borne on the Revenue roll of the District, the entry in a thak map that certain lands formed part of an estate become a relevant fact under this section and such entries are evidence on which a Court may act. Abdul Hamid v Airon Chaudhary, 71 W N 849.

Entries in a : Court of fact to hold that disputed at the time of the Permanent Settlement at the boundary Ramnandan v.
that the state
survey maps existed at the time of the State v. Ward, 31-C L J. 111 A time in connection with the measurement is a rough register, statements entered in affected thereby had notice

23 C. 552.

In case of dispute between Thak and revenue survey map which was carefully and officers and the thakbust map do not agree, pillars, put down on the ground existence; and they correspond with the field book and the materials ish sufficient data The revenue signature of the revenue surveyor on the thak map does not mean that if the thak map is reduced to the same scale as the revenue survey map, then the two boundaries will necessarily agree but merely that the surveyor has satisfied himself that the boundary accepted and intended by the demarcation staff has been correctly picked up on the ground.

3 Pat 85
A I R Ranjan, 4
an v Ranjas, Case 1027-
jah Mahendra rule that a

the thak and the survey clearly agrees with the
There is no general or allow either the one or the other, the Court may, if it considers the thak map more reliable, follow that in preference to the survey map Abad Hossen v Doucurry Pal, 11
C. W. N 629

held that a topographical survey map of 1869 in which the boundary line between the two perqannahs was given, was admissible in evidence under section 36 of the Evidence Act When perqannah boundaries are found entered in such

36 valuable evidence conclusive and contrary, they made. In cases of to possession is boundary line on absence of better evidence, the lower Appellate Court erred in law in not accepting a Topographical survey map as evidence of possession at the time the map was made. Gajhoo Damor v. Kotwar Jagatpal, 11 C. W. N. 239-9 C. L. J. 415.

45 M. L. J. 444-50 C. 446-50 I. A. 121-(1923) M. W. N. 511 The map is not the settlement map and the entry is in a different notation and therefore the map, nor is it an independent piece of evidence. Laharam v. Gurnukh Rao, 99 Ind. Cas. 628-A I R 1927 204 Maps prepared under the Calcutta Survey Act have great evidentiary value as regards question of title. Debendra v. Surendra, 31 C. W. N. 419-102 Ind. Cas. 370-45 C. L. J. 474-A I R 1927 Cal 345 A site plan prepared for

Warden of the Cinque Part was excluded and this decision was reversed on appeal in Mercer v. Denn, (1905) 2 Ch. 538, 555 A map prepared by a Commissioner entrusted with local inspection is only evidence in the case in which he was entrusted with such inspection. Dinabandhu v. Anisatara, 12 C. L. R. 50

Under sections 36 and 83 a map prepared by a Deputy Collector particularly for the settlement of land forming the settled bed of a river is not admissible. Kanto Prosad v. Jagat Chandra, 23 C. 335 A map prepared for one purpose is not relevant for another. Leonath Mozumdar v. Durga Tarai, 14 C. 3 maps and plans were prepared by the Government for a private purpose, such maps and plans are relevant facts under section 36 of the Evidence Act. Rahimmatulla v. Secretary of State, 112 P. W. N. 1012 112 P. W. N. 1919-18 Ind. Cas. 1012

Though a Rennell Survey is valuable evidence on not conclusive of its non-N. 1113; see also Secretary of State v. Haradas Acharya v. The Secretary of State, 26 C. L. J. 590 A map prepared by a kamungo, is not relevant under this section. Tarai Sarfar v. Fakrani, 132 Ind. Cas. 150 maps and chittas are given. Maps and plans prepared under this section. Rahim Cas 799.

37. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any fact of a public nature, any statement of it, made in a recital contained in any Act of Parliament, or in any Act of the Governor General of India in Council, or of "any other legislative authority in British India constituted for the time being under the Indian Councils Act, 1861, the Indian Councils Acts, 1861 and 1892, or the Indian Councils Acts, 1861 to 1909,"* or in a notification of the Government appearing in the Gazette of India, or in the Gazette of any Local Government, or in any printed paper purporting to be the London Gazette or the Government Gazette of any colony or possession of the Queen, is a relevant fact.†

Relevancy of statement as to fact of publication contained in certain Acts or notifications.

tence of any fact of a public nature, any statement of it, made in a recital contained in any Act of Parliament, or in any Act of the Governor General of India in Council, or of "any other legislative authority in British India constituted for the time being under the Indian Councils Act, 1861, the Indian Councils Acts, 1861 and 1892, or the Indian Councils Acts, 1861 to 1909,"* or in a notification of the Government appearing in the Gazette of India, or in the Gazette of any Local Government, or in any printed paper purporting to be the London Gazette or the Government Gazette of any colony or possession of the Queen, is a relevant fact.†

Legislative recitals—Principle The general grounds of reception are (1) sometimes advanced (vide R v. Sutton, 1 M & S 532, 549)—cannot otherwise suffice to give it any weight as evidence in controversy) But, next, it is clear the authority to inform itself was in fact the distinction of a statement in the recit

* Substituted by Act X of 1914, Sch 1

† The last paragraph added by s 2 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1899 (5 of 1899), was repealed by the Schedule II of Act X of 1914 follows: "Any idia in Council,

 reinafter to be pas
 l such Courts an cited" This has been incorporated in this section.

though
 nclusive
 ere ly m ot as determinations of controverted be made evidentially conclusive 1352; see also Harrat v. Wise, 9 II
 C. 712; R v Greene, II A. & E 518; R v Franklin, 17 How St Tr 636;
th. Gen v. Bradlaugh, 14 Q B D 667 So a legislative declaration of fact at are material only as the ground for enacting a rule of law—for instance, int the use in public one may not be held conclusive by the Courts; but a -claration by a Legislature concerning public conditions that by necessity and ock v Heigh, 256 U se, the recital may
 W ignore § 1352

principle admissible The executive cannot be supposed to need express authority Canada).

Government Gazette The Government Gazette is admissible and suffi ent evidence of such acts of the executive or of the Government, as are usually unations and the 8 Price 89 For
 the publisher to nature proof of the publication under due authority Goodere Lx 307 The Government Gazette is also evidence of various Acts of state at common law

R. v. Holt, 5 T R 436, A G v Thealstone, 8 Price, 89, Faylor § 1662; Php.

- S. 38 Ev. 4th Ed. 711. The appointment of an officer may be proved by the government Gazette. R. v. Gardner, 2 Mod. & R. 363, where the division of a parish. The Gov of sale, and a printed paper in the Gazette, and issued from t were admitted in evidence to Jatindra v Brajo, W. R. (8864) 5 conclusive even where such knowledge is presumed from the publication of fact in the Government Gazette Harriet v. Wise, 9 B. & C. 712.
- Gazette of India Previous to 1863, the Government of India had an exclusive organ of its own; its notifications, orders, etc., being published in the of the Local Gazettes of the Local Governments as was necessary. In 1863, as the Gazette of the Government of India was passed to give to publications its publication in any other Gazette in the publication was prescribed by the law then in force. Vide s. 1 of Act XXXI of 1863; Field's Ev 7th Ed 159 document constantly used and referred to, are to be assumed genuine. principles, however, are in fact usually involved, first, the admissibility of a document proved to be printed by official authority, as hearsay evidence of the contents of the original and secondly the presumption of genuineness of a particular document.

proof of its being bought of the Gazette printer, or where it came from. Ev. 4th Ed. 711. § 2151 Ev. 4th Ed. 711. The Evidence Act enacts: "The Court shall presume known or observed by all and in which persons in general have well as which is done by an officer of the Government, executive, legislative or judicial.

38. When the Court has to form an opinion as to a law of any country, any statement of such law contained in a book purporting to be printed or published under the authority of the Government of such country and to contain any such law, and any report of a ruling of the Courts of such country contained in a book purporting to be a report of such rulings, is relevant.

Principle. There is no reason why an officer may not be authorized to give printed copies as well as to give written copies; nor has there been any doubt that such authorized copies are admissible. Yet it cannot be said that such an

had their source, not so much in a doubt of any of these principles, as in the

be copy rather than the authority to furnish it that the difficulties have arisen, Wigmore § 1631. "Not that the printed Statutes are perfect and authentic copies of records themselves, but every person is supposed to know the law, and therefore the printed Statutes are allowed to be evidence because they are the prints of what is supposed to be lodged in every man's mind already. Butler J. Trials at Nisi Prius, 225. The reason of their reception is thus stated by Duncan J. publication of mistake authentic danger Statute King's for by t affords to all parties, and en the States. The rule, too, nger of abuse, and error or rry, 28 N H provides that be printed law authorized reports of foreign countries would be admissible to show the reports of the domestic Government as well ld not be admissible. Taking every thing seems, to extend the meaning of the section of India, Great Britain and other foreign countries.

Mich 196

38.

by an expert witness (Fildes v.
 copy? It is usually said that that the state of Statute, but a

1 rarely prevailed, except that Statute already proven by copy Corp 161, 174; Pictou's Trial
 178, Alvan v. Furnival, 1 C. M. & R. 291; Millore v. Heinrich, 4 Camp 1; Baron de Bode's Case, 8 Q. B. 250; Cocks v. Parlay, 2 C. & K. 270; Nelson
 Bridfort, 8 Beav. 539; Sussex Peerage Case, 11 Cl. & F. 115; Bremer v. Freeman 10 Moore P. C. 362, Green's Ev § 488. The particular question is whether evidence of a foreign "written law" should be presented in the shape of a or merely by recollection testimony of one qualified to know it. Wigmore § 12 In Baron de Bode's Case, 8 Q. B. 250, Patterson J. said: "I quite agree that witness conversant with the law of a foreign country may be asked what in opinion the law of that country is. But I cannot help thinking that as as it appears that

1
 I may we rule should not be the same in the case of a foreign writ law. I think the rule would be just the same if the question related to French Code as existing at this moment. If a witness were asked what the now is with respect to a bill of exchange in France, and were immediately examined as to whether that law was not in writing, and answered that it I think a copy of the law must be produced." So also Justice Story
 "Generally speaking authenticated copies of the written laws, or other instruments of a foreign Government not to be presumed th authenticated, which justice in foreign coun foreign Government
 on Conflict of Laws § 640.

According to this section evidence of foreign statute law can be given the authorised copy of the Statute of the foreign government. But section of the Act says that it can be proved as well by the opinions of persons skilled in such law. Now the proving a foreign statute, or different circumstances. The
 "But the answer to this is clear purely and simply directed to the contents of a specific Statute, the proof be by copy of its terms. But in the usual case this is not the que inquiry is as to the state of law at the present time or at a given time past inquiry

ter accuracy, would so other material elements
 If in Baron de Bode's Case
 270, note notes under s 35. But in some cases a copy was required.
 Harford v. Morris, 2 Hagg Cons 430; Boendlin v. Schuetler, 3 Esq v Levy, 3 Camp. 168; Miller v. Heinrich, 1 Camp 135; Alves v. Johnson, 1 T. L.

The books are produced, but the witness, describes them as authoritative Proof. of the law itself, in a case of foreign law, could not be taken from the book of the law, but from witness who described the law. If the witness says, 'I know the law and this book truly states the law,' then you have the authority of the witness

Majesty's Dominions to ascertain the law of that part. Phip Ev 4th Ed. 359; Lord v Colman, 1 D & S 21; Logan v Princess of Coorg, 30 Beav, 632=1 Jour. O. S 109. So also by Stat 21 & 25 Vict Ch 11, a similar case may be stated for the opinion of a Court in any foreign state with which His Majesty may have entered into a convention for ascertainment of such law. Phip Ev. 4th Ed 359 An unauthorized translation of the Code Napoleon is not a work to which reference can be made under this section. Christian v. Delanney, 26 C 931=3 C W. N. 611 Under this section the Ceylon Insolvency Ordinances might be looked at to decide the question of the defendant's liability. Denanayagam v. Muthu Kumar Suamy, 14 Ind Cas 560 admits authorized as well as unauthorized Law Reports when the latter is recognized or shall be reported by always been done and ought to be done. A judgment is none the less an authority because it has not been reported, otherwise the question of whether or not a judgment could or could not be regarded, would depend upon the mere whim of the Reporter. I therefore respectfully dissent from the view on this point expressed in the case reported in 4 C W N 732. Brett and Banerjee JJ. concurred with him; see also Trustees, P. D. v. Venkata Chalam, 92 Ind. Cas.

S. 39. 710 An unauthorised report of a High Court case is entitled to respect. L J 153-A I. R 1925 Nag 414 Unauthorized reports are on the footing as an unreported case 24 O. C. 319.

HOW MUCH OF A STATEMENT IS TO BE PROVED

39. When any statement of which evidence is given forms

What evidence is to be given when statement, forms part of a conversation, document book or series of letters or papers part of a longer statement, or of a conversation or part of an isolated document, or contained in a document which forms part of a book, or of a connected series of letters or papers, evidence shall be given of so much and no more of the statement, conversation, document, book or series of letters or papers as the Court considers necessary in that particular case to the full understanding of the nature and effect of the statement, and of the circumstances under which it was made

Principle

ing of an utterance word in another part of a statement is modified by a prior or subsequent clause; one sentence qualifies another; and one paragraph may form only a part of the whole exposition. We must compare the whole, not because we desire the remainder for its own sake, but because without it we cannot be sure that we have the true sense and effect of the statement. If parts of a statement are taken out of context, they may be misunderstood.

ent or subsequent words or the thing produced, and give person making the statement; for thus alone can the whole of what the

How St Tr 257 In Algernon Sidney's arguing passages piecemeal said "My lord, you will make all the penmen of Scotland say David of saying, there is no God." L C J the sen.

angelists of saying, "that they were drunk." It is part of it that explains a trifled with a little. It is a trifled with a little. It is a trifled with a little.

in heart, There is no God. Now here you can say there is any part that is in the admission of an opponent and to inconsistent statements of a witness used in impeachment. Where a series of letters in a correspondence, or of entries in an account-book are involved, it is sometimes difficult to draw the line between those which are in effect part of the same statement and those which are not (Call v. Howard, 3 Stark. 6; Sturge v. Buchanan, 10 A & E 59; Roe v. Day, 7 C & P. 705). But it seems that so far as the letter or oral statement put in as an admission was written or made in reply, or contains within it a reference to a

under section 33 Prince v. Samo, 7 A & E 627

Abbot C J in the Queen's Case, 3 B & H 297, observed. "The conversations of a party to the suit, relative to the subject matter of the suit, are in themselves evidence against him in the suit, and if a counsel chooses to ask a witness as to anything which might have been said by an adverse party, the counsel for that party has a right to lay before the Court the whole which was said by his client in the same conversation—not only so much as may explain or qualify the matter introduced by the previous examination, but even matter not properly connected with the part introduced upon the previous examination, provided only that it relates to the subject-matter of the suit because it would not be just to take part of a conversation as evidence against a party without giving to the party what he said on the same subject, or the whole of it."
Denman L C J E 627

"We cannot assent to it. We will merely observe that it was not introduced as an answer to any question proposed by the House of Lords, and may therefore be strictly regarded as extra judicial, that it was not necessary as a reason for the answer to the question that was proposed, that it was not in terms adopted by Lord Eldon or any of the other Judges who concurred, that it was expressly denied by Lords Redesdale and Wynford, and that it does not rest on any previous authority." The Indian Legislature has wisely left to the discretion is concerned, they are still governed by the provisions of section 27 which must be construed as favourably to the accused as possible for it is a section which makes an exception, namely sections 25, 26 and 27. Sakhan v. Emperor A I R 1929 Lah 344. Because a document is admissible.

first, whether the party

other parts, of the conversation, document, whose statement it is, may afterwards, by remainder, or other parts, or other statements

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT.

S. 40.

in Bankruptcy Such judgments her parties or strangers Such Judgments in personam are all bind only persons not so affected

Co Lit 271

donor or do

ancestor and executor, intestate or administrator, tenant and (3) In law (or representation) as testator and successive incumbents The parties, viz, that a party of manner as the original party of their legal effect, as distin,

(Cockle Cas 14)

The distinction between judgments in rem and judgments in personam was thus laid down by Blackburn J in Casrique v. Imrie, L R 4 H L pp 47-120

Some points are clear Where a tribunal, no matter whether in En or a foreign country has to judgment

country

rights of ti

exercise of that jurisdiction direct that the thing, and not merely the interest of any particular party in it, be sold or transferred, the case is very different Whatever it settles as to the right or title, or whatever disposition it makes of the property by sale

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

val

publicity attending such judgments; secondly, on account of the solemn

Interest reipublicæ ut sit finis litium (It concerns the state that there should be an end to all law suits) Hence the maxim, transet in rem judicatum The gment and also principle is that solemn character, must be presumed to be faithfully recorded), but that it between the Ev 10th

up Ev.
Allyn,
1st 361;

relevancy of 74) F B But
the judgment

partes, except where the judgment is clearly resjudicata. A judgment other than a judgment referred to in ss 40 to 42 may be admissible to prove that a right was asserted or denied under s 13 of the Evidence Act or to explain or introduce facts in issues or to explain the history of the case Purnima v Nand, 12 Pat L. T. 582—A I R 1932 Pat 105 The law of evidence does not make a one suit

t Tulsi
applies
should not do so because that matter has been decided before (Lakshman v. Ramdas, A I R 1929 Cal 374 (F B))

Judgment, meaning of The word judgment in sections 40—44 means any final judgment, order or decree of any Court Step. Dig Et art 32

Scope of the section This section deals with judgment in personam and is v Bapu Ashor, 10 B 439, anj v Dipa, 3 B p 3). it is plain

40. 2 of Act VIII of 1859 was to be construed as including a material issue, and we think that, similarly, the terms 'taking cognizance of a suit' may be construed as including a material issue in the suit between the same parties; in other words, that section 40 was intended to include cases in which the general law relating to res judicata inter partes as then understood applied. This section provides that the existence of a judgment, decree, or order is a relevant fact, if by law it has the effect of preventing any Court from taking cognizance of a suit or of holding a trial. Per Mitter J in Gugu Lal v. Fateh Lal, 6 C 171 (176). In the same case (Garrh C I at p 170) said "It is true that s 40, might have been shown to the suit

Khoti Act, conclusive and final evidence of the liability thereby, and the Civil Court cannot look behind the entry. And, under the circumstances mentioned above, the evidence of a decision otherwise relevant under s 40 of the Act, is not relevant on a date of the survey entry that the

the record is the entry Ram

Balbin, 21 B 235, Gopal v. Dasarathi, 21 B 244; Gopal v. Mogeswar, Antay v. Madhab, 21 B 480. Where a subsisting judgment, order or decree relevant under this section is set in by one party as a bar to the claim of the Court judicata or otherwise under some other rule. It is a question of fact whether the plea of res judicata is not a plea as against the plea of res judicata is not a plea as to a point in issue. Udamauthal v. Parameswara, 85 Ind Cas 460 = A I R 1925 Mad 1019

Principle The doctrine of estoppel is a fundamental doctrine of all Courts that there must be an end of litigation. Re May, (1885) 23 Ch D 516 (C 4). Judgments being public transaction of a solemn nature are presumed to be faithfully recorded. Every judgment is therefore, conclusive evidence for or against all persons of its own existence, date and legal effect as distinguished from the accuracy of the decision rendered. Philp Ev 7th Ed. 392.

Foreign Judgment A party who has submitted to the jurisdiction of a foreign Court is bound by its judgment, when such judgment is within jurisdiction and does not offend the principles of natural justice. Irregularity which do not affect the jurisdiction of the Court do not vitiate such judgment

... of the foreign Court, render the ...
 ... adugul ...
 ... amou ...
 ... Copm ...
 ... ection ...
 ... shall be conclusive as to any matter ...
 ... es
 under whom they or any of them :
 (a) where it has not been pronounced : b) where it has not been given on the merits of the case; (c) where it appears on incorrect view of international India in cases in which such law which the judgment was obtained are opposed to natural justice, (e) where it has been obtained by fraud; (f) where it sustains a claim founded on a breach of any law in force in British India."

So a foreign judgment operates as res judicata except in the six cases specified in section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908 Bababhai v Narharbhai, 13 B 224 "Where a Court of competent jurisdiction has adjudicated a certain sum to be due from one person to another, a legal obligation arises to pay that sum on which an action of debt to enforce the judgment may be maintained. It is in this way that the judgments of foreign and colonial Courts are supported and enforced." Per Parke B in Williams v Jones, 13 M & W. 633, Russel v Smith, 9 M & W 819, Goddard v Gray, L R 6 Q B 139

So where the subject matter is a res so situated as to be within the lawful control of the state under the authority of which a Court sits and that authority has conferred on the Court jurisdiction to decide as to the disposition of the thing and the Court has acted within that jurisdiction, that decision is conclusive, they are final and unalterable by the Court pronouncing them Duchess of Kingston's Case, 2 Sm L C 731, Ricardo v Garcias, 12 Cl. & F 308; Nonvion v. Freeman, 15 App Cas 1

Previous Judgment to bar a second suit A judgment which is not a judgment in rem, is not admissible in evidence against those who are neither parties to it nor derive title through such parties, as proof of the facts determined therein. Kesho Prasad v Kistanath, A I R 1926 Pat 577-97 Ind Cas 282 Under section 40, the existence of a decree is a relevant fact when the question is whether in or to hold the

would also conclude the trial of the question as to what the rate of rent at the date of that suit was if the decree showed that that question was heard and finally decided in that suit Ibid "It is not competent for the Court, in the case of the same question arising between the same parties, to review a previous decision. If the decision was wrong it ought to have been appealed against." Per Lord Macnaghten in Badar Bee v Habin American, (1909) A C at p 623, see also Huntley v Gaskell, (1905) 2 Ch 656; Mangma v Wright, (1909) 1 K B, 958, Humphries v Humphries, (1910) 1 K B 796

Res judicata by general principles of law Where a matter has been

S. 40. 2 of Act VIII of 1859 was to be construed as including a material issue, and we think that, similarly, the terms 'taking cognizance of a suit' may be construed as including a material issue in the suit between the same parties; in other words, that section 40 was intended to include cases in which the general law relating to res judicata inter partes as then understood applied. This section provides that the existence of a judgment, decree, or order is a relevant fact, if by law it has the effect of preventing any Court from taking cognizance of a suit or of holding a trial. Per Mitter J in Guppi Lal v. Panch Lal, 6 C 11 (176). In the same case Garrh (J) at p 170 said "It is true that s 40, m. 1 have been VIII of Dayee v. was in whether civil or criminal, from taking cognizance of a suit or trying any particular issue. The words 'holding a trial' are amply large enough to admit of this construction, and it is not because in some other Act the words 'holding a trial' may have been construed to refer to criminal trials only, and we ought to confine their meaning in the same way in s 40 of the Evidence Act." See also the judgment of Mitter J in page 176. A party is precluded from contending the contrary of any precise point which, having been once distinctly put in issue, Ex parte Official Receiver, (1896) 1 Q. B. 100. It and second actions are different, the directly (not collaterally or incidentally) in a second action between the same parties. Prietman v Thomas, 9 P. D 210 C A; Halsbury Vol XIII p 83. An entry in a record prepared under s 108 of the Bombay Revenue Code, by the Survey shots have never received the conclusive effect of the entry have been shown to the record is the entry Ram

Balbir, 21 B 235, Gopal v. Laxman, 21 B 480. Where a subsisting judgment, order or relevant under this section is set up by one party as a bar to the claim of the other, the latter can show that the judgment, order etc., was delivered by a Court without jurisdiction or was obtained by fraud or collusion, and it is not necessary

Bansi Lal v. Dey, admissible judgments own as plea of res section has nothing to judgments because a plea of res judicata is not a plea as a matter of evidence, but only a plea of law, barring the action on a plea of res judicata is distinguished from the rules of evidence.

also Sita contain to a pair

460 = A I R 1925 Mad 1019

Principle The doctrine of estoppel is a fundamental doctrine of all Courts that there must be an end of litigation. Re May, (1885) 28 Ch D 516 (C.A.). Judgments being public transaction of a solemn nature are presumed to be therefore, conclusive evidence for or against, date and legal effect as distinguished Philp Ev 7th Ed 392.

Foreign Judgment A party who has submitted to the jurisdiction of a foreign Court is bound by its judgment, when such judgment is within jurisdiction and does not offend the principles of natural justice. Irregularities which do not affect the jurisdiction of the Court do not vitiate such judgment.

only when it is so pleaded, or there is an opportunity of so pleading it. Otherwise it is only a relevant fact from which the Court may draw a conclusion in favour of the person who tenders it as evidence. Vooght v. Wmch, 11 B & Ald 662.

But "the plea of res judicata as a bar to an action belongs to the province of adjective law, ad litem ordinatio em; but difference of opinion prevails among jurists as to whether the rule belongs to the domain of procedure or constitutes a rule of the law of evidence as furnishing a ground of estoppel. In England, and I may say also in America, the rule is usually dealt with as belonging to the law of . . .

judicata pro

alling bejo procedure pro
n the result
lenying the ac
he similarity
he ratio upon distinguishable
also Raicharan

Sections
previous judg
n a subsequent

No Court

substantially

suit between the same parties, or between the parties under whom they or any of them claim, litigating under the same title, in a Court competent to try such subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised, and has been heard and finally decided by such Court

Explanation I The expression "former suit" shall denote a suit which has been decided prior to the suit in question whether or not it was instituted prior thereto

Explanation II For the purposes of this section, the competence of a Court shall be determined irrespective of any provisions as to a right of appeal from the decision of such Court

Explanation III The matter above referred to must in the former suit have been alleged by one party and either denied or admitted, expressly or impliedly, by the other have been made med to have been granted by the decree, shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to have been refused

Explanation VI Where persons litigate bonafide in respect of a public cause . . . a suit in respect of such cause

A judgment in per
record and their privies

S. 40. cannot answer the same question again in another action, although, perhaps, there must be an end of litigation, otherwise there would be no security for any person."

Stay of the matter

instituted su

or any of

in the same

relief claim

continued by the Governor-General in Council and having like jurisdiction, as before a suit in a foreign Court does not preclude a suit founded on the same cause of action. Vide section 10 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908; see also Micoy v Kasouji, 1 C L R 282, Balkissen v Krishan Lal, 11 A 148, Ramaswami v Raghunath, 20 M 418, Venkappa v Manjuralath, 16 M L J 526; Bissessar v

Din Shau v Galstoun 29 Bom L R 382-102 Ind Cas 229-A 1 A J 201 Bom 245; see also Kuberan v Korman Nair, 98 Ind Cas 421-48 M L J 201-A must shall include the whole

of act

bring the suit in

sue in respect of,

not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted or reserving of action person entitled

may sue for the Court, i

so omitted

for its performance and successive claims arising under the same Order II, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code shall be deemed respectively to constitute but one cause of action

Previous Acquittals or Convictions Section 403 of the Criminal Procedure Code 1908 follows -- A person who against him might have been made under section 236, or for which he has been convicted under section 237

A person acquitted or convicted of any offence constituted by any acts may, notwithstanding such acquittal or conviction be subsequently charged with, and tried for, any other offence constituted by the same acts which he may have committed, if the Court by which he was first tried was not competent to try the offence with which he is subsequently charged

Explanation The dismissal of a complaint, the stopping of proceedings under section 249, the discharge of the accused, or any entry made upon a charge under section 273, is not an acquittal for the purposes of this section

Judgments how proved If a party offering a record does so in support of a plea of res judicata, or to show that he has acquired or his adversary has lost some title or right either by the judgment alone or by it and proceedings taken for its enforcement, the whole record so far as it concerns the formal stages, must be either produced or exemplified, and if exemplified, the exemplification must show on its face that the record is complete and is regular nor can the record be pitched with parol. Harrison on Evidence § 824 Before any document, whether an original or a copy, can be received in evidence of a judicial proceeding, it must, in general appear that the record or entry of such proceeding has been finally completed. Taylor 10th Ed § 157C

Judgments not relevant under ss 40 to 43 R was charged with the offence of defamation and convicted. The complainant then sued R in damages

41 A final judgment, order or decree of a competent Court, in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction, which confers upon or takes away from any person any legal character, or which declares any person to be entitled to any such character, or to be entitled to any specific thing, not as against any specified person but absolutely, is relevant when the existence of any such legal character, or the title of any such person to any such thing, is relevant

Relevancy of certain judgments in probate, etc., jurisdiction

Such judgment, order or decree is conclusive proof—that any legal character which it confers accrued at the time when such judgment, order or decree came into operation, that any legal character, to which it declares any such person to be entitled, accrued to that person at the time when such judgment, * [order or decree] declares it to have accrued to that person, that any legal character which it takes away from any such person ceased at the time from which such judgment, * [order or decree] declared that it had ceased or should cease, and that anything to which it declares any person to be so entitled was the property of that person at the time from which such judgment, * [order or decree] declares that it had been or should be his property.

* These words in s 41 wherever they occur were inserted by the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act (18 of 1892) s 3

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT.

...every one who can be affected by the decision may protect his interests by becoming a party to the proceedings. In addition to which it is to be remembered that a decision in rem not merely declares the status of the person or thing, but ipso facto renders it such as it is declared, thus a decree of divorce not only annuls the marriage, but renders the wife feme sole, and adjudication in bankruptcy not only declares, but constitutes, the debtor a bankrupt, a sentence in prize Court not merely declares the vessel prize, but vests in the captor Phipson Ex 7th Ed 397; cited with approval in Venkataramananayya, A I. R 1931 V 7.

tion pronou

the status So a judgment in rem may be defined as the judgment of a Court of competent jurisdiction determining the status of a person or thing, or the disposition of a thing (as distinct from the particular interest in it of a party to the litigation) (Castrique v Inrit, L R 4 H L 414, 423) Apart from the application of the term to persons it must affect the res in the way of condemnation, forfeiture, declaration of status or title, or order for sale or transfer Halsbury, Vol XIII, p 327.

Scope of the section Th...

the purposes for which the judgment of a competent Court operates as conclusive against the world, and so far as such purpose relates to the status or what is referred to as legal character of a person, it specifies three purposes only: it is conclusive against all the world as to that status, whereas in a judgment in

B. 455—65 L. J. Q. B. 616—75 L. T. 95.

is thus supposed to be a party. Nort. Ev. 214; Cunningham Ev. 184. The four
J. C. A.—87

S. 41. classes of judgments, etc. which alone are to be conclusive, affect it will be observed, the status of a person.

when the judgment declares it did or should where the vesting is in futuro. See Ev. 215. Radhakessun v. Mt. Gangabai, 22 S. L. R. 105-1923 Sind. L. J. Judgments declaratory of title.

therefore a judgment is conclusive. See 1923 A. 393.

54 M. 727-A. I. R. 1931 Mad. 474.

Probate Jurisdiction. The Courts in India exercise the Probate jurisdiction under Act XXXIX of 1925.

in probate is granted to persons as such may be. I think that the section has been frequently applied to cases of persons after the Hindu Wills Act came into force shows this. The only legal character when the Probate Court declares a person to be entitled to is that of executor. It confers the character of administrator. It does not declare it. So the section would be meaningless unless "legal character" included the office of an executor. I do not think that the circumstance that in the particular case the powers of the executor may be limited, makes any difference in the construction of the section."

is only granted after satisfactory evidence as to the testator's capacity on the part of the testator. See Jones v. Jones, 1923 A. 393.

in any Co
v. Duke of
v. Conche
Griffiths v.
Harris, 11

to probate must be taken to have been conclusively determined and therefore probate is conclusive proof of the due execution of the Will which is the foundation of the title of the executor. Chandreshwar v. Bisheshwar, A. I. R. 1927

R. v. also Ratabundya v. Yanamandya, 79 1 C 360; Mayho v. Williams, 2
N. : Anjanabai v. Ram Das, 4 C. W.
N. clxxvi; Chuna Sami v. Hariharabarda, 16 M 380; Jagan Nath v. Rangit, 25
C. 354; Mt. Phekn v. Mt. Alanki, 9 Pat. 693-128 Ind. Cas. 128-A I. R. 1930
Pat. 618.

Court in such matters is conclusive. See also Field Ev 335 in a Common-law Court, either he executed the Will (Mario not then in England (Whitaker L. R. 29 Ch. D. 657), prove the title of the executor, in which 1433. But where the points were directly in issue and actually decided by the

S. 41. Court between the same parties, or persons claiming under them, the judgment in rem will be conclusive evidence of the matters decided in it. Spencer v Williams, 2 L. R. P. & D 230=40 L. J. P. & M. 45. For instance, if, in a suit for administration, the sole question be, which of the two parties is next of kin, the Probate Division, declaring that as fact, has proved himself next of kin, and as such, will be conclusive evidence of the relationship of the parties in a subsequent action between them for distribution, instituted in another Court. Barrs v Jackson, 1 Phill 582; Boulton v Taylor, 4 Bro P C 708, Dochon v Crispin, 35 L. J. P. & M 129, Thomas v Kettle, 1 Ves Sen.

execution of the Will, Harmus v Bar Dahn, Ganesh v Ramchandra, question was considered in Raman Deb v Kumud Bandhu, 14 C. 1. "The Judgement in a probate has been repeatedly held as subject to the law of limitation (in a special case) Ishan Chandra Roa, 6 C 707) A probate proceeding, therefore, while it enjoys the advantage that a decision it is clear from nandan v Sheo

by their very cause of action 21 B 563 In conclusively as testator, and does not, in other words, the judgment of a Court by which a refusal, does not necessarily operate as a judgment in rem in the same way as a judgment by declares that testator with

No doubt, such a judgment if it has not been duly executed by the testator, it has not been duly attested may character of a Will, but even if it is propounded to the court, it is not the genuine Will of the testator. The decision may be based upon entirely different grounds, which do not touch the question of the genuineness of the Will. Such a judgment cannot operate conclusively unless it embodies a final decision against the genuineness of the Will. The learned Judges of the Bombay High Court while they lay down the proposition carefully guard themselves, however, against any expression of opinion upon the question whether, if an issue had been raised upon the question of forgery of the Will and had been decided, the decision might not be conclusive. "The true rule thus formulated in the case of Schultz v Schultz, 10 Gratt, 358. When a Will has been propounded by a party interested and fairly rejected on the merits, it would defeat the policy of the law and be productive of many mischiefs, if it could be again propounded by the same party or by others who might be interested and the contest thus renewed from time to time. The sentence, therefore, against the Will must be regarded as a sentence against all claiming under it, it stands upon a footing analogous to the subject of a decision upon the facts necessary to support the decision. Freeman on Judgments, Vol I, section 312 (1). O.

ment of the matter in the same or in any other Court by in privacy with them, in other words, a refusal to admit a Will to probate is conclusive of the facts necessary to support the decision. Freeman on Judgments, Vol I, section 312 (1). O.

for probate by another person, for example, a legatee who claims an interest under the Will; if so, it would be futile to hold that an executor who has made default, cannot propound the Will again. Raman v Kumud, 11 C. W. N 924. The finding as to the execution of the Will of the Probate Court binds at any

as is contemplated in section 41 of the Evidence Act in as much as such judg

Ramoye, 5 Mys L J 107, see also Monmohun v Banga, 31 C 357=8 C W N 197.

The expression 'legal character' in section 41, Evidence Act, when it has

Matrimonial jurisdiction This section enacts that a final decree of a competent Court in the exercise of matrimonial jurisdiction which confers upon or takes away from any person any legal character not as against any specified

S. 41. (IV of 1869), does not make the proviso in section 17 applicable to the confirmation by the High Court of a decree of nullity of marriage made by a District Judge, and such a decree may therefore be set aside within six months from the pronouncing thereof :
to be applicable to a decree of nullity, the same before the six months' period has expired, cannot on that ground be treated as made by a District Judge within the meaning of section 11 and 14 of the :
sections 11 and 14 of the :
S. 41, conclusive proof L H Caston, 22 A 270 (F B) In a case decided before the passing of the

be no evidence against that the two ladies were a Charan, 7 W R 38-I whether the decision can judgment by a Court h

L R 4 H L 428) or maritime lien (Minna Craig v Charbreed, etc, 1 Q B 460). A decree for enforcement of maritime lien by a Court of Admiralty is a judgment in condemnation of property as forfeited, and also is a judgment in rem. Geyer v Aguilar, 7 T R 696, Mainway v Gakan, Ridge, L & S 1, 78.

is barred by the previous decision which is a judgment in rem in section Narayan v Hardutta Rai, 16 N L R 201. The decision of the Insolvency Court amounts to conclusive proof as to the title in respect of the specific things claimed by the applicant, not merely as against him, but absolutely, within the meaning of this section. Pitaram v Jhujhar 33 Ind Cas 798, see also Mussamat v Mathura, 40 Ind Cas 102, Bhavro v P. C. Das 17 A. L. J. 202.

even if it could be held that the decision was not a judgment inter partes and binds the creditor Ram Narain v. Durga Das
Ind. Cas. 568-55 P. R. 1912-242 P. W. R. 1912

An order of an Insolvency Court refusing to adjudicate a person insolvent on the ground that he was not a member of a firm which had been declared insolvent is not a final order which conferred upon or took away from him any legal character within the meaning of this section and hence it is not a res judicata in rem. Being a partner in a firm is not a legal character. O. J. Sanyal v. O. J. Sanyal Madras v. Off. Assignee of Rangoon, 46 M. L. J. 580=1924 Mad. 662=31 M. L. S. T. (H. C.) 90=83 Ind. Cas. 171, see also Radha Kishen v. Mt. Gangabai, A. I. R. 1928 Sind 121=22 S. L. R. 105. An order adjudicating a person an insolvent and vesting his property in the Official Receiver no doubt operates as a judgment in rem but the grounds on which the order is based has no such effect. Radha Kishen v. Mt. Gangabai, A. I. R. 1928 Sind 121=22 S. L. R. 105.

Legal Character.

The legal character and legal status of the person

"We :
"legal
to him
it were with which the law clothes him apart from the attributes which may be said to belong to normal humanity in general. Rama Krishna v. Narayana, 39 M. 80=26 Ind. Cas. 883.

ing must have been declared not as A decree declaring that A is entitled t only made against a specified person, so it is not conclusive proof of title to a debt. Venkataramanayya Pautulu, 54 M. 601=A. I. R. 1931 Mad. 441=61 M. L. J. 229 (S. B.) Similarly a right to recover a debt or a chose in action cannot be deemed to be a "specific thing".
Ibid.

f an issue as to the age of a
of the guardian for person, proceeding, is not one of conclusive
R 1910
administration
her father,
sly been made under the Guardians idow for a declaration that she was the infant son of the alleged testator, by the present petitioners who claimed to be testamentary guardians of the property appointed by the Will now propounded, and that the question of genuineness of t
proceedings under the Pro
haraborda, 16 M. 380. A ju adoption is not admissible
matters decided therein. Guru Mahadev v. Jagatray, 71 Ind. Cas. 929, Kanhya Lall v. Radha Churn, 7 W. M. 338, Yarakalamma v. Ana Kala Naramma, 2 M.
H. C. R. 276

to be testamentary guardians of the property appointed by the Will now propounded, and that the question of genuineness of t
proceedings under the Pro
haraborda, 16 M. 380. A ju adoption is not admissible
matters decided therein. Guru Mahadev v. Jagatray, 71 Ind. Cas. 929, Kanhya Lall v. Radha Churn, 7 W. M. 338, Yarakalamma v. Ana Kala Naramma, 2 M.
H. C. R. 276

uted
the d in edly
were refere

S. 42.

of the
prc
the
the

ical rties

a sentence of evidence on a questio

marriage . . . But in these cases the parties whom the

Judges, when taken apart from the reasons on which it is founded, is not entitled to much weight, it being merely a decision of a

Administration - was not in issue in the proceeding relating to Lath 1926 Rang 202; see also Oates v. King Emperer, 38 C. L. J. 163.

42. Judgments, orders or decrees other than those mentioned in section 41, are relevant if they relate to matters of a public nature relevant to the inquiry; but such judgments, orders or decrees are not conclusive proof of the truth of the facts which they state.

Illustration.

exists, but it is not conclusive proof that the right

not as res parties, provided for the C

s section judgments whether between the see also Collector v.

S.

such as the existence of custom in succession in particular communities. Such regarded as a species of reputation,—will also be received and this too, whether the parties in the second suit be those who litigated the first or be utter strangers.

when admitted, will so far vary, that they will be bound by the previous suit be strangers to the parties in the inclusive. Reed v. Jackson.

Even before the enactment this country. Doorga v.

Narendra, 6 W. R. 232; Madhab v. Thomas, 7 W. R. 210, Totaram v. Mohan, 2 Agra 120; Venkata v. Subba, 2 M. H. C. 1.

Origin of the Rule It has often been said that verdicts of juries, and judgments, decrees, and orders of Courts of competent jurisdiction, are evidence of reputation, and possibly when juries were summoned de vicinato, and were consequently assumed to be acquainted with the subject in controversy this may as were admitted, said "Reputation is case; a fortiori lays there is no exception to the

Hearsay Rule Wigmore § 1593 Because "that was when the jury was summoned de vic Per Alderson B
early part of the verdict was a c
Pre Treat Ev 90
nor a Judge's c

S. 42. pronounced in a cause litigated is also admissible, not as tending to

to be forced into evidence to the Hearsay Rule. Case 147, which was decided under the Reputation Exception, explained in notes and "Such evidence, admitted, is not in itself in any proper sense evidence of reputation." It really rests upon a higher and larger principle, specially in cases, like the present, of prescription; it comes within the category of res gestae and of declarations accompanying acts. The effect of this evidence is extremely strong to establish the same case as evidence and being of reference to the actions, the pair of decrees stronger Court has observed "Here the persons acting as Judges had no knowledge or view except what they derived in the course of that proceeding" But see Duke of Newcastle v Brantowe, 4 II & Ad 279, where Parker J said, "Though they (Justices) are not proved to be residents in the country or hundred they must from the nature and character of their offices alone, be presumed to have sufficient acquaintance with the subject to which their declarations relate". Similarly in Evans v Rees, 10 A & E 155, Denman LCJ said "The opinion of an arbitrator as to a boundary is formed not upon his own 933), and it seems to receive some support from a recent case in which it was held that old depositions are not admissible under this head of evidence if they contain testimony only as to particular facts. Mercer v. Deane, (1904) 2 Ch. 534; (1905) 2 Ch. 538, 1 Wills Ev. 234.

Cases in which judgments were held admissible where they relate to public matters. In the ^{not a} ^{verdict in an} ^{action}

A judgment in favour of a Lord of a manor on a quo warranto issue a franchise is evidence of the right even against copy holders of impropriate land.
Carnarvon, Earl of v Villiers, 10 C.B. 678. See also Attorney-General v Lord on custom, evidence which it was alleged The most satisfactory based on the custom Albar Khan, 1 A 44.

Mundul, 27 C 379 (391), Kahan Das v. Bhagirathi 6 A 361, Judicial dec. Sheonarayan, 1 A. 373; Sheoboran v. Bhaxor, 7 A 890. Judicial decisions recognising the existence of a disputed custom amongst the Jains of one place are very relevant evidence of the existence of the same custom amongst the Jains of another place, unless it is shown that the customs are different and oral evidence of the same kind is equally admissible. There is nothing to be

S. 4
 setting up of a High go of the 42 of the trustees of a es money
 gments in
 have been

decreed in favour of the trustees of the temple were relevant under s 42 of the Act as relating to matters of a public nature Ramasami v Appavu, 12 M. 9 to show that shrine Sri Ganesht v.

Keshavrao, 15 ecretary of State, 16 C 173 (183) Where daughter's son in sanctioned by custom amongst Dehasitha Smarth Brahmins, decisions in suits in which

who made it. Lanuarial v Shoochand, 85 Ind Cas 795=A I R 1923 Lah 884 When a question of status is in issue, judgment and orders between the a case, rent suits, suits for are of high evidentiary value Jumtal v Mt Hulki, A I R ough a judgment not inter partes as a fact in issue, or as a recitals in the judgment cannot Kashinath v Jagat Hishore, 20 C W. N. 643=23 C L J 583=35 Ind Cas 298; see also Ram Ranjan v Ram Narain, 23 C 533 (P C); Bhutto v Kesho Prosad, 1 C W N 265=24 of a 'public nature' within the meaning of section 42, and the judgment of the

5. 43. Faridkot Court is not therefore relevant as relating to a matter of public nature Ibid.

43. Judgments, orders or decrees, other than those mentioned in sections, 40, 41 and 42, are irrelevant, unless the existence of such judgment, order or decree is a fact in issue, or is relevant under some other provision of this Act

Illustrations.

A obtains a decree against C for damages on the ground that C made out his justification. The fact is irrelevant as between B and C

A wife
tion As b
(d) A murders A in consequence

The existence of the judgment is relevant, as showing motive for a crime
* (e) A is charged with theft and with having been previously convicted of theft. The previous conviction is relevant as a fact in issue
* (f) A is tried for the murder of B. The fact that B prosecuted A for libel and that A was convicted and sentenced is relevant under section 8 as showing the motive for the fact in issue

Principle It is well settled that a judgment in personam is not admissible in a suit between strangers or a party and a stranger except in a case where it is settled, the judgment is tendered against (R v Foulkes, 1859, 11 Q B D 1028), sometimes as hearsay (Step Art 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000)

could not make defence legitimate ground for a satisfactory reason for that the objection of res iudicata solemn acts of strangers if relevant to the issue Phil Ex 101
where the instance of judgments, orders or decrees is a fact in issue or a relevant fact under some other provisions of the Act, the judgments, orders or decrees however, there is a highly important limitation. A judgment

*This Illustration was added to s 43 by the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act, 1891 (3 of 1891) s. 5 able for proving the truth of what it asserts may be valuable as evidence for some other purpose. Its very existence may be a fact in issue, and then of course, evidence of it may be given; or it may be a fact relevant within some ence

So
imis-0, 41

or 42. So the cases referred to in this section are such, as the section itself taking this view I am doing any violence to the language of s. 43 of the Evidence Act, which, if I understood it aright, declares that judgments, orders and decrees other than those mentioned in ss. 40, 41 and 42 are of themselves irrelevant, that is in the sense that they can have any such effect or operation as

which the partition of the estate was asserted and recognised : The reason upon and cannot be so than the transaction
Jodinda v Shanulal
C W N 521 P C
but if they are not

inter partes unless there existence of such judgment is a fact in issue or is relevant under some other provisions of the Act. The existence of the judgment may be relevant but not the decision of the Judge or the opinion expressed by him. It is immaterial if the defendant on both cases is the same and the decision of the Privy Council in 22 C 533 is no authority for the general proposition that a judgment against a party can always be used against him in a subsequent suit by another person. Benodelal v Secretary of State, 34 C W 1113—A I R 1931 Cal 239. So recitals of judgments not inter partes of relevant fact are not admissible in evidence. Asa Ram v Mausha, A I R 1930 Lab 237

Existence of judgment etc is a fact in issue. If the object of the judg, even though his name appear on the back of the bill, or of his malice, or of

S. 43.

l v. Marumara, 9 East 361; Inclusion v Barr hika, 11 W. R. 339; Keramat v Gholam 9 notwithstanding the verdict is still at liberty to r § 1667 - but see l v. v. Shewer 11 4 will apply to other cases, wh or the like Pouell v M, 4 158, Griffin v Brown, 2 Pick 504. In defence was that the plaintiff had received satisfaction of his damages, it was to that the plaintiff, on traversing this plea, might put in evidence a judgment recovered from him by the assignee of the principal for the amount so received as conclusive proof that the money had

29 L J Ex 270

Watson v Little, 5 H L J 1

Irrelevant under some other provisions of this Act. Ordinarily a judgment not inter partes is in Lal, A I R 1929 Lah 137 regards the value of the estate Nageshar v Hanuman 2 A, 4

A. L. R. 10 (Kev)

In a suit

binding on

by the same

part of the land in suit was not binding on the ground of the issue ancestral, can only be treated as admissible for the purpose of showing that on former occasion the right of the alienor to alienate part of the property suit was called in question on the ground that the property was ancestral The finding of the Court in the previous suit that the property was ancestral is not relevant Partap v Mothu, 11 Lah L J. 492=96 Ind Cas 293=27 F L A 544

the fact

Harih

Where

not relevant

with trans

previous decisions in Land Acquisition cases are relevant in a suit where the market value of the land in the same neighbourhood is Madan Mohan v Secretary of State, 78 Ind Cas 557.

5 Pat. L. W. 97 = 43 Ind. Cas. 393.

One N, who was a usufructuary her right to recover profits in that sh defendant for a number of years. R dant's name continued to be recorded as the defendant and R present suit for a declaration that the , the lease in his favour having come to The defendant pleaded an arrangement

the unex
mortgage pleaded b admissible
Mahomed

Reca Satindra v.

possession was claimed or disputed, and also as evidence to show that there was such a j determine w trial should c n an action for his land by the

was accidental

of a bond on which a suit had been brought, directed the prosecution of the of the executants plaintiffs in for the offence Raja Kumari Sarma v. Kash Kalpada, 28 C. W. N. 587. But p. 618, Ghosh J said "I am not prepared to say that the decision in the civil suit would not be admissible in

, and what the land in Nath v. Mahomed Wafiz
P. C) = 6 C. W. N. 387.

- S. 44. Judgments, etc are admissible, meaning of The general principle is that the mere existence of a judgment, its date and legal consequences, are conclusively proved, as against all the world, by the production of the record, but that even though, as between the parties, the judgment must have been proved. The sively -

the pr
used in
W N 402 Judgments and decrees recognizing rights between parties to a suit or between persons whom they represent are not conclusive but are admissible in evidence under s 13.
different from those in the former suit Neamut Ali v Gooroo Das, 23 W R Gopi v Kherod, A I R 1925 Cal 194.
in evidence in order to prove that there was a certain way, does not make all the recitals in the subsequent action Abdul Latif v
Cas 667, see also Tripurana v Rokham, 43 W L J 324 (F B) = 45 W L J 583; Sarod v
Arishnanath v Jagat Rish - 1905
Kant
... contains a recital of the
... refers to a point in the
... A. I R 1925 Mad. 996 = 85 Ind Cas 996 = 27 L parties put the respective claims which in 979 (381) Chhadeh v. Syd Ali, 85 Ind Cas pleading is narrated in the judgments, the judgments furnish evidence of the allegations made by the parties on that occasion Kailash v Byoy, 72 Ind Cas 680, see also Purbatty v Purno, 9 C 586; Bhaya v Pande, 3 C L J 1 Byathamma v Arallu, 15 M 19, Thama v Kondar 15 M 378, Krishna v v Rajagopala, 18 M 73, Malcomson v O'Dae, 10 H L C 593, Loyell v Ken (1889) 14 A C. 437 Neil v Devonshire, 8 A C 135

44 Any party to a suit or other proceeding may show that fraud or collusion in any judgment, order or decree which is relevant under section 40, 41 or 42, and which has been proved by the adverse party, was delivered by a Court not competent to deliver it, or was obtained by fraud or collusion.

Principle

between parties who were really not in contest with each other." This rule has been embodied in the Indian Evidence Act. Barkumssa v. Fazl Huz, 26 A. 262 (283). So under this section the defendant is entitled to show that the decree is obtained by fraud. Ibid, see also Hara Krishna v. Ramchsh, 62 Ind. Cas. 962=6 P. L. J. 373.

ties to a suit tenders or has n 40, 41 or 42, it is open to the lays down that any party to a suit or judgment, order or decree which is relevant under s. 40, 41 or 42, and which has been proved by the adverse party, was delivered by a Court not competent to deliver it, or was obtained by fraud or collusion. Pranag Kumar v. Siva Prasad, 93 Ind. Cas. 385=A. I. II. 1926 Cal. 1=42 C. L. J. 280. This section was construed by Maclean C. J. and Banerjee J. in the case of Rajib Pondey v. Lakhari Sindh, 27 C. 11=3 C. W. N. 660 and it was held that a party to a suit can show that a decree

Boss, 30 C.
id is sought

a judgment, order or decree as barring a second suit or trial; section 41

- S. 44. case of fraud or collusion will have to be specifically alleged and substantiated by the party setting it up. Baukantha v. Mohendra, 1 C. L. J. 65. To set aside a decree on the ground of fraud, it is not sufficient to prove constructive fraud, but an actual positive fraud, a meditated and intentional contrivance to keep the parties and the Court in ignorance by that contrivance. Bisher, R. 1926 Lah. 177. Where a fraud or collusion, such fraud or collusion as is contemplated by the Evidence Act, must be raised in the defence. Ambika v. Kala Chandra, 10 C. W. N. 422 (424). Where a party seeks, under section 44 of the Evidence Act, to avoid a judgment on the ground that it was delivered by a Court not 111 Ind. Cas 762 = A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 675.

Not competent. The words "not competent" in this section refer to a Court acting without jurisdiction. Kellamma v. Kelappan, 12 M. 229 (230). "Jurisdiction may be defined to be the power of a Court to hear and determine in "jurisdiction" which has been stated to be "the power to hear and determine issues of law and fact,"

v. Dhanraj, 193. This jurisdiction is to place, value, and has exercised within pronounced by a Court without jurisdiction is void. Mohan v. Mahesh, 193. void and a nullity it is not only the duty of the Court which passed it to

Lal, 17 A. 478; Haji Musa v. Purman, Vaithinathan, 38 M. 682; Roop Naram v. Narendra v. Gopal, 17 C. L. J. 634. One must be fundamental pronounced, for the power to decide necessarily carries decide wrongly as well as rightly. It 723=31 C. L. J. 482. In Mallharjun, 5 C. W. N. 10, Lord Hobhouse said:

W. N. S.
 (347)= wrong

Moomraj, 45 C. L. J. 24.

The plea of res judicata can be satisfactorily met by showing that the judgment, in which the issues pleaded were decided, was delivered by a Court

To sustain an objection that the Madras Insolvent Court's order is a nullity conferring no title to the debtor's estate on the Official Assignee, it is obviously not sufficient to prove that the order was wrong. To hold otherwise would virtually erect into a Court of appeal from the Insolvent Court, not only this Court, but every Court in which the (and would be inconsistent with section 41 Act. What, then, is the test of whether

S. 44. Mere delay in raising it cannot itself be fatal objection when a fresh execution sought. Sheo Tahal v Binack Shulul, 1931 A L J 613-1 I R 1931 418 689, see also Panchhari v Girdharimel, 89 Ind Cas 317, Veerav Muga 33 M 271 (F B) thereof

nullity, a

made by a Court 41 and 44 of the Ind
proof that the marriage 271 (F B)

un quam co habitavit (Fraud & 1
It vitiates the most solemn proceeding, O J in the Duchess of Argyll

Case, 20 How St Tr 355 It avoids all judicial acts, ecclesiastical or temporal. Ibid, see also Shedden v Patrick, 1 Macq 535 But the difficulty is that no definition is given in the Act of the word "fraud" This section provides that any party to a suit may show that any judgment was obtained by fraud. "It is clear" says Martin C J in Bhulaji v Balwant, A I R. 1927 Bom 610 "Bom L R 1046, 'that some limitation must be put upon that section. For instance if party A, and his witnesses in a particular suit came into the box and committed deliberate perjury on material points, that is clearly fraud. On the other hand if a decree is eventually passed in favour of that party, even on the perjured evidence, it cannot be a ground to the opponent to start a new action exactly the same evidence wrongfully believed by doctrine of res judicata party might alternately

Consequently the authorities show, I think, that if the case merely in effect, a re-hearing of the previous suit on substantially the same issue then the Court will not hear the second suit. On the other hand it is clear that in a proper case the Court has jurisdiction to set aside a decree which has been obtained by fraud practised on the Court. If, for instance, the existence of certain evidence has been stoutly denied by one party and the Court has been induced to pass a decree on the basis that that evidence existed circumstances are looked at, that in that case the Court would set aside the original decree

In Nanda Kumar v. Ram Jiban, 41 C 99-100 C L J 457-23 Ind Cas 27-18 C W N 991 The jurisdiction to set aside a decree is not limited by the decree being the principal point in issue, it is necessary to show it by proof before the propriety of the prior decree can be investigated. Decrees may be (1) by consent, (2) ex parte or (3) after contest, apparent or real. And though each is liable to be attacked for fraud, the character of the fraud would vary with the circumstances of each case. One who seeks to impeach a decree passed after contest takes on himself a very heavy burden and it is not to be upset on a mere allegation of fraud. The conclusion that the decree is void in the former suit will not be upset on a mere allegation of fraud where, and in what way, it was obtained. The motion and acting in order for the purpose of actually a fraud, must be fraud which and that mere irregularity, investigation of these rights is not the kind of fraud which will authorise the Court to set aside a solemn decision which has assumed the form of a decree signed and enrolled " Per Lord Cairns L. J. in Patch v. Ward, L. R. 3 Ch 203, see also Cheo v. Johnston, 2 Sch & Lef 308

L. R. 751=37 A

In Fowler v. Lloyd, L. R. 10 Ch. 1 Baggallay and Thesiger L. JJ., the suit was d to have been sub

not question would
in the affirmative action brought out
could be set aside
in to interrogatories, of a process had
which the evidence
other wilfully and

corruptly perjured In this case, if the plaintiffs had sustained on this appeal the judgment in their favour the present defendants, in their turn, might bring a fresh action to set that judgment aside on the ground of perjury of the principal witness and subornation of perjury. as if the parties might go on after proved that a which judgment

These observations
Mohamed Go
"The principle
obtained by a fraud
from placing his case before the tribunal which was called upon to adjudicate

S. 44.

Both the defendants contended that the Will was void, and that the probate was induced by fraud. Held that the second defendant was barred by the decision of the District Court in the revocation matter from raising the question in the Court of the Subordinate Judge. Further held that as regards he does not raise these questions by his pleading, although he does so in the common cause with the second defendant in his defence. . . . As regards the second defendant, although he had a locus standi to make an application, his right is now at an end by reason of the unsuccessful result of his application for revocation. That being so, it appears to us that the first defendant has no defence to this suit.

The fact that the defendants have been in possession of the land in the village implies a decision in respect of any of the lands included in that village by a decree of Court under section 11 of Regulation III of 1872. It is open to the plaintiff to avoid the effect of such a decree. 2 A. or sub-section (1) of section 24 of the Evidence Act, 1872, is interested to bring forward in the Settlement Court, and to make to any part of such record.

the record. 19 C. L. J. 29; see also

Art. XIV of 1883 can only be used against whom an order the fraudulent nature of the proceedings, the order passed upon it in any proceeding, the strength of that order. Chumma v. Ram Das.

16 Bom. L. R. 648.

Judgment vitiated by fraud, whether the same should be set aside. Whenever a party seeks to avail himself of a former judgment, fraudulently entered, the opposite-party may show the fraud, and thus avoid the judgment. Whart. Ev. § 797. Now the question is whether fraud can be collaterally set aside, or whether it can be directly set aside.

and cannot resort to a writ of habeas corpus. Whart. Ev. §§ 797, 799. So according to Burr Jones also "domestic law"

our attention to so

other words (confining

from a provision such as the plaintiffs contend it is intended to be merely et on makes the same provision for and that it does for avoiding a Now there can be no question

Sib Saran v Rameshwar, 60 Ind Cas 640=1920 Pat 363=2 P L T 40, Kunaram v Banomali, 29 Ind Cas 838 The case of Ransilal v Ram Lal collateral proceeding." "In applying this rule it matters not whether the impeached judge

Highest Court
every Court,

tes had fraudulently taken place under in Ireland obtained by collusion between person in whose favour a charge had

S. 44. been created, and the purchaser, and where the interests of the tenant in remainder had not been probated, the Court of Chancery in Ireland on the 1st of May 1811 filed a bill filed to estate of mortgagor. Nistarini v. Nundo Lal, ubi supra, see also ibid 11. It is competent for every Court, whether superior or inferior to treat as null and void judgment which can be clearly shown to have been obtained by manifest fraud. Maung Kyaw v. Annul, 62 Ind. Cas 53=13 Bur. L. T. 198, Manchhar v. Kalidas, 19 B. 621; Krishnabhupati v. Ramamurti, 16 M. 198; Andamery v. Annunissa, 12 C 156

Compromise decree—Fraud Where a decree is alleged to have been obtained by fraud and misrepresentation it is competent to a party to bring an action under section 44 of the Evidence Act that this amount was obtained by fraud and misrepresentation, and a separate suit is not necessary to set aside the

v. Panchi Dasi, 32 Ind Cas 849.

Pat 375=9 P. L. T. 375. Foreign judgments in personam of a party to the suit in foreign Court cannot be enforced by him in an action brought in an English Court. Nistarini v. Nundo Lal, 28 C 891 (91) see also Abonloff v. Oppenheimer, L. R. 10 Q. B. D. 295, Valda v. Laufer, L. R. 25 Q. B. D. 310, Codd v. Dela, 92 L. T. 510; Ilip Foong v. Anewa, (10) A. C. 888; but see Robinson v. Fenner, (1913) 3 K. B. 835

In Abo

even though

gated in it committed,

an action claiming

whereby the defendants

were ordered to return to the plaintiff the goods

at the goods

the plaintiff

ord Court,

it must be

in Court and that the allegations

of fraud were brought before the foreign Court

came to a conclusion

against the

defendants, and

whether the

conclusion was right or wrong

on the matters

of fact the question of the fraud alleged

could not be tried in the Courts of England, says

that the

arguments for

the plaintiff

also in some what different

words, namely

that although the Russian

Courts at

Tiflis were led to decide

as to the

defendants through believing a false :
the plaintiff, nevertheless the defendan :

l to a foreign judgment it obtained in an English ught. There may be a difference where it is sought to enforce by the process of a Court a judgment of that very Court, because if that judgment has been obtained by improper means the objection does not arise in a new action brought on that judgment, but it arises with regard to the process of the Court to enforce a judgment of its own

In a case of that kind it was perhaps formerly necessary to proceed in a Court of Equity in order to get rid of the judgment, but I doubt whether it was necessary, because, at least in my opinion, a Court of Common Law would have in the exercise of its own jurisdiction set aside a judgment procured from it by deception."

In the case of Vadala v Laurs, L R 25 Q B D 310, in which an action was brought by the plaintiff in the English Courts upon a judgment obtained Bills of Bills were t without

in equally general language, is perfectly well settled, is that when you bring Foreign judgment—how impeached under Indian law In India a foreign judgment shall be conclusive as to any matter thereby directly adjudicated law in force in 1908)

Collusion No definition of the word "collusion" is given in the Act.

may be of two kinds—(1) when the facts put forward as the foundation of the judgment of the Court do not exist, (2) when they exist, but have been corruptly preconcerted for the express purpose of obtaining the judgment." Wharton Law Lexicon cited in Field Ev 7th Ed p 170 No doubt a decree can be avoided on the ground of fraud or collusion under this section. But

- S. 44. there is a great : : : :
made the victim of : : : :
discovered the fr : : : :
a point of defence : : : :
collusion is a m : : : :
is a point which could and might have been raised before the decree was pon the last occasion. A third party can undoubtedly void a decree or ground that it has been obtained collusively, but it is clear that a party to collusive decree can not avoid it on that ground. Sahib Rai v. Balan Lal, I R. (1927) All 494=101 Ind. Cas 765, Chenier Appa v. Puttappa, 11 B Varadarajula v. Srinivasulu, 20 M. 333; Kandetti v. Nukamma, 31 M. 4, M. L. J. 576; Venkataramanna v. Viramma, 10 M. 17. That such a decree by the case of Rangammal v. Tello, 27 h, A. I. R. 1927 All 523=101 Ind. Cas rigage decree was made more than the absolute. After the decree absolute was judgment debtor transferred his equity to judgment-debtors, though served with the annulment

questions and adduce evidence to prove the facts stated Kama :
18 C. L. J. 261

Who can plead fraud or collusion. The language of this section is enough to allow a party to the suit in which the judgment was obtained, to that it was obtained by the fraud of his antagonist, though the judgment was by to set up his own fra-Indian Code Vol II
h under the English law such judgment is void
the suit in which it is non the Court

Aswani v. Banamali, 21 C. W. N. 591; Taylor § 1719; Phip Et Tit Ed.
In England a party to a suit would not be allowed to defeat a judgment showing that it has procured an Anglo Ind Code Vol II p 829 In :

, 27 C. 11 (21-22) = 27 C. 11
st a judgment. West v. Ash Ves Sen 244, Ahmedbhoj v. Vullubhoj, 6 B 763; Prudham v. Phillips, 2 All 763 The rule that fraud can only be proved by an innocent party does not apply, however to probate [Birch v. B. (1902) p 130], or divorce [Doniphan
B. (1892) p 402] cases.

Party cannot plead his own collusion or fraud. Section 44 of the Indian Evidence Act, no doubt allows a judgment or decree, otherwise relevant, to be shown to have been obtained by fraud or collusion. But the whole doctrine that a party cannot plead his own collusion to avoid a decree supported by numero : : : :
1179; Bhaicabal v. : : : :
Nundo Lal, 26 C. 891
Srinivasulu, 20 M. 333 (338), Kandetti v. Nukamma, 31 M. 455 (457)=4 V L T. 331. A party cannot ask for relief against a fraudulent conveyance by him and which has been successfully used by him to defraud a creditor.
Banku Behary v. Rajkumar, 4 C. W. N. 289=27 C. 231, Gobari : : : : Ritu Roy, 23 C. 962; Kali Charan v. Rasik Lal 23 C. 963 N. "The maxim pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis is as thoroughly settled as any F. C. tion of law can be. It is a maxim of law established, not for the first it is made the antipony of his executor (ancestor ?) and cessante ratione legis decree had been obtained by fraud fraud was their predecessor in title

 The principle that a party to

1151-22 C L J 197-29 Ind Cas 690

Suit to set aside judgment obtained section where a judgment has been obtained decree, an ex parte decree or a decree passed after contest, is liable to be vacated on account of fraud M A Maistry v Abdul Aziz, 5 Rang 46-101 Ind Cas. 431-A. I R 1927 Rang 130, Raman Menon v Madhava, 93 Ind Cas 176-A I R 1927 Mad 96 To set aside a decree on the ground of fraud, it is not sufficient to prove constructive fraud, but an actual positive fraud, a mediated and intentional contrivance to keep the parties and the Court in ignorance of the real facts and obtaining a decree by that contrivance Bishun Singh v

S. 44.

decree whether there was fraud practised in relation to the proceedings sufficient ground for setting aside a decree Kasimur v Aminuddin, 34 N 133=47 Ind Cas 84; Barkuntha v. Prahlad 31 C W. N 560, 34 Ind Cas 84; Hari Mandal, 24 C W. N 133=51; T 735=60 Ind Cas 124, Kripa v Nan But a decree can be set aside which

88 L R 81

To sustain an action to set aside a decree on the ground that it was obtained by fraud, the fraud must be extrinsic to the proceedings before the Judge must be in the conduct of the suit by keeping the plaintiff out of Court

by him Madan Dadda v Kama 37 Ind Cas 199=91 L R 81

Suit to set aside an ex parte decree A suit to set aside an ex parte decree on the ground that the claim was a false one and the decree was obtained by perjured evidence will not lie, where the prior suit is a contested one or an ex parte decree was passed after service of summons Nalin v Hari 29 C W N 325=86 Ind. Cas 779=41 C L J 281=A I II 1925 Cal 663, Barkuntha v. Prahlad, 30 C. W. N. 560 The mere fact that an ex parte decree has been passed does not show that there was no service of summons on the defendant

P. L. T. 239 = (1920) Pat. 209 = 56 Ind. Cir. 615; Nagendra v. Parbatty, 20 C. W. N. 819, Gendu v. Saddi, 44 Ind. Cir. 983.

OPINIONS OF THIRD PERSON WHEN RELEVANT.

might be more accurate and sound than implation of law, a matter of no consequence.
in the most unequivocal manner, that the

It was for the jury to form opinions, and draw inferences and conclusions, and y, or the Judge, the
the witness spoke
whether to believe then the jury were to judge of their import and their tendency The witness was not to say that he centuries, and it was but slight before the present century In a sense, all testimony to matter of fa from phenomena and Courts or in common lif

is not really to be called opinion evidence in the sense of the rule It has been said, judiciously, that there is, in truth, no general rule requiring the rejection of opinions as evidence' (Hardy v Merrill, 66 N. H. 227, 241). Without acceding

S. 45.

the case

Matters of opinion—meaning of. I phrase "matter of opinion" fails to represent a definite conception. As used in the law of evidence shows logical

it applies to the use of the reason

— of opinion there relating to facts, is applied

whole or in large part, of an act of reasoning, but propositions of belief, not capable of verification religious views, political principles and the like, as to which certainty is practically impossible. These are the matters of endless debate of argument pure and simple. In cases of these debatable questions, the facts of the trial, res gestae or probative, are in no way involved. Chamberlain v. E. 1791, 1792

Why opinion evidence was a matter of testimony. In Wright v. Tatham concede, though, it is not, opinion of a witness even on oath is, as such, admissible evidence without question of competency. When you can bring the decision of that question sometimes may, to depend upon deductions from scientific principles.

at the same time that this principle is becoming recognized, or as there occurs a general recognition of what seemed at the time as an exception to it—the use of skilled witness Wigmore § 1917 ‘Though the witnesses can in general speak only as to facts, yet in questions of science persons versed in the subject may deliver their opinion upon oath on the case proved by other on the subject in dispute” Peake’s Evidence, 143 Like other exclusionary rules in the law of evidence, that which undertakes to reject ‘opinion’ may be a rectly

 nent of
 is not
 The
 equate knowledge on the subject His declaration, therefore, is said to be rejected as opinion Chamberlayne’s Ev § 1793 person who had to be received by way of exception to that notion Thus, when an ordinary lay witness took the stand, equipped with personal acquaintance ge, the circum

 and expressed per It would not occur to any Judge that this witness was doing a wrong thing In short, it was only ‘opinion’ as a mere guess and a belief without observation which they 3 Burr 1905, 1918 Lord Mansfield said “Mere opinion as an inference or conclusion from did not think of disparaging That this was the ver will appear from the following passages hich witnesses speak from judgment and opinion, ich he witness may form Mr Espinasse

 he “See it” 5-7 (Am) when the early
 had in mind
 ncluded in his
 the case of the lay testimony an opinion or inference based on these data—as in the leading instances (used by those writers and Judges) of handwriting character, and now and witness propose

 made at this opi
 before the jury and they were as competent as he to draw an inference It must ory,
 It
 r to be no English rulings which indicate that the opinion rule has there been
 I E. A.—91

S. 45.

bar Wigmore § 1917.

bsen
groun giving
witne

nature It simply endeavours to save time telling the witness: "The tribunal is on - materials of information as yourself, thus, as you can add nothing materials for judgment you if what testimony is unnecessary, and encumbers the pro applied in each
the principle" II Mansfield in Carier v Boehm, 5 Burr. 1303, 1310. "The rightly formed, could only be drawn from the same premises from which Court and the jury were to determine the cause, and therefore it is improper irrelevant in the mouth of a witness"

Opinion and fact, how to distinguish. Accurately to distinguish "matter of fact" from "matter of opinion" is not less difficult than to distinguish from "matter of law" In all supposed statements of fact the witness really testifies to the opinion formed by the tribunal upon the presentation of the senses Statement of opinion is the fact 1 What Ev § 15 An "opinion" is found in cases where inadvisable to permit a correct or effective impression to be permitted to state simply the impression, such phenomena produced in the minds This apparently is simply another method of stating facts Test. E.
8th Ed p 473, Corn v Sturtevant, 117 Mass 122, 133 So also if we look at the "opinion" of the witness in a proceeding of the nature of the sense this may be said to be a statement of opinion—that is, it is the witness's mind upon a state of facts presented to his senses—and in the case in question there was sufficient doubt as to the nature of the statement to cause the objection to be raised, yet the Court held, and quite properly, that it was speaking the Cl Ry. Co cases which the witness

in several ways, and sometimes the use of one word will make a

could not even have been raised, had the witness used, instead of the word 'acknowledged' the word 'said'. Haunster v Davis, 128 Iowa 216=103 N W 573. A witness may not be asked whether there was any room in a car for other men, but may state whether there was any vacant or unoccupied space in the car. Chicago Terminal Transfer Co v R. Co., 114 Ill. 407.

knowledge on the part of the witness testifying. What he thinks in respect to the existence or non existence of a fact in issue is matter of opinion, and he cannot state it. It is for him to put before the jury the facts as he has perceived them by his senses.

of the robbery they recognized him by his

The testimony was objected to as opinion.

The Court treats the question as follows. The statement by the witnesses for the prosecution of a fact which they ascertained through the sense of hearing was not the statement of mere matter of opinion, but the statement of a conclusion reached directly at

A witness can learn and faculties—his five sense

Prof Wigmore no such principle", says the lear

out of the question and considering only principle) that there is no virtue in any test based on the mere verbal or logical distinction between 'opinion' and 'fact'.

Further more, an examination of the so called opinion rule, as applied in its various instances shows that the opinion element is in the very law itself, a merely superficial and casual mark and not the essential feature".

Wigmore § 1919

Entire Elimination of Inference Impossible The impression which first arises to the mind upon hearing the ideal position of the witness thus stated is a conviction of the impossibility for any one to satisfy such requirements of the simplest fact

ative recognition of

ning Observation

by the aid of the

that of inference or reasoning viz, intuition so instantly and intuitively that the mind is seldom conscious of the process. These sense-impressions are seized by the reasoning powers and the mind becomes aware of the concept rather than a mere percepwhen those original sense perceptions have become so overlaid by inference, experiment that the reaction of each upon the other can no longer be distinguished from the practically Involution of Reasoning, (1) Inference While the entire elimination of inference is impossible, something may fairly be said as to the relation which observation and inference bear to each other in certain classes of mental result. However distinct the classes may be in broad outline they present the ordinary difficulties inherent where one class shades into another by almost imperceptible distinct line is frequently difficult to draw nor can it be Credibility of intuition The administrative reason for rejecting the S.

trustworth

operation

statements

ience shows that instinctively acting the normal human mind tends to observe correctly and report neous statement is reasoning is not

almost as a matter of course, one more reasoned in its nature can be admitted only upon the exhibition of some satisfactory administrative necessity for so doing For the reception of a conclusion a still more imperative necessity is required Inability to offer other evidence or to prove a case without using this species of proof culminates when a judgment is offered Chamberlayne's Ev § 1806

omenon observed by the witness
d to the tribunal wherever possible,

cies

by nds

essential, in the second place, that the substituted evidence should be both objectively and subjectively relevant to the existence of some fact in the res gestae. Chamberlayne's Ev § 1808

Scope of the rule rejecting the opinion of witness "The opinions of any person, other than the Judge by whom the fact is to be decided, as to the exis-

"The opinion of a competent person is case of 'hearsay', there is an may be stated as follows (1

in the

the rule

express

ive an doubt

45-50

person

is not allowed to express an opinion that a fact which is being enquired into exists (save and except in cases mentioned in 45-50), he is right in his statement of law But if his lordship meant that a fact-witness is debarred from stating his opinion in any case, when on the stand, his statement of law is evidently erroneous Observation and reason being practically inseparable, the real administrative problem is not as to whether reasoning shall be excluded in to to but rather in determining whether a particular involution of a given quantum of reasoning is necessary under the facts of a particular situation As facts become more complex, more compound, the proportion of reasoning almost of necessity, grows greater So intimate, in many cases, is the blending, that the

S. 45

Court is compelled to accept or reject the whole, despoiling of such separation Chamberlaynes Ex § 1837 In this connection the observation of Foster, C J in Hardy v. Merrill, 56 N. H. 241, should be borne in mind "All evidence is opinion merely unless you choose to call it fact and knowledge as discovered by and manifested to the observation of it to me quite unnecessary admission of such evidence, or isolated and arbitrary) to of some books and the cl rule requiring the rejection of he and to exist, which is lost to sight in an enveloping mass of arbitrary ex- tions" Wigmore § 1919 The Hearsay rule rule are the product of in while the Opinion rule will always

Proper scope of opinion his opinion

no good ground for excluding such evidence inevitably connected with the main issue that its consideration is (b) So also, if certain evidential material, having a probative value, tends nevertheless to produce also, over and above its legitimate effect, an unfair prejudice to the opponent, or by virtue of the personality of the witness tends to receive an effect there is good ground the witness's opinion is excluded, not because of its nature such are objectionable—for a witness's knowledge and all knowledge is made up of inference,—but because the inference under the circumstances of in this superfluous

essential opinion
ation
ions

ts from which n

be able to separate the facts and indications from which he has formed a conclusion from the conclusion itself Yahn v Ottumwa, 60 Iowa 429=15 N W 257 From the many illustrations given below it will appear that, from the often be received uses in that, from the described in such language as will enable persons not eye-witnesses to form one accurate judgment in regard to it Burr Jones § 360 The opinions of non experts are admissible, therefore, provided they state, so far as the opinions are based on questions of animals, or hand writing; and of the size, time and distances; of the mental state of and

or seemed hostile, intoxicated They can state as to who deduced or that a person appeared rational If person looked excit matters more within the common observation and experience of men, non-experts may, in cases where it is not practicable to place before the jury all the primary facts upon which they are founded, state their opinion from such facts, where such opinions involve conclusions material to the subject of inquiry In eu fu be re fr

Inference—condition of Admissibility—Necessity The necessity for a use of reasoning, more or less great, is practically insuperable. The simplest

3. 45. Statement of a fact embodies an element of inference. In the original sense-impressions received from observations are brought to consciousness by faculty of intuition. The mind, however, seizes upon the material, with such instant avidity as to make the transition to the inference practically unrecognizable. The statement therefore of a observed phenomenon, classed as one of fact, is, in reality, a declaration of what the observer inferred the fact to be. To this use of inference no alternative objection can be taken. Facts can be proved in no other way. They therefore continue thus to be stated. The necessity, however, for a larger element of inference, in a mental process somewhat more complex, is at once discernible. Not only may the witness be powerless to state the simplest fact without stating his inference as to it. He may be unable to state compound facts in the same way. True, it may be quite possible to declare certain of the component or constituent facts which go to make up a compound fact in such a manner that it without the slightest difficulty

Under such circumstances, judicial administration, ex necessitate rei, pre-

the result to which they have led his reasoning faculties.

in which t'
of a pen
evidence,
Er § 1867

or mental states may serve, as the inference of the witness is a matter of opinion or belief.

■ stranger, and then Expert and Opinion
the voice alone, and the tones of voice

such a manner that from the description of the crime is on as to the nature of not admissible to the 143 Cal. App. 3d 100

receiving in the

707. In many instances the act of reasoning is numerous and minute to numerous and limited to Chamberlayne's Ex § 186. ^{as previous may be}

 v. Frith, (1896) P. 74. ^{Brooke v Brooke, 60 Md. 529, 533, 187} Nebr. ^{The camera}
 well l ^{Guillard, 33-} 742 ^{to give}
 for the ^{§ 1-12}

it competent in itself as primary evidence. It is the experience which he acquires in the ordinary conduct of affairs, and from means of information such as that of that cher, 117
 an expert
 f a thing,
 still there

is no rule of law, and there can be non know of property before he can be He must have some acquaintance with estimate of its value, and then it is for the jury to determine how much weight to attach to such estimate Bedell v. Long Island R. Co, 49 N. Y. 367; Lawson be presumed to have a sufficient knowledge of the market value of property from the location and character of the land in question Pennsylvania, etc.

R. Co. v Bunnell, 81 Pa St 426 The best and only legitimate evidence of the value of the land at the time of the sale would be the opinion of witnesses who had founded Illinois etc. Ry Co v Von Horn, 18 Ill 257; Durr Jones § 363 So it is clear that the valuation of land must be arrived at by the tribunal by taking

As regards
 urt. Stucell
ates, 2 Story,
 421 (Am); Lawson's Exp & Op. Ev pp 463 501, Wigmore §§ 1910 1911, Narain Chandra v Cohen, 13 C 56; but see Durarka v Lular, 4 O C, 217
 As to how valuation is to be made under the Municipal and Land Acquisition Act vide Manindra v Secretary of State, 41 C 967; Harish v Secre- tary of State, 11 C W N 875; Wenrick v Secretary of State, 13 C W N. 1059; Secretary of State v Shanmugaraya, 16 M 369; Government of Bombay v. Meruany, 10 Bom L R 920, Heyham v Bholanath, 11 B L R 236; Secretary of State v Belchambers 33 C 103; Tulsi v Secretary of State, 14 C W N. lxxx, Jani Sahoy Sha v Secretary of State, 8 C W N 671, In Fsafah Salebhar, 10 Bom L R 997, kailash v Secretary, 17
 C L J. 31

S. 44. Sanity. The reason for admission of non expert opinion evidence regards sanity
N. H 144: "by witnesses a The opinion
no description
ordinarily he cannot give an adequate description of them' The Act

80 (Am); Wigmore § 1934 "To ask appeared peculiarly or strangely was s opinion she was insane" Per Doe J opinion of non-professional witness such opinions are based upon their person's appearance Burr Jones § 36 disease in any one of the v Mc Daniel 4 Fred 4 455 (Am.) expert witness

person is sick
upon the nature system of a p days, however.

upon for their opinion as to sanity or insanity of the testator.
Caughman, 26 S E R 16 (S C); Wheeler v. Alderson, 3 Hogs Eccl 374 6
606, Dew v. Clerk, 3 Add Eccl 79; Eagleton v Kingston, 3 Ves J 43
Hadfield's Case, 27 How St Tr 1281; Loue v Jolliffe, 1 W Bl 365, Tatham
Wigmore § 1934

might have as to the bearing of the opinion rule Wigmore § 1935 as to sanity and opinion as to general testamentary or criminal capacity ar entirely distinct The latter sort of opinion is inadmissible (when it is) beca a question of law may be involved, and witnesses' conclusions, are not neede on such points. Wigmore § 1937

Opinion from necessity The opinions of ordinary witnesses derived from observation are amissible in evidence when, from the nature of the subject the facts can be

This rule, however, has its exceptions, some of which are as settled as the rule itself When all the pertinent facts can be detailed and described, and when the triers are supposed to be able to correct conclusions without the aid of exception to the rule is allowed. But case

: .S.

to deceive purchasers Macdonald v Holland, 10 S L R 175-41 Ind Cas. 539; Suadishi Mills v. Juggi Lal, 24 A L J 975.

45. When the Court has to form an opinion upon a point of foreign law, or of science, or art, or as to Opinions of experts identity of handwriting *[or finger impressions], the opinions upon that point of persons specially skilled in such foreign law, science or art, [or in questions as to identity of handwriting] *[or finger impressions] are relevant facts

Such persons are called experts.

Illustrations

(a) The question is, whether the death of A was caused by poison

The opinion of experts as to the symptoms produced by the poison by which A is supposed to have died, are relevant

by
 the
 relevant

(c) The question is, whether a certain document was written by A. Another document is produced which is proved or admitted to have been written by A

The opinions of experts on the question whether the two documents were written by the same person or by different persons, are relevant knowledge of the facts, and, in the final outcome, withdrew from their consideration any facts of which they had original knowledge, confining them to such facts only as should be presented to them at the trial. This left to the jury simply the duty of drawing conclusions from facts presented. In many cases it was impossible to present to the minds of the jury, who were supposed to have no v Chadd, (1762) 3 Doug 157, was a case in which an engineer was called in

*The words "or finger impressions" in both places where they occur in s. 45, were added by the Indian Evidence Act, 1897 (5 of 1897). For discussion in Council as to whether "finger impressions" include "thumb impressions", see Gazette of 1898, Pt. VI p 24

†These words in s. 45 were inserted by the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act (18 of 1872), s. 1.

- S. 45. show the effect of an embankment upon the filling up of a harbour. Lord Mansfield says: "Mr. Smcaton (the witness) understands the construction, of harbours, the cause of their construction, and how remedied. In matters of Thornton v. Assurance Co. (1794) Peck Camp. 116. In such a case often just The furnishing of such assistance to the not while after

Principle. An expert i. e. a person having special skill in a matter which is more than the jury to draw is nces on the subject.

 skilled observer, administration is from times imposes re for the proof of his case to actually tendered is relevant for the purpose. His proper work is to reason. Tal by them, it is they indicate.

that his reasoning has a tendency to supplant that of the jury. In the instances when administration permits an invasion of the province of the jury, an adequate forensic necessity must be shown for receiving the testimony of an expert. The administrative warrant differs, however, widely from that presented in case of the observer, whether ordinary or skilled. Where one is using sense-perception, the forensic necessity for admitting the secondary evidence of an inference or conclusion most frequently in this, that the original is ad by the witness as fully to be placed before is allowed, after stating such construction case and those previously detailed into the case

In case of the expert, however, the inadequacy which the witness is to supply reason No man can satisfactorily of art, science or
 the necessary data
 both be unknown

could properly draw for themselves. Chamberlayne v. The King

When Opinion evidence of expert is admissible. The principle underlying this section is clear enough, but in some cases it leads to what seem to be inconsistent results. All must decide the question on a case which it arises

more accuracy than the jurymen themselves. It is the nature of the subject matter if practical everyday matter that the example, is put before the jury to give year was a proper time to set fire to the stable for horses, whether a fight is a prize fight, or whether the keeping of cows in connection with a hotel is unprofitable, the Court is presented with the question whether, because some which permits of opinion testimony being given McKelvey's Ev § 134. In Ferguson v Hubbell, 97 N. Y. 507, 513-49 Am. Rep 544, the rule in regard to the admission of expert testimony is thus well stated by Earl J "It is not sufficient to warrant the introduction of expert testimony that the witness may know more of the subject of enquiry, and may better comprehend and appreciate it, than the jury, but to warrant its introduction, the subject of the enquiry must be one relating to some trade, profession, science, or art in which persons instructed therein by study or experience may be supposed to have more skill and knowledge than jurors of average intelligence may be presumed generally to have. The jurors may have less skill and experience than the witnesses, and yet parties nature to them, to resort to expert or opinion evidence." "The opinions of experts are, in general, admissible whenever the subject is one, & knowledge of which can only be acquired by special training or experience. When however, it is one upon his view is to prevail. The Beryl, 9 F D 137, The Gannet, (1900) A C 231, 237, The Australia v The Nautilus, (1927) A C 145

- S. 45. questions of science, skill, trade, and others of the like kind." Best Practice of Evidence § 346. The rule on the subject is stated by Mr. Smith in h. v. Carter v. B. appears to be is admissible, persons are without such assistance; in other words, when it so far partakes of the nature of science, as to require a course of previous habit, or study, in order to the attainment of a knowledge of it. See Folkes v. Chadd, 3 Doug. 157; R. v. S. 2 M. & M. 75; Thornton v. R. E. Assur. Co., Peaks 25; Chaurand v. Angers, Peaks 44. While on the other hand, it does not seem to be contended that the opinion of the witness, the nature the fact that the witness, though a practising physician, was held to be an expert, 2 Q. B. 766; Tullis v. Hall, 11 Ala. 648 (Am.); Greenl. Ev. § 440. "The term expert seems to imply but superior knowledge and practical experience in the art or profession; but generally nothing more is required to entitle one to give testimony as an expert."

Shelluson, 8 C. B. 819; Re. Whitelegs, (1899) P. 257; Halsbury v. 411 p. 481.

witness must have special knowledge of the facts concerning which he is called upon to give evidence.

existence of facts capable of being proved or disproved by evidence. But this general rule has been broken in upon by the admission of various classes of exceptions, all of which are upon the common grounds of necessity. Such necessity is allowed to exist when the facts in issue are not themselves accessible by evidence, but are future probabilities or mere contingencies, - or else actual facts but not positive knowledge : All of these must, of necessity, be judged of only from their proved facts known generally to accompany or to indicate these in question, as, for instance, where the facts to be ascertained are inferred from some rule of art or science, or observed law of nature thus proved; the knowledge by which they may not fall professional or science relating

s frequently a question such as dealers in that article can alone decide. There it is a matter of necessity to call in the experienced or instructed opinion of ship after a storm
udge of those neces-
cts. Thus, also, in Acshy, 1 Car. & P. landsmen to draw

any inference, and experienced of that kind amount to unjustifiable are not admissible as such, but facts having been proved, men skilled in such

His scientific opinion is, in fact, his testimony to a law of nature. All these are testimonies to general facts which the jury can ascertain in no other way, and in words the minute and transient facts observed by the witnesses from the r in his

one not which which Op Ev
therefore must be necessary
second sary to 42 (Am):

Burr Jones § 369.

made a study of the subject. On the other hand, he may be an expert although his knowledge has been derived from the study of the subject, and not from actual experience or practice in the business or profession. Thus, it has sometimes been held that a physician may give opinions as to matters connected with his profession or with medical science, although in his own practice he may not have had experience as to such matters, and his knowledge in respect thereto is derived from study only, even though he may not have made the disease under subject, he may be competent as an expert although engaged in some occupation, (Detroit v. Van Steinbury, 17 Mich. 99), or even if he has abandoned the business to which the enquiry relates. Bearss v. Copley, 10 N. Y. 43. It is necessary that the witness should possess the requisite skill that is actual study, experience or observation. The mere opportunity of obtaining such skill does not suffice. It must be shown that he is skilled or scientific at least that he has superior actual skill or knowledge in relation to the question to that possessed by ordinary witnesses or observers. Page v. Parker, 40 H. L. 47. To prove or disprove infringement of trade mark evidence of men in the trade is not admissible to show whether or not a combination is such as would deceive a purchaser.

S. 45.

41 Ind. Cas. 539;

Lal, 49 A. 92-2

is true "he must, in the immediate line

differentia of the few experts could be admitted to testify, certainly no Courts could be capable of determining whether such experts were competent. A general the specialty belongs would seem to be Ala. 212. The value of the testimony is the experience or study of the witness.

Wells v. Leek, 151 Pa. 431; Burr Jones § 368. So "the first question that arises when we are dealing with an important witness who has made observations and inferences is this: 'How intelligent is he and what use does he make of his attention for the Court" himself may be subject under en

may be called

give their opinions thereon. Alumun v. State, 23 N. H.

But the expert cannot give his own opinion as to his own

Broadman v. Woodman, 47 N. H. 120; Brahm v. State, 113 Ala. 23. It is of the qualification of the witness to the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

the Court

his testimony." Reg Exp Test 50. The right to a full cross-examination is thus secured; and if, it turns out the witness is not qualified, the Court should mination

witness,
Burr Jones

§ 569.

Mode of examination of experts—Hypothetical questions It may be plainly inferred from what has already been stated that the testimony of those found qualified as experts is not confined to facts within their own personal knowledge, but that they may give their opinions upon an assumed state of facts, indeed, it is probably true that in the majority of cases in which experts are examined assumed Raghu 15 C 589 WL form of the hypothetical question in such cases, it is clear that the question should be so framed as to fairly and clearly present the state of facts which the counsel claims to be proved, and which the testimony on his part tends to prove. Cowley v. People, 83 as regards fact

v. Bell, 1 C
If the other side

examination being within is fairly and reasonably con other words, the hypothet would be defeated

Peerage, Le Marchant, 3d 379 The facts must on, 69 Mich 400 Where is of course no basis for the superstructure Burr Jones § 371, Whart §§ 441, 451, 452

In Lord Melville's Trial, 29 How St. Tr 1065, Lord Erskine L C said "If you take away the foundation upon which it is made, which is matter for the Court afterwards, there is an end to the superstructure All that the witness has

S. 45.

although the facts assumed by counsel to be true are not proved, or although the question does not state the facts as they actually exist. The facts are generally in dispute, and it is sufficient if the question fairly states such facts as the proof of the examiner, fairly tends to establish, and fairly presents his claim of theory. Burr Jones § 371. Although on questions of professional skill he can state in a general form what could be the proper cause to pursue under the circumstances proved (Sills v. Brown, 9 C & P 601, 603, Chapman v. Watson, 10 Bing 57; Rich v. Pierpoint, 3 F & E 35; Collier v. Simpson, 5 C & P 16). He may not be asked what his own conduct would have been under the circumstances (Berthon v. Loughman, 2 Stark. 258, Hatch v. Lewis, 2 F & F 457, 458, Ramadge v. Ryan, 9 Bing 333) Phip Ev 7th Ed 380

Protection

the jury, it is the existence of a fact which is controverted upon the evidence. His judgment is not to be invoked which of the two sets of witnesses is the more credible or regarding the relative probability of antagonistic stories told by the witnesses. The question is raised by the evidence.

science or skill merely in the case, (b) Where the issue is substantially one of culpy, but not en bloc, the correct course is to put such facts to him hypothetically, asking him to assume one or more of them to be true, and to state his opinion thereon. Where, however, the facts are not in dispute, it has been said that the former question may be put as a matter of course, although not as of right. Phip Ev 7th Ed p 380

Form of questions. Policy as well as principle, require the form of the question to be expressly hypothetical, because otherwise the jury, and perhaps the witness, may be misled by the statement as to proved or admitted facts, of that which is in question.

considered, and the form of the question was very much considered. (Vol 512, the form of the question was adopted. "You have to be satisfied that the facts stated by her witnesses, are true, what is the prisoner's mind, at the time of the time of the alleged crime?" Was the prisoner in your opinion insane, and what kind of insanity or delusion, and what kind of insanity or delusion, conduct of a person under such circumstances, adopted the following form. "If the symptoms and manner of testified to by other witnesses are proved and if the jury are satisfied of the truth of them, whether in their opinion, the party was insane and what was the nature and character of that insanity, what state of mind did they indicate;

S.

and at the same time to exclude their opinion as to the effect of the evidence in ze as an expert (3)

, or where inferences

of facts must be drawn from the evidence, in order to be reasonably certain of the grounds on which an opinion is based, it is usually necessary that the facts should be stated hyp rule for all cases,

presiding at the trial

or it will be held in a hypothetical question may be very numerous, it sometimes happens that to answer a question which confessedly rest upon no sound basis of fact Substance rather than form is the important consideration with a sound judicial

of its

he jury

It is not deemed objectionable that the proponent uses the actual names as developed in the evidence in connection with his question to the expert Argumentative questions, that is those which involve a favourable argument which is assumed to be true, may properly be rejected Chamberlayne's Et §§ 2489-2494

is the cross-examination of an test his memory, observation, stand as a skilled witness, his judgment upon germane matters may be tested by using premises and asking his conclusions Higmore § 684 The fact that the expert was not in a fit state of mind or health to form a proper opinion, or is interested, or corrupt be elicited in cross

v Royal Exchange

(139) Phy Ev 7th

witness's opinion

unless the passages to be used are put in cross-examination to the witness, for him to explain them if he can 46 Ind Cts 393-22 C W N 745

and

ment

that

not testify that he saw a certain person at a certain time and that he was then

S. 45. labouring under an epileptic fit or stricken down and rendered unconscious. Fetter, 25 Ia 75, per Dillon C J; & I. R. Co v. Bailey, 11 Oh St 3.
 the witness had been a stranger to the actual facts, it would then have been necessary to assume a state of facts as the foundation of any opinion he might give; but no such assumption, it seems to us, is necessary when the witness is properly presumed to be himself personally acquainted with the material facts of the case. If an expert may give his opinion on facts testified to by him, he may also give his opinion on facts testified to by others, and it is not necessary that the fact be proved by cross-examination.

and by testimony abunde" Ibid

An expert is called to give his opinion on a matter, not the party by which such opinion is tendered. Lila Singh v Bejoy Protap, 41 C L J 300-87 Ind Cas 1, A I R 1925 Cal 768

Value of experts "Experts are the most important auxiliaries of the investigating officer, in some way or other nearly always are the main factor in deciding a case. But everything depends upon knowing how to make a question."

moment for putting his question i.e the moment when he is in possession of sufficient material to raise the question.

"Every Investigator"

problems, seeming to experts in physical chemical experiments

with certain

process, traces, once furnished the same been cut with a piece of wire.

encouraging feature of judicial enquiries in the present day is the increasing appreciation of the application of science to proof. Ibid p 331

the Code as best as it can and it should not rely on the outside opinion of an eminent, as to the interpretation of that Code. Ibid But in England the law cannot be proved by production of a matter of fact. Mastyn v 11 Cl & F 85; Grenans Case, Moo P. C. 481 In England where the evidence is so reeman, 10 Moo P.

New York, 96 L J K. l ot by mere certificates missible, for being
n authority. M'Cormac
. 157; Westlake v Westlake, (1910) P 167; Rt Arton, (1896) 1 Q B 509; Kater v Barter, (1907) P 333 Another reason for this is that the law is ontinually liable to change. Phipps v Esd Ed 3-12. So foreign law is to be roved by expert testimony. The main controversy is whether a witness to oreign law must be by profession an advocate, attorney or Judge or whether a yman, if he claims knowledge may be trusted as to the state of the w The earlier practice in England seems to have been very liberal. Vide
Sussex Peerage Case, 11 Cl & F 117-134; Venderduyn v Thelluson, 8 C II 12, 824; R v Dent, 1 C & K 97 But in Richardson v Anderson, 1 Camp.
6, Lord Ellenborough insisted on the necessity of a professional character in e witness, see al . , (1917) 1 L B. 359; Brad, more § 564 but the decision have been old competent — the Courts
f his own coun . Hanson v Nixon, 96 L T S ; non-lawyer, v O K 1900 P 65). A colonial to the law of his colony (Sussex olding the office of co adjutor to n marriage law A French Vice-marriage law R v Savani, 10 East 281 But a mere tradesman in a foreign country can prove the law of that country R v Brampton, 10 East 287, 2 v. Naguib, (1917) 1 K B 359 C C A A person to become competent to expected to know the law from 11 Foreign law on particular idha, A. I R 1926 M 218 A Ibrahim 47 A 823 80 Ind 690 So also his opinion of Hindu Law is admissible Nara Sinha v Janigana, 29 M 437 of an individual (Church v Hubbard, 2 Cranch 237). The usual mode of authenticating foreign laws (as it is of authenticating foreign judgments), is by an exemplification of a copy, under the Great Seal of the State, or by a copy proved to be a true copy, by a witness who has examined and compared it with the original, or by the certificate of an officer properly authorized by law to give the copy.

S. 45. App pp. 115—141, Brush v. Wilkins, 4 Johns Ch 520 Mason v. F. Cowp 174 Sometimes, however, certificate of persons in high authority has been allowed as evidence, without other proof" Story on Conf of Law 647; Greenl Ev § 486; In re Dormoy, 3 Hagg EccL 767; R v P. Howell's State Tr. 515—673 When foreign law is allowed to be proved by experts, he is allowed to refer to accredited authorities on the subject of refreshing memory. Nelson v Lord, 8 Berr 527 systematized, and has obtained method, relations and the forms of law Davis J in Atchison & Co v U. S., 15 Ct Cl. 140 Expert testimony is usually thought of in connection with enquiry as to technical or scientific questions—questions requiring, as an essential to sound judgment, a special training of the mind—and this is the field in which the usefulness of such testimony is most often felt. The parts of human body, and the condition and operation of any of its functions, have been a fruitful field for this class of testimony Young v. M. 103 Mass 50, McKelvey v. F. 8 122 So on questions of science or art relating to some art may give their opinions to cause death, the J. L. of the sible testimony called for from medical and surgical practitioners, and details of the various branches, upon which such evidence has been called and received, will disclose only portion of the area covered by the number of cases which increases with every discovery in either medicine or surgery. The opinions of physicians and surgeons may be admitted to show the physical condition of a person, the nature of the disease, whether temporary or permanent, the effect of disease or physical injuries upon the body or mind, as to in what manner or by what kind of instrument they were made, or at what wounds or injuries of a given character might have been inflicted, which would probably be fatal or actually did produce death, the cause, symp

As regards proof of foreign law, Vide Gangadhar v. Sircar, 11 B. Cas 112 = A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 218.

a physician how certain wounds or injuries were actually given, what harm ment or medicines (Matteson v. New York C. S. Co., 30 N. Y. 22) What is the proper treatment under a given state of facts (Wright v. Hardy, 22 Va. 121) the probabilities of recovery from the effects of an injury (Hall v. Watts (Pa.), 227); what, under certain circumstances, is real or feigned March, R. D. 1888 Hayden, 51 Vt. 296), and whether or not great mental anxiety and would tend to develop insanity, where there is an hereditary predisposition (Dearnette v. Commonwealth, 75 Va. 867) Upon the question of the medical practitioner testifying in mental cases, there is a diversity of decision, American Courts, the preponderance of authority being in favour of accepting

S. 4

educ

acial

e prac

e incl

nce with the subject may always be inquired into to enable the jury to estimate

e weight

perience

eased

e group

e testimony

the causes, nature and effects of disease among animals State v. Sheets, 89

O 543 As a preliminary question as to his qualification as an expert, a medical witness may be asked whether the examination made by him was careful ate whether the injuries he is speaking of amount to grievous hurt or not, but ifly to describe the nature of the injuries Empress v Bulwant, A W N 1885, medical man that has not seen the corpse, can give only expert evidence orlem examination

noticed by him

leher Ali, 15 O 5

erson is in 1881

rom w

medical

should

nd to whom extracts might be put Shea Bahadur v Beni Bahadur, 6 O L J 78-51 Ind Cas 419

Testimony of physicians and others as to poisons Toxicology is regarded as some jurisdiction as part of scientific knowledge of physicians, and to a certain extent this is justified by the course of education of medical men Thus

, is t

erience

nd tl

ician

resen

equisite knowledge of chemical science Although it is usual for experts to subject compounds to a chemical analysis before testifying whether they are poisonous, or as to their ingredients, and although this has sometimes been held indispensable, the better rule is that the opinion may be received, although his test has been omitted, it being a matter which affects the weight rather than the competency of the testimony State v Slagle, 83 N C 630, Burroughs § 379.

Mechanics and machinists as experts When a witness shows himself expert in any particular art or craft, to admit of an examination properly addressed to persons of skill in that department of industry, he is competent to give an opinion upon matters of which the jury could not be expected to judge accurately from the mere detail of facts Cole v Clark 3 Wis. 323 Hence it is that the opinions of machinists and artisans may be received as

with the coming to opinions are

S. 45.

(James v Hods
value of labour,
Cook, 69 III 531
v Naglee, 17 Cal
such work (Shut
such manner a (U S) 167), or by certain mach
certain force of n certain mode of machine itself w

Experts on agriculture An illustration of the same principle the op of those skilled in farming and agriculture has received as to the pr mode of probable stances,
probable
as to value, age, and weight of domestic animals and as to the us proper management of stock Milk experts are competent to testify wh certain liquid exhibited to them looked and tasted like milk and water
Burr Jones § 382

Insurers and insurance The opinions of persons specially skilled th are admissible on questions Expert & Op Ev 31, Thornto
Beckwith v Sydebotham 1 admitting the evidence and say whether, upon such and such symptoms a person whose could at the time of the insurance have been in good state of health can testify as to the average duration of life with respect to the value of annuities Rouley v London, L R 8 Ex 221

admissible —

Turn

Knight, 43 Me 27

"Book-keepers—As to the meaning of an entry in a bank book mar difficult to decipher Knox v Savings Bank, 93 Mich 19

"Botanists—As to whether the working of coke ovens near a park the trees in the neighbourhood Salvin v Coal Co, L R 9 Ch App 120

"Chemists—As to the effect of a particular poison Harting v Pa Park, 319

"Engineers Civil—Eggers v Huges, 37 Pac. R 1037

"Engineers, Electrical—As to the imperfections of contrivances by which, 57 N L J—each link was

Hap v M 176

§ 171

rail road was finished there

in question

or quantity exists on the "Inventors—As to the value of the case of certain inventions stock cars Burton v Burton Stock Car Co, 50 N E. R. 1029

"Photographers—As to the genuineness of a signature to a note Larnes, 16 Gray 161

"Post office—Inspectors—As to whether a document is written in feigned S. 4 or natural hand K v. Cator, 4 Esp 187, Revel v. Braham, 4 T R 497.

"Surveyors—Grand Rapid S R Co v Chesboro, 74 Mich, 766

"Veterinary Surgeons—That a horse has blind staggers People v. Bain, 3 Mich 453" Lawson Op & Exp Ev pp 7—9

Handwriting The genuineness of hand-writing, including, under this are, however, ca

he law deems
 and that the ge

imples of the use of circumstantial evidence extrinsic to, outside of, a docu-thought, habit, character, as these, tend to develop each from the other, in this order, as a result of mental action. In other words the tendency of mental, physical or metaphysical impulses to express themselves in physical action is the basis on which rests the probative force of resemblance in as himself into his hand-writing. To Naturally, this can, as a general rule, formation of physical habits. Practi-

l as it were,
 trained eye
 cr. On this

the inference from resemblance is based not have seen the person in question actually write. (Chamberlaines Ev §§ 2177—2179)

An opinion of disputed writing
 English common fully in Doe v
 divided (Lord Denman and Mr Justice Williams favouring, and Justices Coleridge and Latteson opposing) upon the question of admitting the testimony of an expert who had made in examination of admittedly genuine specimens on the first day of the trial, and was called to testify on the second, and at that time stated that he thought he had acquired a knowledge of the handwriting in question sufficient to enable him to tell whether the particular specimen was genuine. The Judges, however recognize with unanimity the established English common law doctrine that comparison of hands by the jury or by witnesses will not be allowed upon specimens introduced for that purpose. For purposes of comparison it is held that only original specimens may be used, press copies will not do. Lord Denman, in this case, speaks thus of this class of evidence "On the question whether handwriting, looked at by the jury is genuine or forged, the cases appear to me to have justly exploded the notion that bare inspection by the most skilful person can furnish an opinion."

S. 45.

in point of reason in the evidence. "But where," says Mr W D F with the immediate evidence, as is shown by the comparison of mind may be supposed to have acquired from the previous perusal of the very writings or even from the casual inspection of a single act is received acted upon without objection" Mr W. D. Frazer, Notes to Pothier, II, 113. That note was written by the great Judge like Lord Coke the learned Judge said not to the formation of the law.

1900 Act, as to the general character of the evidence, Mr W D F corresponded with him" Wigmore § 1993.

Objection based an admitted specimen placed before him. Therefore, in genuine additional as to be essential

 ally stated by Lord Coleridge J. in Doe v. Suckermore, 5 A. & E. 706; "If the of Lord Coleridge is based on the assumption that the first of these modes, as indicated by Prof Wymore is the only one which is proper and possible and

S. 45;

§ 2000 But the better way to avoid the second mode of evidencing genuineness, is proving it to the Judge. In University of Illinois v Spalding, 71 N H. 165, 51 Att. 731, Rennell J thus said: "The third objection—that to permit comparison with specimens not otherwise in evidence, and admitted for the purpose of comparison, would introduce collateral issues and confuse and distract the jury—is when applied to specimens neither admitted by the parties undoubted evidence. This involves, indeed a marked departure from common law. It does away with the common-law limitation of comparison exceptions Wigmore § 2000

Thus stood the law in Procedure Act of that year (17 of a disputed writing with any to be genuine, shall in civil such writings and the evidence of witnesses respecting the submitted to the Court and the jury as evidence of the genuineness of others

later a section in precisely the Evidence Act, 1865 (23 & 24 Vic.) interference between the rules governing and criminal cases no longer exist

Wills' Civ Ev p 233

Basis of expert testimony for proving handwriting "Unifoliated as are points of difference in the infinite variety of nature in which one man differs from another, there is nothing in which men differ more than in their handwriting and when a man comes forward and says, 'You believe that such a man is dead and gone; he is not; I am the man,' if I know the handwriting of the man supposed to be dead, the first thing I would do would be to say, 'sit down and write that I may compare it with that of the man for whom you handwriting of the defendant, and to compare it with that of Roger Tichborne and with that of Arthur Orton" Tichborne Trial 1--

Not
) 156
or it
their e the LH)
nded
ular
other man asily

S. 4

known
H
rent
rom fix inviros
prmtu

most automatic succession of acts stimulated by these habits. Thus, a person's style of writing, in most details, becomes as fixed as the habit, and serves as a continuous inseparable mark of that one person. Moreover the imitation of the style of writing by another person becomes difficult, because the other person cannot by mere will-power reproduce in himself all the muscular combinations to this that modern apparatus, of details, characteristic of the imitator. (For a complete of handwriting, the reader is referred to the following masterly treatise Albert S. Osborn, 'Questioned Documents')

"Thus the data of graphic science make it possible to assert almost the universality of the proposition. No two persons' handwritings are normally This proposition finger-prints and as such rship of docu-investigating

as a standard to termination of this skill must of Courts as applied to the circum-

5. Various forms of test have lute. In Doe v. Suckermore ess must be convenient with the
of a Court of Justice to be 012. The following persons iters of handwriting — (1) Post 1c 4th Ed p 556; last Ec § 246). (2) Bank clerks, and (3) Lithographers. A witness can also give opinion as an expert if he has made a special study of the subject. R v. Sillerlock, is charged with having forged a document purporting to have been executed of the Act, if their Empress v Tahir

been cross-examined
he had put a particular and weight to ed by applying to it
ected Sarwar v.
a finger print expert
and subjected to cross examination in open Court Pitain v Baboo Singh, A I R 1924 Nag 183 Court should be very chary in accepting an opinion of Finger Print Expert when such itself so appears on a document Ramlakhan v Dharamdeo, 37 Ind Cas 335=A I R, 1926 at 575 Under this section the opinion of an expert formed by comparison the thumb impression of an accused taken in Court under Act XXXIII of 120, s 5 with his thumb impression on deeds is admissible in evidence.
Superintendent v Kiran Bala, 30 C W N 373=43 Cr L J 79=93 Ind Cas
1=A. I. R. 1926 Cal 531 It cannot be laid down as a rule of law that it is unsafe to base a conviction on the uncorroborated testimony of a finger print expert. The true rule seems to be one of caution, that is to say the Court must not take the opinion of the expert for granted, but it must examine his evidence in order to satisfy itself that there can be no mistake and the responsibility is on it are 15;
akin;
con.
imp;
is not objectionable Public Prosecutor v Kandasami, 50 M 462=98 Ind. Cas.
9=A. I R 1927 Mad 696

Principles of Judicial Proof p 123

Value of expert evidence generally considered to be of slight value, since unwittingly, biased in favour of the side to regard harmless facts as confirmation of preconceived theories; moreover ly be multiplied at will
ic. & G 116, 128 per Lord Shilton, L. R. 17 Eq 373. deserving of notice is that all veracious and He combines
witness—truthful,

S. 45. false, dogmatic, opinion—
more bully this man truth You can no

tenacity of opinion is his weakness I give up his opinion = Richard Harris Es

"It is known, for example," says Prof. Wigmore, "that the receipt of fees by experts tends to bias that kind of witness, as it would bias any and that in judicial trials incompetent persons who falsely pose as such can often be obtained for hire. It is known too, that the selection and use of expert witnesses by the parties, instead of their selection by the Judge, to create a partisan bias." Wigmore's Principles of Judicial Proof p. 534.

th considerable es
ichu Monday E s are not badi
, that the determin
a matter to be ndness of the re
W. N. 465 In B.
v B, 42 L Jo 402, the Court accepted the evidence of a wife as to the pae of a ten months child, inspite of the unanimous opinion of several la A tribunal should not accept the mere untested opinion of experts in ference to direct and positive testimony as to facts Poynton v P, 37 L T 54; Arthur v. Mc Methan, (1895) A C 310, Newton v. Ricketts, 9 A. L. J
The evidence of a skilled witness, however eminent, as to what he thinks may may not have taken place under a particular combination of circumstances taken by his own side Besides it must be remembered that an expert called by one simply and solely because it may be ascertained that he views favourable to his interest. Hari Singh v Lachmi Devi, 3 Lah L 110-59 Ind Cas 220; Boisagomoff v Nahapiet, 29 O 32 Where the called expert witnesses give no data in support of their opinions opinions should be rejected Purbhu v Secretary of State, A. L. R. 18 Ind L 364. An opinion of an expert witness not based on any well known inexorable laws of nature cannot be taken as decisive especially where the direct evidence opposed to it. Mansel v Emperor, 96 Ind. Cas. 641-27 L J 977-A I R 1926 Lah 313 See also A. I R 1923 Pat. 563-161 Ind C 698 "I am convinced" says Prof. Wigmore "that the belief that such person must be the best witness, is false, at least as a generalization. Should have had such experience with expert witnesses, and most of us have observed that they often give false evidence because they treat the matter in terms of their own interest and are convinced that things must be according to the principles of their trade However the event shapes itself inally implies their own apprehensions

Every witness must be produced at trial, unless and until it is proved either to be actually impossible to produce him or to be difficult to do so, that it is under the circumstances such as as such as those to which

Gills v Emperor, 2 O W. N. 377-12 O. L. J. 497-63 Ind. Cas. 1232-A I R. 1925 Oudh 616. But it is not satisfactory to examine the expert witness on commission and not in the presence of the accused. The evidence of an expert has always to be carefully weighed but, when given commission, its value is considerably reduced. Nur Din v. Emperor, 10 Lah. S. L. J. 235=108 Ind. Cas. 369=29 Cr. L. J. 377=A. I. R. 1928 Lah 533

the person whose medical witness who
as to the nature of t
In re K. Venkatar
Code does not precl witness, that has elucidation, Raghunath

case the certificate by itself is not a person who gave it as a wit

L. R. 893=47 B 74=A
Cr. L. J. 339. See also Sa 80. The certificate of a in the form prescribed in th His report on a case by in evidence without proof of the truth of its contents : Raghunath v. Aurseong.
Municipality, 76 Ind. Cas 394

Deposition of Medical witness. Section 509 of the Criminal Procedure Code lays down :—“(1) The deposition of a Civil Surgeon or other medical witness, taken taken on con
enquiry trial

is deposition” S. 509 does not witness admissible at the trial before the Court of Sessions it should be recorded by the Magistrate who is even in the absence of the witness. 38 Ind. Cas 761=19 Cr. L. J. 280

Report of chemical examiner. Any document purporting to be a report under the hand of any Chemical Examiner or Assistant Chemical Examiner to Government upon any matter or thing duly submitted to him for examination or analysis and report in the course of any proceeding under this Code, may be used as evidence in any enquiry ; trial or other proceeding under this Code.
(s. 510 Cr. Pro. Code).

S. 45

The report of a chemical the signature of the Examiner App 112=15 W. R. 49; 2 We before the institution of proc in person 50 Ind Cas 26=20 Cr. L J 266 Chemical examiner's t does not require formal proof, but it must be tendered as evidence and such It can not for the first time be used in appeal 21 A L J 859=53 Cas 904, but see 98 Ind Cas 177=5 Bur L J. 100=A I R 1926 Rang Failure by prosecution to adduce evidence connecting the parcels with the blood stained clothes which reached the Chemical Examiner with Cas 485=28 C. W N 561.

Report of experts The reports of experts are not legal evidence and are examined by parties in respect of 7=20 P. L R 125, 15 C. W N 728 Op t evidence 76 Ind Cas. 425=1 Rang Expert opinion given for the purposes of a previous suit is not evidence and its evidential value is very little 110 Ind Cas 810=A. I R 1 Lah 921

Palm impressions Palm impressions are akin to finger impressions expert evidence relating thereto should on the whole be admitted rather excluded, to be weighed by the Court and the jury for whatever it is worth Emperor v Babu Lal 52 B 223=29 Cr. L J 410=30 Bom L R 321=195 Cas 508=A. I R 1928 Bom 158

invol

exper

stated by the Supreme Court of Ohio in Clark v State, 13 Ohio. + "Medical testimony is of too much importance to be disregarded When de with caution, and without bias in favor speculation and favourite theory, it t even intelligent juries from following a on inconsistent and unsound principles and received with utmost caution, and, like the opinions of neg acquaintances, should be regarded as of little weight if not well reasons of facts that admit of no misconstructions, and supported by which the judgment of

Qualifications of a medical witness. If the judge be satisfied that witness is competent to give an inference helpful to the tribunal, it is essential that he should be able to produce a diploma to be engaged in practice or even to h The rule is in case of a specialist. the witness, th the fact as to wh however must ask

in murder, the defence was insanity, the judges were all of opinion, such as opinion on the very point which the jury were to decide, viz, whether, from other testimony given in the case, the act charged was, in his opinion an act of insanity. Wright, R & Ry 456, 1831, on the authority of which Park B owed a medical man, who had heard a trial for cutting and maiming, to be owed symptoms of insanity

it in Mc Naughton, 10 Cl & F 2 Russ Cr 2262 (h) See the words of the Judge's answers. In T Mason, 7 Cr A. R 67=76 J P 184=T. L. II 120 (1911) murder it was held that an expert who has not seen the body, but has heard its condition described by the witnesses in their evidence, may state his opinion that death was not self inflicted. Roscoe Cr Ev p 170, Reg v Newton, Shrewsbury Spring C Sess Pap 374; Doe d Bambridge v on, 1b 149, Sills v Brown, 11 C & P 455. "A reasonable principle" says William Wills such, shall be permitted to testify only such matters of professional knowledge or experience as have come within to such proved, so that testing ness should be. "Assuming an injury of such and such a kind to have been inflicted, what is your opinion as to the nature of the weapon by which it was possibly or probably inflicted" Rogham v Empress 9 C 455 It is a settled question entitled to be laid by Merway, 10 an L. II 907 (913) For questions to be put to medical witnesses, vide Acharian's Wills' Cr Ev App II

The most legitimate, valuable and wonderful application of expert evidence on charge of poisoning where poison is extracted from corpse by means of chemical analysis Best Ev § 514

Medical Inferences—Probative weight Many considerations may, as a natural, affect the weight in evidence accorded to the inference of a recently made disease which is drawn upon the truth of the statements made to him by the patient or by others is regarded as inspiring, to a certain extent, merely the weight of his testimony, either a jury nor the trial judge is presumed to have such technical knowledge as may upon the improbability of an examination can those reached by witness toward the way, e g that the witness is interested to support his present contention in other connections Chamberlayne & El § 2030

Medical I

In many instances This being so; they

it the round about way of stating that the corroboration or rebuttal. The illustrations for this purpose, res inter alios acta is evitable. Nort Ev p 225 So this section embodies a general rule which says down that evidence of collateral facts cannot be received. Vide Taylor Ev 37. For purposes of corroboration, the proponent of the inference commonly makes use of the text book statements at the stage of examination in-chief sting by means of them usually takes place on cross examination. Chamber opponent uses it to enhance and corroborate the force of what his expert says is right of a proponent, who has submitted an inference, conclusion or judgment of a skilled witness to corroborate within reasonable limits, its proba-tive effect by showing the sound nature of the reasoning upon which it is based seems unquestionable. Ibid § 2528. The authority of the text writer can not be used as proof that the statements contained in the work are true. The Hearsay rule forbids the use of the declarations in their assertive capacity. At is the same as that which it has on direct. In other words the statements contained into employing in their probative capacity. This result the judge may attempt to reach by means of the negative proposition; and on a question of disputed paternity, after proving as a matter of science, that children are apt to inherit the features or general appearance of their parents, evidence will be received of personal resemblance between the party in question and his alleged father.

by ss. 57 and 60
filled an expert

that madness is often of an hereditary character, evidence tending to show that none of the defendant's ancestors or near relations had been insane, would be admissible in support of the negative proposition; and on a question of disputed paternity, after proving as a matter of science, that children are apt to inherit
the features or general appearance of their parents, evidence will be received of personal resemblance between the party in question and his alleged father.

- S. 47. Bagot v Bagot, 1 L R Ir 308, Tay Lv (9th Ed) § 337. An expert witness himself paralysed in the arm and leg may support his opinion as to the effect of such paralysis by testifying to its effect on himself Chicago R R v Lambert, 119 Ill 255 (Am)

an 157

up of a harbour, and evidence of the wall, proof that the embankments, had begun to be choked about the same time as the harbour question, was admitted, as such evidence served to elucidate the real question.

As Smeaton's (the expert) opinion, but as to harbours in which there are embankments, we think it was improper, since litum litu resolutum."

47. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the person by whom any document was written or signed, the opinion of any person acquainted with the handwriting of the person by whom it is supposed to be written or signed that it was or was not written or signed by that person, is a relevant fact.

Explanation—A person is said to be acquainted with the handwriting of another person when he has seen that person write or when he has received documents purporting to be written by that person in answer to documents written by himself or under his authority and addressed to that person, or when, in the ordinary course of business, documents, purporting to be written by the person have been habitually submitted to him.

Illustrations.

The question is, whether a given letter is in the handwriting of a merchant in London.

B is a merchant in Calcutta, who has written letters addressed to A and received letters purporting to be written by him. C is B's clerk, whose duty it was to examine and file of B's correspondence. D is B's broker, to whom B habitually submitted the letters purporting to be written by A for the purpose of advising with him thereon.

The opinions of B, C and D on the question whether the letter is in the handwriting of A are relevant, though neither C nor D ever saw A write.

Principle

distinct kinds

the act of writing

act, secondly, evidence of the kind of handwriting, the establishment mode, there is always an inference from the type to the person.

of an inference. The difficulty has not been over the relevancy of the writing traits to show the authorship of writing but over the mode of eliciting them by circumstantial evidence, and that is by examining one or cause when the specimens to be used are themselves before the jury, they may impute them to form an opinion as to the standard or type of writing, and take the opinion of a person of ordinary experience only, based upon these specimens, being no better than that of the jury themselves, is not needed, and excluded by the opinion rule, and hence the only persons whose aid need be used in studying these standards are those who have some special experience in and above that of the jury. Thus, we see whether the person whose aid we skill not possessed by the jury."

"The rule as to the proof of handwriting, where the witness has not been in question may be stated generally that the party write on some former occasions and the transactions have taken place between them to have been written or signed by the party in question, the witness is supposed to know the handwriting, not so much of the manner in specimens, but to the general character of the writing, which is impressed on the mind as the involuntary and unconscious result of constitution, habit, or other permanent cause, and is therefore itself permanent. And we best acquire a mainly, but in his natural manner." Per Coleridge J. in Doe v. Bucknall, 5 A. & E. 703.

the latter is to be regarded as genuinely an instance of the type in question.

S. 47. How to evidence the type of specimens—is a different matter. the mode of proving it by testi- that he is acquainted with the typ situation the witness (1) must of writing with which the adequacy of this knowl- ness properly claim that opportunities of observation have been such as to give him a fair knowl- of the general type or character of the person's hand. Wigmore § 693 ordinary methods of proving handwritings are (1) calling as a witness a person who wrote the document or saw it written, or who is qualified to express hand. This section deals with opinion evidence of non expert witness to prove handwriting. A person is considered qualified to testify to handwriting when he has seen the person whose handwriting is in question (1) when (2) in the ordinary course of business, has become familiar with such person's handwriting through the receipt of communications purporting to be written by him, or (3) when in the ordinary course of business, documents purporting to be written by that person have been habitually submitted to him. McKelvey's Cr § 145 This section lays down another real exception to the rule excluding hearsay evidence. The reason for the exception is that unless a signature or writing has been made in the presence of a witness who can afterwards identify it, the only possible proof of handwriting is opinion evidence, and opinion evidence of person specially qualified to testify. We have thus in proof of handwriting the same two classes of expert testimony which have been before referred to,—that which is based on observation and that which is based on special training, or education upon a particular branch. There is some difference of opinion in the authorities as to just how much familiarity from observation will suffice. The general rule has been once specially qualifies a person. Varian, 54 N Y 395; Tait § 181

21 Wend (N Y) 557

There should be some control of the mark is not legal, it is not & Ma 51C; Wigmore § 693

his signature signature
R I. 443; R
everything (Am); Sayo

initial amounts to a Re Emerson, U L
underwriting includes Webster, 5 Cush 301 either "mark" can

S,

saw

ethor vs v

writing, we th
with his hand,

When he has seen the person write—Ex visu Scriptoris—A person is acquainted with the handwriting of another when he has seen that person write whether often or seldom, much or little, recently or long ago Lauson Op & Exp Ev Rule 47 In De La Motte's Case, which took place in 1871, Mr Justice Buller said to the jury "The counsel on the part of the prisoner has just objected that similitude of handwriting is no evidence They certainly are right in the argument, but the objection does not apply to this case Similitude of body that has nce is made

s, but that is the papers

which you have heard read; they have all been proved by persons who were adnowledge they say they believe the letters and papers are of his handwriting That, gentlemen is the only evidence that can be given of handwriting; except it happens that there be a person who saw the prisoner actually write the papers" Hensdy's Case, 10 How St Tr 1341 In Hoper v Ashley, 15 Ala rule that seeing the per Wigmore § 694 Garrells v

William v Warrall, 8
Warren v. Anderson, 8 Sc seen him subsequent and if he ht go to the

ture of all & L 793,

S.

Patteson J^r said: "All evidence of handwriting, except where the witness sees ■ belief which a an exemplar in vledge may have

13 W. R 191

The question is whether a certain paper was written by T W, who has not seen T write for nineteen years, is called, and his testimony is received Horne Toole's Case, 25 How St 1r 71, see also Warren v Anderson, 8 Scott 384, where the witness has seen the writer to write ten years before. So in Smith
v. Walton, 8 Gill 18 (Am) a witness was allowed to depose after six years. In that case the Court observes "The impression made on the mind of a witness who has seen ■ party write his name only in a single instance may be exceedingly faint and imperfect, but it is nevertheless testimony, provided the witness more vivid and lasting impression from the examination of a single signature

—an assumption is acquired after comes important

fect that he had known the plaintiff for fourteen or fifteen years, did not know whether he had ever seen her write; corresponded with her about fourteen years ago, received about a dozen letters in answer to his own, with her name signed to them; had received no letters recently, had some of the letters with her. The question was then propounded to him: From your knowledge of her I you know
 to be asked,
 did not know

1 W. Bl. 384, per Lord Mansfield; Barnes v Trompowsky, 7 T R 285 Owenston v. Wilson, 11 C & K 1; Murcia v Wolfshagen, 2 C & K 741; Turner's Case, 3 Cr App 103, 155 = (1910) 1 K B 346 In the last mentioned case a document of consent signed by the Director of Public Prosecutions was put in In for ou-
 by just dy,
 at
 for habit of oh any ndent's
 In the math y

of K was clearly competent The witness testified that he had corresponded with the merchant in New York whose signature was to be proved, by writing to him, and receiving letters from him, and in this way he had acquired a knowledge of his signature The objection was, the witness had not shown himself qualified to speak of it It is within one of the above modes stated whereby the competent knowledge may be acquired, and the witness professed that in that way he had acquired his knowledge of his operations."

When in the ordinary course of business, documents purporting to be written etc—Ex Scriptio Olim Visis A person is acquainted with the hand writing of another when, in the ordinary course of business, writings purporting to be written by that person have passed through his hands Berg v Peterson, 49 Minn 420 (Am), Pottle v Rainey, 98 N C 513 (Am) "The clerk" as Lord Denman remarked in Doe v Suckermore, 5 Ad & El 703, "who con-

S. 47

by the supposed writer of the paper in question' In Tidford v Knott, (2 Jo¹ Cas 214) it was held that the signature of a person who had been in the habit of signing bank bills, and believed the signature to be his, was sufficient to make the plaintiff's notes, all of which, except one, were signed with his signature to them, untrue. If, then the handwriting, being right to have been a handwriting if he had answered that question affirmatively, then the receipts should have been received in evidence" Lauson Expt & Op. Ev p 343 Where the genuineness of signatures to bank bills is disputed, the evidence of bank officers, the hands of whose hands similar bills pass daily, is obviously of highest value.

not connected with the bank, but who have frequently received and cashed bills purporting to be issued by it, and who have cashed such bills at the bank are competent to testify to the signatures of the cashier and president on bills alleged to be forgeries. Com v American Case, "that no cashier and cashier habit of receiving sound one been in the

to be acquainted official position
is settled

he can testify by letter, although he has never seen him write as he has knowledge in one of the

of knowledge of the party's handwriting which enable him to give his opinion as to the genuineness he should be permitted to give to the jury his opinion as to the subject." The case of the State of Ohio v. The Ohio & Erie Canal Co. recorder in the office become Geoming

N. C. 112); a jailor through whose hands letters signed by a prisoner received from him to parties out side have passed, may, from this circumstance alone, form a sufficient knowledge of the prisoner's handwriting State v. Hastings, 53 N. H. 450; Lawson Expt & Op Ev 399 In order to prove the handwriting or signature of another person one must show that he is acquainted

Emperoi v Pande, 27 Bom L R 1031=89 Ind Cas 1042=26 Cr L J. 1474=
A. I. R 1923 Bom 429

N Y 393.

Signature of a Partnership firm A witness may be acquainted with the signature of a firm without being able to identify the handwriting of either or any partner Gordon v Price, 10 Ired 385 "It is of no consequence that the

the witness The substance witness has drawn the inference that they were made by one and the same individual The strength of his belief will depend on the greater or less degree of similarity He can only testify to his own state of mind on this question. The

S. 47.

belief was properly before he could not so understood by thereby to limit to say that the testimony of a p that he is of opinion, or that he thinks, the paper is genuine, yet, as a step further when the witness will only state that the handwriting is like a statement which may be perfectly true, but yet, within the knowledge of the witness, the paper might have been written by an utter stranger. T. v. J. § 1868

Knowledge of handwriting acquired for the purpose of testifying. Knowledge of handwriting, acquired for where it is clear that there was no motive to manufacture testimony. Reese v. Ind 635 (Am); Lawson Expert & Op Ev Rule 54 The question at a trial was as to the handwriting of A B was offered as a witness. It appeared that previous to the trial, A had written his name for the purpose of showing B, his mark. Esp 15 because, being common in writing letter, handwriting since the controversy on the subject arose. To this general rule can be taken Chamberlayne's Ev § 2198; see also R. v. Rickard, 13 Cr R 140, Stranger v. Seale, 1 Esp 14; Fitzwater Peetrage, 10 C. & F 193, Per Suchmore, 6 A & E 703 insufficient to qualify him. Henderson v. Bank of Montgomery, 22 Lauson Expert & Op Ev. rule 56 In proof of a document a witness who he was acquainted with the handwriting of the writer, but he was not a legal examination-in-chief any question which would elicit any of the several indicated in the explanation to section 47 of the Indian Evidence Act 1872. The witness was not cross-examined in the point, neither was he. St. v. L.

proof
burden

was

Ham

the

as it stands. Taylor § 1863 "It is a principle of the law in this country also, expedient that the matters referred to the handwriting. Per Jenkins C J in Sanlarrue v. ...

Therefore, where the witness has not been questioned on the trial as to his means of knowing a certain handwriting, no objection to the want of qualifications so to testify can be made on appeal. Ibid; Berryman v Dahlgren, 6 Rob 188, Smith v Walton, 8 Gill 81. So the evidence of a witness contained in a deposition that he knows a certain paper to be in the handwriting of a party is sufficient, on appeal, where the opposite party has declined to cross-examine as to his means of knowledge. Huttner v Gould, 8 Walls, 485. So where the nce The testimony of one witness to a sign the instrument, and whose credi-the similarity and likeness to signatures of his which they have seen. Such features or their expression remain as we have been accustomed to see them. We know the face, though derangement has imparted to it a new appearance, or when distorted by pain or disfigured by wounds and presented in an entire 3 the memory. The and trees, and to dis-general class. We

S.

Ev 332.

daily meet those who, with precise kind of fruit it will bear although, if questioned, they between the several species. We judge of writings, as of other things, by its individual character as a whole. We must take the opinion of those witnesses altogether, and judge of their testimony as under all the circumstances they shall appear entitled to weight, from their opportunity of knowing the defendant's handwriting, and your estimate of their skill and judgment.
 A cashier of a bank is entitled to no more credit than any other person of equal skill." The jury found for the plaintiff. Lawson, Exr & Op
 Ev. 330.

- S. 48. 48 When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any general custom or right of opinion, as to the existence of such custom, when relevant or right, of persons who would be likely to know of its existence if it existed, are relevant.

Explanation.—The expression “general custom or right” includes customs or right common to any considerable class of persons.

Illustration

gation no better evidence can be obtained, or the facts cannot be presented to the tribunal Lauson, Op & Expert L.R. Rule 63 frequently collective where a combination of the known elements may be pressed in the form of a conclusion or inference. Such inference is not are, so to speak, the depositories of the customary law just as the depositories of the general law Jag Mohan Das v Ma L.R. 528 (543)

Scope of the section In Bai D. L.R. 10 B 43 (59) It is said “Mere opinion evidence is not sufficient. Custom must be proved by specific evidence. It failed to adduce (Rahmat Bai v Akbar Khan, 1 A 441) But in a later case, a tribal or family custom excluding a daughter or sister from inheritance in favour of a collateral may be proved by general evidence as to its existence among members of the tribe or family who would naturally be cognizant of its existence and its operation. In such cases, the instances need not be numerous.

who would be likely to know of its existence, if it existed, are relevant, but such opinions must be given by witnesses who give them as facts. Maung On v Maung Shus Bum 1 L. B. R. 80, Hudray v Chandra L.R. 1921 Oudh 89—S. O. W. N. 6 So the statements made by persons who are in a position to know of the existence of a custom or usage in the relevant area are admissible under this section. Sariatullah v Pran Nath, 26 C. L. J. 101 on the existence of a custom.

excluding daughters and papers, directed to be received of this kind of under s 35 of the Evidence Act, though they had been prepared by the settlement S. 4

most important document contained in the official records relating to the village of inheritance, or, under section 48 as the record of opinion is to the existence it" So their Lordships think who holds that opinion should sed on hearsay Vide Per Lord

Dary in Gurudhuaya v. Suparandhuaya, 23 A 37-27 I A 238 supra. So according to their Lordships admissible in evidence
tion of the section can construction of the words lay down certain well is admissible. But these sections are not in any way exceptions to section 60 of the Evidence Act, which lays down that if it refers to an opinion or to the grounds on which that opinion is held it must be the evidence of the person

M L T. 1-5 A L J
and customs, public
in evidence Section in cases in which the declarant cannot be brought before the Court, whether in consequence of death or from other cause This section refers only to general has personally known the right or custom exercised as a matter of fact Custom is not a matter to be submitted to the senses It is made up of an aggregated repetition of the same though a bare opinion is worth data on which it is founded; to be the limits of a village or of exclusion of others, a right roads, or plant trees, rights of common and the like, will Not Ex 227

Customs A custom is a particular rule which had existed either actually obtained the force of law in not consistent with the general od, 6 Q B 50, Halsbury Vol X finite limited locality It may prior, 4 Burr. 2305 For further annotations, vide p 211 supra

S. 49.

Right "It may be difficult, perhaps to define precisely the scope of the word 'right' but I think it was here intended to include those properties of an incorporeal nature, which in legal phraseology are generally called rights."

6 C 171 (F B) at p 185 In the same case Jackson J said "It seems to a very wide interpretation to the has been said that, in section 13 of refer to incorporeal rights only, in ss 32 and 48, where the same word occurs in conjunction with the 'custom' it has been used in that sense. In the first place, it is by no means clear that ss to conceive that in the confined to that class only". See also Tippu Khan v. Rajani, 2 C 11 (F B), Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari, 12 A 1 (F B), Rajani v. Bapu, 10 B 439; Lakshman v. Anrit, 24 B 591; Ramdas v. Ajpari, 12 M 1; Venkatasami v. Venkataradda, 15 M. 12; Vythilinga v. Venkatacharya, 16 M. 1.

Person who would be likely to know The opinion must be of the person who are likely to know of its existence if it existed Jugmohandas v. M, 10 B 528 (542) In Sariatullah v. Prannath Nandi, 26 C 184, the question whether occupancy right was transferable by custom In deciding whether competent to prove customs the Court observed "We in the present case also the to know of the existence of

and I think that the opinion is out by the learned Judges under custom Nort Ev 227. In Wright v. Tatham, 7 A & E 227, 5 Cl & F. 720, Collman J. asked: "Where boundary is proved by custom what is the guarantee for a man?" Mr. Steel replied: "The public

v. Sparks, 1 M. & S 690, per Baley J.

Opinion as to usages, tenets, etc., when relevant

49. When the Court has to form an opinion as to—the usages and tenets of any body of men or family, the constitution and government of any religious or charitable foundation, or the meaning of words or terms used in particular districts or by particular classes of people, S. 49 the opinions of persons having special means of knowledge thereon, are relevant facts.

Principle The matters mentioned in this section can only be proved by persons having special means of knowledge.

Scope of the Section The kind of evidence contemplated by this section must be the expression of opinion based on personal knowledge, and not the repetition of hearsay.

the existence of a fact information derived from deceased persons Gurudhuaya v Suparandhuaya, 23 A. 37-5 C. W. N. 33 (P. C.)=27 I. A. 238=10 M. L. J. 267 (P. C.)=2 Bom. L. R. 831 Where a certain member of a family accepted a certain interpretation of a clause in Wajib-ul arz the fact is admissible in evidence as to how a custom applying to the family is interpreted by members of that family. Sharfuddin v Niamut Ali 87 Ind. Cas. 8-A I. R. 1925 Oudh. 688 Opinion omitting any reference to the legal effect. Wigmore § 1954 But the mere assertion of a "custom" does not involve opinion Conner v R Co, 148 Ind.

R 6 O. 101.

The effect is to be determined by the Court. Hoskins v Warren, 115 Mass. 514, 535, "The inquiry is not after the opinion of traders and merchants in respect to the law upon a given question, but after the evidence of a fact, to wit the usage or practice in the course of mercantile business" Allen v Merchant's Bank, 16 Wend. N. Y. 482, 488 So a party may examine witnesses to prove a particular course of facts, but not to show what the law is. 145 (149) It is sometimes said that a specific instances, or must at least a statement of the general practice.

Lord Mansfield and later Judges, Edie v East India Co, 1 W. Bl. 295 (297), 2 Burr 1216 (1222), Mansfield L. C. J. said "Many witnesses were examined by defendants to prove this

Denson, 7 C. & P. 711 (714) Tindal C. J. observed "Is there any general course of business? Let your mind revolve over instances I am not asking you whether it is just and proper, but whether there is any prevailing course of business." "But" says Prof. Wigmore "there is no rule of exclusion. The usage is itself a fact, and the opinion rule does not treat such testimony as an inference from data which can be adequately stated without the inference." Wigmore § 1954 This view is in accord with the opinion of Lord Mansfield, in Camden v Couley, 1 W. Bl. 417, where he ruled that insurance brokers and others might be examined as to the general opinion and understanding of the persons concerned in trade, though they knew no particular instance in the fact, upon which such opinion was founded. So the evidence of a well qualified witness as regards a trade usage, who could not state individual cases is admitted inasmuch as the factum probandum is not a single isolated act or

- S. 49. occurrence, but the result or conclusion derived from a series of facts or circumstances, creating and establishing in the mind of the witness a notion or belief of the complex whole. Nicherson 13 All Miss 351; Wignor of a witness as regards trade usage section 13, specific instances of usage this section all usages of trade and persons having special means of knowledge. 1 Sm L C 546.

long

able.

316, lished

J. 240; Lal Gajen

W R (1864) 20

this section it can be

ame. Family custom includes the custom of descent in a family and other customary Tenets of any body of men. This will include any opinion, dogma, or doctrine which is held or maintained as truth. It will include religion, politics, science, etc. Nort Ev. p 228.

The constitution and government of any religious or charitable foundation. The opinions of constitution and, variant under this

Thus in Shore v early part of the eighteenth century, had, in the deed of grant, and objects of her munificence as 'Godly preachers of Christ's Holy Gospel' it became necessary to determine a few years ago what persons were

(308) where the grant of land was for a meeting house, the worship and service of God. The trustees and the majority of the congregation, having later ceased to be Trinitarian in belief a bill to rescind

v Briggs, 2 Car. & P 525; "in the Month of October" Peake, 41 Barrist & Bench 710 "highly honoured" Laurie, 17 Taunt 7 Perrin, 2 conv (v)

unless it comes from persons who are shown to have

There is thus analogy between opinion evidence under this section and hearsay evidence of custom based on hearsay. Vide Per Parke B in Crease v. Barrett, 1 Cr. M. & R. 929, per Parke B. S.

50. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the Opinion on relationship, when relevant relationship of one person to another, the opinion, expressed by conduct, as to the existence of such relationship, of any person who, as a member of the family or otherwise, has special means of knowledge on the subject, is a relevant fact :

Provided that such opinion shall not be sufficient to prove a marriage in proceedings under the Indian Divorce Act*, or in prosecutions under section 494, 495, 497 or 498 of the Indian Penal Code†.

Illustrations.

(a) The question is, whether A and B were married.

The fact that they were usually received and treated by their friends as husband and wife, is relevant

(b) The question is, whether A was the legitimate son of B. The fact that A was always treated as such by members of the family, is relevant Principle The question of presumption of relationship by conduct of parties often arises in cases of marriage and legitimacy. When the fact of marriage is in issue, subsequent conduct of the man and woman, said to have been the parties to it, is receivable to evidence the marriage. This conduct is traditionally spoken of as "habit", and this common source of proof, with the reputation evidence which usually accompanies it, has come to be known by the phrase "habit and repute". The logical nature of the argument indicates it plainly to fall under the principle, that from the conduct of the man and the woman as married persons may be inferred their firm belief that they were at some prior time made husband and wife, and from this belief may be inferred

Scope of the section This section is taken from section 649 of Taylor which is as follows: "Next, family conduct,—such as the tacit recognition of relationship, and the distribution and devolution of property,—is frequently received as evidence from which opinion and belief of the family may be inferred, as resting ultimately on the same basis as evidence of family tradition. For, since the principal question in pedigree cases turns on the parentage or descent of an individual, it is obviously material, in order to resolve this question, to ascertain how he was treated and acknowledged by those who sustained towards him any relations of blood or of affinity." The presumption in favour of wedlock is another instance of the rule omnia presumuntur rite esse acta (all things are presumed to be rightly and solemnly done) Poz v. Bearblock, 17 Ch D 499. It has its own special maxim semper presumitur pro matrimonio

"By the
as man
there is a
of profess

50 child should be severed in two parts, and that each take half; the true mother decided, upon that, that the child was hers? Not, perhaps that mere declarations, may be made for a temporary purpose (in that case both women made declarations, and one of course false declarations); but it teaches that the conduct of a parent, the feeling a parent—those feelings being inferred from such conduct—afford evidence assisting us in arriving at a right conclusion as to the truth of the controversy. It has been argued at the bar that mere declarations of ground for inference, for it comes from the least suspicious source, that the very individuals who are the most interested to give a different test in If there ever was a case where circumstantial evidence of this description admissible, it is this. In the same case ment is sufficient evidence, if not rebut Wigmore § 269 So also the concealment husband Hargrave v Hargrave, 2 C & D 101 such child by the person who, at the time of its conception, was living in the of adultery with the mother and the fact that the child and its mother the family appear to have been mentioned in the Will, and the taken of such person is strong evidence to show, either that he was not the testator (the Will) (Tracey v

W. N 130 (P C)

conduct of parties is very true Mullangi v Venkataswami 1851 515 Such evidence is also Maharaja Perloo v Mahara

§ C. 626 P C - 1 C L R 113

Proviso The proviso is inserted, because in divorce, a husband and wife cases the marriage must be strictly proved, that is, by the evidence of a person who was present at the marriage, or by the production of the register, or such other record as the law of the country, or a class, may provide. Nort Ev 101 34-101 34-101 bigamy proof of second marriage is U S. v. Miles, 103 U S 301 But Com. v. Jackson, 11 Bush. (Ky) 679 an indictment or a civil action, the case for the prosecution is not made out S. 5

& W. 265; Roscoe Cr.
of the marriage, even Williams v. Williams, in Morris v. Miller,

: hat case the opinion of
to support an action or criminal conversation, there must not be proof of an actual marriage; the act was, they were married at Manfair Chapel; the register or books could not plaintiff's power, (2) it was not an actual ceremonial marriage, Lord action . . . Perhaps there need not be strict proof from the register, or by a person present, but strong evidence must be had of the fact,—as by a person present at the wedding dinner, if the register be burnt and the person and clerk as before. But an action for criminal conversation has a mixture of penal purpose by they are not an action #

1, 195 From clear that this
ses of cases,

namely (1) where the charge is a criminal one and (2) in the civil action of f of a marriage in fact" or actual
c. either by the register containing of parson clerk or some other person time, the action of criminal conversation occupied a far more prominent position and was therefore more liable to abuse. II ymore § 2031. Nevertheless the rule

S. 50. of law as laid down by Lord Mansfield in the above two cases is applied in common law of England Catherwood v. Castle, 13 M & W 200 (1846) 11 Ex 116 days has cient to prove a marriage in a prosecution for bigamy or in procuring a divorce, or in a petition for damages against an adulterer. But it is to put it too broadly. The marriage and subsequent ceremony upon the prosecution is based certainly cannot be so proved but it may be another marriage becomes material in such prosecution, and such marriage certainly be proved by a reputation, although it is proving a marriage prosecution for bigamy. Thus in the case of R v. Wilson, 3 F & 12 the prisoner pleaded that when she went through the first ceremony and

24 & 25 Vict C 100, § 57, Stat 20 & 21 Vic C 85 § 33 These exceptions rest on the ground that such proceedings, being of a penal nature require the strictest proof, and a further reason for the exception in the cases of another, as well as the injury to the progeny by placing them without rights of legitimate children. Now this deception and to be more cautious and tender in favour of an opponent in a criminal charge in which the opponent has placed himself on a level of meanness below that of the least meritorious opponent in any civil case. Wigmore § 2081.

Under the proviso to this section, in proceedings of the kind specified, the rule is not to be applied by itself.

in the ordinary way, i.e., by other and more reliable evidence than the mere opinion of a person who, as a member of the family or otherwise, has special means of knowledge. Queen Empress v. Subbarao, 9 M 921 572 This is in accordance with the principle that strict proof is required in all criminal cases. Empress v. Kallu, 5 A 233 = 1 W 1 Empress v. Plambar, 5 C 566. But that principle is not applied inasmuch as in criminal cases a rule has grown up that the presumption is beyond a reasonable doubt. Wigmore §§ 4051, 2437. But according to is section in all prosecutions for adultery under s. 497 Penal Code, the marriage must be strictly proved. Gopal v. Emperor, 4 Bur. L. J. 107 = I. R. 1925 Rang. 328. So the existence of a legal marriage has to be

S. 5

tion under s. 497, Penal Code the actual fact of the marriage between the rem Chand v. Hira, A. J. R. 1927 B. 594.

51. Whenever the opinion of any living person is relevant, the grounds of opinion, the grounds on which such opinion is based are also relevant.

Illustration.

An expert may give an account of experiments performed by him for the purpose of forming his opinion.

Principle "The mere opinions of the witnesses are entitled to little or no regard, unless they are supported by good warrant them in the opinion of the jury. Exclusive, the opinions of the witnesses are weighty. Harrison v. Rouan, 3 Wash. C. C. 587. "Opinion is no evidence, without assigning the reason for such opinion." Per Duncan J. in Rambler v. Tryon, S. & R. 94; Wigmore § 1917.

Scope of the section. In all cases in which opinion of experts are receivable, the grounds or reasoning upon which such opinion is based may also be required into Phip Ev 4th Ed. 362; Gost of Bombay v. Merwanji, 10 Bom.

S. 51. that case the Court observed, "The ground on which an expert, a Court that the witness should be permitted to explain the ground is and of his opinion to the Court and jury, they may readily perceive the force reasoning, the soundness or fallacy of his logic, and therefore in a capacity to give an opinion on the subject and the correctness of his taken to be true because the witness has stated that he founds them, but this is quite a mistake. In order to obtain facts the opinion

all questions of fact upon competent evidence laid before them of science they may be aided by the more exact observation and experience of the trained expert." Lauson Expert & Op Ac pp 21-22

CHARACTER WHEN RELEVANT.

it is said of a person that he bears a good reputation, mean

Chamberlayne's S. 5
 racter which is a
 on person, which meaning of the position in this, that the latter is easily moveable, the former of longer ration and more difficult to be moved' I may notice that habit is formed or passion, and that this repetition Metaphysics Vol I p 178 Habit

Chamberlayne's Ev § 3263

Act In explanation to section 55, the cter" includes both reputation and disposithat actual character" says Prof Wigmore and the latter is merely evidence to prove common use of the word 'character' in the hers, especially the popular opinion, whether favourable or the reverse Standard Dictionary "Character lives in a man, reputation outside him" Holland, Gold Idol, C 19 p 219 "Character is like an inward and spiritual vice of which reputation is, or should be the outward and visible sign" of opinion arising from the deportment of a man in society As a man's deportment, good, or bad, necessarily produces one circle without another, and so extends itself till it unites in one general opinion, that general opinion is allowed to be given in evidence" State v Lanton, 76 N C 216; Burr Jones § 153.

Scope of Sections 52 to 55 The framer of the Act has dealt with these sections under the heading 'character when relevant.' But in the explanation of section 55 he has indicated how the character of a person can be evidenced We have character includes both erroneous. Character and cases the term "general But there are two distinct common use of one word

S. 52. for two ideas has caused confusion. (1) Is a person's disposition—or group of traits, or the sum of his traits—relevant and admissible for purposes? (2) Whenever it is so admissible as an evidentiary fact: becomes in its turn a proper first question is essentially in to exclude relevant character entirely different quarter, it has nothing to do with character, as an ev fact, but with the mode of proving character, assuming it to be provable either as an evidentiary fact or as an issue. Wigmore § far as the first point is concerned, character is offered as an ev fact—as a basis for an inference as to conduct—in section 52, 53 may also be a fact in issue (Vide explanation in the latter contingency, character not ut character in the sense of "general character" or "reputation" may also be a fact in issue, as in the case of a criminal case, proof of that character is always admissible. Taylor Best § 258. So also whenever character is relevant as a basis of an inference (than the inference of conduct), it is admissible without a Chamberlayne's Ev § 3307. But when a party's character is required proved not as a fact in issue but as an evidentiary fact to prove conduct generally excluded. So the general rule is that from a party's character conduct can not be presumed. So in civil cases a party's character as an evidentiary fact is wholly excluded. Such evidence can be given only in cases, where the amount of damage.

good character has been once established. But the bad character of a party in a criminal case may also be a fact in issue. In such a case of course, evidence of his bad character is always admissible. These are the questions which are essentially one of relevancy. Now we come to the second phase of the question: how the character is to be evidenced. Two special problems arise: (1) Opinion; (2) Hearsay, on what observations of the conduct of the person under peculiar circumstances. (1) A man the estimated character, or reputation, of being honest, or of being cruel, or of being passionate, or humane, or cruel—this general character, as it is called, is also a fact; it is the opinion which those who are acquainted with him have proved in respect to his several traits of character. This is the mode of proving real character, which is the object in view. But it is not the fact, like admissible in more instances than the other. Per Pearson in Jones L. 160, Wigmore § 52. For further discussion on this point see under s 55 infra.

52. In civil cases the fact that the character of any person is such as to render improbable any conduct imputed to him is irrelevant, except in so far as such character appears from facts otherwise relevant.

Principle Evidence of a party's character in a civil suit is irrelevant for two-fold reasons, namely, (1) A party's character is usually of no probative issues and to orecessfully stated 9 "But in a civil suit, where the personal rights of opposite parties are to be weighed in a nicely adjusted balance, no proof except that relating to the facts in controversy should be admitted to turn the scale" Here the rejection of evidence on the ground of principal and evidence of good character is inadmissible in evidence, because there is a fair and just presumption that a person of good character would not commit a crime But in civil cases such evidence is with equal good reason not admitted, because no presumption would

would be infinitely er C I in Slaw v Conte er is not in issue, the and
'very bad man may have a very righteous cause' Thompson v Church, 1 Root (Conn) 312 (1791) But in civil cases of a quasi criminal nature the reason for exclusion is not so clear in principle and the Courts do not speak § 3275 In concur in er has but a
been com-
ice is doubtful and nicely balanced, it may then perhaps suffice to turn the wavering scale;

or to form their opinion upon the opinions of others The introduction of such

or bad simply renders his doing a particular act more or less probable It has not the belief compelling power, in reference to the proof of the matter in question, of a probative fact, properly so called Chamberlayne's Ev § 3266 words: § 2053 Evidence of good character of a party is not admissible in civil

S. 52. pursuant to a Statute to recover treble the value of property taken the Court said "All the rules of evidence applicable in civil cases are applicable to this" Hall v Brown, 30 Conn 551 So in an English case, [Att Gen v. Bauman, 2 B & P 532 note (a)] the question was squarely presented to the Court The trial was of an information for offering to corrupt so with the defendant's character but the defendant was indicted for the crime imputed to him The evidence was rejected Egry & B. cannot admit this evidence in a civil suit The offence imputed by the action is not in the shape of a crime It would be contrary to the true distinction to admit it, which is this, that in a direct prosecution for such evidence is admissible, but where the prosecution is not directly for a crime, but for the penalty, as in this information, it is not If evidence of character is admissible in such a case as this, it would be precluded in any charge of fraud upon the Excise and Custom House Chamberlayne's Ex § 3260.

Crumm principle it received as evidence, the more such action law of evidence and must be of relevancy to make it worthy of consideration and to avoid, of course, similar objections exist in reference to the use of such evidence in criminal cases, but they are disregarded by reason of the humane principle in view of the fact that in criminal cases human life and liberty are at stake and the good character of the defendant is a material consideration.

Character in action for fraud. Where the nature of a civil action involve the general character of a party, evidence as to that character may not be offered to contradict an imputation of dishonesty, or even of fraud in a transaction presented in an ordinary civil case must depend upon the facts and circumstances, and not upon the character of the parties. In such a case, how serious a moral delinquency may be involved in a fact and the establishment of that fact may affect a party's reputation, he cannot rely on the aid of his previous reputation to disprove the fact. Strob (S C) 372 The doctrine has been announced in a few cases in the Courts that, if a party is charged with fraud or other act involving turpitude and the charge is based only on circumstantial evidence, he may rebut the charge by proof of his good character. Henry v. Brown (Ten) 213; State v. Becht, 17 Walker v. Stephenson, 3 Esp has said "And generally it is not admissible to repel it." Greenl Ex § 51 But this view is not upon any principle of law.

S. 53.

only was altogether unsatisfactory to his mind. It was said to be vitae, but he had no conception, according to the principle, of sound sense or right reason, that character could be evidence in a case affecting the life of a man, and yet not evidence in a case affecting his freedom, his property, or his reputation. Wignmore Cus Ex Case No 21; Wignmore § 56. A right second limitation that such evidence was limited to doubtful cases only.

following charges to

St Tr 217 are pertinent should have an effect, be permitted to operate where a crime is clearly proved, it would not be brought forward; because there is hardly any one who has not at some time maintained a good character. . . . If the evidence were in even balance, character should make it preponderate in favour of a defendant; but in order that character have its operation, the case must be reduced to this situation. more § 56, see also R v Broodhuns, 13 Cr. App. R 125. But now it is settled that an accused in a criminal case can always adduce evidence of good character. with v Hardy, (1877) 1 Q.B. 361.

(317) (1)

be per for he

it not to prevail
he defendant chose prosecutor may

Scope. The prosecution in . . .
accused's bad character as a b that such evidence is too likely to move the jury to conclude that his actual guilt of the offence charged. R v. Boulton, Leigh & Co. v. Boulton. But the accused himself may always invoke his good character as a defence. If he disprove his commission of the offence, no matter what the evidence against him, and no matter how strong the evidence against him, he is acquitted. § 11 (b) The character, by whichever party offered, must be as to the fact of honesty, violence, charity, etc., involved in the fact of the offence. Erskine in Harbottle's Case, 11 How. St Tr 1076. It has already been held that the rule was in early

Y. 501 (507)

and it was

ference that the accused would not have committed the crime. The fact that therefore the crime was not in fact committed by him. The fact that the crime was not in fact committed by him. The fact that the crime was not in fact committed by him.

are left in doubt. It is to be treated just as other circumstances.

is to be

N. Y.

be the

Moett, 23 Hun (N Y) 60, 65 "This of importance only where there is a in which case such evidence is entitled to the ch

Judge sur

character,

How. St

295-52 A n Irish

cellent

ner, ■

(Mass)

action

Against

any times

t is one of

nce there

evidence of good character principle What is in the circumstances, evidence of

The very fact that it is McKelvey's Ev § 118 In ( latter part of the judgment crimes, testimony of good c

to the jury, and a spec

See Convent v People, 16 N

criminal cases ■ always given weight except in a

the rules of

, there ■ n

cter is made

passionate,

confined to those particular traits which have some logical connection with the nature of th

Trial, 6 How

publication,

of the train

mistake yourself The testimony of your civil behaviour going to church, appearing in the trained bands, going to Paul's, being there at common service,— this is well But you are yet be a naughty man in King's subjects" In Turi

far as my experience goes

88 Ala. 221

"It is needless to dwell on the fact" says Mr McKelvey "that the character

"the offence

"a limited"

Character

than of the

5. 53. deed in question. This relevancy depends on the assumption that it was substantially unchanged in the meantime Character at the earlier or later time is offered not to prove or disprove the act in question but to prove the character at the time when the deed in question was done All that is required is that the character must relate to a period proximate to the period of the offence. R v Stannard, 14 How St. Tr 596. Similarly character in one place stands on precisely the same footing as character in another place. The person is the same wherever he is and it is a matter of fact that the test of reputation in a community other than the prisoner's home may be all for Hignore § 60 So far as this section is concerned which deals with relevancy those questions do not arise and more so as under the Indian Evidence Act character includes both reputation and disposition No importance can be attached to evidence of good character where the case again is the same. Queen E v Nur Mahomed, 11 B 223.

Effect and operation of evidence of good character Good character should be permitted to operate as a positive, appropriate and substantial defence. No distinction should be made, in application and effect, between evidence to prove exculpatory facts and evidence to prove the character of the accused. State v Murry, 118 Mo 7, 25, Stannard, 7 C & P. 673 Both rest on the fact making strongly or so to be Understand Cr

turn their attention to his good character. [Vide R v Davison (1866) 11 St. Tr. 99 at p. 217 per Lord Ellenborough] It is, however, a substantial defence, that the good character of the party accused, when established, is an ingredient which ought always to be submitted to the jury together with the charge as an ingredient in any case, even one previously called upon to answer. 2 Russ Cr 74. The correct rule is that a good character, if proved, to the satisfaction of the jury must be considered. Percy v Van Dam, 107 Mich 425

just if it creates question of the guilt or innocence of the accused. The jury have no right to separate it from the mass of the testimony, and to say that they believe the accused has a good character and that therefore they will infer his innocence of guilt. Suett v. State, 75 Neb 263 But while proof of good character alone may not be sufficient as against proof of guilt beyond a reasonable

of
not
the putation for honesty and
and require an acquittal, might be convincing, and If the evidence of guilt will be justi-
with all the e, 220 Pa St.
d character considered in ent to create a reasonable verdict of consider-
is accused
evidence

a life of honesty during the past, is no reason to suppose that he will not succumb to temptation at the close of his career, but before a man of this type and such antecedents is adjudged guilty, the evidence against him must be of an unimpeachable character Mangat Rai v Emperor, 10 Lah L J 262-29 Cr. L. J. 740

Trait must be relevant It is a rule well enforced by reason and sanctioned by authority that character evidence, introduced for the purpose of laying a

by the ot tend t of that a good
on trial
of this nceeded
2 The character should relate to a period proximate to the period of trial R v Swendsen, 14 How St. Tr 696

Adultery In a criminal prosecution for adultery, the previous good character of the defendant for chastity is admissible in his favour Chamberlayne v R § 3289

t nearly relevant is would most likely citizen can not be 290

Assault The defendant's good character as a peaceable, law abiding citizen is admissible in his favour in a prosecution for assault with intent to

pro. ecuted for the commiarelevant. For example, the accused in a criminal action for burglary who had been employed

S. 53. on the police force of a city was not allowed to show by the chief of police that his work had been of a satisfying character Chamberlayne's Ev § 3292

Carr
peaceable, carrying offence

Fraud In criminal actions for fraud or involving fraud, the good character of the accused with respect to the truth involved may be shown in his life but his personal habits or character for sobriety and morality are not relevant likewise his reputation for industry. Chamberlayne's Ev § 3294

Homicide Character evidence is probably more frequently used in

in such a case to the accused has sometimes led to a liberal construction of a general rule. The good character of the accused for peaceableness and industry is admissible even where the instrument of death was poison. Example: evidence, offered as character evidence on behalf of the accused, that he had been excluded are that the accused was industrious and honest, a valiant worker. That the accused may, on the other hand, be engaged in selling whiskey, was unchristian or that he was a drinking man, there was no evidence that he had been drinking on the occasion in question. Chamberlayne's Ev § 3295

Indecent assault The character of the accused for chastity is relevant in such actions.

are the victim is other than a child, regarded as the only relevant trait would seem that other traits as cruelty, brutality and their opposites ought often to be considered. view has been recognized in a case of infanticide wherein the accused was allowed to show that he was of a humane and kindly disposition towards children. Chamberlayne's Ev § 3293

Larceny In larceny cases, proof of character must likewise be confined to the trait involved in the crime, honesty, being regarded as such trait. good character of the accused for truthfulness is not admissible in larceny nor is his character in respect to sobriety. Chamberlayne's Ev § 3290

Libel The reputation of the accused in a prosecution for criminal libel for truth and veracity, is inadmissible as is likewise his reputation for peaceableness and orderliness. What trait would be relevant in a libel appears to be honesty. Chamberlayne's Ev § 3300

has Howe
establ

Rape The Courts have experienced some difficulty in the trait of character of the accused in a prosecution for rape is in his favour. His reputation for "morality, virtue and honesty" is relevant in that context. If the accused is shown to have committed rape, the defendant's reputation for chastity and is rejected as was likewise evidence of his general character. The reputation of the prosecutrix in rape for chastity may always be shown by the accused as being on the question of consent. It must be observed that proof of character of the female involved in all cases of this general class, which includes adultery, rape, seduction and the like, is proof of the character of a person placed upon proof of character by the prosecution in the first instance. Chamberlayne's Ev § 3303.

Receiving stolen property. The trait of character regarded by the Courts as relevant in a prosecution for receiving stolen goods is honesty. The accused may introduce evidence of his character for honesty and probity for the purpose of raising an inference that he is not guilty of the crime charged but traits other than honesty are not regarded as relevant and are therefore excluded. The language, however, which is used to express that general trait may vary, the words probity and integrity, for example, not being objectionable. The reputation of the person from whom the goods were received as a regular and honest dealer in goods such as those in question is relevant on behalf of the accused. Such evidence bears upon the good faith in which the goods were received and tends to prove absence of criminal intent. Chamberlayne's Ev § 3304.

Seduction. Evidence of character may not be introduced for the purpose of rebuttal the trait of character of the accused of the crime. Chamberlayne's Ev § 3305.

Train wrecking. In a prosecution for attempting to wreck a train by placing a tie upon a railroad track, the good character of the accused as a peaceable, orderly and law abiding citizen was held admissible in his behalf. Chamberlayne's Ev § 3306.

54. *In criminal proceedings the fact that the accused person has a bad character is irrelevant, unless evidence has been given that he has a good character, in which case it becomes relevant.

Previous bad character not relevant, except in reply.

Explanation 1.—This section does not apply to cases in which the bad character of any person is itself a fact in issue.

Explanation 2.—A previous conviction is relevant as evidence of bad character.

Requires. The evidence is relevant to the issue, but is excluded for reasons of

* This section was substituted for the original section 54 by the Indian Evidence Act (1872) Amendment Act, 1891 (3 of 1891), s. 6

- S. 54. Nath, 10 W. R. Cr. 17; R v. Tubersfield, 10 Cox. 1; Amrita I Emperor, 42 C. 957. But after a defendant has attempted to shew character in his own aid, prosecution may in rebuttal offer as evidence character. Wignmore § 58. The reason for the reception of this evidence stated by Earle J. in R v. Boulton supra: "If the prisoner, by shewing character, misleads the Court... the false impression should be corrected." See also Per A. Shrimpy Cr. C. 322. In Shrimpy by own character "v. Per 333 (339).

Old Section. Before the amendment of the section by Act I s. 6, the section ran as follows: "In criminal proceedings, the fact that an accused person has been previously convicted of any offence is relevant if it is proved that he has a bad character is irrelevant unless evidence has been given that he has a good character in which case it is relevant (English section does not apply in fact in issue)." In criminal proceedings are in every

had been given of good character or not. Queen-Empress v. Karich Das, 14 C. 721; 2 Weir 760; Empress v. Sukha, A. W. N. 1886; Roshun Dosadh v. Empress, 5 C 763=6 C. L R. 219. In framing the section the framers of the Act said: "We permit evidence of previous convictions against a prisoner for the purpose of prejudicing the jury, but we do not see why he should not be prejudiced by such evidence, if the Report of the Select Committee see also Queen-Empress v. Karich

Queen-Empress v. Hughes, 14 A. 25=A. W. N. 1891, 170.

Scope of the present section. As a general rule the badness of character is not a fact in issue, or relevant to the issue, but that he is of bad character or that he is of the same kind of offence as that of the accused is competent for the prosecutor to adduce evidence tending to show that the accused has been guilty of criminal acts.

Sir James Fitz-james Stephen in his general view of the law of evidence, a work named

It is an inflexible rule of English Criminal Law that a person who has been guilty of a criminal transaction." Woodroffe's Lr. p. 451. Under this section the which has a bad character is irrelevant, and cannot be admitted whether introduced by the prosecution or by the defence. M. Myn v. King-Emperor, 6 L. R. 4-9 Cr. L. J. 576-2 Ind. Cas. 349; see also Emperor v. Wahiduddin, 54 S. 54 before the passing of the Indian Evidence Act. Queen v. Mahima, 6 B. L. R. 131-15 W. R. 37 Cr.; Queen v. Behary 7 W. R. 7. Cr.; Queen v. Phoolchand, 11 W. R. Cr. 11; Queen v. Gopal Thakoor, 6 W. R. Cr. 72; Queen v. Bykunt, 10 W. R. Cr. 17; Queen v. Kulam Sheikh, 10 W. R. Cr. 39; Reg v. Timmit, 2 B. H.

in consideration for the accused was tried, and evidence for which he was accused person has not been

Cr. L. J. 411. Such as to show that he has a good character or where the bad character of any person is itself a fact in issue. Wazir v. Empress 7 P. R. 189 Cr. Except for the purposes of the Act, III of 1892, as other Emperor v. L. R. 1034. relevant fact under s. 14 of the Act. R v. Naba Kumar, 1 C. W. N. 146. In a trial for an evidence which is required to prove a motive for the crime which is otherwise irrelevant. Jagua v. Emperor, 5 Pat. 63-93 Ind. Cas. 834-7 Pat. L. T. 396-397. I. R. 1926 Pat. 232. See also Emperor v. Aloomiya, 5 Bom. L. R. 805-28 particular locality. And in regard to this second question the ordinary rules of evidence do not apply or at least are greatly relaxed. The Indian Law has

S. 54. adopted the policy of less discretion of the Court no bearing whatever upon it; after an accused charged it is relevant for the purpose of enhancing the sentence to be put on him. Emperor v. Nga Ba, 111 Ind. Cts 453=29 Cr L J 40; 1928 Rang 200 (F. B); see also Emperor v. Ismail 39 B 30; Emperor, A 1 R 1929 Mad 306. So also records of such convict put at the end of the trial Queen v. Shuboo, 3 W. R Cr 33; Delmer 50 C 367.

Accused person's bad character is relevant The evidence to prove that the accused person's character is such that he is likely to be the author of the cheating v. Crown, 26 P W R v. Emperor, 48 C L J of the accused in the character Felsenthal v. State, 50 Cal App 2d, 111 rule and practice of our law in relation to evidence of character rests on the deepest principles of truth and justice. The protection of law is due to the righteous and unrighteous. The sun of justice shines alike for the good, the just and the unjust. The crime must be proved, not for the contrary, the most vicious is presumed innocent until proved guilty. The admission of a contrary rule, even in any degree, would open the door only to direct oppression of those who are vicious because they are weak, but even to the operation of prejudices as to religion, race, colour, character, profession, manners, upon the minds of honest and well-disposed persons.

White, 24 Wind. 574 White disposition is not relevant White

White, 1 Phil Ev 603 The State

Peckham J in People v. White

N Y 78 (Am), when he said: "Two antagonistic methods for the investigation of crime and the conduct of criminal trial have existed for many years. One of these methods, favoured, this kind of evidence is that the tribunal which is engaged in the trial of the accused may which is pursued in France, and it is claimed that course is to be done where such course is pursued than where it is omitted. The law of England, however, has adopted another, and, so far as the party is concerned, it is proved that is an exception (which is a peculiarity of precedents of the law) in the admission of relevant evidence of a defendant's general and notorious character to prove that he committed such crimes or torts as that with which he is charged. In criminal cases, evidence is relevant, the law acknowledges by receiving in evidence in some civil cases, evidence of a defendant's good character in order to allow such evidence to be rebutted; and by receiving evidence of the character of witnesses and of other persons. The exclusion of such evidence is a plain departure from the material evidence in a case of usurpation to mitigate the way of its operation given for the purpose of showing that the accused was not likely to commit the crime charged. But after a conviction, the evidence is not relevant to prove that the accused was not likely to commit the crime charged.

Emperor, A I R 1931 Pat 345=12 Pat L T. 471 But evidence is otherwise relevant if it is not rendered inadmissible merely because it shows bad character the admission of offences other than the offence with which the accused is charged. Saroj v Emperor, A I R 1932 Cal 474.

S. 54,

examined R v
 ■ 464=90 L J
 1 man slaughter, it
 eed he ran down
 and killed a boy, the accused in cross-examination was repeatedly asked and was called by the accused for the sole purpose of producing some letters This was not endeavouring to establish a good character merely because a witness whom he called volunteered a statement as to the appellant's good character not only uninvited but probably also against the appellant's wish, and therefore the

 of bal
 put his c (Am), incident.

that he should have the advantage of a character which in point of fact is undeserved R v Rounton, L. & C. 520 (5-9); Wills' L. 2nd Ed 55. 150
 I. E. A.—101.

S. 54. prosecution may rebut the evidence of good character either by cross

C. & P. 6

App R. 113

only be t

prevent the accused person from pleading that the act under consideration committed without a dishonest intention. Emperor v. Bahadur, L. R. 313=102 Ind. Cas. 492=28 Cr. L. J. 556. The presumption of evidence of good character, and of the fact that an accused person is a man of good family connection, which would render it prima facie unlikely he would be guilty of crimes of violence, cannot be pressed too far in cases of offences originating in extreme political feeling. In re Lord, 6 M. L. T. 17=11 Cr. L. J. 30=4 Ind. Cas. 700. But in other cases character of an accused person, and the insignificance of the gain which result from the offence committed by him are circumstances which in cases have occasionally great weight, but neither of them can displace undisputed facts. Government of Bengal v. Umesh Chunder, 16 C.

must

involve

in which the evidence is offered. Chamberlayne's Ex. 3 S. 553. Any other traits is irrelevant. Vide notes under s. 53.

Previous conviction when relevant under other law. Previous conviction may also be relevant in cases where the accused is liable to enhanced punishment; vide s. 75 of the Indian Penal Code; ss 221, 310, 311, 311 of the Procedure Code.

Explanation I. This section is not applicable in cases when the fact of a previous conviction is relevant under other law. Emperor, A. I. R. 1-1-1911.

of that section. Sher Zaman v. Empress, 10 P. R. 1800. 14 of the End.

of bad character is admissible.

murder to prove that the accused as being evidence of character it is admissible. Khilauan v. Emperor, 5 O. W. N. 1928 Oudh. 430.

Explanation II. Whenever under this section evidence as to the character of an accused is admissible, his previous conviction is also admissible as evidence of his bad character. But in other cases evidence of a previous conviction is not admissible unless accused produces evidence of a previous conviction. Such evidence of the previous conviction of an accused amounts to evidence of bad character. Teka Ali v. Emperor, 5 P. R. 76=60 Ind. Cas. 331=23 Cr. L. J. 219; see also Bahadur v. Emperor, C. L. J. 578; Emperor v. Dunning, 5 Bom. L. R. 1031. The evidence of a previous conviction may be considered in enhancing the sentence after the conviction is proved. Rahim Bux v. Emperor, 5 O. W. N. 124=103 Ind. Cas. 124. Strict proof must be given of previous conviction. Emperor v. ... Upon the conviction of an accused, the Court has to determine whether award, and, to do this, should take into consideration, not only the nature and gravity of the offence committed, but the character of the accused then before the court, and the character being admissible as affecting general reputation and general disposition and not of particular acts by which reputation and disposition is shown. Evidence of character is not admissible for the purpose of showing the above purpose. Naga Po v The object of this section is to lay down

S. 55

N 351, see also Rahim v

Character of prosecutor when relevant In a prosecution for rape or for attempting to commit rape, the character of the prosecutor is relevant as a general bad character.

may call evidence to rebut it. Wills Ev 2nd Ed 86

55. In civil cases the fact that the character of any person is such as to affect the amount of damages which he ought to receive, is relevant.

Explanation.—In sections 52, 53, 54, and 55, the word “character” includes both reputation and disposition, but *except as provided in section 54, evidence may be given only of general reputation and general disposition, and not of particular acts by which reputation or disposition were shown.

Principle The possession of a particular trait of character or the contrary by one of the parties to a suit in that regard must often be

aw of
The
larger

*These words and figures in the Explanation to section 55 were inserted by the Indian Evidence Act (1872) Amendment Act, 1891 (3 of 1891), s. 7.

S. 55. amount of damages, while a contrary finding may properly result award of damages or none at all. Reputation rather than actual character usually investigated as that is commonly the important consideration; it is difficult to always draw a line of demarcation between the two related (in law) intangible subjects Chamberlayne's Ex § 3503.

Scope of the section. In civil cases, good character being proved, not be proved in aggravation of damages; but the party attacked may meet evidence of specific acts of impropriety by disproof of such acts, not by evidence of general good character. Jones v Janes, 13 L. J. 111; Narracott v Narracott, 33 L. J. P. & M. 61, Pamp. Ex. 714; Ex 11 obvious that, on the principle so generally accepted for an action of damages (vide infra), the plaintiff's reputed character may be considered, in an action of damages, in any other action in which the law of damages requires harm to reputation as one of the elements of recovery. This has also been conceded for the actions of seduction, criminal conversation, breach of promises of marriage, malicious prosecutions, etc. See also Per R. J. C. B. in Bell v. Parke, 11 Ir. C. L. 423, 475.

It is not admissible to affect the question of damages, is a point which has been controverted. On the one hand it is urged, that the admission of such evidence would be cruelly unjust, as it would throw upon the plaintiff, who is not admissible to affect the question of damages, is a point which has been controverted. On the one hand it is urged, that the admission of such evidence would be cruelly unjust, as it would throw upon the plaintiff, who cannot be a good man, even by means of the very action which he sues himself from the effects of malicious slander. Per Graham B. in Jones v. Janes, 13 L. J. 111; Price 235, 256, 269. In the same case Garrow B. said, "If it were to become the law that such evidence should be admissible, the law would be broken down, and the plaintiff would be ruined now, for he would be ruined by the very action which he sues himself from the effects of malicious slander."

tion; that every man who demands compensation for injury to his character ought to be prepared to rebut any evidence of his bad character; that the danger of admitting testimony of this kind is great, since the witnesses, on cross-examination, might be compelled to give grounds of their belief, that, as any failure in the evidence would much increase the damages, witnesses would naturally be induced to support of a decisive case; that the law will not presume that criminal conspiracies to ruin reputations, and cannot be moulded to suit the S. 1 best, if not only, arrive at a safe conclusion on this point, by inquiring what opinion was previously entertained respecting him, by those with whom he was person of whom they are made, he had a right of action. The damage, however, which he has sustained must depend entirely on the estimation in which he was previously held. He complains of an injury to his reputation, and seeks to damages with one of unsullied and unblemished reputation. A reputed thief would be placed on the same footing with the most honourable merchant, a virtuous woman with the most abandoned prostitute. To enable the jury to estimate the probable quantity of damage, the previous character is not only material, but is said that the admission of such friends who have known him to prove that his reputation has been good.' Wigmore § 70, Wood v. Durham, 21 Q. B.

of the character of the plaintiff without the leave of the Judge unless seven

If the general issue is pleaded, the amount of damages is properly in issue, and

S. 55. amount award of usually it is dit related (1

Scope of the section. In civil cases, good character being not be proved in aggravation of damages; but the party a to ke general evidence of bad character by general evidence of good ch meet evidence of specific acts of impropriety by disproof of such a not by evidence of general good character Jones v James, 13 I Narracott v Narracott, 33 L J P & M 61, Phil Ev 7th Ed obvious that, on the principle so generally accepted for an action of (vide infra), the plaintiff's reputed character may be considered, in of damages, in any other action in which the law of damages reco harm to reputation as one of the elements of recovery This has al conceded for the actions of seduction, criminal conversation, and breach of promises of marriage, malicious prosecutions, etc Wig see also Per Rigot C B in Bell v. Parke, 11 Ir C L 423, 475

Character evidence in suits for defamation Whether, in an ntiff's previous general cha, he laboured under a general, to him by the defendant, is not ad cannot b

any man

good name, even by means of the very action which he sho himself from the effects of malicious slander" Per Graham B in Jones 11 Price 235, 256, 269 In the same case Garrow B said "It ever become the law that such evidence should be admissible, the become a much more a of him now, for he protection of his male to vindicate their characters in Courts of Justice, and thus a most dangerous impunity. Taylor § 359 To this it is ref force, that, though the arguments on the other side would be ent weight, if the question respected the right of proving punishment conduct, they do not apply where evidence is offered of criminally conduct; that every man who demands compensation for the character ought to be prepared to rebut any evidence of his character; that the danger of admitting testimony of this kind is since the witness, on cross-examination, might be compelled to grounds of their belief, that, as any failure in the evidence much increase the damages, witnesses would scarcely be support of a decisive case; that the law will not presume criminal conspiracies to ruin reputations, and cannot be moulded to suit the convenience of irrational timidity; that to estimate the extent of the injury which a plaintiff has sustained, and, consequently, the amount of damages to which he is entitled, the jury must first ascertain what was the real value of his character at the time when it was attacked by the defendant, and that they can recover damages for that injury, and it seems most material that the jury who have to award those damages should know, if the fact is so, that he is a man of no reputation. 'To deny this would', as is observed in Stallis on Evidence, be to decide that a man of the worst character is to be placed on the same footing as a virtuous woman with the most abandoned prostitute. To enable the jury to estimate the probable quantity of injury sustained, a knowledge of the party's previous character is not only material but seems to be absolutely essential. It is said that the admission of such evidence will be hardship upon the plaintiff, friends who have known Wignore § 70, Wood v

 defamation the defendant, in substance and in fact Wood v. Durham, 21 Q. B. rumours or English

 Art 57,
 Per Add

70, Llleschan v Robinson, 2 St Lx 641;
Barber, 2 St Ev 641, Kirkman v Onley, 11 Price 235 Wauthman v Weaver,

D & R. N. P C 10, Cornwall v Richardson, Ry & M 307, see also notes under § 12 at p 176 supra. But in England where the defendant does not plead the truth of the libel he cannot give evidence in chief in mitigation of damages, of the circumstances under which the libel or slander was published, or of the character of the plaintiff without the leave of the Judge unless seven

If the general issue is pleaded, the amount of damages is properly in issue, and

S. 55. the result is pleaded, &c

mitting the plaintiff's bad reputation
1) his general bad reputation alone
-- for the particular trait involved in the tion, e.g. honesty, chastity, etc., or (dⁱⁱⁱ) both may be used. Gr § 14 (d).

Seduction Character evidence of the daughter is admissible in an for seduction, for here the disgrace to the father must naturally be lacking if the daughter is already of bad reputation for chastity, her bad reputation may therefore be shown. Damfield v Massey, 1 Ca.
Dodd v Norris, 3 Camp 519, Carpenter v Wall, 11 A & E 804, 11 § 75 The father's own reputation is immaterial. Ibid In such an action element of damage is the wounded sensibility of the injured party.

shown Smith v Milburn, 17 § 3308, Phip Ev 7th Ed p 186.
character is not admissible under supra

Criminal Conversation In an action for criminal conversation the previous bad reput.
305 § 75, Smith v
reputation is immaterial or character, for this well serve in mitigation, in as much as the loss of his wife's virtue

thus the reputation is here rece note § 75; Bromley v Wallace, 4 E. character is in question

he can claim
362; Jones v

T. N. 11, Narracott v Narracott, 33 L. J. P. & M 61

in an action reputation
The plaintiff
the 153
from an assault would be less than that of a modest and virtuous woman Work, 13 R. L 643, Wignmore § 75

the bad character of the
is clearly in mitigation of such a woman is none of
is of, immaterial

unchastity a defence the defendant must not only prove unchaste, but also that he had no knowledge of such unchastity at the time of making the promise to marry. Foster v. Hanchett, 68 Vt. 319 (Am.).

S. 55

Malicious prosecution In actions for malicious prosecution, the defendant may show the general bad reputation of the plaintiff as known to him when he launched the prosecution. Martin v. Hardesty, 27 Ala. 458 (Am.), Hamberlayne's Ex § 9308

Explanation. racer cannot include ion.
'That actual charac- it, and the latter is merely evidence to prove the former, ought to be a truism." Wigmore § 1608 "The term 'character' when more strictly applied, refers to his inherent qualities of the person, rather than to any opinion that may be to the
so that bject, a
on the
as we subject are character'
pariance,
acter, the n Bucklin
traufords-fuses real
s upon on may be on really re § 1608
rm "cha-

55, has been used in the sense of
to prove the disposition of a person, e given and to prove his reputation, his

English law Under the English law the term 'character' was normally applied to the actual qualities, and not to the community's estimates of these qualities. Wigmore § 1931 In Thomas Hardy's Trial, 24 How St Tr 990, evidence was admissible to the effect "I have always esteemed him as a man of a mild and peaceful disposition"

Trial, 31 How St Tr 186, Lord Ellenborough.
as to the general character of the accused, likely to be guilty of § 1931, see also Trial of 1160 ff, Fernley's Trial, How St Tr 40, Butler's. spoke from personal knowledge alone, and often (though less frequently) from personal knowledge plus reputation, but to speak from reputation alone is regarded in the 1700 S as improper On this point the law in England was afterwards changed and allowed reputation alone Wigmore § 1931 In Jones Trial, 31 How St Tr 310 (1809), Lord Ellenborough C J incidentally said. "It is reputation; it is not what a person knows" But the isolated phrase above in Jone's Trial somehow caught the attention of later

.
the usage of the term character in this connection Parks Ex 2nd Ed 8 (1802), McNelly Tr 321 (1814) Starkie Ex 1st Ed Vol. II, 366 (1824); Phillips Tr 1st Ed 72, 103 (1814) That personal belief, estimate, or knowledge—under whatever name—was proper and unquestionable testimony to character seem whole period
Cox Cr 25,
Cockburn C J

[illegible]

prisoner, as to show the means they had had of forming an opinion upon his disposition. The first witness stated the length of time that the prisoner was not possible.

Then

Each of the witnesses was asked as to his means of knowledge and his opinion of the prisoner's disposition, and Lord Ellenborough says, 'the correct inquiry is in the general character of the accused and whether the witness thinks him likely to be guilty of the offence charged in the information' This is very strong proof that the practice is to stop a witness when he refers to particular gave his answer according to the that experience. But the witness a brothers. Strictly that specific fact involving a very important question, I cannot rest my decision on the particular cular witness, is superior in quality and value to mere rumour. Numerous character, because the prisoner was charged with an offence which would not only be committed in secret if it were committed at all, but would be likely to be kept secret by the persons who were subjected to it. Such being the case,

Darwin's
fraud?
borough's
the qu
the time y
the whole
but of a
it is not w
to the po attended to. In 1791, in Hardy's Case, 21 How St Tr. 999, there is a passage in the examination of witness, John Carr, which shows what was then regarded as the true rule, and how common it was to disregard it. 'How long have you known Mr. Carr? Towards of twenty years. Have you known him well during that time? The

—From what you know of sturbance, or commit any acts of violence? Never.—My Attorney General. That is a question never put,

S. 55. that a prisoner is entitled to give evidence as to his general character. What does it mean? Does it mean evidence as to his reputation as to those to whom his conduct and position are known, or does it mean evidence of disposition? I think it means evidence of reputation only. I have heard of a question put deliberately to a witness called on behalf of a prisoner as to the prisoner's disposition of mind; the way, and the only way, in which I find the word 'character' used and applied in all the books of text-writers of authority upon the subject of evidence. When we consider the question of what, in the strict interpretation of the law, is the limit of such evidence I must say that, in my judgment, it must be confined to this: the evidence must be of the man's general reputation, as seen by the individual opinion of the witness. The witness who acknowledged that nothing of the general character or sense of reputation, would not be character in more limited sense.

Blackburn, Byles, Keating, Mellor and Piggot, B B, concurred and Earle C J said: "What character is admitted? It seems to me that such evidence is admissible for the purpose of showing the disposition of any party accused, and that it is a presumption that he did not commit the crime imputed to him. It cannot be ascertained directly; it is only to be ascertained by the opinion formed concerning the man, which must be founded either on personal experience or on the expression of opinion by others whose opinion again must be founded on the Court's estimate of the prisoner's character. The Court must state that estimate and state that estimate which the prisoner has enabled to be admissible. You may examine the prisoner's neighbourhood, the personal judgment of those who are capable of forming a moral and guiding opinion than that which is to be gathered from general reputation. I have never seen a witness examined to character without an error."

esteem and respect, and have had abundant experience that we have the worthiest men in the world. The principle the Lord Chief Justice laid down would exclude his evidence, and that is the point, where I differ. To my mind personal experience gives cogency to the evidence; and I have heard some persons speak well of him, and I have heard a very able general report in favour of the prisoner. There is a very able comparison. Again, to the proposition that general character is admissible the answer is that it is impossible to get at it. There is no such thing as general character, it is the general inference supposed to arise from the statements in favour of

upon the branch of the case have commanded my assent. In Ellenborough held that the personal experience of a witness, founded upon his personal experience, was admissible. In that case there were thirteen witnesses to character, and five or six gave evidence of very considerable personal evidence than that of a witness who testifies to the general repute of this person as to this mental characteristic? His testimony is based upon hearsay, and quite likely rumour and goes up. If mental characteristic is a fact, there is no valid reason why this fact should be proved by general reputation.

Personal observation

than general reputation

others to which

from those who know" Wigmore § 1956. Similarly in State v Lee 22 Minn 469, Berry J said "As it is the fact of disposition which is important and material, there can be no reason why this fact may not be proved by any witness who knows what it is. There is certainly no reason why general reputation is any Except as provided in section 54. The character evidence as contemplated in section 51 is not confined to general disposition or general reputation. The character or disposition offered whether for or against him must involve the specific trait related to the act charged. Wigmore § 59. "The object and effect of such evidence is to disprove guilt by furnishing a presumption that the defendant could not have committed the offence and hence the character sought to be proved must be such as would make it unlikely that the party would do the controverted act." McClellin J in Morgan v State 88 Ala 221 (1st), Wigmore § 59.

character
the but admission
an opinion (1st) it but this assertion
of the
it a fact.

It may be a part of the very issue, as where the reputation of a plaintiff is in issue to determine the damages in an action in issue, in respect of concern this issue, (2) the right to testify to regards p

accusation may have contributed to colour the reputation and render it untrustworthy. Grice v. Ex. § 461 (d), Chamberlayne's Ex. § 3329.

Nature and formation of Reputation. In enquiry into the limitations affecting the nature and formation of a reputation, it must be remembered that

55 reputation is used only by way of an exception to the hearsay rule; it must therefore take such a solid and definite shape as to be worthy of, and to justify the exceptional resort to such evidence. Mere rumour, coarse not reputation of the community as a whole, but what the community Scott v Sampson, L R 8 Q B D 491 If the public opinion be of proportion of them, should have been heard to speak on the subject, if the person's veracity or honesty or other quality in question is not deemed to be equivalent and therefore to be trustworthy only so far as the facilities of ascertaining persons among whom he has merely sojourned; the form of the question usually put is opinion in the neighbourhood vary Greenl Ev another aspect A or occurrence, while a man's reputation, for example, may declare him honest, and yet a rumour may have circulated that this reputed honest man has defrauded accounts Wignmore § 1611.

The persons qualified to testify to reputation The witness to reputation must be one who, by evidence in the community, or otherwise, has had opportunity to learn the community's estimate, and the preliminary question whether he knows the person's reputation, is usually insisted upon Wign v Norris, 103 Mass 566 A person who lives out of the neighbourhood is therefore not qualified and it has been doubted whether a person can express purpose of learning the reputation of a person 4 Esp 102, Douglass v The Y N B Wignmore, § 1611 (d), Greenl Ev § 161 (d), Chamberlayne's Ev § 3315.

Cross-examination of a witness to reputation In testing a witness who speaks of good character, it will expose the unworthiness of his testimony if he admits that rumours of misconduct are known to him, for knowledge of such rumours may well be inconsistent with his assertion that the person's reputation is good Wignmore § 1611 (d), Greenl Ev § 161 (d), Chamberlayne's Ev § 3315. In fact, the propriety of reputation he has support usually been conceded. Cross-examination by requiring him to speak of his information, and in particular the persons whose remarks have given rise to his assertion, is not admissible because there is no other effective way of testing the reputation Wignmore § 1611 (d), Greenl Ev § 161 (d), Chamberlayne's Ev § 3315. It is conceded to be proper to cross-examine the defendant's or other persons' reputation as well as of a witness Greenl Ev § 161 (d), Chamberlayne's Ev § 3315.

It is impossible to exact unanimity; for there are always dissenters. It is precisely that quality of public opinion thus commonly described as "general" therefore a difficult thing Wignmore § 1612. "A reputation, to be of any value, must be based on a general opinion, and not on a particular opinion. If the community is harmonious, the reputation will be of little value. It is only when there are dissenters that the reputation is of any value." Wignmore § 1612.

putation at all, must be a general reputation. It may be either one of two opposites; for instance, either good or bad; or it may be partly one and partly the other; but in any case, it must be a general reputation. It could then be no general reputation if it were only a partial, limited, or qualified reputation. The existence of a diversity of opinion is one of the means by which a witness may know there is general reputation, but this means of knowledge, apart from the fact that there is or is not a general reputation, is not sufficient to establish the fact.

actual commission of the crime. In the matter of the petition of Poldia Siva di, 3 M. 238 = 2 Weir 51

General Disposition. Here the character is applied to the actual qualities of the person, not to the community's estimate of these qualities. The term "general disposition" is distinguished from the "particular character" (i.e. general disposition showing it) seems to have been the original and natural source of the phrase and the orthodox application of it. In Layers' Trial, 16 How St Tr 246, various discreditable facts being the particular facts to charge the reputation of any witness, but only in general itself." Wigmore § 1981. In R v Cobbit, 2 State Tr. N S 789, 873, Lord Alderden C J said, "The proper inquiry for a gentleman who has known Mr. many years is as to his general character, not as to any individual or particular acts . . . you may ask, wh particular witness—such opinion being the result of the witness's personal experience and observation—will also be evidence as to his character. But the evidence need not show that such general opinion is based on the personal knowledge of the man by his neighbours generally, nor does it show that such general opinion has been publicly expressed by his neighbours. Duma Singh v. the Emperor, 5 O C 203

PART II.

ON PROOF.

CHAPTER III.

FACTS WHICH NEED NOT BE PROVED

S. 56. Fact judicially noticeable need not be proved

56. No fact of which the Court take judicial notice need be proved.

Scope of Part II In part I of the Evidence Act, what facts may not be proved in a civil or criminal case has been dealt with. After ascertaining that question, the framers of the Act now propose to deal with the question what sort of evidence must be given the contents of a document, must be proved by oral evidence. Oral evidence must consist of an affidavit or the fact to the effect of the

been reduced to a documentary form, the document in which that transaction, and its contents cannot be varied by oral evidence though the contents of the document. Step Day Et 1

Proof The terms "evidence" and "proof" are often used in such a way as to include at one time the media by which facts are established, and at the effect or conclusions produced by the testimony. It is true the attempt is frequently made to distinguish between the two terms "evidence" and "proof".

more of a question of fact, and not of law, and is not a question of law. In the case of a fact, the fact to be proved may be one of so much notoriety that the Court take judicial notice of it, or it may be admitted by the parties. In either of these cases no evidence of its existence need be given. Chapter III, which relates to the proof of facts, is taken in part from Act II of 1935 (Am); Burr Jones § 4.

Scope of Chapter III The second chapter having decided what facts are relevant we proceed to show how a relevant fact is to be proved. In the place, the fact to be proved may be one of so much notoriety that the Court take judicial notice of it, or it may be admitted by the parties. In either of these cases no evidence of its existence need be given. Chapter III, which relates to the proof of facts, is taken in part from Act II of 1935 (Am); Burr Jones § 4.

part from the Commissioner's Draft Bill, and in part from the Law of gland" Draft Report of the Select Committee—The Gazette of India, July, 1, Part I, p. 271. "W

it not all the matt

es, needs to be commu

known already, and ted and reasoned upon without discussion. Often, also, much of which re might, in point of mere theory be a doubt, will, as a matter of established ictice, be allowed by the Court, in the first instance, without formal proof, id there is much which belongs to a dubious and arguable region as to which ourt may or may not proceed in this manner Thayer's Ec. Ev. 277

In another case proof by evidence may be dispensed with, namely, where 1 opponent by a solemn in facie judicialis admission has waived dispute. This known as Judicial Admission Wigmore § 2663.

Facts which need not be proved. Stephen in his Digest of the Law of idence (1st and 2nd editions,) Chap. VII originally dealt with "judicial tics" under the general head of 'Proof' and the special head of 'Facts hich need not be proved,' as in this Act 1 of this he was taken to task by acute critic (in 20 Solicitors' Journal, 937) who suggested that since Stephen's 93,

 to
 case
 about judicial notice) declares that some facts asserted by a party need not be urt

inp

han

office, of consciously recalling to the mind a fact known, but not for the moment erted to, is an act of precisely the same kind as listening to the evidence of a tel to the Judge's inspection in Court. But the true conception of what is

j
t v
j

W. L. G.

ation

Bent

tribu

had

by

not, as a part I. a negative
-ence, in th is not always necessary to case. The fact may be I not require

Thayer Ev pp 278-280

Principle. Judicial notice is based upon very obvious reasons of convenience and expediency; and the wisdom of dispensing with proof of matters tion. There is, however no rule of any practical importance which governs arises must be decided precedents, than the words of Greenleaf,

"Courts will generally take notice of whatever ought to be generally known within the limits of their jurisdiction" Green Ev § 8; Burr Jones § 105 (a) "Courts will not pretend to be more ignorant than the rest of mankind" Fisher
v. Jamson, 30 Ill. App 91.

(2) all public Acts passed or hereafter to be passed by Parliament, and all local and personal Acts directed by Parliament to be judicially noticed :

(3) Articles of War for Her Majesty's Army, "Navy or air force" :•

(4) the course of proceeding of Parliament and of the Councils for the purposes of making Laws and Regulations established under the Indian Councils Act,† or any other law for the time being relating thereto.

Explanation.—The word "Parliament" in clauses (2) and (4) includes—

(1) the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland ;

(2) the Parliament of Great Britain ;

(3) the Parliament of England ;

(4) the Parliament of Scotland ; and

(5) the Parliament of Ireland :

(5) the accession and the sign manual of the Sovereign for the time being of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland :

(6) all seals of which English Courts take judicial notice : the seals of all the Courts of British India, and of all Courts out of British India, established by the authority of the Governor-General‡ or any Local Government in Council : the seals of Courts of Admiralty and Maritime Jurisdiction and of Notaries Public, and all seals which any person is authorized to use by any Act of Parliament or other Act or Regulation having the force of law in British India :

(7) the accession to office, names, titles, functions and signatures of the persons filling for the time being any public office in any part of British India, if the fact of their appointment to such office is notified in the Gazette of India or in the official Gazette of any Local Government :

(8) the existence, title and national flag of every State or Sovereign recognized by the British Crown :

(9) the divisions of time, the geographical divisions of the world, and public festivals, fasts, and holidays notified in the official Gazette :

(10) the territories under the dominion of the British Crown :

(11) the commencement, continuance and termination of hostilities between the British Crown and any other State or body of persons :

*Substituted by Act X of 1887.

†24 & 25 Vict. c. 67.

‡For lists of such Courts, see the notifications printed on pp. 372 to 374 of the Western India Volume of Macpherson's Lists of British Enactments in force in Indian States

7. (12) the names of the members and officers of the Court and of their deputies and subordinate officers and assistants, and also of all officers acting in execution of its process, and of all advocates, attorneys, proctors, vakils, pleaders and other persons authorized by law to appear or act before it :

(13) the rule of the road * [on land or at sea]. In all these cases and also on all matters of public history, literature, science or art, the Court may resort for its aid to appropriate books or documents of reference.

If the Court is called upon by any person to take judicial notice of any fact, it may refuse to do so unless and until such person produces any such book or document as it may consider necessary to enable it to do so

Whether the list is complete. A similar list is also given by Sir J. M. Fitzjames Stephen in art. 55 of his Digest of the Law of Evidence. As regards that list he remarks "The list of matters judicially noticed in this article is not intended to be quite complete. It is compiled from 1 Ph. Ev. 455-67 and T. E. ss 1-20, where the subject is gone into more minutely."

the ordinary course of nature the meaning of English words, and all other matters which they are directed by any Act to notice, such as, in Bengal, lists of land holders who have not made road-tax returns (Ben. Act IX of 1833 = 194 cases that which was already and more widely the law, have occasionally furnished ground for the contention that an intention to alter the general law was to be inferred from the partial or limited enactment; resting on the maxim, expressio unius est exclusio alterius. But these cases. The only inference which a Court can draw from such provisions (which generally find a place in the Evidence Act) and idle doubts) is that the Legislature was either ignorant or unmindful of the real state of the law, or that it acted under the influence of excessive caution and if the law be different from what the Legislature supposed it to be the implication arising from the statute, it has been said, cannot operate as a negation of its existence; any legislation founded on such a mistake has not the effect of making that law which the Legislature erroneously assumed it to be so. Virucll, 748. Similarly in Kron's Admiralty v. Adams 11, 73 Ind. Cts. 312 at p. 316—A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 66, Mr. Justice MacKerzie said: "The only inference which a Court can draw from such superfluous provisions (which often find place in Acts to meet unfounded objections and ill-dubias), is that the Legislature was either ignorant or unmindful of the real state of the law or that it acted

* These words in section 57, para. (13), were inserted by the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act (18 of 1872), s. 5.

that . . .
take . . .
writers . . .

shall take judicial notice. In the circumstances the proper meaning of the section is that it does not forbid the Court to take judicial notice of any fact which is a proper subject of taking such notice, but the Court must take judicial notice of the facts mentioned in this section and as regards that the Court is not at liberty to exercise any discretion. It was pointed out with regard to the corresponding section of Act II of 1875 that the last mentioned therein was not exhaustive and the Court was at liberty to take judicial notice of any fact of which English Courts take judicial notice. Queen v. Nabalup (a suami), 1 B. L. O. Cr. 27-5, Wells v. Wells 11, 8th L. 169. But why should it be confined to facts of which the English Courts ordinarily take judicial notice? The maxim that what is known need not be proved manifesta (or notoria) non indigent probatione, may be traced far back in the civil and canon law, indeed it is coeval with the legal procedure itself. We find it a maxim in English law res judicata, si notum non sit in forma judicii. Per Coke C. J. in Cranford v.

future possibility of the doctrine of judicial notice. Courts may judicially notice much which they cannot be required to notice. That is well worth emphasizing, for it points to a great possible usefulness in this doctrine, in helping to shorten and simplify trials. It is an instrument of great efficacy, in the hands of a competent Judge, and it is not nearly as much used, in the region of practice and evidence, as daily to smother trials Thayer Prcl. Treat. L. v. 30

by Judges? One reason is that they apparently forget that (as Professor Thayer says) they might notice much that they cannot be required to notice by general rule made in advance, e. g., a rule requiring them to notice always the incumbency of a sheriff as office might go too far, but they may in a given case be justified in declaring a specific sheriff to be notorious; and so on, in a thousand Clause . . .

the force of . . .
personal or . . .
454=1 Bom . . .
Grieces 2 H . . .
and adopted . . .
Chamberlayn . . .
'that judicial . . .

7. notice given to this branch of the subject is, that diversity of opinion has existed as to whether certain laws of a private nature were entitled to the judicial notice, and it has therefore become the task of the legal chronicler to mark them. The law of the jurisdiction is peculiarly a matter of judicial cognizance. It is only on the presumption that the law is known to the Court that there can be any proceedings whatever in Courts of Justice. Burr Jones § 11? The Mahomedan ecclesiastical law is a law having the force of law in British India, and as such will be taken judicial notice of by Courts. Whitley Stokes Vol II p 887, Queen Empress v Ram an 7 A 161. The general rules of Hindu and Mahomedan law do not require proof. They can be ascertained by making necessary reference to authoritative text books, judicial decisions as well as from the opinions of the Pandits or Mullahs. Bhagwan v Bhagwan, supra. The Court can take judicial notice of what the Hindu Law is with regard to Hindu custom, that always must be proved. Per Garth C J in Jagjit Mohini v Dhananath, 8 C 582 (587). But where a custom is judicially recognised it need not be proved. Ham v Amin lar of Patapur, 23 C 101, 93 Ind Crs 321, 78 Ind Crs 101, 1 R 19-6 Oudh 352, etc also.

Pamalinga, 12 M I A

customs of any particular community may acquire, by being repeatedly proved in the Court, such a status as to make it unnecessary in any subsequent case for to prove the existence of a body of customs. Assuming that a rule of Majasa itana has the term of s 57 of the Evidence Act operation of customs which necessarily enacted by the Legislature, Courts have to take judicial notice not only of the effect of the rules but also of those facts which are necessary for showing that so often pro stated. The 21 Ind Crs

water rates,

judicially noticed

C1
passed before 1
same s clause was so used
but of producing an
a Public Act require Vict. C 12 it was this Act shall be deemed and taken to be Public Act, and shall be judicially notice of all Public Acts also. It was customary

But such Collector of s rules of
, should be taken notice of as such, and as the contrary be expressly provided and declared by such Act." This provision is now repealed by the Interpretation Act, 1889, 52 and 53 Vict. C. 63, which provides, by s. 3, that every Act passed after 1850 "shall be a Public Act and shall be judicially noticed as such, unless the contrary be expressly provided by the Act." So now every personal Act or local Act should also be taken judicial notice of by the Indian Courts.

Clause III. The Court will recognize without proof the Articles of War, whether in the naval, the marine, or the land service, as well as the auxiliary forces,—that is the militia, yeomanry, and the volunteers,—and also the marine force, (Taylor § 5), but not of a book called the Rules and Regulations for the Government of the Army (Boyle v. Arthur, 1 B. & C. 300) nor the Regulations of the territorial force (Fulton v. Anderson, [1912] 1 C. 1 107).

Clause IV. The English Courts take judicial notice of the laws of England and Ireland, including the laws and custom of Parliament and the privileges and course of proceedings of each House of Parliament. (Stockdale v. Hansard, 9 A. & M. 1—2 P. & D. 1, Eastbury v. Fox et 12 Q. B. D. 271. The Indian Courts should take judicial notice of decisions of Parliament. The Englishman v. Lloyd et 1st C. 700—14 C. W. N. 713. The proceedings of the Legislature" says Prof. Hargrave as shown in its journal are by some Courts noticed, but this is an artificial theory on principle, the proceedings as contained in the

from 713 (720)

of the sovereign
angle, 2 M. & Rob.
1 and all matters
stated under it. R. v. Gully, 1 L. & 93, Mephell v. Sultan of Shore, (1891) 1 Q. B. 119.

Clause VI. The English Courts take judicial notice of the Great Privy Seal (Lord Melville's Case, 29 How. St. Tr. 707; royal proclamation, of the signature of the clerk, Levinstein, 1 R. P. C. 170), seal of the Corp

Crown Office Act, 1877, the Seal and the Privy Seal of the Duchy of Lancaster, the Seal and the Privy seal of the Duchy of Cornwall, the Seals of the old Superior Courts of Justice, and of the Supreme Court and its several divisions; the old office of the P^rince of Wales, the Seals of Courts constituted by Act of Parliament, if Seals are

orce and matters
nd of its district Court of insolvent
ency in Ireland, which since the 6th of August, 1877, has been called "The Court of Bankruptcy in Ireland, of the several in Ireland, of the Landed Estate C of that Court, and of the county Court the city of Glasgow is not one of judicial notice. In re Henderson, 22 C. 491. Where the seal is not distinctly formation cannot without proof be recognized as such by the judicial tribunals of other nations until it has been acknowledged by the sovereign power under which those tribunals are constituted (City of Lyons v. Bank of belonging to the executive to such acknowledgment is a fact by other competent testimony, and the existence of such unacknowledged government or state may, in like manner be proved, the rule being, that if a body of persons assemble together to protect the welfare, and support their own independence, make laws and have Courts of justice, this is evidence of their being a state (General P. v. 1 citing Yusuf v. General 2 C. & P. 224. But the rule in L. v. Palmer, 3 Wheat 610, 631, seems limited to the case of a defendant denying piratical intent by pleading the authority of a government having colourable existence and engaged in a revolution. On the general question, the correct rule seems to be the contrary of the statement in General P. and a court will look solely to the action of the Executive where the existence of a foreign nation or government is involved (L. v. Hume 2 Wheat 611, 631; L. v. Hume 4 Cranch 211; Gibson v. H. 1 Wheat 243; Amey v. Hunt 6 C. 193; Wallace v. Jux 12, 13 Pet 115 & 116; Kenney v. Chambers 18 How 58 61; Wheeler v. Sullivan of Johore, (1831) 1 Q. B. 111). In the last mentioned case Ky. L. J. vol. 1 p. 161. "The status of a foreign sovereign is a matter of which the Courts of this country take judicial cognizance—this is not a matter which the Courts either assumed to know or to have the means of knowing, without a continuous inquiry as to whether the person cited is or is not in the position of an independent sovereign. Of course the Court will take the best means of informing itself on the subject if there is any kind of doubt, and the matter is not as notorious as the status of some great monarch such as the Emperor of Germany. Here the person cited was the Sultan of Johore, and the means which the Judge took of informing himself as to his status was by inquiry at the colonial office." Later on the learned Judge said, "The next point is this. It is his right to immunity, and may be . . . agree, but how is this to be done . . . clear supposing, by way of illustration, that some well known potentate, such as one of the great European Emperors, were to be sued in a Court of this country, and took no kind of notice of the proceeding; it would be the duty of

in Council. See also Lachmi Narain v. Protop, 2 A. 1 (17), Puocani v. Bombay Baroda, 9 B. 241.

While the Courts will take judicial notice of this existence of foreign governments, the rule must be taken with the qualification that it relates only to such governments as have been recognized by the Home Government. The Courts will not anticipate the action of the government in this respect, and in case of a rebellion or a revolt in a foreign state, they will consider the former state of things as existing until the proper department of the government recognizes the change (City of Berne v. Baul, 9 Ves 347; Taylor v. Barclay, 2 Sim 213. Who is the sovereign, de jure or de facto, of a territory is not a judicial but a political question, the determination of which by the legislative and executive departments of any government

57. legible, Courts will not take judicial notice of it Jaker Ah v Ruj Chandra 10 C L R 169 A registered power of attorney was admitted under this section without proof, the Registering Bion 1, 11 C 176 But the abo

Courts can take judicial notice of Rath Mohun v Arger 185 Ind Cas 422

Clause VII Courts will judicially recognize the political constitution or frame of their own Government; its essential political elements and public office sharing in its regular administration; and its essential and regular political operations, powers and actions Thus, notice is taken, by all tribunals of the accession of the Chief Executive of the nation or state, under whose authority they act; his powers and privileges (Elderton's Case, 2 Ld Raym 950), a d

Gule's Ex'r, 4 Marten 600, and principal officers of .31) In America the Court senator the appointment, ell, 2 Rob (L) 166) Is Holman v Burrou, 2 Ld be taken judicial notice of deputies Great Ex l executive officers to ad O Mart. 196 But the English doctrine does not extend to this length Taylor § 11 So also in

be taken of the signature of a Deputy Commr of Police Waltchar v 53 C 718=30 C W N. 713; see also Tamor v Kaludas, 4 B L R 0

The
the I
docu

he is acting as such Rampjan v Ahmed, 5 Ind. Cas 537.

being alike members of the great family d to recognize each other's existence and he usual and appropriate symbols of rationality and sovereignty are the national flag and seal Every sovereign therefore, recognizes, and, of course, the public tribunals and functionaries of sovereigns of state occurred as however, upon a civil war in any country, one part of the nation shall separate itself from the other, and establish for itself an independent government, the newly public feasts and festivals. Tyler 3 :

 facts in the case of the Wright
 the fact itself; he merely knows wh the period of limitation for a suit expires on a gazetted holiday and the plaint is presented on the day the Court opens it is not necessary for the plaint explicitly to state that on the day on which the period of limitation expired the Court was closed. Tel. C. Ind. v. M. P. S. 16 N. L. R. 193-7, Ind. Cas. 926. This clause empowers the Court to take judicial notice of any public holidays notified in the official gazette. Id.

Geographical Division. Courts in phical features of the country covered the country as a whole, and of the entire Courts take judicial notice of political subdivisions of the country as it was made by law, and of the state or territory where they hold their sessions, and of the judicial districts within it. Courts will take judicial notice of the local divisions of the state into counties, cities and towns and of the facts that certain cities are in such subdivisions. S. v. Pennington 121 Mo. 483, Rogers v. City 104 Cal. 283 (1m), Dorchester Case 1 B. & A. 243, R. v. F. L. 15 Q. B. D. 827, R. v.
St. Maurice 16 Q. B. D. 914. The Court takes judicial notice of the existence, extent, and geographical position of the British dominions and of the territory of the foreign States. Halsbury, Vol. 13, p. 493. In Cooke v. Wilson, 1 C. B.
 N. S. 153, Crowder J. at p. 161, held that the Court was bound to take notice of the existence of the colony of Victoria and Cresswell J. at p. 163, that it must recognise that the colony was out of England. In Thurrell v. Dryer, (1884) 9.
 App. Cas. 41, where the question was whether the words "St. Lawrence" in a policy of confined to the that the Court sho names
 applied to liability

cognizance of the fact that, assuming these tribes to be independent, they do not possess jurisdiction over certain territories. This is a matter which appears to me must necessarily be within the cognizance of Her Majesty, because, for the protection of her hegemony in the ordinary way, she should know whether redress should be applied for to the Sultan of Morocco or to the head of the various independent tribes of Soudan. Sound policy appears to me to require at p. 221 said "The judgment proceeded, not on the question whether the Court should give relief or not, or give discovery or not, and withhold relief, but upon the question whether the King's Court should attend to the case

 persons Govern-
 could govern
 State Judicial
 ed, and
 from a

Case, 1821, 4 B & All 243, per Bayley J and Best J) unless such situation is recognised by statute (R v Holborn Union Guardian, 6 L & B 715) nor of the particular diocese within which any town is situated (R v Symson, 2 L & Raym 1379, Halsbury Vol 13 p 1). It is judicial notice that in certain cities referred to in the pleadings do not exist. Wheeler, 162 Mass 129 (1867). In state, without proof of the fact. Strong, 42 Ill 148. But in an action for notice of the fact that Helchester was in the county of Somerset (R v Burrage, 3 P Wms 139 196, see also Thorne v Jolson, (1846) 3 C B 661, Brunne v Thomson, (1842) 2 Q B 754, Humphreys v Buld (1841) 9 Dowd 1000, Church v Imp Gas Co, 7 L J Q B 118. In England the Courts will take judicial notice of the different counties palatine, and counties corporate in that country (R v S Maurice, 16 Q B D 993, Devil's Case, 1 B & A 218). That a particular colony or place in it, is not, in England need not be proved to an English Court (Cool v Wilson, 26 L J C P 14). The Courts take judicial notice of the leading geographical features of the country, for example the existence and general location of imports char-

40 A

that

that

and in R v Isle of I

sion of a county

Ald 301 the Court

named Dublin in the world, and therefore refused to construe an allegation in the declaration that a bill was drawn in Dublin as meaning drawn in Dublin in Ireland. Ibid, see also Kearney v King, 2 B & Ald 301. But a statement by the Attorney General on the Instructions of the Home Secretary, as to whether a certain spot in the British channel was within the limits of H M's territorial sovereignty was held binding upon the Court (The Fargurness [1927] p 311, of Engell v Mursman [1928] A C 433). Phip Ev 7th Ed 22. Judges are aware, with the rest of the community, of the existence of the principal lines of railroad which are wholly or in part within the county. The common knowledge includes locality, course and direction of such a railroad. What places are on the line of a railroad, have stations in it, or constitute its termini, or railroad centres, through what other localities it must pass in order to connect two places, what is the distance between two points on a railroad, within what county these points are, and similar facts pertaining to judicially know. But details, to be proved. Ev § 741

1 CIVI
2 B &
place

Clause X "All Courts of Justice are bound to take judicial notice of the territorial extent of the jurisdiction exercised by the Government whose laws they administer, or if its recognition or denial of the sovereignty of a foreign power as appearing from the public Acts of the legislature and executive although those Acts are not formally put in evidence nor in accord with the pleadings" (Jones v United States, 137 U S 214 (Am)). In England the Courts take notice of the territorial extent of the jurisdiction and sovereignty exercised de facto by their own government and the local divisions of the country as parishes, and the like so far as the but not the relative positions of railways further than they may be. The Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 any question as to the existence or foreign country, arising in proceedings in a Court in the British dominions or held under British authority, is to be submitted to the Secretary of State, whose decisions for the purpose of the proceedings is final. "If it be true" said Lord Selborne in Daniadhar v Deoram, 1 B 367 at p 404 (P C) "that the Indian Courts might take judicial notice of the territories of the Queen in India, then, if there has been a cession of terri-try, they must take notice of that, and they must do so independently of the Gazette, which is not part of the case, but only evidence of it."

Clause XI. The Courts take judicial notice of wars with foreign states if a state of war has been declared by the proper authorities. Dyer v Lord Harman, 111 N. 202. It is established that the law is as stated in the text, although Lord Esher said during argument, "You will be obliged upon an indictment for a libel to prove that France is now at war with Austria, not as to the war with this country, the Court taking judicial notice of that with reference to our own country." See also Hill v Lord Harman, 111 N. 203, Per v De Boreer, Thellus v Caring 1 Ex. 20, Harley v Murray, 11 June March 5, 1908, A judgment of 1911 (1915) 3 K B 613 Cb, Re Lane, (1916) 1 K B 268 T, Re § 18. But if no judicial notice has been made the fact of a state of war is one to be proved. Hill v Lord Harman 111 N. 203. A war between foreign powers is not judicially noticed. Dyer v Lord Harman 111 N. 203. When it is said, however, that the Courts take judicial notice of wars with foreign states, it must be interpreted that the Courts take judicial notice of the act of their own executive with reference to war with a foreign state. The executive recognition is the warrant for the Court. See v H v Wheat (1883) 246. It is the determination of a political question by another department of the government which is binding on the Judge. Jones v United States 157 U. S. 213 (1901), Harr Jones § 107 (a). As regards the commencement of hostilities see The Fenonia Duncan v Kiser, 8 Mo. P. C. (N. S.) 111-112, L. R. 3 P. C. 171-176 L. 1 15. Under ss. 6 and 8 of Act II of 1855 the Gazette of India or C. deputed Gazette containing official letters on the subject of hostilities between the British Crown and the Representative v Pennant's and Oriental Branch Service (1923) A. C. 191-92 L. 1 K B 112-125 L. 1 516. The statement by H. M.'s Commissioner and Consul General for India is sufficient for the Court's taking judicial notice, under s. 7 Evidence Act, of the existence of hostilities between Kaberja, the King Unyoro and Her Majesty the Queen and the protected states of Uganda. Imperatrix v Juma, 22 B. 54.

Clause XII. According to English law under the general principle of recognizing domestic officials, notice is taken of the incumbency of other officers to the extent to which the officers, particularly Fidderlton's Case, v Turner, 6 Q. B. 117, Wymore "It lies and authorities to the incumbents, but whether the incumbent at a given time and place is a specific person depends on the facts, but sometimes on principle."

101 Wymore § 206. But in rule is forced and all Courts must take judicial notice of the names of the members and officers of the Court and of their deputies and subordinate officers and assistants, and process, and of all advocates, persons authorized by law to Act II of 1855, the Court was Jillunt Chaelerbutty v Sheo

Nairam, 8 W. R. 276

"law of the road," was not to be considered as inflexible, since, in crowded streets situations and circumstances might frequently arise, where a deviation from what is called the law of the road, would not only be justifiable, but absolutely necessary. Where the defendant was driving on the wrong side of the road, which was of considerable breadth, and the plaintiff's servant, who was on horse back, without any reason crossed over to the side on which the defendant was driving, and on endeavouring to pass, his horse was killed. Lord

the plaintiff
680 And
of the road,
if he kept to
■ 719 As

regards rules of road, vide Leame v Bray, 3 Ex & 33, Turley v Thomas 8 C & P 104

The Court will take judicial notice of the following rules with respect to navigation,—first, that ships and steamboats, on meeting "end on or nearly end on, in such a manner as to involve risk of collision" should port their

In all cases and also on all matters of public history etc Notorious facts of foreign history will be noticed, whether ancient or contemporaneous. The existence of a war in a foreign country, at a given time, will be regarded as a fact of common knowledge. But special historical facts of comparatively slight general importance connected with a particular state and the consequences regarded as commonly known. D importance will be considered in determining what facts of foreign history minor. Any Court of a nation will know as matters of common knowledge notorious facts in the nation's history. Where these are a direct result of legal action the knowledge of the Court may also be judicial,—as in the case of

imj
jud
imj suc
of
ma

state, what was the tenure of office of the succession, chief magistrates of state, the date of a general or national election need not be established by evidence. Ibid § 793. The general history of the great-national parties is a fact of common knowledge. Ibid § 799. When in doubt as to any matter to be judicially noticed the Judge may refer for information to appropriate sources. Philp Ev 4th Ed p 17. Taylor Ev 10th Ed § 21. The Judge may resort to such means of reference as may be at hand, and as he may deem worthy of confidence. Green Ev § 295, Tay Ev § 21. The provision that the Court may resort for its aid to appropriate books is in advance on the English Law under which though an expert called as a witness, will be allowed to refresh his memory by referring to a professional treatise regarded by him as of authority yet it but see Willot judicial cogniz

of some matter for his Court's knowledge and notice must frequently demand upon him, to which, without some means of reference—or refreshing his memory—might not be able to respond. It does not necessarily his me whethe resolve happen

ration concerning matters which have not been referred to in the evidence, in which he is obliged to resort to any source of information which in its nature is calculated to be trustworthy and helpful, always seeking first for that which is most satisfactory; and in cases too concerning matters of law, and in other cases he may use all proper means for satisfying himself in any way that appears to him satisfactory. For Jones § 132. In a New York case the opinion shows that the Court had referred to various documents and to Pollard's and Greenly's histories of the Civil War. Sumner v. Churches 112 C., 37 N. Y. 174. In the celebrated Dickens case Cut v. Justice evidently had light upon the social and political Sanford 11 How. (U. S.) 333, For Jones § 132. Dr. Wier illustrates the principle thus: "The Judge may consult works on collateral science or arts, touching the topic at hand. He may draw for instance, on mythology, in order to determine the meaning of similes in an ambiguous writing. He may refer to almanacs (Pigeon v. Pigeon, 10 Cr. 112 227), he may appeal to his own memory for the meaning of a word in the vernacular (For v. Wood 11 Moo. C. C. 323, Cornwall v. Gilling 2 Camp. 25, Mundy v. Cole L. R. 71 x 70); he may, as to the meaning of Latin, refer to dictionaries of science of all classes (For v. Gilling, 6 C. & P. 186, Pierce v. Lee 1 Leon. 242, Atten v. Drummond 1 C. & L. 210, Sutton v. Sutton 9 C. & L. 25; Burner v. Atten 8 Kn. 11; In re St. Catherine Hospital 1 Vent. 11). Stinner v. Brewster 1 Salk. 281; Cornwall v. Gilling 2 Camp. 25. He may determine the meaning of the abbreviations of Christian names and others, and of other common terms, as to a point of

he may consult 241, Updell v.
811), he may
Lloyd 1 Man

& P. 650), and Lord.

reference as to a rule of R. 772" Wharton F. 11. . . . called upon to decide as to what particular date in the English calendar a certain date in the Jewish year corresponds with, may resort for its aid to appropriate books or documents of reference, and in such a case an almanac containing the British and Jewish calendars may be referred to. Quid Judicial calendar was not compiled expressly for the purpose of showing corresponding dates in the different era, and was not an appropriate document of reference in such a case. Raghubar v. Sheo Chm 10 C. 152. In all those and the like cases where the memory of the Judge is at fault, he resorts to such documents or other means of reference as may be at hand, and may deem worthy of confidence cases of war which were not produced. Cited by Butler J in R v. Holt, 5 F. R. 416. But in many other cases, the English Courts have themselves made the necessary inquiries, and that, too, without strictly confining their researches to the time of the trial. Taylor § 21, Taylor v. Harlow 2 Sim. 231; The Charkieh 42 L. J. Adm. 17 cited in Lachin v. Naram v. Hyslop 2 A. 17, Chandler v. Grievs, 2 H. Bl. 666 n. For v. Lloyd 1 M. & Cr. 64, Worsley v. Fisher, 2 2 Roll follow

v. Bor Lachin.

516
"from producing evidence, it make a request for it. Up said to declare the fact noticed, or at least to make the investigation which it

7. deems necessary No doubt, in most instances, the rule of law has the plain consequence of compelling the Judge to declare the dispensation, not to do so would be to err, precisely as under any other rule of law. But it must not be supposed that this is universal.

numerous topics, near the line.

Court may but not must, take,

nized,

notice

of the

Cas 114. In a suit for declaration that a church and its properties were trusts and the plaintiffs were its trustees and for possession of the same from defendants certain documents consisting of printed letters of the Priests of the dated about 75 years ago were ad-of reference to prove the history of the books were admissible to prove facts of public history, they could not be relied upon to prove where certain particular Missionaries were living or when they died. The Court can dispense with evidence only of what may be regarded as notorious facts of public history. Ambalam v J M Barthe (1912) 11 W N 152=13 Ind Cas 99. A document may be referred to in connection with ancient facts of a public nature provided it is an approved, public and general history. It is provided by this section:

literature science or art the Court may res.

books of reference. Lira Channamal v

the question whether a certain property was a matter of public history within the meaning of this section, and historical works cannot be referred to for the purpose of deciding the question. Sant Singh v Rulla Ram, 126 Ind Cas 744=

A I R 1930 Lah 738. "It is to be observed that the section does not say how any fact history

Court liberty

on matters of p

Rai 14 C W

before the suit in which the usage of the institution and its history are described, both being matters relevant to the suit. Augustine v Medico 15 M 241. Evidence of the sources of common knowledge, if not its extent may perhaps be obtained by reference to a cyclopædia and the list of text books to be found but detailed information supplied from such sources requires usually to be supplied by experts. United States v St Albans, 131 Ind Cas 771=A I R 1931 P. C 189.

It

all men

It can

If so,

presently in s 49. But none of the principle

on which the matters of science sections. When the Court has art, the opinion upon that point

art are relevant facts under s 45

the rule in regard to the admission of expert testimony is thus stated by Laurie.
'It is not sufficient to warrant the introduction of expert testimony that the witnesses may know more of the subject of inquiry and may better comprehend and appreciate it, than the jury, but to warrant its introduction, the subject of inquiry must be one relating to some trade, profession, science or art in which persons instruct

more skill and

generally to have

witnesses, and by

between the parties

such a nature that reference to them, and draw inferences from them, as witnesses, then there is occasion require

 be mut
 known,
 cations, will be judicially noticed, but they must be of such universal notoriety and so generally understood that they may be regarded as forming part of the common knowledge of every person Hurr Jones § 123 So Mr. Justice Mirkby is not correct in his interpretation of this section when he says "What perhaps it meant is that, though the parties must obey the law as laid down in ss. 45 and 60, the Judge may resort for his own aid to appropriate books without restriction." This principle of the rule contained in this section The Corporation of Calcutta, 22 C. W. N. 745. is Court by the prosecution in support of A. As regards the admissibility of these bo these books
 I see that one or mo Magistrate's Court. In my opinion del thereby to make these books and all their contents evidence in the case. The use of such books by the Court is regulated by sections 57 and 60 of the Evidence Act
 ma
 all
 or refe
 ded
 sup
 of
 on

uence may be referred to Hatum v Empress, 12 C L R 86 A Court, suo motu, will know whatever every one, as a rule knows about the characteristic properties of material substances, in solid, liqui Regarding solids, the Court will notice familiar,—as that certain substances are the movements of gases The Court w dynamite are dangerous by reason of their liability to create an explosion So also no proof need be offered of the well known qualities of common forms of matter in a liquid state specified conditions, to exj conducted in pipes, and should bring out the expli knowledge Chamberlayne
 established and notoriou tribunal The conclusions of such inve regarding matters of general interest, are c tions of scientific knowledge, about which opinion, must be proved, if their truth is layne's Ev § 720 The scientific prin

OF SOLID COM IN SCIENCE mechanical occupations, these and similar facts, so far as popularly known, will be known by the Court upon ordinary principles Chamberlayne's Ev § 765.

7. Facts of Social life No proof need be offered of facts which are well known incidents of the social life of the community. "Quicquid agant homines" said Lord Mansfield, "is the business of Courts, and as usages of society alter, the law must adapt itself to the various situations of mankind." Barrell v Brooks, 3 Dougl 371, 373. "It is the duty of Courts judiciously to know what is the general course of the transactions of human life." Duncan v Little, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 424, 426; Chamberlayne v El § 755

Private Knowledge of the Judge In deciding a case a Judge cannot bring his judgment on his own personal knowledge. Durga Prasad v Ram Doyal, 38 C 153. There is a real but elusive line between the Judge's personal knowledge as a private man and his knowledge as a Judge. The latter does not necessarily include the former, as a Judge indeed, he may have to ignore what he knows as a man, and contrariwise. Wignore § 2569; Chamberlayne v El § 574. That rule was laid down so far back as the year 1406. In arguing a question as to the duty of the Court not to have rendered a certain judgment, counsel put this case: "Sir let us put the case that one man kills another in your presence, guilty is indicted before you and is report to the King, to give him this case, before causing those to appear by whose hands the King was paid. Gascoigne C J said: "Once the King himself asked of me the very case that you have put, and asked me what was the law, and I told him just as you say it, and he was well pleased that the law was so." Year Book, 7 H IV, 41, pl 6 cited in Wignore Cas 751, Wignore § 2569, Patridge v Strange, Plowd 83; Marriot v Pascal, 1 Leon 159, 161. But Mr Haules, Solicitor General arguing said: "It is said, though a Judge do think in his conscience a person at the behavior, and the person the truth of such incidents is contested between the parties, he should mention his private knowledge of such incidents to the parties and he should refuse to be the judge in that case unless both the parties, after he so mentions to them his said personal knowledge of that particular incident, state that they have no objection to his continuing as Judge." See also Hurjuchal v. Shro Dast, 3 I. A. 259-26 W R 55 P C. Similarly where a case is to be tried by jurors, "the personal knowledge of any juror concerning any probative fact involved in the case under consideration is not to be considered in deciding the case. Such a juror should communicate his information to the Court, and if he is not excused from service and it is deemed proper to his cognizance of such a fact in the trial, he must be sworn as a witness and examined, subject to

But any experience knowledge good prove fatal. It is common knowledge, also, that a forest tree cut nearly in two at the butt will fall, if a high wind blows against it. If a witness should testify to the contrary to these ordinary phenomena, the common knowledge of the juror derived from his experience in such matters would naturally compel him to discredit that witness. Many illustrations might be given where men are normally and legitimately influenced in considering testimony by their general knowledge and experience. It is utterly impracticable in the administration of Courts of justice to secure a juror whose mind is totally blank as to questions involved in the ordinary transactions of life. Truere of fact cannot, in the nature of things be divested of general knowledge of practical affairs. The Court cannot do otherwise than to direct them to use such experiences as are common to all men in the decision of questions of fact. It is part of the jury system which cannot be dispensed with." Per Burnett C J in Rustad v Portland R L & P. Co, 101 Or. 569 (Am), 11 Amore § 2570 judicial notice is standard O'Donnell, Ald 303), 1001, L R.

3 Q B 197); Phip Ev 7th Ed 25. So a Court will take judicial notice of matters of universal notoriety as general knowledge of daily life. But a Judge cannot use from the Bench under the guise of judicial knowledge that which he knows only as an individual observer. He cannot therefore impart into a case his knowledge of the previous conduct of the accused. Shamburam v Emperor, 25 S L R 213-132 Ind C 18 176. It would be unfair to the Railway Company to take judicial notice of thefts on the

Lal, 111 Ind C 18 523-A I R. judicial notice of the fact that there is between the arrival of a registered letter from the Post Office or in other words that a registered letter takes 24 hours longer than an ordinary letter. Form of Chatterbhuy v Secretary of State, 99 Ind Cas 622-A I R 1927 All 215. So also judicial notice can be taken of the course of post, the stamp of post-offices on letters, and the fact that post cards are un them, and Huth v Hut repeatedly Sano v Pun community be taken ju 186-A I 2 O W N Courts are

Bux 93 Ind Cas 333-A I R 1926 Oudh 352 Courts must take judicial notice of provisions of s 24, Paper Currency Act, without defendant having raised the objection in his defence at all. Mirza Hidayat v Nga Kyang, U R R. (1914) 1st Qr 13-24 Ind Cas 721. A registered power of attorney was admitted under s 57 of the Evidence Act without proof as the registering officer is a Court under s 3 of the Act. Kristo Nath v T F Brown, 14 C. 176. In E-

7. judicial :

Doms vUniversit

8 E & B

domestic animals Aye v Niblett, (1918)

have also noticed judicially that boys a

Hardwick 32 T L R 159 H L ; Williams vSmith, 17 T L R 235, 423 ; Sullivan vDublin Co, 39 Tr L T R 126 ; Phip Ev 7th Ed p. 25.

Judicial notice of facts transpiring in Court. A Court can take judicial notice of facts transpiring in Court. Chattira Kumari v. Mohan Bihari, 121 Ind. Cas. 337 = 1931 Pat 114

§ 2567. Since judicial notice is an expedient for hastening the trial and elimina-

Books referred to by Courts. The following are some of the books which the Courts often resorted to in order to ascertain the matters of history, literature, science, art, etc. —

(1) Directions for Revenue Officers in the North Western Provinces, promulgated by the Lieutenant Governor and prepared probably by Mr. Thompson. Id. Rul 29

1 (17)
Forester
Ajmodin

17 B 448

(7) Buchanan's Journey in Mysore, Ibid pp 56, 57(8) Todd's Rajasthan, Ibid pp. 56, 57 ; Moharana v Vadial, 20 B. 61 (72)

(9)

(10)

(11)

(12)

(13)

(14)

(15)

Ibid 29 (82)

Framji Nanabhai,
443 (444) ; Ranga-

7 B H

*sams v*2 12 B H C. R.

(16)

199 (207)

Roman Law. Jalindra Mohun v Ganendra: Dictionary Hormasji v. Poddar, 12 B H

C R 199 (207).

(20) Domat, 2413 Jalindra v Ganendra, supra.(21) Mr. Prinsep's Table Forester v. Secretary of State, 18 W. R 359 (364).(22) Seaton's letter. Ibid.

(23) Histories, firmans, treatises, and even replies from Foreign office. The Charkish, L R 4 A. & E. 59 ; Phip. Ev 4th Ed p 17 ; cited in Lachmi Narain v Ragh Partap, 2 A-1 (17)

(21) The collection of treatises originally published by Mr Atchison, the Secretary to the Government of India. Lachmi Narain v. Raja Partap, 2 A. 1 (17)

(25) Atchison's Treatises. Lachmi Narain v. Raja Partap, 2 A. 1 (15).

(26) New Oxford Dictionary. Dalalhai v. Jimselst, 21 B. 291.

(27) The work of Grotius, Vattel, Puffendorf, Chalmers, Wheaton, Phillimore and Twiss. Damodar v. Deoram, 1 B 367 (P. C); Lachminarain v. Raja Partap, 2 A. 1 (23).

(28) Lord Palmerston's speech in the debate on the relinquishment by the British of India v. Gordon, 1 B 350.
House of Lords on the

P 357

Munro. Yenkatanara-

sinha v. Dandannu, 20 M. 302

(32) Dewan Bahadur Srinivasa Ayyanger's "Progress in the Madras Presidency" Ibid

(33) Richardson's Manuk. Mathen Shuc v Maung Kan Gye, U. B R. (1897-1900) Vol. II, 112.

(34) Letter's Manual of Buddhist Law Ibid

(35) Kin Wun Mingyi's Digest. Ibid

(36) Hagana Dhammathat, Dr Forchhammer's, Ibid

(37) Crokes on Caste and Tribes Mariam Bibee v. Sheikh Mahmood, 28 C. L. J. 366

(38) Riekeley's Tribes and Castes in Bengal Santa v Dadasuvar, 27 C. W. N. 669

(39) Hunter's Imperial Gazetteer of India In the matter of the German Steamship Drachenfels, 27 C 860.

(40) Encyclopaedia Britannica. Annu Kumaru v Muthupayal, 27 M. 531-14 M. L. J. 248.

(41) District Gazetteer of Bengal. Lalu Domo v Duoy, 13 C. 217-20 C. W. N. 401

(42) Hunter's Statistical : : : : : Dadasuvar, 27 C. W. N. 669, Secretary of Si

(43) Mandsley's Respons Empress v Kader Nath Sha, 28 C 603

(44) Bicknill and Tuke's Psychological Medicine Ibid

(45) Simcox's Primitive Civilization Rama Samu v Nagendra Narain, 10 M 33.

(46) Notes on Buddhist Law by Jardine. Ms Me v Ms Shuc, 16 C W N 529 (P. C)

Anna Kumaru Pillai v Muthupayal, 27 M

Pearl Fisheries and Marine Fauna of the Fisheries Ibid

(50) Rajendra Lal Mitter's Buddha Gaya Jaspala Gur v Dharam Lal, 23 C 60

(51) Martin's edition of Buchanan Hamilton's Eastern India Ibid

and Custom Cheru Kuneth v Vengunat, of Malabar Agustine v Medlicot, 15 M 19 M 31

(54) Dr Lyon's Medical Jurisprudence for India Fulan Singh v Dhanuvar, 24 A 415

(55) Medical Gazette Ibid

(56) Murphy's Obstet Rep. Ibid.

(57) Playfair's Midwifery. Ibid.

(58) Treaty with Nawab of Bhopal by the East India Company Lachmi

Damodar v Deoram, 1 B 367 (P. C)

abhan v Bas Huabhan, 7 C W. N. 712 oms and ceremonies." Ramaswami x

58. (62) Shakespeare's Dictionary Gajraj Puri v Achubir Puri, 16 A 191 (P C)
 (63) Fergusson's History of Architecture Secretary of State v Shunmugaraya 16 M 693 P C = 20 I A 80
 (64) Houghton's History of Christianity in India Augustine v Medlicot, 15 M 241
 (65) Stephen's History of Criminal Law of England. Queen Empress v Hedar Nasse, 23 C 604 (608)
 (66) Geographical, Statistical and Historical Account of Orissa by Sir Ling Shyamamand v Rama Kantia, 32 C 6, 13
 (67) 'India Orientalis Christiana' Augustine v Medlicot, supra.
 (68) Will's History of Mysore Ialir v Truamala, 1 M 213
 (69) Ibbetson's Census Report Ghulam v Secretary of State, 6 Lah 269
 (70) Wynyards Settlement Report Byat v Bhupendra, 17 A. 456 (P C)

58. No fact need be proved in any proceeding which the parties thereto or their agents agree to admit at the hearing, or which, before the hearing, they agree to admit by any writing under their hands, or which by any rule of pleading in force at the time they are deemed to have admitted by their pleadings.

Provided that the Court may, in its discretion, require the facts admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admission.

Principle A Court, in general has to try the question on which the parties are at issue not on those on which they are agreed Burjory, Cursetji v Munckharji, 5 M 143 (152), Mo Gowan v Smith 26 L J Ch 8. An express waiver, made in Court or preparatory to trial, by the party or his attorney, conceding for the purpose of the trial the truth of some alleged fact has the effect of a confession pleading, in that the effect is thereafter to be taken for granted; so that the one party need offer no evidence to prove it, and the other is not allowed to disprove it. This is what is commonly termed a solemn—i. e., ceremonial or formal—or judicial admission, or stipulation. It is, in truth, a substitute for evidence, in that it does away with need for evidence. Wigmore § 2538. It waives or dispenses with the production of evidence by conceding for the purposes of litigation that the proposition of fact alleged by the opponent is true. Wigmore § 1033. "Agreements of this character, intelligently and deliberately made,—whether made by the parties in person, or by their attorneys or solicitors of record,—are encouraged and favoured. Their purpose generally is to save costs, and to expedite trials, by relieving from rules of practice which in the particular case are deemed mere hindrances, or the dispensation with mere formal proof, or, in the present case, the admission of uncontroverted facts, of the existence of which the parties are fully cognizant." Peo Brickel J in Prestwood v Watson, 111 Ala 604 (Am.); Wigmore § 2538.

Scope of the section No evidence is required of matters which are admitted for the purpose of the trial. Admissions for the purpose of dispensing with proof at the trial which are called judicial admissions must be distinguished from those tendered at evidence,—the former not being usually receivable in other proceedings and the latter not being usually conclusive. Phup Li 7th Ed 18. This section includes judicial admissions including admissions made in the pleadings. The effect which a judicial admission produces is of course an effect showed in common with certain other legal acts. In the first place, a pleading may, by confessing a fact, place it beyond the range either of needing evidence or of permitting dispute, and an omission to plead in denial may have the same consequence. The distinction between a pleading and a judicial admission seems to consist in the circumstances that the latter may be made after issues joined or trial begun, and may thus counteract or diminish the effect of a pleading, that it is not a part of the required statements defining the parties' issues; and that it is therefore not subject to the rules of time.

form, amendment, and the like, which govern the allegations of pleading. Wigmore § 2589 Under this section no fact need be proved which the parties at the hearing or which by any rule of pleading in force at the time they are deemed to have admitted by their pleadings. Where a plaintiff admitted, in a written statement in a former suit and in question, an agreement set up by the defendant took for consideration not to redeem a mortgage, the defendant in the face of

Maunq Kot

to civil as well as to criminal cases Bhulan v Emperor, 31 Ind Crs 233, Bansilal v Emperor, 30 Bom L R 646=52 Bom L R 686=A I R 1928 Bom 641 This section has in general no application to divorce cases Over v Over, 27 Bom L R 251=A I R 1925 Bom 231=49 B 368 This section normally relates to agreed statements of facts made between both parties to save time and expense at a trial But facts, and no pleading has been put in admission has been made in his pleading, complaint to the contract in suit having no practices of the office is no indication whatsoever to the defendants that the plaintiffs rely on one of the supposed terms of this "office dhara" in support of their claim, or that one of the supposed terms of this "office dhara" is an implied stipulation :

ful consideration, with regard not only of , but with regard to the time at which they were made, their use in the action of which they form the basis, their use dehors that action, the change brief by the circumstances making them, including knowledge and those alleged matters of fact evidence against such 272. The admission relating to the progress must be some other proof of authority to make the admission Wagstaff v. Wilson, 4 B & Ad 339

There is another class of judicial admissions, made by the payment of money into Court, upon a rule granted for that purpose. Here, it is obvious, the defendant conclusively admits that he owes the money thus tendered in payment (Bichun 558); that it is due (Bendict, 5 Bing 28; 285, Huntington v claim it in the character in which he sues Liscombe v. Holmes, 2 Camp. 441); that the Court has jurisdiction in the matter (Miller Williams, 11 Esp. 19 21); that the contract described is rightly set forth, and was duly executed (Gutteridge v. Smith, 2 H Bl 374, Israel v Benjamin, 3 Campb. 40); that it was broken in the manner and to the extent declared (Dyer v. Ashton, 1 B & C. 3), and if it was a case of goods sold by sample, that they agreed with the sample (Leggett v money into Court obliged to prove in Stapleton v. Nouell, Walker, 9 Dowl 21, 58.

may make admissions for the purpose of by agreement or otherwise, before or at the admissions may be made by pleadings 226; Burjoj).
the client.
to a decree
6 W. R. 132
by reference

needed to be any further or contradict
no evidence
Ibid § 2591 A party or his agent admission of oral evidence contained in the 4th proviso to section 92 of the Evidence Act Ibid. But in the same case Seshagiri Aiyar J said: "The rule of law enunciated in Stallard v. Pooley, 6 M. & W. 664, which accepted oral admissions of every kind as proving documents, has no doubt been departed from in India [see section 22 of the Evidence Act and sections 59 and 65(b)] in the nature of

proved.

Different kinds of judicial admissions This section deals with admissions made voluntarily, or pursuant to a notice counsel or of shorthand writers, are admissible to controvert the statement of the Judge. Reg. v. Pestonjy, 10 B. H. C. R. 75(81).

facts admitted at the
If it means before the ready applies to it. If then, in a civil case, no
the

a plea of not guilty, can
"At the hearing", mea hearing. Thus where A first hearing orally asserts payment in full, at the final hearing no evidence of title or tenancy need be given. Whitely Stokes, Vol. II, p. 889. When an 810 Where the defendant admits the signature of his father in the mortgage deed, the plaintiff is relieved under this section from any further responsibility of proving the document. Lakshichand v Lalchand, 42 B 352=20 Bom L R 354=15 Ind Cas 351, Arjun Sahu v Kelai, 2 Pat 317=71 Ind Cas 150. Where the fact of a prior partition of parties, the same need not be proved. Is not registered will not make the purpose. Maung Po Kim v Maung Shue 1 Rang 405=1924 Rang 155.

facts
be proved need
before the hearing it is as evidence, and for this purpose or not Admissions in which under consideration when the Judge is considering what issues are to be tried be genuine, unless they are admitted on given to the Court by the admissions of the Civil Procedure Code, at issues are to be tried before the to allow a party to withdraw his Markby Lc p 51 Each party

been held to preclude any evidence on the point Unquhart v Butterfield, 37 Ch D 357, 369, 374 C A, Ellis v Allen, (1911) 1 Ch 904, Plap Ev 7th Ed 15. Admissions made or by stipulations drawn if not true, which to prepare his case, and provided such party has not been injured by relying on such admissions. Wallace v Mathews, 39 Gr 617 (Am). Such admissions will not be allowed to be withdrawn, however if the situation of the parties has been substantially changed, as by the death of a party or of a witness. Wilson v Bank of Louisiana, 55 Gr 98 (Am). If a party desires to withdraw admissions of the character under discussion, he should give full and timely notice of his purpose, so that the other party may have reasonable time to supply the proof. Hargreaves v Redel, 43 Gr 142, Ellons v Larkins, 5 Car & P. 385, Burn Jones § 274.

Admission by pleading. "Every allegation of fact in the plaint, if not denied specifically or by necessary implication, or stated to be not admitted in the pleading of the defendant, shall be taken to be admitted except as against a person under disability." Civil Pro Code, Order 8, rule 5. That rule states what amounts to admission. Defendant must deny not admit the truth if not denied in the written statement or stated to be not admitted, shall be taken to be admitted by the defendant. (Rule Mullas' Civil Pro Code, note under rule)

tion of his opponent, or he may state he does not admit the allegation. But an allegation which is not specifically denied, or stated to be not admitted, is treated as admitted. Bpl v Nunn, 11 Ch D 751 all 7 Ch D 251, Green v. Selim, (1879) 11 Ch D 559; Collis v Gossle, 7 Ch D 512. A refusal to admit must be stated as specifically as a denial. Thorp v. Hollisworth, 3 Ch.

58 D 637, 640; Hall v L & N W Ry Co, 35 L T 849 Leave in a proper case may be given to a party to recall admissions which he has made. Hollis v Burton, (1892) 3 Ch 226 C A Where a document is by reference included in

In revision it was contended that the plaintiffs had not proved the notice Held that the defendants must be deemed to have admitted notice under order VIII, rule 6, C P Code, and proof was dispensed with under s 58 Commissioners make the suit triable only by the court, however, made over the trial of it who had no jurisdiction to try it, Neither party raised any objection on the ground of jurisdiction and no issue was raised relating to it The trial proceeded on merits and the subordinate Judge passed a decree for partition in favour of the plaintiffs The defendants in their appeal to the District Court raised for the first time the question of jurisdiction on the strength of the market value stated in the plaint The objection having been overruled, they appealed to the High Court Held that as neither party raised any question as to want of jurisdiction arising from the allegation in the plaint, and as they by their conduct and silence treated the market value to be the amount sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Court, they dispensed with proof on the question by their tacit admissions, and thus the principle of law laid down in s 58, came into operation and prevented the result of the statement of the market value in the plaint Jose Antonio v Francisco, 12 Bom L R 712 Where the defendants in their written statements admitted that they had executed a deed of mortgage on account of an old

the production of the mortgage deed was unnecessary under the provisions of section 58 of the Evidence Act Maung Khan v Maung Myat, 11 Ind Ca 380 Plaintiff sued for redemption alleging that he had sold the land in suit out and out to the defendant for Rs 250 less than 12 years before suit but that at the time of sale a stipulation was made for repurchase by the plaintiff at any time on payment of the purchase money Held that as the plaintiff had admitted in the plaint the factum of an absolute sale in favour of the defendant it was when a party makes solemn admissions against his interest in a pleading, they should be treated as admitted facts, and he will not be heard to question the correctness of the statements the pleading On this point the case of Mc Gowan v Smith, 26 L J 100 the other referred to, seem conclusive A Court, in general, has to try the questions on which the parties are at issue, not those on which they are agreed, S. and admissions which have been deliberately suit, whether in pleading or by agreement, mission of any evidence contradicting them that is by reference incorporated Evidence, 457) The point is not ments of the parties a plea or does not directly put in issue

st object of what is the
In App at the cause
the plaintiff

or in the written statements tendered in the suit which here contain a full assertion and admission of the execution of the document A by the defendant Munchery. But the issues, as they stand, were suggested by the defendant's counsel. They waive controversy as to the actual execution of the document, assume it to have been executed, and raise questions only that depend for their plaintiff is not,
or to put it in evi-
for some purpose

on consider effect usual
allowed to But an ad
exists and that fact subsequent to the date of the admission "Lauson's Presumptive Ev 2nd Ed 237, McLeod v Waleley, 3 C Lord Tenterden C J said 'I do not think, can be extended to a publication after its goes down to its date, but not further"

Distinction between evidentiary admissions and admissions by pleadings.
There is a distinction between evidentiary admissions and admissions by the pleadings. This section governs admissions by pleadings Sadhu v Naa Sigg, U B R
sing with proof
evidence, the for

the fullest sense of the term, is another thing,

and involves a totally the necessity of offer item in the mass of evi with which this section need of any evidence
course of judicial process evidence by conceding alleged by the opponent is true Wigmore § 1058

s of husband or wife lose, as a
they are to be used in divorce establishes a form of fraudulent her contracts, the contract of
and argument of the parties, and in actions for dissolution of this contract, that is for divorce, admissions are closely scrutinized. Although the husband and wife are the parties to the

8. consent of and in the manner prescribed by the State. It necessarily follows that no admissions by either party to the contract, however collusive upon such party, can be conclusive upon the State in a suit for the dissolution of the contract and that such dissolution cannot safely be deemed unless the admission be corroborated by strong proofs. Burr Jones § 262. In Williams v Williams, 1 Hagg 299, Lord Stowell says that a confession is a species of evidence which though not inadmissible, is to be regarded with great distrust, while in Mortimer v Mortimer, 2 Hagg 310, the same learned Judge announces that a confession, though in the support of a charge, is, 2 Hagg 311, a confession perfectly true and conduct ranks among the highest species of evidence. The suit for divorce has been called a triangular proceeding in genere, in which the government occupies the allow of an accused admission

there is nothing to prevent Criminal Procedure on admissions on matters
seems to be no reason his presence at the trial so as to dispense with the attendance of witnesses for
the
But
case

by consent. Per Patteson J in ibid, courta, Phips 11. When the attorneys on both sides had agreed that the formal proofs in perjury should be dispensed with, and that part of the prosecutor's evidence admitted, L Abinger C B said. 'In a criminal case tried on the crown side of the assizes, I can not allow any admission to be made on the part of the defendant unless it is made at the trial, 8 C & P 575 (1838), Queen v Kazim Mundle, Cr 80; Jeremiah v Vas, 36 Cr 11. Queen v Emperor 26 difference. Furthermore, I am not convinced that s 58 Evidence Act does not apply to justify the action of the Sessions Judge. No doubt in England

an admission by an accused, which falls short of his pleading guilty, is not taken into account and is not binding against him. But section 58 makes no exception in regard to criminal proceedings and while I do not say that it can be availed of to cure a clear contravention of any directions of the Criminal Procedure Code as to the course of a trial yet I think it can apply in a case like this, which relates only to proceedings of an appellate Court." Bansal v Emperor, A I R 1928 Bom 211 (24) = 112 Ind Crs 120 = 52 B 686 = 30 Bom L R 646. But admissions made by a pleader appointed to help the accused in his defence are not binding on him to his prejudice. Per Mulla J in ibid. This above rule is especially applicable in murder cases. Sheo Narain v Emperor, 21 Cr L J 777 = 58 Ind Cas 457. It is not in accordance with the usual practice to accept a plea of guilty in a case where the natural sequence would be a sentence of death. Hasaruddin v Emperor, A I R 1928 Cal 775, see also Emperor v Bhadu, 19 A 119, Laxmaya v Emperor, 19 Bom L R 356, Emperor v Chua 11 Bom L R 240. The rule is the same in America. Vule State v Max 78 Conn 19, where Hamerley J said "It is true that in the trial of capital offences the Court will and should exercise care and discretion in respect to admissions made by the accused or by his Counsel in open Court, and so even a plea of guilty will not ordinarily be accepted." Wigmore § 2597.

Proviso. This proviso corresponds to proviso to rule 5 of Order VIII of the Civil Procedure Code. Both under section 58 of the Evidence Act and under Order VIII, rule 5 of the Code of Civil Procedure the trial Court has a discretion to require proof of the due attestation of a statement of admission by the defendant if the statement has not been duly executed. Munappa v : : : :
L W 5 = 25 M L T 19 = 19 Ind Crs 278

as the proviso to rule 5 of Order VIII of the Civil Procedure indicates the Court has not to be construed Order 10 of the English Order VIII of the Civil Procedure Code does not contain the proviso. There the rule of pleading is very stringent. According to that rule a defendant who omits to traverse in his defence any allegation of fact in the statement of claim is not allowed to traverse supported by s 58, proviso of the Evidence Act. Bhagwan Das v. Shoray, A I R 1931 Oudh 321 = 14 O L J 463

59. namely, the case in judgment, without injury to the general administration of justice Greenley on Law in Equity pp 349, 358, Greenl Ev § 206, Chamberlayne's Ev § 1210

Future of the Doctrine of Judicial Admissions 'The doctrine of Judicial Admissions' says Prof Wigmore "has a large future before it, if Judges will but use it adequately. In the first place the Judge should apply it to all informal as well as formal admissions by counsel during trial. In the next place the Judge should freely call upon counsel to state whether a fact is in good faith disputed, & c should require admissions to be made, where it seems probable that the fact is not actually disputed. By this method, the presentation of evidence will be confined to the dispute. It is easy to see how large a mass of evidence would be eliminated how much time would be saved how much jury would be avoided. And this would be an existing principle. Already in England it is used in the modern practice of settling issues before masters. But it can also be used by the Judge at the trial. Wigmore § 2597

Formal Judicial Admissions, conclusive 'The formal judicial admission party, even in an appellate Court or even on a subsequent trial of the same case, unless formal judicial admission shall have been made for a temporary purpose. Chamberlayne's Ev § 1264

CHAPTER IV.

OF ORAL EVIDENCE

Proof of facts by oral evidence

59. All facts, except the contents of documents, may be proved by oral evidence

Oral evidence Oral evidence is evidence which is confined to words spoken by the mouth. Per Petheram C J in Queen-Empress v Abdul, 7 A 385 (397) F B. It includes all statements which the Court permits or requires to be made before it by witnesses in relation to matters of fact under enquiry. Vide s 3. It is what the English lawyers call "testimonial evidence." Testimony is a species of evidence by means of witnesses. The broader term 'evidence' includes that which is given by witnesses or offered by documents. Vide s 3. In People v Kenyon, 5 Park Cr (N Y) 254, 288, Mr Justice Campbell said 'It may be well to bear in mind that there is marked difference between testimony and evidence. The latter is much more comprehensive than the former—evidence being whether by produced to a jury from the finding of any issue joined between parties

Testimony in legal as well as in common usage, signifies a statement of facts by witnesses, and to disprove the testimony of a witness is to disprove the "facts testified to by him." Lurr Jones § 11

Wordings of the section. This section is not very happily worded. Contents of documents may be proved by oral evidence under certain circumstances that is to say, when such evidence of their contents is admissible as secondary evidence. See section 63 cl 1, section 12, cl 8, Nat Ev 239

Contents of a document cannot be proved by oral evidence. It is a cardinal rule of evidence—not one of technicality, but of substance, that, where written documents exist, they shall be produced as being the best evidence of their own contents. Phonograph Roy Luchmiah 6 C L R 101=7 I A. 8 This section is based on the "best evidence" rule. entcaf

A fourth rule, which governs . . . which requires the best evidence of . . . This rule does not demand the greatest amount of evidence, which can possibly be given of any fact but its design is to prevent the introduction of any, which, from the nature of the case, supposes that better evidence is in the possession of the party. It is adopted for the prevention of fraud; for when it is apparent, that the better evidence is withheld it is fair to presume, that the party had some sinister motive for not producing it, and that, if offered, his design would be frustrated. The rule thus becomes essential to the pure administration of justice. In requiring the production of the best evidence applicable to each particular fact it is meant, that no evidence shall be received, which is merely substitutionary in its nature so long as the original evidence, can be had. The rule excludes only that evidence which itself indicates the existence of moral original sources of information. But where there is no substitution of evidence, but only a selection of the weaker, instead of stronger proofs, or an omission to supply all the proofs capable of . . .

Thus a title by deed must be . . . is within the power of the party, . . . is susceptible, and its non production some matter of apparent doubt of the deed itself may be proved though the other also is at hand. And even the previous examination of a deceased subscribing witness, if admissible on other grounds, may supersede the necessity of calling the survivor. So in proof or disproof of handwriting, it is not necessary to call the supposed writer himself. And, even where it is necessary to prove negatively, that an act was done without general necessary to call Ev § 82 In the case of held it very dangerous

to be proved by the testimony of witnesses, the court has held . . . Similarly in Vincent . . . always (perhaps more . . . rule that . . . what is in writing is . . .

experience has . . . in of witnesses, how- . . . they may be so easily . . . strict enforcement of . . . C II 912, Sheridan's . . . st Imam v Hargobind, . . . W R II (P C)=2 . . . 1 M I. A 19 (42, 43);

to prove . . . Oral evidence may suffice . . . W R 155; Shee Sahayee . . . 79 Oral evidence, if . . . cription. Mcharbin v . . . without documentary . . . v Aluma, 8 W R 366. . . ased relatives will be . . . admitted in the absence of any registers of births and deaths. Moheddeen v. Mahomed, 1 Ind Jur O S 132=1 M H C R. 92. It is not valid reason to

9. disbelieve the evidence of a witness

Rajendur Kishore, 9 W R 125, but see Goluck Chandra v Raja Sircend Buddadhar, W R (1861) 136 Oral evidence agreement; and, if sufficient, will justify Nund Mohun, 12 W. R 391 A Judge value, without a pattah and lobuljat

to prove the quantity misdirects himself in Dinoo Singh v Doorq
 while to prove an adj
Ram, 1 M H C R 100
 adduce oral
 W R 181
 in the absence

of document may in Guccalur, 20
 d in ruling that is not sufficient to

rabjt, 1 B H C writing is admissible

Oral evidence,
 conflicting and who decisive conclusion,
 in the case, and w
 both sides about the truth of which there can be no doubt. This alone can be the true method of arriving at a correct conclusion Abdul Halim v Rajah Sadat Ali, 108 Ind Cas 817=A I R. 1928 Oudh 155 Statements made by a witness at the trial should be altogether rejected when it is in hopeless conflict with his previous statements
 P L R. 659=A I R 1925: uncorroborated statement of a 12 years ago and which wa credit This precaution is nowhere more necessary than in this country It is true that there is no precaution of perjury against oral testimony, but it has, I believe been sufficiently confirmed by a long course of experience that anything can be more dangerous than to act upon such testimony, without testing its credibility both intrinsically and extrinsically'. Where there is contradiction of in order to see

I. A. 103 (107);

of the Judicial facts on the

attention to which they depose, or weakened by the mode in which their speak, it may to an extrem
is oral, and un
found is ext. It would be very dangerous to exercise the judicial function, as if no credit could necessarily be given to witnesses, deposing and so how necessary however it may be always to sift such evidence with great minuteness and care. This case was cited with approval in the case of Emperor
v. Balgangadhar Tilak, 6 Bom L. R. 321 (330)—28 B. 179, see also Wise v.
Sanduloomisso, 11 M. I. A. 187 (183); Queen v. Elahi Bux, B. L. R. (F. B.) 482, Sitap v. Chinnu, 10 M. I. A. 162, Edu v. Behan 11 W. R. 345. 'But it would be indeed, most dangerous to say that where the probabilities are in favour of the transaction, we conclude against it, solely because of the general fallibility of native evidence. Such an argument would go to an extent which can never be maintained in this or any other Court, for it tends to establish a rule that all oral evidence must be discarded; and it is most manifest that however fallible such evidence may be, however carefully to be watched justice evidence sub-

st be given to not be rejected uted without

Nachear, 14 M. I. A. 351, 355. Such rejection if sanctioned, would virtually smul v. Kalanthal

Bunuar v. Hinnaram 4 W. R. 128 (P. C.) In the words of Baron Parke in Mir Assabullah v. Bibi Imaman, 1 M. I. A. 19—5 W. R. P. C. 26, 'there is no ficting
r, than cases affairs

870=A. I. R. 1927 Sind 20

A
of wor
ought to have entered into it consideration, where the evidence but a case should not be decided up which the parties have submitted consideration that which ha

9. W. R 433 Evidence of witnesses though not independent, but not shaken in cross-examination and accepted by the Judge who heard them and saw their testimony told by 31 (P. C)

to the same transaction, and concur in their statement of a series of particular circumstances, and the order in which they occurred, such coincidence exclude all apprehension of mere chance and accident, and can be accounted for only by one or other of two suppositions, either the testimony is true, or the coincidences are the result of concert and conspiracy If, therefore, the independence of the limited, will be c

cited in Nort 53.

witnesses or Starkie on Di

Test of probability—Sir James F probability is the guide of life is an obvio

That

extent it generally resembles the common course of human conduct and of physical nature, that it is improbable deviation therefrom, and that it is impossible upon which all language and thought could be in two places at once and that two four; that it is nonsense unless it can be in some way represented to the mind of this disease or that, and yet to treat with contempt the notion that no one of witchcraft, and to reject all evidence tendered to prove it? Probably no more difficult question can be asked, and I doubt whether there is any which, if fully solved, would be of great practical importance." Stephen's General View of Criminal Law of England pp. 192, 193

Other tests of Probability "Evidence to be believed" said Vice-Chancellor Van Fleet of New Jersey, "must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but it must be credible in itself—such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable under the circumstances. We have no test of the truth of human knowledge, observation and experience.

to the miraculous, and is outside judicial knowledge, observation and experience.

37 N. J. Eq. 130, 132 But improbable. "A case how unlikely and suspicious so ever, in itself, may be irresistibly proved by the force of testimony," said Sir John Nichol, "Evidence may be such as to substantiate a transaction, however improbable; for it may be such that the falsehood of the evidence would be still more improbable than the fact which it seeks to establish." Soph v. Atkinson, 1 Add. Ecl. 162, 182. In another case the same learned Judge said "It seems hardly possible, on the mere improbability of a statement, to discredit the evidence of a witness of good

59. 213; Maharajah Rajender v Sheopursun, 10 M. I. A. 438 So the doctrine "falsus in uno falsus in omnibus" in this country affords a test of little or no value, a story at p 29

if the evidence adduced on both the matters in issue The parties using such evidence may have brought himself within the penalties of the criminal law, but the Court should not

by that party, or at least against such portion of that evidence as tends to the same It may perhaps also have the further mission for the evidence of his opponents where it happens, not uncommonly, that falsehood and fabrication are employed to support a just cause Goribulla Karze v Goorodas Roy, 2 W. R. (Act X) 99, see also Rameswar v Bharat, 4 C W N 18 P C, Casper v Kedarnath, 5 C W N 858 (861)

Uncontradicted testimony. I "he who tells nothing exceeding the that they should believe him who Johnson "If witnesses come unimpaired in point of general integrity," said Lord Stowell, "if any depose with character of fairness in their particular narrations the facts must be received, or there is an end of all judicial inquiry Human prudence has done its utmost, has done all that it is capable of doing, in giving every 1 Hag Cons 269, judicial proceeding have no safeguard, and the dress of wrongs, if the unanimity can be overthrown without 535. So "if the tribunal is permitted to discredit or disregard such testimony, City R Co 50 Misc (N Y) Harbison, 13 Int Rev 118.

performed, if it would obtain your give no right arbitrarily, and without Harbison, 13 Int Rev 118.

Disinterested witness "A witness of depraved and abandoned character rule that when a disinterested witness testifies to in conflict

be taken as not be disregarded by Court or jury." Kavanagh
v. Wilson, 70 N. Y. 177, 179 (Am.)

of view of the same thing.
a single incident, Courts expect minute of their testimonies, basis for discrediting their united testimony to rather to enhance the credit of the witnesses Haranand v. Ramgopal, 27 C. 639 (P. C.) = 1 C. W.
"No two witnesses' said Mr Justice Van Buren in Lyly v. N. Y. Supp 636 nating in the execution of a pr agreed in their description of t agreement is all that is required Nana Narain v. Huree Pantee, Mar-hall 436 (P. C.) It is to be expected that what was will be differently stated by different conversation hear or remember all that was impressions from what they heard, and of dates or of th
Moore on Fact
to testify is at contrariety of
v. Maule, 4 Hag
The Louther C
is taken de recenti facto may very well speak with greater certainty and specihca-tion as to the facts than other witnesses who testify at a much later time The

untruthful nature of the presumption in England
here the presumption is,
observations of the Privy Indian Courts in Raman
But however true this may are more untrustworthy
the fact is to be lamented, score of this difficulty"

Nort Ev p 55. Differences are commonly reconciled without resorting to strained and unnatural inferences in aid of either party.

60. Moore on Facts § 839 In a New Jersey Divorce Case, Chief Justice Beasley said: "To those who know from experience and reflection the laws which regulate the human memory, it does not seem singular that several persons, in speaking of a past transaction, do not each reproduce it in description with the same fulness of detail; but such is not the vulgar notion. Among the ignorant the strongest proof of the truth of testimony derived from several witnesses is the fact that the statement of each is merely identical with that of others. Hence, the exact similarity which we often see in the deposition of corrupt witnesses, whose evidence has been prearranged. But in the testimony of these two persons now before me, there are none of the usual marks of collusion. No two narrations unlike. It certainly has every currency, observed from different sources." 324 (337) (Am); see also Anna v

Court of New Brunswick pre-concert between proves nothing of the
as manufactured, if witnesses should vary

the account in order to avoid suspicion" Cornu v Carajuel, R Co, 20 N Burns 425, 436

Sometimes, however, discrepancies are so startling as to make it impossible be detected upon some broad collateral fact, than upon the transaction itself.

Brydges v King, 1 Hag Ecc 256

Oral evidence must be direct. 60. Oral evidence must, in all cases whatever, be direct; that is to say—if it refers to a fact which could be seen, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he saw it;

if it refers to a fact which could be heard, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he heard it;

if it refers to a fact which could be perceived by any other sense or in any other manner, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he perceived it by that sense or in that manner;

if it refers to an opinion or to the grounds on which that opinion is held, it must be the evidence of the person who holds that opinion on those grounds:

Provided that the opinions of experts expressed in any treatise commonly offered for sale, and the grounds on which such opinions are held, may be proved by the production of such treatise if the author is dead or cannot be found, or has become incapable of giving evidence, or cannot be called as a witness without an amount of delay or expense which the Court regards as unreasonable:

Provided also that, if oral evidence refers to the existence of S. condition of any material thing other than a document, the Court may, if it thinks fit, require the production of such material thing for its inspection.

Principle The first degree of moral evidence, and that which is most satisfactory to the mind, is afforded by our own senses; this being the direct evidence of the highest nature. Where this cannot be had, as is generally the case in the proof of facts by oral testimony, the law requires the next best evidence; namely, the testimony of those who can speak from their own personal knowledge. It is not requisite that the witness should have personal knowledge of the main fact in controversy, for this may not be provable by direct testimony, but only by inference from other facts shown to exist. But it is requisite that, whatever facts the witness may speak to, he should be confined to those lying in his own knowledge, whether they be things said or done, and should not testify from information given by others, however worthy of credit they may be. For it is found indispensable, as a test of truth and to the proper administration of justice, that every living witness should, if possible, be subjected to the ordeal of cross examination, that it may appear what were his known, cannot be subjected to this test, nor is it often possible to ascertain through whom, or how many persons the narrative has been transmitted from original witness of the fact. Greenl. Ev § 93. "The administration of an oath furnishes some guarantee for the sincerity of the opinion, and the power of value

F 689.

not a party to the suit is not admissible; because such person was not under oath and the opposite party had no opportunity to cross examine" Suiff C J. in Chapman v Chapman, 2 Conn 318. Gresham Hotel Co v Manning, Ir. R. 1 C L 125, Fide notes under § 32 pp. 464—467 supra.

or any one of
have received received some may be given recollection of Recollection, or Memory Thirdly, he must communicate this recollection to the tribunal; that is, there must be communication, or Narration, or Relation (for there is no single term entirely appropriate). Now the very notion of taking a human utterance as the basis of belief in the truth of the fact asserted impliedly attributes these three processes to the witness, Perception, Recollection, Narration. Whatever principles, therefore, affect the inference from testimonial assertions must have reference to some one or more of these elements.

Moreover, in the function fulfilled by each of three elements or processes are to be found in its probative value has in some way or reproduced to us in C perception, or whatever is called) should adequately represent, or correspond to the fact itself as it objectively existed or exists. The strength of the inference depends on the probability of a fairly accurate perception on the part of the witness. Again, the function of Recollection is to retain or recall impressions of observation; and the necessary condition of our trust is that Recollection fairly corresponds with or reproduces the original knowledge or Perception. Finally, the function of Narration (or, communication) is to reproduce and express, for the apprehension of the tribunal the Recollected results—themselves already retained from Perception. Thus, the common aim in the varied

60 problems under this head is to determine whether the story as told represents with fair accuracy the object which the witness once observed and now recalls — Wigmore's Principle of Judicial Proof § 147.

Generic Human Traits affecting Testimony But the individual witness' testimony is affected, not merely by the conditions inherent in these three elements of testimony, but also by certain general traits, common to humanity, on which experience has enabled us to generalize. These generalizations affect traits common to large groups of individuals, or to a large class of situations in which any individual may at times find himself. Hence the conditions are studied under two

§ 148

Race "In respect to the three elements of testimony, Perception, Retention, and Recollection have thus in many sense perceptions than literate peoples having a more complex life

"(2) Recollection An occasional particular race or people is all that has the truth that primitive peoples, develop an extra ordinary mnemonic sagas, laws, and revelations by the early witness, attention, and others

"(3) Narration (A) As to relative racial differences in the capacity of expression in words, little or no occasion arises for examining this subject in judicial proceedings (B) As to veracity of aliens in general, and of particular races, considerable knowledge has been made available for us (a) The alien in general, by his words, his racial sentiments, and narration both to save himself by falsifying in their favour But

(b)

B) 482, Sitaj v Channa, 10 M I A 162, Edu v. Behan, 11 W R 345 But Basheroomssa, 10 W R 23 B. Peror v. Balgangadhar, 23 B. en v. Elahi Buz, B L R (F) 345 But Enquiry and knowledge of his action of his ma, 4 M. I A he may safe box Durin fruit, and one of its best fruits has been an increasing regard them as the same classes in not their existence among their h El pp XXXI, XXXII.

 : "Few people, I think, realize are the others

 Wigmo
 that an

a particular race of people, unlikely to be, in the first place, absolutely incorrect as not founded on facts, in the second place, relatively unjust, as assuming a superiority of honesty which can only be hypothetical; and in the third place, unwise, as tending merely to perpetuate ill feeling and misunderstanding." Wigmore's Principle of Judicial Proof § 155 testimony,

 We possess become less
 keen, and that for recollection the recollection of earlier events becomes more active and that of recent events less active (2) Youthful age, it would seem, is others In recollec-
 -n that children below imagination, partly cause of untrained

of Judicial Proof § 156 Certain broad rules defined situation I such cases,

 f age Love and hatred, ambition and hypocrisy considerations of religion and rank, of social position and fortune, are as yet unknown to them, it is impossible that preconceived opinions, nervous irritation, or long experience, should lead them to form erroneous impressions, the mind of the child is but a mirror that reflects accurately and clearly what is found before it These are great advantages accompanied by certain corresponding drawbacks The greatest is that we can-
 , it uses indeed the same ent ideas Further the ple The conception of uly and ugliness, of dis-
 from in ours, still more so when facts are in question There is yet another difficulty, the horizon of the child being much narrower than ours, a large number of our perceptions are outside the frame within which alone the child can perceive We are as a rule, too distrustful of the capacity of a child We have rarely found too

60 problems under this head is to determine whether the story as told represents with fair accuracy the object which the witness once observed and now recollects—Wigmore's Principle of Judicial Proof § 147.

Generic ..
testimony is separate heads (1) Generic Human in General, (2) The Testimonial Elements can be taken up under the following (4) Mental Derangement, (5) Moral (Bias); (8) Experience (acquired skill) § 148.

of life

"(2) Recollection An occasional study of the memory-capacity of a particular race or people is all that has been thus far vouchsafed to us, except the truism that primitive peoples, depending largely upon unaided memory, develop an extra ordinary mnemonic capacity,—as in the oral transmission of sagas, laws, and revelations by the early Greeks, Hebrews, Scandinavians, and others

"(3) Narration (A) As to relative racial differences in the capacity of expression in words, little or no occasion arises for examining this subject in judicial proceedings (B) As to veracity of aliens in general, and of particular races, considerable knowledge has been made available for us (a) The alien in general, by reason of his strangeness to the surroundings, his racial sentiments, and his special dilemmas, has often a temptation both to save himself by falsifying and to save his fellow races by falsifying in their favour. But this

v. Elahi Buz B L R (r Behan, 11 W. R 345 But any scientific enquiry and are and whose knowledge of his

Indian ch
Evidence / 106, as reg
sufficient
predicate o,
on the ot
he may sat
box Dur
fruit, and one of its best fruits has been an increasing regard to truth on mere differences of error which is relatively truthfulness. But this All of us know persons probative to us. But we, as knowers of this, must ourselves come before the Court as ordinary witnesses, and how can the tribunal ever be made to believe us and to appreciate the fact as keenly as we do? Moreover, taking as a proved fact this specific trait of veracity or untruthfulness, is it not the crude abstraction of the layman? Are there not varieties of veracity or untruthfulness? Can those varieties be discriminated and defined? Can they perhaps be identified in particular persons? If modern psychoanalysis can furnish such data, they will be useful in valuing testimony. Wigmore's Principles of Judicial Proof § 159

Temperament But the elements of Recollection and Narration may be affected by other fixed traits than merely that of mendacity or its opposite ver-

also is concerned in tracing the variety of temperaments and their influence in impeding correct narration. Wigmore's Principle of Judicial Proof § 160

three testimonial elements—Per-ise some aberration from correct-meant, not merely strong feeling, perception and conscious reasoning Wigmore's Principles of Judicial Proof. § 161. The physical basis for this effect of emotion or testimony is explained in the following passage "The effect of desire on belief we are to come to a con-towards this end

in' As to the way
account 'This influence of Desire on Belief often operates by simply diverting the attention from counter evidence. The mind is so absolutely preoccupied by certain tendencies, that whatever at all, or, if it does, is immediate resistance offered by the mind dissolve it. But the more often they (i.e., such beliefs) are acted upon, the more completely they become incorporated with the original conation so as to become an integral part of it, hence the support they receive from it is increased. With influences Belief that is to say, is by giving pre-ideational train sely long for, or especially dread, and by determining the order of ideation to follow, not that of experience, but that which answers to and tends to sustain and prolong the feeling, that its force serves to warp belief, causing it to deviate from the intellectual or reasonable type. Feeling, then, acts in part by warping the intellectual element in Belief

"Emotion is a great source of illusion, because it disturbs intellectual operations. It gives a preternatural vividness and persistence to the ideas answering to it, i.e. the ideas which are its excitants or which are otherwise associated with it; hence when the mind is under the temporary sway of any feelings as, e.g., fear, there will be a readiness to interpret objects by help of images or the control of fear will be apt to ever there is any resemblance to
" Arnold's Psychology Applied

60.

What
(2)

Emotion are in general the same as described already in dealing with evidence of human traits generally viz., external circumstances pointing to the stimulation of an emotion, conduct or words revealing its interior existence, and a prior or subsequent existence of the emotion. The external circumstances are of a great variety—interest in the cause as a party or beneficiary, relation-ship to a party, occupation, such as banker

But no
had any rds of the too, no
known recepts emotion

on a particular witness' testimony (whether in perception recollect on or narration) remains also as a problem for the future. But under both these heads the books abound with recorded observations of the marked effect of emotion on testimony, and of the various data from which that emotion has been inferred. Wigmore's Principles of Judicial Proof § 161

Experience By experience is here meant that succession of mental processes which result in expertness. It signifies the frequent repetition of sensations, perceptions, and recognitions of a particular subject so that by concentration the capacity to recognize grows in completeness and accuracy. The growth of this experience may take place casually, through one's habit of life, or by deliberate purpose to acquire skill, as in devotion to an occupation, or still further by systematic education in an organized body of knowledge, as with a scientist or an artist. Now the influence of experience on capacity to make correct testimonial assertions is double and opposite. It may increase the range and accuracy of his perception and narration and it may decrease them. Wigmore's Principles of Judicial Proof § 162

(1) It may and usually does, increase them because it enables them to perceive details and relations of fact not cognizable without such experience. There is literally no limit to the possibilities of enlarging and precisioning the data of judicial proof. 160

topics, to develop a bias or fixed idea affecting the perception on certain topics and to induce in narration an obstinate adherence to conclusions already reached on the particular facts. This tendency of course varies with the individual and the topic but it is always a latent possibility. Wigmore's Principles of Judicial Proof § 162

Perception—General The perception of the direct exercise must purport to have existed life and in historical inquiry

M because Y told him or a book Z asserted fact ha

M But in such assertion by Y or by Z. In assertion of Y
of inference separate the two assertions, i.e. that of X (testifying to the assertion by Y or by Z, and that of Y or Z (testifying to the assertion by X). Hence the element of sense perception by X is as a basis of judicial action. If in a book the assertion by Y that make the assertion, and our further examination is required for Y's assertion If Y's assertion is hearsay (in both the at we give testimonial consideration to it is X's—Wigmore's Principles of Judicial

Proof § 163

Senses—General considerations: "The sensation brought to the brain by means of the optic nerve becomes the condition of the representation in consciousness of certain objects distributed in space. We make use of the sensation which the light stimulates in the mechanism of the optic nerve to construct representations concerning the existence, form and condition of

of the individual. The narrowest, smallest, most particular issuing glance is that of the most foolish; and the broadest, most comprehensive and comparing glance, that of the most wise. This is particularly noticeable when the time of observation is short.

visual sensations are the most numerous and the most important. Anybody who has been pushed or beaten, and has felt the blows, will if other circumstances permit and the impulse be strong enough, be convinced that he has seen his assaulter and the manner of the assault. Sometimes people who are shot at will claim to have seen the flight of the ball. It is fortunate that, as a rule such people try to be just in answering to questions which concern this substitution of one sense perception for another.

"Still more considerable importance, It consists in the noticeable interruption, when the stimulus does not, as a rule, give rise to that perception. In a case in Court, there was a shooting in some house and an old servant woman, who was busy sewing in the room, asserted that she had just before the person preceding ones. But I am convinced that the witness told the truth. The steps of the new arrival were perceived subconsciously, the further disturbance of the perception hindered her occupation and finally, when she was frightened by the shot, the upper levels of consciousness were illuminated and the noises which had already reached the subconsciousness passed over the threshold and were consciously perceived.

Criminal Psychology, 1911 § 35 p 187

Mistakes of senses, Illusions "As sensation is the basis of knowledge, the sensory process must be the basis of the correctness of legal procedure. The

0. associations are awakened, they are not ascribed to the sense of smell, but are said to be accidental Ibid; Ibid § 172.

The sense of Touch. "I combine, for the sake of simplicity, the senses of location, pressure, temperature, etc., under the general expression sense of touch. The problem this sense raises is no easy one, because many witnesses tell of perceptions made in the dark or when they were otherwise unable to see, and because much is perceived by means of this sense in assaults, wounds, and other contracts. In most cases such witnesses have been unable to observe the touched parts of their bodies, so that we have to depend upon this touch sense alone. Full certainty is possible only when sight and touch have worked together and rectified one another." Ibid; Wigmore's Principles of Judicial Proof § 174

General Theory of Memory and here be used to mean the initial proc
" Wigmore's Principles of Judicial Proof association of ideas = our recollection and memory which are only next to perception in legal importance in the knowledge of the witness. Whether the witness wants to tell the truth is, of course, a question which depends upon other matters; but whether he can tell variously organized function and much more so when every-gation. We find little instruction well as our mistakes are thereby in-" Wigmore's Principles of Judicial

Proof § 192

Different men exhibit known, this d promptness of ment of rapid forgetfulness,
but approxima
the field of greatest memory. As a rule, it may be presupposed that a memory which has developed with special vigour in one direction has generally done this unreliable . . .

memory and can alarming, and people have bare

al people do, and which the important point they e to describe important

Children

witness in the world. We have the child's mind to wipe out: . . .
has made a systematic study: . . .
conclusion that the scope of memory is measured by the child's capacity of concentrating its attention

"That aged persons have, as is well known, a good memory for what is long past, and a poor one for recent occurrence, is not remarkable. It is to be explained by the fact that age seems to be accompanied with a decrease of energy in the brain, so that it no longer assimilates influences, and the imagination becomes dark and the judgment of facts incorrect. . .

out 1
limit:
matter and partly mechanical, and the educated rarely have the latter kind because they have developed the former at its expense; high mental power is seldom combined with good mechanical memory." Hans Gross Criminal Psychology, Wigmore's Principles of Judicial Proof § 193.

Narration—General Principles of. The third element forming an essential part of all testimony is the process of laying before the tribunal the witness's results of his Perception and his Recollection, i e the process of Narration or communication. In this element, as in the other two, there are many opportunities for errors fatal to testimonial trustworthiness. As with the elements of Perception and of Recollection so here also, experience has shown that certain dangers are to be looked for. What these dangers and defects are depends upon the specific virtue which this possess. Its office is to:
recollection of the witness, useful or trivial. Its prinreproducing and expressing the witness's Recollection then, if his Narration or communication fairly represents and corresponds to his Recollection, and is intelligible by value are complete, but not otherwise in either of these respects, namely, in or in intelligibility, then its value d defects occur in the former respect, i e an absence, actual or probable, of this correspondence between the witness's uttered statement and his conscious recollection which he ought to be stating. In the other respect, i e intelligibility to the tribunal of the witness's utterance, comparatively few questions arise
Wigmore § 210

3. Hearsay evidence, meaning of—and why it is discarded. The term "hearsay" is used with reference to that which is written, as well as that which is spoken; and, in its legal sense, it derives its value solely from the facts which it rests also in part on the competence and seeming exceptions, the general rule of law rejects all hearsay reports of transactions given to a witness tests enjoined by the law for ascertaining the correctness and completeness of his testimony, namely, that oral testimony should be delivered in the presence heard, or was misunderstood, or is not accurately remembered, or has been perverted. It is also to be observed, that the persons communicating such evidence are not exposed to the danger of a prosecution for perjury, in which something more than the testimony of one witness is necessary, in order to a conviction, for where the declaration or statement is sworn to have been made by a person who is since dead, it is hardly likely that the testimony is an entire fabrication. To these may be added consi-incur in order to rebut or explain it, the occasioned, the multiplication of collateral issues for decision by the jury, and the danger of losing sight of the main question and of the justice of the case if this sort of proof were admitted, are considerations of too grave a character to be overlooked by the Court or the Legislature, in determining the question of changing the rule. Mima Queen v. Hepburn, 7 Cranch 290, 296, per Marshall C J; Greenleaf § 99(a)

Oath. One of the objections against Hearsay evidence is that it is not given on oath by the person who has got personal knowledge of a fact. But the utility of oaths in any shape has been strongly questioned. Benth Jud Ev Bk 2 ch 8. The good man, it is sometimes said, will speak the truth without an oath, while the answer has been given without an oath, of mankind are cases of import more solemn and boldly say what which they make they promise, and careful what they assert, puts them upon exactness in every circumstance, and circumstances are often very material things. Even the good might be too negligent, and the bad would frequently have no concern at all, about their words, if it were not for the solemnity of this religious act.

Bishop Secker, as cited in King on Facts, Best Ev § 59 'Of the two main facts which impair the probative force of an unsworn statement used as hearsay, lack of oath and the absence of cross examination, probably the latter is, at the present time, more important than the former. Indeed the importance of the oath is diminished in its value by the cross examination.' Chamberlayne's Ev § 2712

Cross examination and confrontation Another essential requirement of the Hearsay rule, as just examined, is that statements offered in testimony must be subjected to cross-examination. But a process commonly spoken of as confrontation is also often referred to as an additional and accompanying test or as the sole test. The main purpose of confrontation is for facilitating cross-examination. But it also involves a subordinate and incidental advantage, namely, the observation by the tribunal of the demeanour of the witness on the stand, as a minor means of judging the value of his testimony. But this minor advantage is not essential to the essential test; it may be dispensed with when it is, however, the essential object of confrontation, though to note here that, so far as confrontation is concerned, the Hearsay Rule, it is merely another name for confrontation. Wigmore § 1365 The policy of the

Anglo-Indian system of cross examination as a vital for testing the value of no statements (unless by special stipulation) it has been proved and supplemented by lengthening experience. Not even the difficulties which are so often found associated with cross examination have availed to nullify its value. It is beyond any doubt the greatest legal engine ever invented for the discovery of truth. A lawyer can do anything with a cross examination,—If he is skilful enough not to impale his own cause upon it. Wigmore § 1367

Scope of the section The expression "it must be evidence" in paras 2, 3 and 4 of the section means "the oral evidence must be evidence." Whitely Stokes Vol II p 889 So also the word "it" after the words "saw" "heard" or "perceived" in paras 2, 3 and 4. Neelkanto v Juggobandhu, 12 B L R 110 p 889 The first four paragraphs have not direct whether the party against whom it is tendered objects or not. Whitely Stokes Vol II p 889 But it was never intended by this section to exclude circumstantial evidence of a thing which could be seen, heard or felt. Karali v East India Co 48 C L J 32-111 Ind Cas 793-A I R 1928 Cal 498 So where a crowd has dispersed without taking any action the intention and common object of the circumstances and

section 45 or of which they are allowed to express their opinion. See ante. The cogency of this section as to the only of the only to which the immediate the exploded technical language hearsay. A who saw, heard etc, must be produced. The fact cannot be proved through the medium of B who did not see himself etc, but is prepared to swear that A told him that he had seen, heard, etc. So with respect to the fourth case, opinion evidence, when such is 30, admissible, this section necessitates the production of the witness who holds the opinion, it excludes the evidence of any witness who can merely say that he has heard another express such opinion. Nort. Ev. p 210. This section says that oral evidence must be direct. Kalmther v. Ma Ma, 3 Bur. L. J. 172=2 Rang. 400. An act of deposing is a physical act which can always be proved by any one who has heard the statement being made, the fact of deposing might be proved by any one who has seen and heard the witness. Ganapathi v. Sakharayappa, A. I. R. 1920 Mad. 187=115 Ind. Cas. 147. Hearsay evidence is inadmissible

Sarup v. Emperor, 7 Lah. L. J. 264=83 Ind. Cas. 22=26 Cr. L. J. 1078=26 P. L. R. 566=A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 299.

Evidence of a person who saw it or heard it. "The witness must say what he had 'seen and heard; he was an 'oyant et voyant.'" Thayer, Pre Ev. 524. Thus a favourite passage, found in several works in the last century, is: "It seems agreed that what another has been heard to say, is no evidence, because said Hearsay testimony is from the very nature of it attended with all such rule, and stands or falls according to such other evidential rules as may affect

it. Greenl. Ev § 100 But facts except the contents must, in all cases be direct witness that he perceived by his own senses the fact to which he testified " Steph Intro p 141 If therefore, A, a witness, had been told something by B, and A were asked what B had told him, the evidence of A would refer to a fact which could be heard, and A is a witness who says he heard it, this section, therefore would not exclude it. Markby Ev p 52 A statement made by an accused person immediately after a murder of what the deceased told him is relevant as

Act says that oral evidence must in all cases be direct If a person by merely about it, he is giving hearsay evidence The man who reads out the document to him would certainly be entitled to give evidence of its contents But another person who reports what is read out to him is giving hearsay evidence, of what would be legitimate secondary evidence were it before the Court Kalenthir Ammal v Ma Ma, 81 Ind Cas 175-3 Bur L J 17-1 R 1024 Rang 363

7 W R Cr 2; Rajoni v Asan, 2 Cr 25, Aman Ali v King Emperor, J 681; Queen Empress v Nga Ta, L R 433, In re Vauthilnqa, 2 Weir 762 In order to that the com- it is necessary ordance with

s 60 of the Evidence Act Empress v Arshed Ali, 13 C L R 125

It is admissible evidence for a witness to re of a family custom, and to state as grounds from deceased persons But, it must be the expression of tion of hearsay P C A person that except the pe Ev p 53 So opinion must be produced A witness cannot be allowed to say that he has heard another express such an opinion Nort Ev 240.

this novel section, however, makes any book of science published for sale evidence, if the author be dead, or under any of the circumstances specified in section 32, which render his production impossible or impracticable Nort Ev 240 It must be remembered in regard to foreign law that by s 38, certain books are always admissible. Markby Ev 53 Under the provisions of the penultimate paragraph of s 57 and of the first proviso of s 60 of the Evidence Act, Taylor's Medical Jurisprudence may be referred to Hatim v Empress, 12 C L R 86, Hurry Churn v Empress 10 C 143, see also Howe v Howe, 25 M L J 594 (F B), Granade v Com of Calcutta 2 C W N 745-28 C L J 32=46 Ind Cas 593 But in all c Purno, 28 C W N 579 delay or expense Cun Ev 215.

 Proviso II. Proviso 2 relates to those cases in which secondary evidence is permitted to be given on account of the great inconvenience or impracticability ons on walls, monuments, surveyors s or oral testimony Mortimer v Bolton, 2 Camp 108, R v Fursay arholomew v Stephens, 8 C & P ones v Turlton, 9 M & W 65 But written characters exist on some ts removal for production would be removable it ought to be pr Wills Cir Ev 212. In Joi production was required

for
"T
in up his free-hold
power is given to t
a physical impossibility Nort Ev 240.

l down the law thus
the case of things fixed break
So
not the interpreter must be called to testify to what B said to him. If, however, u is a party, when admissions as B's agent, and the ag understood by the witness) regarded language

Telephone communications Evidence as to what a person holding a conversation over the telephone told the witness was said by the person at the

In any case, the doctrine of admissions may be invoked where one of the If B had sent

of the requirement of personal knowledge is here out of place, and leads to unpractical quibbles" Wigmore § 669

Market value Testimony as to market value on information derived from daily communications is not objectionable as being based upon hearsay Testi mony of witnesses based upon such reports may be received Chamberlayne's
Ev § 2708

CHAPTER V.

OF DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

Documentary evidence There is practically no controversy as to the meaning of the word document, because a definition of the term is given in this Act (vide s 3 supra) Stephen defines documentary evidence as "documents produced for the inspection of the Court or the Judge". Steph on Ev, Art 1

Documents being inanimate things, necessarily come to the cognizance of the tribunals through the medium of human testimony; for which reason some old authors have denominated them dead proofs (probatio mortua), in contradistinction to witnesses, who are said to be living proofs (probatio viva). Best Ev § 60 "I" and in many respects in trustworthiness, been noticed from the earliest times, The false relations of what never took consequence, attainment. Best Ev, § 60 "I" er" says Lumpkin J. of Georgia in "h than the strongest and most retentive memory ever bestowed on mortal man" "The memory of men as to facts is not satisfying to the mind as a writing, in an investigation involving p. Bunnicarist ion observed oral evidenc cases cast upon it, but where the defence is rested upon a written document as a release, there is an essential difference, for its genuineness, on the contrary may be shown by many facts and circumstances very different from mere oral evidence; and, moreover, the witness

Rep 705, 706 (Am)

Three distinct questions with regard to documentary evidence. There are three distinct questions which are dealt with in the Act in regard to that kind of evidence which is called documentary. First, there is the question how the s 59 with ss 61 and 64, the result document must, in general, be 'primary evidence,' but there are otherwise Evidence used to prove the contents of a document which is not 'primary' is called 'secondary' Markby Ev pp 56, 57

Proof of contents of documents

61. The contents of documents may be proved either by primary or by secondary evidence.

63

Primary evidence

62. Primary evidence means the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court.

Explanation 1.—Where a document is executed in several parts, each part is primary evidence of the document.

Where a document is executed in counterpart, each counterpart being executed by one or some of the parties only, each counterpart is primary evidence as against the parties executing it.

Explanation 2.—Where a number of documents are all made by one uniform process, as in the case of printing, lithography, or photography, each is primary evidence of the contents of the rest; but where they are all copies of a common original, they are not primary evidence of the contents of the original

Illustration.

A person printed at one evidence of the
the contents of the original

Secondary evidence. 63. Secondary evidence means and includes—

- (1) certified copies given under the provisions hereinafter contained,*
- (2) copies made from the original by mechanical processes which in themselves insure the accuracy of the copy, and copies compared with such copies;
- (3) copies made from or compared with the original;
- (4) counterparts of documents as against the parties who did not execute them;
- (5) oral accounts of the contents of a document given by some person who has himself seen it.

Illustrations

evidence of its contents that the thing photo

by a copying machine
it is shown that the copy evidence of the original, although the compared with the original

(d) Neither an oral account of a copy compared with the original, nor an oral account of a photograph or machine copy of the original, is secondary evidence of the original.

Scope of the section 61. "This section lays down that the contents of documents may be proved either by primary or by secondary evidence, and I understand the rule to mean that there is no other method allowed by law for proving the contents of documents. Section 72 defines the meaning of primary evidence; s. 63 describes what constitutes secondary evidence within the meaning of the Act. Chunandan Prosad, 7 A. 738. The rule which exacts original evidence shall be received from some other which is withheld. Per Parke B in Doe d. Welsh v. Langfield, 16 M. & W. 127; Doe d. Gilbert v. Ross, 7 M. & W. 102, 106; McDonnell v. Evans, 11 C. B. 930, 942, per Alford J.; Best Ev. § 89. Melius (or Salus) est petere fontes quam sectari.

* See s 76, infra.

hearsay evidence. Best § 89. All private documents must be produced, and the execution of the same generally be proved, or their absence must be duly accounted for, and their loss supplied by secondary evidence. Greenl. Ev. 558.

instrument is to be proved, the primary evidence is the testimony of the subscribing witness, if there be one. Until it is shown that the production of the primary evidence is out of the party's power, no other proof of the fact is in general admitted. All evidence falling short of this in its degree is termed secondary. The question, whether evidence is primary or secondary, has reference to the nature of the case in the abstract, and not to the peculiar circumstances under which the party in the particular cause or trial may be placed. It is a distinction of law, and not of fact; referring only to the quality, and not to the quantity, of the evidence. It carries on its face no indication of its being primary. And yet if there are circumstances which show that it is not ordinarily primary, it is secondary evidence.

can be resorted to. Greenl. Ev. § 84. According to the Indian Evidence Act, primary evidence means the document produced for the inspection of the Court (s. 62). Where a document is executed in counterpart, each counterpart, being executed by one or more parties, is primary evidence as against the party or parties by whom it was executed, and as against the other parties. Fol. II p. 200. The following are the principles given by Lord Esher M. R. in “Primary” and “secondary” evidence, which the law requires to be given first, when a proper explanation is given of the absence of that better evidence.

3. is that the rule requiring the production of evidence, but a rule preferring the thing which is produced to not primary evidence. The other objection is that, so far the term is understood to group together all rules exacting a certain quality of evidence when it is available, it groups rules which are in the Attesting unit On to clarify the independent

Scope of section 62 Primary evidence means the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court. The fundamental notion of producing the primary evidence is that the terms of a writing must be proved by producing it and not by offering testimony about them. Wigmore § 1232. Where the writing constituting a bilateral transaction is executed by the parties in duplicate or multiplicate, each of these parts is the writing, because by act of the parties each is as much the legal act as another. It can make no difference that one party has signed only the document taken red to are, 2 Camp. 220, 221

the counterparts of each other, one of which is delivered to the opposite party, both be considered as originals, one which is preserved may be received in evidence, the one which was delivered." See also Doe v Putman, (1842) 3 Q. B. 600, Colling v French, G. B. & C. 398; Roe v Davis, 7 East 363. The earlier practice seems to have been to treat the counterpart of a deed as a copy or secondary as may be inferred from utterances of Best v J. in Munn v Godbold, 3 Bing 292. There the learned Judge said: "Where there are two instruments executed as parts of a deed, one of these parts is more authentic and satisfactory evidence of the contents of the other part than any other draft or copy. It is prepared with more care than the other copy, and the party who produces it, and against whom it is used, by taking and keeping it as a part of the deed, admits its accuracy. The Courts have therefore always required that if one part of a deed be lost, and another part be in existence, it must be produced, but merely as secondary evidence of the part that was lost." Wigmore § 1233; see also Doe v Wainwright, 1 New & P. S. Burchell v Clarke, 2 G. P. D. 68, Mathews v Smallwood, (1910) 1 Ch. 777. Formerly a deed was written on parchment commencing from the middle, the other part was written in a similar way, up primary evidence of the original document. Thus probate of a will of personal v Hunt, 6 Ch. D.

2 Ch. 330, and will contained in a will,
only Pl. in Ex. 711

in Wainwright v. Poolley, applies where 165 R v Hunt,

Explanation I: The expressions executed "in parts" and in "counterpart", in section 62, refer to the mode in which documents are sometimes executed. It is convenient sometimes that each party to a transaction should have a complete document in his own possession. To effect this, the document is written out as many times over as there are parties, and each document is executed, i. e. signed or sealed as the case may be, by all the parties. No one of these is more the original than the other, and any one of them may be produced as primary

Where there are
by each party both
3 K B 706, 721;

Philip En 7th Ed. 516

paper does not differ from a an alike, therefore, only be under such circumstances as e, if the original is shown

notice d copy
Watson,
r better
line at nber of

in a newspaper,
primary evidence
Chandra v Emf
But if it were

y, but only secondary evidence conditions which render the Ev 242 Where the accused ay 25 of them for posting, one contents of those posted because e nature of duplicate originals me press, they must all be the Ellenborough L O J said, Watson fetched away 25, by caused 500 placards to be printed and carried away 25 of them for posting, one of the remainder can be admitted to prove the contents of those posted because every one of those worked off are originals, in the nature of duplicate originals. The reason me press, they must all be the same R v Ellenborough L O J said, "An order 1 Watson fetched away 25, by

the obj
is all

uld be great weight in the originals, the manuscript
the same press, they must carbon copy is no more better signed or executed than a letter-press copy—as a fact, the signature is not always reproduced on the carbon as it is in the pre-copy letter which is usually copied after signature. But where a document is executed in counterpart, each party signing only the part by which he is bound, 3.

each counterpart, is the best evidence against the party signing it and his privies. As to the other party it is only secondary evidence. Roe v. Davis, 7 East 362.

Collin

Munn

of the

of a

there

in int

the ju

v Sec

Jagop

259 for ins

Ind (

(F B

the te

same to settle the possession

of his father, does not make the docu Hrishukesh, 19 C L J 546—A L I abstracted in a judgment is not even cannot be made use of in lieu of

29 Ind Cas 463—60 M L J. 13—A evidence of a document which is otherwise ument is lost Ma Ague v. Maung San Lank,

A I R 1929 Rang 181 A register containing copies and copied directly from the originals is legally admissible in evidence in proof of them Chandram v Sheonath, A I R 1931 Oudh 1

document, which is not prove ever existed A defamatory l deposed to such a letter ever having been written by the accused. Atia v copy of the newspaper was not secondary evidence of the original letter Ramlal

v King

question

largely

not be overruled by the Court of appeal except in a very clear case of mis carriage Vistanatha v Bahubai, A I R 1931 Bom 105—55 M 103

s 78 Copies
: sworn copies
examined copy,

in the sense that the original and the copy have been examined or compared together by the witness, either in his own act of transcription or by taking some Evidence Act, and are used chiefly to prove corporations and companies, by laws and the copy of a Will is admissible in evidence is proved. Theli Kicherla v

Mad 345 47 M L J. 906; Bo certified copy of a document conditions and contents of it, b

Koeri, 82 Ind Cas 306. A

ment, in which there may be references to it, is not the secondary evidence of the contents of the document, especially when it appears that it is itself based on secondary evidence of the document given by a party who had this original with him. Hira Lal v Ganesh Prasad, 1 A. 106 P. C = 2 I A 61-11 C L R. 109.

Clause (2).
evidence In re
Re Stephens, L. R.
ton 30 Ir L. T.
secondary evidence.
wish to prove wit-
to the first portion of this clau-
So under this clause a copy

13. This clause is applicable to blue prints as, 212 Ill 89), as well as to carbon copies as it id of copy than that taken in the copying press Durr Jones § 209 All that is required under this clause is that the copies must be made by some mechanical processes which would ensure the accuracy of the Clause (3) A copy merely as a piece of paper, has no standing as evidence qualified

as § 1277
as is not
comparison,
or as sometimes, two witnesses, one of whom read the original, while the other read the copy, or the reverse. But it will save trouble to have the comparison made by one and the same person
Ev 96, Maung Po v Ma Shu
Kim, 9 C 939 A copy in short, of a witness. The witness, therefore, must be qualified, and thus the general principle of witness's qualifications have here certain applications. A general principle for witness's qualification is that he must speak from personal it therefore in own personal others Upon

copy, is rather in the nature of a rule of preference, requiring first the use of an immediate copy, if one is available. Wigmore § 1274 This view was adopted by Justice Story in Winn v Patterson, 9 Pet 663, 677 where he observed "The with it, for then it is second remove from the original; or where it is copy of a copy of a record, the record being still in existence by law deemed as high as the original, for then also it is a second remove from the record. But it is quite a different question whether it applies to cases of secondary evidence where the original is lost, or the record of it is not in law deemed as high evidence as the original, or where the copy of a copy is the highest proof in existence. On these points we give no opinion; because this is not in our judgment the case of a mere copy of a copy verified as such, but it is the case of a second copy verified as a true copy of the original." Under section 57 of the Indian Registration Act, (XVI of 1908), all copies of copies given under that section and signed and admissible for the purpose of proving the

Bhanrao, 78 Ind Crs 865-A I R

2 W R 303, Smart v Williams, Comb

ch evidence is thus stated in Stetson

v Gulliver, 2 Cush 494, 499 "When the book of the register would be evidence, a certified copy is entitled to have the same effect; there being very little ground to apprehend any mistake from that cause, and upon consideration of the great public inconvenience which would result from having the books of record removed from their proper custody and place of security," Wigmore § 1275

According to the orthodox English rule a copy of a copy is not admissible in evidence in as much as in the words of Alderson B "there would be no limit to the reception of secondary evidence if that were so. This is but the shadow of the shade" Ettingham v Roundell, 2 Moo & Rob 138; see also Tillard v Shebbe follows

L T 4

of the 147=2

law in

Umora

14 M 1

Field

parties

125, A

when

which

the spi

Lochan v Pandit Harinath, 1 Pat 606, Chinnaji v Dhulkar, 11 B 320, Lalsh-

man v

Fatima,

of M pa

Madras I

practice

the printing of the High Court paper, that before giving the final order for striking off, it would

A I R 1929 Mad 18

Sanlok v Rameswar,

compared with the ori

with the original depo

Pat 61=5 Pat 777

Clause (4) Execution in counterpart is a method of execution which is in itself but supplements the other. Baitha Nath v. Kamini Kant, 6 C. L. J. 572; Andrews v. Warral, R. C. (1916) 1 K. B. 863.

Clause (5). The oral account of the contents of a document given by some person who has merely seen it with his own eyes but is unable to read it is not secondary evidence of the document; the word "seen" in section 63(5) of the Ghore and others v. Chatrapal Singh, 12 A. L. J. 239-23 Ind. Cas. 11 So where in order to prove a mortgage the only witness called was an illiterate person he cannot be deemed to within section 63(5) of the Evd 537-A I R 1922 All 232 that under this clause only a witness who has seen the document and who could have read the document in its original state is entitled to give oral evidence of it. Ramji Das v. Mohan Lal, 71 Ind. Cas. 651-1923 A 411 But in Pudari Singh v. Brij Mangal, 73 Ind. Cas. 651 it was held that as regards the letting in of secondary evidence the word "seen" in section 63(5) includes also "read over" in the case of a witness who is illiterate and as such cannot himself read it. If it is read over to him it will satisfy the requirements of the section. In Mohan Lal v. Ramji Das, 80 Ind. Cas. 939-23 A L. J. 861, which was an appeal from

v. Chatrapal Singh, supra After hearing the matter very fully argued we have come to the conclusion with great respect to these two Judges, and we are unable to agree the critical words in the section are 'seen it' The result of the decision would be, for example, that a highly educated person knowing the contents of a document in contents and had person who knew that the English memory, could not although, he had exists The first three sub sections of s 63 refer to copies made from or compared that if a person has only seen a copy of a document, there are two chances altogether, and therefore evidence given by him could be of a different category to the secondary evidence allowed by law and a person who has seen a copy

3.

evidence of the contents of the L J 172=84 Ind Cas 175=A I 11 D. C. 174 175

Kalender Ammat, 31 C W N 621 (P C)=541
18=100 Ind Cas 1=29 Bom L R 800
Allahabad High Court reported in 22 A L 13 and 73 Ind Cas 651 are no longer good law the contents of a document by some person clause means oral evidence by some person who has seen those contents, that is who had read the document Evidence that the witness only saw the document and heard it read contents are concerned an oral evidence generally, viz, evidence of a witness who saw fact which can be seen on Raghur, 112 Ind Cas 310.
Statements of persons who sible in evidence What is required is an oral judgment or decree by some one who had read to a document which is document. Rati Pal v Uda

Bhan, 53 Ind Cas 687 A translation of a document is not secondary evidence Ambalavana v Kuppachi, 4 L W. 330=35 Ind Cas 20; 26 Ind Cas 618;
see also 70 Ind Cas 107 Where in prior proceedings between the parties one of them admitted the existence and contents of a mortgage deed, such admission constituted a good secondary evidence within the meaning of this clause Bahadur v Madho, 36 Ind Cas 696 An objection to the admission of secondary evidence, if not raised at the time it is admitted, cannot be allowed to be raised in special appeal Where the plaintiff attempted to prove the contents of certain documents by oral evidence, but the evidence fell short of what is required witness was not properly given the penalty of the dismissal
of the legal adviser who 24 W R 227 Surrey

y evidence of the contents of the 63 or under any other section of the 1020 P C 43

EVIDENCE ACT

Oral evidence cannot
of which are disputed is not merely the asked whether certain O Connell, Am &
his account books;
the best evidence, must be 24 Bom L R P C 565
have been reduced to writing
66 Ind. Cas 380

gener
eviden

no degrees in the various kinds of such evidence. Doe v Ross, 7 M & W.
102; Hall v Ball, 10 L J. C P. 285; Brown v Woodman, 11 C & P 206; Jeans v Whedon, 2 M & Rob 486" Taylor Et § 550 In Doe v Ross, 7 M & W 102, the question was whether an attested copy of a deed was preferred
in the evidence "Another luction of secondary

the law recognises

to the jury, from which back would be a reverse distinction between one case Merson 11 and the nature of the evidence itself. If you produce a copy which shows that there was an original or if you give parol evidence of the contents of a deed the evidence itself discloses the existence of the deed. But reverse the case, the existence of an original does not show the existence of any copy, nor does parol evidence of the contents of a deed show the existence of anything except the deed itself. If one species of secondary evidence is to exclude another a party tendering parol evidence of a deed must account for all the contrary evidence that has existed. He may know nothing but the origin and the other side at any trial may defeat him by showing a copy the existence of which he had no means of ascertaining. Fifty copies may be in existence unknown to him, and he would be bound to account for them all. Wigmore § 1263. Similarly in Brown v Woolman 6 C & P 206 Parle 1 and there are no degrees of secondary evidence." See also Sugden v Lord St Leonards L R 1 P D 151, Brown v Brown 27 L J Q B 173, Doe v Cole, 6 C & P 359, Fisher v Samuda 1 Cimp 193, Kensington v Inghish 9 East 273 279. But in some of the old English cases the rule laid down was otherwise. In Ludlam's Will 101 36, Lord Mansfield C J said. "If you cannot prove a deed by producing it, you may produce the counterpart if you can produce the counterpart, you may produce a copy, even if you cannot prove it to be true copy if a copy cannot be produced you may go into the parol evidence of the deed." This rule was also adopted by Lord Hardwicke L C in Omtchen v Barker, 1 Atk 21 (13) and in Hilliers v Fishers 2 Atk 27. The English law recognizes no preference. But in America in Prof Leary the law recognizes any degrees in the various kinds of secondary evidence and requires the party offering that which is deemed less certain and satisfactory first to show that nothing better is in his power, is a question which is not perfectly settled. On the one hand the affirmative is urged as an equitable extension of the principle which postpones all secondary evidence until the primary is accounted for, and it is said that the same reason which requires the production of a writing if within the power of a party also requires that if the writing is lost, its contents shall be proved by a copy if in existence rather than the memory of a witness who has read it, and that the secondary proof of a lost deed ought to be marshalled into first the counterpart secondly a copy, thirdly the abstract, etc., and, last of all the memory of a witness. On the other hand it is said that the rule is founded on its strength or weakness, and that to carry it to the length of establishing degrees in secondary evidence as fixed rules of law, would often tend to the subversion of justice and always be productive of inconvenience. If for example proof of the existence of an abstract of a deed will exclude oral evidence of its contents the proof may be withheld by the adverse party until the moment of trial and the other side be defeated or the cause be greatly delayed, and the same mischief may be repeated through all the different degrees of evidence. It is therefore insisted that the rule of exclusion ought to be restricted to such evidence only as upon its face discloses the existence of better proof and where the evidence is not of this nature it is to be received notwithstanding it may be shown from other sources that the party might have offered that which was more satisfactory to the jury under all the circumstances. (9) The American doctrine is that if from the nature of a document is not the contents of the original Kalender Ind Cas 175=41

63.

R. 1924 Rang 363 nunc in Ma Ma v
Kalender Ammal, 31 C W N 621 (P C)=54 I A. 61=25 A L J 65=5 Rang 18=100 Ind Cas 1=29 Bom L R 800 So the two later decisions of the Allahabad High Court reported in 23 A. L. J 864=80 Ind Cas. 937=47 A 13 and 73 Ind Cas 654 are no longer good law The phrase "oral accounts of the contents of a document by some person who has himself seen it" in this clause means oral evidence by some person who has seen those contents, that is who had read the document Evidence that the witness only saw the fact which can Raghun, 112 I Statements of sible in evidence

 judgment or decree by some v Maung Tha, A I R
 authorized agent in a previo against his interest is sec
Bhan, 53 Ind Cas 667 A translation of a document is not secondary evidence Ambalavan v Kuppachi, 4 L W 330=35 Ind Cas 20; 26 Ind Cas 618;
 see also 70 Ind Cas 107 Where in prior proceedings between the parties one of them admitted the existence and contents of a mortgage deed, such admission constituted a good secondary evidence within the meaning of this clause Bahadur v Madho, 36 Ind Cas 696 An objection to the admission of secondary evidence, if not allowed to be raised in spei

the penalty of the dismissal

gh v Hut du a
 was based on a
 was not exhibited
 of the contents of the

is not merely the memorandum of some other fact Thus a witness cannot asked whether certain reso O Connell, Ann & T 16
 his account books; but in the best evidence, must be 24 Bom L R P C 565
 have been reduced to wr 66 Ind Cas 360

No prei
 general rule
 evidence, wh
 no degrees in the various kinds of such evidence. Doe v Ross, 7 M & W 102; Hall v Ball, 10 L J Q P. 285, Brown v Woodman 6 C & P 206, Jeans Whedon, 2 M & Rob 486 Taylor Ec § 550 In Doe v Ross, 7 M & W 102, the question was whether an attested copy of a deed was preferred the question in the

it is necessary
 sufficient evidence that has been
 the deed, but as it, once exists
 it, or being in his
 in Whitfield v.
per Loughborough
 on the general rule, it admit, I perfectly unded partly on the
 the registry system
 an original deed in its
 can be; that a copy ginal deeds should be unearth v. Emery, 2
 utes of a writing of any out its production, or the prisoner or opposite
 ' B, in Regina v. Farr, iver are, according to the iver itself, and by that (per Abbott C J) 2 B & Leyfield's Case, 10 Co Rep
 it, and to be proved by the Court in two manners:
 a law, and the Court shall
 l in material points or places;
 if it was upon conditional 1 And these are the reasons
 b showed forth to the Court" instrument, the instrument r Coleridge J in R v Francis, not be applied so broadly as is not a document. The rule is proved by the paper itself and by that

 The rule was so stated by the Judges on (volume, 2 Brod & H 236 (1821) The only the following classes (each of which is dealt document is lost or destroyed. (2) Where it is

64. philosophical and harmonizes better jurisprudence of the age on the subject to curtail and limit the objections to go to the jury to judge of its weight party kept back a more satisfactory have produced and within his knowledge as he had offered, of less certainty, with the jury Leuts v St Antonio, 7 Tex 288 (315) (Am) Wigmore § 1263

64. Documents must be proved by Proof of documents by primary evidence. primary evidence except in the cases hereinafter mentioned.

Principle A writing is the best evidence of its own contents and must be introduced unless it has been lost or destroyed or its absence is otherwise satisfactorily explained. The reasons are simple long experience. They would be literal copy and the copyist, whether by accident or by inadvertence this contingency wholly disappears when the original is produced. Moreover, the copy will afford the best evidence of its own contents. lack, such features of the document as the copyist may have seen or may have known of, are not available to the opponent by any other means. Wigmore § 1179. In C J said that though an original may be liable to the mistake of the transcriber or the original, the added risk, almost the certainty, exists, of errors of recollection due to the difficulty of carrying in the memory literally the tenor of the document. Wigmore § 1179; see also Slatterie v Pooley 6 M & W 664; Doe v Ross, 7 M & W 102; Taylor v Riggs, 1 Pet 591, 596; Vincent v Cole, M & M 237; Macdonnell v Evans, 11 C B 942 were the beginnings, in the endeavour to give consistency to the system of evidence before juries. They were never literally enforced,—they were principles and not exact rules, but for a long time they afforded a valuable test. As rules

Bliss, 21 N Y p 219, that "it is a universal rule founded in necessity, that the best evidence of which the nature of the case admits is always receivable."

principle was the rule about the rule was older than the rule. There has been a generalization from the rule, which appears itself, to be traceable to the doctrine of proof. That ent which was set up in the jury, that a jury had been exhibited to hear testimony from a speaker to the contents of a deed without the production of the deed itself. Thayer Cas Ev 2nd Ed 778, 779

Scope of the section "The rule is that the best evidence must be used that can be had, first the original; if that cannot be had, you may be let in to prove it any way, and by any circumstances the nature of the case will admit. This extends not only to deeds, but to records, so far I mean as they may be given in evidence to a jury, for in point of proof it is another thing. But for this the law requires a proper foundation to be laid, and two things are necessary. First, to prove that such a deed once existed, and there is sufficient evidence that such a deed, to a certain intent, did once exist, by the answer that has been read, which I do not rely on as evidence of all the uses of the deed, but as an admission that such a deed and use something of that nature once existed. The next step is to show some ground that the deed is lost or being in his adversary's hands cannot be come at." Per Lord Chancellor in Whitfield v Fausset 1 Ves 357. In Grant v Gould 2 H Bl p 101, Lord Loughborough said "that all Common namely, the best evidence agree." The rule, as to the rules of common law, but modified to some extent by the registry system established here by Statute. The theory is this that an original deed in its

Gry 30 (1st) "The general rule was, that the contents of a writing of any document or portable article could not be proved without its production or without showing it to be in the possession or power of the prisoner or opposite party, and on notice to him to produce it." Per Channell B in Regina v Larr 4 F & L 336. So the contents of every written paper are according to the well established rules of evidence, to be proved by the paper itself, and by that alone if the paper be in existence. The Queen's Case (per Abbott C J) 2 B & 284. The reason of the rule is thus stated in Dr Lifford's Case 10 Co Rep 62 (a). And therefore every deed ought to approve itself and to be proved by others—approve itself upon its showing forth to the Court in two manners: (1) As to the composition of the words be sufficient in law and the Court shall judge that, (2) that it be not razed or interlined in material points or places, (3) that it may appear to the Court and to the party if it was upon conditional limitation or power of a revocation in the deed. And these are the reasons of the law that deeds pleaded in Court shall be showed forth to the Court. So when the question is as to the effect of a written instrument the instrument itself is primary evidence of its contents. Per Coleridge J in R v Francis L R 1 C C R 128 (132). But this rule should not be applied so broadly as to require the production of any thing which is not a document. The rule is

St Fr
529 5 1196)
in som precise cate th
though
more §

well established rules of evidence to be proved by the paper itself and by that alone if the paper be in existence. The rule was so stated by the Judges on the occasion of the trial of Queen v Cowell 2 Brod & B 256 (18th). The only exception to with below) in the possession. Where it is insisted on by physical ground is of a public reasons of convenience. Roscoe Cr Ev 10th Ed p 3

5

Cases in which secondary evidence relating to documents may be given

65 Secondary evidence may be given of the existence, condition or contents of a document in the following cases —

- (1) when the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power—
 - of the person against whom the document is sought to be proved, or
 - of any person out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court, or
 - of any person legally bound to produce it and when, after the notice mentioned in section 66, such person does not produce it,
- (b) when the existence, condition or contents of the original have been proved to be admitted in writing by the person against whom it is proved or by his representative in interest,
- (c) when the original has been destroyed or lost, or when the party offering evidence of its contents cannot for any other reason not arising from his own default or neglect, produce it in reasonable time,
- (d) when the original is of such a nature as not to be easily moveable,
- (e) when the original is a public document within the meaning of section 74,
- (f) when the original is a document of which a certified copy is permitted by this Act, or by any other law in force in British India to be given in evidence,
- (g) when the originals consist of numerous accounts or other documents which cannot conveniently be examined in Court, and the fact to be proved is the general result of the whole collection.

In cases (a), (c) and (d) any secondary evidence of the contents of the document is admissible

In case (b), the written admission is admissible

In case (e) or (f), a certified copy of the document but no other kind of secondary evidence, is admissible

In case (g), evidence may be given as to the general result of the documents by any person who has examined them, and who is skilled in the examination of such documents

Principle The contents of a document must in general be proved by a special kind of evidence, called 'primary evidence' but there are exceptional cases in which it may be proved otherwise. Malib. Ev. 57 The exceptional cases in which secondary evidence is admissible are contained in this section,

But. "That rule which is the most universal, namely, that the best evidence the nature of the case will admit, shall be produced, decides this objection, for expression for the idea that when you lose the best in your power. The case admits of you possess, if the superior proof has been not mean that men's rights are to be sacrificed and their property lost because they cannot guard against events beyond their control; it only means that, so long as the higher or superior evidence is within your possession or may be reached by you, you shall give no inferior proof in relation to it." Per Porter J in Thomas v Thomas, 1 Ld 166, 163; Higmore § 1192. The various classes of cases with which the following sections deal are the written or otherwise person, pl or otherwise on the gen

Scope of the section : Section 65 evidences of the contents of a document is inadmissible unless the non production of the original is first accounted for so Krishna of the counting for of the non production of the original Dhuanesuar v Harisaran 6 C 720 = 8 C L R 337 (P C), Rakhallus v Inba Monce 1 C L R 155, Imcerunissa v Abedoonissa, 23 W R 208, 209 (P C) = 2 I A 97, Waseer Ali v Kalee Kumar 11 W R 328, Gour v Hures hishore, 10 W R 338, Ishan v Bhyrab, 5 W R 21, Estoorun v Mohun 21 W R 335, Roopmunoor v Ramlal 1 W R 145; Mafee Zoodcen v Meher th, 1 W R 213, Sheoram v Ramlal 1 W R 248, Muhammal Abdul v Ibrahim, 3 B H C R A C J 160. A writing is the best evidence or destroyed. Clarke & Sall to little more by the intro accounted for entirely differ ing, rather than a narrowing rule. It meant that the best evidence of which the nature of the case would permit was receivable. It has been pointed out by Prof Thayer that this rule has been the subject of a very peculiar development (Vide the origin of the rule) relating to writings only.

to those which relate to Ev § 272 this section and thus is a relaxation in criminal than in civil the former, the original registers of births, deaths marriages, etc, must be produced and that copies will not be sufficient. Fried's Ev 7th Ed p 318; Whitely Stokes, Vol II p 92. The exceptional cases in which secondary evidence requires stricter proof it was decided that, in copy of a document have been used to the possession of the provides for his Where an original document from a Soukram Sookul pattah relied on cannot be produced, secondary evidence is admissible, but the contents of the document must be satisfactorily accounted for before a copy can be looked at and before it can be used. Nolcelal v mubanal v Nandlal, 2 W R Act X. 241, Asman v Doorga, 21 W R 262.

According to this section the loss of the original must be proved not only in a case where the document is being enforced in a suit but also where it is produced

5. merely as a piece of evidence : Maqbul v. Baidoo, 122 Ind Cas 751 = 1930 A L J 765 = A I R 1930 All 539 Where a party relies upon the certified copy of a document before any presumption as to genuineness of the original can be made under s 90 it is incumbent on the party trying to rely upon the document to lay the foundation by leading secondary evidence under s 65 Gaya Prosad v Jaswanti, 1930 A L J 1003 = A I R 1930 All 550 = 125 Ind Cas 460

A copy of a disputed document can not be taken as evidence without proof that the original is out of the power of the person producing the copy Admitting the ex Mussamat the correctness of the copy secondary ibundee cannot be admitted as absence of

had Choorun v Ukhunlal, 21 W R 33 of a letter (neither produced nor called involves the giving of secondary evidence satisfying the conditions required to

Pershad v Amanutulla 26 C 53 = 2 C rents where sought to be proved by entries made by Patwari in his list as the result of his enquiry and inspection of receipts Held that the list would merely ents of the receipts and that it was inadmissible rule out Baduna Ram v Akbar Ali, 103 Ind

Cas 752 = 9 Lrb L

executed in England

gaged instituted a

only Held that the secondary evidence of the mortgage deed was admissible Herbert Francis v Mahomed Akbar, 105 Ind Cas 533 This section provides an alternative to the bond holder in cases where for various reasons production of the original is impossible, but if a bond is in existence production is not dispensed with by

Ind Ca

tions in a statem

guardian

to a case

but it

have to facts in

J 264 =

provid

(

ondary evidence of a document vidence cannot, for any reason not should not be overruled except in a clear case of miscarriage of justice Production of secondary evidence does not dispense with proof of the execution of the original document : Chuha Mal v Rahim Baksh, 71 Ind Cas 563 Where in a suit on bond, loss of bond was alleged and the defendant denied execution

65. Maung Hmo, U B R (1897-1901) Vol II, 367, Sudar Kuar v Chandraiah, 4 A 330-A W N 1882, 55 Hualal v Shankar, 45 B 1170 Sunni v Sundar, (1911) 2 M W N 166, Doramas v D 87 Ind Cas 332, Maung Po v Maung Gui, 101 Ind Cas 193-A I R 1927 R 109 The provisions, made by the Stamp Act for the case of deeds, either unstamped or insufficiently stamped, have no application, when the original deed, which ought to have been stamped has not been produced. It is not permissible to pry penalty or require endorsement by Collector on a copy of unstamped or insufficiently stamped document and to offer the same as secondary evidence of the terms of the original Venkata v Sri Janganti, 4 C W N 117; Aruna Chellum v, Oli gappah, 4 M H C R 312, Ragharachari v Rungachari, 4 Mys L J 147. A distinction must be drawn between the admissibility of the evidence and the manner of proof.

Section 65 and Registration Act, s 49 The admitted existence of an unregistered written deed of relinquishment of one's interest requiring registration precludes the proof of the fact of the relinquishment by any secondary evidence as the primary evidence is itself inadmissible under s 49 Janardhan v Janardhan 101 Ind Cas 830-A I R 1927 Nag 214 Where a party comes into Court resting his claim on a written title which the law requires to be to register, and is, in consequence and say, "I can prove my title by have a compulsory Registration ors" Monmolunes v Bishen Moyee, Sheikh Shuraitoolah, 1 B L R 58-10 W R 51 (F B); Gongabisan v Tukaram, 5 N L R 70-3 Ind Cas 224; Mahomed v Allah Ditta, 93 Ind Cas 444-27 P L R 268, Kallam v Nambiar, 28 M L J 276 Secondary evidence of a document which is not produced but which in a previous suit was found to be inadmissible as being not registered cannot be given in evidence Nataraja v Ramabhadra, 28 Ind Cas 853, see also Kanduru v Adam Sahab, 25 Ind Cas 661.

Section 19, Limitation Act-Whether acknowledgments lost or destroyed So, to section 20 of the Limitation Act of 1871, writing containing the promise or acknowledgment may be given of the time when it was signed

of her Rk

which secondary evidence that amongst the ground ice was the loss or destruction to is the evidence thing was in evidence

871 The language of the was necessarily in direct g to the Evidence Act, document generally, if the f 1871 oral evidence of the ble in such a case. The words used are "When the writing containing the acknowledgment is undated, oral evidence may be given of the time when it was signed, but oral evidence of its contents shall not be received" One branch of the law of Evidence is that already referred to is contained in 64 and the following section of the Evidence Act and it determines the cases in which secondary evidence of a document not produced. Another branch of the law is dealt with in the following sections. It deals with the effect of oral communications, may be evidence of a document. The first part of the paragraph before us clearly belongs to the latter branch of the law. And, it would seem the object was to remove any question which might otherwise have arisen whether the rules generally excluding oral evidence as to the effect of documents might not exclude oral evidence, where the date is an essential part of the evidence of the date of the document proceeds 'but oral evidence of its contents shall not be received' These words were introduced with a 'but', and they speak not of secondary evidence but of oral evidence. We do not think they ought to be understood as dealing with an entirely different branch of the law of evidence from the earlier part of the sentence, and as repelling s 65 of the Evidence Act, so far as it relates to acknowledgments. We think the words in question are of the nature of a saving clause, guarding against the supposition that the exclusion of oral evidence further knowledge of the contents of the document is not sufficient secondary evidence.

Wajibun v. Kadir, 13 C 192; see also Chathu v. Virarayan, 15 M 191; but see Ziaunnissa v. Mafudov, 12 B 263. This controversy has been set at rest by Act IX of 1908, detailed record of records, an entry in the statement to be sufficient secondary evidence. Nowroz, 5 P. W. R.

1914=16 P. L. R. 1915.

CLAUSE (A).

Original in the possession or power of the Adversary. When a document is in the possession of the adverse party or of some one bound to give up possession thereof to him (e.g. his solicitor) (Irum v. Lever, 2 F. & F. 269, R. v. Hunter, 4 C. (Taplin v. Att. Sinclair v. Ste but not a stake Gow R 1191).

in this section are up possession to his personal custody, or the opponent's demand. Hignore § 1200. So wherever it is in the party and he refuses to produce it after a R. v. Watson, 2 T. R. 201, Makbul Ali v. Greesh Chunder v. Ramlal, 1 W. R. C. 579 582. The reason why cases equally with civil R. v. Eluorthy, 10 Cox Cr 579 582. The reason why secondary evidence is admissible in such a case is thus given by Buller J. in Att.

65. Gen v Le Merchant, 2 T R, 201 note. "It was likewise said, in support of the motion, that the reason why copies are permitted to be evidence in common does not produce them is in no fault at all, and for that reason a copy is not admitted. But I do not take that to be the rule; it is not produced upon any sion of the opponent. It is enough if it is in his power to produce it Parry v May, 1 Moo & Rob 280. So "the possession of the plaintiff's attorney is the possession of the plaintiff, though they might perhaps be subpoenaed, it is in a party to the suit, it is in J in Irwin v Lister of the jurisdiction of

d When a document of the opponent, very recently, the R v Hunter, 4 C & P. 128. before notice served be an excuse, at the time of notice, that he had transferred it Wigmore § 1200 contra, Wright v Bunyard, 2 T. & F 193, 194. Before a secondary evidence is admissible under this section, the opponent's possession of the document in question must be shown somehow, Knight v Martin, Gow 103, Whitford v Tuttle, 10 Bing 395, Shape v Laut, 11 A & E 805. Of this fact very slight evidence will raise a sufficient presumption when the documents exclusively belong to him, or regularly ought to be in his custody according to the course of business Taylor § 440; see also Ajoodha v. Esharee Dyal, 10 W. R. 219; Eshubanesuar v. Harisaran, 8 C 720=8 C L R 337 P C; Henry v. Leigh, 3 Camp 502. So where a bankruptcy certificate was proved to have been obtained for the defendant, the Court presumed that it had come into his possession Henry v. Leigh, 3 Camp 502; Robb v Starkey, 2 C & Kir 143. If papers were last seen in the hands of the defendant, it lies upon him to trace them out of his possession R v Thistlewood, 33 How St Tr 757. The rule is the same in criminal cases Perry v May, 1 M & R 276; Langton v Reynolds 18 Jur, 963. The Adversary's possession may also be proved by the admission of his counsel. Duncombe v Duncombe, 8 C & P. 222. A party served with notice cannot evade its effect by subsequently parting with the document. Knight v. Martin, Gow. R. 104; Nott 246. It would seem that when a party has notice

f the evidence is a Rob, 365 is sufficient proof of the contents of a document when the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power of the person Salman v. Hakim Mukdam, A. I R 1928 All 391. This section lays down that secondary evidence may be given, of the contents of a document when the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power of the person against whom the document is sought to be proved. This section does not require that in all cases it must be definitely proved that the document is in possession of the other party against whom it is sought to be proved. If long its contents can be given: Duarka Singh v. Ramanand, 41 A. 592=17 A. L. J. 711=51 Ind. Cas. 275; see also Mussamat Saleha Dibi v. Oudh Commercial Bank, 20 I. L. C. 111.

of a notice to produce, unless the original is shown or appears to be in the possession of the person against whom the presumption is drawn. Per Walsh J. in Mongra v. Ded Ram, 35 Ind. Cas. 328.

Of any person out of the reach of, or not subject to, etc. This clause is out of secondary notice. Wiseman, L. J. P. &

M 109.

According to English law the mere fact of the non-amenable of the possessor to legal process cannot possible forms of evidence, by a Court before excusing for non production. If the precise whereabouts of the document is unknown, search may be made; if the possessor be ascertained, he may be requested to appear with the document, or he may be requested to deliver the document for the use at the trial, or his deposition may be taken with a copy furnished by him annexed to it. No one or more of these efforts to make any such In the first group, a nature depending more or less on the circumstances of the case. Boyle v. Wiseman, 10 Exch. 647, Ward v. Murray, 1905, 11 Mes. 5, cited Phil. p. 548. In the second

Gan Kim 9 C 939. So also secondary evidence of a document can be admitted without notice to the adverse party, when the person in possession of the document is out of the reach of or not subject to the process of the Court. Haranand v. Ramgopal, 27 C 639 (P. C.)=27 I. A. 1=4 C. W. N. 429. Section 86, of the Evidence Act, lays down that if a copy of a foreign judicial record presume it to be genuine other proof, for under may be given of public person is out of reach

5. of, or not subject to the process of the Court. Harmand v. Ram Gopal, 2 Bom L R 562. A notarial copy of a foreign will is admissible on proof by experts that the original is not allowed to be removed, and that the local Courts regard such copies as equivalent to originals. Phip Ev 7th Ed 527; Re Von Liend, (1896) P 148; Re Lemme, (1892) P 89, Enoch v Wylie 10 H L C 1, but see Re Broun, 80 L T. 360, Permanent Trustee v Fels, (1918) A C 879.

As regards the meaning of the expression of "any person not subject to the process of the Court" there is some conflict of opinion. According to Mr. Stokes these words are intended to include a person bound to produce the document on account of his position, and who produces it. Stokes Anglo Indian Code, V, C & P 737, Morston v Dawney, 1 H & C 31. This clause includes that rule of English law which requires a person to produce a document in his possession or control, or as agent acting on the behalf of the party who seeks attendance in Court of the document, or of subpoena duces tecum, and should lawfully refuse to produce it. Doe v Clifford, 2 C & K 448, Dwyer v Collins (1852) 7 Ex 632. If on the other hand he attends, but without the document, and a subpoena duces tecum has not been served on him or not been duly served, this is a fatal objection to the admission of secondary evidence as the party has not done all that lay in his power to procure the production of the original (Hibberd v Knight 2 Ex 11). If the person so refusing is merely agent for another by whose principal does so, the Court upon a subject is thus briefly

"Secondary evidence is a stranger to the proceed-here lawfully refuses to him either in his own right

the reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court." So it cannot be said that this clause includes the English rule just mentioned.

209; Huntingdon v. Mildman, Cro Jack 217; Wigmore § 1211. So "where a person is an utter stranger to a deed, there in pleading he is not compelled to shew it" Buller Nisi Prius, 252. So if the person possessing the document is by reason of privilege not compellable to produce, there is the same reason for admitting other evidence of its contents as if its production were physically impossible, because the party who stands in need of the evidence which that document affords is not to suffer from its absence at the trial. Per Pollock C B in Sayer v Glossop, 2 Exch. 409, 410. Mere disobedience is a notice to produce what is called a subpoena duces tecum i. e., a summons to attend the trial as a witness and bring the documents with him (Vide Order 16, rule 1 of Act V of 1908 = s 179 of the Old Code). The person on whom such a subpoena duces

tion, penalty, or forfeiture (Vide s 130 infra). So a party will not be required to produce the muniments of title to his estates (Taylor § 158, 1164, section 130 infra), nor will his solicitor, to whose care they have been entrusted (Hibbert v Knight, 2 Exch 11; Dos de Gilbert v Ross, 7 M & W. 102; Volant v Soyer, 13 C B 231); and in either case independent secondary evidence of their contents may be given. Per Hill J in R v Leatham, 3 E & L 658, 668; Best v § 216. So it is "a well established rule of law" that the productions of a privileged document is excused. Per Hill J in R v Leatham 3 E & L 658, 668. The principal may of course waive his privilege (Wells v Moore, R, & M 390), is apprehended that no secondary evidence is admissible under the Indian Evidence Act, if the party in possession of the document withholds it under §§ 130 and 131 of the Act regards this clause Mr. words 'of any person they stand, there is no of the document, as in hardly believe that this is what was intended. I think it probable that the word 'not' has been here omitted by mistake, and that the case intended to be dealt with here is the 65.

Under rules of strict interpretation it appears that this clause intends to make a departure from the English rule, which does not allow secondary evidence of any document improperly withheld. It may be that the party calling for the document which has been improperly withheld, has its remedy against the party so withholding the document in separate suit for damage or he may be punished for contempt of Court but such remedy may give very inadequate relief where the party withholding is a pauper and the loss to be suffered for the non production of the document is considerable. Moreover that will give rise to multiplicity of suits. It is also not desirable to deprive a party to produce secondary evidence of a document, simply because a third person refuses to produce the original of the document wilfully or perhaps fraudulently. There may be in addition the danger that the party withholding such document has some legal right to the document.

according to Prof Wigmore, the rules of law laid down by Alderson B. in James College v. Gibbs, 1 Y & C 145 156, where he said "You could not have proved it by secondary evidence unless the document had been in the possession of a party not bound to produce it." (The third person refused to produce it is true, at his

to cover a contingency for which no provision has been made in the Act itself.

When
have been secondary 203, Lord

is a false copy. But the giving of notice is the contemplated danger. The opponent does not produce the original. Hall, 14 East. 274, 276, Le Blanc J.

given. . . that he may not be taken Dudley 62, 64. "The answer to this is, first to guard against surprising his opponent by warning him of the danger.

secondly, that if here the purpose were, to give the opponent time to discover evidence impeaching or confirming the document, the notice should allow time for such an investigation, yet the law is clear that only time enough to produce the document need be allowed; and thirdly, that if, in fact he is not surprised, it is in law still no excuse for not giving notice.' Wigmore § 1202 'The true reason is' says Prof. Wigmore "that which is naturally deducible from the proponent's situation. He is required to produce the document if he can; he says that he will not bring it."

with the request. If we translate ly appreciate the significance of the and this notice of demand is necessary, in Biron Parke's words, (in Dyer v Collins, 7 Exch 639) 'merely to exclude the argument that the party has not shown that by giving notice to that adversary to produce it, he has used every exertion in his power that the best evidence might be given" So where a document of title which is in possession of a party is not produced by him after notice to produce the same, the party giving notice is entitled to give secondary evidence of the document under s 65(b) and section 68 proviso 2 Narsidas v Ravi Sankar, A I R 1931 Bom 33; see also Abdul v Kishan, 11 Lah L J 401, Makhan Lal v Gavinda, 13 R D 718; Subrayulu v. Vengama, A. I. R 1930 Mad 742-123 Ind Crs 197; Wigmore § 1202, see also Maungsan to ere be 90. age ought to be, denies that he has it, secondary evidence is admissible Taru Mal v Zulphakar Sha, 49 P R 1832 The word "produce" only means "procure the production or give it in evidence" Gaya Prosad v Jaswant, 1930 A L J. 1003-125 Ind Cas 460-A I R 1930 All, 550

CLAUSE B

Written admission as to the contents of an original document Section 22 lays down that oral admissions as to the contents of a document are not proof of a document even though the original is in existence, and might be but is not produced Cun Do 221 The result seems to be this —The written admission may always be proved The oral admission can only be proved in

65. condition mentioned in cl (b) of section 65, be admitted. Safar Ali v Mohesh, 23 C L J 122=34 Ind Cas 956 In a suit for redemption of mortgage, the mortgage deed was not produced. Secondary evidence consisted of a document addressed to the mortgagors by the alleged agent of the mortgagee, which proved to be his liability mortgage, rting to be his. It was produced for mortgaged deed under s 65(b), secondly, to save limitation under section 19 of the Limitation Act. Held that the document was no secondary evidence of the existence of the mortgage as it did not fall within the category of writings described in clause (b) of section 65 of the Evidence Act. Gayraj v Balraj Ali, 20 Ind Cas 62. This clause has no application where the original document is inadmissible for not being registered or properly stamped. Dnethi v. Krishnaswami, 6 M 117; Sambayya v Ganaayya, 3 M 308, Damodar v Attimaram Babaji, 12 B 443 (446). Where the record of the statement of the accused is not admissible, secondary evidence thereof could not be given. Queen Empress v Viram, 9 M 224. In rejecting such evidence, Parker J at p 240 observed: "Reference is made by the Sessions Judge to s 65 of the Evidence Act, the words appearing in cl (b) in that section being quoted; but for the reasons above stated, I am of opinion that it was not writing—if the affixing of seal be held to constitute a contents of the previous statements."

CLAUSE (C).

lost or destroyed. The loss or destruction of a document opens the door for the admission of secondary evidence. Wig's L 274. This rule is a very old one. In 1611, in Dr Leyfield's Case, 10 Co Rep 92 (a)=Wig. Cas 233 in admitting secondary evidence in such contingency, the Court observed: "yet in great and notorious extremities, as by casualty to fire, that all his evidences were burnt in his house, there, if that should appear to the Judges, they may, in favour of him who has to great a loss by fire, suffer him upon the general issue to prove the deed in evidence to the jury by witnesses, that affliction be not extreme whenever equally slowly where."

Anon, Jenkins J In the charters have been lost

2 Keble 546; Underhill 8; Robinson v Davis, 1 v Melhuish, Amb 24 Villers, 2 Atk 71, Lord

Wuzer Ali v Kali Coomar, 11 W R 228; Rajendra v. Behari, A. L. R. 1932 Pat 157; Abheraj v. Gaya, 8 O. W. N 1228. But secondary evidence is admissible where the Court is satisfied that the original is lost or destroyed. Hurish v Prosunna, 22 W R 303, Syed v. Nuseebun 10 W. R. 24, Lukhimon v. Koruna, 3 C L R 509; Kheller Chunder v Kheller Paul, 5 C 886=6 C L R 199; Jaffree Khanum v Imdad, 2 N W. P 314; Woomesh Chunder v Sam Sundari, 7 C. 98=8 C. L. R. 189; Syed Abbas v Yadeem, 3 M L A 156; foreseen

Now the unavail-
evidence is destroyed

Amerunnisa v. Afadoonnisa, 15 B L R
A. 87; Sheo Sarun v. Goolkaur W R.

Al

Ra

(R)

La

Suraj v. Lord St Leonard, 1 P D 151; Rance v. Hirdyal, W R (1861) 301; Ranjit v. Chumtal, 1 N. W P 178; Bishambhar v. Emperor, 90 Ind Cis 706=
2 O; Marakarutti v. Venantutti, 16
M 67 Cas 660; Gopi v. Mahanandi,
12 M 21 L W 227=97 Ind Cas
785=A I R. 1926 Mad 1001; Tulsi Ram v. Ram Saran, 23 A L J 109= known and that fact may be recognised telegrams are destroyed after three months secondary evidence is admissible Bishambhar

v. Emperor, 2 O W. N 760=90 Ind. Cis 706 If it is found that a document has been lost evidence may be given and whether proof is sufficient in a case is a question of fact Bibi Sugra v. Anqad Gir, L R 1 A 201.
But a mere assertion of destruction that a document is lost without any sufficient ground for admitting secondary evidence is not sufficient. 3 A 539 Where the explanation for the loss is lost, the regular course is to prove the loss before tendering secondary evidence Surat Singh v. Rani, 59 Ind Cas 461 In ordinary cases if the witness in whose custody a deed was, should depose to its loss, unless there is some motive suggested for his being untruthful, best evidence should be accepted as sufficient to let in secondary evidence of the deed Phirsham v. Ianna 21 O C 272=48 I A 365 P C of such

as 1000
insist-power-Dayal,

and Cas 399 But the question whether or not sufficient proof of search for, or loss of, an original document, to lay a ground for admission of secondary evidence has been given, is, a point proper to be decided by the Judge of first instance and is treated as depending very much on his discretion and his conclusion should not be overruled, except in a clear case of miscarriage Ma Path
v. filed a suit on have been lost and was not lost but suppressed as there was an payment of

A L J 265=18 Ind Cas 878

word "instruction" merely that it
the two come moment that the destruction becomes questionable at all (is it when not proved by eye witnesses of burning or tearing, the inquiry is raised whether the search for it has been

5. sufficient; and, in the next place, the proof of a loss usually carries the implication that the thing not found has ceased to exist, and thus assimilates the case to one of destruction. Thus the great question to which so many Judges have devoted so much pains—the establishment of a test for the sufficiency of proof of loss—includes practically not only the cases, of loss in the narrower and important document which the party might have an interest in keeping, and for the non-production of which no satisfactory reason is assigned . . . where the loss or destruction of the paper may almost be presumed very slight evidence of its loss or destruction is sufficient" Per Abbott C J in Brewster v Scuell, 3 B never likely to be required for any purpose whatever. In the former case reasonable to exact proof of a very careful search, whereas in the latter very slight evidence tending to show loss or destruction will suffice. Will Es 2nd Ed n 208. What is proper search or enquiry must depend on the particular surrounding circumstances of the particular matter before the Court. A paper of considerable importance, which is not likely to be permitted to perish may call for a much more minute and accurate search than that which may be considered as waste paper, which no body would likely take care of. . . What inquiry will do? I think, in cases of this sort [there the loss was

of a
the
where it ought to be found" Per Pollock W 319 329. In the same case Alderson has been a loss, and whether there has much on the nature of the instrument searched for. If we were speaking of envelope, in which a letter has been received, and a person said, "I have searched for it and
with the party who
to be it
it has been taken
It has been taken
ought to go to away. A would be satisfied itself; and the contents of this document by the original" R v Morison, 4 M & S 45, Gully v Exeter, 4 Bing 200, 21
C B N S. 747, 750, R v
W 269; R v Gordon, 25
ully as to exclude every hypo

alwa
of it
that infor

suggests and which were made

st. 278; R. v East Fairley, 392—1896) Vol II, 347. If circumstances tending to the most rigid enquiry should be made into the reasons for its non production Johnson v. Aruine, supra. It follows, properly, that the determination of the sufficiency of the search and in general of the proof of the fact of Court's discretion Wigmore § 1191 evidence of the search of the originals, are admitted. Whether or not sufficient proof of search for or loss of, an original document, to lay a ground for the admission of secondary evidence, has been given, is a point proper to be decided by the Judge of the first instance, and is treated as depending very much on his discretion. His conclusions should not be overruled except in a clear case of miscarriage Haripria Debi v. Rukmini Debi, 19 C 438—191 A 79 P C. Chotram v. Ahem Chand, A I R 1929 Sind 7. In R v Kent north, 7 Q B 612, 649, Denman L C J said "I think that we collect from R v Morton, the only rule, namely, that no general rule exists. The question in every case is, whether there has been evidence enough to satisfy the Court before which the trial is had, that to us the words of Byrley J in R v Denton, 'a bonafide' and diligent search was made for the instrument where it was likely to be found." But this is a question much fitter for the Court which tries than for us. They have to determine whether evidence is satisfactory, whether the search has been made bona fide where there has been due diligence, and so on. It is mere waste of time on our part to listen to special pleading on the subject." Wigmore § 1191, Ma Nyeu v. Yauu, U M R 1897 proof was given of search, cannot be received as secondary evidence. Meer Usudoolah v. Beeby Imamman, 5 W R P C 20—10 M I A 19, see also Roopmanyoores v. Hamalal, 1 W R 144; Pandu v. Bapudas, A. I R 1929 Nag 288

Non production for any other reason. The question whether the non-production is due to any other sufficient reason not arising from his own default or neglect is one of fact and depends mainly on the discretion of the Court, Gaya Pros d v. Jaswant, 125 Ind Cas 460—A I R 1930 All 550. The certified copy of a document which is already filed in another Court and cannot be produced without unnecessarily delaying the trial of the suit is admissible under s 65(c) Jobeda v. Monabali, 130 Ind Cas 860—A. I R 1930 Cal 479

CLAUSE (D)

When the c

6 M & W 68

also be proved be produced in Court Taylor § 438, see also R v. Farsen 6 C & P 81 Cohen v. Bolton, 2 Camp 108, Doe v. C 8 C & P 728, Bruce v. Nicolopolo 1 bringing a notice into Court." A remarkable illustration of this rule was furnished in the case of a man, who fell of the Liverpool goal, on mere Lord Abinger in Martimer v. McCallan, must show that the writing cannot be produced in Court. Jones v. Farleton, 9 M & W. 675—11 L J, Ex 267. Evidence has been admitted of the inscription

65. on a will or a tomb stone giving the date of death Smith v Patterson, 95 Mo 525=8 S W 567; Bruce v Nicolpolo, supra, R v O'Connell, 5 St. Tr N S 241. If there are stone itself may have to be produced; Davidson, 13 Q. B. D 265. There is a that the Court may readily asume that they cannot be produced in Court, and as to which secondary evidence may be allowed, such as inscriptions and addresses on travelling trunks. If the produce found is indispensable, it would sign were painted on a house, it would have to be produced, nor can it be for wagons, boxes, tombstone, and the like, on which one's name may be written Kansas etc Rail v Miller, 2 Colo 440, Burrell v North, 2 Cr & K 679. While Courts, in the administration of the law of evidence, should be careful not to open the door to falsehoods, they should be equally careful not to shut out truth. They should not encumber the law with rules which will involve labour and expense to the parties, and delay the progress without giving any additional safe guard ited States, 3 Wall. (U S), 114; Burr on a coffin plate, the coffin plate should be produced as it is removable. R v Fire Wks Cir. Ev 5th Am Ed 212. says Mr. Taylor "and the ut its removal, secondary that case, as in the case of mural inscriptions, it is not in the power of the party to produce the original" Alton v. Farmal, 1 C M & R 227, 291, 292; Boyle v Wiseman, 10 Ex R. 647. Taylor § 438. Mr Whitley Stokes thinks that such a case is not provided for, unless perhaps by the latter part of clause (c). But it can hardly be said that the original cannot be produced in reasonable time when it cannot be produced at all. It seems that the case would fall under paragraph (iii) of clause (a), in as much as it is in the power and possession of a person who is out of the reach and not subject to the process of the Court. Woodroffe Ev 5th Ed. p 519. Secondary evidence, of the abstract which by section 32 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901 (Edw 7 C 22) must be affixed in the factory, can be given as the original cannot be removed. Owner v Beehive Spinning Co Ltd. (1914) 1 K B 105=83 L J K B 232, Mortimer v McCallan, 6 M & W 53. Under this clause any kind of secondary evidence is admissible.

CLAUSE (E)

When the record under this clause In

Lal, 14 C 491. This excep-Mark Ev 57. In Hannell v.
"The admission of copies practice and besides the documents might be wanted in different places at the you cannot remove the document in which the writing is made, you are entitled to the next best evidence." Per Abinger L. C. B in Mortimer v McCallan, 6 M. & W 53, 59, 11 ignore § 1218.

second public

the kind of which the here it is it has original
So
certified
O W V.

(1) in the matter of Adya, 11 Ind Cas 261.

An entry in a public document such as a settlement record can be proved only by the original
A I R 1923 Lah 150

Radha Nath v Empt
It is doubtful whether

Cham Das,
evidence
L J 659.
from some record in the Revenue Court is admissible in evidence Bhaquati v Marjard, A I R 1931 Oudh 136-129 Ind Cas 331-7 O W N 1079.

CLAUSE (F).

secondary evidence of the contents
a document of which is certified is law in force in British India given in evidence in the first instance without having been introduced by any other evidence Hanish v Prosunno, 22 W N 200 of which a certified copy in British India to be given Cas 50
Hazari Lal v Cas 752
Section 57 of the Evidence Act provides that a copy so given under that section shall be admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the originals, but that clause was not intended to override the provisions of the Evidence Act.

admissible in evidence Sansa Rao v Ghani, 13 C P L R 91 The issue of a certified copy of income-tax returns to a person not entitled to inspect is forbidden by s 54 of the Income Tax Act, 1922.

65. This clause only allows certified copies as secondary evidence. But when the original is lost or destroyed any secondary evidence is admissible. Hunnath v Vajoth, 6 M 80, In re Aza and the Breuhildu, 5 C 583, Chandresuar v Bisheswar A I R 1927 P 61=101 Ind Cts 239=5 P 777, Hiranand v Ram Gopal L R 27 I A 1=27 C 639 P C; Ananda v. Secretary of State, 43 C 973=20 C W. N. 573. Other secondary evidence is also admissible where the document satisfies the condition of the next clause. Ram Sundar v Chindresuar, 34 C 293.

CLAUSE (G).

When the original consists of numerous documents. This provision is for the saving of public time. If the point to be ascertained were, for instance, the balance in a long series of accounts in a merchant's books evidently great inconvenience would arise, and much public time will be wasted, if a witness were and to make his examination Beuling, 3 Camp 310. He is sworn, and then to give the Phil Ex 499 Taylor § 462.

where the books and documents are multifarious and voluminous and of a character to render it difficult for the jury to comprehend material facts without the aid of such statements. . . In a trial embracing so many details and occupying so great a length of time as the case at bar, during which a great mass of it was the only mode of attaining the jury" Wigmore § 1230. The principle is that by which the state of pecuniary accounts or other business transaction is allowed to be shown by a witness's schedule or summary. Meyer v Sefton, 2 Stark, 274, 278; Gardner

rahaw, 1 De G & Sim 280, of copyright, the material presented in such a way as to be conveniently compared. Leurs v Fullerton, 2 Beav 6, 8; Maxman v Tegg, 2 Russ 385, 398, Wigmore § 1230. A witness may speak as to the insolvency of a party at a particular time from an inspection of his books. Meyer v. Sefton, 2 Stark 274. This exception however, will not enable a witness to state the general contents of a number of letters received by him from one of the parties in the cause, object of the examination be they produced on his mind between the writer and a third party. Taylor § 462. 'So a witness' the parties, though he may not be allowed to speak in the general

Lord Kenyon in Roberts v Leach, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000.

any person who has examined them, and who is skilled in the examination of such documents. In Ram Sundar v Chandreswar Prosad, 11 C W N 501=34 C 293, the Court observed "This objection is founded on the fact that the witness who had examined embodied the results of their examination of the records and registers. The objection made by the learned Counsel for the Appellant is that the Collectorate, under the provisions of the Act, has found as a matter of fact that those documents could not be conveniently

Evidence Act, then the only secondary evidence which could be admitted was the certified copies of the documents in question. We do not agree with the learned Judge. We think the documents were not because the documents were use the fact that documents. That being so, the general result of the documents examined by the learned Judge, the Record keeper and the clerks who give evidence before the learned Judge, the Abstract of mutation records is admissible under the section. Sher Mohammed v. 18 Ind Cas 451. Evidence may be when they consist of numerous Kanungoes entertained to assist the use Records, yet it is an abuse of their functions to require them to give oral evidence of the contents of a document such as record of a Muafi enquiry which ought to be examined in original by the Court itself. Gilani v. Mussamat Hussan, 2 Lah L J 714

66 Secondary evidence of the contents of the documents

Rules as to notice to produce. referred to in section 65, clause (a), shall not be given unless the party proposing to give such secondary evidence has previously given to the party in whose possession or power the document is * [or to his attorney or pleader,] such notice to produce it as is prescribed by law; and if no notice is prescribed by law, then such notice as the Court considers reasonable under the circumstances of the case.

Provided that such notice shall not be required in order to render secondary evidence admissible in any of the following cases, or in any other case in which the Court thinks fit to dispense with it —

- (1) when the document to be proved is itself a notice;
- (2) when, from the nature of the case, the adverse party must know that he will be required to produce it;

*These words in section 66 were inserted by the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act (18 of 1872) s. 6

- (3) when it appears or is proved that the adverse party has obtained possession of the original by fraud or force;
- (4) when the adverse party or his agent has the original in Court;
- (5) when the adverse party or his agent has admitted the loss of the document;
- (6) when the person in possession of the document is out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court.

Princi
production
the party

quired if ryed on because the original

notice to the party in possession
in 9 necessity

Per Poler J in Aoot v
f notice is satisfied, no notice is embodies the law of notice, which can be received under section 65, section 34 of Act II of 1855 which section 65 (a), namely, that where the document was out of the reach of the process of the Court. Taking this section with clause (a) of section 65, notice must be given where the document is in (a) the possession or (b) the power of the person against whom it is sought to be possession of a person legally bound to where a person is out of the jurisdiction of, arising order, cases in which the rule of notice is satisfied, cases in which, by exception, § 1202 Where it is in the hands of the a order to lay the foundation for secondary evidence is reasonable to produce it Bradford's Case, Case 24 in Clayton's Rep = Thayer Cas. Ev. p 780 In Salern v Mehresh Ambler 247, Lord Hardwick in allowing proof by a copy said: "There be given of the contents of deed in the hands of and does not . . . The rule of the

ay be
The

proved in itself a notice to quit, . . .
(2) where from the nature of the action the defendant has notice that the plaintiff intends to charge him with possession of the instrument, as for example, in trover of a bill of exchange Jolley v Taylor, 1 Camp. 143; Scott v. Jones,

P. 113 (3) Where the adverse party indolently, as where, after service had received paper from the witness in fraud of the subpoena. Leeds v. Cook, 1 Esp 256, Nally v. Greenough, 25 N. H. 325. (4) Proof that the adverse party or his attorney, has the instrument in Court, renders notice to produce it unnecessary. Dwyer v. Collins, 7 Lach.
 639 (5) Similarly no notice is necessary where the adverse party or his agent admits the loss of the original. In such a case the party will be admitted to give secondary evidence of its contents. (6) Similarly if the writing is in the control of a third person without the jurisdiction of the Court, no resort to legal force is of service. Greent Ld § 563(e) The above rules are applicable both in civil and criminal cases. It will comparatively seldom happen that documents are required to be produced at a criminal trial, and 1 Nort Ld 251 Where a letter, which was neither

Each partner should be served with the notice contemplated by s 60 of the Evidence Act to produce such accounts and papers as may be in his custody. If he omits to produce the books and the books that are proved to be at the time in his custody or under his control the presumption recognized in illustration (8) to s 111 of the Evidence Act may be applied. Pulin Bihari y document can ung Po v Ma
 contents of a section though no subsequent

dispensing with the notice can operate to make it admissible Prafulla v.
Emperor, A I R 1930 Cal 209=50 C. L J 593

Secondary evidence of the Contents 'Secondary evidence of the contents' means apparently "not of the existence or condition of the documents" Whitley Stokes, Vol II p 893

Party—Meaning of The word 'party' means not only adversary in the cause, but also a stranger 'legally bound to produce' the document Whitley Stokes, Vol II p 893

Such notice to produce as is prescribed by Law According to English practice an adversary in the cause is given a notice to produce the document in

be served with a 14 The notice
 1 on either Att
 3 & P 394 But Alsalo v Four-

drimer, M & M 334, Byrne v Harvey, 2 Mo & Rob 89 But as to the time and place of the service no precise rule can be laid down, except that it must be such party desiring to use it, until he has by subpoena duces tecum resorted to the 66.

hold that in an action of trover for bank notes no notice to produce the same is required. See the instrument These principles apply directly in this case. The form of the pleading, we must had in his possession, found then to be (N. Y) 293; see: Cr. 379 (582) of papers, (Jolley v Taylor 1 Camp. 143); in an action to recover the same, the defendant is bound to produce them. (Luckett v Clark, 10 Cox Cr. 379 (582). If the maker of a note or cheque, or the acceptor, in an action, deny by the D 446) In an action in contract it is held that the pleadings imply notice to the orders and letters constituting the contract. Zipp v Colchester, 12 S D 211 (Am). So the rule is the same where the writing is a proper matter of defence and the adverse party must understand that it will come in question (Kelner v S). possession; Conat, 30 V.

passing, or delivery is of the same kind with the others which he has disposed of or retained in his possession, he had notice in effect that if practicable to procure it, evidence will be given of their counterfeit character and of having passed them as true. It is notice in law, by which a party is as much bound both in civil and in criminal cases as by notice in effect. Notice in fact is not in form; notice in law is notice in effect, and either is sufficient. Per Baldern J in I S v Dudley, 1 Bold W 519, 524 (Am). It seems settled therefore, that on a charge of larceny or of forgery no express notice is necessary; and the principle would also extend to other charges; but the nature of the charge will determine the application of the principle. Wigmore § 1205 R. v. Haworth, 4 C & P 251, 256. But in an action for arson with intent to defraud the insurer, notice to produce the policy was required. R. v. Atkinson, 6 C. & Cr 153, see also R. v. Elworthy, 10 Cox Cr. 379 (582). If the maker of a note or cheque, or the acceptor, in an action, deny by the 4 Taunt. 865; Bucher v. Jarrat, 3 H. & P. 113. (3) Where the adverse party has obtained possession of the document fraudulently, as where, after service of a subpoena duces tecum, the adverse party had received paper from the witness in fraud of the subpoena. Leeds v. Cook, 1 Esp. 256; Neally v. Greenough, 25 N. H. 325. (4) Proof that the adverse party or his attorney, has the instrument in Court, renders notice to produce it unnecessary. Dwyer v. Collins, 7 Exch. 639. (5) Similarly no notice is necessary where the adverse party or his agent admits the loss of the original. In such a case the party will be admitted to give secondary evidence of its contents. (6) Similarly if the writing is in the control of a third person without the jurisdiction of the Court, no resort to legal force is of service. Green v. Evans, 563(e). The above rules are applicable both in civil and criminal cases. It will comparatively seldom happen that documents are required to be produced at a criminal trial, and notice will consequently have but seldom to be issued.

section 63 of the Evidence although no objection was
 'la, 26 C 53-2 C W N viz Each partner should be served with the notice contemplated by s 66 of the Evider papers as may be in his custody I books that are proved to be at the the presumption recognized in illustration (8) to s 114 of the Evidence Act may be applied Pudm Bahary v Mohendra, 34 C L J 405 Before secondary evidence of any document can be given, a notice to v Ma Shue, 2 Rang 397- of a letter neither called though no objection may be taken to the giving of that evidence, and no subsequent dispensing with the notice can operate to make it admissible Prafulla v.
Emperor, A I R 1930 Cal 209-50 C. L J 598

Secondary evidence of the Contents "Secondary evidence of the contents" means apparently "not of the existence or condition of the documents," Whitley Stokes Vol II p 893

Party—Meaning of The word "party" means not only adversary in the cause, but also a stranger 'legally bound to produce' the document W hitley Stokes, Vol II = 893

ding to English
he document in
be served with a 14 The notice
l on either Att
J & P 394 But Alfalo v Fours to the time and t it must be such as to enable the party, with the call Rogers

18
P. v use ney
on ally
owl
Bot

party desiring to use it, until he has by subpoena duces tecum resorted o contralict the secondary proof (Doe d. 135) or to show that there are attesting Challias, 7 C II 413; or to refresh the memory of a witness (Hill v Ainsworth, Bristol, 1847); or it seems, for any purpose (Collins v Garbon, 2 F. & F. 47, Doe v. Hodgson, 12 A & L 135) He is in effect bound by any legal and satisfactory evidence produced on the other side. Shookram v. Ramlal, 11 W. R. 248; Nort Ev 252 proved is itself a notice. a copy The reason Slaymaker, 14 S & R Pa 153, 156 (1m) "Every written ing" Wigmore § 1206, see also Phillipson v Chase, 2 Camp 111. But this consideration can well be made in the notice to produce In England, quit Ibid There also this exception in regard to notices to produce, for the character of because it re of the document 34; Taylor red for a ature of a be a mere notice". Grove v Ware, 2 Stark 174 A notice of a bill's dishonour was held to be a notice Ackland v Pearce, 2 Camp 599 But in case of a ice was re R 261, See also iso notice produce), most Courts from time to time recognize that the case of a notice—notice to quit, notice of dishonour, notices of suit, and the like—is to be governed merely by the general principle namely, where the pleadings by implication give notice to produce the notice, no express notice to produce it is necessary; but otherwise it is required Wigmore § 1209

Proviso—para (2)— required to produce it the form of the pleadings, the possession of an in produce need be served upon him Callan v Freueck, 6 B & C 398, 399 "Where the nature of the action gives the defendant notice that the plaintiff means to charge him with the possession of such an instrument, there can be no necessity for giving him any other notice" Per LeBlance J in How v Hall, 14 East, 274, 277 This principle is accepted in a variety of cases Wigmore § 1205 It naturally suggests itself that there are cases in which formal notice to produce would be idle, as in the case of an action for wrongful detention of a document belonging to the plaintiff, although, strictly speaking, such an action would be for the material on which the written character appeared, and it is account that the general 66.

may at once produce

In an old case of trover hold that in an action :

form of action gives
if necessary to falsify
the instrument pleading w

had in his p found then

(Kelnor v Savage, 20 Me 199), or the action is brought on a written contract in possession of the defendant which is fully described in the complaint Dana v Conat, 30 Vt 246; Burr Jones § 223. 'If the note, he is charged with forging, passing, or delivery of the same kind with the others which he has disposed of or retained in his possession, he had notice in effect that if practicable to procure it, evidence will be given of their counterfeit character and of having passed them as true. It is notice in law, by which a party is as much bound both in civil and in criminal cases as by notice in effect. Notice in fact is notice in form, notice in law is notice in effect, and either is sufficient,' Per Baldwin J in U S v Doebler, 1 Bold W 519, 524 (Am). It seems settled therefore, that on a charge of larceny or of forgery no express notice is necessary; and the principle would also extend to other charges; but the nature of the charge will determine the application of the principle. Wigmore § 1205 R v Hanorthy, 4 O & P 254, 256. But in an action for arson with intent to defraud the of id Armo

18 giv
Maun, Po v Ma Shice, 81 Ind Ca 373=A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 7; Ma Le v Ma Shice U B R. 1907. 4th Qr Ev 13, but see Dinonath v Rama Rai, 6 P. 102-97 Ind Cas 348-1926 P. 512. In another case it is held that in a suit for redemption when the mortgagee is in possession of the mortgage deed, and fails to produce it, oral evidence is admissible under s 65 (a) read with proviso (2) to section 66 of the Evidence Act. Mt Amin v. Mt Gurh, 9 Bur L T. 52-31 Ind. Cas. 692; see also Bahadur Singh v. Mahadeo Singh, 36 Ind. Cas 696; Sahai v. Sheo, A. W. N. 1888, 117, Dicarka v. Ramanand, 11 A 592-51 Ind. Cas 275-17 A. L. J. 711.

No notice to defendants to produce the original was necessary to render secondary evidence admissible, where the defendants, from the nature of the case, were required to produce the original. Syed D It is doubtful if a pro forma defendant is bound to produce the original, or in the decision of the case is not an adverse party within the meaning of proviso (2). Durgabati v Jagannath, A. I R 1929 All 680.

ined fraudulent possession of a document in his third person (who thus is not bound to produce it from the requirement object of a notice is amounts to a refusal.

Thus in odium spoliatoris, a notice need not be given to the adverse party to produce a paper, of which he has fraudulently or forcibly obtained possession, and of a he same to party as once counsel for party

by the adverse means of any taining a deed Mass 284) or ly v People, 49

A defendant signed by the he received at the plaintiff, paper produced

did not contain the whole of the letter as written, and that something material had been cut off from the top. It was not necessary for the plaintiff to give notice to produce the other letters. Robinson v Cutter, 163 Mass 377, Burr Jones § 228.

Proviso,—para (4)—When the adverse party has the original in Court A proof that the adverse party, or for the object of the notice 1 C M & R 38, Cook v Partridge, ibid) testimony to to produce it

it be likes, at the trial, and this to secure th Taylor § 456 In Dwyer v Collins, 7 Ex Ch indorsees against the acceptor of a bill of pleaded, inter alia, that the bill was given to prove his plea, and before the Lord Chief Baron, the defendant proceeded to prove his plea, and

Lord Chief Baron, after consulting the Judges ruled that the defendant was not bound to produce the original, and that secondary evidence was admissible.

66

In that case Lord Chief Baron Parke said "The next question is whether, the bill being admitted to be in Court, parol evidence was admissible on its non-production, or whether a previous notice to produce was necessary. On principle the answer must depend on the reason why notice to produce is required. If it be to give his opponent notice that such a document will be used by a party to the cause, so that he may be enabled to prepare evidence to explain or confirm it, then no doubt a notice at the trial though the document is not produced is permitted to make use of secondary evidence."

he must do before he can be permitted to make use of secondary evidence. The demand for the production of the document must be true reason, the measure of time necessary to procure the evidence to explain or support it, a very complicated one, depending on the nature of the plaintiff's case and the document itself and its bearing on the cause, and in practice such matters have never been inquired into but only the time with reference to the custody of the document and the residence and convenience of the party to whom notice has been given and the like. We think the plaintiff's alleged principle is not the true one on which notice to produce is required but that it is merely to give a sufficient opportunity to the opposite party to produce it and thereby secure if he pleases the best evidence of its contents, and a request to produce immediately is quite sufficient for that purpose, if it be in the Court. It would be some scandal to the administration of the law if the plaintiff's objection had prevailed. Wigmore Cas. L. 227

Proviso para (5)—When the adverse party or his pleader has admitted loss of the document. The rule requiring notice to the opponent proceeds on the assumption that the opponent has possession of the document the object being to show a demand and refusal to produce. So the requirement of notice does not apply on the theory that the document is unnecessary for the document as notice is unnecessary. It follows that where the document is admitted by the opponent to have been destroyed or lost, or even out of his possession, no notice is necessary for it is no longer a case of opponent's possession, but of loss. Wigmore § 1203. In such a case the notice could be nugatory. R v Haworth, 4 C & P 254. Foster v Pointer, 9 C & P 718, How v Hall 14 East 276, Doe v Spill, 3 B & Ad 182, Taylor § 455. A party however cannot under this exception call for a document that has been traced into the hands of the defendant.

Where by the proponent's evidence the document is shown to have been in the hands—as by the presumptive receipt of it, then even taken by the defendant, while if we take the opponent's denial in express refusal to produce, which equally puts the plaintiff in the position of being equally unable to obtain the document so that notice is unnecessary. Wigmore § 1203

Proviso, para (6)—When the person in possession of the document is out of the reach of, or not subject to the process of the Court. Section 60 lays down that secondary evidence may be given of the existence, condition or contents of a document, when the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power of any person who is out of the reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court, and when after the notice mentioned in section 60, such person does not produce it. "There is therefore a clear legislative enactment that notice or a reasonable notice, must be given, but that is qualified by s. 60, clause (6) which dispenses with notice. Mr Jackson argues that there must him at the last moment at the hearing of the suit, would have been nugatory. Mellus v Vicar Apostolic, 2 M 295. In Harmand v Ram Gopal, 27 C 639 (648) = 3 C W N. 129, Lord Hobhouse said "His proof of the Silhu records ions 65 and 66 of the Evidence Act secondary documents, which they are under section 74, when the person in possession of the document is out of the reach of or not subject to the process of the Court, which in the case here" See also Hurnund v Ram Gopal, 2 Bom L R 562 will be observed that under such notice is not required, the ht." This is a relaxation 225 An express waiver of

348 = A I R 1926 Pat 512 = 6 Pat 542
letters were in the possession of parties into claim, but the plaintiff did not take steps. Held that there being no question of the genuineness of the document these steps should have been waived by the Court and the document admitted in evidence under s 66 of the Evidence Act. Habiram v Hemnath, 19 C. W. N 1068

67. If a document is alleged to be signed or to have been written wholly or in part by any person, the signature or the handwriting of so much of the document as is alleged to be in that person's handwriting must be proved to be in his handwriting

Proof of signature and handwriting of person alleged to have signed or written document produced

Principle The introduction in evidence of a writing is not accomplished when the document is produced in Court. There is still a preliminary matter to be attended to before the writing can be received. This is the authentication of the writing or the proof of its genuineness. McKelvey's Ex §§ 277 279. Most documents bear a signature, or otherwise purport on their face to be of a certain and must be supplied by evidence. But a document purports in itself to indicate its authorship, and the perception that this element is nevertheless missing, and must still be supplied, is likely not to occur. There is a natural tendency to forget it. Thus it has constantly to be emphasised by the judicial requirement of evidence to that effect. Thus it is that in the tradition of the common law a wise emphasis has been placed upon the necessity of supplying the logical element of authenticity for writings. The general principle has been enforced that a writing purporting to be of a certain authorship cannot go to the jury as possibly genuine, merely on the strength of this purport; there must be some evidence of the genuineness or execution of it. Wigmore § 2100, Horns voke's Trial, 25 How St Lr 78, Prial v Vanbatenburg, 2 Camp 139. "In the ordinary affairs of men, it is very often assumed, without proof, that he whose name has been affixed to a written instrument placed it there himself. But

7. when signing becomes a matter of legal controversy, it must be established by proof" Per Bronson C. J in Willson v Beles, 4 Den 201; 213.

General Principle of Authentication The foundation on which rests the necessity of authentication is not any artificial principle of evidence, but an inherent logical necessity. Thus if as a part of some facts asserted, Doe's letter is offered, what is involved in the assumption of the offer is (a) a letter written (b) by Doe; thus a letter alone, without the fact that it is Doe's, is not receivable, simply because it is not the thing offered. By one of the many rules of Evidence, Doe's letter may be admitted. The element of authentication may be, the element of assumed in all. This logical element the importance of proving it, exists wherever any personal connection with a corporeal object is assumed in the offer. The necessity of authentication, therefore applies equally well to chattels—to a knife, a horse, a coat, etc., whenever it is asserted to be connected with a person. This process of authenticating chattels is ordinarily referred to as identifying them, but the two ideas are distinct, and different principles of evidence are applied. Identification presupposes that two objects, apparently different, have been referred to and the issue is whether they are in fact one and identical, not separate objects.

act, i.e. the presence or absence of M at the time or place (if those are known) when the document was made (b) [in the document itself. These will be (1) the handwriting (written), the style of handtyping (2) the ink or other script medium, (3) the paper and other inscribed material, (4) the seal, (5) the contents, (6) the other marks.

class of evidence (III) The retrospective to the making or not external. (a) Internal found, e.g. a dead man's library, yet the document may have been placed there by a falsifier (2) a postal stamp or post mark or other mark indicating that an official has acted upon the document at some time and place, but this mark may have been falsely used.

(3) Sundry marks indicating action by some one subsequent to the original marking of the burnt cloth, indicating an attempt to destroy by fire. (b) External evidence will include (1) all subsequent separate conduct by the alleged maker, indicating a consciousness of its genuineness or the reverse, (2) All subsequent separate conduct by third persons having a similar import—Wigmore § 2131, Wigmore's Principles of Judicial Proof § 52

Scope of the section of a document, there is what it purports to be? I point is dealt with in Evidence Act governs v. Gudarkoori 82 Ind C 306. The nature of the evidence will depend to a large extent on the nature of the document. If it is a mere memorandum such as the entry in a diary mentioned in s 32 (b) it must be proved that the diary was really that of the person whose statements it is said to contain. If it is a letter it must be shown who wrote it, or at any rate who signed it for a signature to a document turns the whole document into a statement by the person who who executed it. Mishra Ev necessary under this section.

This section does not require to be produced. Nor does the Act require the writer of a document to be examined as a witness. Abdool Ali v. Abdool Rahman 21 W R 429. The proof of hand writing and signature under this section must be by any of the recognised modes of proof and amongst others by statements admissible under s 32 of the Evidence Act. Ibdulla v. Gunnabai, 11 B 690. The execution of a document cannot be deemed proved as it is required by the Evidence Act merely because it is proved in the sense of the definition of 'proved'. That definition of the word 'proved' must be read along with s 67 of the Act until it is proved that the signature purporting to be that of the executant is in the hand writing of the executant the Court cannot proceed to consider whether the execution is proved. In other words section 67 makes proof of execution of a document something more difficult than proof of matter other than the execution of a document. Salark v. Jit Tun Bano 107 Ind Cas 564—A I R 1928 A 303. But it was never intended by s 67 of the Evidence Act that direct evidence of hand writing was always necessary but that section merely stated with reference to needs what was the universal rule in all cases the new rule either to or felt the fact of execution of the document was properly proved. Karali v. The Dist Indian Railway 48 C L J 32=111 Ind Cas 492=A I R 1918 Cal 498, Barindia v. E, 14 C W N 1209 1210 and of proof is required for it must nevertheless be shown signature denoting execution who professed to execute it. A Court is not bound to treat the registration endorsement as conclusive proof of the fact of execution. If there are suspicious circumstances attending the execution of the document such endorsement cannot be resorted to for the purpose of holding that the execution has been proved. Jogannath v. Dhuraja 5 O L J 191=48 Ind Cas 279. Under this section a document can be proved by any

When a register is produced in order to prove the execution of the document in it must be proved by oral testimony that the register was in fact a register of attendance kept for the on a stated date. Mishra v. J said 'There is no evidence as to who wrote down the names which appear on the page in question. It is suggested that the names or signatures were written

57. out by the persons themselves under the date which appears at the heading of the paper. But no witness has been produced to identify these signatures. The learned Sessions Judge has considered that the mere fact that a person's name appears on such a document is proof that he signed it. It is obvious that when this register was produced it was necessary to show by oral testimony that it was the purpose of recording the names of the persons and giving over their names. The signatures were in fact those of the persons.

satisfaction of the Judge to be genuine. As no witness was called to testify to this document in any way whatsoever, it is obvious that these essential requirements were not attempted to be fulfilled. The document accordingly is not admissible in evidence in the absence of oral proof of its nature and authorship and even if it were admitted it does not prove the presence of the petitioners at the time of the execution of their signatures. A witness if the writer of the certificate is not a witness. Peter v Mahomed 22 Ind Cas 654.

654. The ordinary method of proving handwritings are (1) by calling as a witness a person who wrote the document or saw it written or who is qualified to express an opinion as to the handwriting by virtue of section 47 of the Evidence Act, (2) by a comparison of the handwriting as provided in section 73 of the Evidence Act, and (3) by admission of the person against whom the document is tendered. A document does not prove itself nor is an unproved signature proof of its having been written by the person whose signature it purports to bear. Pet Mookerjee J in Sarojini v Hari Das 26 C W N 113 at p 119, see also Gunga Pershad v Indrajit 23 W R 390 P C. To prove the execution of a bill of sale executed in their favour by the plaintiffs' father the defendant called a Kazi who deposed that the vendor came before him accompanied by a witness who was then registered.

On special appeal was sufficient direct evidence under section 67. 2 v Manah Cland 27 Ind Cas 866, Lahiri v Bala, 77 Ind Cas 798-18 N L R 85.

and some other person writes his name. Mark Ex p 60. All that is required is that the signature must be by a person who is conscious of his act, a mere mechanical movement of the hand is not sufficient. Kalee Sura v Hobbs 21 W R C R. Sw 11 r 93. document, Re considered as Roberts 339, O L J 406, is a mere symbol. Most universal Some and sometimes both orally makes a mark. John v Gainsford 31 W R C R. In bonis Redding 2 53 Ind Cas 131-7. 130 W 770 A mark who does it often.

ratnam 2 C W N 612-25 C. use of pen and ink is not necessary. Tr 93. In that case Sir Cresswell held that a mark made by the instrument or some other instrument may make a difference that a fac simile of the whole name was impressed on the Will instead of a mere mark or cross. The mark made by the instrument or stamp was intended to stand for and represent the signature of the testator. In the case where it was held that sealing was not signing, the seals were affixed by way of a signature. So execution of a document can be made by affixing a mark on it. Taylor v Den 3 D & P 223, Baker v Denning, 11 Ad & L 24, Donel v Brough, 11

(1891) A C 435 Where the alleged executant of a deed (who was a marksman) denied execution and all the attesting witnesses are dead or for some other reason not available, proof of the handwriting of the attesting witness and of his identity is sufficient proof of execution. This is founded on the rule that on proof of his handwriting every thing must be presumed to have been rightly done, and a fraud must not be imputed without some evidence on that behalf. Ponnu Suman Kalyansundara A I R, 1930 Mad 770=125 Ind Cr. 231

known
from
the well

had been furnished But as there can seldom be a sole person knowing the

(the case)

multiple knowing

the same facts are often persons hostilely interested who thus have a motive for fabrication; and if it were once laid down as a general rule of law, that the contents of a letter might be taken as evidencing its authenticity, too many would be found to take fraudulent advantage of this rule. Accordingly, it seems generally conceded that the mere contents of a written communication, purporting to be a particular person's are of themselves not sufficient evidence of genuineness. Only in special circumstances, where the contents reveal a knowledge or other trait particularly referable to a single person, could the contents alone suffice. II of a particular

, (a) an illiterate's

letter Ibid.

Illiterate's letter, typewriting It ought to be conceded that where there is no direct testimony to the act of execution or sending by an illiterate, the evidence to be drawn from the contents should in some situations, be allowed to suffice to go to the jury. The case of an amanuensis using a type writing machine prevents a similar impossibility, whenever the signature (as sometimes happens) is also type written or stamped and it would seem that a similar necessity justifies a resort to evidence from contents. If there were a serious possibility of abuse this step would not be advisable. But in fact there is also a danger of abuse in the opposite direction for the difficulty of authenticating such a document is sometimes taken advantage of by those who wish to be able to disavow their authorship. Today however in view of the scientific development of the study of documents by microscopy and other arts the authorship of type written documents can often be traced with certainty to the specific machine used, so that this mode of authentication does not then in principle differ from that of using the handwriting. Wignone § 2149

Printed matter—news paper Vide notes under s 81 infra

68 If a document is required by law to be attested, it shall not be used as evidence until one attesting

Proof of execution of document required by law to be attested

witness at least has been called for the purpose of proving its execution, if there be an attesting witness alive, and subject to the process of the Court and capable of giving evidence.

"Provided that it shall not be necessary to call an attesting witness in proof of the execution of any document, not being a will, which has been registered in accordance with, the provisions of the

58. Indian Registration Act, 1908, unless its execution by the person by whom it purports to have been executed is specifically denied*

The general notion of
be called before another of that particular witness to obtain knowledge of the matter more accurately than any other person. His opportunities of knowledge, it must be supposed, have been not only better than those of others, but so much better that it would be a palpable risk of injustice to proceed in the trial without endeavouring to obtain him. Moreover, such a rule should be applied only where the class of witnesses thus preferred can be designated with call him must

in question, he
the one thing
can contribute
by the law by the partisan interests of either side may fail to furnish Wigmore § 186.

History of the rule "As regards the requirement" says Professor James Bradley Thayer that the proof of the execution of an attested document must be by the witnesses if they can be had, this, also, has a clear and very old origin.
Such persons belonged to that very ancient class of transaction or business witnesses, running far back into the old Germanic law who were once the only sort of witnesses that could be compelled to come before Court. Their allowing themselves to be called in and set down as attesting witnesses was understood

Proof by witnesses
ly to know the fact
ght be, he could not,
as, unless he had
It was a part of witnesses formally allowed their names to be written into deeds in large numbers. When jury trial, or rather proof by jury, as it originally was, came in, the old proof by witnesses was joined with it, when the execution of the deed was denied, and the same process that summoned the twelve, summoned also these witnesses. The phrase of the precept to the sheriff was summoned duodecim (etc, etc,) cum aliis. The presence of these witnesses was at first as necessary as that of the jury. Great delays and embarrassments attended such a requirement where the number of witnesses in

Accordingly
necessary,
After another

longer a nec
century, in 1562-63, process against all kinds of them to come in, not with the jury or as witnesses could not in one way or the other to come in. As regards ordinary witnesses to the jury, compulsory process seems not have been introduced until 1562-63. Since 1513, the attendance of

not be got,
long period
whether a de denied it. Ha

any that can be stated in a Court of Justice" Thayer's Prel. Tr. L. pp. 502, 503

Reason and Policy of the old Rule

Strictly speaking there is no sufficient

Lord Ellenborough (in R v

and ratiocinative system of 1700 &c So on this point is great Judges Not being able to make a departure from long tradition, insufficient and inconsistent reasons for enforcing the rule have been laid down in support of it The rule is thus stated by Lord Ellenborough L C J in R v Harringworth, 4 M & S.

350 "In as much as they are pledged witnesses the knowledge they have upon the subject is essential, and if it can be procured must be forthcoming"

See also Barnes v Trompousky, 7 T R 26 In Gerapulo v Wieler 10 C B

because 'he is the witness agreed

v Garth, 8 Exch 803 Pollock C B

to prove the execution of a deed for this reason, that by an imperative rule of law the parties are supposed to have agreed in terro that the deed shall not be given in evidence without his execution' Relying

(of the rule) is not (as in evidence, but that he

o speak to the circum-

ed for the purpose of dispensing with proof at the trial, but cannot be broken" But the difficulty about this reason is that no such agreement attestation is required by law Moreover not apply between others than the parties to the deed fact Further more this assumes that the opponent charged as obligor or maker is a party to the document—which, if the execution is denied is an assumption of the very point in issue Wigmore § 1208, Fransworth v Briggs,

6 N H 561, 565 contra Chamberlayne v Ey § 487 Some of the Judges assigned the reason

attesting witness as

Porter, 4 Esp 241, 1

principle that there

of what took place in Le Blance J in Chil v Dunning 1 East 51 where he reason is reiterated by Le Blance J in Chil v Dunning 1 East 51 where he said 'A fact may be known to the ledge or recollection of the obligor, and knowledge of the subscribing witness rel

Athurst J in Abbot v Plumbe 1 Dougl 440 are numerous First it is inconsistent with the rule itself, for the rule applies even where fraud duress and time are not in issue, and even where the maker himself is competent as a witness Again, the attester is in practice not usually a person who knows anything about the circumstances preceding the document's execution, or knows more than any other person who by being present could be a qualified witness Finally if the witness does possess special knowledge about some affirmative issue, the opponent is the proper person to call the witness, if he desires him So this rule has no justification in its original broad form Wigmore § 1208 'Has the rule, then, a justification in policy? It certainly has none in its original broad form But in most jurisdictions it has by statute been limited to documents required by law to be attested, and in this shape it seems to be entirely justifiable In the first place the attestation is in such cases required by law as a special precaution against forgery, thus the attestation itself must in any case be proved as an element in the validity of the document, and there seems to be no special hardship in obtaining the

86. witness rather than in obtaining evidence of his signature. In the next place such documents are, in most jurisdictions, wills of deceased persons and deeds of illiterate persons, for such documents the maker himself being either deceased or not acquainted with writings, the attester's testimony is almost inevitably the most desirable and most trustworthy source of information as to the fact of execution, more over it is in such cases that the defences of fraud and undue influence are most likely to be made and here also the attester's testimony is likely to be of use and ought to be obtained if possible." Higmore § 1288

Reason of the departure from the old rule and principle underlying the section. "We do not purpose to meddle with execution required either by the Legislature, we think it deserving of serious consideration whether execution of written documents may not in ot was executed. But it is notorious that in practice the attesting witness in the majority of instances knows nothing of the transaction, the instrument having been prepared by a clerk, servant, or a neighbour is called in to attest it. A del to which no parol testimony is not admitted to contradict or vary the terms of

of the document is not the real matter in dispute and where there are no concomitant circumstances to be inquired into is often attended with difficulty and expense and sometimes leads to the defeat of justice. Cases have occurred where, in tracing a title, numerous witnesses from distant parts have been rendered necessary to prove the formal execution of deeds though their execution was not really in dispute by a single witness, which it was thought the party alleging title the adversary's case it was not supposed received, and the party requiring it of the document is not really in to be limited to any particular witness to prove the execution. When genuineness is in dispute, the party producing it will be sure to call the attesting witness and the absence of the latter would throw the greatest discredit on the instrument. We therefore recommend that except in cases where the evidence of attestation is requisite to the validity of the instrument an attesting witness need not be called. Common Law Procedure Commission, Second Report (1853) p 23, Higmore Cas Ex p 246

Attestation of documents—calling of witnesses. No document can be used if not by

when the genuineness of the document has to be proved. Mahabji, 61 A 1 sections have no direct bearing on the question as to whether the attestation was according to law. Balkrishna v Narain Sha 13 N L R 21. Section 72 lays down that an attested document not required by law to be attested may be proved as if it was unattested. Section 68 is applicable to cases where a document is required by law to be attested. Kumar v Ghugi 103 Ind Cas 57. To prove wills required by law to be attested an attesting witness attesting witness alive, and subject to giving evidence. Tulsi Singh v Jadar, 82 Ind Cas 306. Where all is sufficient to prove the hand written by other evidence. (Fido s 69)

but execution of a document will be sufficiently proved when it is admitted by the party himself who has executed the document (Vide s 70). So also where a document is thirty years old, the Court may in its discretion presume the genuineness and due execution as well as attestation of the document (Vide s 71). The Court shall presume also that every document called for and not does not recollect it, its execution may be proved by other evidence. Vide s.

Scope of section 68 The object of placing more than one attestation upon document whether at any party's voluntary instance or by requirement of law, ordinarily not to demand the combined testimony, of all at the trial, but merely provide by way of caution a number of witnesses, so that the contingencies death, removal of residence and the like, may be guarded against, and one witness at least may be available. But a main object in Statutes requiring execution with two or more witnesses is to afford a secondary evidence in case the primary evidence is lost. Indal C J said "The law looks primarily to the attestation of the testator and not to the presence of three witnesses."

should be in the nature of guards or securities, to protect him in the execution of his Will against force or fraud or undue influence. The proof of the Will by the three witnesses supposing it should afterwards come in contest only is an incidental and secondary benefit, derived from the mode of attestation. It is well settled that in an action at law it is sufficient to call only one of the subscribing witnesses if he can speak to the observance of all that is required by the statute." Doe v Lees 7 C & P 574. In Bullen v Michel, 4 Dow 297, 331, Lord Eldon said "They usually call one witness leaving it to the other side, if they think proper, to call the other witnesses." According to English

Wignmore § 1304, see also Ogle v Cook 1 Ves Sr 177 Grayson v Atkinson, 2 Ves Sr 454, 460, Binfield v Lambert 1 Dick 337, Bird v Butler, 1 D ck 337; Powel v Cleaver, 2 Bro C C 449 501, Fitzherbest v Fitzherbest, 4 Br
C C 231 Carrington v Payne 5 Ves Jr 401, 411 Bootle v Blundell 19 Ves Jr 494, Winchelsea v Wanchope 2 Russ 411, Tatham v Wright, 3 Russ & Myl 1 8, 16 According to section 68 of the Evidence Act, to prove the execution of a document required by law to witnesses must be called to prove in the Punjab which requires balz entry to be attested at all manuwar tam v Ghugi, 108 Ind Cas 57—A 1 R 1928 Lah 148 A mortgage deed signed by the markaman was attested by three witnesses. In a suit on mortgage its execution was not specifically denied but the plaintiff sought to prove the same.

Two of the attesting witnesses having been dead the third was called, but he deposed that he attested the deed in the absence of the executant. It appeared however that the Sub Regi
also spoken
Held that un-
the execution of the mortgage was not specifically denied. Yatub Khan v Gulhar Khan, 52 B. 219—30 Bom L R 565—111 Ind Cas. 237—A 1 R. 1923

68. Bom 267 An account book is not a document which is required by law to be attested and this section has no application to a case in which such account book is produced in evidence. Emperor v Narboda Prosad, A I R 1930 All 38. There is no law which requires the attestation of a sale deed so far as the Punjab is concerned. This section has therefore no application to sale deed in that province. Moharaja of Ferozpur v Anath Ram, A I R 1929 Lah 1. One of the three attesting witnesses being alive the plaintiff called one witness and when he resailed the plaintiff proceeded to prove the document by other evidence. Held there was a full compliance with the provisions of s 68 and 71. Hinsor Ali v Gurudas Kapah, A I R 1927 Cal 188=33 C W N 243=49 C J 16. Where no attempt is made to prove a mortgage deed either by calling in an attesting witness or even by putting any question to the scribe of the deed who was examined as a witness regarding the attesting witnesses or attestation the document cannot be used as evidence. Jinan v Dilip Singh, A I R 1929 All 389=27 A L J 538. The amendment by Act 31 of 1926, is a provision relating to procedural law and not a substantive law and therefore must be taken to be retrospective in operation. Thayammal v Muthu Kumar Sivan, A I R 1929 Mad 81. Where the executant of a mortgage deed, the writer of the deed and the attesting witnesses have all died, having regard to the new definition of attesting in s 3 of P. A. Act, and to the varied mode of proving registered document as amended by s 63 Evidence Act it is sufficient to satisfy the Court that the execution which was not specifically denied was so probable that a prudent man ought under the circumstances of the case to act upon the supposition that it was so executed. Parun. To satisfy the requirement of this section put his mark in the mortgage deed. 12 A L J 1114. Sections 63 to 71 of in which the fact of execution may and have no direct bearing on the question as to whether the attestation was according to law. The sections proceed on the assumption that the attesting witnesses referred to are attesting witnesses within the meaning of the law requiring the document to be attested. If the fact that there are any valid attesting witnesses is denied, it has to be proved like any other disputed fact. If the execution is admitted no other proof of mere execution is required, and if the document on its face purports to have been attested by the required number of attesting witnesses and if it is not denied that the question of valid attestation does not arise, then the maxim omnia præsuntur however it is denied that the attestation, relying on the deed as an attested deed must is not admitted. Even if due attestation is not denied, but evidence on the subject is given the Court cannot ignore the evidence. There can be no due attestation without execution, and the fact of execution is of no mortgage deed is concerned. L. R 21. By the terms of this section when a document cannot be used as evidence at all as a document either requiring attestation or in fact attested, but this does not prevent it from being used in evidence as something else or for any other purpose. Section 69 is subject to the limitation viz., that if the documents were tendered in some other proceeding for the purpose of proving the handwriting of the scribe, it could not be objected to upon the ground that no attesting witness being called to prove it it could not be used in evidence at all. Moti Chand v 121=44 Ind C 15=96. The law is imperative and does not on the face of it cases provided in ss 69, 70 and 71 of the Indian Evidence Act. Other Chandra Paul, 30 C L J 443=27 C W N 131=63 Ind Cal 56. Other evidence under s 71 cannot be admitted where the provisions of s 61 have not been complied with. Banarsi v Gopinath, A I R 1931 All 411. Prabu v Venkata, A L R 1932 Mad 148=34 L W 663. Where a mortgagor admits having signed the mortgage sought to be enforced but couples it with a denial of the presence of the attesters at the time of signing the mortgage the mortgagor must prove the execution of the mortgage by calling at least one attesting witness to prove the attestation. Aryun Chandra v Hailash Chandra, 36 C L J

58. be present ~~the~~ witnesses and see it signed by the testator. And the principle was given effect to in the House of Lords in Buddell v Spilsbury, 10 Cl & F 340. There the Lord ~~the~~ party who sees the witness he is an ~~the~~ by two witnesses required by section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act is attestation of the actual fact of the execution Shamu Patter v. Abdul Kadir, 16 C. W. N. 1009 P C. The witnesses must see and be conscious of the act done and be able to prove it by their own evidence, they must be both mentally and bodily present, for if not, they might mind. Per Dr Lushington in Hudson v (1864) 3 S & J. 578, Sir Gorell Barr

In my view, at the end of the transaction

W. 404; see also Sharp v 44=10 Bom. L R 943; Da 256; Sashubhusan v Chana 364 (P. C.) Again in the ca Phillips, 4 E & B 450=24 ment was not merely to sub- execution, but included al some disinterested person capable of giving evidence as to what took place These cases contemplate as a requisite of a good attestation that the document must have been executed in the presence of an attesting witness, who sub- scribed his name to the instrument in token of this circumstance Sarungigur Begam v. Boroda Kant, 37 C 526=11 C L J 563=14 C W. N 791; see also Ganga Parshad v. Ishri Pershad, 45 C 748=27 C L J 548; Deonaram v. Kakur, 24 A 319 (F. B.), Prankrishna v. Jadunath, 2 C W. N 603, Gurindra v. Bejoy, 26 C 246=3 C W N 81; Dinomona v Banbhary, 7 C. W N. 160, Sashubhusan v Chandra Peshkar, 4 C L J 41=33C 861

tion,
defend case o

soning appears to be based on good sense, of justice, equity and good conscience.

according to which the Indian Courts are bound to decide Per Mookerjee J in Surungigur Begum v Boroda Kant Mitter, 11 C. L. J. 563 (572)=37 C 326=14 C. W. N. 374.

Presence, meaning of—Signature of a Purdanashin lady—how to be attested. S.

ed. Saradil's Law D

Presence of Rari & Li

Witnessed A's execution

Dictionary de testat

a written instrument, to also Bay v. Hilt, (1 instrument be deemed to have been executed in the presence of a witness. It may be generally stated as the result of the decisions, that presence involves two ideas, namely, mental cognition of the act, and physical contiguity; in other words, the person in whose presence the act is done must be able mentally to know what is being done and what is done in the presence of a person, must take place in phys intelligible rule as to trated by a referee

to what extent judic subject, Cass v. Dill, 1 Bro C C 93, it was held that when the testatrix sat in her carriage, opposite to the window of the attorney's office, in which the Will was attested, the

the room the two witnesses who attested the codicil, the curtains at the foot of the bed were however drawn

Sir Herbert Jen

hold, if necessary

have attested in that the testator,

The principle deducible from the

according to the custom of the country, before male witnesses a document w sively proved to have been executed b be deemed to have been attested by purdah, and who before attestation, satisfied themselves that there was no fraud, and that the document had been actually executed by the lady screened off from their gaze Sarrurtygur Begum v Baroda Kant, 37 C 520—11 O L J, 563 This view has also been adopted by Brett J in the case of Harmongal

v Ganour Singh, 13 C W N 40 and by Stephen and Chatterjee JJ in Ira Prosad v. Gunga Prosad, 14 C. W N 165 A mortgage deed was taken for execution behind the purdah to a purdanashin lady Her son came from behind the purda and said that it had been signed by her The witnesses thereupon affixed their signatures to the document, though none of them saw her sign it

Held that there was no valid execution of the document as it was not attested as required by section 59 of the Transfer of Property Act Rai Ganga Pershad v

Ishra Pershad, 22 C W N. 697—18 O 748—31 M L J 547 P C; see also

Ihra Rai v Ram Hari, 5 Pat 58 (P C)—89 Ind Cas 659—A I R 1925 P C

417—45 Ind Cas 691, Padarnath v

991 P C=37 A 471; Rai Rali not necessary that the attesting witne sign the document. Kasidanbi v. Ga

W N

It is

lady

Requisites of valid attestation The object of attestation is that some person should verify that the deed was signed voluntarily, Sarrurtygur v. Baroda Kant, 37 C 520—11 C. L J. 563—11 O W. N. 971. The attesting

18. witnesses must subscribe with the intention, that the subscription made should be a complete attestation of the Will, and evidence is admissible to show whether such was the intention or not. In bonis Wilson, 1 P. & D. 269, In bonis Sharman, 1 P. & D. 661, Griffiths v Griffiths, 2 P. & D. 300, In bonis Murphy, 1 R. 8 Eq. 300; Robert v Phillips, 4 E. & B. 450, In the goods of Streatley (1891) P. 172. The witness execution of the document as an nature to be attested, by which Rob 712; Ewon v Franklin, D. Phiffs v Hale, 3 P. & D. 166; In bonis Dilles, 3 P. & D. 164, Leonard v Leonard, (1902) P. 243. Where a witness, put in his signature without any intention of attesting, it is not a valid attestation. In bonis Smith, 15 P. D. 2, In bonis Murphy, 1 R. 8 Eq. 300, In bonis Sharman, 1 P. & D. 661. The attesting - Pearson. that the of the Dunn, 1 in any witness Hanman (1843) 1 Rob. 757, Roberts v Phillips, 4 E. & B. 450, Savitra v F. A. Sar 19 C. P. mu R. 6 (1) 11 C. L. K. 359. Generally, any competent witness may attest; thus marksmen, (Re-Enyon, 3 P. & D. 92) and infants if of years of discretion, may be attesting witnesses. Phup Ev 7th Ed 501. A party to a deed or his agent cannot attest it. Seal v. Calridge, 7 Q. B. D. 516, Peace v Brookes, (1895) 2 Q. B. 415.

Attest
his signatu
v. Krishna,
Ind. Cas.
145; Dhar
Ayyasame
Abinash v 1

attesting witness must be shown or presumed. Radra v Abdul 35 A. 201.

purpose and in whatever manner, is as a 41 M. 535, Dinomoyee v Bonbehary, 48 C. 61. Where the name of the under a separate heading styled "scribe" apart from the signature of the only other person who signed as signature of the scribe was not, as as attestation. Abinash v Dasa

v. Ajodhya 20 C. W. N. 699-34.

mda v Ramoomal, A. I. R. 1927 Sindu 853-A. I. R. 1925 Oudh. 734 A behalf of the mortgagor cannot be a competent attesting

Cas. 720; Paban
Sristidhar v Ra
case, the scribe of name at the end c Held, that such

the meaning of this section Bahadur v. Bahadur, 5 N. L. R. 3-1 Ind. Cas. 173; but see Ravi Sahu v. Gauri Sahu, 39 Ind. Cas. 153. Where a person who has signed a deed as a scribe subsequently witnesses the onus of proving this assertion is on him. Ravi Sahu, 4 Pat. L. J. 311-53 Ind. Cas. 73. In any case a scribe wherever he writes the document as an attesting witness unless he actually puts so in the document.

§ 405-21 Bom. L. R. 136-65 Ind. Cas. 616. A scribe who executes a document for and on behalf of the executant is not a person who "sees what passes" or "sees it executed" when he himself does the very thing to which he subsequently signing as a witness he professes to be a witness. Srinivas v. Lakshmaiah, 63 Ind. Cas. 507.

Attestation by a Sub Registrar. The registration of his Will by a testator and his signature to a certificate of admission of execution, testified by the signature of the Sub Registrar, and of a witness is a sufficient attestation to satisfy the requirements of section 63 of the Succession Act. Imarendra v. Kashi, admits his names on the Will as witnesses to the admission of the testator, such attestation is sufficient to satisfy the requirements of s. 63 of the Succession Act. Atiya v. Nagendra, 11 C. 429; Sarada v. Triguna, 1 Pat. 360; Rajendra v. Menota, 1 Pat. L. R. 267; Herosundara v. Chantler, 6 C. 17-6 C. L. R. 303; In re Roymonce, 1 C. 150; Horendra v. Chandra, 16 C. 19; Mohammad v. Ali Haidar 12 O. L. J. 1-23 Bom. L. R. 339. But a Sub Registrar's attestation cannot be taken to be a good proof that he affixed his seal or signature in the presence of the executant. Abmah v. Dasarath, 32 C. W. N. 1228, but see Radha v. Nripendra, 17 C. L. J. 118.

Personal acknowledgment. "What is the plain meaning" asked Dr. Lushington in Hudson v. Parler, (1944) 1 Rob. 11 at p. 25 of acknowledging of Blake v. Blake, (1882) 7 P. & D. 102 at p. 107 Jessel M. R. observed "What is in law a sufficient acknowledgment under the statute? What I take to be the law is correct in the fact that the witnesses to the will should be present at the time the testator should

68. them to sign their names, that amounts to an acknowledgment of his signature, if the Court is satisfied that the signature of the testator was on the Will at the time' In Blake v Blake, (1882) 7 P. & D 110 Jessel V R considered the cases of Guillim v Guillim, and Beckett v Howe, and observed 'I cannot find one word in the judgment of Guillim v Guillim, to show that Sir C Cresswell was of opinion that if the witnesses were saying he had signed would be sufficient out the interpretation put upon it by new doctrine laid down in that c Parker, supra The existence of any such doctrine rests entirely upon the state-

ords to that effect,
this is my signature

Daintice v Fesolo,

(1898) 13 P. D 102 at p 103, Cotton L J took a similar view Similarly in Holt v Genge (1842) 3 Curt 160 at p 172 Sir H J Fust said: "The production of a will by the testator, it having his name upon it, and a request to witnesses to attest it would be a sufficient acknowledgment" In The Goods of Thompson is produc

have an

the page

of his signature by the testator". See also Balmulund v Bhagandas, 13 Bom L. R 209-19 Ind Crs 401; Manicbas v Hermusji, 1 B 457; Hurro Sundari v Chunder Kant, 6 C 17, Nitya Gopal v Nagendra Nath, 11 C 49, Amarendra v Kashi Nath, 27 C 169 Attestation in the presence of a testator on acknowledgment of signature or exec

Chand v. Mohanand, 6 C L J 453,

Sobair v Sari, 19 C W N 1297-29 In has been added by the Transfer of Pro

Since the passing of that Act attestation

a personal acknowle

passing of that Act,

before the attesting

sufficient, Vide Sha

P. C, Saheda v Raj

(P. C) = A. I R 1

263, Ranu v Laxmanrao, 33 B 44.

Act, the law was the same the acknowledgment of the donor Such attestation was held to be not valid attestation Vide Amarappa v. Raghava, 44 B 231; Saheda v Rajah Ram, 11 A L J. 757-21 Ind.

Cas 83, In re Velutapalatti Peda, 9 M L T 57-8 Ind Cas 887; Baynath v
Biraja, 2 Pat. 52(61). These rulings are also no longer good law.

of

been duly accounted for. Suamudin Singh v. Kant Fatima, 11 Ind. Cas Where only one attester proved a mortgage bond attested by more than two witnesses and when its due execution was not denied, held that having regard to s. 63, the document may be taken as properly proved. Nunl Kishore v. Ance Lam, 29 C. 25-6, 62 W. N. 195. It is not correct to apply an Act which was passed subsequent to the trial of a case to the procedure in the case. Provision to s. 63 of the Evidence Act was held inapplicable to a case disposed of before it took effect. Jamun v. G. J., 131 Ind. C. 557-1931 A. L. J. 312-A. I. R. 1931 All. 411. A mortgage bond purported to be executed by three persons who were all dead at the time of the suit. The signature of each of them was represented by an irregular scribble such as might be made by an illiterate person, and against each of these marks there was a statement that it was the mark of one of the executants, the name being given in each case. These statements were proved to have been written by a deceased professional bond-writer who wrote the whole document in the ordinary course of his business. The two attesting witnesses also were dead and the signature of each of them was satisfactorily proved to be in his handwriting. Held that there was sufficient proof of the execution of the bond, and that the statement in writing of the deceased bond-writer was relevant under s. 32 (2) of the Evidence Act. Huti v. Manakchand, 11 N. L. R. 9-27 Ind. C. 506. Where the only living witness of a document was illiterate and on being examined denied its execution. Held, that the document could be proved by other evidence. Bairi Prashad v. Gramthar, 26

So long as there is one such witness as has been called. The fact that, when called, he will prove hostile, does not excuse the plaintiff of his duty. Tulsi Singh v. Gopal Singh, 1 Pat. L. J. 369. Sections 63 and 69 read together were intended to lay down how a document

It was not the intention of the legislature that an attesting witness or some other witness should have to prove further that the document was in fact signed by the mortgagor in the

Munna Lal, 11 A. L. J.

15 A. L. J. 164-39

signatures of
, and that of ption of its
gh v. Hukam

Singh, 15 A. L. J. 167-39 A. 112-38 Ind. C. 501. It is not necessary that two attesting witnesses should be called when two are alive nor that even assuming that one only need be called, he should at least be made to prove Venkata v.

Mere proof
f a document
ment is one that the document was executed in the presence of two attesting witnesses Perumal Chattrar v. Raghava Chattrar, 11 L. W. 563. Where evidence of the

3. execution of a deed is available which, if tendered would satisfy the requirements of s 68 of the Evidence Act, the Court is justified in refusing to draw the presumption under s 90 of that Act nor can such presumption be invoked in favour of the deed nor would such presumption be justified in favour of the authority of a person to sign for an illiterate executant Raghubar v Sanual 8 O L J 23=61 Ind Cas 125 Where the only living attesting witness to a mortgage deed who had to be and was called by the mortgagee to depose to a execution and attes the mortgage, was got at by the the clear evidence he gave in the attestation Held that the sworn evidence given by the witness in examination in chief can be acted upon by the Court Thannem v Bommaderara, 11 L W. 344=(1911) M W N 747

The death of attesting witness legal evidence not by hearsay found must be proved to the satisfaction of the Court by diligent and honest search A it can be compelled to attend the Court to give his evidence Asoomah v S R. Chettu, 13 Bur L T 114=61 Ind Cas 637

To prove a deed of gift the production of a witness who identified the donor and also the attesting witnesses when the deed was being registered and who was known personally to the Sub Registrar together with an entry in favour of the donee in the village records in succession to the donor, is sufficient Partab Bahadur v Ramdas, 60 Ind

it is open to the parties to as a matter of fact see the v Mon Mohini, 67 Ind Cas 87 T1 satisfies the requirement of section 68

other is, it cannot be inferred that the back the other and that there his evidence Chinnarayan v Moulaz Zahurul, A I R fact cannot be raised for the first time in second appeal Erulandi Thevan v Subramania Iyer, 97 Ind Cas 611=1926 M W. N 559 Evidence of attesters to mortgage deed is, indispensable unless it is impossible to produce them Karimulla v. Gudar Kocri, A I R 1925 All 56.

Required by law to be attested The term "required by law to be attested" means required by law of the country where the property is situate Elizabeth May Toomey v Bhupendra Nath Bose, 7 Pat. 520=111 Ind Cas 57=A I R 1928 Pat. 304 In that case Dawson Miller C J said. "It was next contended that the indenture of 20th June 1926 was not properly proved as neither of the attesting witnesses to Mr. Macrae's signature had been called, nor in this country. The court was divided. The majority held that the signature of his signature required attested the document in Whatever conflicting apply to contracts in relation to law where the lex loci contractus and the lex loci rei sitae or, as Professor Dicey calls it, lex situs differ it seems to be generally agreed by Story, Dacey Westlake and other text-writers that in so far as the formalities of alienation or conveyances are concerned the law applicable is that of the country where the land is situated in, (see, Dict. of Conflict of Laws, ch. 21 and Appendix Note 17).

The law of the land is the law of the place where the land is situated.

It is a well-known principle of law that the law of the land is the law of the place where the land is situated. Thus as to conveyances or Wills of land the local nature of the thing requires them to be carried into execution according to the law here. So also in Intestates v. Farth, 5 B & C 451, 132 A.C. 1 said: "The rule as to the law of the domicile has never been any that the law of England, law of a foreign country." The law of a foreign country. In Waterhouse When the law of a foreign the property of a debtor situated of the law is to be applied, and it does not therefore apply. Sanatin v. Dina Nath, 20 C 222-3 C.W.N. 224

An unattested personal covenant to as containing a Deposit in the Receipt Co. includes it. Madras Deposit in the Receipt Co. is impossible to view the question of the execution with reference to the covenant to pay as severable from the execution of the document in so far as it creates a security. Virappa v. Chinna Juthu, 3 M.L.T. 175-17 M.L.J. 213-20 M. 251, but see Venkata v. Venkata, 51 M. 163-1 I.R. 1931 Mad 110-60 M.L.J. 50

In order to prove a sale deed, it is not necessary, under this section to examine a marginal by law to be attested is not a document application to a case in which such account book is produced in evidence. Emperor v. Narbada, 51 A. 551-121 Ind. Cas. 879-A I.R. 1930 All. 34

This section only applies to cases where a document is required to be attested in the manner provided by law and it can not be admitted in evidence unless one of the attesting witnesses is examined. Mathura Prasad v. Chhedi Lal, 13 A.L.J. 553-29 Ind. Cas. 363

The provision of this section does not apply to the Will of a Mahomedan, and so an admission by the defendant, in a suit by the testator, was held to be relevant in a later suit to prove the Will. Najban Bibi v. Sayad Raja, 1 O.C. 468

Waiver of objection. Where no objection was taken to the admissibility of a mortgage deed in the Court of first instance on the ground that the deed was not attested, it is not competent to object to its admission in a subsequent suit. Kalithra, 13 M.L.J. 143

Effect of document not properly attested. A document which is inoperative not being properly attested can not take effect.

164 (F.B.)-11 A.L.J. 141-18 Ind. L.J. 133-36 Ind. Cas. 903, Prannath v. Andra, 44 C. 388 (P.C.); Official Receiver v. Hemchand v. Malloo, 10 N.L.R. 81; 18 S.L.R. 789 Narayan v. Lakshmandas, only one witness is amount contained Pulaka Vetti v.

Thiruthapalli, 32 M. 410 (F.B.) (Madras Deposit and Benefit Co. v. Oonamalat, 18 M. 29, overruled); Sada Kavur v. Rudepally, 30 M. 281, Ram Narain v.

8.

; Sonathun v. Dinonath, 26 C. 222; Dhand v. Jafaladdi v. Mohar, 26 C. 78; Dulham v. Behari, M., 43 M. L. J. 475; Mathura v. Cheddi, 13 A. 100; Cher v. Clara Ruxton, 4 C. L. J. 510; Quah Chang

Transfer of property Amendment Act (XXVII of 1926) whether retrospective. The Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act (XXVII of 1926) was and Roy JJ. held, (1) that in view of the definition of the word "attested" in adequate, but it was held by a Full Bench in the Allahabad High Court in Gurja Nandan Kaluar v. Hanuman Das, A. I. R. 1927 All 1-49 A. 25 (F. B.) and this was followed by a Bench in Sajer Paramanick, A. I. R. 1927 Bom 100. The Bombay High Court in Matulal decided on the ground that Act of 1926, made the decision in that case, made the alone, there would have been no doubt whatever on the question. That amendment was, however, inserted in this Act in the middle of a large number of amendments relating to the military and air force and s. 1 of that Act was enacted at the same time which prescribes as follows.—

"The repeal of any Act shall not affect the validity, in any proceedings before any court, of anything already done or suffered, or any proceeding in respect thereof, or any debt, penalty, obligation, liability, claim or demand or any indemnity already granted, or the proof of any past act or thing."

When the legislature determined that that should not affect the validity, invalidity, effect or consequences of anything already done or suffered, or any proceeding in respect thereof. It would therefore,

Act and under which portions of over 100 Acts are repealed, and amongst these are s. 3 and 4 of Act 10 of 1927. By repealing s. 1 of Act 10 of 1927 that Act would have its retrospective effect restored, but in Act 12 of 1927, the saving clause contained in Act 10 of 1927 is repeated almost verbatim. This saving clause, therefore, enacts that the repeal of s. 3 and 4 of Act 10 of 1927, which would have made that Act retrospective, is not to have that effect, for Act 12 of 1927 cannot restore, therefore, of this legislation of 'attested' is not to have retrospective rights or any act done in the 1 not valid when executed for want of proper attestation the subsequent legislation will not make it valid. But the view expressed by their Lordships in this case in a subsequent Full

A I R 1929 Mad 1-55

decision was —

"Whether Acts 27 of 1926, 10 of 1927 and 13 of 1927 are retrospective in their nature so as to apply to documents executed on a date prior to their coming into force?"

Courts—Frotter C J on behalf of the Full Bench answered the question as follows. The Acts are retrospective. We should have thought that Acts 27 of 1926 and 10 of 1927 showed a clear intention that they were to be regarded as retrospective. The Acts of 1927 preclude further discussion."

772=109 Ind Cas 469=A I R 1928
v Swami, 30 L W 677=A I R 1929
Mad 881=57 M L J 588, Dargawati v Jagannath, 27 A L J 1391=118 Ind
Cas 662=A I R 1929 A 680

Proviso So far as any rule of pleading requires that the execution of a document named in the declaration must be expressly traversed, the failure to plead in denial must, under such a rule, be equivalent to a confession of the allegation of execution in the declaration, and thus the execution is not an issue on the trial, and the present rule does not apply. Wigmore § 1295, Vide also order VIII, r 5, C P Code. The words, "specifically denied" mean specifically denied by the party against whom it is sought to be used. In Cook v Transwell, 3 Launc, 450, Gibbs C J said "In cases where 'non est part of the deed, he must do it by the attesting witnesses in the common way" See also Gillett v Abbott, 7 A. & L 783. Proper reading of the proviso to s. 63

69. is that if required deed the document
the deed

an attesting witness Radha v Deoki, A I R 1932 All 320 = 1932 A L J 207; but see Ramdayal v Sulab, 14 R D 494. If the validity of a mortgage be specifically denied, in the sense that the document did not effect a mortgage in law, then it must be proved by the mortgagee that the mortgage deed was attested at least by two witnesses. Lachman v Surendra, A I R 1932 All 527 (F B) = 1932 A L J 653

69. If no such attesting witness can be found, or if the document purports to have been executed in the United Kingdom, it must be proved that the attestation of one attesting witness at least is in his handwriting and that the signature of the person executing the document is in the handwriting of that person.

Principle
attesting or is unavailable
to the orthodox form of preferred witness rule, the attestation must even be used in preference to other testimony." Wigmore § 1505. The reason is that the attestation is in effect the extra-judicial statement of the attester to the fact of due execution, admitted under the hearsay exception and being admissible so far as concerns the H instrument relative to its have subscribed his name in attestation comes in by way Lossee v Lossee, 2 Hill 600 as a written declaration of event of his death, or absence, yields a reluctant credit by way of necessary substitute for his oath. Mr. Hill's Note on the case; Wigmore § 1505. So this extra-judicial statement, expressed or implied, is always, when the attester is unavailable, admissible by exception to the Hearsay rule. The question there is, not merely whether it is admissible, but whether it is preferred to any other attester is personally that extent disposed could now be made

Is it, then further,
a part of the rule of preference that, before thus going to other testimony, the attester's singular and
signature

over testimony on the stand under cross-examination is an extraordinary measure, assuming for such a statement a value not at all to be attributable ordinarily to such statements. Nevertheless, such a preference unquestionably existed as a part of orthodox common law rule in England. Wigmore § 1300.
But this section requires that the signature of the maker also, as well as that of the attester must be proved. This contention means in effect that another witness to the maker's signature must be called, for (as has just been noted) the attestation is the attester's testimony to the fact of execution, and the placing of the signature by the purporting maker. If, then, it is necessary to call a second witness to the maker's signature, this must be on the supposition that the testimony of the attestation, taken alone, does not go far enough in its implied or expressed statements. This is indeed the ground upon which in part the above contention has been rested. It argues first, that the attestation, while asserting execution by a person of a certain name, does not sufficiently identify that person with the party in the case. It argues further more, from the point of view of policy, that a person might be bribed to make a false attestor's M 520 that it proof the defendant with the note what is the effect which, with the greatest degree of latitude can which desc utine A B

stop further and show that the defendant is A B of C in the county of York, or in some manner establish that he is the person by whom the note appears to be executed. Now what does the subscribing witness in this particular case attest? Why, that this instrument was duly executed by a person of the name of Francis Musgrave. There may be many persons of that name and if you do not show instrument, you ve It is not a instrument executed . . . why? Because it is an essential part of the issue, which you are bound to prove, that the instrument was executed by the defendant in the suit. It seems to me, therefore on principle, that you must give some evidence of the identity of the defendant with the party who has signed the instrument."

Wigmore § 1513 But "where handwriting. In this case one is beyond the reach of the process which could be obtained was on-residents, (m)] and in instrument

Durr Jones § 329

Attestor's Hearsay Statement—How admissible

Upon the general principle statement cannot be used ng testimony in person.

he did not see executed by the to trustworthiness seem to be four (1) The occasion is a formal one, and the statement requires a writing; and there is commonly a radical disinclination to take part in a false transaction of such a sort (2) The concoction of a false document will either fix an innocent party with a false obligation or will divert legitimate heirs of their rights, and there is a natural repugnance to giving assistance in such a wrong (3) The making of a false attestation, whether or not it is in criminal law a forgery or a perjury, is popularly supposed to be such, and the attestor would probably be at least an accomplice in a forgery, so that substantive sanction deterring from a crime would probably operate to prevent a false attestation (4) The attestor knows that he is liable at any time to be called upon in Court to substantiate his attestation, and not only in his falsity likely there to be exposed by the opponent's witnesses, but he will there be obliged either to commit perjury by swearing to the fact of execution or to his falseness, of recanting and confessing if circumstances which easily to the Hearsay rule. Wigmore § 1508.

Scope of the section By the strict rule of the common law the primary or best evidence to prove the execution of a deed or other writing required by law to be attested is generally the testimony of subscribing witnesses, if available or if not, then proof of his handwriting under discussion was declared by universal as that can be stated (Maule & S 325) yet it has several qualifications and exceptions. The rule does not apply if the subscribing witness is dead (Adam v Kerr, 1 Bos & P 360), or can not be found (Falmouth v Roberts 9 M & W. 467=11 L J Ex. 180, Parker v Hoskins, 2 Taunt 223; Birt v Walker, 4 Barn & Ald 697), or is without the jurisdiction of the Court (Prince v Blackburn, 2 East, 250; Glubb v Edward, the rule formal and ignorth, 4 acts in secondary evidence, it is equally well received as a rule of law produced at a trial dead or cannot be of being produce writing; and the of the instrumen it must be proved that "no such attesting witness can be found" in other words, before a party can rely on exhaust all process of the Court 16, rule 10, C P C for the arre-property. Shahzadi Begam v Cas 756=A I R 1928 Pat 356 (who was a marks-man) denies dead or for some other reason no attesting witness one attesting dispute as charge the A. I. R 1 writing of o A mor execution.

he denies execution, the Court of fact can consider it Laturia v. Kamalja, 1924 Nag 367. Sections 68 and 69 of the Evidence Act read together were intended to lay down how a document which was required by law to be attested, if the provisions of the sections of evidence to intention of the legislature that an should have to prove further that a mortgagor in the presence of at least Munna Lal, 14 A. L. J. 1011=39 comes to a finding as to a document having been legally proved within the meaning of this section, it cannot be legally interfered with by the appellate Court, specially when no objection was taken to the admissibility of the document at the time of the hearing Monch Konda v. Achu Appalacram, 22

witness is Churany
 reference to proving the attestation of at least one attesting witness when all the attesting witnesses are dead, are sufficiently complied with by proof of the handwriting of the scribe and by the fact that some of the attesting witnesses signed by the pen of the scribe Krishna Jiva Bhanth, 31 A 615-10 A L J 217 All as the document had been admitted by one of the executants in certain other document tendered in evidence and proved Hell, that the evidence adduced did not comply with the requirements of s 69 of the Evidence Act and the document could not be taken to have been proved Gobandhan v Hari Lal, 11 A L J, 379-19 Ind Cas 121-20 A 361 In England, it is recognized that there is a distinction between proof of the handwriting of a person and presumptive and other evidence that a document had been executed The Indian Law does not appear to allow a party to rely on presumptive or other evidence the attesting witnesses had been duly accounted for Suamudin v Haniz, 11 Ind Cas 225, see also Amerumal v Kiphara, 11 L W 563 This section no doubt requires proof that the signature of the executant is in his handwriting, but this fact may be proved indirectly by a contemporaneous admission of execution made by an executant or by other relevant facts, such as his subsequent conduct, just as well as by the evidence of a witness who directly swears to his signature Such an admission recorded by the Sub-Registrar in his registration endorsement can be accepted in evidence as proof of execution Ayudha v Jagannath, 20 O C 18-38 Ind Cas 605 In the expression "it must be proved that the attestation of one attesting witness at least is in his handwriting"

 "handwriting" could probably be held to include, in the case of marks man, his mark Whitley Stokes, Vol II p 694, see also Pran Krishna v Jadunath, absence of the witness beyond the jurisdiction of the Court (Mills v Trust, 11 Johns (N. Y.) 121), or his absence in a distant part of the country, are not sufficient McIord v Johnson, 4 Bibb (Ky) 531 The absence of the witness is sufficiently accounted for if, after diligent enquiry, he cannot be found Clark v Sanderson, 3 Binn, Pa (192); Cunliffe v Sefton, 2 Dist, 182, Crosby v
2 C W N 603

Percy, 1 Taunt 364, Dudley v Summer, 5 Mass 438, Morgan v Morgan, 11 Bing 359, Evans v Curtis, 2 Car & P 296, Bright v Doe, A & D 22; Whitelock v Musgrove, 1 C & M 511 What is due diligence must, of course, depend somewhat upon the circumstances of each case The proof should show satisfactorily that a reasonable, honest and diligent inquiry has been made After such proof is given, the decision of the question depends to a considerable extent upon the so Burton 11 Johns (N. Y.) 64 Such Trust, 3 J
 witness, if Jackson v treated as

What is sufficient proof of the search for an absent witness, in order to admit secondary evidence of the signature, depends somewhat upon circumstances.
 Where the witness has a fixed residence within the country the rule should be more strict than where the defendant had no fixed residence, was a labouring man, or a person of low condition, or a person
 to use words that 282
 party,

or that sue
be enforce Thannesa
must be pi

, the rule will not
ies § 529; see al a attesting witness
d Crs. 637.

Witness' name unknown, through loss or illegibility of Document. 'It is clear that where the very name of the attester cannot be ascertained, the attester is unavailable for the purpose of furnishing his testimony. This situation occurs where the document is lost; here the proponet is exempt from producing the attester [Keeling v Ball, Perke Add Cas 88; Re Phibbs (1917) p 93]; unless of course the name has otherwise before trial become known to the proponet, for in that case his ti the document before him, might document did or did not once exist exists" Wigmore § 1314 The known but the person cannot Giles, 1 E & B 642.

Causes of unavailability—Illness—Failure of Memory etc When the attester is at the time of trial so ill or so infirm from age that it is impracticable, without his production attendance in Court, Taunt. 16, contra Harrison v Bh far as it involves a mental disability organic in its nature, and analogous to insanity, should

tion purely as to the identity
Wigmore § § 1315, 1316.

If the attester admissible The interest. Suave
has since become because it speaks as

70. The admission of a party to an attested document of its execution by himself shall be sufficient proof of its execution as against him, though it be a document required by law to be attested.

Admission of execution by party to attested document

Principle For the purposes of proof, a judicial admission of the opponent — i e an express agreement for the purposes of the trial—has the same effect as a name. Wigmore § 1296

Scope of the relate to admission § 894. The term party in the course by the admission of Budha v Serican, evidently distinguished from the execution by witnesses, which is known as "attestation." Jhama v Decluz, 2 N. L. R 10 (16). Section 70 of the Indian Evidence Act lays down that the admission of a party to an attested document of its execution by himself shall be sufficient proof of its execution as against

Now the question is as to what is meant by "admission" on these terms the consent to the contents of the document, no this, there he admits that he can be taken to mean that he assents by him, but he may have been compelled to do so, he admits execution of the document, but he is taken to admit that he is the author of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, 1296-1337-76 Ind. 7 C W N 263 So section 70

of the 12th
attestation
transfer of

enira v Nital, 7 C W N. 1 Satishchandra Mitra v Woolhoffs said "that admission on that even when
of execution or signing has the meaning of it"

Ind Cas 984, Pabau Khan v Badal, Nanhi, 64 Ind Cas 11-19 A L J 855
3 Pat 817-74 Ind Cas 100-1923 P C L J 114-74 Ind Cas 178, Aung Rhi v Ma Aung, 1 Rang 557, Nageswar
v Bachu, 4 Pat L J 511-53 Ind Cas 79; Priyanath v Bissessar, 1 C.
W N 603, Dhruva Lal v Shambu, 47 Ind Cas 9 But in a recent case the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council has held that this section 1 Hira Bibi v Ram Hari, 30 C W
A L J 815-52 I A 362-20 W
1144-42 C L J 148-98 Ind Cas
R 1925 P C 203 This section applies Ala Po Gu v Ma Min Thu 5 Rang ad to the

the Indian law to be

444-44
mat
all,

Unandia v Harilash Chandra, 36 C L J 373 The admission by a mortgagor of the execution of a mortgaged deed before the Court does away with the necessity of proving its execution but not with the necessity of such attestation as is required by law Pandurang v Balaji, 14 C P L R 42 Under this section, sufficient proof as against the proposition that the document

4 Pat L J 511, Nibaran v Ram Chandra, 22 C W N 445-44 Ind Cas 984 document cannot be proof of its execution
178-38 C L J 114,

for his purposes, it is also (so far as he is concerned) genuine for the proponent's purposes. The execution thus not being disputable, the rule requiring the attesting witness to prove it does not apply. Ilignore § 1297

Proof when attesting witness denies the execution

71. If the attesting witness denies or does not recollect the execution of the document, its execution may be proved by other evidence.

Principle The notion of the rule of Preference for the attesting witness is that of the general desirability, in furtherance of truth, of obtaining his knowledge on the subject. What may be the tenor of witness's testimony, remains of the side.

by evidence the execution, the present rule says nothing about the consequences—whatever any other rule may say. The present rule's force is absolutely spent when witness is produced for examination. So the attester's positive denial of the facts of execution, contradicting the statements implied or expressed in his attestation leave the proponent still free to prove by other testimony, if he can, the facts of due execution, a permission demanded not only by principle but also by policy in as much as the proponent might otherwise be defeated of his rights by a corrupt attester. Ilignore § 1302

Scope of the section The party seeking to prove an instrument may examine his witness as to the acts of execution performed, the date, the place,

15 Pick Mass 534 If a party, who calls a witness to prove a particular fact, be disappointed in the result of the testimony, it is competent for him to prove the fact by other testimony. 3 Stark Et 1692 If the subscribing witness fails to establish attestation, of law, not testimony

534 In other words, the execution of the instrument, even though it be a Will may be established by competent evidence against the positive testimony of the subscribing witnesses. Matter of Gottrel, 95 N Y 329 The party who would establish a deed must lay his ground work by the production of the subscribing witnesses if the execution of it, they fail to establish the positive rule of the law, is not to be established by other evidence.

attestation or not. Nort Ev 254 When in a mortgage suit it was found that one of the attestors was dead and the other either denied or did not recollect the execution of the document, the execution of the same can be proved by other evidence. Lakshman v Gokhul, 1 Pat 54—(1922) Pat 415—70 Ind Cas 298 A statement of the attesting witnesses to a mortgage deed that they signed the blank paper and not the completed deed is sufficient to attract the operation of this section and entitles the mortgagee to prove execution by evidence other than that of the attesting witnesses. Dinabandhu v Sanatan, 48 Ind Cas 624 "If one of two or more attesting witnesses being called, denies or does not recollect the execution of the document it is not very clear whether other evidence can be given to prove it, if there be another attesting witness alive, subject to the process of the Court and capable of giving evidence,

71. who is not produced? Field L 7th Ed 227. It is not intended by enacting this section to depart from the rule of English law that the evidence of the other witnesses should not be introduced unless the absence of the other attesting witnesses is satisfactorily explained in the case where one of the two attesting witnesses has been called and has denied execution. Ayemanti v Mahammad, 49 C L J 347 = A I R 1929 Cal 44. So other evidence under s. 71 cannot be admitted where provision of s 68 have not been complied with. Banuar v Gopi, A I R 1931 All 411 = 1931 A L J 342.

given false testimony
all which was attested by four witnesses, two of whom had died and the other two deposed practically in favour of the objector, Mookerjee v Breachcraft JJ observed. This however, does not compel the Court to pronounce against the Will. It was ruled in the case of Nubo Kishore Dass v Joy Doorga Dass, 23 W R 189, that the mere fact that attesting witnesses to a Will have repudiated their signatures, does not invalidate the Will, if it can be proved by evidence of a reliable consideration the circumstances of the case and judge from them collectively whether the requirements of the statute were complied with; in other words, the Court may, of the case evidence is of Court and the Will.

also Re Suet, (1891) P 400; Re Orens, 29 L R Ir 451. So, the test of a document is not necessarily at the n v. Anjumanunnissa, 48 Ind Crs 53. 19 Ves. Jr 494, 507, Lord Eldon said namely, that the party did not execute it." Per Lord Kenyon, C J in Ley v Ballord, 3 Esp 173 note "The attesting witness's testimony is not indeed conclusive for the party may go on to prove him untrue-worthy and may call other witnesses to prove th v Harringworth, 4 M. & Glascock, Skinn 413; Austin N P 264, Richie v Oatfield, v. Bradbury, Buller N P 26. hands, it was objected he if you call one v he prove against you him to call other Wignore § 1202. absence of recollection evidence Sheik K Balram v Kamali 347 = A I R 1929 Cal 441. See also Coles v Coles, L R 1 P. 70; Doyle v

v. Hodson, L. R. 1 P. 362; Dayman v. Dayman, 71 L. T. 693, Pillington v. Gray, (1899) A. C. 401; Goodison v. Goodison (1913) 1 Ir R. 219. Where the attesting witness denies attestation and the other attestors are dead, what is required under s. 71 is only proof of the presence of attesting witnesses. Lalla v. Lalla, 74 Ind. Cas. 969. Sankar v. Sankar Dayal, 1533 P. 5; Phip. Ev. 502. Where the only living attesting witness of a document was illiterate and on being examined denied execution. Held, that the document could be proved by other evidence. Balraj Prasad v. Gambhir, 29 Ind. Cas. 500. At the time of its execution, the witness is considered hostile by the party taking his stand on the document, does not relieve him from the duty of examining him as a witness. Gobinda v. Pulin, 31 C. W. N. 215. Tula Singh v. Gopal Singh, 1 P. L. J. 369. If he denies the execution, other oral evidence is admissible to prove execution. Basdeo v. Rashbehari, 104 Ind. Cas. 441; Lakshman v. Gopal, 1 Pat. 151; Sriji Mukhi v. Monmohi, 1425-103. An attesting witness is not bound to call a hostile attesting witness. Belbin v. Steele, 1 S. & T. 118; Phip. Ev. 502.

obviously cannot excuse, for it cannot be ascertained except after production to testify.—When it appears after such production, other principles come into play, (a) the witness may adopt his attesting signature as record of past recollection, and upon the faith of it verify the facts of execution as thus known to him be otherwise of execution; by other qualified persons. Wigmore § 1315. The first question is, may not the attesting witness, though not actually recollecting the circumstances, adopt his signature as his testimony on the faith had he not witnessed the execution. Id. s. 159.

circumstances of the execution prove the facts of execution by other witnesses. Because it could never have recited, when attending the will, not because a requisites of the law, but because they would most likely prove or disprove them, and since the

they are are circ
ation al
praesumuntur rite esse acta.

71. Lindley L
 sion, in a sh: :
 of acting on reasonably be when the e
 effect in a p
 can only b
 where such disproved. The maxim only comes into operation where there is no proof one way or the other, but where it is more probable that what was intended to be done was done as it ought to have been done to render it valid, rather than that it was done in some other manner which would defeat the intention proved to exist, and would render what is proved to have been done of no effect." See also Cooper v Beckett, 3 Curt 618=4 Moo P C 419, Wright v Sanderson, (1884) 9 P & D 149, Lloyd v Roberts (1859) 13 Moo P C 158. The presumption applies with more or less force according to the circumstances of each case. Vennico (1890) 15 P. & D 170 (184) probate and if the Will has been duly executed, provis Hemangini, 4 C W N 204, Anna Cholim v Ramaswamy, 30 M L J (P C)=20 (1907) 7 P & D 103 Holker L J been in doubt sign, the fact the Court to come to the conclusion that they Blake v Knight, 3 Curt 547, In re the recollection Woolmer v Daly, 2 L J 773 the same day required by law to be attested. One of the attesting witnesses to a mortgage bond deposed that he was present, saw the execution and became an attesting witness, the other witness B stated that at the request of the mortgagor, he became an attesting witness but had no recollection of any other circumstances in connection with the execution of the document. On the same day, when the document was executed, the executant who, in his that the infer laid down in 38 C L J 1. principle applicable to cases of this character Jogendra Nath v Nital Charan, 7 C W N 391, by the Allahabad Nar Manlal 39 A 109, Ultam Singh v Hulum Singh 39 A. 102. Sh by the Madras High Court in of the upon the face of the signature of the testator at the foot, as also the subscription. It was ruled by Dr Lushington, that, in the absence or death of witness prima facie the presumption is that the testator signed in the joint presence of the two persons and they applied by the Allahabad High reference was made to Wright followed, as based on sound mentioned before. Reference may in Blake v Blake, 7 P. D. 102; Harris v. Peterell, (1962) P 205. No doubt (1915) 1 P 211, the que stances, and cases are con inference by reason of were not in contemplation of

Proof of document not required by law to be attested.

72. An attested document not required by law to be attested may be proved as if it was unattested.

Principle and Scope. This section embodies section 37 of Act II of 1855. For a long time it was held that when a document was attested, one at least of the attesting witnesses must be produced. Doe v. Dumford, 2 M & S 62. In Warrel v. Ferrour, 2 Camp 282, 284, Lord Ellenborough said that "it did not depend on the nature of the deed to be proved, it must depend upon the possibility of procuring the attendance of the attesting witness, not upon the testimony he is likely to give." See also Higgs v. Dixon, 2 Stark 180; Street v. Bartlett, 5 C B 542. But as this worked great hardships to suitors the Common Law Procedure Act 1854 (17 & 18 Vict C 125, s 26) and the Indian Evidence Act of 1855, introduced the present reasonable practice. Nort. L. 255. These Acts restricted the rule to documents required by law to be attested. Re Riche, L R 12 Ch D 35. In England the Common Law Procedure Act, has been replaced by Stat 28 & 29 Vict C, Ss 1, 7. So now in England, an attested document, to the validity of which attestation is not by law necessary may be proved by admission or otherwise as if there were no attesting witnesses. This rule is applicable also to Ireland. R v. Mallon, 12 Ir C L R 55. This Identity of Party and document. In order to prove a document the identity of the writer or marksmen with the defendant or other person alleged to have signed the document, may have to be given. Phip Ev 7th Ed 504. In Neuson v. Luster 17 Ill 175, Trumbell J said "I have no hesitation in holding that proof of the handwriting of the grantor to a deed furnishes altogether more satisfactory evidence of its execution than would proof of the handwriting of the subscribing witness." The identity of the party may be proved by showing that he had spoken of the (P 613) or by proof of similar especially if the name be uncor. B 881, Simpson v. Dismore, 9 M & W 47; Phip Ev 7th Ed p 504. The identity of the document, whether attested or not, may also have to be shown, e.g. when the defendant, pursuant to notice, produced a document which the plaintiff denied to be the contract in question, parol evidence was received to determine the point. Fraude v. Hobbs, 1 F & F. 612; Phip Ed 7th Ev 504.

73. In order to ascertain whether a signature, writing or seal is that of the person by whom it purports to have been written or made, any signature, writing or seal admitted or proved to the satisfaction of the Court to have been written or made by that person, may be compared with the one which is to be proved, although that signature, writing or seal has not been produced or proved for any other purpose.

The Court may direct any person present in Court to write any words or figures for the purpose of enabling the Court to compare the words or figures so written with any words or figures alleged to have been written by such person.

•[This section applies also, with any necessary modifications, to finger impression.]

* This paragraph was added to s. 73 by the Indian Evidence Act, 1899 (5 of 1899).

73

Principle In proving a document of evidence offer them-selves, first testimony b or some circumstance of the kind of hand second mode there is :

(f) "and on a trial, based on comparison, . . ."

tribunal directly :

Wignone § 1996

to afford a fairly trustworthy inference, must of course be genuine, and also be numerous and representative enough to serve as an adequate basis for inference to the general style Ibid

Scope of the Section . By section 45, handwriting and signature of a person can be proved by an expert Section 47 admits the opinion of any person, acquired to be written In addition under ss 45 and 47,

with an undisputed one in dispute it to be compared by the party to be genuine comparison is the more satisfactory. If it be proved genuine to the satisfaction of the Judge, with whom the Ridgway, 1 F & F. 270, the comparison Times 223) A party may under purpose of comparison (Doe v Wil be less satisfactory, as a person writing with the very view of defeating a comparison. Cobell v. Administrator, could only be made between the disputed & the original But the present

Nott Ev.

doubted in

have declared

admission

comparison with the standard must be proved

"The difference between letters which have been received in correspondence, - proven . . . witness's hand" it was argued in Mudd v. Suckermont, 2 P & D in a condition still selected or even

Best Ev § 238

in Mudd v. Suckermore, (1836) 2 P. D. O. 20, the inconvenience of collateral issues already exists where a witness speaks to the genuineness of handwriting from an impression derived from a letter he has received. The correctness of this knowledge depends on the genuineness of that letter, and even where he says he saw the party write, his knowledge depends on the issue whether or not he did see the party write. As to the second objection Mr. Best says "It is not always easy to obtain fair specimens, and should such be produced, it would be competent to the opposite party to encounter them with true ones." Best on Ev § 238. Concerning the third objection, Mr. Best says "It does not seem satisfactory logic to protect a jury which can rely on availing themselves of that means for the investigation of truth because other juries might, from want of education, be disqualified from so doing; if some men are blind, that is no reason why all others should have their eyes put out." Best on Ev § 238. This last argument against jurors loses all its force in India in as much as no civil cases are tried here by jurors and a few important criminal cases only are tried with the help of

are literate
by company juxtaposition of the witness on the other, it has been pointed out in the latter case the characteristics of the standard are indistinct, shadowy and uncertain, while in the former they appear in paper in

ceived, of c.

disputed i

made in hi

v. Woolfor

held that i

cause) "has been that the standard writing must be one used in and connected with the case. But how can this be held necessary when we look at the object of the standard. It is of no consequence what the writing you compare is; all you want is a genuine handwriting, and it is as respects the nature of the evidence not material what instrument it is, nor whether the paper be blank in all except the signature, nor whether the writing be connected with the case or not."

In England the controversy was set at rest by the enactment of Stat 17 & 18 which allow comparison of hands by juries as well as under this act, first, that any writings, the not of the jury, but of the 4 F. & F 490).

Muk, 4 C & P

any one, the J.

Russell, 3 F & I

lay witness is c

by putting the

parison by with merely opinion

3. them, the jury may compare them as well as any body else and any two people may think differently" Per Yates J. in Bqookband v Woodley, Peake N. P. 21 Note Similarly in Doe v. Suckermore, 11 A & E 749, Denman L C J said "If the proved document and the controverted are both in Court, and the witnesses speak to their resemblance or difference from immediate observation, they seem to perform a task for the jury which every one of them, even though illiterate, might well perform for himself" So it is clear that on principle, comparison by a lay witness should not be allowed, even in the presence of the tribunal. But this rule does not apply in the case of an expert witness, because "he does what possibly the jury may be incompetent to do" Ibid; Higmore § 1997 The question of comparison of signature is distinct from question of admissibility Khyruddin v Emperor, 53 C 372=92 Ind. Cas 412=27 Cr. L J 266=A I R 1926 Cal 139 The word "purports" in this section does not limit the scope of the section to such documents only as are signed or contain some intrinsic statements of the identity by a party to be in the handwriting of . . . proof be compared with other writing : satisfaction of the Court to have been made or written by that person Iccra Raghava v. Soura Aiyanger, 35 M L J 608=41 Ind. Cas 688=24 M L T 477. In delivering the judgment in the case the Court observed "This case turns solely on the Evidence Act. . . . Kumar v Empe Batchelor JJ it are inclined to the scope of the statement of th is necessary to writing In used is "alleges the two words the two must l ascribed by the prosecution to a particular person, then the regard to the ad disputed writing, have been written or made by the accused Emperor v. Ganpat Balkrishna, 14 Bom L R 310=15 Ind Cas 649=13 Cr. L J 505 But in Barindra Kumar v Emperor, 37 C 467=14 C W N. 1114 at p 1138, Jenkins C J said "In applying the provisions of section 73 of the Evidence Act it is important not to lose sight of its exact terms It does not sanction the comp which the shall be attributed, purport to must stat specifically paragraph of contras son In Sessions : with the submission not an vrr learned & section, ha out having . think this . . . times as a mode of proof hazardous and inconclusive, and especially when it is made by one not conversant with the subject and without such guidance as might be derived from the arguments of counsel and the evidence of experts. In Sreenivthy Phoolan Bibee v. Gobind Chunder Roy, 22 W. R. 272, it was said by the Court that 'a comparison of signature is a mode of ascertaining the truth which ought to be used with very great care and caution.' In this case no expert has been called to assist the Court, and not because no expert was available; there is, it is well known a Government expert as to handwriting and certain of the documents in this case bear a stamp which shows that they have been submitted to him. It is true that the opinions of experts on handwriting meet with their full share of disparagement at times, but at any rate there is this use in their employment that the appearances on which they rely are disclosed, and can thus be supported or criticised, whereas an opinion formed by the Court is not so. And

C. 516,
see also 30 Nag. is one or other
not be proof alone,
and Cas 741;

for the purpose of comparison of handwriting under this section it is his duty, under section 298 of the Criminal Procedure Code to find whether these documents are admitted or proved. The record of the case should contain a note of such finding. Queen-Empress v. Tulsi, Rat. Un Cr C 491; Queen-Empress v. Lal Singh, Rat. Un Cr C 152. But in a trial by jury, where the Judge allowed certain documents to go upon the record, which were not proved under the requirements of s 73 of the Evidence Act, for the purpose of comparison with the disputed handwriting, held that there was no such irregularity of procedure as to warrant an interference in revision. Whether the documents were proved or not, it was for the jury to decide. Queen-Empress

98. The Court has genuine signature

to come to a conclusion. Gondu v. Tularam, A I R 1930 Nag 27.

English law and origin of the rule except when the witness wrote the its nature comparison;—it being the comparing the writing in question some previous knowledge (Doe v. Sukermore, 5 A & E 731, per Patteson J), the law until the year 1851, did not allow the witness, or even the jury except under certain special circumstances, actually to compare two writings with each other, in order to ascertain whether both were written by the same person. Taylor excluding proof of the hand-writing by The first was the case of a document tent for the Court and jury to compare the in the case for other purposes, and which were admitted or proved to be in the handwriting of the supposed writer. Best, Ex § 239, Griffith v. Williams, 1 C & J 47; Doe d Perry v. Newton, 5 A & E 514. The case of Perry v. Newton, supra, decided by the Court of King's Bench in 1836, is always cited as the leading case to support this exception, although the exception did not arise in the case at all. On the trial of an jury, that they might compare them with the signature in the will. The letters were not in evidence for any other purpose. The Judge refused to allow them to be put in, and on appeal the full Court sustained the ruling. Lord Denman

3. C. J. said: "This is a point on which we ought not to raise any doubt... The comparison is unavoidable. There being two documents in the cause, one of which is known to be in the handwriting of a party, the other alleged, but denied to be so, no human power can prevent the jury from comparing them with a view to the question of genuineness; and therefore it is best for the persons acquainted with the handwriting of the supposed writer, either by having seen him write or by having held correspondence with him, the law, acting on the maxim lex non cogit impossibilia, allows other ancient documents, which are proved to have been treated and regularly preserved as authentic, to be compared with the disputed one" Best on Ev. § 240; Roe v. Raulings, 7 East. 282 (n); Doe v. Taiter, R & M. 141; Doe v. Davies, 10 Q. B. 314; Moorewood v. Wood, 14 East. 327; Barr. v. Harper, 1 Holt 420; Brune v. Raulings, 7 East. 282; Crauford and Lindsay Peerages, 2 H. L. C 537; Solita v. Yarrow, M & R. 183, Bromage v. Rice, 7 C & P. 548. With these exceptions comparison was not allowed in England. Macpherson v. Thoyles, Peake N. P. 29; Brookford v. Woodby, 9 Peak. N P 30; Garrels v. Alexander, 4 Esp. 29; Brookford v. Woodley, 9 Peak N P. 30, Gancols v. Abuandro, 1 E-p. 37. In Engleton v. Kingston, I never heard of those who had never seen evidence in .. equestly received of the jury to prove comparison of metropolis the jury are composed... conclusions from such evidence. For my part, I have always been inclined to admit it, and shall do so in this case." See also Rivett v. Braham, 4 Term. R. 497, King v. Cator, 4 Esp 117

The subject at last came before the Court of King's Bench in the well known case of Mudd v. Suckermore, 5 Ad. & E. 703. In that case the Court dismissed the case years after dissenting "Compari- ion of the ; and such submitted those manu- calling on reception of ch comparisons were not allowed in India Annigurubila v. Kristnasami, 1 M. H. S. C. R. 457.

In 1865, Stat. 28 & 29 Vict. C. 19, was passed, section 8 of which runs as follows: "comparison of a disputed writing with any writing proved to the satisfaction of the Judge to be genuine, shall be permitted to be made by witnesses; and such writings, and the evidence of witnesses respecting the same may be submitted to the Court and jury as evidence of genuineness, or otherwise, of the writing in dispute" Section 1 of the same Act provides that the above enactment, in common with certain other clauses relating to evidence,—shall apply to all Courts of Judicature, as well criminal as all others, and to all persons having, by law or by consent of parties, authority to hear, receive, and examine evidence, whether in England or in Ireland" Taylor § 1869 The Indian Evidence Act found place on the Statute Book in 1872.

Comparison of writing etc., meaning of All evidence of handwriting, except where it is a comparison of handwriting.

ness entertains, mind, derived from some previous knowledge of the hand Woodward J in Travis v Brown 43 Pa St 12 (Am) But this is not what is properly known as comparison of handwriting "By comparison is meant," says Starkie "a comparison by the juxtaposition of two writings, in order by such comparison, to ascertain whether both were written by the same person" Starkie Ev Part IV p 654 "Comparison of handwriting is where other witnesses prove a paper to mind, as an external visible and tangible object is distinct from a mental impression or memory. It is the distinction between what is objective and what is subjective Woodward J in Travis v Brown, 43 Pa St 12

The genuineness of the standard Wherever proof of handwriting by evidence that the standard of comparison is obvious Under the rule of a disputed writing the opinion of the Court to be given as to the genuineness out by the collateral evidence used as a the person write the same, 13 S W R 330 (Am) certainly), should be given to a jury In a case of perjury record, is presumed to be genuine, and may be used as a standard without further proof Saunders v Dawson, 2 Mart 203 (Am) "When the identity of anything is fully and certainly established, you may compare other things with it which are doubtful, to ascertain whether they belong to the same class or not, but when both are doubtful and uncertain, comparison is not only useless as to any certain result, but clearly dangerous, and more likely to bewilder than to instruct the jury." Per Coulter J in Dupas v Place, 7 Pa St 423 (Am) A document to be admissible against an accused person should be proved to be a document

3. in the handwriting of an accused person by comparison with an admitted or proved specimen of his handwriting, in the light of the testimony of expert witness Pulmbehari v King Emperor, 16 C. W. N 1105=16 Ind Cas. 257, Queen-Empress v. Tulsaji, Rat. Un Cr. C. 491.

are secondary evidence Ibid But it is held in Massachusetts that magnified photographic copies of the signature in dispute and of admitted genuine signatures of the same person are admissible in evidence when accompanied by competent preliminary proof that the copies are accurate in all respects except as they are capable" and Herrick / "of affording some glass mark

not tion
admi
prop

accuracy of the copies produced by the art of the photographer, we are unable to perceive any valid objection to the use of such proposed representations of original and genuine signatures as evidence competent to be considered and weighed by a jury" Marcy v Barney, 16 Gray, 160 Letter press copies might under some circumstances be useful as well as the originals, or in default of them Wigmore § 2019.

Any person whose handwriting is in question may be required by the Judge to write in his own hand any be compared with the document in question Doed Devine v Wilson, 10 Moo P C 501, 503; Cobbett v. Kilmister, 4 F. & F. 490; Taylor § 1871 To prove the handwriting of a person in a particular document a party may ask the Court to have the handwriting of that person to be taken in Court for the purpose of comparison The result of the comparison of an issue arising in the case and is quite of the question of admissibility or otherwise of the handwriting in the province of the jury and not of the Judge Khytruddin v Emperor, 42 C L J 504

J. 79; Basant v Emperor, 6 P 304=104 Ind. Cas 626, Emperor v. ..., 46 ML 715=69 Ind Cas 374.

Comparison of handwriting—Value of A comparison of handwriting is at all times as a mode of proof hazardous and inconclusive, and especially when it is made by one not conversant with the subject and without such guidance as might be derived from the arguments of counsel and the evidence of experts. Sarajm v. Hari Das, 26 C W. N 75, Balakram v Md Said, 77 Ind Cas. 872. In Phoode Bibee v. Gobind Chunder Roy, 22 W. R 272, it was said by the Court that the truth which ought to be ascertained by the comparison of writings has consequently been deemed a mode of ascertaining truth which ought to be used with very great caution (Nabin Krishna v Basih Lal, 10 C 1047 (1051), and 2-10 W. R. P C 16), specially comparison. R v. Silverlock, 516; Das v. Suchermore, 11 A & 4 M 1 A 67-7 B L R 216-1-20 I A 95; Ambika Charan Galstun v Sonatun, 78 Ind. R 529, Ibdulla v Gannu, 11 B an v Gurish, 9 W. R 150. dissimilarity of signatures, a particular signature is not the signature, yet resemblance genuine Sarojini v Hari Das, 26 C W. N. 113-31 C L J 373, Batahu v Parmeswar, 61 Ind Cas, there is room for suspicion that ally written in the character of a person's signature is generally of uniform appearance, and the character of a person's signature is thus a facsimile that one is a perfect match to the other in every respect. There is generally diversity in the marks of the pen, the size of the letter, the level of the signature and space it occupies, that stands as a guard over the genuine signature and Sarojini v Hari Das, supra, see also Colledge J in test of genuineness ought to be some other specimen or specimens but to the general character of the writing which is impressed on or position, as for instance the writer sitting up or reclining or the paper being placed upon a harder or softer substance, or on a place more or less inclined—nay, the material as pen, ink etc., being different at different times are amply sufficient to account for the letters being made variously at the different times by the same individual. Independently, however, of anything of this sort few individuals, it is apprehended, write so uniformly that dissimilar formations of particular letters are grounds for concluding them not to have been made by the same person" Galstun v Sonatun, 78 Ind Cas 668-A I. R 1925 Cal 485

PUBLIC DOCUMENTS.

74. The following documents are public

Public documents,

documents.—

(1) documents forming the acts or records of the acts—

- (i) of the sovereign authority,
- (ii) of official bodies and tribunals, and
- (iii) of public officers, legislative, judicial and executive, whether of British India, or of any other part of Her Majesty's dominions, or of a foreign country,

(2) public records kept in British India of private documents.

74.

Scope of the section This is important because certain documents are distinguished from It is not always easy to determine a private document. In Sturla v Freccia, 11 App Cas. 623, the question arose as regards the meaning of the word "public documents". In delivering the

in this case. Now, it should be said that I do not think an entry in books of a manor is public in the sense that it concerns all the people interested in the manor. And an entry probably in a corporate book concerning a corporate matter, or something in which all the corporation is concerned, would be 'public' within that sense. But it must be a public document, and it must be made by a public officer. I understand a public document there to mean a document that is made for the purpose of the public making use of it, and being able to refer to it. It is meant to be where there is a judicial or quasi-judicial case with the Bishop acting under the law, he is said to be quasi-judicial. He is not, but I think the very object of it must be the purpose of being kept public, so that it can be used by the public. The term 'public' is used in the paper of the law.

Royal proclamations, and all other acts of State. Pouell Ev 248. In this connection it should be borne in mind that the term 'public' as applied to documents is used in English law to mean the statements contained in a form of testimony, either by a person, or of the facts stated in a document, which are kept in some strangers must be kept in a register of abduction document persons of Evidence.

only in the second sense. All descriptions of public documents have a characteristic, that they are kept in some special custody and provable by means of a copy without production of the original. Wills Ev, 2nd Ed 407. A public document is one prepared by a public servant in the discharge of his public official duty. The mere fact that it is kept in an office does not lead to the inference that it is a public document. Madhab Din v. Karar Singh, 107 Ind.

Cas 618=A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 640; see also 105 Ind. Cas. 353=A. I. R. 1928 Nag.
93. Where a letter received from the Comptroller of the Military Accounts in reply to the warrant of attachment acknowledging the same was relied on to prove knowledge of the judgment-debtor as regards the existence of the decree, held, that the letter was a public document under s. 71 of the Evidence Act and that the same did not require proof. Sheikh Idlu v. Hua Lal, A. I. R. 1928 Oudh. 488. If the law requires that . . . Revenue . . .
record, such pedigree in the Revenue : . . . A. I. R.
1928 Lah. 211=103 Ind. Cas. 182. Da. . . 98 Ind.
Cas. 471=A. I. R. 1927 All. 52. C . . . Deputy Collector under s. 40, Bengal Tenancy . . . 1926
Pat. 436=95 Ind. Cas. 966. Registers . . . Act, . . . registers
. . . 5 Ind. Cas. 955; 69 Ind. Cas.
. . . and death nor purchase slips
Caa 82. . . 22 C. W. N. 822; 17 Ind.

Acts or Records of the Acts In any other officer furnishes for the information of the Public Prosecutor? It is true that the police officer acts in performance of a statutory duty, but section 74 makes no distinction between such acts and other official acts." When a Civil Surgeon reports to a Magistrate as to the age of a person, he is merely giving his expert capacity for the use of such a document. 1 Luck 733-108 In re in the prep betw L J notification that was not an 'act' or 'record of act' of a public officer, the meaning of this section Velayudam v Emperor, 1929 M. W. 11, 11 Ind. Cas 509-30 Cr L. J. 483.

Statutes and state papers. Statements and recitals of public officers, contained in public statutes; Royal proclamations (R. v. Sutton, 11 H. 4, 2, 1772).

74.

Radcliffe v. Union Ins. Co, 7 Jones, 38; Talbot v. Seeman, 1 Cranch, 1, 37, 39; or Parliamentary Journals as to all matters properly before either house are public documents. Phil. Ev. 7th Ed. 324.

ada Mahomed v. Danie and written statement certified copy of the document whereas the

whether the clear that was improv
been admi
ness, howe
been for a Calcutta F

nature, that they can be proved by copies to the same extent as records, and are subject generally to the same rule of evidence. Indeed, henceforth, for the sake of convenience, the general term 'records' shall be used to include all the documents just mentioned. The record of another Court may be proved by a copy. Chief Baron Gilbert: "Records, to which every man has a right, and which are transferred from place to place to be preserved, and to be produced in evidence."

or accounted for like any other document. Bayley v. Wylie, 6 Esp. 200. although in strictness of records for all Courts, the removal was by Case, 5 C. proceedin

Writs of

be proved by actual production, though after their return, they become matters of record, and are consequently provable by copies B N P. 231 With respect to writs of summons under the Rules of the Supreme Court, they may be lost, by copies by the be lost, by se documents they relate.

R. v. Scott, L. R. 2 Q. B. 415-46 L. J. M. C. 259. The pleadings in an action forth; and so much so that a party cannot be admitted to plead that the things record, as long solute verity." by a decision, as v. Gannon, the identity of the person who gave the deposition. Brayaballav v. Akhoy, 30 C W N 954-93 Ind Cas 15 Proceedings of a Court of Justice may be

75. Private documents. 75. All other documents are private.

Private documents classed as Public & Private : as to their document Phip documents are private documents contract, memorandum, of the private document Jones § 201. An abstract statement prepared by a patwari even though his on papers in his possession and filed in a suit is only a private document. Sheo Das v Sheo Dayal, A I R 1930 All 712=128 Ind Cas 770

76. Every public officer having the custody of a public document, which any person has a right to inspect, shall give that person on demand a copy of it on payment of the legal fees therefor, together with a certificate written at the foot of such copy that it is a true copy of such document or part thereof, as the case may be, and such certificates shall be dated and subscribed by such officer with his name and his official title, and shall be sealed, whenever such officer is authorized by law to make use of a seal, and such copies so certified shall be called certified copies.

Explanation. Any officer who, by the ordinary course of official duty, is authorised to deliver such copies, shall be deemed to have the custody of such documents within the meaning of this section.

document has a right There is no in British ular cases Field v Le 7th Ed 232. In England, the right to inspect public documents varies inspect many section saves refuse to show 257, Taylor clude all such in the ground of state policy Bom L R 236 of the judgment the document" looked from ou a judgment in a criminal case Ladd v Emperor, A I R 1931 All 201=202 A L J. 405 As take copies, vide the Procedure Code (Act Administrator General 1913), the Oudh Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1867), etc not to inspect and the Criminal of 1903), the Act (VII of

It might have been supposed that, for the lawful custodian of documents in official custody, an authority could be in office, to furnish copies that should be must be the lawful custodian of the particular of course exist at the time of certifying whose office had expired properly certified nom. this custody, however enau.

him to speak, not merely to the correctness of the copy, but also to the existence and genuineness of the original. The great obstacle, to the use of a register as evidence of a record of private deed, was the registrar's inability to speak to the genuineness of the deed, and special means to qualify him in this respect had to be provided. This obstacle does not exist for an official record, for it is originally prepared and thereafter preserved in the office, and although it may document, within the meaning of s 71 of the Indian Evidence Act. Any person is entitled to inspect the same and to obtain certified copies thereof under this section, for the protection of interest for the N. 125-31 C. 92; Rez v 84 Ind Cas 487; see also Bank of Bombay v of Bengal a public Jointab, 8 C. W. R. 38 Ch. D. uar v Taxal, allows certified inspect public documents is, however, assumed, in s 76 of the Evidence Act. It may be inferred that the Legislature intended to recognize the right generally for all persons, who can show that they have an interest for the protection of which it is

Lah 605.

77 Such certified copies may be produced in proof of the contents of the public documents or parts of the public documents of which they purport to be copies

Proof of documents by production of certified copies additional wear and tear upon the document. Wigmore § 1215. The usual mode of proving the record of another Court is by production of a certified copy. But the copy is not produced in such cases because it is better evidence than the original, it is received only on the ground of convenience, as a substitute for the original record. The reception of a copy avoids the inconvenience of removing the original record from place to place. Bullow v Thomas, 19 Gratt 14, 18. For reasons similar to those applicable to judicial records, documents belonging to any public office need not be proved, but may be otherwise proved. Their removal for production in evidence would delay, and hinder the official use of the files, would make it impossible for other persons to consult acc

een
as

for others to use the
would be a constant

rate. It contains particulars of the area and of the land in respect of which the rate is due. It is a public document within s 74 of the Evidence Act. The porchas distributed to the cultivators are also public documents. If produced in original the jamabandis do not require to be further proved. The contents of the jamabandi could also be proved by the production of certified copies furnished as provided by ss 76 and 77 of the Evidence Act. Umrao Singh v Ram Singh, L R 3 A 386 (Rev)—1 U P L R (B R) 26, see also Ram Lal v, Ghasiram, 71 Ind Cas 825.

Proof of other official documents

78 The following public documents may be proved as follows—

- (1) Acts, orders or notifications of the Executive Government of British India in any of its departments, or of any Local Government or any department of any Local Government,— by the records of the departments, certified by the heads of those departments respectively, or by any document purporting to be printed by order of any such Government
- (2) The proceedings of the Legislatures,— by the journals of those bodies respectively, or by published Acts or abstracts, or by copies purporting to be printed by order of Government
- (3) Proclamations, orders or regulations issued by Her Majesty or by the Privy Council, or by any department of Her Majesty's Government,— by copies or extracts contained in the London Gazette, or purporting to be printed by the Queen's Printer
- (4) The Acts of the Executive or the proceedings of the Legislature of a foreign country,— by journals published by their authority, or commonly received in that country as such, or by a copy certified under the seal of the country or sovereign, or by a recognition thereof in some public Act of the Governor-General of India Council
- (5) The proceedings of a municipal body in British India — by a copy of such proceedings certified by the legal keeper thereof, or by a printed book purporting to be published by the authority of such body
- (6) Public documents of any other class in a foreign country,— by the original, or by a copy certified by the legal keeper thereof, with a certificate under the seal of a notary public, or of a British Consul or diplomatic agent, that the copy is duly certified by the officer having the legal custody of the original, and upon proof of the character of the document according to the law of the foreign country

18. Official Printed copies. There is no reason why an officer may not, be authorised to give printed copies as well as written copies, nor has there been any objection to this. It can not be said that it is not the duty of an officer. An officer is; but the official printer's authority though a general one, is express rather than implied. The objections that have been made in connection with the use of printed copies have chiefly had their source, not so much in a doubt of any of those principles, as in the difficulty of being an official one. Printed copies of the reason for their correctness is thus stated by Tilgham C. J. in Biddis v. Jones, 6 Binn. 326: "Confidential persons have been selected to compare the copies with the original rolls and superintend the printing." The most frequent application of the principle, however is, to the evidencing of the statute law domestic and foreign. Upon the theory of Judicial Notice, no evidence of domestic law need be offered.

P. L. R. 1909.

Clause (1)
because such the act of Parliament

far, then, on the proceedings of the Legislature are relevant to be proved, the journal is admissible. If the proceeding, for example, consists in the receipt or acceptance of a report or a petition, the statement of the fact of its receipt may be inadmissible; but the fact, of its receipt may be relevant, and therefore may be evidence. Under this clause, the text of an Act may be taken to be the authorized text of the Act. See Cas. 316; Subramania v. Shanmugam, A. I. R. 1930, 100 Ind. Cas 409. As regards the value of Hansa's report, Vide The Englishman v. Lajpat Rai, 37 C. 760-14 C. W. N. 713.

authoritative men. In the same case Butler J. added: "the gazette, which is published by the authority of the King or which has passed through His Majesty's hands." In the same case also Lord Kenyon L. C. J. observed: "That the gazette is evidence of many acts of State is of subjects . . .

acts of state, II

admitted that the

Cockburn, 5 Esp 234; Vanoneson v. Dorwick, 2 Camp. 44; R. v. Gardner, 2
Camp. 513; Att. Gen v. Theakstone, 8 Price 93; Bradley v. Arthur, 4 B. &
C. 301.

Clause (4) Depositions in a foreign Court are public documents Haran nd v. Ramgopal, 4 G. W. N. 429=27 G. 639 P. C.; see also In re Rudolph Stalman, 15 C. W. N. 1053.

Na Cas. 643.

Clause (6).

such as was in

ment, is no suffi

existence of an purports to testify. Such evidence can be manufactured without any great difficulty and the Courts must be on their guard against its acceptance unless under proper tests

(1897-1901) Vol

the Native State o

Shamsher v. Moh.

this clause are ver

is the Political Agent or the Government of India. Krishnabai, 28 Bom. L. R. 1225=50 B. 716=A. I. R. 1927 Bom. 11.

PRESUMPTIONS AS TO DOCUMENTS.

79. The Court shall presume every document purporting to be a certificate, certified copy or other document, which is by law declared to be admissible as evidence of any particular fact and which purports to be duly certified by any officer in British India or by any officer in any Native State in alliance with her Majesty, who is duly authorized thereto by the Governor General in Council, to be genuine :

Provided that such document is substantially in the form and purports to be executed in the manner directed by law in that behalf.

The Court shall also presume that any officer by whom any such document purports to be signed or certified, held, when he signed it the official character which he claims in such paper.

Presumptions as to documents. Section 79 to 90 deal with certain pre-sumptions as to documents. All these presumptions are based on the ancient and well known maxim omnia praesumuntur rite esse acta. (All acts are presumed to have been done rightly and regularly). Co. Litt. Cb: 332. The rule is applicable to public and official acts as well as to ancient deeds and private

9. acts Where the acts are of an official nature or require the concurrence of official persons, a presumption arises in favour of their execution. In these cases the ordinary rule is omnia præsuntur rite et solemniter esse acta donec probetur in contrarium (Co Litt 232. Van Omeron v. Douich, 2 Camp 44; Doe v. Evans 1 Cr. & M 46)—everything is presumed to be rightly and duly performed until the contrary is shown. Per Stony J. in Bank of United States v. Dandridge, 12 Wheaton (U. S) R 69, 70; Davies v. Pratt, 17 C B 183; Broom's Legal Maxims 723 Upon the same principle proceeds the rule that deeds, wills and other attested documents which are more than thirty years old, and are produced from the proper custody, prove themselves and the testimony of the subscribing witnesses may be dispensed with, although of course it is

of the Broom's
But in whereas
In the whether Cun,
290 =

6 Bom L R 750, Raghunath v. Holi 1 A I, 191 (1903) The presumption mentioned in this clause is rebuttal, a presumptio juris et de jure (1974) = 3 Cr L J 32 The word "construed in more rigorous of the Muhammad 110 P L R 1902; Ramien v. Verappa, 11 M L T 69 —, there is no a fact," a presumption is option left to the Court, given to disprove it, and t evidence if he can Sections 19 to 20 contain the principal plea r regards documents Of course certain presumptions as regards documents may also be raised under section 114 [Vide s. 114 (ills 1)]

to do it Harris presumption that his duty Per Coleridge J in R. son v. Roberts, does not arise to official acts and latter deals with former, taking t the acts until the to office may be Berryman v Wise, 4 T R, 366; R v. Geraun, 1 Leach 515, R v. Veielst, 3 Camp 432, Marshall v. Lamb, 5 Q. B 115, Phar v. Briscoe 11 O R 46 suspected that some one personated G, and that his signature is not to be sent to Chambers for the original examination, otherwise the copy so attested and delivered, must be received and relied on " The same rule is applicable to certificates and other documents as well Certificates and other documents signature and the seal (where a Field Ex 7th Ed 141 So if a duly of a lease in official custody, had have been necessary of the signatures or handwriting of those Commissioners officers signing it, such a wing an official act done by produced from proper custody

having been made competent evidence necessarily dispensed with, such to a copy Com v Richardson, 142 raising this presumption is that such

ed by law in that behalf The to prove the certificate of registra ed under this section Muhammad
v Soharā 71 Ind Cas 805 But this presumption does not arise where sanction under s 196 Cr Pro Code is signed by the Deputy Secretary instead of by the Chief Secretary as required by that section Md O.ullah v Ben, 36 C L J 180-26 C W N 818-56 C 135 It is doubtful whether this section is applicable to copies given before the passing of the Indian Evidence Act Julir Ali v Rajchunder, 10 C L R 469 (476)

who

a rate and I cannot say ce acting drawn?

ymen v
 f all peace officers justices that they acted in these characters without producing their appointments Similarly in Mo Gohey v Alston 2 M & W 206 Baron Parle said The rule is that all public officers an of most accompani

been made by the proper officer

80. Whenever any document is produced before any Court, purporting to be a record or memorandum of the evidence, or of any part of the evidence, given by a witness in a judicial proceeding or before any officer authorized by law to take

Presumption as to documents produced
 as records of evidence

80. such evidence or to be a statement or confession by any prisoner or accused person, taken in accordance with law, and purporting to be signed by any Judge or Magistrate, or by any such officer as aforesaid, the Court shall presume—that the document is genuine; that any statements as to the circumstances under which it was taken, purporting to be made by the person signing it, are true, and that such evidence, statement or confession was duly taken.

es sanction to the maxim omnia pro-

regular. Lawson Pre. Ec. Rule 10. is a degree
presump-
Ev 261.

Scope of the section. The statement as to which this section says that certain presumptions in accordance with the kind of evidence, case of certain operate to render omits to claim

so, does not arise
copy should also
in a specified proceeding.

106-33 C. W. N. 1191-119 Ind. Cas. 192-A I R. 1959 Cal. 617 (F. B.)

deposition preclude the presumption that the copy is a true copy. Sorajju v. Mata Din, 7 O. L. J. 542-60 Ind. Cas. 437.

if recording depositions P. Code and in criminal of Order 18, runs as evidence of each witness the Court, by or in the evidence of the Judge,
ut in that of a narrative,
e of the Judge to the same, and shall sign it down in a language

different from that in which it is given, and the witness does not understand

0. witness in the presence of the accused and the accused may have an opportunity, 12 Bur L T 167=14 Emperor, 12 Bur L T 167=14 506; see also Ngat Sam v K. E. U the Criminal Pro Code does not shall be taken and attested by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused What it provides is that the deposition, if so taken and attested, may be put in evidence in the Sessions trial Therefore, that the deposition was taken and

Lah 632=125 Ind Cas 892=31 P L R 472=A. L R 1930 Lah 714

Confession of accused taken in accordance with law A confession by an accused recorded by a Magistrate is admissible under this section, even though the Magistrate who recorded it, ultimately came to the conclusion that he had no jurisdiction to try the case Emperor v Banko Behary, 10 C P L R Cr 16 If, when a document is tendered in evidence at a trial purporting to be a confession of the accused, it is found to contain the memorandum required by s 164(3), a presumption arises under this section that all the necessary formalities purporting to have been performed have in fact been performed and the document is admissible in evidence without further proof If, however the memorandum does not appear or is defective the document is inadmissible such a defect would be curable If the explanation had not in fact been the statement could not be held to have been duly made and s 533 cannot be

Cas 257=23 Cr. L J 673, Queen Empress v Sundar Singh, 14 A 261 Confessional statement Section 80 of the Evidence

So far the pre- respect of the document purporting to be a confession of the accused. San Bai v Crown, 1 L R 310 (F. B.), see also magistrate during the course red by s 164, cannot be made. Emperor v Radhe, made under

7 C. W. N. 9

the section

in which it was

A Magistrate

whether a confession

Section 80 of the Evidence Act, expressly provides for proof of the document, distinguishing it from a record of evidence as well as s. 533 Criminal Procedure Code. Lalu v Empress, 2 P. R. 1894 Cr. S.

Dying declarations. A dying declaration is not admissible in evidence without proof that the deceased actually made the declaration. Even if it bears a Magistrate's attestation it is not admissible under s. 80 where the Magistrate was not the committing Magistrate. The person who took the statement should be subject to cross-examination as to the dying man's state of mind when he made it, and as to other circumstances. Reg v. Fata Aduji, 11 B H C 247, see also Hasim v. Empress, 9 P R 1900 Cr. = P L R 1900 p. 49. When a dying declaration has appended to it a deponent and declared to be recorded the statement, s. 80 of circumstances under which it is stated to have been taken are true, the investigation by the Magistrate being a judicial proceeding. In re Karrupan Samban, 16 Cr. L. J. 759 = 31 Ind Cas 359.

Previous admission. Before a previous admission can be used against a party it must be put to him and an opportunity afforded to him to explain it if it is capable of explanation. Mariam v Nagina, 12 Lah L J 161.

81. The Court shall presume the genuineness of every document purporting to be the London Gazette or the Gazette of India, or the Government Gazette of any Local Government, or of any colony, dependency or possession of the British Crown, or to be

Presumption as to Gazettes, newspapers, private Acts of Parliament and other documents

a newspaper or journal, or to be a copy of a private Act of Parliament printed by the Queen's Printer, and of every document purporting to be a document directed by any law to be kept by any person, if such document is kept substantially in the form required by law and is produced from proper custody.

Principle. The intolerable inconvenience of having to prove the genuineness of printed matter purporting to be published by the Government has led to porting pubconsciently

superintend
the printing. The object of this provision was to furnish the people with authentic copies; and from their nature, printed copies of this kind, either of public, or private laws, are as much to be depended on as the exemplification verified by an officer who is the keeper of the record. I am for admitting the printed copies authorized by the Legislature, either of this or any other state, whether the law be public or private. But the question whether the copy of a Government Gazette or any other publication can be treated as evidence of the contents of the original is not one relating to proof of documents but to the

to the published 506=12
the new presump
purport.

"It is contended that under section 81 of the Evidence Act, the Court is bound include a presumption

document purport-

to public documents, but it is very doubtful whether the language of the section supports it. It the punctuation may be taken to throw any light on the word 'journal' is against the 'newspaper or journal' question further, as I am of opinion that the presumption of the genuineness of a newspaper does not incl. published by the person by w the English Law. According

tion of a was publi d of the accused In Gathercole v. Miall, 15 M & W 319; Parke B was of opinion that as the defend- ant had been proved by t publisher of the paper, to the one produced in defendant. According to section 7 of Act XXV of 1867, the production of an prove

ial to quire

urnal

Act

17 of

cular

upra

paper

inous

statement Beva Sarup v Emperor, 88 Ind Cas 22=7 Lah L J 261=26 P L R 566=26 Cr L J 1078, but see Ram Chandra v Emperor, A I R 1930 Lah 371=31 Cr L J 168

82 When any document is produced before any Court, purporting to be a document which by the Presumption as to document admissible in England without proof of seal or sig nature law in force for the time being in England and Ireland, would be admissible in proof of any particular in any Court of Justice in England or Ireland, without proof of the seal or stamp or signature authenticating it, or of the judicial or official character claimed by the person by whom it purports to be signed, the Court shall presume that such seal, stamp or signature,

2. is genuine, and that the person signing it held, at the time when he signed it, the judicial or official character which he claims, and the document shall be admissible for the same purpose for which it would be admissible in England or Ireland

Origin of this section. This section consolidates ss 9, 10, 11 of Stat 14 & 15, which were inserted into the Evidence Act of 1874 after to be Court of signature extent and for the same purposes in any Court any person having in Ireland by law and receive and examine evidence, without proof of authenticating the same, or of the judicial character of the person appearing to have signed the same.

Section 10 runs as follows "Every shall be admitted in evidence to the same extent and for the same purposes in any Court of Justice in England or Wales or before any person having in

in any Court of Justice of any of the British Colonies, or before any person having in any such colonies, by law or by consent of parties authority to hear, receive, and examine evidence, without proof of authenticating the same, Ibid) So British Colony included British India. But section 11 of Lord Brougham's Act was repealed in India by the Indian Evidence Act section 2 and schedule and from the Statute Book by Statute Law Revision Act of 1874. The Indian Evidence Act has repealed section 11 above but has given effect to the object of that section by enacting this section

Scope of the English law. There are many instances where records are kept by persons occupying public office, or engaged in occupations of a public nature. These records, though somewhat similar in kind to those of which the Court may take judicial notice, do not usually have a sufficient degree of publicity to bring them within the limits of that class of matters. They are, however, deemed admissible if a person having

readily discovered

of duty also enters into the case. Usually the person keeping the record is under some obligation, official or otherwise to keep them, and this brings them close to those entries in account books which are admitted because made in the regular course of business, pursuant to duty. The application of this exception to the hearsay rule in the early cases caused the admission of acknowledgment of deeds made before a Court of record, enrolments of deeds, fines and recoveries, and many records of similar nature. Snart v Williams 1 Salk. 280. Lynch v Clerk, 3 Salk. 151. It is necessary conditions of the admissibility of a public record or document that it shall have been intended to S.

this exception. He says at page 214: "What a public document is within that rule, is of course, the great point which we have now to consider.... I do not think that 'public' is to be taken there as meaning the whole world. I think an entry in the books of a manor is public, in the sense that it is an entry in a public book. I think that all the entries in a public book must be a public document. I think that it should be made for the purpose of being a public document, that it may have access to it afterwards."

It is not even by the Common Law of England was by means of examined copy, that is, a copy taken on behalf of the party, generally by some clerk or other private persons, who produces it in the witness box and proves that he has copied it accurately from, or examined it parties authority to hear, receive and examine evidence, provided it be proved to and burials which have been kept in pursuance of canon and statute law answer his description, [Re Hall's Estate (1852) 22 L. J. Ch. 177; Re Porter's Trusts, (1856) 25 L. J. Ch. 698]; but it seems doubtful whether it could be held to beneficial effect of the enactments was much diminished. In order to remove that—

that—
to any certain joint stock or other. of any document, by law, entry in any reg. proceeding, shall be receivable in evidence of any pr local tribunal or either house of judicial proceeding,

 they respectively
 signed, or signed directed by the and signed, as without any proof
 the signature or

. n appearing to have signed the same, and every case in which the original record
 "The general result of these two Statutes could seem

 and tion
 the doc
 the
 Ev
 14.

L. R. 2 C C 85 The re poll books were provable und 75 The bye-laws of a rail
 B & 9 Vict. C 20, §§ 108-111, the secretary of the company in whose custody they are Monier v . . .
 Counties, 7 C B N S 53-29 L J M C 57 As to proof of bye-laws of a municipal corporation under Stat 45 & 46 Vict C 50, s 24, vide Robinson v Gregory, (1905) 1 K B 531 For a complete list of Statutes which contain provision making certified copies evidence, vide Roscoe's Digest of the Law of Evidence, Eighteenth Ed Vol. I pp 93 100 For an exhaustive list of documents which are provable in England by means of certified copies under particular Acts of Parliament Vide §§ 1602-1609 of Taylor on the Law of Evidence, Wills on Evidence, 2nd Ed Appendix A pp. 422-465.

Scope of the Section The object of this section is to give currency in the Courts of India to the presumptions which, with regard to certain classes of documents, are recognised in the English Courts Such documents are declared by the section to be admissible in India as they would be in England, and it is no more necessary in Indian Court, than it would be in an English Court to prove the seal or signature or to prove that the person signing held the office which he claims Cun Ev 11th Ed 175 The chief magistrate of the city of Glasgow being a person lawfully authorized to administer oaths, a declaration as to the execution of a power of attorney taken before him and authenticated by his certificate and the common seal of the city of Glasgow and by a Notarial certificate is sufficient proof of the execution In the goods of Hend the declarations purport to have been made under Will IV C 62; see 367; In the goods In the goods
of Hend s of William Cornell nina Lindo,
her a deceased,
 n appointed

application must be refused In the goods of A J. J. J.
 delivering the judgment Novis J said "Section 85 of the Evidence Act provides that the Court shall presume that every document purporting to be a power of attorney, and to have been executed before and authenticated by a Notary Public or any Court, or Judge, Magistrate, British Consul or Vice-consul, or Representative of Her Majesty or of the Government of India, was so executed and authenticated. This power of attorney is not executed before or authenticated by any of the persons mentioned in the section, and in order to comply with the provisions of the section, the power of attorney of those persons. Therefore It is submitted that Norris e Section 85 of the Evidence acilities to prove powers of than that allowed by that attorne

section
Court

to have been executed in been held in Calcutta that, in as much as the execution is not proved in the manner indicated in section 85 of the Evidence Act, the application for letters of administration ought to be refused (In the goods of A J Primrose, 16 C 716). In arriving at this decision, Mr Justice Norris seems to have assumed that the provisions contained in section 85 is of an exhaustive character and no other mode of proving the execution of a power of attorney is admissible. That assumption however, is, in my opinion, not not to apply to affidavits prescribed by the statute of oath I am of opinion that I am told

to receive
But certi-

T 385-24 M L J 517-19 Ind Cas 452 and section 35(5)
N 35-13 M L

83 The Court shall presume that maps or plans purporting to be made by the authority of Government were so made, and are accurate, but maps or plans made for the purposes of any cause must be proved to be accurate.

Principle The general ground of reception is that such documents contain the results of inquiries made under competent public authority and concerning matters in which the public are interested. Phipson, 313. The very office of a surveyor is to run lines and establish boundaries for the purpose of applying the terms of grants and patents and thus of perpetuating the settlement of boundaries. It is therefore a natural authority to make a written maps are admissible in evidence.

does not of itself prove any title, but only that the person fills the office.

3. Per Patteson J in Bouley v. Barnes, 8 Q. B. 1037. The well-known maxim of omnia presumuntur rite esse acta applies

Scope of the section :
purporting to be prepared 9 M L T. 415 This section of a private map. If such a map depend upon the relevancy of the map in relation to the question in controversy Shib Charan v. Nil Kantha Maharo, 16 Ind. Cas. 747 = 17 C. L. J. 612. In the absence of evidence to the may be properly judicially received in Gyan
v. Ma Nque, 2 L. M. R. 56 A in the the silted bed of a 83; but it is a
before it can be 23 C. 385 In a valuable evidence

which should be considered Ranee v. Gireedharce, 20 W.
ment, while in charge of only that of a private propa presumption of the accu-574; Ram v. Bansidhar, 9 making a thakbust map, as what lands were debutter, but only to lay down and to map boundaries, held that this map could not be treated as raising a presumption of correctness within this section, on the question as to the amount of debutter land in one of the villages mapped. Where statements as to what lands were debutter appeared on the face of the map to have been made as pointed out by agent on behalf of the proprietor of the manor and the principal tenants, in the presence of the agent of the holders of section has not the
v. Lalor Mont, 18 C. 2
accuracy of drawings and measurement. It has no reference
1 W. R. 179.

must be presumed to be accurate under this section. Kahimamunni v.
of State, 113 P. L. R. 1913 = 113 P. W. R. 1913 = 18 Ind. Cas.
799 No presumption of accuracy can within this section. Madhabai v. Gagan section a thakbust map must be presumed 22 W. R. 519, see also Photal v. Ranee, 13 W. R. 501 & C. A. 1913 Government survey map having been prepared does not affect the presumption of accuracy, under this Act of an earlier superseded map. Joggesur Singh v.
Bycunt Nath, 5 C. 823 = 6 C. L. J. 510 A copy of a map prepared by an Amia employed by Government, for possession. It was adm-ultimately rejected by him, was made by the High C as correct when made. Gopal Lal v. Mariamunnessa, 84 Ind. Cas. 433 = 11 1924 Pat. 719 The signature of a revenue-surveyor on a thakbust map signifies, not that the thakbust map is correct, but that the demarcation boundaries laid down in the course of this bust survey have been correctly picked up on the survey map. Sashubhusan v. Ind Cts 205. There is no preference over a Thak map, agree, where they differ, the one that more nearly agrees with the land mark is the one which should be incumbent upon the day, if it considers the survey map. Maharaja of Cooch Behar v. Raja Mohen Ira Ranjan, 66 Ind Cas 923; see also Abul Hossain v. Doucun, 11 C W N 629, Burn v. Ichambit, 20 W R 14, Nanah v. Gopinath, 13 C L J 625 (632), Amrita v. Sheraulin, 19 C W N 565 (576). But where the Thak proceedings and the decision of a dispute took place in the presence of the predecessors of the parties to a suit, that map must be treated as valuable evidence in this suit between the successors of the persons who were present. Maharaja of Cooch Behar v. Raja Mohen Ira Ranjan, 66 Ind Cas 923; see also Suraj Kanta v. Sarat Chandra, 15 C W N 1281 P C, Dunne v. Dhavan, a Sutani 2 W R 210; Gungu v. W R 179, Nobo v. Gobind, 9 C L : Ind v. Kuan, 7 C W N 819.

The state of things at the time the map was made is the state of things at the time of permanent settlement. Secretary of State v. Hazard, 15 Ind Cas 667, Jagadindia v. Secretary of State, 7 C W N 193 P C, see also 20 C W N 1028; 35 Ind Cts 132. Presumption both as to physical features and to statements as to possession may be made from a thakbust map. 64 Ind. Cas 326.

The question whether a map is a public document within s. 74, Evidence

Ac. in the state, in a case has no 3=10 Ind orion of a , and the

the Government, acting not in its sovereign capacity, but as the land lord of certain holding is admissible in evidence, if not under this section, under section 13 of the Act. Upendra v. Chairman of the Calcutta Corporation, 16 C W N 116.

received in evidence as correct when made. Jagadindia Nath v. Secretary of State, 30 C 291=7 C W N 193=5 Bom L R 1; see also Satcourt v. Secretary of State, 22 C 252, Maung Thin v. Maizan, 44 Ind Cas 247, Syama Sunder, 784; U v. V.

s. 13 when it is not known whether they were acted on for the purpose of registration proceeding or if in fact reliance was placed upon them by

&
5.

the purpose of
Ind. Cis. 85=A without enquiry
be placed on it
C L. J. 319
ment on which evidence, there

such matters as to which it is admissible in evidence Secretary of State for India v. Ananda Mohan, 31 C L J 205; see also Narash Narayan v Secretary of State, 71 Ind Cas 1048=32 M L T 162=50 C 446=45 M L J 444=23 C W N. 453 P. C. Haridas Acharyya v Secretary of State, 43 Ind. Cas 361=26 C L J 590=23 M L T 433=20 Bom L R 49 (P. C.), Secretary of State, v Kalika, 15 C L J. 281.

84. The Court shall presume the genuineness of every book

Presumption as to collections of laws the authority of the Government of any and reports of decisions, country, and to contain any of the laws of that country, and of every book purporting to contain reports of decisions of the Courts of such country.

Principles
ness of print
to a general
publications
stantly issued
however, are to be printed

original, and secondly, the presumption of genuineness of a particular printed document purporting to be of such official origin. The two questions are seldom separated, either in decisions or in statute; a sanction of the former principle has usually been regarded as carrying with it a sanction of the latter also" Wigmore § 2151

Sense of the section. The words "any country" are wide enough, to na section 33 reports of cases recognized by the Courts of a country will be evidence; and be relevant and receivable Nori Ev 202; see also notes under section 39.

85. The Court shall presume that every document

Presumption as to powers-of-attorney, purporting to be a power-of-attorney, and to have been executed before, and authenticated by, a notary public, or any Court, Judge, Magistrate, British Consul or Vice-Consul, or representative of Her Majesty, or of the Government of India, was so executed and authenticated.

Principle. The genuineness of certain purporting official seal impressions need not be evidence otherwise than by the production for inspection of the document bearing them. What is the significance of this rule? What is it that Courts actually do, evidentially, when they accept such seals with no further evidence? When a document bearing a purporting official seal—a notary's certificate to a power of attorney, for example—is offered in Court the accept-document purports to be result of the first three ury, did make this written and the document was merge (i.e. the purportily in the case of a

 and yet another third elements are

ing J S
 seal that person n
 always judicially united, i.e. any presumption of genuineness, whenever made covers both elements. Hence, in effect, the situation, for seal or signature alike, is reducible to the following elements and is so in practice treated (1) that there is an official of that name (2) (3) that this document was genuinely executed by him. Now the remaining element (4) that this hearsay statement of his is admissible, is obviously concerned with the Hearsay rule.

Of these, the elements (2) and (3) are obviously pure questions of authentication, i.e. the acceptance of the document signifies that we have somehow assumed that this document was genuinely executed by one J S. What is the true nature of the process? Is it the process of Judicial Notice? It is some-soon as the party alleged by counsel that J S had executed an alleged document, the Court must notice that as a fact, and no production of a purporting seal or signature would be necessary; but this is obviously not the practice.

 Further more it is conceivable that a Court might judicially know what the design of a certain public seal was but this would not of itself enable the Judge to declare that the specific impression offered in Court was genuine or forged. It would seem, then, that what is actually done is not done by virtue of any doctrine of jud

ment
 The
 of an
 this may well serve as sufficient evidence because the forgery of the seal or signature would be a crime, and detection would be fairly easy and certain.
 On the other hand the element (1) noted above, namely that J S who has thus genuinely executed this document is the official that he purports to be, is a real result of the principle of Judicial Notice. This element is wholly separable from that of the authenticity of the paper. Wigmore § 2161

and authentication of a power-of-attorney when such execution was done before and authentication was done by any of the officials mentioned in this section.
 The section is an extension of the provisions contained in the Registration Act, with reference to powers-of-attorney executed for the purpose of procuring the registration of conveyance or other such instruments. Cun Ev 11th Ed 178 Where a power-of-attorney was neither executed before nor authenticated by any persons mentioned in this section, letters of administration to the estate of a deceased
 the goods of execution is not exhausti
 16 C 776

5. been executed before, and authenticated by, a Notary Public, is produced before the Court, an affidavit of identification as to the person, purporting to make the goods is admissible for, the III, rule Ind. Cas England ed by his signature alone without ids of Bridoon, Nov 19th 1899, per ie term "power of attorney" is given the Indian Stamp Act, "power of-attorney" includes any instrument (not chargeable with a fee under the law relating to Court fees for the time being in force) empowering a specified person to act for and in the name of the person executing it. So a power or letter of attorney in a in such case is called the attorney of a t, in the stead of another; as to person; transfer stock or give possession upon a deed of feoffment. It is either general or special, i e, general in respect of the conduct of all affairs of a person, as where he leaves the country; special in respect of any one or more named matters, as to receive money. This instrument gives the attorney authority to act in his name exactly as the party giving it would himself do until revocation. Bank of Bengal v Ramanatham, 43 C 527, Venkataramana v Narasinha, 38 M 134-24 M L J 180-1913 M W N 72-18 Ind Cas 187; Permanand v Sat Prasad, 33 A 487-19 Ind Cas 617 (F B), Reference under the Stamp Act, s 46, 15 M 386, Righu v Ramchunder, 10 W. R 39-11 B L R 65 (F. B.), Jogi v Mohammad, 60 Ind Cas 467, Biyant v Banque du Peuple, the power of attorney was a proper power under s 33 of the Registration Act. Section 34 of the Registration Act imposes upon the registering officer the duty of enquiring as to the due execution of the document, and by s. 35, he registers the document on being satisfied as to the various particulars mentioned, so that when the

tion of omnia

in his procedu

v. The National

v. Jamal, 28

375-27 C W N 437 P C; Kristonath v Brown 14 C 170; Jambu v Muhammad, 42 I A. 22-37 A 49-19 C W N 282. As regards deposit of original instruments creating powers-of-attorney; vide section 4 of the Powers-of-Attorney Act (VII of 1892). Powers of attorney should be strictly construed. Krishna v Pribhuban, 114 Ind Cas 305-A I R 1929 Oudh 12, Bank of Bengal v. Ramanathan, 43 C 527-43 I A. 49

Notary Public In the interests of commerce the rules of evidence have been so extended that the acts of notaries public in the discharge of their duties under the law merchant are judicially noticed in all Courts, and their proper official acts under the law merchant are prima facie sufficiently authenticated

ooke v Brooke,

u of a notary to

d I not affect

Ineff, 24 L J Ch 120, under s 133 of the Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1891) the Governor General in Council is authorized to appoint notaries public within any local area and by s 139 of the same Act power is given to the same authority to make rules for notaries public

86. The Court may presume that any document purporting to be a certified copy of any judicial record of any country not forming part of Her Majesty's dominions is genuine and accurate, if the document purports to be certified in any manner which is certified by any representative of Her Majesty or of the Government of India * [in or for] such country, to be the manner, commonly in use in that country for the certification of copies of judicial records

† [An officer who, with respect to any territory or place not forming part of Her Majesty's dominions, is a Political Agent therefore, as defined in section 3, clause (40), of the General Clauses Act, 1897,‡ shall for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be a representative of the Government of India in and for the country comprising that territory or place.

Principle The theory of judicial records is that the judgment roll, as finally made up embodies in itself alone the entirety of the controversy adjudicated, and thus supercedes the miscellaneous mass of oral and written pleadings, motions, and orders, which have gone to make up the proceedings Wigmore § 2450 The doctrine about producing the original of a document, or when the original is not of the original judicial under the Great Seal of a State in as much as proof than inspection, the seals of state of other nations which have been recognized by their own sovereign Greenleaf Ev 479) they may be authenticated by a copy, proved to be a true copy by a witness who has compared it with the original, properly authorized by law to give a copy, duly authenticated Buttrick v Allen, 8 Cranch 228, Church v Hubbard, 152 subject is thus stated by Marshall C. The sanction of an oath is required for their establishment unless they can be verified by some other

So this section authorises the representatives of his Majesty or the Government

* These words in s 86 were substituted for the words "president in," by the Indian Evidence Act (1872) Amendment Act, 1891 (3 of 1891), s. 2

† This paragraph was added to s 86 by s 4 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1899 (6 of 1899), in substitution for the paragraph added by s 2 of the Indian Evidence Act (1872) Amendment Act, 1891 (3 of 1891)

‡ X of 1897.

6. of India in or for such country to give such certificate. So if the copy is merely certified by an officer of the Court, without other proof it is inadmissible. Appleton v Lord Braybrook, 2 Stark 7, Thompson v. Stewart, 3 Conn 171.

Scope of the section. This section does not exclude other proof. Vallabdas v Pra
So a c
Court
being
If the

... cler, 1 Campb
proved, even
... v Stark,

1 Stark. 525, Frost v Atkins, 3 Campb 215 n And if it is clearly proved that the Court has no seal, entitle it to credit. Black v Cowen 434 If the copy is merely other proof, it is inadmissible. The section says that if a copy of a given way, the Court, may preclude other proof. The as and that she gave evidence before evidence of those matters. His and by ss 65 and 66 of the public documents, which they a party, when the person in question not subject to the process of the Court, which is the case here." Per Lord

Hobhouse 1

L R 562,

this section

1924 Lah

50 of the I

are not cul

Cas 929

with merely because it can be of of depositions of a Court of due course does not make them

Achut Das, supra. So also was authenticated in accordance with the prescribed by the English Extradition

the records were admissible under it

C W. N 1053-14 C L J 375-14 C W N 1053-14 C L J 375 instance of documents to which s 65 cl (f) seems to refer. Hurish v Prosonno,

22 W R 303

Section 14 of the Civil Procedure runs as follows "The Court shall presume, upon the production of any document purporting to be a certified copy of a pronounced by a Court of competent the record; but such presumption jurisdiction." The presumption is a

Hadje Isup, 6 C W N 829-29 C

31, Udho v Puran, 41 P. L R 1910;

Ramanathan v Lakshmanan 24 M L 1 343, Sita Devi v Gopal Saran, 9 Pat.

L. T. 397-111 Ind Cas 762-A I R 1928 Pat 375, Iskhar Prasad v Sri Ram, 25 A I R 887-105 Ind Cas 186-A I R 1927 All 510

546 In this
of the 8th
regarding :

the Governor General in Council had, under s. 434 of the Civil Procedure Code, notified that decrees of Cooh Behar Courts might be executed as if they were decrees of British Indian Courts, was a compliance with the provisions of s 83 of the Evidence Act, when there was a representative of the Government of India resident in Coach Behar. The notification referred to above is of no use when sent out of India in Coach Behar, so that Coach Behar cannot then be received in 86 of the Evidence Act

87 The Court may presume that any book to which it may refer for information on matters of public or general interest, and that any published map or chart, the statements of which are relevant facts and which is produced for inspection, was written and published by the person and at the time and place, by whom or at which it purports to have been written or published

Presumption as to books, maps and charts

Scope of the section. In proving matters of public or general interest the declarations will not be confined to those which are merely oral. Thus in England ancient maps showing public roads and the boundaries between counties, towns, parishes and manors are admissible, when it is proved that they have been made or recognized by persons having knowledge of the subject who are since deceased. Hammond v Braintree 10 Ex 390. Pipe v Fitcher 28 L J Q B 12, Reg v Milton 1 C & K 53. But this section authorises a Court to presume that book on matters of public or general interest and any published map or chart, was written or published by the person and at the time and place, by whom or at which it purports to have been written or published. A Court in legitimately be made to the work of Mr Crokes on Castes and Tribes on the North Western Provinces and Oudh is an authoritative custom prevalent among the Urdu sect of Mahomedans. Great weight attaches to the accuracy of survey maps but they are not conclusive. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, however they should be presumed to be accurate. Secretary of State v Radha Kishore, 38 Ind Cis 379 P C - 21 C W N 291-44 C 328

28 C L J 306-48

88 The Court may presume that a message, forwarded from a telegraph office to the person to whom such message purports to be addressed, corresponds with a message delivered for transmission at the office from which the message purports to be sent, but the Court shall not make any presumption as to the person by whom such message was delivered for transmission

Presumption as to telegraphic messages

Scope of the section. To prove a telegram sent by the accused the writing handed to the telegraph office not the copy received is the original. R v Regan 16 Cox Cr 203, Hinkel v Pape L R 6 Ex 7, Godwin v Francis, L R 5 C P 295. Whether in proving the terms of a telegram the despatch sent or the despatch delivered and received is the one to be accounted or depends upon the substantive law involved. Wigmore § 1230. In Duiles v Ro, Co, 29 Vt 127, 140 (a Vermont Case) Redfield C J said 'It depends upon which party is responsible for the transmission across the line, or in other words whose agent the telegraph is.' Where the received despatch is the legally material document, it must be accounted for, a recorded copy of it would ordinarily be preferable to mere recollection, and the message as handed in by the sender perhaps might also serve as a copy, but where the party to whom the communication is made is to take the risk of transmission the message delivered to the operator is the original.' Wigmore § 1236. This section allows the

9. Courts to treat telegraph messages received as if they were the originals sent, addressed. In the absence of such evidence, the telegram cannot be held to have been proved. Thakur Singh v Emperor, 4 Ind. Cas 240. The Court is forbidden by the express provisions of this section to make any presumption as telegram to ask the Court to presume that it was sent by a supposed sender. But there is nothing in the section to prevent the telegram once admitted from being considered along with the rest of the evidence. Emperor v Abdul Gani, 49 B 878=27 Bom L R 1373=91 Ind Cas 690=A I R 1926 Bom 71

89. The Court shall presume that every document, called for and not produced after notice to produce, was attested, stamped and executed in the manner required by law.

Presumption as to due execution, etc., of documents not produced.

Principle A circumstance sometimes treated as an extrajudicial admis-

the paper) Everything is to be presumed in odium spoliatoris; and had it certainly appeared that the destroyed paper purported to be an agreement such as is attempted to be established, it would have sufficed for the admission it it would be not only innocent but prudent to destroy. If the paper destroyed were shown to have been an agreement for the land, it would raise a presumption of identity, sufficient to dispense with the ordinary proof of execution, and let in the contents of the paper (as proved by another witness). (But the witness identity and consequent execution." Wigmore § 2132. So this section proceeds on the maxim, omnia presumuntur contra spoliatorem (Every presumption is made against a wrong doer)

Scope of the section. There is a presumption also in favour of innocence, the law assumed, produce Vort Es nature of his case would be manifested, every presumption to his disadvantage will be adopted" I Smith L C 10th Ed 353; 1 Vern 19. According to the same principle, if a man withhold an agreement under which he is chargeable, after a notice to produce, it is presumed as against him, to have been properly stamped Anderson, 1 Stark N P C 35, Marine, 625 This section is restricted to cases, party It does not extend to cases, where a summons to produce is delivered to a stranger to the suit Mark Ev p. 68 See also Ahmad Raza v Sayyad Ibid, 38 A 494-21 C W. N 265 So where any document is not produced after due notice to produce, and after being called for, it is presumed to have been duly stamped, (Closmadence v. Carrel, 18 C II 44), unless it be shown to have remained unstamped for some

R 5 E & The Act presumed to nents In case (a) they are presumed to have been made after the execution of the Will Simons v Rudall, 1 Sim N S 136 In case (b) they are presumed to have been so made that the making would not be an offence Gordon's Cas Deat SI & P 592 per Jervis C J, Stol'e's Anglo Indian Code, Vol II § 909 Where the gagae and where the mortgagor failed to produce the deed before the Court though called upon to do so Held that the execution of the mortgage deed was in view of s 89 of the Evidence Act satisfactorily established, irrespective of the provision of s 68 Jang Bahadur v Chandraj Singh, 41 Ind Cas 171

90. Where any document, purporting or proved to be thirty years old, is produced from any

Presumption as to documents thirty years old custody which the Court in the particular case considers proper, the Court may presume that the signature and every other part of such document, which purports to be in the handwriting of any particular person, is in that person's handwriting, and, in the case of a document executed or attested, that it was duly executed and attested by the persons by whom it purports to be executed and attested

Explanation—Documents are said to be in proper custody if they are in the place in which, and under the care of the person with whom, they would naturally be, but no custody is improper if it is proved to have had a legitimate origin, or if the circumstances of the particular case are such as to render such an origin probable.

This explanation applies also to section 81

Illustrations.

(a) A has been in possession of landed property for a long time He produces from his custody deeds relating to the land, showing his title to it The custody is proper

(b) A produces deeds relating to landed property of which he is the mortgagee The mortgagor is in possession The custody is proper

(c) A, in connection of B, produces deeds relating to lands in B's possession which were deposited with him by B for safe custody The custody is proper.

Principle The First, after a long saw the document's

90. exists for resorting to circumstantial evidence Secondly, the circumstance of

been found amongst deeds and evidences of land may be given in evidence, although the execution of them can not be proved; and the reason given is, 'that it is hard to prove ancient things, and the finding them in such a place is a presumption that they were fairly and honestly obtained and reserved for use, and are free from suspicion of dishonesty' Wigmore § 2137; Wymne v. Tyrnhill, 4 B & Ad 376; Andreas v Motley, 32 L J C P 128, 131. So as a rule of procedure, the witnesses in proving procedure or practice of convenience may to writings thirty years old are conclusively presumed to be dead,—so that execution of such a deed, will or other document need not be proved Chamberlayne's Est § 1165 As the question is one of procedure and not of logic, this presumption is not allowed to be rebutted by proof that such witnesses are alive and actually in Court Doe v Hooley, 8 B & C 22, Doe v Burdett, 1 A. & E 19, Marsh v Collnett, 3 C-p. 655; Phip Ev 7th Ed p 504

the case may be, by persons, in the manner, &c.

state or otherwise identify the means or characters of the parties to it, some sort of evidence will be necessary before it will be admissible Wills Ev, 2nd Ed 381

The rule is

R 466; Chel

665) but also

6 Dom 149, —

Doe v Bur

presumed to witness not

E 1, 19 V

cated and

gestae, yet

purporting to be ancient is not likely to escape exposure, when subjected to the 13 The in-

documents

lie general

rule and to admit, under proper restrictions, ancient documents purporting to constitute part of a transfer of title or

11 Apv Cas 603 "The proof of difficulty Time has removed the with nection with many different kinds of documents Doe v Samples, 8 A. & E 151), Wills, bonds (Chelms v Couper, 1 Esp 275) memo- 28 L R 141), leases (Plaxton v Dora, 10 Thornbury, 29 L J M. C. 109), cases stated for counsel's opinion (Meath v containing entries of the receipt

S.

years old, they need not be proved, provided they have been so acted upon or brought from such a place as to offer a reasonable presumption that they were

title which such documents profess to create Luteffunmissa v Goor Sarun, 18 W R 485 The rule regarding the proof of documents more than thirty years old is that they need not be proved provided they have been so acted upon or brought from such a place as to offer a reasonable presumption that they were honestly and fairly obtained and preserved for use, and are free from suspicion of dishonesty Hari Dhagonr v Biru Dasee, 5 B H A C 135 In order to establish the authenticity of an ancient document it is not necessary to show that it was accompanied by possession Bisheshur Bhattacharya v George Henry Lamb, than 30 years old and that it was produced from proper custody, yet before ce, it must be shown that it is Evidence Act Mathura Pershad thirty years old and is produced from proper custody, the Court may under this section presume its genuineness and more particularly that of the signature appearing on it Bhupali Singh v Khetal Singh 41 Ind Cas 274, Nur Muhammad v Allah Wasai, 5 P W R 1915-35 P L R 1915-27 Ind Cas 562, Gulab v Mahomad, 35 Ind Cas 593, Duarka v Mala, 49 Ind Cas 419 The Will in dispute having been duly registered and the document being over thirty years old, it must under this section, be presumed that it was a genuine document, and the fact that it was registered raised the presumption that the testator was of sound mind at the time of the execution of the Will Babu Badri Prasad v Anupurna Kuer, 6 O L J 311-52 Ind Cas 837 A Will of 1873

the attesting witnesses except one were dead and the surviving attesting witness of the law may not have been given to the purchaser, there is no reason why the Court should presume that no possession was given Pandurang v Basappa, 0. A. I. R. 1923 Bom 364.

rently from proper custody
show that it was not acted nature to be acted upon, the presumption as to the title created by such document falls down Mahadeo v Ragotrai, 1923 Bom 293 In the case of a document more than 30 years old executed by an illiterate person but registered, there is from this two circumstances a presumption of its being genuine Bhim Sankar v Mani Ram, 9 O & A L R 893 A deed more than 30 years old and executed before the Transfer of Property Act, even if not signed by the executant but only by some scribe at his instance will be presumed to be genuine Gaya Singh v Surnybal, A I R 1924 All 832 If one is dealing with a document some thirty years old the main fact that the proof of consideration is not at all satisfactory, is by itself a slender ground for holding that the document known to have come into existence was entirely unreal Sailaya Nath v Raja Resheecase 51 C 135=39 C L J 340=81 Ind Cas 493 The document was more than 30 years old and was produced from proper custody and all the witnesses were dead Held that the presumption must be made under s 90 of the Evidence Act that the attestation

der, 12 O L J

ore than 30 years

that the Record

Held, the presump-

was no proof that it

proof establish that the 10 Purna Chandra v.

Radhakamohan, 90 Ind Cas 722 Where all the executants are dead, the scribe is dead the persons who purport to have been the attesting witnesses are dead, receipt of consi-

10 is also dead,

d by this section

udh 510=4 O

a document was executed by the person who purported to be the executant, but the Court cannot presume the correctness or genuineness of every statement appearing in the document Kshetra Mohan v Bhuvanab Chandra, 98 Ind Cas 1021=A. I R 1927 Cal 229; Abdul Gham v Fuqir Mahomed, 111 Ind Cas 361 Genuineness of jama uasil baki papers more than seventy years old, can be presumed under this section Nirod Krishna v Prodyat Coomar, 45 C L J 129 The presumption of execution of the document extends to the marks man Shailendra v Giriya, 58 C 686=A I R 1931 Cal 896 This section does not contain any restrictions that a presumption should not be drawn thereunder if the person claiming under the document in question is out of possession or has not actually signed or thumb marked the document itself Iman v Natha, A I R 1932 Lah 43=32 P L R 626.

Purporting Section 90 of the Evidence Act, does not enable a Court to presume that unsigned accounts, which do not purport to be in the handwriting of fact prepa

document

pared or a

does not m

Charitar

422=(1918

unsigned

person T

By Purpo.

would be excluded were it not for this section, which contains an excellent provision, if it is not misunderstood Mark Ey p 63

Thirty years--Mode of reckoning Since the chief reason for the rule is the impossibility of obtaining living testimony to the signing or to the handwriting, the necessity does not arise until time has made such testimony unavailable. At first under the English Common law, this requirement was satisfied by the simple and indefinite notion that the deed must be ancient. In some of the old books the average age of a man was computed to be sixty years, that an . . . ars old . . . nson v.

Oliver, Bunbury 250, Clarkson & Woodhouse, 3 Doug 169 But this reckoning was too strict, because the witness were more persons and therefore at least thirty years of age, suffice to bring them near the end of the span 1700 B, the period of thirty years has sufficed to constitute an ancient document.

constitute an ancient document.
l v Baker, 1 Atk 21, 49, R.
252, Chelsea Water Works v Wigmore § 2138 The period have forged the written date . . . years ago must be somehow shown Forbes v Hale, 1 W. Bl 532 In the above named case Lord Mansfield said; 'If the length of the date is alone sufficient to establish it a man has nothing to do but to forge a bond with a very ancient date" Wigmore § 2138 But it seems that this section does not require any such extra evidence Hence in the case of a Will the period of thirty years is reckoned not from the testator's death, but from the date of execution of the instrument Doe v Holley, 11 B & C 22 In applying the presumption allowed by s 90 of the Evidence Act, the period of thirty years is to be reckoned not from the date upon which the document is filed in Court, but from the date, or otherwise become . . . If 135 But in any . . . years old when it was produced, there is no presumption as to its genuineness thirty years old on the date when arguments were heard Mahadeo v Nasiban, 54 Ind Cas 368 The period of thirty years mentioned in this section is to be reckoned from the date when

283-75 Ind C

Thirty years should be counted from the date of its genuineness being subjected to proof. Konda Reddi v Pichu Reddi, A I R 1925 Mad 184

Proper custody The mere production of an ancient document by a party affords no proof of proper custody and it is for the party producing it to explain how the document came to be in his custody Trimbak Das v Mattabar, 27 N L R. 75=124 Ind Cas 609=A I R 1930 Nag 225, Ramnarash v Chukut, A I R 1932 Oudh 227=9 O W N 379 The Court added that it was only necessary to show the age of over thirty years, and that they came from a natural and reasonable cause found 1901 the cause to be consistent with its genuineness Doe v. Phillips, 8 Q. B. 158, Doe v. Keeling, 11 Q. B. 884, Wills v. 2nd Ed 385. In Meath v. Winchester, 8 Beag. N. C. 183, 200, Tindal v. J. said: "It is not necessary that they should be found in the best and most proper place of deposit. If documents continue in such custody, there never would be any question as to their authenticity. But it is when documents are found in other than the proper place of deposit that the investigation commences whether it was reasonable and natural under the circumstances in the particular case to expect that they should have been in the place where they are actually found. For it is obvious that whilst there can be only one place of deposit strictly and absolutely proper, there may be various and many that are reasonable and probable though differing in degree, some 90. A. I. R. 1923 Bom. 364. . . .

 rently from proper custody
 show that it was not acted

created by such document the case of a document son but registered, there being genuine. Bhim Sankar
 a than 30 years old and executed signed by the executant but mel to be genuine Gaya Singh v Sumbali, A. I. R. 1924 All 832 If one is dealing with a document some thirty years old the main factory, is by itself a dead Held that the pre-umption must be made under s 90 of the Evidence Act that the attestation was duly made Mahomed Hasan v Ali Hinder, 12 O L J 1-85 Ind Cas 509 A partition chitta purporting to be more than 30 years leposed that the Record court Held, the presump-

 was no proof that it
 collectorate custody was proper custody within section 90 Purna Chandra v.
Radhalamohan, 90 Ind Cas 722 Where all the executants are dead, the scribe is dead, the persons who purport to have been the attesting witnesses are dead, and receipt of consi-
 r who is also dead,
 nitted by this section
 '7 Oudh 510-4 O

executed by the person who purported to be the executant, but the Court cannot presume the correctness or genuineness of every statement appearing in the document Kshetra Mohan v Bhanab Chandra, 98 Ind Cas 1021-A. I. R.
 1927 Cal 229; Abul Gham v Faguir Mahomed, 111 Ind Cas 361 Genuineness of jama uasil baki papers more than seventy years old, can be presumed under this section Nrud Krishna v Prodyat Coomar, 45 C L J 129 The presumption of execution of the document extends to the marks man Shailendra v Gurja, 58 C 686-A. I. R. 1931 Cal 896 This section does not contain any restrictions that a presumption should not be drawn thereunder if the person claiming under the document in question is out of possession or has not actually signed or thumb marked the document itself Iman v Natha, A. I. R. 1932 Lah 43-32 P L R 626

Purporting Section 90 of the Evidence Act, does not enable a Court to presume that unsigned accounts, which do not purport to be in the handwriting of any particular person or of the temple to which the

does not make it admissible without proof under s 90 of the Evidence Act which are excluded were it not for this section, which contains an excellent provision, if it is not misunderstood Mark Ey 68

Thirty years—Mode of reckoning Since the chief reason for the rule is the impossibility of obtaining living testimony to the signing or to the hand-

Horner, (1913) 2 Ch .

thereof so far as t

which, judging from tances of the case, it would naturally be expected to reside, then the document ought to be treated as authentic to such extent as to become admissible in evidence between the parties Chundra Kant v. Brojonath, 13 W R 109. Whether the custody of a document is a proper one under section 90 of the s of each case.

documents sixty

custody of the

the presumption

ld be admitted

Pat L T. 474=5

than 30 years old comes from custody of the mortgagee, the presumption of proper execution readily arises and it is proof of the mortgage Samachari v. Sadho Suran, A. I. R 1924 All 269 The mere fact of a certain document having been produced from a Court where it had been filed does not necessarily bring that document within the requirements of this section Rajendra v. Gopal 4 Pat 66=A I R. 1925 Pat 442

May presume It is in the discretion of a Court whether it will raise the presumption, in favour of a document for which s 90 provides But this discretion is not to be exercised arbitrarily but must be governed by principles which are consonant with law and justice And while, on the one hand, great care is requisite in applying the presumption, on the other hand, it is clear that very grave injustice may be perpetrated, if an ancient document coming from proper custody is rejected by a Court capriciously or for inadequate reasons Gorinda Hazara v. Protap Naram, 29 C 740; Ram v. Chulut, A I R 1932 Oudh R 227=9 O W. N 379 When a document, which is over thirty years old, has been which is a mentioned ment, stating its reasons in the latter event and, in the former, whether the presumption has been rebutted or not Sumath Patra v. Kuloda, 2 C L J. 592 The effect of the presumption is weakened by circumstances which tended to raise doubts as to its authenticity Madan Mohan v. Kumar Rameswar, 7 C. L J 615 The presumption allowed by this section is not a presumption which the Court is bound to make Honuman v. Ramchuritra, A W N 1901, 28. As to the presumption which a Court may make under s 90 of the Evidence Act, the power thereby given must be exercised with great discretion in a country where documents are written on such material as parabick and palm leaf, and where in Burmese time neither parties nor witnesses were ever in the habit of attaching their signatures, so that the term execution is rather a convenient it be more than thirty years old and purports to come from proper custody and that under the circumstances of the present case the discretion was rightly exercised Safiq unnessa v. Shaban Ali Khan, 7 O C 290 The words "may presume" in this section, ought generally to be construed in the more rigorous of the sense allowed by s 4 and in view of danger of a blind acceptance of a document as genuine for all purposes, merely because it purports to be a before the pre- found v Lakh previous at the time, and as to whether it has ever been acted on previously to its production in Court Mehar Amir v. Nur Muhammed, 110 P. L. R. 1902. So it

90. is not obligatory, under this section, upon a Court to assume that the document produced is genuine merely because it purports to be thirty years old and is produced from proper custody. The Court has a discretion in the matter, but the discretion is not to be exercised in a manner which would be inconsistent with the presumption with regard to the genuineness of a document under this section is one in which the Court has to exercise its discretion and when that discretion has been exercised with due care and the presumption allowed by law has been made an appellate Court should be slow to interfere with such discretion. Mahomed v. Rahim, 57 P. W. R. 1918-44 Ind. Cas. 559. The presumption is not to be applied to a deed executed by an illiterate.

in refusing to draw the presumption under s. 133 of the Act nor would such presumption be in itself sufficient to prove the genuineness of a document but such evidence may age of the document. 1930 Bom. 39.

in my opinion, lays down more a rule of expediency than a rule of law."

Unsuspicious appearance. A third requirement is that the document must in appearance be unsuspecting. Wanmore 6 P. 140. "On inspection it must is suspicious, on the face of it, and when the very place of importance has been erased and re-written, presumption under this section does not arise. Baldeo Misir v. Bharos Kumbhi, 95 Ind Cas 261-A I 1926 A 537. Where a document more than 30 years old purporting to come from proper custody, is required by the Court before which it is produced to be proved and is left unproved, and there are circumstances, both external and internal, which throw great doubts upon the genuineness of the document the Court can, in the exercise of the discretion vested in it under s 90 of the Evidence Act, decline to admit it to evidence without formal proof and their Lordships of the Privy Council will be always slow to overrule the discretion exercised by a Judge under s 90. Shafiq-un nissa v Shafan Ali, 6 Bom. L R. 750.

Old Copies The use of raises two or three questions fiance, moreover, of the circumst

but this rule does not enable one to use an unauthorized record. Thus, when the record is unauthorized, some other mode of proving the deed must be resorted to. Keeping these principles in mind, the various situations may be distin-cular mode of proof has been prescribed by the Act. Krishnaswami v Ananthachari 4 Mys L J 264, Saryu Dey v Ram Hwakh, 18 Ind Cas 250. This section of the Evidence Act does not make it incompetent for the Court to draw any presumption a copy of the sa

which section
id was
94-A 218,

Nanu Nair v Kantan Ashta, 2 L W 509-29 Ind Cas 386. But this section

M W N 454-73 Ind Cas 66

Where the alleged ancient original is lost, and proof of its contents (including the purporting signatures) is offered to be made by one who having seen it before its loss, recollects its contents or took a copy, the difficulty in any witness and the presumption in section 90 cannot apply, for that only relates to documents which purport or are proved to be thirty years old, and This is not one of such documents, and, section 90 can not apply. One of the agent for admitting Exhibit E in Ponnani Ialeth Porapman v Karoth Sankaran, 12 Ind. Cas 153, but from the brief judgment of the contrary, the copy."

copy is offered, made by a private hand, and the purporting maker being unknown and the copy 2113. The an alleged official record copy offered, though not Ibid. When a copy of a document is exhibited in a suit and the original document is not produced, though the original purports to be more than thirty years old, the presumption which, under s 90 of the Evidence Act, may be made where a document over thirty years not to be made Appathura v. Gopala, cases in which the document is actually produced in Court, secondary evidence of an ancient document is admissible, without proof of execution of it have been lost

P. R 1910=1

case of a copy

Court to presume that the copy is in the hand-writing of the person in whose though this section does not refer to stamps,

Evidence Act regarding the same on the production of certified copy.

Bahadur v mentioned in the presumption

Duari anath, Banuarial v.

Aiyar, 16 L. v. Subramania

N 611=46 L. 2=(1922) M. W.

1 copy Scethaya authenticating,

Bom L R 756=1

this section with

as well as originals

be made in favour

Prosad, 6 O W N 880=A I R 1929 Oudh 483 The Court may presume the genuineness even of an unregistered document thirty years old from a copy of such document, if the original is proved to have been duly executed, and further it is also proved that the original is since lost But such a presumption can only be made after a careful consideration of all the circumstances of the

and, for the purpose

competent to execute

The words 'duly

according to law

whether she has fully understood the question of execution. The term only an abbreviated form of expression intended to connote the necessity of bringing home the transaction to the executant and of proving that it was fully explained to and understood by the parlanshin lady. Afsar Bejam v Mahomed, 5 Luck 326=8 O W N. 55=130 Ind Cas 861=A L R. 1931 Oudh 103

Presumption of genuineness whether presumption of executants authority to sign or grant. Where the executant of a document purports to sign it on behalf of others, the fact that it is more than thirty years old, though it would, under the provisions of section 90 of the Evidence Act, raise a presumption in favour of the genuineness of the document, would not dispense with proof of the authority of the executant to sign it on behalf of others so as to bind them or those claiming under them. Ubtack Rai v Daliai Rai, 3 C 557. Where it is not shown that the executant of an ancient document was entitled to grant such a document, mere production of it would be no proof of title. Uggar Kant v Harro Chunder, 6 C 209. The provisions of s 90 of the Evidence Act merely establish that the document was executed by the persons whose signatures it purports to bear, but that can not and does not

rim v Lagan,
Tanga,
19 So
power
sumed

only the execution of the deed, but not, in the absence of the power or evidence thereof, the authority of the solicitor to execute it. Re Airey, (1897) 1 Ch 164, Phip Ex 7th Ed 505

This section does not prove the authority of the person who has made the grant, the genuineness whereof is presumed by the Court under the provisions of that section. Kashi Nath v Jagat Kishore, 20 C W N 643=23 C L J. 583=85 Ind Cas 298. The presumption that arises under s 90 of the Evidence Act only extends to the genuineness of old documents coming from proper custody, it does not further go to the extent of holding that the document was in fact executed by persons possessed of the requisite authority. Tarakeswar Pal v Sush Chandra, 27 C W N 964. Although in the case of sale deeds more than 50 years old the presumption of law was that they were executed by the persons who purported to execute them, there was no presumption that the scribe who signed these documents executed them to do it. Haji Shaikh v Ind Cas 989, Ramam Kant v Bhu Cas 220

Full Bench case has held that the Act in the case of a document executed by the party by whom it purported to be executed includes the presumption that when the signature of the executant purports to have been made by the pen of the scribe, the latter was duly authorized to sign for him. Haji v Sulham, A L J 837=1925 All. 1=47 A 31 (F B), Balloran v Ut Dular, 24 A L J 920=97 Ind Cas 292

7 O C 299=31 I A Cas 773. When the applicability of the pro
the High Court can 7 In Parankura Zales
said. "The presumption

Act as to the genuineness of a document 30 years old, is one of fact and stands that the District Munsiff had drawn the presumption under this section in

Vaiyya Dayan, 108 Ind Cas 412

Ancient document—Corroborative evidence : It is well settled that mere production of an ancient doc evidence of acting under it is not.

be corroborated by evidence by other equivalent or explanatory proof, it is then pre-umed to have constituted part of the actual transfer of property mentioned, because this is the usual ab-sence of proof of possession does udly affects the weight to be attached to a, 12 C L J 14-89 Ind Cas 747-A

I R 1925 Cal 1189

later when even that attesting witness was dead. There was no reasonable explanation about the delay after 1910 in making the application for probate. There was no evidence as to the custody of the Will before 1907, held that the applicant cannot get the benefit of s 90 Channulal v Mt Puna, 75 Ind Cas 660-1923 Nag 169. Where circumstances of suspicion surround the genuine character of a document thirty years old, the question of applying to it the present rule is one largely of administration. Should the evidence in the case explain and account for these circumstances to the satisfaction of the presiding judge, he may admit the writing to the benefit of the rule of procedure. Chamberlayne's Ev § 1165

Rule should be applied with proper care and caution. The rule laid down in s 90 of the Evidence Act as to proof of execution of documents thirty years old ought to be applied with special care and caution. Trailokya Nath v

Din, 241 P. L. R. 1913-19 Ind. Cas. 961. Before a Court is justified in making this must Cas s is a ution Allah presumption contained in this section Gobinda v Pulin Behary, 31 C W N 215-98 Ind Cas 147-A I R 1927 Cal 103

Explanation This is to provide for cases in which the custody is not, perhaps, that where it might most reasonably be expected, but yet sufficiently reasonable to constitute such custody not improper. Thus in the two first illustrations, (a) and (b), the documents are produced from their natural place of custody; in (c) the documents ordinarily would be with the owner B, but

v The Bishop & the see laxton v

Dave, 10 H & C 17, or of the lessee Hall v Ball 3 M & G 242

CHAPTER VI

OF THE EXCLUSION OF ORAL BY DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

91 When the terms of a contract, or of a grant, or of any

Evidence of terms of contracts grants and other dispositions of property reduced to form of document. other disposition of property, have been reduced to the form of a document, and in all cases in which any matter is required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, no evidence shall be given in proof of the terms of such contract, grant or other disposition of property, or of such matter except the document itself, or secondary evidence of its contents in cases in which secondary evidence is admissible under the provisions hereinbefore contained

Exception 1—When a public officer is required by law to be appointed in writing, and when it is shown that any particular person has acted as such officer, the writing by which he is appointed need not be proved

Exception 2—Will "[admitted to probate in British India]" may be proved by the probate

Explanation 1—This section applies equally to cases in which the contracts grants, or dispositions of property referred to are contained in one document and to cases in which they are contained in more documents than one

Explanation 2—Where there are more originals than one, one original only need be proved

Explanation 3—This statement in any document whatever, of a fact other than the facts referred to in this section, shall not preclude the admission of oral evidence as to the same fact.

* These words in s 91, Exception 2 were substituted for the words under the Indian Succession Act" by the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act 1872 (18 of 1872), s 7 91.

Illustrations

(a) If a contract be contained in several letters, all the letters in which it is contained must be proved.

(b) If a contract is contained in a bill of exchange, the bill of exchange must be proved.

(c) If a bill of exchange is drawn in a set of three, one only need be proved.

(d) A contract, in writing, with B, for the delivery of indigo upon certain terms. The contract mentions the fact that B had paid A the price of other indigo contracted for verbally on another occasion.

Oral evidence is offered that no payment was made for the other indigo. The evidence is admissible.

by B

it,

judgment, the contract, the devise, etc., it is in reality declaring a doctrine of the substantive law of these subjects, namely in the case of a written contract, that

It does not exclude certain data because they are for one or another reason untrustworthy or undesirable means of evidencing some fact to be proved. It does not concern a prohibitive mental process,—the process of believing one fact on the faith of another. What the rule does is to declare that certain kinds of evidence are inadmissible under the rule of substantive law; and this of course (like when desired, (c) its prescribed forms, if any, and (d), the Intended external objects affected by it. Of these four, the first and the fourth are necessarily involved in every jurat act, the second and the third are important, but are always possible elements.

deemed by law to be the sole document was intended by the parties between them and therefore to be valid. Wignote § 2401. The practical parts, in their former and inchoate shape, have no longer any jurat effect, they are replaced by a single embodiment of the act, in other words: When a jurat act is embodied in a single memorial, all other utterances of the parties on the topic are legally immaterial for the purpose of determining what are the terms of their act. Ignore § 242. This rule is based upon an assumed intention on the part of the contracting parties, and to put their ideas in such shape that there can be no misunderstanding, which so often occurs where reliance is placed upon oral statements. Written contracts presume deliberation upon the part of the contracting parties, on by the embodied common law on that the best phrase when the contents of a case are submitted to the tribunal, Ev § 2 substituted into cited with approval by Lord Carson in U Subramanian v Lutchman, 50 C 338-38 C L J 41-28 C W N 1-44 M L J 602-50 I A 77 P C

instruments, or to contradict or alter them. This is a matter both of principle and policy, because such instruments are, in their own nature and origin, entitled to a much higher degree of credit than parol evidence of policy because it would be attended with great mischief if those instruments, upon which the evidence is by loose collateral Charan, W R 68 (69) which requires the

Statute of Frauds In all these cases, the law having required that the evidence of the transactions should be in writing no other proof can be substituted for that, as long as the writing exists, and is in the power of the party. Green Ev § 86. In the second place oral proof cannot be substituted for the written evidence of any contract which the parties have put in writing. Here the written instrument may be regarded in some measure, as the ultimate fact to be proved especially in cases of negotiable securities and in all cases of written contracts, the writing is tacitly agreed upon by the parties themselves, as the only repository and the appropriate evidence of their agreements. The written contract is not collateral, but is of the very essence of the transaction. If for example, an action is brought for the use and occupation of real estate, and it appears by the plaintiff's own showing that there was a written contract of tenancy, he must produce it, or account for its absence, if he were to make out a prima facie case, without any appearance of a written contract, the burden of producing it, or at least of proving its existence, would be devolved on the defendant. Breuer v Palmer, 3 Esp 213, confirmed in Ramsbottom v Tunbridge 2 M & S 431, R v Rauden 5 B & C 708 Strotter v Boor, 11 Bing 136, Per Parke J. But if the fact of the occupation of land is alone in issue without

1. respect to the terms of the tenancy, this fact may be proved by any competent variations of the tenant, notwith-an agreement in writing; for a question R v Inhabitants of ing 239, 241. The same rule applies to every other species of written contract Greenl Ev § 87. Save and ings, there is a third class of document existence of which is disputed, and which is the parties, or to the credit of witnesses be proved in accordance with the provisions of section 64 supra, "I have always" says Lord Fentenden, in Vincent v. Cole, 1 M & M 253, 'acted most strictly on only be proved by the writing itself danger of relying on the recollection of contents of written instruments; the the purposes of justice the writing does not there is no ground for written communication latter may
 of the writing
 may be pro
 4 Esp 213; vide to this section. In stating that oral testimony cannot be substi-
 1 although they relate to the, which are directly in issue in the cause Parke B, Newhall v. Holt, 6 M & W Bethell v

Blencowe, 3 M & Gr 119, Howard v Smith, 3 M & Gr 254 "The reason" Peron Parke "why such statements or acts are admissible, without

In this, may reasonably be presumed to be" Taylor § 410 But in Mass the genuineness of a document produced is in question (Vide § 22) When

 to be limitation it must be taken that even a third party if he wants to establish a

I made orally there being no docuis in fact reduced to the
 be determined on a
 and the circumstances
 e terms are not reduced to the form of a document registration is not necessary and while the writing cannot be used as a document of title it can be used as a piece of evidence, & § settlement made. Any antecedent documents and maps can be used solely in the plaint, to the effect that he would make good any loss the (plaintiff) purchaser might incur in respect of the property sold, is not excluded by section 91 of the Evidence Act, and renders proof of the agreement unnecessary. Sadhu v. Nga St, U B R 1907, Evidence 1. When men agree to preserve by writing the remembrance of past event of which they wish to create a memorial either with a view to lay down a rule for their own guidance, or in order to have in the instrument a lasting proof of the truth of what is written, the truth of the written act must be established by the acts themselves, that is, by the inspection of the originals. Upendra v Umesh Chandra 12 C L J 25-6 Ind Cas 346. The consent in writing by the landlord to the division of a tenure has the effect of substituting a new contract for the old. It should be proved by the terms of the new contract. Section 91 of the Evidence Act does not exclude the terms of the old contract.

application. Ganoda v Girish, 4 Ind Cas 400. As required by ss 250 and 251, of the Code of the Civil Procedure, the warrant must have been in writing and therefore, under s 91 of the Evidence Act, the fact, that the warrant gave admissible. Sheo Ho v King-Emperor, 3 L B R 128. Previous conviction should, regard being had to the provisions of this section, and section 511 Cr P.C. Code, be proved by copies of judgments or extracts from judgments or by any other documentary evidence of the fact of such previous conviction, if those convictions is, having warrant or justification. Lasin 70. When a dying declaration is not evidence, but the precise statement of the Magistrate who recorded the statement or some one who heard it. This section does not apply to such a document. Gowindas v Emperor, 36 C 659-13 C W N 659-10 Cr L J 186-2 Ind Cas 541. Section 91 of the Evidence Act has no application to matters embodied in the special diary under s 172 of the Criminal Pro. Code.

1.

- Ind Cas 766 An agreement within the meaning of section 10 of the Evidence Act, reduced to writing, is admissible.

to the Civil :
ing th
and 1 110 =
found

gift has been validly made in accordance with Muhammadan law Ali Baksh v Ghuras, 28 Ind Cas 180 = 18 O C 122 Where the terms of a compromise are found to be set out in a petition, the petitioner must prove the terms of the compromise and oral evidence would not be admissible to vary or alter its terms Bharora v Sukhdar, 12 A L J 993 There is no rule of law that the only evidence of an agent's authority admissible in evidence is a written power of attorney The fact can be proved by evidence, alunde, and so far as third parties are concerned, non the-less so because the agent was appointed under a written document executed by the principal. There is nothing in section 91 or section 92 of the Evidence Act to preclude such third party from proving the existence of a particular relationship between the persons who respectively executed and accepted the power of attorney, though the terms which govern such relationship appear to be in writing Lala Nanakchand v. Mahammad Abzal, 279 P W R 1912 The object of s 10 A of the Dekkan Agriculturists' the parties but embodies only some of the conditions, oral evidence to prove judicial determination of the meaning of the language of parties to an agreement though the parties may not testify as to their intention. Morris v David Jones, 125 Ind Cas 867 = Ind Rul (1930) P C 231 It is not necessary to get a family settlement reduced into writing and get the writing registered Oral evidence on the point of the alleged settlement is therefore admissible Rangu v. Lal shiman, A I R 1930 Bom 438

When the terms of a contract or of a grant, or of any other disposition of property have been reduced to the form of a writing Where a transaction memorial may be termed the integration of the act : i. e., its formation from scattered parts into an integral documentary unity. The practical consequence of this is that its scattered parts, in their material for the purpose of determining what are the terms of their act Wignore § 2425. It is for this reason that whenever the parties to any contract or grant or other disposition of property have set out its terms and conditions in a writing, which they presumably intend to be a record of the transaction, the law forbids any attempt to establish any other terms by means of oral evidence. Powell Ex p 181. The moment an oral contract is reduced to writing, it is not open to any of the parties thereafter to seek to prove the term of contract referring to the original oral agreement and this section applies not only to cases where the contract is brought about or concluded by the writing, but also where the contract having been originally made by parol is subsequently reduced to writing. Where the parties reduce the terms of a contract into writing, it clearly indicates the contemplation of the parties that the terms would be reduced to a form where there could be no question at all as to what the terms were and the undoubted policy of the law is that whichever parties have taken such precaution it is the document itself that must be produced and proved as evidence of the contract subject of course, to any rules as to secondary evidence. Kappu Suami v Chinnu Suami, 28 L. W. 234-111 Ind. Cas. 671-A I. R. 1923 Mad. 546. Thus, where a contract of agency had been orally made between the parties, but had subsequently been put into writing and signed by them, it was held that the document was only admissible evidence of the agreement. Morris v Delobel Flipo, (1892) 2 Ch. 352; Phip Ex p 7th Ed. p. 547. Having regard to the terms of this section, what the Court has got to do is to find out the real contract between the parties. Meenakshisundaram v. Chenchu, 109 Ind. Cas. 18-A I. R. 1928 Mad. 459. The fact of partition may be proved by oral evidence although the deed embodying the terms of partition cannot be proved because of the inadmissibility of the document. Maung Tan v Ko Tu, 111 Ind. Cas. 472-A I. R. 1928 Rang. 196. But where an award in writing which effected a partition of joint family properties, plainly and unambiguously effected an out-and-out partition among all the members of the joint family, held that extrinsic evidence was admissible to explain or control its terms, to show for instance that there was no separation between two of the members inter se. Babu v Gakuldass, A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 1064-55 M. L. J. 182-112 Ind. Cas. 184. The agreement to refer to or other disposition of property and so forth. Ram v Lala Ram, 116 Ind. Cas. 853-A. A will may be created by word of mouth, been put in writing the document itself or secondary evidence of the same should be tendered. Mahomed v Bibi Marian, 5 Pat. 481-117 Ind. Cas. 633-A I. R. 1929 Pat. 410. When a plaintiff alleges that possession of immovable property has been given to the defendant as security for a loan of hundred rupees or upwards, but without the execution of a registered instrument, oral evidence is not admissible to prove the transaction. Maung Sa v Maung have been reduced to the form of a document, except the document itself or secondary evidence of its contents in cases in which secondary evidence is admissible. Maung Pan v. Ma Bue, U. B. II (1892-1896) Vol. II, 347.

1. Terms of a contract. The general rule laid down in section 91 of the Act is, that when the terms of a contract have been reduced to writing, no evidence shall be given in proof of terms of the contract except the documents itself, or, in certain cases, secondary evidence of its contents. Sri Dutt v. Bodri, 15 R. D. 339, Nar v. Ran Mohan, 53 A 114=1931 A L J 61=A I

From the mere fact that a bill of exchange or hundi has been executed, it does not necessarily follow that the whole of the contract between the parties

dence of an agreement as well as of what took place when the agreement was made to prove the agreement if the written instrument is not produced. Iyan-latesh v. Ganesh, 61 Ind Cas whenever the terms of a contract are inadmissible in evidence the Ishai Das, 3 Lah. L J 157=60. 23 Bom L R 767=63 Ind parties been reduced to writing and the of the contract of loan but if the hundies then it is the oral terms proved and this section is 180=57 Ind Cas 391 If contract contemplate the fact it is a question of construction is a condition or term of desire of the parties as to will in fact go through either because the condition a contract to enter into and the reference to the mere formal document may be ignored. 4 P. L. J. 580=(1919) Pat 305=53 Ind Cas 832 When it was admitted that the terms of the contract were reduced to writing and as no oral evidence was admissible to prove the said terms, the suit should have been brought within three years of the date of the transaction if it could be maintained on the original consideration. Gobinda v. Ram Chandra, 29 C L J 508=51 Ind Cas 945 Oral evidence to prove admissible under it 22 C W N 416=4 controlled by final expression of obligation his own language. Moung Po Thet v. Irua Vol II, into at a the writ

N 147 (P C)=32 C. 96=31 I A 188 A question as to who the contracting parties are is not a question as to the terms of the contract, within the meaning of this section. Venkata Subbiah v. Gobindarajulu, 18 M L J. 1=3 M L J. 250=31 M 15 Where an agreement is inadmissible, oral evidence is barred.

Samsam v Ram S.
 procedure does not need to be in the form of the suit or in proceedings. The agreement or compromise itself, that is made out of Court may be in writing or by word of mouth. If the Court did not record the terms of it, this section is no bar to the suit being brought on the terms of the compromise. Biya v On Gaung, 3 I. M. R. 243. Ordinarily when the terms of a contract preceded by proposals, negotiations, conditional acceptances, counter proposals and so on are reduced finally to the form of a document signed by one or both of the parties the strong presumption is not that there are two independent contracts (the first an oral contract the second written contract) but that the written contract is the only final contract between the parties and when a contract is once reduced to writing no other evidence can be given of its terms. Kotam Reddy v Vennalalant, 20 M. L. T. 41—(1916) 2 M. W. N. 33—31 M. L. J. 240—35 Ind. Cas. 18. When the terms of contract for payment of interests were excluded from evidence by Court of Wards Act oral evidence is admissible to prove the terms of contract. Ism Bahadur v Dassur, 17 C. L. J. 399—19 Ind. Cas. 818. The rule of evidence, which excludes evidence of the terms of a contract which has been reduced to the form of a document has nothing to do with an action for money had and received the basis of which action is not the contract reduced to the form of a document but the doctrine of equity that a person who has received a sum of money from another for a consideration which has wholly failed must return the money to the payer. Bay Nath v Sahj Ram, 16 Ind. Cas. 33.

Promissory note—Proof of oral contract of loan. Apart from the promissory note there is always a contract to repay a loan and such contract can be proved independently of the instrument. It is only the other contract relating to the rate of interest which can only be proved on reference to the instrument itself. So even in cases where the lending of the money and the execution of the promissory note are contemporaneous the plaintiff is entitled to maintain a suit for recovery of the money lent and to adduce evidence other than the instrument or the promissory note itself in order to prove the loan. Dhaneswar v Ramrup Gir, 7 Pat. 845—111 Ind. Cas. 482—9 Pat. L. T. 471—A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 133. "It is a well established rule that a contract to repay a loan, cannot be proved by evidence in law to prevent and if he can satisfy the court on any reason why a decree should be granted." Mahamad A. I. R.

1081 Pat. 293—133 Ind. Cas. 685, see also Lal v Ram, 130 Ind. Cas. 347, 10 Pat. 506. But a Full Bench in Khan v Ram Mohan decided differently. Between cases where the transaction is separable from the promissory note and cases where the execution of the promissory note and the payment of the money are part and parcel of the same transaction, it being held that in the former case the debt could be held proved, although the promissory note was not admissible in evidence, while in the latter cases it could not and the suit must fail if the promissory note itself be inadmissible in evidence. In that case the cases of Sima, 34 A. 153—13 Ind. Cas. 685, overruled see also Sheik Albar, 256 M. L. J. 256—133 Ind. Cas. 685. The case of Sheik Albar is also overruled see Sheik Albar v Sheikh Khan, 23 C. 551. In the Madras High Court in Varlagadda v Gotantala, 29 M. L. J. 111—13 M. L.

the transaction is separable from the promissory note and cases where the execution of the promissory note and the payment of the money are part and parcel of the same transaction, it being held that in the former case the debt could be held proved, although the promissory note was not admissible in evidence, while in the latter cases it could not and the suit must fail if the promissory note itself be inadmissible in evidence. In that case the cases of Sima, 34 A. 153—13 Ind. Cas. 685, overruled see also Sheik Albar, 256 M. L. J. 256—133 Ind. Cas. 685. The case of Sheik Albar is also overruled see Sheik Albar v Sheikh Khan, 23 C. 551. In the Madras High Court in Varlagadda v Gotantala, 29 M. L. J. 111—13 M. L.

J. 484 and in Mulhu v Vishuanatha, 38M 660=21 Ind Cas 864, s 91 of the Evidence Act was relied upon and it was held that in circumstances similar to the Allahabad Full Bench Case, oral evidence could not be given in proof of the loan; see also Alimam v. Kolisetti, A I R 1932 Mad 693=63 M L J 303. In Chandra . . . A I R 1922 Lch 307=66 Ind Cas 201=2 . . . also took the same view. The point of view whether the fact of payment of a sum of money can be regarded as a term of the contract does not seem to have been considered by the learned Judges who decided the case. In a recent full Bench case of the Oudh Chief Court, it has been held that in spite of the provisions of s 91, it is open to the party who has lent money on terms recorded in a promissory note which terms ought to be inadmissible in evidence for want of proper stamp duty to recover his money by proving orally the advance of the loan. Kunwar Bahadur v Suraj Bihari, A. I. R. 1932 Oudh 235, see also Krishnan v Rajmal, 24 B 360=2 Bom L R 25; Duaria v Idur, 74 Ind Cas 813=26 O C 361, Narain v Guja, A I R 1929 Oudh 349, Mung Kyu v. Ma Ma, 10 L J R 51=74 Ind Cas 84 (F B). For further discussion on the subject vide pp 1007—1009 infra.

Terms of a grant. Under this section grant when it has been reduced to the form of secondary evidence of its contents is admissible only under the terms of section not proved to have been lost, (1 C) of s 65 cannot be invoked. Mahomed Khan v. Shoo Bihari, A I R 1929 Oudh 447=6 O W N 353. Under section 85, sub section (2) of the B n.

Oral evidence of such grant is also excluded by section 91 of the Evidence Act. Jarip Khan v Durfa Beua, 16 C L J. 144=15 Ind Cas 116=17 C W N 59.

want of registration—whether secondary he contract can be received. Nya Sheru. The combined operation of s 49 of the Evidence Act is to completely partition. In other words it would prevent the plaintiff from proving that in di intention of 927 Nag 113 property can to determine van 103 Ind Cas. 153, see F 276=103 Ind Cas 281=A. I Cas 47=1923 Rang 57; ngdas v Uttamchand, A I R deed can be used as evidence terms of a partition deed. Mg Po Leen v. Ma E Mai, 1 Bur. L J 111. Secondary evidence of a lost unregistered document affecting an interest in an immovable S.

oral agreement to lease made before the execution of the document, in order to support a claim

Kashnam 71 In

1923 P 111 W

tered, the tenant

formance Damodar v Masoodan Singh, 105 Ind Cas 172: Islaram v Sukla, 111 Ind Cas 358 = A I R 1928 Nag 378 Though a lease for agricultural purposes for more than a year is reduced to writing, it cannot be received unless registered. The document out other evidence of the transaction

349 = 79 Ind Cas 26 = 5 Pat L T 511, Ram Chandra v Tama, 11 Bim L R.

390 = 36 B 500 = 15 Ind Cas 830, Jasod v Anulau v Ram Kuar, L R 34 537, Budhan Felt v Madanmohan, 3 Pat L T 185 = 63 Ind. Cas 653 An unregistered deed of lease is not admissible to prove that the property to which it relates was let for a term of three years nor can oral evidence of the terms of the lease be tendered in such a case Madar v Raul, 63 Ind Cas 90 The plaintiffs having agreed to convey a house to F received the purchase money, executed a sale deed,

suit for possession of

deed, secondary evidence

Held, on second appeal, that under s was compulsorily registrable, and sale Section 91 of the Evidence evidence of sale deed Gangabisan

Section 49 of the Registration Act prohibits unregistered lease from being given in evidence whether the suit be for specific performance or for damages, and section 91 of the Evidence Act forbids any other evidence from being given of the agreement Sieeramulu v Ramaswami 33 M L J 596 Where the tenant wrote to the landlord to grant a lease in pursuance of an oral conversation and the landlord sent a reply which in law amounted to an agreement to lease but which was rendered inadmissible for want of registration and the tenant thereupon sought to fall back on prior oral agreement, held that if there was a prior oral agreement, it was either the same as that in interest or it was modified by the letters and that in neither case did s 91 of the Evidence Act admit oral

125 Ind C

Docu

pro note payable otherwise than on demand, bearing an one anna stamp is an insufficiently stamped document and is, under section 34 Stamp Act, inadmissible in evidence for any purpose even on payment of penalty In such a case a person is not entitled to fall back upon the original consideration of the contract as no other evidence of the terms of the document which is the best evidence in the case is admissible under this section O Gorman v Mahtab

Singh, 92 P R 1898, Chandan Singh v Amritsar Banking Co, 2 Lab 330 =

1923 Lab 307 = 66 Ind Cas 201.

Where a plaintiff is able to prove the loan independently of and without the assistance of a promissory note, which cannot be admitted in evidence for some reason, he can fall back upon a claim for money lent Ram Sawrup

v Jasodah 9 A L J 72 = 31 A 153 = 13 Ind Cas 133 [Since over ruled by 53 A 114 (F B)] So a creditor can fall back on the original transaction and recover his money on its basis when it is found or conceded that the document or instrument which he had obtained from the debtor was ineffective to establish any contractual relation of debtor and creditor between them so as to serve as a basis for a suit in a Court of law,

Udaram v. Laxman, 104 Ind. Cas 470 = A I R, 1927 Nag 241. Where a person

1. sued to recover money on the but the sail hat appeared to be a duly stamped bill, that if the plaintiff was able to prove any money he was entitled to a decree. Launjari Chaudh v Parsotom Chaudh, 25 A L J 567=103 Ind Cas 631=A I R 1927 All 563

The mere existence of an unstamped receipt which is inadmissible in evidence does not prevent other evidence being received.

Ram prosad v Nathu Ram.

If a creditor has a cause of action or has executed a promissory note separate from and independent of the note he can recover upon such cause in case the note for any reason as for want of being properly stamped cannot be put in evidence. Hashu Prosad v Panna Lal, 74 Ind Cas 379=L R 4 A 377=1923 A 29. A promissory note which is insufficiently stamped if sued upon may give rise to three kinds of transactions. Either the contract may be considered as contained wholly in the promissory note or bill of exchange is in all (b) to s 91 of the Indian Evidence Act, in which case the plaintiff cannot sue on the promissory note,—he can not sue at all, or secondly the promissory note may be regarded as a conditional payment of the amount of the loan in which case, of course, if the promissory note is insufficiently stamped it is only the plaintiff may sue on the loan; or thirdly passed as security for the loan, in which case plaintiff to sue on the promissory note at all or not, he can bring a suit on the loan. Jacob 132=102 Ind Cas 178=A I R 1927 Bom note there is always a contract to repay a loan independently of the instrument. It is only the other contract relating to the rate of interest which can only be proved on reference to the instrument itself. Dhaneshwar v Ramrup 7 Pat 845=111 Ind Cas 482=9 Pat L T 171=A I R 1928 Pat 426, Chedu Singh v Jagannath, 26 A L J 416=108 Ind Cas 912=A I R 1923 All 297, Nanhu Singh v Girja Bux, 6 O W. N 649=119 Ind Cas 865=A I R 1929 Sind 399, Ram Sarup v Jasodha Kunwar, 9 A L J 72=13 Ind Cas 138=31 A 158. But where the money was borrowed simultaneously with the execution of a promissory note by the borrower and it appeared that the note was unstamped. Held that the promissory note could not be sued upon and that it was not a case in which the suit was maintainable on the basis of the original contract either as there was none. Tenkata v Mumtaz 6 Mys L J 157. If a hundi is an embodiment of the whole of the contract between the evidence and cannot be looked at for the the contract, other evidence to prove the allowed. But where the hundi embodies form

the original consideration, even when a pro note has been executed and when for any reason the document is excluded. The reasonings of the several decisions apply not merely to unstamped documents, but to any case in which reliance cannot be placed of, or a collateral. White, U B 1003 under section 31 of the Stamp Act, cannot according to ss 65, 91 of the Evidence Act, be given. Bakshi Ram v Kalka Ram, 42 P R 1895. A person who takes a promissory note on account of a pre-existing debt, may, if the document becomes inadmissible in evidence sue upon the original consideration, disregarding the instrument, provided he has not endorsed, lost or parted with the same. But if the original cause of action is the promissory note itself and does not exist independently of it, he cannot succeed without the instrument, according to s 91 of the Evidence Act, as the instrument is the only contract between the parties. Sheo Das v Kanhaya Lal 61 P. R 1893. Where a promissory note itself is the agreement of loan a plaintiff cannot sue on the original consideration and the promissory note must be proved. Ram Singh v Perumal, 11 S L R 150-32 Ind Cas 582, Bail Singh v Bhuguan, 7 Bur L T 95-93 Ind Cas 975-7 L B R 101.

When it is proved that certain hundis were renewed from time to time and the suit, but the r and could not be upon the hundis that were given prior to the last renewals and secondary evidence could be admitted to prove them. Jagan Prasad v India Natl, 12 A L J 361-86 A. 259-23 Ind Cas 589. Where the contract in case of a loan and a simultaneous promissory note has been reduced to writing in the form of the note which contains the definite terms of the contract, Courts cannot resort to inconsistent or consistent implied contracts in such cases, simply because the contract as entered in the promissory note cannot be admitted in evidence. Muthu Sasthigal v Viswanath Pandara, 14 M L T 520-(1914) M W N 58-26 M L J 19.

Any matter is required by law to be reduced to the form of a document. Oral Evidence can not be substituted for any instrument which the law requires to be in writing, such as records public and judicial documents, official information or examinations, deeds of conveyance of lands, Wills, other than nuncupative, promises to pay the debt of another person, etc., Taylor § 399. In all these cases the law having required that the evidence of the transaction should be in writing no other proof can be substituted for that, so long as the writing exists, and is in the power of the party. Ibid. Instances of this class in India are —

(1) Judgments and decrees in civil cases. Vide Or XX, and Or XXXI, of the Civil Procedure Code.

(2) Depositions of witnesses in civil cases, Vide Order XVIII of the Civil Procedure Code.

(3) Judgments and orders in criminal cases. Vide §§ 367, 424 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

(4) Deposition of witnesses in criminal cases. Cr Procedure Code, sections 354-362.

(5) Examination of an accused person. Cr Pro Code s 361.

(6) Confessions of an accused person. Cr Pro Code s 164.

(7) Lease of immovable property from year to year or for any term exceeding one year. Vide s 107 of T P Act. But this does not include an agreement to lease. Nanda v Sarat, 6 Ind Cas 563.

(8) Deed of mortgage when the principal money secured is one hundred rupees or upwards, other than a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds. Vide s 59 of the T P Act.

(9) Gift of immovable property. Vide s 124 of the T P Act.

(10) Sale of immovable property of the value of one hundred rupees and upwards. Vide s 54 of the T P Act.

91. (11) adred rupees
and upwar
(12) Rule s 111
of the Criminal Pro Code
(13) Acknowledgment of debt under s. 19 of the Limitation Act.
(14) Acknowledgment of debt by part payment of debt under s 20 of the Limitation Act
(15) Assignment of copy right. Rule s 5 of the Copy Right Act.
(16) Agreement without consideration (Rule s 25 of the Contract Act)

Box Pitumal v underlying s. 360
on the grounds of
on oath if the accuracy of the record of such examination is to be vouchsafed, particularly when it is to be utilised as a basis for a possible perjury in future for it would be unsafe to use against a complainant what on face of it purports to be only a substance and not the full version of his examination. But under the present state of the law, it cannot be contended that the substance of the oral examination is inadmissible in evidence under s 91 of the Evidence Act in proof of the statement therein contained Bhagirathi Bai v Emperor, 89 Ind. Cas. 713-26 al
f a re,
be
a ut
ir-

able. Queen v Nga, L B R (1872-1892), 572

Mortgage : When in a suit for redemption of a mortgage the existence of the mortgage possession on the strength ground of a contract of sale evidence to rebut the existence of such a contract. Held also that a pycet paing which reported an actual sale could not be considered as a document recording the terms of a contract for the purpose of section 91 of the Evidence Act. Maung Ain v Maung Sun, 5 Rang 679. Where on the back of a mortgage deed an endorsement of the payment was made and it was also added that the mortgages were extinguished, the endorsement requires registration. But oral evidence is admissible to prove the payment of mortgage amount, apart from the endorsement. Labhu Ram v Sazaur, 100 Ind. Cas 129-A I R 1927 Lab 237. If transfer and have an account taken as to what was due on the mortgages

)-A I R 1926
contract relating to ment, no evidence
document itself
Where a mortgage
stantial evidence

such as recitals in deeds referring to the mortgage, extracts from account books and by a transfer of a share of the mortgage Held that the written per mensem compoundable yearly and the defendant alleged in a suit on the the interest agreement

 of Abdul a mortgage
 as produced,
 transaction.

Maung Po v. Ma Le, 3 Bur L J 238—84 Ind. Cas 468—A I R. 1923 Rang.
 102 A mortgage which ought to have been by a registered instrument cannot be so proved by other forms of evidence Maung Tin v Maung Khan, Rang 441—A I R 1925
 title deed, in the open to the plaintiff
 document was depo

But as the defendant executed a document in writing the Court must refer to it in order to ascertain what the contract was Chunilal Lal v Vital Das, 24 Bom.
 L R 502—68 Ind Cas. 1005—A I R 1922 Bom 440 According to section 91 of the Evidence Act, the terms of a mortgage can only be proved by the production of the mortgage deed or of secondary evidence of its contents, in case it is shown to be lost or destroyed, ment fails to produce it after notice 1907, 4th Qr Evidence 13, Fateh Sing Samandar, 276 P L R 1913—20 In of transaction completed independently of them and not embodying terms of

 evidence
 at where it
 nature of the transaction Holka v Nanupan, A I R 1932 All 259—1932 A L J 101.

Sale Where property is the document cannot be relied up be referred to for the purpose, ween the parties and to prove delivery of possession To such a case this section does not apply Keshwar Mahton v Sheonandan, 10 Pat L J 449—A I R 1929 Pat 620 An unregistered sale deed can not be made basis for suit for specific performance as if it were merely document creating right to obtain another document Duan v Guba Chan, A 227 Section 49 of the Registration Act 17 of that Act and s 91 of the Evidence Act an unregistered document, which is being given in evidence as to the Pe v Maung Sein, 7 R 411—A I R evidence of the terms of a dispositi applicable to both classes of documents mentioned in section 91 Consequently

91. to take effect for want of registered conveyance Mg Myat v Ma Dun, 3 Bur. L J 78-81 Ind Cas 857-A I R 19'4 Rang 214 Where unregistered deed of sale is inadmissible in evidence other evidence of the contract of sale is inadmissible Parmeshri v Autar Singh, 3 Lah L J 173; Baggu v Tara Singh, 5 P L R 1919 So also where an agreement to relinquish ex proprietary rights which should be in writing and registered was not executed, held that oral evidence was not admissible regarding the agreement Ram Nath v Special Manager, 12 L R 1 Rev The plaintiff can rely upon an oral sale accompanied by delivery of possession in a case where a sale deed was executed in evidence

Ma Anas Paul, 34

property under a receipt the production of evidence with regard to section 91 of the Evidence Act Safar Ali v Mohesh, 23 C. L J. 122-34 Ind Cas 956 After acknowledging the receipt of consideration in the deed of sale, a vendor is not estopped from showing that he had not actually received the consideration stated in the deed Puthi v Nand Kishore, 25 Ind Cas. 27.

Deposition Since the act of deposing is a physical act which can always be proved by any one who has heard the statement being made, the fact of deposing might be proved by any one who has seen and heard the witness Ganapathi v Sakharayappa, 115 Ind Cas 140-A I R 1929 Mad 187. But under Order 18 rule 5, C P Code, it is necessary that the deposition of a witness in an appealable case, in order to bind him to the statement recorded therein, should be read over to him This provision is mandatory and not directory. The omission to do so renders the deposition inadmissible in evidence against him on his subsequent trial for perjury Section 91 of the Evidence Act excludes

or 16
17 18 19 20 21
22
23 24
25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35 36 37 38
39 40 41 42
43 44
45 46 47 48
49
50 51 52 53
54
55
56 57 58 59 60
61
62
63
64
65
66
67
68
69
70 71
72 73
74
75 76
77
78
79 80
81
82 83
84
85
86 87
88 89 90
91 92
93
94
95
96
97
98
99 100
101
102
103
104
105
106
107
108
109
110
111
112 113
114
115
116
117
118
119
120 121 122
123
124 125 126
127 128
129
130
131 132
133
134 135
136
137
138
139
140 141 142
143 144 145 146
147 148 149
150 151 152
153
154 155 156 157 158
159
160 161 162 163 164
165 166
167
168 169
170
171 172 173
174 175
176 177
178
179 180 181 182
183
184
185
186
187
188 189 190
191
192 193
194 195
196
197
198
199 200 201
202
203 204
205
206 207 208 209
210 211
212 213 214
215
216
217 218 219
220
221
222
223
224
225
226 227
228 229
230 231
232 233 234 235
236
237 238 239
240
241
242
243 244
245 246
247
248
249 250 251
252 253 254 255 256
257
258 259
260 261
262
263 264
265
266 267
268 269
270
271 272
273 274
275
276
277
278
279 280
281 282
283 284
285
286
287
288 289
290 291
292
293
294 295 296
297
298
299
300
301 302 303 304
305
306
307
308 309
310
311 312 313
314 315
316
317
318
319
320
321 322
323
324 325
326
327
328
329
330
331
332
333
334
335
336 337 338
339 340
341
342 343
344 345
346 347 348 349
350 351
352
353 354
355
356
357
358
359 360 361
362
363
364 365
366
367
368 369 370
371
372 373 374
375
376 377
378
379
380
381 382
383
384
385 386 387
388
389
390
391
392
393
394
395
396 397
398 399 400
401
402
403 404
405
406
407 408
409 410
411 412
413
414
415 416 417
418
419
420
421
422
423 424
425 426 427
428 429 430 431
432 433
434
435
436
437
438
439
440
441
442 443
444
445
446
447
448 449
450
451
452
453 454 455 456
457 458
459
460
461 462
463 464
465
466
467
468 469 470
471 472
473
474 475
476 477
478
479
480
481 482 483
484 485 486
487
488
489
490 491
492 493
494
495
496
497
498
499 500 501 502 503 504
505
506
507
508
509
510
511 512
513
514
515 516
517
518
519 520 521 522
523 524 525
526
527
528
529
530 531 532
533
534 535 536
537
538
539
540
541
542 543 544
545
546 547 548 549
550
551 552 553
554 555
556 557
558 559
560
561 562
563
564
565
566
567
568 569 570
571
572 573 574
575
576
577
578
579 580 581
582
583
584 585 586
587
588
589
590 591
592
593
594
595
596
597
598
599
600 601
602 603
604
605
606 607
608
609
610
611
612 613
614
615
616
617
618 619
620 621 622
623 624
625
626 627
628
629
630 631
632 633 634 635
636
637
638
639
640 641
642 643
644 645
646
647
648
649 650
651
652
653 654 655
656
657 658
659 660 661 662
663
664 665
666
667
668
669
670 671
672
673
674 675
676
677
678
679
680 681
682 683
684 685
686
687
688 689 690
691
692
693
694
695
696
697 698
699
700
701
702
703
704
705
706
707
708 709 710
711 712
713 714
715
716
717
718 719 720
721 722
723 724 725
726 727
728 729
730 731
732
733 734
735
736 737 738
739
740
741 742
743
744 745 746 747 748 749
750
751
752
753
754
755
756 757 758 759
760
761 762
763 764
765
766
767
768
769
770
771
772
773
774
775
776 777 778
779
780 781 782 783 784
785 786
787 788 789 790 791
792
793 794 795 796
797
798
799 800
801
802
803 804 805 806 807
808
809
810
811 812
813
814 815
816
817
818
819
820 821
822 823
824
825 826
827 828 829
830 831
832
833 834 835
836
837 838
839
840
841
842
843
844
845 846
847 848
849
850
851 852 853 854
855
856
857
858
859 860
861 862
863
864 865 866
867
868 869 870 871 872 873
874
875
876
877 878
879 880 881
882 883
884
885 886
887
888
889 890
891 892
893
894
895 896
897 898 899
900 901
902
903
904
905 906
907 908 909 910
911
912
913
914
915 916
917
918
919 920
921
922
923 924
925 926
927
928
929
930
931
932
933
934 935
936 937
938
939 940
941 942
943 944
945 946 947
948
949 950
951
952 953
954
955
956
957
958
959 960 961 962
963 964
965
966 967
968
969 970
971 972
973 974
975
976 977 978 979
980
981
982 983
984
985
986 987 988
989 990 991
992
993 994
995
996
997
998
999
1000

recognition made is the only admissible proof of what was said, but in a trial, the Magistrate need not generally record the evidence, and where no obligation is laid upon the Judge or presiding officer by law to reduce depositions or statements to writing, they may be proved by the presiding officer or by persons who heard them, in order to establish the fact that they were made Howard v Rustamji, Rat Un Cr C 334 The accused was charged in the constable in held, that the writing, was

as to such statement
the present before his memory

the oral evidence of the contents of the accused's deposition at the trial before the Magistrate was inadmissible under this section Queen Empress v Bapu Nawari, Rat Un Cr C 401 Under section 91 of the Evidence Act the document embodying the deposition is the only evidence of the statement charged having been made under section 80 of the same Act, it is admissible only when it was taken in accordance with law Kadir Pakiri v. Emperor, 18 Cr L J. 966-42 Ind Cas 326.

caused before
Bom. L. R. compromise
s nine, seven and admitted
he denied the
and proved the
but a confession
been recorded
ar being recorded
when departmental enquiry was going on was not a matter required by law to be in writing, and section 91 of the Evidence Act had no application. The Magistrate therefore was competent to prove the confession. Haydar Razvi v. King Emperor, 12 A. L. J 306-36 A 222=15 Cr L J 569-25 Ind. Cas 321. Where statements made by an accused person are inadmissible in evidence, secondary evidence of the contents of those statements is inadmissible also under this section. Queen Empress v. Viran, 9 M 224=2 Weir 125; Reg. v. Bai Ratan, 10 B H C 166. The confession of an accused person made to a Magistrate holding an enquiry is a matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document within the meaning of section 91 of the Evidence Act, and no evidence can be given of the terms of such a confession, except the record, if any, made under s 364 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. King Emperor v. Gulabu, 11 A. L. J 286=14 Cr L J 211=19 Ind Cas 507=35 A 260.

Acknowledgment of debt. Secondary evidence of the contents of an acknowledgment, used to keep alive a cause of action beyond the ordinary period of limitation, can be given, where the original is proved to have been lost or destroyed, the effect of paragraph 2 of section 19 of the Limitation Act of 1877 not being absolutely and always to exclude secondary evidence in such a case. Para 2 of the above section belongs to that branch of the law of evidence contained in section 91 of the Evidence Act. Shambu Nath v. Ram Chandra Saha, 12 C 267. Section 19 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) says clearly that oral evidence of the contents of an acknowledgment may not be received; nor has the Act made any saving of acknowledgments received or given back before the Act came into operation. Zulnissa v. Molidev, 12 B 268.

Search list. A search list is not evidence of the facts stated therein and this section, therefore has no application to it. It is simply a declaration, not on oath or affirmation or subject to cross examination, made by a police officer and the person's presence at the search that certain formalities were observed and certain events took place. Oral evidence may, therefore, be given as to what took place at the time of the search. Public Prosecutor v. Saralu Chennaya, 2 Weir 776. This section, presupposes that, where a certain matter is required by law to be reduced to writing the writing is itself evidence of the matter so reduced, and the section does not apply if the writing is not evidence of the matter. A search list is not evidence of the matter stated therein and it does not therefore exclude oral evidence of such matter. Public Prosecutor v. Sarabu, 33 M 413=8 Ind Cas 808=21 Cr L J 716. The search list prepared under s 103 Criminal Pro Code, is proper evidence of the matters which it should contain, viz the properties found and the place where they were found. In re Mammadi, 2 Weir 47=2 Weir 515. The provisions of this section do not apply to the case of a search list prepared under s 103 of the Criminal Procedure Code, In re Solai Nadick, 8 Ind Cas 173=21 M L J 281=11 Cr L J 576.

Application of section 91 to an oral statement made by a witness to a Police officer. "In discussing the non applicability of section 91 of the Evidence Act to an oral statement made by a witness to a police officer and entered by him in his special diary I shall show that the distinction between the oral

Procedure prohibits the use of oral statements made by a witness to a gating officer and that is the point in question. In the 91 of the Indian Evidence Act has no application to an oral to an investigating police officer, for it is not a matter, which is required by law to be reduced to the form of document (see Reg v Ulam Chand, 11 B H C R 120 and Empress v Kali Churn, 8 C 151). In the third place the entry in the diary of the police officer, correctly speaking, is not the statement either oral or written by the witness for any legal purpose. It is by habit of thought with the depositions of witnesses statement made by a witness by the way in ordinary parlance. This calls for speech and writing are two distinct objective entities perceptible by two different senses. Speech is heard by the ear and writing is seen by the eye. A deaf person is not a possible witness to a speech nor a blind person to a writing. Both are means for expressing ideas. A may state orally that a certain event happened or may write that it happened, but in order to constitute the oral or the written statement of A to be his act in the eye of the law it must have been made with a consenting mind as his own juristic act. A making an oral statement within the hearing of B C and D the oral statement of it under section 8, illustration (c) of the Evidence direct ev

and so

writing

made by A, in the presence of B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, J, K, L, M, N, O, P, Q, R, S, T, U, V, W, X, Y, Z, is not allowed to deemed to represent his own oral statement and his own juristic act' Per Karamat Husain J in Rustam v King Emperor, 7 A L J 168 (481)

Exception 1

showing that the p

involves two element

such action, or, as the first element alone is mentioned as essential. Greenl Ev § 38(a) This presumption is based on the maxim omnia presumuntur rite esse acta, that is that will be presumed to have been done which ought to have been done. The general rule is that where the contents of a writing are desired to be proved, the writing itself must be produced, or its absence is sufficiently accounted for before other evidence of its contents can be admitted. Greenl Ev § 563 (a)

For sin

turbed

general,

are pro

the offic

arises

partly to

366, M

Cross v

Campb 131, R v Ireland, 3 Campb 432, Greenl Ev § 563 (g)

Will annexed when no executor is therein appointed or the appointment of executor fails), or other proof tantamount thereto of the admission of the Will

in the Probate Division is legal evidence of the Will in any question respecting personality. William on Executor, 11th Ed. 206. It can only be granted to an executor. Behary Lal v. Jaggo Mohan, 4 C. 1. Probate of a Will can not be refused on the ground simply that it is what lawyers in ancient time called "inofficious" Rammal v. Kalalkola, 22

Under this exception the contents of a Will may be proved by the probate. Section (XXXIX of 1925) lays down that probate of Will from the death of the testator, and rend the executor as such

madans as well as to the
do not belong to the P do not live within the loc
the High Courts of Ju

the executor by virtue of the Will, not of the probate. The Will gives property to the executor; the grant of probate is the method which the law specially provides for establishing the Will. So long as the probate exists it is effectual for that purpose. Kamal Lochun v. Nitruttun, 4 C 560 (362). The law on the subject is the same as in England. In re Ezekiel Joshua Abraham, 21 B 189. Probate is an evidential ceremony. Smith v. Miller, 1 F R 180, Ganapathi Iyer v. Siv mahi, 36 M 375, Mathuradas v. Goluddas, 10 B 468; Jehanger v. Kulubai, 27 B 281; Bai Harkai v. Manellal, 12 B 621. The probate is only conclusive as to the appointment of executors and the validity of the contents of the Will. Hormusjee v. Bai Dhanabai, 12 B 161, Whicker v. Hume, 7 H L C 124, Braynath v. Anandamoyee, 8 B L R O C 208, Balgangadhar v. Sakwarbai, 26 B 762, Chintaman v. Ram Chandra, 34 B 589. The probate shows that it was duly executed by the executor. Bhabangana v. Harendia, 17 C. W. N. 445-16 Ind Cas 48

Explanation I. "The learning on this head" says Mr. Norton "must be sought for in work grant, or disposition

Take the familiar from a series of letters passing between the parties" Ailen v. Bennett, 3 Taunt. 169; Jackson v. Loue 1 Bing 9. Phillimore v. Barru 1 Camp 513, Wagner v. Wellington, 25 L J suffice if the contr party, provided su together. Spardlow .

a letter in which the with the letter. Pearce v. Gardner, (1897) 1 Q B 688, Taylor § 1026. It is sufficient if the contract can be plainly made out in all its terms from any writings of the party, or even from his correspondence. But it shall be collected from the writings, verbal testimony not being admissible to supply any defects or omissions in the written evidence. Boydell v. Drummond, 11 East 143, Green v. Ly § 268; Cox v. Middleton, 23 L J Ch 628, Ridgway v. Whorton, 21 L J Ch 46, Caddiel v. Skiamore, 3 Jur N S 1185

Telegrams "Telegraphic messages are instruments of evidence for various purposes and are governed by the same general rules which are applied to other writings. If there be any difference, it results from the fact that messages are first written by the sender, and are again written by the operator at the other end of the line, thus causing the inquiry which is the original. The original message, whatever it may be, must be produced, it being the best evidence, and in case of its loss, next best evidence the ork from which message, and the party sending

31. returned, are what would govern in construing the contract, provided both parties voluntarily and of their own accord sent their messages by the telegraph and thus adopted the company as their agent. So when a contract is made by telegraph, which must be in writing by the Statute of Frauds, if the parties authorize their agents, either in writing or by parol, to make a proposition on one side and the other party accepts it through the telegraph, that constitutes a contract in writing under the Statute of Frauds; because each party authorizes the acceptance in the

with a steel pen an inch long attached to an ordinary penholder, or whether it has a pen or a copper wire a thousand miles long. In either case the thought is communicated to the paper by use of the finger resting upon the pen, nor does it make any difference that in one case common record ink is used, while in the other case a more subtle fluid, known as electricity, performs the office. We know that by the admirable system regulating the government of the telegraphic companies, the original despatch is preserved and may be at all times procured for the proper purposes. The paper filed at the office from which the message is sent is of course the original, and that which is received by the person to whom it was sent purports to be a copy. If the despatch is sought to be used in evidence the original must be proved and its execution proved precisely as any other instrument.

in the same mode, before the copy can be received. H 488, Lurr Jones § 53. By the decision of the communication sent in or the one received is to be deemed the original depends upon which party is responsible for its transmission, in other words, upon the question for whom the telegraph company is agent. If there is but a single communication, the despatch as delivered at the place of destination is the best evidence. In such case the telegraph company is the sender's agent, but if the message were sent in response to a request by letter to telegraph a reply, it appears to us that the company would be the receiver's agent and the despatch as handed for transmission the original. And generally in controversies arising between sender and the receiver, when the

the message
by telegraph
the point
for transmission. Burr Jones § 210.

Broker's
negotiation, as in ness books and
of the transaction
and that which Sales § 276. A two parties (Sto frequently acts

a proxy, a factor agent, but with this difference that the broker being employed by persons who have opposite interests to manage, he is as it were agent for both the one and the other to negotiate the commerce or affair in which he concerns himself. Thus his agreement is twofold and consists in being faithful to all the parties in execution of what every one of them entrusts him with. (Dumas, Et c. 1, tit 17, cited in story on Agency, p 28, in notes) But primarily he is deemed merely the agent of the party by whom he is originally employed. To make the other side liable to pay him brokerage, it must, we think, be shown that he has been employed by such party to act for no parol evidence is admissible, but if they intend only to reduce into writing fact, then I think they are entitled to give did not intend to reduce into writing exchanged, as it usually intended that these notes should constitute the whole of the contract? I think not. Mr. Benjamin in his work on the law of 'sales' lays down as the result of the authorities that the bought and sold notes do not constitute the contract. I think this proposition is clearly borne out by the case of Scrimgeour v Archibald, 20 L J Q B 529-17 Q B 115 [See especially the decision of Mr Justice Erle in that case] and also by the case of Porton v Crofts, 33 L J C P 189. In both these cases the distinction between making a contract and a memorandum showing that the contract has been made is pointed out. The result of those cases is that broker's notes as a memorandum may satisfy the Statute of Frauds but not exclude parol evidence. In Clarton v Shaw, 9 B L R 252, Sir Richard have been furnished the plaintiff Durga Prosad v Bhajan Ah, discussion as regards the evi defen

 as having been made between a third person and the defendant. In a suit

Court as to whether the mistake in the sold note was a bar to the plaintiff's suit for damages on the contract. Held that there was a contract between the parties for breach of which the plaintiff could sue for damages. Mahomed Bhoy v Chatterput, 20 C 854. In Ah Sham Shole v Moothua Chetty 4 C W N 453-27 C 403 (P C), a contract was made through a broker for the purchase of a quantity of paddy at a settled price. The bought and sold notes were in taken with the wrote thereon it if wet. The ion until after of yellow rice ondent sued for Explanation II Where a document is executed in several parts, each part is primary evidence of the document. Where a document is executed in terms (a) of re a document

Nort Ev 269

 as for instance,
 then contract,

etc., (Sreejully v. Loharam, 7 W. R. C. R. 384), it relates to some other independent money [Illustration receipt Smith & J. attract or a grant or tion and it does not Loharam, 80 Ind Cas which is inadmissible in prove discharge by pay- a document relied on, eds is held to constitute inadmissible in evidence inadmissible to prove of the Evidence Act no 41 M. L. J. 297 A.

and by this section to z, or by action, and co inadmissible in evidence, Tansittart, A. W. N., require to be n for a contract at Chandra v ere a receipt for amount can be proved ahundi by virtue of section 91 of the Evidence Act Chhutan v Mul Chand 8 P. R. 1917=23 P. W. R. 1917, see also Sharaf Ali v Jogandar 93 P. R. 1916

Existence as distinguished from terms of contracts, or of a grant or any other disposition of property Extrinsic evidence is sometimes admissible to evidence shall be given in proof of the terms of such a contract, grant or disposition of property except the document itself. This however refers only to the method of proof of the terms of contract, grant or disposition of property, and this being so, the induced in proof of the I R. 1922 P. 222 The oral evidence, although be proved for want of (sh) 43=61 Ind Cas. been a writing is not produced, section 91 of the Evidence Act unlike as in the case of documents required to be in writing only bars proof of the terms of the

there be any. Nago v. Tukaram, 49 Ind. Cas. 843. Where the plaintiff in a suit for rent showed that the suit was not based exclusively on a Kabuliyat executed by the defendant, but also on the collection of rent, and the plaintiff did not produce the Kabuliyat, but filed collection papers to prove that the defendant was holding at the rate claimed by the plaintiff in the year, collection papers were admissible in evidence, as they were not put in proof of the terms of the Kabuliyat, and section 91 of the Evidence Act did not apply. A ruyat

3 year Gour S
d deed cannot properties claim

joint properties

Ind. Cas 83

of the contract.

the parties sign

case must be decided upon its own facts, and the real question is whether a document in question is a true award of arbitrators, or merely a deed of partition by the parties themselves disguised in the form of an award in order to escape the only evidence

document itself,

in proving aliunde

, plaintiffs could

partition Sukh

Dial v Mani Ram, 29 P R 1915=27 Ind Cas 489=29 P R. R 1916.

432; R v Langton, 2 Q B D 296; Phup Ev. p 500. The fact of birth, baptism, marriage, death, or burial, may be proved by parol testimony, "though a narrative or memorandum of these events may have been entered in registers which the law required to be kept." The reason for the above is that the existence or contents of these registers form no part of the fact to be proved, and the entry is no more than a collateral or subsequent memorial of the fact, which may furnish a satisfactory and convenient mode of proof, but can not exclude other evidence, though its non-production may afford ground for scrutinizing such evidence with more than ordinary care. Jivandas v Francis, 7 B H C R 45 p 63, Evan v Morgan, 2 C & J 453, R v Ahson, R & R. 190; Lady Limerick v Lord Limerick, 32 L J P & M 22; Taylor Vol I 5th Ed. 413.

92. When the terms of any such contract, grant or other disposition of property, or any matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, have been proved according to the last section, no evidence of any oral agreement

Exclusion of evi dence of oral agree
ment

or statement shall be admitted, as between the parties to any such instrument or their representatives in interest, for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to, or subtracting from, its terms.

Proviso (1).—Any fact may be proved which would invalidate any document, or which would entitle any person to any decree or order relating thereto such as fraud, intimidation, illegality, want of due execution, want of capacity in any contracting party, * [want or failure] of consideration, or mistake in fact or law.

Proviso (2)—The existence of any separate oral agreement as to any matter on which a document is silent, and which is not inconsistent with its terms, may be proved. In considering

* The words "want or failure" were substituted for the words "want of failure" by s 11 of the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act, 1872 (18 of 1872).

2. whether or not this proviso applies, the Court shall have regard to the degree of formality of the document.

Proviso (3).—The existence of any separate oral agreement, constituting a condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation under any such contract, grant or disposition of property, may be proved.

Proviso (4).—The existence of any distinct subsequent oral agreement to rescind or modify any such contract, grant or disposition of property, may be proved, except in cases in which such contract, grant or disposition of property is by law required to be in writing, or has been registered according to the law in force for the time being as to the registration of documents.

Proviso (5).—Any usage or custom by which incidents not expressly mentioned in any contract are usually annexed to contracts of that description, may be proved.

Provided that the annexing of such incident would not be repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the express terms of the contract.

Proviso (6).—Any fact may be proved which shows in what manner the language of a document is related to existing facts.

Illustrations

(a) A policy of insurance is effected on goods ‘in ships from Calcutta to London.’ The goods are shipped in a particular ship which is lost. The fact that that particular ship was orally excepted from the policy cannot be proved had always been regarded as part of the estate and was meant to pass by the deed cannot be proved

(d) A enters into a written contract with B to work certain mines, the property of B upon certain terms. A was induced to do so by a misrepresentation of B’s as to their value. This fact may be proved

(e) A institutes a suit against B for the specific performance of a contract, and also prays that the contract may be reformed as to one of its provisions, as that provision was inserted in it by mistake. A may prove that such a mistake was made as would by law entitle him to have the contract reformed

(f) A orders goods of B by a letter in which nothing is said as to the time of payment, and accepts the goods on delivery. B sues A for the price. A may show that the goods were supplied on credit for a term still unexpired

(g) A sells B a horse and verbally warrants him sound. A gives B a paper in these words:—“Bought of A a horse for Rs 500.” B may prove the verbal warranty

(h) A hires lodgings of B, and gives B a card on which is written—“Rooms, Rs 200 a month.” A may prove a verbal agreement that these terms were to include partial board

A hires lodgings
up by an attorney,
A may not prove that

(4) A applies to B for a debt due to A by sending a receipt for the money. B keeps the receipt and does not send the money. In a suit for the amount A may prove this.

(5) A and B make a contract in writing to take effect upon the happening of a certain contingency. The writing is left with B, who sues A upon it. A may show the circumstances under which it was delivered.

Principle. The principle underlying this section is the same as that underlying single memorial

from scattered parts.

Consequence of this is that its scattered parts, in their former and incoherent shape, have no longer any legal effect, they are replaced by a single embodiment of the act. In other words, when a legal act is embodied in a single memorial, all other utterances of the parties on that topic are legally immaterial for the purpose of determining what are the terms of their act. Wigmore § 2425. So there is a general rule sometimes spoken of as the "oral evidence rule," which declares evidence, the effect of which is to vary the terms of a written instrument, or to change, cut down, or alter the effect thereof to be inadmissible. Mc the Courts to defeat this object. When persons express the agreements, in indefiniteness, and to understanding, which so fits. Written contracts.

disinclination to disturb the condition of act of the parties. The general rule, therefore, precludes the introduction of testimony to show that the parties meant other than they have said in the writing itself. But it sometimes happens that writings are procured to be executed by fraud, or do not contain all the agreements between the parties, having been used only to cover certain matters, while others are left to oral understanding or there may be other circumstances which make it unjust to These cases are usually strictly such. McKelvey's

the writing, it is conclusively presumed between themselves and their privies that they intended the writing to form a full and final statement of their intentions and one which should be placed beyond the reach of future controversy by bad faith or treacherous memory. Phelp I Lord Bacon said "The law will not countenance which is of the higher account, with account in law." (Bacon's Maxims, Reg matters in writing made by advice as import the certain truth of the agreement

1 P & D 117, Davis v Symond 1 Cox Cc 403, sometimes on the doctrine of estoppel, for in each the party is precluded by his acknowledgment in writing of what he so acknowledges—in estoppel however it is a matter of another fact as to where and in what sources and materials are to be found the terms of legal act.

92. Wigmore § 2425. Gulson also remarks that the rule is one of substantive law directed not against oral evidence as an improper mode of proving the contract, etc., but (1) against such evidence as an improper mode of making it and (2) against extrinsic facts (however proved) being received to affect the meaning of written instrument. Gulson §§ 418-54; see also Thayers' Pre Tr Ev. 401, 17 Harv L Rev 240.

Scope of the section. When the terms of a contract, grant or other disposition of property have been reduced to writing by the parties, it is to be considered as containing all those terms, and therefore there can be between the parties and their representatives . . . of the contract, grant . . . of the writing. The . . . to be reduced to the form . . .

In Pulcring v Douson, 4 Taunt 779, 786, Gibbs J said. "I hold that if a man brings me a horse and makes any representation whatever of his quality and soundness, and afterwards we agree in writing for the purchase of the horse, that shortens or corrects the representations, and whatever terms are not contained in the (written) contract do not bind the seller, and must be struck out of the case." So "where the whole matter passes in . . . be taken together as forming part and parcel . . . can . . .

2 B . . . Abbott C J in Kain v Old, Knight v Barber, 16 M & W 66, says Lord Blackburn in Angell v Dule, 5 L R 1 Rep N S 320, "that, where there is a contract in writing, it should not be added to, if the written contract is intended to be the record of all the terms agreed upon between the parties. Where there is a collateral contract, Wigmore § 2425 . . .

that that writing . . . 4 H & N 1, 7 . . . ere is a deed in deed" Irisham v . . . contract, and put it . . . argain." Per Martin . . . ca v Blake, 13 M . . .

etc., is not governed . . . that oral evidence . . . provisions of this section . . .

"The language of this section is" says Mr Field "not quite free from ambiguity, the words 'No evidence of any oral agreement or statement shall be admitted' between the parties to any such instrument, etc., correspond with and have clear reference to the words 'contract, grant, or other disposition of property' in the beginning of the section; but their application to any matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document required by law to be reduced to writing be a . . . an oral statement appears to be admissible the writing in cases other than those in Field Ev 8th Ed 501. But according to Mr contradiction. Section 91 deals with three (1) contract, grant, or any other disposition . . . been reduced to the form of a document (2) contract . . . grant or any other dis . . . by law to be reduced to . . . such as deposition of . . . reduced to the form . . . so as to bring it under . . . an act involving . . .

single parties)
contracts,

been reduced to the form of a document by the parties, as well as those bilateral acts which the law requires to be reduced to the form of a contract. Therefore these acts or matters must be contracts, grants or other disposition of property. So this section does not include such matters which the law requires to be reduced to the form of a document which are not contracts, grants or other disposition of property. Woodroffe v Shil 611. The deposition of a witness does not fall within this section and oral evidence is admissible to contradict raised by section 80 is only a v p 611 Section 92 is also

s

act that a
in fact portion
of the transaction
of the transaction
towards reduced by the parties into writing, to ascertain the terms of the contract, but there was no evidence of any agreement by should be reduced into writing by the defendant, the contract is first concluded by parol and afterwards the paper is drawn up, which appears to have been meant merely as a memorandum of the transaction
the om
ed
of

the document 240 While on
by virtue of sec
being in force, bar ceases to operate and the Court can make enquiries, that bar of statutory prohibition no longer existing because of section 10 A of that Act Dada v Bhanu, 29 Bom L R 1419=105 Ind Crs 754=A I R 1927 Bom 627 This section merely prescribes a rule of evidence. It does not better the Court's power to arrive at the true meaning and effect of a transaction in the light of all the surrounding circumstances Munna v Naram, 107 Ind Crs 658 See also Baynath v Hayu Talley, 26 Bom L R 787=48 M L J 339 (P C) In a suit on promissory note, the defendant can prove a conclusion precedent to the attaching of any obligation by the promissory note was that there should under it unless there was a final balance against the defendant which he failed to pay. Bhoji v Krishori, 50 A 754=26 A L J 696 A lessee under a registered lease wanted to prove an oral agreement regarding his preferential right to purchase the leased property if it was brought to sale. The lease was silent on the point. Held that under s 92, evidence of I R 1929 Rang
written document
law for the time of Act applies that

s ble to show
Crs 897=

that one of the parties to the contract had acted as agent is admissible Lachomal neous oral evidence is
The parties must interest and compound interest and if they deliberately have chosen to use one expression they cannot be u v Ganpati, A I R 1931 Act it is immaterial whether subsequent to the disposi-

92. tion Gopala v Sankara, 1930 M W. N. 240=125 Ind. Cas 545 In the case of a covenant for title which is presumed to go with a sale under s 55 (27) of the T P Act a contract to the contrary cannot take the shape of an oral agreement since it would be inadmissible in evidence under s. 92 of the Evidence Act Mahammed Siddiq v Ind. Cas 165=A I R 1930 deduced between the parties to show that the document was not to take effect forth with as mentioned in the document but after the expiry of a certain period Parmesh-nara v Lachman, 129 Ind Cas 439=A I R 1930 All 824=1930 A L J 1066 In case of a deed of gift by husband to wife the husband can prove that the same is of a fictitious nature Mahommed v Sayed, A I R. 1931 Oudh 177=8 O W N 349

any

the re

consu

derati

agree

contract and such an agreement can be proved Irpan Ali v Jogendra, A. I R 1932 Cal 708=36 C W N 645=59 C 111. Oral evidence is not admissible to prove an agreement between mortgagor and mortgagee whereby a contract in the registered mortgaged bond was split up Ram Barman v Sanat Kumar, 25 C L J 24=44 C 162=21 C W N 740 Oral evidence is admissible to show that a mortgagee's possession of a certain plot was terminated by the payment of a certain amount of money Baid Ram v Tila Ram, 15 A L J to certain paddy to be divided Held, section 92, cl (2) of d not been divided 11a, 4 L W 329=34 and so far as the adjective law is concerned, the code to be followed but also as to the extent en the

England; and Courts of India are not justness statute law in the same way, as Courts of Equity of common law The effect of section 92 is it, by proof of an entirely different contemporaneous oral agreement, is not sound Guyarmal v Sitaram, 3 N L R 19 An acknowledgment is not a document contemplated in section 92 Chhedilal v Monohari, A I R 1930 Nag 298=26 N L R 320.

circumstance that some collection of the terms of a sole memorial of the There may have been an attempt to make the merely to furnish an aid other party's satisfaction tion. The essential idea remains for it, that the writing is something distinct from the transaction itself. Wigmore § 2429; Dahson v. Stark, 4 Esp. 163; S.

Parsons v. N. Zealand Co. (1901) 1 K. B. 543; Phip. Ev. 555 When the parties during their negotiations reach a final agreement, but provide therein that the terms shall be reduced to a single memorial, the failure to execute such an agreed memorial does not preclude resort to the prior negotiations to ascertain the true terms of the agreement until supplanted. referring to an

for the parties. McKelvey's Ev. § 297.

Partial integration; General test for applying the Rule; Collateral agreement. The most usual controversy arises in case of partial integration, where a certain part of a transaction has been embodied in a single writing, but another part has been left in some other form. Here obviously the rule against disputing the terms of the document will be applicable to so much of the transaction as is so embodied, but not to the remainder. It is of course may within the same half-hour sign articles of incorporation, authorize an overdraft, assign a mortgage and join in a committee's report to stockholders. Or a purchaser of land, negotiating with a broker, may at the same sitting accept a deed of grant of one piece of land and appoint the broker his agent in the purchase of another piece of land. These are clearly distinct, wholly distinct, and wholly distinct instances in which a negotiation concerns one general subject—such as the purchase of a single

"parts" of the same transaction, and therefore, if reduced to writing at all, must be governed by the same writing. In searching for a general test for 92,

in the co

The doc

be known that we know what there was to cover. The one is not which?

Now, such probably the writing was not intended for the negotiation. Wigmore § 2430. In Webb v. Balyby J said "Where there is a written agreement naturally to be expected that it will contain all if it is entirely silent as to the terms of quitting. the country as to that particular. If, however, it specifies any of those terms we must then go by the lease alone" Dickson v. Zuzima, 10 C. B. 602, 610. Where the writing covers only part of the transactions between the parties and there are oral agreements relating to the same subject, such agreements may be shown. If it appears that the parties did not intend the writing to embody all the transactions between them, the rule is that such transactions as do not purport to be covered by the document, but which supplement or complete it, may be proved. Here, again, there is no varying of the terms of a written instrument. It is only to be used to cover exception subsequent to the writing, as in Hobby v. Lord and Lord inference may be drawn from it.

It is also held for the purpose of adding to a deed a stipulation to which the parties did not intend by that deed to know the terms of a deed and satisfied by those means but the part to the terms which, though not applied in it, there is no reason why he that where no collateral agreement is shown, it is also held that the collateral oral agreement must have an independent consideration in order to be admissible. Coe v. Hobby, 72 N. Y. 141. As a principle of the law of contracts, it would seem that no collateral agreement would be of any effect in modifying the original unless there was a consideration to support it, and these decisions are therefore strictly logical. Mc Keehey's Ex § 296.

Parol evidence rule—Nature of. Notwithstanding the phraseology generally employed in the cases relating to what is called the "Parol Evidence" of them illustrate anything in the law cerned with questions about the legal effect the law, of requiring or agreeing upon a writing, or with the principles governing the construction of documents or the like; and not with merely evidential quality or operation of extrinsic facts, or any rules of law relating to these. As when it is said that parol evidence is not admissible

any other reason
is of it

in the other. Thayer
Cas. Et. 2nd Ed. 820.

As between the parties to the suit were not the parties to the contract, is testimony for the purpose of including parol contract, is of others Greenl. Ev. § 279. Holt v. Collyer, L. R. 16 Ch. D 718; Chemical E.

stranger to it, either party may show that the instrument does not speak the truth, and that the general rule does not apply as it does in cases where the controversy arise between the parties to an instrument which they have made the written memorial of their agreement Venable v. Thompson, 11 Ala. 147; Pawel v. Young, 51 Ala 518. Burr Jones § 44c

by the statutory restrictions 22 C W N. 257 (262) = 45 C. 320;
A. L. R 1929 R. 86; Annada v.
4 N. L R. 115; see also Jagat
Panchoo, 28 A. 473 = 3 A. L. J.
Memudar v. Collector of Gorakhpur 1930

2. the terms of a contract which have been reduced to the form of a document "as between the parties to any such instrument or their representatives in interest." In the case of 10 A 421 the words quoted above were construed as meaning between the parties to the instrument on both sides and not on one side only as between t

92; but it
the instrum
Pokai Gun
Madho, 10 A Srinivasa, 1
the parties t

not prevent the proof of a fraudulent dealing with a third person's property, or proof of notice that the property purporting to be absolutely conveyed in fact belonged to a third person, who was not a party to the conveyance. Maung Aun v Ma Shue La, (1911) 2 M W N 30=14 C L J 276 (P. C.)=13 Bom L R 797=1 A L J 1181. Sale deeds and mortgage deeds are essentially transactions

mortgagee
transaction
settlement b

that they agree to make provisions for certain relations or dependants does not make such persons parties to the instrument and oral evidence given by a person concerning maintenance allowance to

cannot be excluded by reason of section 92, Kua
partie
ve" documents between the contracting parties. Modiah v Vaidya, 9 Mys L J 203

Section 92 limits its operation to cases where the issue as to the real nature of the written transaction arises between the parties thereto or their privies. It leaves out cases of strangers to the instrument wishing to adduce extrinsic evidence in order to prove that the real transaction was different from what it purports to be. Saboji v Anand Singh, 101 Ind Cas 736; Mahomed Sultan Mohideen v Anthul, 101 Ind Cas 603=52 M L J 557, Ma Mi v Maung Aung, 111 Ind Cas 832=A I R 1928 Rang 244, Mahomed Ishaq v. Fahemunnessa, A I R 1928 Oudh 472=5 O W N 825, Maung Thein v. Maung Pyn 3 Rang 836=108 Ind Cas 734=A I R 1928 Rang 61, Narra v. Koganti, (1925) M W N 214=87 Ind Cas 246=A I R 1925 Mad 775=48 M L J 260; Hiraji v Vishnu, 1923 Bom 429, Bhullan v Kushi, 21 A L J 932; Jaram v. Rajnarain, 20 A L J 777, Sukumasi v Kalipada, 45 Ind Cas 13. If a father

be between the nominal purchaser and the vendor, and in cases of dispute between the nominal and the real purchaser, there being no writing between them, no difficulty can arise, under this section, in proving oral agreement. Laxmitai v Keshav, 18 Bom L R 134=33 Ind. Cas 396; see also Pathammal statement is admissible in such proceeding for the purpose of contradicting mortgagor was placed in possession of a part of the mortgaged premises, the income whereof was sufficient to wipe out the annual debt. Held that as the arrangement was not in supercession or even variation of the mortgage, oral evidence was admissible to prove the transaction. Ramaiatar v Tuls Prosad, 14 C L J. 507. The liability undertaken by the drawer and the acceptor of a bill of exchange is in different ways and are of section 132 of the preclude the acceptor of a bill from proving that he never received any consideration for the bill but that he accepted it only for accommodating the drawer or some other party. Pagose v The Bank of Bengal, 3 C. 174.

Extrinsic evidence to control document is inadmissible. Evidence of oral agreement between the parties to a written and registered document, distinctly adding to its terms, another term which had been antecedently agreed the defendants sought to show that the written contract was varied by adducing parol evidence as to the matter on which the document was silent. Held that such evidence was not admissible under section 92 of the Evidence Act. Jadu Ras v Bhubotaran, 17 C 173. The executants of bond as principals, are not competent. Saing v Nga Lu Aun bond are clear and it was an assignment. oral evidence of intention is not inadmissible deed or ascertaining the intention of the parties. L R 523-22 A 149-4 C W N 153

sure
Cas
inval

as to the consent of the donee of the life estate to such an arrangement. Held, that such oral evidence was clearly inadmissible. Nabooma v Khedar Hussain, 108 Ind Cas 637-A I R 1928 Mad 618. Contemporaneous oral agreement not to charge compound interest though bond may stipulate therefor and the fact of simple interest only being realised cannot entitle a party to vary effect of written contract. Abdul Aziz v Amanmu A I R 1925 Cal 276. Evidence of conduct of parties is inadmissible to contradict an unambiguous grant, Gopal v Ramadhar Singh, A I R 1925 Pat 228, see also Kesho v Thakur, A I R 1925 person under deed and on this section oral agreement till he got possession of the entire property is inconsistent with the terms of the deed it is not open to the executants to set up and prove an agreement that the rate of interest to be charged was lower than that agreed upon. Sukh Lal v

2. Murari, 95 Ind Cas 1019=A. I. R 1926 Oudh. 273 Evidence of subsequent oral agreement not to charge compound interest is inadmissible to vary the original contract which is a registered one Jogendra Nath v. Khoda Baksh, 1924 Cal 380, Abdul Aziz v. Amanmal, 78 Ind Cas 742=1925 Cal 276 An entry in certain account books evidenced a contract to sell goods and they were described as arriving by a certain ship Held that oral evidence cannot be let in to show that there was an agreement to deliver goods within a fixed time Firm of Juwango v. Firm of Mathabari, A I R 1924 Sind 127

In a suit on a joint and several promissory note payable on demand executed by A and B A creditor as security for B's oral agreement with C under the note in the

A
d
B 1
t
f
f
r
7
formed the foundation of the suit formed a completed contract, whilst the defendant vendor urged that it was only a provisional arrangement conditional to the preparation by a vakil of a formal document evidencing the contract held oral evidence to show what actually took place on the occasion when the parties entered into the agreement relied upon by the plaintiff is irrelevant and inadmissible Harichand v. Goind 44 M L J 608=47 B 335=28 C W N. 73=50 I A 25=37 C L J 440=(1923) P C 47. Where the terms of an proved the

the
s 19
Evidence of an oral agreement substituting a new executory contract in lieu of a decree is inadmissible Lachmi Das v. Babakali, 44 A 258=20 A L J 65=69 Ind Cas 990 It is not permissible to a person who wishes to impeach a

L R 239=66 Ind Cas 865 Where a promissory note is sought to be enforced according to its tenor, it is not open to the defendants, to let in evidence an alleged un-

of Oral
into
M nent arat
of a ira,
suit
eed nd
two ole
the

it by way of security for others cannot be tried or determined except so far as it affects the question of consideration Durgacharan v Laksh Naram, 47 Ind Cas 917. In a suit to recover possession of the properties conveyed under a sale deed, evidence was adduced to show that the parties to the document intended to give simple mortgage rights to the alleged purchaser for the sum which one had promised to pay to the creditors of the other party. Held that such oral evidence is clearly inadmissible to prove that a different mode of operation was the express terms of the promissory note be proved Muthu Eulappa v and it was sought to recited held that such tion Narra Reddiar v

-3 L W 589-35 Ind.

Cas 801

Where the terms of the mortgage contract are reduced as required by law to writing, an oral agreement varying those terms can not be admitted in evidence Muthu Kumar v Govinda, A I R 1932 Mad 218-35 M L W 145 where according to the terms of the registered mortgage deed the whole of the mortgage money is payable on demand with interest, evidence of a contemporaneous oral agreement between the parties that the amount would not be payable on demand but shall be accepted on instalments, is inadmissible under the express provisions of s 92 Mohammad v Kishori, A I R 1932 All 375-1932 A L J 414. But when a mortgage bond is silent as to how the money due on it is to be paid and the mortgagee executes a list bandi which merely provides that mortgagor is to pay the amount then due in certain instalments spread over a certain number of years with a proviso that in default of any list the entire amount under the mortgage bond would become due, the list bandi, shows the arrangement between the parties and does not alter or vary the terms of the mortgage bond and it is Ram, A I R 1932 Ca provided that each one of being one

Section 92
an v Sanat
be rent, it
t, has been raised, and any length of payment of a lesser rent will not help the tenant, Maharaja of Bobbili v Appala Naidu, (1916) M W. N 139-32 Ind Cas 703. Where in a suit by the payee of a Hundi against the drawer and the acceptor, the Hundi is silent as to interest, the plaintiff is entitled only to 6 per cent 2.

Evidence of a contem-
not admissible under 1 Pat L J. 71=35 Ind
ot one for satisfaction of the term

of the deed :

Muhammad

party to a written contract to prove a contract the terms of which are clearly inconsistent with terms of the written contract Baranashi v Lulla Mal, 29 Ind
Cas 950

Where a promissory note executed by defendants 1 and 2 contained an uncon- is not admis-
sible to be conditional on the variation of the contract clearly forbids evidence ble exceptions to the Narasimma
v Rav 336=18 Ind
Cas 696

Where the subject matter of an appeal is compromised by the parties by means of a written agreement, which recited that "all matters in dispute" was adjusted, it is not open to any of the parties to tender oral evidence of a separate agreement not therein as 400 bighas

was not the stated area within the specified boundaries Extrinsic evidence as to the negotiations which led up to construction of the lease Raja Durga N 66=19 C L J 95=11 A L J

sale deed recites as consideration a cash contract that the amount was really of the sale price is a term of the contract within the meaning of section 91 of the Evidence Act Evidence cannot be admitted to vary the provisions of the condition fixed for the same Adityam Ayar

M W N 847=25 M L J 632=21

to contradict or vary the express and un-ambiguous terms of a written instrument by reference to preliminary negotiations or previous conversations Sayid Abdullah v Sayid Basharat, 17 C. W.
N 233=13 M L T 182=(1913) M W N 131=35 A 48=17 C L J 312=23
M L J 91 (P C)

Oral evidence is not admissible to prove that a document which in terms is out an out gift was really meant to be donatio mortis causa Benode Kishore v Ashutosh Mukhopadhyaya 16 C W N 606=14 Ind
Cas 720

Oral evidence to prove that parties to a sale deed, which was duly executed and registered, subsequently rescinded it by mutual consent, is inadmissible under section 92 of the Evidence Act Byrakallu v. Veddula 15
Ind Cas 282

Oral evidence to show that one of the executants of a note of hand signed it only as a security and that his liability was only to the extent of standing as surety for a month is inadmissible under this section Hareh v Bishnu 8 C W N. 101

Neither a contemporaneous oral agreement nor the subsequent acts and conduct of the parties can be proved under this section to show that the contract was not intended to be performed Endla

mortgage, it is only agreed to
to be made by the mortgagee to the season's crop such agree-
as such, would be inadmissible

Act. Moran v. Mutu Bibee, 2 C 58 Under this section no oral evidence is admissible to show that certain deeds of sale are not deeds of sale, but deeds of gift. Rahman v. Elahi Baksh, 28 C 70 Where the plaintiff in a suit for specific performance of a contract to sell a certain share of a house, set out a written contract, and alleged that, on its having been subsequently discovered that the share was less than it was originally believed to be, the price was reduced by verbal agreement, held that the written contract must be taken as intact save as to the price, and that no evidence could be given by the defendants in contradiction of the other terms of the document. Brown v. Cutts, 5 C L R 487 Where a written instrument provides for a joint tenancy and joint contract by all the parties executing it to pay the whole rent of a village without any reference to the quantity of land in the holding of each, oral evidence is not admissible to show that separate specific contracts have been entered into by each of the parties, and it makes no difference that the evidence is put forward as evidence of a custom. Mr G Lee v Panchananda, 5 M H C R 135 Defendant was lessee under a joint lease by K and P, co owners of the premises Plaintiff having purchased an undivided moiety from P gave defendant notice to quit the moiety from the termination of the lease and sued for possession The defendant set up an oral agreement giving him an option of renewal of the lease, but it could not be proved as being instrument whose terms are in themselves clear and undoubted. Rambuddin v. Rames Sree Koonwar, W R 1864 Act X Rul 22 Bought and sold notes together may form the contract in accordance with the custom of merchants in Calcutta So, parol evidence was not admissible to vary or add to the terms of rent of a holding held under a registered lease, nor in the conduct of the leaseable to prove the habuhyat was granted partly in cash, and in kind was not duly um Held that oral evidence agreed to pay the price of the paddy at the current market rate, and not at the rate specified in the habuhyat, upon failure to deliver it duly. Godas v Sarju, 12 C L J 649-7 Ind Cas 842

S. 9

The Writing is really not the contract in writing, which purports to contract, may be produced, it is still

12. Cas 929, see also Woodroffe's Evidence 5th Ed p 613 But in a recent Allahabad case Ashworth J said - "The Appellant's counsel has referred to the following dictum in Woodroffe and Amir Ali's well known commentary, the Indian Evidence Act 'Though evidence to vary the terms of an agreement in writing is not admissible' In support of this, the appellant relies on Harris v. Rick namely, Harris v. Rick 6 El & Bl 370=25 L the dictum as stated

92 of Evidence Act. There is no authority for holding that evidence in any shape can be admitted for the purpose of showing that there was agreement at all or in other words, that a deed was meant to be inoperative" Lachmandas v Ramprasad, 49 A 680=A I R 1927 All 422 (424)=100 Ind Cas 1029=25 A L J 349, see also Gujar Mal v Sitaran, 3 N L R 19.

Cases where the oral evidence is admissible "The cases in which oral evidence when objected to is apart from fraud or mistake receivable to correct written instruments are cases where, for example, the evidence supplements but does not contradict the terms of the deed; or where the provisions of the deed leave the question doubtful whether merely a mortgage and not out and out sale was intended, or where the language sought to be explained in evidence is language in an ordinary conveyancing form not exhaustively accurate but

Instances of each of these will be found in Jurion v Personal Trang Chuen v Li Po Kiat, A I R 19 Where there was a mortgage by which a fixed rate of interest was agreed to be paid, and there was a contemporaneous oral agreement that the mortgagee should go into and be was reement.

written agreement, that it was merely a provision as to how the interest should be paid and that therefore the oral agreement was valid Brundaban v Unrao, A W N 1887, 61 In a suit for money due on a promissory note payable on demand the defendant pleaded a contemporaneous agreement in writing allowing agreed not to be executed against the judgment-debtors is not inadmissible by reason of the section Ganga v Ram Oudh, 113 Ind Cas 760=A I R 1921

the joint C) Oral which the under the settlement and future idence which shows that two documents executed and registered on the same day are

... hunt to leading evidence so as
 ... Ramlal, 25 A L J 723=103
 ... oral agreement providing for repayment of a mortgage debt from the usufruct of the mortgaged property may be proved. Such an arrangement does not amount to a lease nor does it constitute an usufructuary mortgage. It is only a means of discharging the debt by putting the simple mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged property.
Nookamma v Dharmayya 53 M. L J 863 This section prohibits only the proof of any contemporaneous oral agreement between the parties in variance of the terms of the document. Where the father purchased certain properties and took a sale deed in joint names of his two minor sons and subsequently the individual share of each of the vendees was sought to be proved by evidence relating to the intention of the father. Held that section 92 of the Evidence Act was not a bar to the admissibility of such evidence as the sale-deed was silent regarding the share of two vendees. Mohammed v Anthil, 101 Ind Cas 653=52 M L J 557=38 M L T (H C 247) In the case of an outright sale by registered deed, an independent contract to re-sell either orally by unregistered deed can be proved, but where the contract is not an independent transaction but forms part and parcel of the original transaction and together constitutes a mortgage, such contract cannot be proved. If the facts of each other,

 proved for want
 of independent of each deed is one of an outright Ma Nan v U Yang, 8 Bur.

314 There is nothing to prevent the parties from entering into an oral agreement for the settlement of decrees for money. They have the same freedom to do so as to make narrative of contract by an oral agreement modifying the previous written contract so long as the contract is not required to be in writing and registered. It cannot be said that the judgment debtor selling upon a verbal agreement by the decree-holder to accept some variations is Evidence Act. Ma Shue v Mang San,
 Oral evidence to prove that the def plaintiff on the understanding that it sh when the liability arose upon his part to restore to the plaintiff his share of the capital is inadmissible. Sheo Prasad v Gobind 49 A 464=100 Ind Cas 332= 25 A L J 305 A I R 1927 All 292 This section is no bar to the admission of oral evidence of circumstances to show the relation of the written language out of the rents for a certain charity, to pay also the cost and credit the balance of the rents towards the mortgage debt. The plaintiffs alleged that the defendant failed to pay the said sum of Rs 200 and the cost and that the mortgage debt had been admissible and that section case because it was not oral mortgage deed at all. Ram 85=107 Ind Cas 808=A I that the amount of Rs 500 menssem. The question was whether interest should be at one rupee per menssem or only one rupee for Rs 500 per menssem. Held that oral evidence was admissible to prove that the parties intended that interest should be paid at 1 rupee per cent per menssem, under proviso 1 to section 92 of the Evidence Act.

Venkataramappa v Rama Setty, 3 Mys L W 146 Oral evidence is admis-

2. sible to prove a discharge and satisfaction of a mortgage bond Krishnaji v Kashirao, 90 Ind Cas 459 A recital on a sale deed that there is no incumbrance or that the vendor has a good title to convey is not one of the terms of succeeded to the estate of their father made an oral partition of the same and also arranged orally to extinguish their mutual rights of survivorship It appeared from the evidence that two lists had been drawn up of the properties as divided and mention was made in those of the right of survivorship having been extinguished The lists were not produced but oral evidence was let in regarding the same Held section 92 of the Evidence Act did not apply and the oral evidence was admissible Delakanta v Sundarasin Roie, 48 M 933=22 L W 398=(1923) M W N 643=A I R 1925 Mid 1267=49 M L J 266

Even where an agreement is silent as to the consideration under this section oral evidence is admissible to determine what the consideration was Pameshwar das v Neu Jooria, 91 Ind Cas 371=A I R 1926 Sind 202 This section has no application where evidence of the conduct of the parties and their rights of the various members is let in to prove partition by the defendant in a suit Ramuchetti v Panchammal 92 Ind Cas 1028=A I R 1926 Mad 407 Where a promissory note is executed by two persons, oral evidence is admissible rely for the other Moolji v

This section does not prohibit recharge of a debt secured by a 710=96 Ind Cas 11=A. I R

1926 Cal 906

by the release to

Mahim v Ram

suit it is open to the mortgagor to prove that the mortgagee had been satisfied not merely by payment in full of the amount which was due thereon but by part payment and remission of the balance Bhaba Sundari v Ramkamat 41 C L J 269=A I R 1927 Cal 27 See also Ramchandra v Kailash, 1931 Cal 667=58 C 532 An oral agreement between the lessor and the lessee that the lessor should give credit for certain sums for having cut certain trees is admissible as the transaction is a mode of payment or a discharge or waiver of a portion

Cas 169=24 A L J

evidences a contract

terms is admissible

a suit on a bond the

is offered to show that the money due under the bond was meant to be the premium for a lease agreed to be executed by the creditor but which in fact was never executed, held that the evidence was excluded by section 92 of the Evidence Act. Baldeo v Ram Autor, 22 A. L J 850=82 Ind Cas 347 Where all the terms of a contract have not admissible to prove the terms not

Coalfields of Burma v H H Johnson

Rang 128 Where a date is fixed in the oral evidence to extend the period is

terms of the contract so as to make it

76 Ind Cas 62 Where a promissory note is endorsed on the back by a person who is neither the maker nor the holder, oral evidence can be let in to prove a contract of guarantee Thakarsay v Kishendas, 76 Ind Cas 292=1925 Sind 9 agreement between the mortgagee and of redemption as regards the terms on assign his interest Sailesh Chander v

oral evidence is admissible to prove a debt acknowledged in writing by the debtors when such acknowledged writing being unstamped is inadmissible in evidence Thalhan Rim v Lall, 74 Ind Cas 939=

1923 Lah

wrongly ent

real intentic

301 (Rev)

evidence of a contemporaneous oral agreement to the effect that the agreed to treat it as a mortgage is admissible. Talak Chand v Almatam, 25 Bom L R 818—A I. R 1924 Bom 58 Oral evidence is admissible as to negotiations antecedent to execution of the mortgage instrument, showing that what was intended to be offered and accepted as security was a certain ancestral share.

was p
34 C
ment
16 N.
a sect.

cured by a promissory note does purpose for which the advance was

239—64 Ind Cas 33 Where an oral agreement is made, which in respect of the manner of payment rescinds or required by law to be in payment if made in accord- partial satisfaction of the not exclude evidence of the payment or the oral agreement that explains it It does, however, exclude evidence of the agreement in respect of future payments not in accordance

L J 387—18 A L J 359—55 Ind. Cas 522—47 I A 17 (P. C) Where in agreement for the sale of land, it was impossible to reconcile the statement in the body of the agreement with the recital in the schedule as to the extent of the land to be conveyed, extrinsic parol evidence is admissible to explain the facts that led to the execution of the agreement, in order to reconcile the different statements regarding the property sold. Hussonally v Mangoldas, (1920) M W N 728 (P C) There is nothing in this section to exclude evidence of an oral agreement which contradicts, varies, adds to, or subtracts from not the terms of the contract, but some recitals in the contract itself, Mukhi Singh v Kishun, 51 Ind Cas 320 Where there is an oral agreement to grant a lease section 92 of the Evidence Act does not stand in the way of proof that there has been an agreement under the circumstances as to the time of the

Chandra v Bijoy Kanta, 23 C W

Kabuliyat executed and registered by a tenant is proved by the tenant in a suit there is nothing in the Evidence Act to prohibit the landlord from showing that he never assented to or accepted the Kabuliyat Hemanta v Birendra, 47 Ind Cas 1003 Oral evidence of a sale by the mortgagor to the mortgagee consideration that has passed, by showing that the actual consideration was something different to that alleged Vashudeta v Narayamma, 5 M 6; Dookha v Ramlal, 7 W. R. 100. Indanyit v. Lalchand, 1 Bomaya Naik v. Vir. rent is admitted by the lessee, the lessee can rely on it. This section does not affect the case Satyesh Chunder v. Dhunpul, 24 C 20. Where the plaintiff executed a mortgage instrument to the defendant and the consideration recited therein was that the defendant was to pay certain debts, and the instrument was not signed by the defendant nor was there any promise by the defendant to pay the debts, the instrument, does not c tendered which samsi, 7 M 19 entered into between the parties, when some others have been reduced into writing in letters exchanged between the parties Ambika v Gaultstain, 13 C W N 326 and not a sale—the question being regarded as purely one of intention Ismail v Hafiz, 10 C W N 570 (P C) = 3 A L J 353 = 33 C 773. Section 92 of the Evidence Act, only enacts that oral evidence cannot be given to vary or contradict the express terms of a document and does not prevent a party from giving evidence to prove that certain persons caused the document to be executed in favour of certain others mentioned in the document Shah Muhammad v Ram Dutt, 5 P R 1896, see also Tani Mahesha v Secretary of State, 67 P. R 1894. Liabili upon rescinc a case 1903 and re able from any oral agreement to vary the terms of mortgage contract and can be proved without the evidence of such agreement Suppanchett v. Yegnarayan, A I R 1932 Mad 141.

Evidence of conduct or intention for varying, contradicting etc. The acts and conduct of the parties can only be proof either (1) of a contemporaneous oral agreement varying the terms of the registered contract, or (2) of a subsequent oral agreement having the same effect. In the former case the evidence tional sales, which it has always been permitted to be shown to be mortgages. As pointed out in Rahman v Elahi Baksh, 28 C 70 such cases are admitted. But the plea of the question was Banerjee, 5 Full Bench was really varied by a verbal promise to reconvey on repayment of money, making it in fact a mortgage." In answering the question in the negative

Nith, 23 W R. 167; see also Madhab Chandra v Gangadhar, 11 W R 450 = 3 B L R A C 83. In Peacock C J 300 = 4 C L R 419 it was held that in Kashi Nath v Chan Hecra Lal, 3 C L R 50. What is the effect of this section on the Full Bench case was again considered in Hem Chandra v Kali Charan Das, 9 C 523. There Garth C J for the Court consisting of Garth C J and Millet J observed: "It has now been argued that the principle established in the Full Bench case was passed in 1872," ground for supposing, that the Full Bench case is not law at the present day, made, or intended to make, any prevailed here before the Act was in the Full Bench case, I should consider that our proper course was to refer the question to another Full Bench; but who seems to rule as which the judgment in the Full Bench case proceeded in one which, in my opinion, is perfectly consistent with that rule. It is a principle which has constantly been England, as well as by the

C
J
B
J
a l
t
J

the present Turner L J has brought an action of ejectment against Lincoln to recover certain land, which the latter had conveyed to him by a deed, which appeared on the face of it to be an absolute conveyance. Lincoln then brought a suit in equity to restrain the ejectment, on the ground that the transaction was in reality a mortgage, and he relied in support of that contention, partly upon a parol agreement, and partly upon the acts and conduct of parties. Turner L J says "The principle of the Court is that the Statute of Frauds

9 C 898

So although parol evidence will not be admitted to prove directly that simultaneously with the execution of a bill of sale there was an oral agreement by way of defeasance, yet the Court will look to the subsequent conduct of the parties, and if it clearly appears from such conduct that the apparent vendee

2. real intention and purpose of the parties at the time : The exercise of this remedial jurisdiction by the Courts of India exercising a similar jurisdiction covers the whole of the section does not say that, in order to constitute an estoppel, the acts which a

which was one of the grounds for calling 'past performance' But the ground upon which it is safely be rested, Courts will not allow a rule or even a statute, which was passed to suppress fraud, to be the most effectual encouragement to it and accordingly in England the Courts for common law have the same rule as the Indian Evidence Act and 92 of the Act, the Legislature, Specific Relief Act

Indian Evidence Act so as to bring them into conformity with the practice of the English Courts of Chancery Balshu Lal s'man v Gourinda, 4 B 594 So the principle of law laid down in the Churn, 5 W R 68 was approved or Pheloo v Geerish, 8 W R 515; Ha Sheikh Parabal v Sheikh Mohammed, 1 B L R A C 87; Behary v Tej naran, 10 C 764, Nundo v Prosunno, 19 W R 333, Bholanath v Kaliprasad, 8 B L R 89, Venkataramnam v. Reddiah 13 M 494, Rahien v Alageppu dayan, 16 M 80, Kader v Nepean, 21 I A 96-21 C 892 (P. C.) see also Balkishen Das v Legge, 19 A 434, Holmes v Mathews, 9 Moo P C 419, Mutty v Annundo, 5 M I A 72, Barton v Bank of New South Wales, L R 15 App Cas 379 The question was again considered by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Prionath Sha v Madhusudan Bhuiya, 2 C W N 562-25 C 603 (F B) There Banerjee and Watkins JJ, in their order of reference reviewed all the previous cases on the subject Maclean C J in delivering the judgment of the Full Bench observed "In regard to the question of law, which was the main ground for this reference, namely, whether oral evidence as to acts and conduct of the parties was admissible to prove that the deed in this case was intended to operate as a mortgage and not as an out and out sale, the learned vakil who appeared for the Appellant stated that having regard to the authorities he could not successfully contend that such evidence was not

oda Balsh, 26 In Cas 717

v Legge, 4 C W N 153 (P C) = y Council In that case the question was whether certain deeds executed by the respondent in favour of the appellants constituted a mortgage transaction or an out and out sale with a contract of repurchase Lord Dary in holding that oral evidence of intention was not admissible for the purpose of construing the deeds or ascertaining the intention of the parties, said, "By section 92 of the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872) no evidence of any oral agreement or statement can be admitted, as between the parties to such instrument or their representatives in interest, for the purpose of varying, or adding to, or subtracting from, its terms, subject to the exceptions contained in several provisions It was conceded that this case could not be brought within any of them The cases in the English Court of Chancery which were referred to by the learned Judges in the High Court have not in the opinion of their Lordships any application to the law of India as laid down in the Acts of the Indian Legislature. The cases must therefore be decided on the S. 9 of the parties, that is, evidence of the repayment of the money, the return of the deed and the exercise of the acts of possession by the vendor, and not of the acts of the parties. If that was the view we take of section 92 of the Evidence Act does not support the parties. The view we take is supported by a full Bench decision of this Court in the case of Preo Nath v Madhu Sudan, 2 C W N 562=25 C 603. It was contended by the learned J. for the appellant that the decision must be taken to have been in effect overruled by the decision of the Privy Council in the case of Balkishen v Legge, 27 I A. 53=4 C W N 153. We do not consider the argument sound. The evidence that their Lordships considered inadmissible in the case just referred to was certain oral evidence of intention which had been admitted in the Courts below and the ground upon which their decision is based is that such evidence is excluded by section 92 of the Evidence Act. Their Lordships evidence of the acts and conduct of the parties not being in the nature of an oral agreement or statement." See also Mahomed Ali v Mst Nazar Ali, 5 C W N 826=28 C 289; Ali Sherkh v Imam Ali, 35 Ind Cas 102; Miriam v Ibrahim, 28 C L J 306=48 Ind Cas 561; Kamala v Nandan, 11 C L J. 39, Ramavatar v Tulsi, 16 C W N 137, Sharadi v Jamal, 17 C W N. 1053. In the last named case B executed in favour of A a deed of out and out sale with a condition of re-purchase of a house but no date was fixed for the repurchase. On the same date B executed a kabulyat in favour of A by which he accepted a lease of the housesold. The Court took into consideration how the language of the document was related to the existing facts such as that the vendor continued in possession, paid rent at the usual rate of interest, etc., and further that the value of the property was much more than the consideration paid. In delivering the judgment Jenkins C J said "The argument before us has been that it was not open to the Appellate Court to regard the transaction as a mortgage. I designedly use the word 'transaction' because that with which we have to deal is not contained in one document but in two, and what we have to consider, in the circumstances is, whether there is anything in section 92 of the Evidence Act or in Balkishen v Legge, 22 A. 149—which is in opposition to that section—that would compel us to hold that the decision of Mr Justice Chatterjee is erroneous. We would certainly in Calcutta. But it appears to me that all these authorities to which allusion has been made are beside the point in this case, for I cannot find that the learned Judge of this Court has relied on any evidence of oral agreement or statement or of intention, with a view to coming to the conclusion at which he arrived. He took the transaction as it is expressed in the documents. He also took into consideration those facts which may legitimately be proved with a principal document is expressed in qualified terms, and it is only open to the suggestion that it is an out and out sale, if and so far as it can be said that the express terms of the deed must be disregarded.

In Narendra Lal v Bholanath, 21 C W N 331=11 Ind Cas 102, cases of Preonath Shaha v Madhu Sudan, 25 C 603=2 C W. N 562; Khanlar Abdur v Ali Hafez, 23 C 256 and Mahomed Ali v Najar Ali, 23 C 280=5 C W N 306 were followed, see also Kailash Chandra v Darbaria, 20 C W N 347; Manindra v Durga Sundari, 20 C W. N 680; Arjad Ali v Sheikh, 50 Ind Cas 12; M Priyabarta, 20 C W.

an instrument, only of showing that the transaction is not what it purports to be. Krishna Lal Sinha v Sri Raj Kuar, 104 Ind Cas 299=1 Luck C 97=A I R 1927 Oudh 276. Mariam Bibi v Ibrahim, 28 C L J 306=48 Ind Cas 561. The rule, that the conduct of the parties in respect to an instrument may be looked to in construing a document, is subject to this reservation that it can be admitted only after every other means to construe a deed have been exhausted. Deves Trikamjee v Dayamoy, 103 Ind Cas 418=A I R 1928 Pat 225. Subsequent conduct of contract were never in the deed to be acted upon from the very beginning. Narendra v Bholanath, 77 Ind Cas 154=27 C W. N 336, see also Ali Sheikh v Iman Ali, 35 Ind Cas 102.

A different view has been taken by the Bombay High Court in Dattoo v Ramchandra, 30 B 119=7 Bom L R 669, where Jenkins C.J. said "The plaintiffs sue to recover possession of land alleging that the document passed by his father, though in form an absolute conveyance was intended to operate as a mortgage. The grounds on which their contention is based, are that the consideration was a debt and not money paid at the time; that the plaintiff's father, notwithstanding the execution of the deed, remained in possession for until his death, and that after his death his widow remained in possession for the trans-

derreous
he-e il in
is of Act;
the ule, 2 Deg
ples We within the
we should
g on us"
dmisable,
92 of the L R 239
among the intention of the parties in interpreting languages used in a written document S.

case in that there was no agreement enforceable by law to sell the property, but that there was a mortgage agreement, it should be specifically determined whether or not the parties as shown by evidence, in a mortgage Bom L R 764 The plaintiff sued in

is not open to misrepresentation void Sangira
na v Godigaya, om L R 684
mortgage dated

1899 The mortgage having been expressed in the form of a sale deed, he referred to s 10 A of the Indian Agriculturists' Relief Act to show that words which refer to s 12 of the Evidence Act, and does not point to any Gopal v Morar, 15 Bom L R ana, 31 Bom L R 1266, Gopal

The object of s 10 A of the

Bom L R 1200
the case of Ballishen Das v inference that there was a contemporaneous oral agreement or statement between

2 from, the terms of any contract, grant or disposition of property which has been reduced to writing, and no exception is made in any of the provisions to sect 92 or elsewhere in the Act, in favour of evidence which contradicts the acts and conduct of parties from which an inference might be drawn that there was such an oral agreement to vary the terms of the contract or grant. The question before us is really concluded by the recent decision of the Privy Council in Balishen Das v Legge, 27 I A 58=22 A 149. In this connection we may also draw attention to the direction which is drawn by the same tribunal between admissibility of evidence to show that a recital of a fact in a contract or grant is erroneous, and evidence to vary the terms of a contract or grant (Sri Lal Chand v Indrajit, 27 I A 93=22 A 370), and also to the decision in the House of Lords in North Eastern Railway v Lord Hastings, (1910) A C 200 in which it was held that when the words of a deed were plain and unambiguous, the fact that the parties understood it otherwise and acted on such understanding for a period of more than forty years, could not affect the construction of the instrument and the effect to be given to it. See also Tenafra v Subramaniam (1917) M W N 674, Chall Venkaya v Derajalakum, 1912 M W N 164. Where the contemporaneous agreement though in writing is not registered, it is not open to the party to show that what is apparently a sale was really a mortgage. Meenaksh Sundaram v Chenchu, 109 Ind. Cas 18=A. I R. 1928 Mad 409. Evidence of subsequent conduct to prove contemporaneous agreement is not admitted. Fry v Holmes v The Bank of Upper India, 77 Ind Cas 523=5 Lah L J 439. In delivering the judgment the Court observed "On the question of whether he can be allowed to produce evidence of a contemporaneous oral agreement varying the terms of the written document, the learned senior very clearly and we find which he comes that this in which the High Courts Ma Shue, 44 I. A 236 (P C). It was contended Council has not definitely =114 P L R 1901 A. wed Preonath ankar Abdur the Calcutta s conduct as

by the same way in Holms v The Bank of anhya Mil, 15 P W 9 Bm v. Ma Bang, 3 J. B R. (1:02-1903) 14 O. C. 321; Ramesh 3 R 1903, 3rd Qr Cas. 644, Sookna v B L R Sup Vol

399=5 W. R 76, Jugobundhoo v Rukee, W R. (1869) 393; Mahomed v Raesooden, 6 W. R 117, Radha v Ram, 9 W R 251; Bulak v Flad, 27 P. R 1911=118 P W R. 1911=10 Ind Cas 1004

In Maung Hym v Ma Shue, 15 C W N 958=39 I A 146 P. C=21 W L J 1105, the appellants who had acquired certain properties under absolute conveyances subsequently purporting to be a mortgage. In this conveyance the parties (as distinguished from evidence of oral statements and conversations constituting in themselves an agreement to contradict or vary the written instrument) to show that the transaction was on this appeal is whether or not that evidence was properly rejected . . . Its object was to show that whatever the terms of the document may have been, none of the parties had acted on them as effecting an absolute sale, but that through a long course of mutual dealings materially affecting their respective positions disclosed antecedent certainly

opinion on the construction or application of section 92 of the Indian Evidence Act in relation to the deeds of the 4th March, 1903. That case again went up to the Privy Council (Vide Maung Aye v Ma Shue La, 22 C W N 377 P. O. 7th Nov 1903).

Lordships are now in possession of the facts and of concurrent findings upon the most important of them. Upon the non admissibility of the evidence reliance is placed by the respondents upon section 92 of the Indian Evidence the respondents maintain that the ed On the contrary, the Appellants the section, they are entitled to set the parties as inconsistent with the transfer of property and only consistent with the true nature of the transaction having been one of mortgage or transfer of mortgage. They found upon a considerable body of authority to that effect, the cases cited being, Balshu Lakshman v Govinda Kanu 4 B 594; Hem Chander v Kally Charan, 9 C 523, Rakhen v Algappudayan, 16 M 80, Preonath v Madhusudan, 25 C 603=2 C W N 591, Khanlar v Ali Hafez, 28 C 256 and Mahomed Ali v Narai Ali, 28 C 289=5 C W N 326. The judgment of Mr Justice Melville in the first of these cases is repeatedly founded upon in the course of the series, in which the learned Judges expressly followed the English equity doctrine as expressed in Lincoln v Wright, 4 Deg & J 16 by Lord Justice Turner thus: 'The principle of the Court is that the Statute of Frauds was not made to cover fraud. If the real agreement in this case was that as between plaintiff and Wright, the transaction should be a mortgage transaction, it is, in the eye of this Court, fraud to insist on the conveyance as being absolute, and proof evidence must be admissible to prove the fraud.' In the opinion of their Lordships, this series of cases definitely ceased to be of binding authority after the judgment of this Board pronounced by Lord Dorey in the case of Balshu Das v Legg, 27 I A 58=4 C W N 153. It was there held that oral evidence was not admissible for the purpose of ascertaining the intention of the parties to written documents. Lord Dorey cites section 92 of the Indian Evidence Act, and adds—The cases in the English Court of Chancery which were referred to by the learned Judges in the High Court have not in the opinion of their

he Acts of the consideration of the evidence of what manner the notwithstanding the the subject still remains in issue. But the respondents rightly refer to Acuta Rinarani v Subbarani, 25 M 7, Maung Bin v Ma Hlaing 3 L B R 100 and Dattoo Vali v Ram Chandra, 30 B 119, and in particular in the judgment of Jenkins C J in the last case. In this the Lord Dorey, has been rightly followed Annada Chandra, 71 Ind Cas 336=77 Ind Cas 151. In Narasimhan v Janakiam, 20 C. N. 17 M.

729 (P C) the question was whether documents executed between the parties constituted a mortgage by deed or a sale with an agreement to reconvey. It was held that the documents were a mortgage, Lord

22 A 149-4 C W. N 133, are clearly, required to show, in what manner the language of the document

In Bainath Singh v. the Natu Singh Oil Co on the footing that certain transactions entered into between the plaintiff and defendant, Hajee Mahomed Jamal, were mortgage. The defendant contended that the transactions were, as they purported to be, absolute sale to the original defendant followed by contracts for the resale of the shares to the plaintiff, that time was chase had been extinguished of the transactions Sir in Balkishen Das v Legge, 27 I A 58-23 A 149-4 C W N. 153, that under section 92 of the Indian Evidence Act, as between the parties to an instrument, oral evidence of intention is not admissible.

cribes a rule of

PROVISO (1).

Scope of the provision The admissibility of extrinsic parol testimony to or variation or contradiction of a written transaction concern-

-randum,

(4) Fraud, mistake, duress, incapacity, failure of consideration, or other matter showing that the writing is not the valid transaction it purports to be

(3) Any collateral verbal agreement on the same subject-matter, consistent

the written
is not a

the written

statement of
of an agreeer agreement n provisos 1
49 A. 680=

Scope of proviso (1)—Parol evidence is admissible to show that a writing is not really the valid transaction which it purports to be. Such evidence may therefore be given to prove fraud mistake, illegality, incapacity, failure of consideration, or other matter affecting the validity of a writing as a document. Cockle Cas 341. In Henkle v Royal Ex Ass. Co, 1 Ves 317, Lord Hardwicke said, "No doubt, but this Court has jurisdiction to relieve in respect of a plain which they put down is final as to what they mean; it is the binding record of the agreement. But they are always at liberty to show whether it is the binding record of the agreement. Suppose that the signature were made in the course of a dramatic representation, or suppose a printed form of agreement were used and the witness who signed his name in the space meant for the signature were at liberty to show the real signature. Wake v Harrop, 7 Jur 710; Att. (1900) 1 Ch 618, Dobell v Stephens, 3 L J K B 89, Cockle cas 341. So the first proviso in no way transgresses the rule in Mark Ev 73. So the rule is not, under the proper pleading, that it never had any legal effect of forgery or fraud, or for the due execution and delivery, Att. 9 East 421, 422, Taylor § 3). In delivering defence to point out and to claim protection from enquiry in contradiction and variance of the terms of which is not in question. In such cases, the Court is not bound by what has been described as a mere paper expressions of the parties and is not precluded from enquiring into the real nature of the transaction between them. The first proviso to that section, therefore, declares that any fact may be proved which would invalidate any want of due execution or capacity. But in my opinion, this is not so, as the instances given are not exhaustive but, as appears from the use of the words 'such as' are set out by way of illustration. Some of the cases that the Court has decided are the

2. did not wish to put in writing Mottayabhan v Palani (1913) M W N 650-25
 M L J 290-20
 jointly and severally
 he signed only as a
 his signature that he
 in the evidence Maung Sein v Ma Saw 3 Bur L J 112-82 Ind C 816
 When a document can be shown to come within proviso (1), evidence of contemporaneous oral agreement contradicting the document is admissible Mahomed v Abdul, 63 Ind Cas 368 Under proviso (1) to s 92 any fact may be proved even that there was never any I was altogether dropped cannot be given effect to to the defendant in a redemption suit to plead that the mortgage is a fictitious document intended to cover a previously the first proviso to set invalidate the deed & purporting to be a standing of both parties that it is not to be treated as the real contract between them, is not an agreement enforceable by law, and there is not a contract at all and does not acquire the Muhammad v Cassim Ali L property in suit to defend a conveyance in consideration of services rendered or to be rendered by defen dant No 2 in inducing his master L to sell certain property to the plaintiff Held that the defendant No 2 was entitled to prove the real transaction by oral evidence Abd Khan v Mussamat Seval 9 Ind Cas 161-15 C W N 409 Where a party deliberately and with eyes open executes a deed of sale he can not be allowed to set up against it an oral agreement that the sale is a mortgage He may prove that a mortgage was intended but that by fraud, mistake or otherwise tended to execute a sale deed at that the sale was to be C P L R 127 Parties can show that they never came to an agreement or that written contract having an uncertain date Radhakissen
 v D inadmissible for the purpose of invalidating a written agreement Dholan Das v Pritya Singh, 85 P R 1893 Under this proviso any fact may be proved which would invalidate any docu ment Therefore in a suit on a bond, a defendant of = 241, 03 1 R 183-1191
 a void or a conveyance in an apparent sale deed formed only part of the real agreement between the parties, and the oral agreement to re-convey to the vendors which gave them a claim to equitable relief formed another part of the same transaction, it is in the eye of law a fraud to insist on the conveyance as as for proving the validity of the oral
 it would invali
 a in the document as a deed of absolute sale within the meaning of the first proviso to the section and constitute a ground for a Court of equity and good conscience giving effect to it only as a mortgage Rallen v Alagappudayam 15 M 80 This proviso seems to apply to cases where evidence is admitted to show that a contract is void or voidable, or subject to reformation upon the ground of fraud or fraud alleged to be a, where the
 of that kind,
 at the other
 C 20 B 636

It may always be shown that the document in question never had any legal existence. On this ground rests the very important exception that duress or fraud in the inception of the contract may be proved, although accompanied by the ever

case, to Waddell
Blanton,
'83; Phip

Ev 4th Ed pp 537, 538 If the fraud is clearly proved, one of the essential elements of contract—consent—is wanting. Thus it may be proved by parol evidence that any material part of the contract was fraudulently omitted or inserted by the other party, (Heter v Glasgow, 79 Pa 79) or that it was fraudulently misread to one not able to read and that he was thus induced to give his signature; (Mc Messon v Sherman, 51 W 303) or that a part of the contract was not reduced to writing because of the fraud of one of the parties, in which case the whole transaction is open to explanation by parol evidence. Phyfe v Wardell, 2 Edw Ch (N Y) 47. In brief, if one person fraudulently

85—3 Ed
which ar
with the negotiated Russ, 16 alleged, & in such motives and intentions that prompted the parties to execute the same. Such evidence is permissible to show fraud in a transaction which, if shown, annuls the contract, and prevents its enforcement. It is not admitted for the purpose of varying the terms of a contract but merely to ascertain whether it is a bonafide transaction or sham. If there is no fraud, the contract will stand, conversely, if there is fraud, the purpose of the admission of parol testimony is served. Fairbanks v Simpson, 28 S W 128 (Am). In such cases any secret agreement radiating the face of the nto (Gray v Hankinson, entire transaction may be investigated brought by one of the contracting parties contract should not be impeached or changed, unless it appears that one of the parties was fraudulently misled or deceived. Without enumerating them then, a certain sum and deliver up a note of the lessee then held by the lessor. The evidence established the facts stated, and the Court said it would be difficult to

S. 92

Undue influence U Influence, in order to would make it sufficient to by coercion or fraud"
at p 45 Similarly Parl observed: "Undue influ

in a state of l, in Williams v
destroying free

Illegality The c
it is forbidden by law, c the provisions of any person or property of another, or the Court regards it as immoral, or opposed to public policy In each of these cases, the consideration or object of an agreement is said to be un

in which it is intended to Budge Budge Mill, 83 C 702, Cun Contract Act p 102 the legality of a contract has to be determined by the law of the place of performance, or if no particular place is designated by the law of the place where the contract is made But the lex fori det be recognised Although ther the law applicable to it, it laws expressly prohibit such an agreement Nor will the lex fori suffer the foreign law to be applied, if the agreement is contrary to the interests of the state or to common principles of justice and morality Santos v Illidge, 28 L J C P 317 Accordingly, the Court will not enforce an agreement obtained by threats of a criminal prosecution although the agreement is valid according to the law of the country where it was made and where the parties to it were domiciled Kaufman v Gerson (1904) 1 K B 591; Cun Contract Act p 103 Illegality covers instruments or transactions against public policy, such as

Ev § 1137 So oral evidence object or consideration of an agreement in writing is unlawful and that therefore the agreement is void Kashi Nath v Brindaban, 10 C. 649, Anup Chand v Chandra, 12 II 585; Dens Midhab v Sadasook, 32 C 437 Moreover, when it appears that the transaction is thus unlawful, it is the right and may be the duty of the Court to take cognizance of the fact although it may not have been pleaded Fischer v. Kamali Naicker, 8 M. I. A. 187; Scott v. Brown, (1892) Q. B. 724; Hill v. Clarke, 27 A. 267, Gun Contract Act p. 101. Oral evidence is admissible to show that an agreement in writing to sell Government promissory notes is really an agreement made by way of wager on its market price on a future day Eshoor Das v. Venkata Subba Ram, 17 M. 480.

Want of due execution : "Execution" when applied to a document, is the last act or series of acts completion Bhouany v. De to the act of completing a by the testator, yet in ordinary the testator and the attestation of his signature Per Sir A. J. 1200.

Syed Ali, 12 O. L. J. 1 = A. I. R. with executing a signed document, legal consequences, the act which he adopts and makes his own the general, immaterial whether he has acknowledged it. It is even Ignored § 2134. It is in writing, ion, Seal, Attestation. These formalities some of the Acts as an inherent element of form in the validity of the transaction. Lake all other certain general danger sake of this policy.

the fact that the an unlawful object, is in the suit is brought Arumengadu v. Maung

Want of capacity of the contracting parties Parol evidence may also under the proper pleading, be offered to show that the party was incapable of contracting by reason of some legal impediment, such as infancy, coverture, idiocy, insanity, or intoxication Barret v. Buxton, 3 Atk. 167. Besides the two classes of persons non compos mentis, viz. idiots and lunatics Lord Coke mentions two more classes viz., those who were of good and sound memory, but by the visitation of God has lost it, and those who have become non compos by their own act, as drunkards (Will Exor 25). In the former of these two latter classes must be reckoned those who from sickness, grief, accident or old age Lord Coke, as lunatics those under has assigned 17th Grammar, 13; Rigauy v.

considera-
unt of each pay a 1872)
into where sidera-
from
L. J.

183 Golshede v Su
of N. S. W., 15 App
v Hancharan, 32 P L ent but it is the recital of a fact viso (1) to section 92 Nabin v.

y to prove want of consideration o him to prove a variation in the Mahomed, A I R. 1930 Mad.
M L J 414 Expl) If the state-al of a fact section 92 is not ght come under
!f one party to
, the receipt of alle within the
rty is at liberty
given to prove 537-24 Ind.
C W N 159
sory note was in the meaning
can be given to prove that the consideration represented gambling losses Balgobind v Bhaugg Mal, 11 A L J 854-35 A 558 Notwithstanding an admission in a sale deed that the consideration had been received, it is open to the vendor to prove that no consideration had been actually paid Le Hen v Elahu Duz, U B R (1897-1901) Vol II, 400, see also Sahdat v Dulogir, A W N. 1886, 53 Pre emptor can show that transaction which is ostensibly a mortgage is really a sale 157 P W R 1909 Under this proviso, a party to a contri

to adduce
that recited standing a
it is open to The provis
will contrac
of sale me

received by the vendor it is competent to the vendor, under the provisions of the Evidence Act, to prove a collateral agreement that the purchase money should remain in the hands of Salpa.
93=2 Bom L R 553
proviso is a complete

L J 721 When there is a recital in a document of the payment of a certain sum of money as consideration, oral evidence is admissible to prove that the recital is incor-
of fact, s 92 of it to be wrong
oral evidence to in and for the purpose of proving it, he must be allowed to prove what the real consideration was Section 92 does not in any way bar such proof, for the proof adduced not for the purpose of varying or altering any term of the written contract, but only to show

2. C L J 552=75 Ind Cas 557=1923 CIL 570 In the case of a deed of sale actually paid and recited in Singara Charlu v A 61=A W N

1900 120=A L J 300

contract from that contained in recital Although this purpose of contradicting of the parties to the contract from showing either that there was no consideration or that the consideration was different from that stated in a conveyance Gopal Singh v Laloo Lal 10 C L J 27=2 Ind Cas 953 Evidence is admissible to show that consideration, mentioned in a deed as having been paid never passed and also to show that the consideration specified in the deed was satisfied in a different way from that mentioned in the document itself Muhammad v Muhammad 4 A L J 441=A W N 1907, 181

Mistake of fact With regard to deeds or agreement at all an in resumption Tay § 1150 (1910) 1 Ir R 167, may be

 5 Q B 574, Philp v Th
 ie Indian Court sits as a Court
 ie principles which prevail in evidence is often admitted to
 equity and illustration (e) in equity, p vary or even contradict a writing, where by some mistake surprise, or the like, it does not represent the party's true intention, but it requires a very clear case to induce the Court to interfere The mistake must be most satisfactorily made out and the error be shown to be one which ought to be corrected If this be done by the plaintiff, the Court will reform the instrument so as to make it in conformity with the true intent A defendant, against whom specific performance is sought may insist on the mistake in his defence, and establish it by parol evidence Lord E 215 Section 20 of the Contract Act enacts
 'where both the parties to an agreement are under a mistake as to a matter of fact essential to the agreement, the agreeer Act lays down "A contract is not voidable
 one of the parties to it being under a section is not a bar to plead the mistake of Sanjiva M Mys L J 103 Where on
 property was misdescribed
 belonging to the mortgagor
 sible to establish identity
 216=20 A L J 53=L J 3 A 61=104 111 112 113 114 115 116 117 118 119 120 121 122 123 124 125 126 127 128 129 130 131 132 133 134 135 136 137 138 139 140 141 142 143 144 145 146 147 148 149 150 151 152 153 154 155 156 157 158 159 160 161 162 163 164 165 166 167 168 169 170 171 172 173 174 175 176 177 178 179 180 181 182 183 184 185 186 187 188 189 190 191 192 193 194 195 196 197 198 199 200 201 202 203 204 205 206 207 208 209 210 211 212 213 214 215 216 217 218 219 220 221 222 223 224 225 226 227 228 229 230 231 232 233 234 235 236 237 238 239 240 241 242 243 244 245 246 247 248 249 250 251 252 253 254 255 256 257 258 259 260 261 262 263 264 265 266 267 268 269 270 271 272 273 274 275 276 277 278 279 280 281 282 283 284 285 286 287 288 289 290 291 292 293 294 295 296 297 298 299 300 301 302 303 304 305 306 307 308 309 310 311 312 313 314 315 316 317 318 319 320 321 322 323 324 325 326 327 328 329 330 331 332 333 334 335 336 337 338 339 340 341 342 343 344 345 346 347 348 349 350 351 352 353 354 355 356 357 358 359 360 361 362 363 364 365 366 367 368 369 370 371 372 373 374 375 376 377 378 379 380 381 382 383 384 385 386 387 388 389 390 391 392 393 394 395 396 397 398 399 400 401 402 403 404 405 406 407 408 409 410 411 412 413 414 415 416 417 418 419 420 421 422 423 424 425 426 427 428 429 430 431 432 433 434 435 436 437 438 439 440 441 442 443 444 445 446 447 448 449 450 451 452 453 454 455 456 457 458 459 460 461 462 463 464 465 466 467 468 469 470 471 472 473 474 475 476 477 478 479 480 481 482 483 484 485 486 487 488 489 490 491 492 493 494 495 496 497 498 499 500 501 502 503 504 505 506 507 508 509 510 511 512 513 514 515 516 517 518 519 520 521 522 523 524 525 526 527 528 529 530 531 532 533 534 535 536 537 538 539 540 541 542 543 544 545 546 547 548 549 550 551 552 553 554 555 556 557 558 559 560 561 562 563 564 565 566 567 568 569 570 571 572 573 574 575 576 577 578 579 580 581 582 583 584 585 586 587 588 589 590 591 592 593 594 595 596 597 598 599 600 601 602 603 604 605 606 607 608 609 610 611 612 613 614 615 616 617 618 619 620 621 622 623 624 625 626 627 628 629 630 631 632 633 634 635 636 637 638 639 640 641 642 643 644 645 646 647 648 649 650 651 652 653 654 655 656 657 658 659 660 661 662 663 664 665 666 667 668 669 670 671 672 673 674 675 676 677 678 679 680 681 682 683 684 685 686 687 688 689 690 691 692 693 694 695 696 697 698 699 700 701 702 703 704 705 706 707 708 709 710 711 712 713 714 715 716 717 718 719 720 721 722 723 724 725 726 727 728 729 730 731 732 733 734 735 736 737 738 739 740 741 742 743 744 745 746 747 748 749 750 751 752 753 754 755 756 757 758 759 760 761 762 763 764 765 766 767 768 769 770 771 772 773 774 775 776 777 778 779 780 781 782 783 784 785 786 787 788 789 790 791 792 793 794 795 796 797 798 799 800 801 802 803 804 805 806 807 808 809 810 811 812 813 814 815 816 817 818 819 820 821 822 823 824 825 826 827 828 829 830 831 832 833 834 835 836 837 838 839 840 841 842 843 844 845 846 847 848 849 850 851 852 853 854 855 856 857 858 859 860 861 862 863 864 865 866 867 868 869 870 871 872 873 874 875 876 877 878 879 880 881 882 883 884 885 886 887 888 889 890 891 892 893 894 895 896 897 898 899 900 901 902 903 904 905 906 907 908 909 910 911 912 913 914 915 916 917 918 919 920 921 922 923 924 925 926 927 928 929 930 931 932 933 934 935 936 937 938 939 940 941 942 943 944 945 946 947 948 949 950 951 952 953 954 955 956 957 958 959 960 961 962 963 964 965 966 967 968 969 970 971 972 973 974 975 976 977 978 979 980 981 982 983 984 985 986 987 988 989 990 991 992 993 994 995 996 997 998 999 1000 to the mortgagee, provided in it there was to be no accounting between the parties at the time of redemption and it appeared that a portion of the mortgage consideration was set down in the deed as being due to the mortgagee from the mortgagor, merely by way of guess without any accounting having been really taken at the time. Held that the mortgagor should show that there was an agreement at all an in resumption Tay § 1150 (1910) 1 Ir R 167, may be

 5 Q B 574, Philp v Th
 ie Indian Court sits as a Court
 ie principles which prevail in
 evidence is often admitted to
 equity and illustration (e) in equity, p
 vary or even contradict a writing, where by some mistake surprise, or the
 like, it does not represent the party's true intention, but it requires a very clear case to induce the Court to interfere The mistake must be most satisfactorily made out and the error be shown to be one which ought to be corrected If this be done by the plaintiff, the Court will reform the instrument so as to make it in conformity with the true intent A defendant, against whom specific performance is sought may insist on the mistake in his defence, and establish it
 by parol evidence Lord E 215 Section 20 of the Contract Act enacts
 'where both the parties to an agreement are under a mistake as to a matter of fact essential to the agreement, the agreeer
 Act lays down "A contract is not voidable
 one of the parties to it being under a section is not a bar to plead the mistake of Sanjiva M Mys L J 103 Where on
 property was misdescribed
 belonging to the mortgagor
 sible to establish identity
 216=20 A L J 53=L J 3 A 61=104 111 112 113 114 115 116 117 118 119 120 121 122 123 124 125 126 127 128 129 130 131 132 133 134 135 136 137 138 139 140 141 142 143 144 145 146 147 148 149 150 151 152 153 154 155 156 157 158 159 160 161 162 163 164 165 166 167 168 169 170 171 172 173 174 175 176 177 178 179 180 181 182 183 184 185 186 187 188 189 190 191 192 193 194 195 196 197 198 199 200 201 202 203 204 205 206 207 208 209 210 211 212 213 214 215 216 217 218 219 220 221 222 223 224 225 226 227 228 229 230 231 232 233 234 235 236 237 238 239 240 241 242 243 244 245 246 247 248 249 250 251 252 253 254 255 256 257 258 259 260 261 262 263 264 265 266 267 268 269 270 271 272 273 274 275 276 277 278 279 280 281 282 283 284 285 286 287 288 289 290 291 292 293 294 295 296 297 298 299 300 301 302 303 304 305 306 307 308 309 310 311 312 313 314 315 316 317 318 319 320 321 322 323 324 325 326 327 328 329 330 331 332 333 334 335 336 337 338 339 340 341 342 343 344 345 346 347 348 349 350 351 352 353 354 355 356 357 358 359 360 361 362 363 364 365 366 367 368 369 370 371 372 373 374 375 376 377 378 379 380 381 382 383 384 385 386 387 388 389 390 391 392 393 394 395 396 397 398 399 400 401 402 403 404 405 406 407 408 409 410 411 412 413 414 415 416 417 418 419 420 421 422 423 424 425 426 427 428 429 430 431 432 433 434 435 436 437 438 439 440 441 442 443 444 445 446 447 448 449 450 451 452 453 454 455 456 457 458 459 460 461 462 463 464 465 466 467 468 469 470 471 472 473 474 475 476 477 478 479 480 481 482 483 484 485 486 487 488 489 490 491 492 493 494 495 496 497 498 499 500 501 502 503 504 505 506 507 508 509 510 511 512 513 514 515 516 517 518 519 520 521 522 523 524 525 526 527 528 529 530 531 532 533 534 535 536 537 538 539 540 541 542 543 544 545 546 547 548 549 550 551 552 553 554 555 556 557 558 559 560 561 562 563 564 565 566 567 568 569 570 571 572 573 574 575 576 577 578 579 580 581 582 583 584 585 586 587 588 589 590 591 592 593 594 595 596 597 598 599 600 601 602 603 604 605 606 607 608 609 610 611 612 613 614 615 616 617 618 619 620 621 622 623 624 625 626 627 628 629 630 631 632 633 634 635 636 637 638 639 640 641 642 643 644 645 646 647 648 649 650 651 652 653 654 655 656 657 658 659 660 661 662 663 664 665 666 667 668 669 670 671 672 673 674 675 676 677 678 679 680 681 682 683 684 685 686 687 688 689 690 691 692 693 694 695 696 697 698 699 700 701 702 703 704 705 706 707 708 709 710 711 712 713 714 715 716 717 718 719 720 721 722 723 724 725 726 727 728 729 730 731 732 733 734 735 736 737 738 739 740 741 742 743 744 745 746 747 748 749 750 751 752 753 754 755 756 757 758 759 760 761 762 763 764 765 766 767 768 769 770 771 772 773 774 775 776 777 778 779 780 781 782 783 784 785 786 787 788 789 790 791 792 793 794 795 796 797 798 799 800 801 802 803 804 805 806 807 808 809 810 811 812 813 814 815 816 817 818 819 820 821 822 823 824 825 826 827 828 829 830 831 832 833 834 835 836 837 838 839 840 841 842 843 844 845 846 847 848 849 850 851 852 853 854 855 856 857 858 859 860 861 862 863 864 865 866 867 868 869 870 871 872 873 874 875 876 877 878 879 880 881 882 883 884 885 886 887 888 889 890 891 892 893 894 895 896 897 898 899 900 901 902 903 904 905 906 907 908 909 910 911 912 913 914 915 916 917 918 919 920 921 922 923 924 925 926 927 928 929 930 931 932 933 934 935 936 937 938 939 940 941 942 943 944 945 946 947 948 949 950 951 952 953 954 955 956 957 958 959 960 961 962 963 964 965 966 967 968 969 970 971 972 973 974 975 976 977 978 979 980 981 982 983 984 985 986 987 988 989 990 991 992 993 994 995 996 997 998 999 1000 mistake the words "per cent" had been omitted from the mortgage deed Held S. 9 that it was a case of mutual mistake for which provision was to be found in the Act Ram Bharosay v Janaki Prasadi, Oudh 95 Under this section, mistake of the

 be proved Sukdeo v Ram Narain, A I R may be adduced to show that owing to the ignorance of the draftsman, a deed of sale did not truly express the real intention of the parties Thakur Rohini v Vishwanath, 13 C P L R 33 It is open to the Court, having regard to this proviso to allow oral evidence of mutual mistake of fact to set aside a deed of sale. C. W. N. 260, see Ch. 530,
 Ch. 285;
Idling v.
contra rectification
 instrument, the proviso ignous unreformed and mistake a term has been one would found a claim Venkata, A. I. R. 1931 Mad

Mistake of law A contract is not voidable because it was caused by a

with a knowledge practicable in the note to § 126
 against mistake circumstance
 money or other Mohendranath, 17 C 602 The maxim Ignorantia juris nemini excusat refers to ignorance of ordinary law of the land and not to mistakes regarding constructions of documents Beauchamp v Winn, L. R. 6 H. L. 223, Cun
En 99

in a suit brought for the purposes under section 31 of the Specific Relief Act, subject to the faith and for value Kantli, 31 Ind Cas
 in the description of the mistake is so proved the document can be construed by the Courts as if the mistake had been rectified, and a separate suit for rectification of the instrument under section 31 of the Specific Relief Act is not necessary, provided that the rights of third persons acquired in good faith and for consideration are not prejudicially affected thereby Koula Chinn v Cannellanti, 3 L. W. 551.
 The combined effect of section 93 of the Evidence Act and section 31 of the Specific Relief Act is to entitle either party to a contract, whether plaintiff or defendant, to protect his right by proving a mistake in contract as a mistake name A

 the place
 mortgage
 of the
 the 2nd
 the 1st
 the 1st

collateral contract the written contract does not contain the whole of terms. Here the lease expresses the whole terms, the defendant agrees to let, and the plaintiff to take, the house and furniture at a certain rent, there is said to have been a negotiation, that the defendant for the same rent, how is this

But the general rule under discussion is not violated by allowing parol evidence to be given of the contents of a distinct valid, contemporaneous agreement between the parties which was not reduced to writing when the same is not in conflict with the written agreement. Burr Jones § 439. Undoubtedly matter on which a written terms may be proved case it may be properly inferred that the parties did not intend the written paper to be a complete and final statement of the whole of the transaction between them. But such an agreement must not only be collateral, but must relate to a subject distinct from that to which the connected with the where the writing complete legal obligation, without any uncertainty as to the object or extent of the agreement of it was reduced to writing

'where a writing, and is not intended by the parties to define some of its terms, the parts of the actual contract as established by parol' Hood & Co criterion of the completeness of agreement of the parties in the writing itself. If it imports on its face to be a complete expression of the whole agreement,—that it contains such language as to be presumed that the parties intended to be governed by the agreement to which the

Jones § 440

Where a promissory note is silent as to interests this proviso does not preclude a party from setting up and proving a subsequent oral agreement to pay interest. Saudamoney v Spalding, 12 C L R 163. But where a bond declares that money is to be repaid with interest at a certain rate, an oral contract to the effect that no interest is to be paid but the person is to be in possession of a certain piece of land and to pay himself the interest out of the usufruct cannot be proved. Kalee Deen v Jogdat 172 Ind Cas 894—1930 A L J 1009=A I R 1930 All 440. Where there is a contract with a partnership and a promissory note signed by a partner in his own name and not in the name of the partnership, on evidence of such contract, all the partners will be liable. The principle that only the maker of the promissory note can be held liable contract is alleged evidence as to the 168

In considering whether or not this proviso applies etc. The principle applies only to formally complete contracts, for in such it is reasonable to suppose that the parties have set down all they intended, and omitted nothing. This presumption becomes weaker and weaker as the document is found to be less and less formal. Beharee v Kamnnee, 11 W R C R 319. And in the

v. H. 111 S. 27. On this ground the section directs the Courts in considering whether oral testimony is admitted or not, to have regard to the formality of the documents. The illustrations (g) and (h) N. 111 S. 27. Where a document is based on a negotiable instrument which is a document of a formal character, the existence of a separate oral agreement as to any matter on which the instrument is silent cannot be proved under s. 92 of the Evidence Act, as proviso 2 to the section would not apply to the case. A Shahyad Hundi is an instrument of a formal character and where it is silent as to interest, a separate oral agreement for payment of interest cannot be proved by virtue of proviso 2 to section 92 of the Evidence Act. K. v. Chand v. Gurhilla, 165 P. L. R. 1911; Patna v. Hemant, 1 M. L. J. 299, Lachmi v. Hemant, 18 C. W. N. 1249, 1a & Ishtiaq Ali (Case 212), but see Gowram Sri Ganesha v. Laxmi Bai, 11 C. W. N. 105-20 A 31-17 M. L. J. 35-1 A. L. J. 29-9 B. v. I. R. 1. Defendant in staged certain shops and their stock in trade to the plaintiff. The plaintiff alleged in the plaint that it was agreed that the rent should include the goods which might be brought into the shop subsequent to the date of the mortgage as well. It was found that the mortgage deed though registered was drawn up not by a lawyer, but by a petty scribe. H. 1 that in considering the degree of formality of the document the fact that it was not drawn up by a skilled lawyer was of much more importance than the fact that it was registered and that evidence of the alleged oral agreement was impossible under section 92, proviso, (2), of the Evidence Act. Sothi v. Chabhai, 11 L. B. R. 240-11 Bar L. 7 271.

When the informal and incomplete document is silent. Where the plaintiff's evidence proved that the written agreement about supply of consignments by defendant was agreement. Held that that there should be sent when the plaintiff the defendant was Sothi v. Chabhai

Where a deed of lease does not mention the place fixed for payment of rent, it is open to the plaintiff to show that it was subsequently agreed between the parties that rent was to be paid at a particular place. Onkur Prasad v. Baidi Das 8 N. L. J. 61-83 Ind. Cas. 273-A I. R. 1926 Nag. 281. Under this proviso the existence of any separate oral agreement as to any matter on which a document is silent and which is not inconsistent with its terms, may be proved. This proviso applies where the document is of an informal character, Jallora v. Jaram, 7 N. L. J. 25-53 Ind. Cas. 309. Following on a contract for sale of goods, the vendee gave a Parthanaman reciting the payment of a sum of money, and the varying terms of the contract, i. e., the quantity of goods, its price and the term of performance. It was signed only by one of the parties evidence of the real meaning of the words used. Summa v. Abu, 93 Ind. Cas. 193-A I. R. 1926 Nag. 301

Document is silent—and terms not inconsistent with the terms of the

2. Where a sale deed was executed for a consideration of Rs 35,000 but in fact settled by oral contract to be Rs 35,000 and the discharge or a mortgage for Rs 1,000, held that the oral contract is inadmissible in a suit for cancellation of the mortgage or for damages for breach of the oral contract under proviso 2 or 3 of section 92 of the Evidence Act Ramalrishna v Adityam Iyer, 14 M L T 385 = (1913) M W N 850 = 21 Ind Cas 463 A partition suit between two brothers was compromised and decree drawn up accordingly. The property was thereby divided between them in certain proportions. The plaintiff alleged that part of the terms of the compromise was that he should receive a certain sum of money from his brother in order to equalize the loss. The compromise to pay the money was not a separate agreement, but part and parcel of the contract the under proviso (2) to section J 770 = 21 Ind Cas 305 with H) of the promissory ly agreed that his liability on evidence of such an agreement of the Act—being a separate agreement on a matter on which the promissory note was silent and not inconsistent with its terms Motabhai v Mulji, 19 C W. N 713 = 25 M L J 589 = 13 A L J 529 = 39 B 399 Where a hatchita, on which a suit was brought, was virtually a memorandum of the loan without any mention of the rate of interest, section 92 sub section (2) of the Evidence Act did not the rate of interest agreed Chandra v Debendra, ment entered in a bahi to on 92 of the Evidence Act, and the existence of such an agreement is a question of fact which cannot be considered in second appeal Bhan Singh v Gokul, 53 Ind Cas 137 A mortgage bond contained the following stipulation for interest 'I have borrowed from you Rs 300 I shall pay for the aforesaid sum every year

..... of the Evidence Act to pay a Instru -56 Ind payable If it is it does Mouster writing it was stated therein that whatever award was made by the arbitrators would be binding on the parties to the reference. The award was made only by a majority of the arbitrators and it was sought to be proved that there was a separate contemporaneous oral agreement between the parties to the effect that the be binding on the parties. Held section 92 proviso (2) of the O L J. 471 = 47 Ind Cas 900 the holder of a certain document executed a registered deed by which not fit for here was dlord was dmissible to which orcement

Babal Ram v. Jhul, 19 A. L. J. 816—(3 Ind. Cas. 86). The interlined words and figures in an ekran were written after it had been signed by the defendant. The plaintiff's allegation was that there was an agreement made before the execution of the ekran which justified the alterations to the document which do not alter it in the least but merely explain it. Hell, the effect on the document will be as if no alteration had been made, and the plaintiff would be entitled to produce oral evidence of the oral agreement. Ganga Prasad v. Mohan, 13 Ind. Cas. 268—(1922) Nag. 191. It is open to a party to a partition to prove that a "share list" of properties is not the final partition but that it was orally agreed between them that a formal partition deed should be executed later on. If such agreement is proved the share list would be admissible without registration. Suntyram v. Gunjapannam, 16 L. W. 784. A reference in a partition suit related to the matters in dispute in the suit. At that time there was no dispute whatever as to the method of division of the property. The only dispute was whether the family was joint and whether the several valuable properties held by the defendant first party were liable to be partitioned. When the actual method of partition came to be discussed, it was suggested that certain people who were already parties to the suit might be brought in for the purpose of division of the property and an arrangement was made to this effect by the consent of all parties. Hell, that oral evidence was not inadmissible to prove the fact of this separate arrangement as to the method of division of the property. Tulsi Ram v. Budeo, 21 A. L. J. 705—95 Ind. Cas. 731—A. I. R. 1923 All. 667. Oral evidence is permissible under this proviso, to prove a separate oral agreement as regards interest where the bond is silent as to payment of interest. Rozario v. Harballath, 103 Ind. Cas. 791—A. I. R. 1927 Nag. 195. An oral agreement between the endorsee and the endorser of a negotiable instrument that the endorsee will recover the amount of the instrument for the drawer only is admissible under proviso 2 to section 92 of the Evidence Act. Suntery v. Abigail, 22 S. L. R. 219—105 Ind. Cas. 717—A. I. R. 1923 All. 667. An oral agreement between two brothers was com-
 The property was thereby diviplaintiff alleged that part of the receive a certain sum of money
 The compromise was however, for the defendant for that sum of oral evidence of the agreement, the property between the brothers was one of consequence the importance and the alleged oral agreement to pay the money was not a separate agreement, but ng, and the case did Abdul Hamid v.

PROVISIO (3).

Scope of the proviso (3) This proviso is based on the English rule which does not exclude evidence of oral agreement, which constitutes a condition on the defendant's plea that the property was divided by a compromise, and the defendants could not m, it was expressly

Abernethy's approval being obtained, and of the machine. It was held that such evidence written document was not operative. Pym

2. Chester v. Turner (1853) 13 Q.B. 681. In delivering his judgment, Erle J. said "The face of it, and that had been so, the evidence showed that it would have been so, in fact there was never any agreement at all. The production of the paper with his signature attached, afforded no evidence that a jury should if it be proved that in fact the paper was signed with the express intention that it should not be an agreement at all, and that the agreement does not vary an agreement and is admissible." Lord Campbell C.J. said "No addition to or variation from the terms of a written contract can be made by parol; but in this case the defence Evidence to that effect was overwhelming." Another case was S. 369, in which evidence was allowed of a verbal arrangement that a written agreement of the landlord The Court said "an escrow; it never nment of the obligation to operate by parol was not intended by way of and, been, ween until agree- and ill be 17 C. 370, until it all. But had not only rtion of the stipulation was intended words 'any act, and not he contracts nent signed ies to operate in a present e happening of an event L J Q B 277; Wallis v. Main conduct or writing is put forward against a party as his purporting act, no principle prevents him from showing that there never was a consummation of the act. Wigmore § 2403. "The truth is that the rules excluding parol evidence have no place in any inquiry in which the Court has not got before it some ascertained paper binding and of full effect." Per Wille P J in Guardhouse v Blackburn 1 L R 1 P & D 109; Wigmore § 2403.

"On the one hand", says Prof Wigmore, "it is well accepted that the handing of the deed to a third person is not necessarily final, the document may still be withdrawn, or (less correctly) 'revoked'. On the other hand, the maker's retention of the document does not necessarily negative the act's finality, this too, may be deemed unquestionable law since Mr Justice Blackburn's masterly exposition Doe v Knight, 11 B & C 671." Wigmore § 2403. In Zenos v Wickham, 2 H L C. 296, Blackburn J said: "No particular technical form of words or acts is necessary to render an instrument the deed of the party sealing it; the mere affixing the seal does not render it a deed, but as soon as there are acts or words sufficient to show that it is intended by the party to be executed as his deed presently finding on him, it is sufficient." See also Gudgen v Besset, 6 E & B, 9-0. The true construction to be placed on this proviso is that the provisions thereof are inapplicable in a case in which any obligation under the written contract has attached and if the effect of the alleged contemporaneous oral agreement is merely to suspend the performance of the obligations contained in the written contract, evidence of such oral agreement cannot be admitted. On the other hand, it is permissible to adduce evidence of a contemporaneous oral agreement under which the parties to the written contract agreed that until the happening of a certain event no obligation whatever under the agreed to postpone the enforcement of a promissory note. Subramania v Narayan, 90 Ind Cas 1020-(1925) M W N 601-A. I. R 1925 Mad 1240 written contract to be varied by a contemporaneous oral agreement, but having regard to illustrations (b) and (j), the proper meaning of that proviso is that a contemporaneous oral agreement to the effect that a written contract was to be of no force or effect at all, and that it was to impose no obligation at all until the happening of a certain event, may be proved. Where an oral agreement purports to provide that the promise to pay on demand in a promissory note, though absolute in its terms, is not to be enforceable by a suit, until the happening of a certain event, or, in other words, that the legal objection to perform the promise is to be postponed, such an agreement does not fall within the proviso 3 of the Indian Evidence Act. Ramjibun v Oghore, 25 C 401-2 C W N. 188, see also Jaimal v Nandlal, A I R 1933 Lah 549-33 P L R 712.

Where a certain property was sold by the defendant to the plaintiff for Rs 480 and it appeared that there was a separate arrangement between the parties for the payment of a certain amount to the defendant which would be a condition precedent to the sale taking effect, held, that proof of such an agreement was not barred by section 92. Maung Mon v Ma Kin Oh, 5 Rang 636. See also Lal Hia v Bharadwaja 4 Bur L J 38=88 Ind Cas 336=A I R 1925 Rang 256. Failure of condition precedent to written agreement as fixed by oral agreement can be proved but oral agreement as to getting off amount due to the executant of the promissory note on a separate account can not be proved. Ram Singh v Ibrahim 18 S L R 39=A I R 1925 Sind 136. The admissibility of an oral agreement contemporaneous with a written document will depend to some extent upon the way in which the case is presented. Anderson v. Walter, 29 C W N 670=88 Ind Cas 435=A I R 1925 Cal 800.

Any obligation The true meaning of the words "any obligation" in this proviso is any obligation whatever under the contract and not some 'particular obligation' which the contract may contain. Irfan v Jogendra, A I R 1932 Cal 708=36 C W N 451=59 C 1111, Kadhalishen v Durga Prosad, 59 C 106=A I R 1932 Cal 328.

Escrow That specific variety of delivery to a third person which consists in naming a condition precedent to be performed and making the act final except for the happening of the condition—the usual meaning of escrow—, has

will be received to show that a deed was delivered in escrow, and when an agreement was without consideration and was delivered on conditions such conditions may be proved. Pym v Campbell, 6 L. & B 370, Pattle v Hornbrook, (1897) 1 Ch 25. 'The manual delivery of an instrument may always be proved to have been on a condition which has not been fulfilled in order to avoid its effect. This is not to show any modification or alteration of the written agreement, but to show that it never became operative and that its obligation never commenced.' Wilson v Powers, 131 Mass 537, Burr Jones § 971. It is not necessary that the restrictive delivery should be express all the circumstances of the case. Bessel 11 E & B 561. Ev 7th Ed 561. riding power grantor's death. Hospital v C in whose favor intended to o. 576, but see Bell v Ingestre, 12 Q B 317, Watkins v Nash, L R 20 Q B 266; London v Subfield, (1897) 2 Ch 608, Johnson v Clark, (1908) 1 Ch 303, 319.)

Parol proof as to execution and delivery and suspension of operation On the principle so often referred to that parol evidence is admissible to show that there never was any actual agreement it may, of course be shown that there was no proper execution or delivery of the apparent agreement. (Vide proviso 1). When the execution of a deed is in issue, what was said and done at the time and by whom done are the very vital facts. Burr Jones § 471. If a deed has never been delivered, or if a party to an instrument obtains possession thereof by fraud or in any improper manner this of necessity must be shown by parol; and such evidence is no contradiction of the writing. The act and fact of delivery is independent of the language of the instrument. Delivery consists of an act of the hand joined with a purpose of the mind. It comes after the scrivener has done his work, and after signing of the paper. Whether or not a deed was delivered is an issue frequently made in the Courts and has been refused delivery. It is shown that the deed of the other party, or that by mistake of both parties a wrong paper was delivered. Burr Jones § 471. A and B enter into a written agreement for the sale of an interest in a patent, and at the same time agree verbally that the agreement shall not come into force unless C approves of it. C does not approve. The party interested may ... A may prove the condition as to C's consent, and the fact that he does not consent. Hallie v Lutell, 11 Com B N S 369-31 L J C P 100

In a suit on a promissory note the defendant pleaded an oral agreement that plaintiff should discharge a mortgage that was subsisting on the property sold to him by the plaintiff before he could enforce payment of the amount due on the promissory note. Held that the agreement pleaded is not admissible in evidence under s 92, proviso (3). The proviso will apply to the case of a non-attachment of an obligation under the written contract until the event provided for in the oral agreement happens and not to the case of a mere postponement of the performance of the legal obligation until the happening of the event. Muniamma v Surappa, 1 Mys L J 71. Where in a suit on a promissory note, the defendant pleads an oral agreement at the time to set off money due to the executant under some other account, the agreement is not in the nature of the document and is not admissible in suit on a promissory note, executed by P N in respect of which P H stood surety without mentioning the terms of the contract in the plaint. P H contended that he was not a party to the transaction and that the oral agreement could only be determined by the evidence of the executant, which was upheld. Evidence Act, the oral evidence as to the surety's part in the transaction is admissible to the written and the oral agreement to the attaching of any liability surety and that it is not open to the plaintiff to treat the promissory note as a separate contract and to enforce it without taking the whole contract into account. Maneckjee v Maung Po Han, 2 Rang 100-102. An attempt to show that the agreement reduced 135 It is open to a person who admits the execution of a promissory note to plead want of consideration therefor. Lallu Mal v Reoti Ram, 45 A 679-21 A L J 669-71 Ind Cas 353 (1). In a suit on a promissory note the defence was that the promissory note in the suit was passed to secure the plaintiff mort-which the high it was be proved Ubhaya,

Proviso 3 is intended to embody contract being entered into it is written agreement shall not be of a precedent has been performed, possible to show that the condition has not the written contract has not become binding there is in fact no written agreement. 90 L J 273-4 U P L R (O C), 270 The proviso cannot help a defendant who wishes to prove a separate oral agreement, as to the rate of interest between him and the plaintiff, when the document provides for interest at a specific rate. Ibid. A person is not permitted to vary the terms of a written contract by proof of a contemporaneous oral agreement under this proviso; a contemporaneous oral agreement to the effect that a written contract was to be of no force at all and that it was to impose no obligation at all, until the happening of a certain event may be proved. It may be shown that the instrument was not meant to operate until the happening of a given condition; but it cannot be shown by parol evidence that the agreement is to be defeated on the happening of a given event. Ali Jauad v Kulnan, 41 A 421=20 A L J 247=66 Ind C 131.

Under this proviso, a party is entitled to prove the existence of a separate oral agreement constituting a condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation under the contract and consequently, to show that the contract is to be considered as binding only when confirmed by the principals themselves. Dinanath v Metharam, 33 C L J 577. In a suit on a promissory note payable on demand, it is not open to the defendant to plead by way of defence a contemporaneous oral agreement where the plaintiff has agreed that he will not present the note although it is payable on demand until he has discharged certain incumbrances on the property he has sold to a stranger. Vishnu v Ganesh, 45 B 1135=23 Bom L R 498=63 Ind C 673.

478=50 Ind Cas 918

In a suit on two promissory notes, which contained the words "I promise to pay you hereafter", the defendant pleaded that there existed a separate oral agreement constituting a condition precedent to the attaching of the obligation and that the word "hereafter" in the two notes referred to that agreement. Held that the alleged oral agreement was admissible in evidence under proviso 3 of section 92. Kinlock v Isa Ram, 51 P R 1877. Where the plaintiff purported to sell certain land to the defendants under a deed of sale, and there was an arrangement that the deed should take effect only if the defendants succeeded

bn
t
f Chand, A W N 1882, 93

the defendant tendered upon the understanding condition precedent was admissible. Kishen v

PROVISO (4).

Scope of the proviso (4). Parol evidence is admissible to prove any substance of such document, enforce of such B 127= ing the judgment of the Court, which consisted of Taunton, Littledale, Parke and Patteson JJ) said 'By the general rule of common law, if there be a contract which has been reduced into writing verbal evidence is not allowed to be given of what passed between the parties, either before the written instrument was made, or during the time that it was in a state of preparation so as to add to or subtract from, or in any manner to vary or qualify the written contract, but after the agreement has been reduced into writing, it is competent to the parties, at any time before breach of it, by a new contract not in writing, either partly by the subsequent verbal terms engrafted upon what will be thus left of the written agreement. And if the present contract was not subject to the control of any Act of Parliament, we think that it would have been competent for the parties, by word or mouth, to dispense with requiring a good title to be made to the lot in question, and that the action might be maintained. But the Statute of Frauds has made certain regulations as to contracts for the sale of lands. (50) We think the object of the Statute of Frauds was to exclude all oral evidence as to contracts of the sale of lands, and that any contract which is sought to be enforced must be proved by the writing only. This proviso deals with two points. In the first place, it lays down that if a transaction has been reduced into writing, not because the law requires it but because the parties find it convenient, then since there is nothing in general law, which prevents them from subsequently modifying it or rescinding it altogether by oral agreement, there is nothing in the rules of evidence, which prevents them from proving the alteration or rescission. But a matter which the law requires to be in writing can no more be altered by a subsequent than by a contemporaneous oral agreement, because the rule of law prohibits it. Markby, F. 73. It was contended in a case that the word "or" should be interpreted as "and" and as such oral evidence should be admissible in cases of documents which are not compulsorily registrable but which have been registered. This contention however was negatived. Docon v. Shutooth, 9 C. W. N. cxxiv. Under this proviso evidence of a subsequent oral agreement rescinding or modifying a contract, etc. in writing is not admissible but the proviso does not exclude a distinct subsequent new oral agreement superseding the old contract in toto. Lakshmi v. Amir Khan, 11 P. R. 1689. Under proviso 4 in certain cases a subsequent oral agreement to modify previous contract may be proved but this is not permitted where the law required that the terms of the contract should be proved by the terms of the contract. Evidence is entirely inadmissible. Collector of Estate v. Gobinda, 1193. But where the mortgagor pleaded a subsequent oral agreement whereby the mortgagee proviso 4 to section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, whether executed or executory. M. 368. The provisions of this evidence to prove the discharge of a mortgage bond. Amir v. Gobinda, 4 C. W. N. 301.

Parol proof of subsequent agreement. The general rule under discussion however does not prevent the proof of the existence of any distinct subsequent oral agreement to rescind or modify any such contract grant or disposition of property, provided that such agreement is not invalid under the Statute of Frauds or otherwise. Steph. Ev. Art. 90, Goss v. Nugen, 4 Barn. & Ad. 58. The general rule does not purport to exclude negotiations respecting written changed, that performance has been prevented or waived by the other party, portion of the rent renewed under a Kabuliat by means of an agreement subsequent to the date of the instrument. Held, that the acts and conduct of the parties were not admissible in evidence to prove that the terms of the agreement had been varied. Lakshmi v. Nabadurip, 116 Ind. Cas. 733-56 C. 201-A. I. R. 1929 Cal. 437. So an agreement by conduct, or an equity arising from the circumstances though no amounting to an agreement, will have the same effect Hughes v Metropolitan Ry Co, 2 App Cas 439; Morrell v Studd, (1913) 2 Ch 648; Phip Ex 7th Ed 364; Roscoe C. Ex 267; Taylor §§ 1141—1146. The expression "oral agreement" as used in this proviso is wide enough to include all written agreements whether they are oral or they are implied from acts and conduct of the parties Kumau v Radhika, 10 Pat L T 669 = A I R 1929 Pat 717, Mayandi v Oliver, 22 M 261; Radha Raman v Bhabani, 12 C L J 439 = 6 C 12 C L J 646, see also Morell v Studd, (1904) 1 Ch 305 (312), Hughes v Metro Ry Sundari, 20 C W N 680 = 32 Ind Cas is used in the sense of "not committed to agreements whether come to by word conduct of the parties Mayandi v Oliver regards the alternative claim of the plaintiff claiming the property whereby she alleged plaintiffs under the Evidence Act was no bar to an enquiry into the merits of the latter defence based on the agreement, for the subject of the alleged oral agreement was not to rescind the original transaction, as affected between the plaintiffs and their vendor, but to transfer any right acquired by the plaintiffs to the defendant Rakhamabai v Tukaram, 11 B 47.

Parol proof of subsequent agreement, in case where the document has been reduced into writing. The exclusion of evidence by section 92, is it self excluded by proviso 4, and a notification of a written agreement to submit matters in dispute to arbitration can be proved by oral evidence Pyarilal v Ghanaram, 83 Ind Cas 22 = A I R 1925 Nag 203. In a written lease for a period of 5 years there was a condition that if the lessee desired a renewal he should give a written notice three months before the expiration of the term of the lease. The lessee alleged that one of the lessors had told his wife that there was no need to give a written notice as provided for by the lease.

rescission of the contract of lease within s 92 proviso 4 of the Evidence Act Marx D' Cruz v Jitendra Nath, 46 C 1079 = 30 C L J 94 = 53 Ind Cas 681. Under proviso 4, a party is entitled to prove the existence of any distinct subsequent oral is neither req the law in parties, who have bound themselves by a written agreement, depart from what has been so agreed on in writing and adopt some other line of conduct, it is incumbent on the party insisting on and endeavouring to enforce a substituted

5 Prior to the due with interest, the agreement whereby towards the discharge of the bond debt. In a suit by obligor, to recover the property to the second defendant under the power of sale contained in the mortgage deed. The plaintiff mortgagor sued for a declaration that the sale was void and for redemption contending that, on the day before the sale took place, the first defendant orally agreed to give him four days' time within which to pay off his mortgage debt and to postpone the sale, and that the second defendant had not entered into a purchase. Hell that oral evidence of it did not fall within proviso 4 of section 17 (b) of the Registration Act, 1908, being an agreement to modify any of the provisions of the Act. lagu in Dar, 26 II 318. Oral evidence of an agreement subsequent to the execution of a promissory note payable on demand varying its terms as regards its exigibility on demand is precluded under this section. Sheikh Jamu v. Muhammad, 90 Ind Cas 378. Where a partnership is formed in 1921 between P and D to carry on certain business and under the terms of the contract which are reduced to writing and registered, the partnership is to continue for five years, an oral evidence to prove that the partnership had in spite of the terms in the contract, been dissolved in June 1922 and P was paid his share of the assets is admissible. Nurul Hasan v. Imambur, A. I. R. 1932 Nag 12.

Parol proof of subsequent agreement in cases of transaction which is required by law to be in writing and registered. Where the parties enter into a contract, they can substitute another in its place and the substituted contract is the one to be looked to, not the one which was first entered into. If the law requires that the substituted contract shall be made only in a certain way and in compliance with certain formalities such as writing and registration then unless it is so made, it cannot take effect and the old contract subsists. U Kyo v. My Pan Yo, 74 Ind Cas 151-1923 Rang 102. So when an agreement modifying registered, it is not open to the defendant to prove by oral evidence that the lease was surrendered under a later oral agreement of the parties. Doda v. Muttayya, 2 Mys L J 124. An oral agreement to receive lesser amount than was due on a registered mortgage deed in full discharge of it cannot be proved under s. 92 (4) of the Evidence Act and section 17 (b) of the Registration Act. In ayan v. Supham, evidence of an oral agreement to discharge a registered mortgage deed is inadmissible. Maung Myat v. ang 322. Even though a tenancy has been created by a registered instrument the termination existence of a subsequent oral agreement is excluded not only in cases in which the original contract, grant or disposition of property is by law required to be in writing, but also in cases in which the contract or grant or disposition of property has been registered. C. nothing to prevent or of a claim. Maung Pa. A. I. R. 1928 Rang 141. A contract of simple money debt is not required by merely an agreement as regards the mode of payment but an alteration of the character of mortgage itself such as changing the original mortgage which was without possession into a usufructuary mortgage, it is not admissible. Chandra v. Akbar, 110 Ind Cas 261. One of several mortgagors can enter into an oral

2. agreement with the mortgagee for the redemption of his share only of the mortgage and proof of the oral agreement under which money is paid for redemption is not precluded by section 92, proviso 4 of the Evidence Act. The proof of oral agreement and payment does not amount to a rescission of the contract of mortgage but discharged to that extent.
 I R 1928 Mad 1050.
 evidence is inadmissible.
 Bom 522, Mahomed v Nanhe Mal, 27 A L J 924=119 Ind Cas 197=A I R 1929 A 615. An oral agreement, between the mortgagor and the mortgagee where the p
 the p

tract is 537=A
 age oral
 R 1928
 ie payment of
 in evidence
 a subsequent tered mortgage
 it has to be ction 92 of the =48 Ind Cas

168 In a
 led oral evid
 n lesser sur
Held, that the evidence was inadmissible under section 92, proviso 4 of the Evidence Act, the defendant's or lesser sum given in full satisfaction on the mortgage. Jagannath v Ind Cas 689. Eve
 orally surrender h
 was not for a fixed Sens, 47 C 129
 Rs 100 is created by a registered instrument it will not preclude the admission in evidence of an unregistered instrument to show that the interest has been relinquished. A relinquishment for consideration may be recorded as a conveyance and in the view of a document by which an interest in immoveable property of the value of less than Rs 100 is relinquished does not require registration. Sorman v Molla, 37 Ind Cas 949.

Under this proviso any variation of rent reserved by a registered lease must be made by a registered instrument, and oral evidence is inadmissible to prove such variation and an agreement is nonetheless oral because it is inferred from the conduct of the parties. Manindra v Dunga, 20 C W N 680=32 Ind Cas 185. Evidence that since the execution of the Kabuliyat, the tenant paid rent at a lower rate than that stated in the Kabuliyat is admissible to show that the intention of the parties was that the Kabuliyat from the
 been a waiver of the rs, 20 C W N 680=32
 mortgage or sale-deeds was no law which required a sale deed of immoveable property to be in writing. Jang Ram v Sheoraj Singh 30 Ind Cas 234. This proviso precludes evidence of an oral agreement to 27 Ind Cas 269

 orally agreed to a
 The conduct of th
 reduced rate is in
 I R 1930 Nag 235. Although a mortgage deed has been duly executed and attested and no obligation attaches thereunder till certain conditions have been fulfilled, upon fulfilment of the conditions, the obligation attaches from the date of its execution and not from the date of registration or delivery of the deed. Jadunandan v Kalyan Singh, 15 C L J. 61=16 C W N 612=13 Ind Cas 653. Section 92 (4) does not exclude evidence of oral agreement substituting a new contract for a previous one in writing and registered. That clause refers only to an oral agreement to rescind or modify such contract. Jagat Sing v Devi Datta Mall 169 P. R. 1883. In a suit for redemption of the mortgage, the defendant pleaded a sale of the mortgaged property. Held that section 92, clause (4) does not exclude evidence of sale; for the new contract does not rescind or modify the former one which is merely cause at that time there Srinnasa,

 mortgagee
 by the deed
 ks at such
 436=A

merged in the new one : Balbhouch v Hira, 70 P. R. 1891. Evidence of conduct showing cancellation of a registered mortgage : Srinivas Srinani v Athmaram, 5 M. L. T.

A parol agreement between a mortgagee and the assignee of his interest, whereby the latter was to pay the consideration for the sale to a third party to the credit of the mortgagee, is a law to be in writing, by a subseq

(4) of the Evidence Act and 7 Ind Cas 310; see also Kallika

Where the lessee under a registered lease-deed contend that they were cultivating an additional area by virtue of an oral agreement. Held that evidence of a simultaneous oral agreement was barred by s 92 and that evidence about subsequent oral agreement was not admissible. See also 12 C. L. due for

Mani, a plaintiff from the evidence of 12 C. L. due for and the defendant was not bound to pay at the rate stipulated in the lease arrangement does not in any way affect the mortgage or where it does not modify or vary the terms of the mortgage, it is not inadmissible under this proviso. Kedar Singh v Sumer Singh, 10 Ind Cas 196. An oral agreement to take less than what is due under a registered mortgage bond would be inadmissible. But a discharge extinto a party to a registered sale deed to prove an oral agreement by evidence either oral or documentary contemporaneous with the sale-deed, that in spite of a certain property, belonging to the vendor, being entered in the sale deed, title to it would not pass to the vendee. Kumcar Ram v Ananda Krishna, 118 Ind Cas 589 = A. I. R. 1929 A. 578, Umedmal v Davu, 2 B. 547; Dicarka v Bhogaban, 7 C. L. R. 577

English law—A contract required by law to be in writing, may whether before or after breach, be wholly rescinded by an oral agreement, even though the latter be not itself enforceable. Morris v Baron, (1918) A. C. 1 (disapproving Williams v Moss's Empries (1915) 3 K. B. 243), British and Beningtons N. W. Cachar Tea Co., (1923) A. C. 48, Goss v Nugent, 5 B. & Ad. 58, 65, Noble v Ward L. R. 2 thereby (Ibid., Stead En 234, Vexey v Rat the original contract Stowell v Robinson, 3 contracts by deed could neither be rescinded nor varied by parol (West v Blakeau 2 M. & Gr. 729; Steads v Steeds, 22 Q. B. D. 539). Now however following the equitable rule, (Webb cannot technically be released, may Ambegate Ry Co 17 Q. B. D. 127, Whether they can also be varied seem Contracts 7th Ed p 599 and Kelle Ed 565

PROVISO (5)

Scope of proviso (5) Parol evidence of usage or custom is always admissible where the object is to render intelligible to the Court the meaning in which parties have used language. Nort. Et. 277 So parol evidence may be given in order that it may be a plain written transaction, unless it is in a case which was a case of an agricultural of a custom whereby, contrary to the general law the tenant, on leaving in the end of his term, was allowed to take away his 'way going crop' that is to say, all the corn growing upon the said land which hath before the expiration of such term been sown by such tenant upon any part of such lands, although the lease was in writing and no mention was therein made of such custom. Vanfield v. C. J. said 'This contradicts the agreement though not mentioned in Wignine, (1831) cutting of timber was being taken to have Cas. 352 So it is to show that thing are by usage or custom in particular cases treated as incidental and accessory to the principal thing. Nort. Et. 277 Thus, it may be shown that day of that a contract of hiring is but the outgoing tenant shall always be admissible to prove as to the obligation of the parties in such transactions as that in question, or as to the meaning of words or terms used, in order that it may be applied to the subject matter and bind the parties to a written transaction unless it is inconsistent with the writing. Cockle v. Cas. Et. 352 In Brown v. Byrne 3 E. & B 703 = 23 L. J. Q. B. 313 - Cockle v. Cas. Et. 352 - Thayer v. Cas. Et. 911 a bill of lading specified a certain amount payable for freight. Parol evidence was offered of a custom whereby three months' credit of discount was allowed for freight. The evidence was held

Dalton v. S. M. L. C. 200

Court, Coleridge J. said 'The are perfectly clear, the difficulties Mercantile contracts are very merchant's, the intention of the world is defeated if the world is in order as to the proceed with the tacit assumption of these usage, they commonly reduce into writing the special particulars of their agreement but omit to specify these known usages or the ordinary words for in during evidence only freight on delivery at a certain rate per pound is inconsistent with this to allege that, by the custom, the ship-owner, on payment is bound to allow three months' discount? We think not. Wells v Plummer, 2 B & Ald 716, and Hutton v. Warren, 1 M. & W. 486, are cases which illustrate this principle. In the first of these, by the custom of the country the outgoing tenant was bound to do certain acts, and entitled to receive certain compensation, but the lease which formed the written contract bound him to do the same acts in substance, and specially provided for his payment as to some of them, omitting the others, and the Court held that the expression as to some excluded the implication as to the remainder, and the language of the lease was equivalent to a stipulation that the lessor should pay for the things mentioned and no more. The custom therefore would have been repugnant to the contract. But in the latter case, in which the former was expressly recognized, the Court held that a specific provision, as to a matter de hors the custom, left the custom untouched and in full force. The contract was not repugnant to the custom, but was based on the well summarized by an eminent author, thus — (1) To annex incidents to contracts and Wills. (2) To explain the meaning of peculiar or technical terms. (3) To furnish standard of comparisons on questions of negligence, etc. (4) To fix a party with knowledge or notice of this subject matter of the usage. (5) To rebut a fraudulent intent. Cochle Case 351.

To annex incidents to written instruments. Extrinsic evidence is admissible to annex incidents to a written instrument, where the inclusion of such incidents is consistent with the writing, and carries out the intention of the parties. In such cases the notoriety of the usage makes it probable and reasonable that the parties intended it to be a term of their contract. Thus, where a written contract contained a stipulation that a party should 'lose no time on his own account, and do his work well and behave himself in all respects as a good servant,' extrinsic evidence was received to show that, by the custom of his trade such a party was entitled to certain holidays. R v Stole Upon Trent, 5 Q B 803, Pouell Ex 190. In Hutton v Warren, 1 M & W 476, Parke B said, 'It has long been well settled that in commercial transactions extrinsic evidence of custom or usage is admissible to annex incidents to written of presumption that in such transactions the parties did not mean to express in writing the whole of the contract by which they intended to be bound, but to contract with reference to those known usages.' So in the case of mercantile contracts, the evidence is not confined to the explanation of the written terms. Provided they are not inconsistent with the contract, it is allowed to supply

their
brokers neither prove as this condition, both may be received for certain purposes. To use the language of Mr Phillips, (in Vol II, p 415, 10th Ed) — 'Evidence of usage has been admitted as to contracts relating to transactions of commerce and trade, farming, or other business, for the purpose of defining what would otherwise be indefinite, or to interpret a [] what was equivocal mentioned in the contract out of them, and .

using the
"Now,
ivable to subject to

2. effect, as far as can be done, to the present intention of the parties' Now here the plaintiff did not seek by the evidence of usage to contradict what the tenor of the note primarily imports, namely, that this was a contract which the defendants made as brokers. The evidence is based on this the usage can have no operation except on the assumption of their having acted as broker, and of there having been a contract made with their principal. But the plaintiff by the evidence seeks to show that according to the usage of the trade and as those concerned in the trade understand the words used, they imported something more, namely, if the buying broker did not disclose the name of his principal, it might become a contract with the broker as principal, if the seller pleased. Whether this evidence adds a tacitly implied meaning to the words as expressed, is not material.

it labours under the objection of introducing something repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the tenor of the written instrument; and, upon consideration of the sense in which that objection must be understood with reference to this question, is added to what it appeared that it appeared written contract two would seem Take a familiar instance by way of illustration. On the face of it, one of the exchange, at three months after date, the acceptor will be taken to bind himself to the payment of the bill, and to be bound to do so in any country in which the bill is payable, and that the principle is not set down on the face of the bill.

necessary to be determined in the particular which of course might vary infinitely, standing all those general and unvarying would annex, and according to which they must in reason be understood to contract unless they expressly exclude them. To fall within the exception and on the written arrant given to Yates v Pym 6
to say, all not surface Company
ugh the books

and moving in a narrow circle, and meeting each other daily, desire to write little and leave unwritten what they take for granted in every contract. In spite of the lamentations of Judges they still continue to do so; and, in a vast majority of cases of which Courts of law hear nothing, they do so without loss or inconvenience; and upon the whole they find considered to be a contract is a contract. Goodere Ev p 313-314.

So the true and appropriate office of a usage or custom is to interpret an otherwise indeterminate intention of the parties, and to ascertain the nature and extent of their contracts, arising not from explication and presumptions, and acts of a doubt. Hence, it is that in respect contract, unless they expressly exclude them. It is on this principle that, in a great number and variety of cases in England and in this country, parol evidence has been admitted of local or general usages of trade and commerce to ascertain the true meaning of written contracts. Southwell v. Boreditch, 1 C. P. Div. 374; Fleet v. Murton, L. R. 7 Q. B. 126, Humphrey v. Dale, 7 Ill. & N. 266; Imperial Bank v. Smith & Wilson, 3 B. & Ald. 728, Brown v. Starkie, 210, Boices v. C. W. N. 365, K. M. P. R. 299, Parker v. Ibbetson, 26 L. J. C. P. 236; Hutton v. Warren 5 L. J. Ex. 231, Gibson v. Small, 1 H. L. C. 396. In a doul kahuliyat creating a tenancy for a term of years there was an express statement that the tenant had no right of sale, gift or transfer without the landlord's consent and the only right shown was an option in the tenant to take a renewal of the lease within one year after the expiry of the term at the rate of rent prevalent in the pergannah failing which the tenancy would pass into the landlord's possession. Held, that the tenancy created by it was neither heritable nor transferable and that no evidence of custom was admissible on those heads. Mahomed v. Prodyot, 18 C. 379-25 C. W. N. 13-61 Ind. Cas.

A. L. J. 29-9 Bom. L. R. 1

To explain the meaning of Peculiar or technical terms. Peculiar expressions or terms are to be given the meaning which they have acquired in such business by common usage, unless, by the express terms of contract, such usage is excluded, or is inconsistent with the contract. Burr Jones § 457. Proof of usage, say Dr Greenleaf, is admitted either to interpret the meaning of the terms of the contract, or to ascertain the nature and extent of the

R. v. Newcastle Burr 669, R. v. Sayer, 10 H. & C. 486, Myer v. Sari, 3 E. & E. 306. Where in a mortgage deed, it was stipulated that the mortgage should not be redeemed "from 1287 to 1298 Fash, for 12 years" alluded to was not the Fash year as commonly understood, but agricultural year. Sheoboran v. Bisheshar, A. W. N. 1892, 236. The question whether a specification of a

The usage must be known. Closely allied to the requisite of long establishment of a usage, that of its being known is of equal and far reaching importance. Judicial notice is taken of the general custom of the country and there are certain commercial customs and usages of which every person in the community is deemed to be cognizant such, for example, as those belonging to the law merchant. But the usages of special trades and those local usages which may be limited to certain communities cannot, of course, be presumed to be known to all. Sleight v Hartshore, 2 Johns (N Y) 531. These have been called usages, as contradistinguished from the generally recognized customs of business. Clark v Baler, 52 Mass, 186. In respect to these usages there should be either proof of actual knowledge on the part of the person to be affected, or proof of circumstances from which such knowledge may be fairly implied. Byrd v Beall, 150 Ala 122, 124. If a usage is special, and confined to a particular business, or has reference to a particular place only, there is no such presumption and it is manifest that it would be unjust to admit it in order that both by it. E particular places there is a presumption that parties who are engaged in trade contract in reference to the particular custom this presumption is at best but a prima facie one liable to be rebutted by proof that it was unknown to the party against whom it is set up, and, on that being proved, no weight ought to be given to it. Isaksson v Williams, 26 Fed 642. The customs of an individual in his private business are not binding upon others unless known. Burr Jones § 464, see also Mana Vikaram v Pattar, 2 M 275. The law of the country is applicable to the contract which the parties making the instrument N 365-35 In!

Cas 3

Custom of usage is the contract, reference to such usage it is clear that proof of the usage should not be received if it contradicts expressly or by implication the language of the contract. As may be admissible to explain what is plain. Blackett v Royal Tyr 266, see also Indar Chandar v Nandalal v Gurupada 51 C 558, ones v Shand, 46 L J Q B 561, Iohan v Kaisri, 11 M 1 A 260, 1 Cas 268, Macfarlane v Curri, 8 B 2 App 1, Norris v Panchanandi r is expressed to be subject to cond or custom which is repugnant to the documents. Ahoo v Nanigram

The way and Salk 283 In ad to turn to ing Turley v the land law in England, and those customs, which have been universally and notoriously prevalent amongst merchants, and have been found by experience to be of public use, have been adopted as a part of it, upon a principle of convenience and for the benefit of trade and commerce, and when so adopted it is unnecessary to plead or prove them. Barnett v Branduo G M & L 630. But the usages of special trades, and those local usages which may be limited to certain communities cannot of course, be presumed to be known to all. Such customs or usages, must be proved, either (a) by direct evidence of witnesses (which must be positive and not amount to mere opinion), (b) by a series of particular instances in which it has been acted upon (c) by proof of similar customs in the same or analogous trades in other localities. Cockle Cut

PROVISIO (6).

Scope of proviso (6). "The Privy Council have decided in an unreported case (Pray decided on 5th May, 1924), Tenkata Sudhadraay 1921 P. C. 162-80 Ind Cas 807-52 I A. 1-48 M. 10 P. C., that where a written contract was doubtful in its meaning, the surrounding circumstances existing at the creation of the contract and the subsequent matter to which it was designed and intended to apply could be looked into. Again their Lordships held in another unreported case (Privy Council Appeal No. 10 of 1923, decided on 18th December, 1923) M. Thangay, M. Than, A I R 1921 P. C. 88-80 Ind Cas 1031-51 I A 1-51 Cal 374-5 Rang 175 (P C) that where a written contract was of doubtful import the conduct of the parties might be looked into to help the Court to obtain an explanation of the true meaning of the contract." Per Mukherjee J in Nand Kishore v. Behari Lal, A I R 1932 All 600-1932 A L J. 329. Upto a certain point, and apart from any question of ambiguity, extrinsic evidence would be necessary to point the operation of the simplest instrument. Thus, were it the case of a deed conveying all the lands at A in the grantor's occupation until it was defined by proof what lands were in his occupation, the operation of the deed could not be known. So, were it a case of a Will, and a bequest to the children, of a party, or even to the testator's own children, to give effect to the bequest it would be necessary to define who the children were. Goodeve Ex p 355 "Some evidence" says I C Wood in In the matter of Feltham; 1 Kay & John 528, "is necessary in any case of a Will, that is to say evidence to show the subject and objects of the gift." See also section 75 of the Indian Succession Act (XVI of 1925) "The law" says things to which requisite in cons covered, which natural construction, but exhaust the whole of those words then the investigation must stop, you are bound to take the interpretation which entirely exhausts the whole of

to go any further interpreting testator, with I am not, I

what were the intentions of the testator, as contrasted with, or extending or contracting the language which he has used" Webb v Dyng, (1855) 1 K & J 580 (595). So in construing a written statement the situation of the parties must be looked at, and the deed must be construed with reference to the situation of ed Rabutti Dass v
creations are only cited imperfection of the
as to determining its meaning usually arises, and nothing is more settled than that evidence is receivable of all the circumstances surrounding the instrument, for the purpose of throwing their light on its interpretation. It is indeed by these, by a lamp, that the Court reads the document Goodeve Ex p 356. This proviso applies whether a writing is required by law or not. It proceeds upon a principle, which has been stated thus—that a person who has to interpret a document, ought to 24 B 510, 515 525 "As it is a leading rule," says Dr Greenleaf "in regard to written instruments, that they are to be interpreted according to their subject, it is obvious that parol or verbal testimony must be resorted to, in order to ascertain the nature and qualities of the subject, to which the instrument refers. Evidence which is calculated to explain the subject of an instrument is essentially different in its character from evidence of verbal communications respecting it. Whatever, therefore, indicates the nature of the subject, is a just medium of interpretation of the language and not a foundation for giving it a relatively, different from that. Thus, where certain premises and bounds, and the question was, whether a cellar under the yard, was or not included in the lease, verbal evidence was held admissible to show that, at the time of the lease, the cellar was in the occupancy of another tenant, and, therefore, that it could not have been intended by the parties that it should pass by the lease. Doe d. Freeland mill, or a factory is conveyed, and parcel thereof, and so passed admitted" Greenl. Ev. § 236

So it is clear that extrinsic evidence of every material fact which will enable the Court to ascertain the intention of the parties to the instrument, or in other

Mumford v. Gettling, 29 L. J. C. P. 105, Chambers v. Kelly, 1 R. 7 C. L. 231, McCollin v. Gilpin, L. R. 6 Q. B. D. 516, Bank of New Zealand v. Simpson (1900) A. C. 182. Whatever be the nature of the document under review, the object is to discover the intention of the writer as evidenced by the words he admitted to show what property is known by that name (Ricketts v. Turquand, 1 H. L. Cas. 472) Taylor § 1191. But it is well settled that the terms of an unambiguous document cannot be controlled by the conduct of the parties. As Lord Halsbury said in North Eastern Railway v. Hastings (1900) A. C. 290 no amount of acting by the parties can alter or qualify words which are plain and unambiguous, but it is otherwise when we have to determine the true construction of an obscurely framed document. Herbert v. Purches, L. R. 3 P. C. 305. Per Mookerjee J. in Kiransashi v. Ananda, 32 C. L. J. (18), Nirod Chandra v.

different from what it appears to be. Otherwise there could be no certainty as to the proper construction to be placed on a document which to all appearance is unambiguous. Montland v. Amrit Rao, 19 B. 662-27 Bom. L. R. 951-A

I R 1925 105 - Maung Tun 8 Bur L J. 195-105. S.
 Ind Cas - ajassa, 107 Ind Cas 201-A I R
 1928 Nr , 117 Ind Cas 907 (2)-A I R 1929
 Lah 875 (2) - where the terms are unambiguous and clear, there can be no question that the evidence to prove that the terms of the contract were used in a different sense must be excluded under section 92; nor is the Court in such a case entitled to speculate as to the meaning of words in the contract. But where the wording of the contract is capable of different interpretations the Court is justified to put a proper construction upon the terms of the contract and is justified in finding with what intention a particular expression was used as a matter of pure construction. Juran v Ram Mondal, 55 C 808-A I R 1928 Cal 137. Parol evidence is admissible to prove that the name of the creditor was through mistake put down as K instead of R in a deed containing acknowledgment of liability. Isfar v Ram, A I R 1931 Oudh 51-130 Ind Cas 347. Importation of extraneous matter is forbidden unless required to show relation of language to existing facts. Irfan Ali v Official Receiver, A I R 1930 All. 837-1930 A L J 978. Oral agreement showing the nature of document is not admissible but the Court can take into consideration circumstances if document is of doubtful tenor. Lakshmaya v Munahari, A I R 1930 Mad 517-31 M L W 516.

Application of the rule in Will cases. The question has more often arisen upon Wills than upon other documents, and it is from cases on these, accordingly, that the law has mainly to be taken. The law on the subject as regards Wills is contained in section 75 of the Indian Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925). That section is based upon the first paragraph of Justice Hyam's proposition V which is as follows: "For the purpose of determining the objects of a testator's bounty, or subject of disposition, or the quantity of interest intended to be given by the Will, a Court may enquire into every material fact relating to which testator, identify identity of

 K 602,

Hyam v Hyam, 24 M L J 410, Overland v Ganga Daksh, 86 A 101, Kulasan v Khembar, 13 L W 657 (P C); Bhagobutty v Gooroo, 25 C 112; Indubala v Manmatha, 41 C L J 258. "In considering questions of this nature, it must always be remembered, that the words of a testator, like those of every other person, tacitly refer to the circumstances by which at the time of expressing himself, he is surrounded. If, therefore, when the circumstances under which the testator made his Will are known, the words of the Will do sufficiently express the intention ascribed to him. The strict limit of exposition cannot be transgressed, because the Court, in aid of the construction of the Will refers to those extrinsic collateral circumstances, to which it is certain that the language of Will refers. It may be true, that, without such evidence, the precise meaning of the words could not be determined; but it is still the Will which expresses and ascertains the intention ascribed to the testator. A page of history (to use a familiar illustration) may not be intelligible till some collateral extrinsic circumstances are known to the reader. No one, however, would imagine that he was acquiring a knowledge of the writer's meaning from any other source than the page he was reading, because, in order to make that page intelligible, he required to be informed to what about between in his will and the introduction of extr of the testator as an independent fact only to a right understanding of the words used by the testator in his will and as such it is explanatory only of the words themselves. But the evidence which is introduced to prove the intention of the testator is quite a different sort of evidence. In this section we are concerned with the former kind of evidence. "It does not per se approach the question of intention. It is wholly collateral to it. It explains the words only by removing the cause of apparent ambiguity, where, in truth, there is no real ambiguity. It places

2. the Court which expounds the Will in the situation of the testator who made it

111. Louell v Wall, 104 L T 85; Great Eastern Ry Co v Bristol Corporation, 87 L J Ch (H L) 417, 424, 423, Samuel v Osner, (1909) 1 Ch. 61; Selwood v Midway, 8 Ves 306. "The general rule is that, in construing a Will the Court is entitled to put himself in the position of the testator and to consider all material facts and circumstances known to the testator with reference to which he is to be taken to have used now in the Will, and then to declare what is the intention evidenced by the words used with reference to those facts and circumstances which were (or ought to have been) in the mind of the testator when he used those words" Per Blackburn J in Allgood v. Blake, L R 3 Ex 160, Re Skillen (1916) 1 Ch 518, River Wear Commissioners v Adamson, 47 L J Q B 193, Harrison v Higson, (1894) 1 Ch 561. In Boyes v Cook, 14 Ch D 53 (56) James L J used the following expression "You may place yourself, so to speak in his (testator's) arm chair" Charter v Charter, L R 7 H L 304 (377). The object in all cases is to discover the intention of the testator. The first and most obvious mode of doing this is to read his Will as he has written it and collect his intention from his words. But as the words refer to facts and circumstances respecting his property and his family, and others whom he names or describes in his Will, it is evident that the meaning and application of his words cannot be ascertained without all those facts and circumstances." Per Lord Abinger in Doe d Hiscocks v Hiscocks, 5 M & W. 363 (367), see also Bernasconi v 100, 25 C 112 (124), Paton v 2 Ch 314; Bhagabutti v Lakram, 14 B 1; v. Ganga Buks Sher Bahadur 36 C 1, Mathur 7 A 193; Sukram v Kai 973-24 M L J 418, Meha a testator's knowledge or acquaintance is also important. In the words of Lord Cairns L C in Craien v Errington, 3 L T 333 (339), "In construing the Will of the testator we should put ourselves as far as we can in the position of the testator and interpret his expressions as to persons and things with reference to that degree of knowledge of those persons and things which so far as we can discover, the testator possessed." See also In re Vaughan, (1901) 17 T L R 278; Marlain v Harding, (1907) 1 Ch 465. But this proposition must be accepted with severals. The Will cannot The meanin

but where a testator has left no uncertainty as to the person to be benefited or the property by which the benefit is to be conferred, then the Courts are precluded from going outside the actual words used by the testator. Judges should not, where the language is ambiguous, enquire into those things which the parties intended. Lakshmi Bai v. R. 71, Kulsambai v. Ramasundari, 12 M I A 11; 19 C L J 563 (P. C.).

Sathuram, 14 B L R 60, Radha v. Rani, 35 (19 C L J 563 (P. C.))

the parties enjoyed when the contract was executed, and in that view, they are entitled to place themselves in the same situation as the parties who made the contract, so as to view the circumstances as they viewed them, and so to judge the meaning of the language to the things described. Tindal C J in Atk v. Shore, 11 Sam 330, 331, and the general rule I take it to be, is that where words of any written instrument are free from ambiguity in themselves, and elves; and that, in such case evidence dehors the instrument, for the purpose of explaining it according to the surmised or alleged intention of the parties to the instrument, is utterly inadmissible. If it were otherwise, no lawyer would be nor any party in the clearest title articulating meaning in making the instrument or of the objects he meant to take benefit under it, might be set up to contradict or vary the plain language of the instrument itself. The true interpretation, however, of every instrument being manifestly that which will make the instrument speak the intention of the party at the time it was made, it has always been considered as an exception, or perhaps, to speak more precisely, not so much an exception from, as a corollary to, the general rule above stated, that, where any doubt arises upon the true sense and meaning of the words themselves, or any difficulty as to their application under the surrounding circumstances, the sense and meaning or the language may be investigated and ascertained by evidence dehors the instrument itself, for both reason and common sense agree, that by no other means can the language of the instrument be made to speak the real mind of the party. Such investigation does, of necessity, take place in the interpretation of instruments written in so of time a different uses where instances common meaning, has idiomatic meaning, dwelling, or in the pa he passed his life cases of the descrip detailed" Wigmore § 2461. So in order to construe a term in a written instrument where it is used in a sense differing from its ordinary meaning, evidence is admissible to prove the peculiar sense in which the parties understood the word; but it is not admissible to contradict or vary what is plain. Per Lord Chelmsford, in Beacon, L. & F. Ass Co 1 Moore P. C 73, 98

2.

It is frequently necessary, in order to construe written instrument to receive evidence of other accompanying facts than those which serve to apply the instrument to the subject matter or the person intended. Under some of the parties, but their act, and no facts at other terms than those are to be not only the relations of the property, but also the acts of the means of showing their id Worsted Co., 2 Cus under a lease as or le see, parol evidence of the subsequent dealings of the such evidence is received must always be borne in mind—to elucidate the meaning of the words used and not to import into the writing an unexpressed intention and in its admission, the line, which separates evidence which aids the in view,—the duty of the written in the instrument not 3; 2 Phill Ev 277: Grant not admissible for the purpose of Balkishen Das

Evidence Act (with which the plaintiff considered) from relying upon the evidence furnished by their conduct, which Act might be and out sale in favour of L, dar, 5 C admissible note of either per actions 864, 379 is really gomastah la Subid of B. Suboodra v Ram Ruttan, Marsh 3=1 1113 11; of B. Suboodra v Ram Ruttan, Marsh 3=1 1113 11; 1 Parol evidence is admissible to prove transaction between the parties to a written R 515 An obscure pottah can be elucidated Urpoopoorna, 9 W R 556 But this proviso importing into a letter an acknowledgment which is not contained in it even by implication 84 Where the document is silent as to interest of subsequent conduct is not barred as between 1860 Vol 1 590 defendant

 gago of a mortgage

two garhs of the two garhs of the for decision was whether was also mortgaged to under section 92(6) and the plaintiff the plaintiff

section 98 of the Evidence Act, because it showed how the plaint document was related to existing facts and because the nature of the land tenure was a special matter which could not be stated off hand but required to be elucidated by a reference to the particular fact. Raja Gour Chandra v. Rajah Mulunta Deb, 9 C. W. N 710. Where a mortgage-bond

S. 9

L. R 768

The short exposition of the whole matter is, that the knowledge of the external circumstances of which their proof puts the Courts in possession, places the Judge in the position of the donor settler, or other party to the instrument, and it is upon the survey which that position affords him, that he exercises the office of an expositor Goodale v. 389 But contemporaneous exposition as a guide to the interpretation of law is not a safe course to follow with danger and great care must be taken

Lakshmai rao, 16 C. W. N 1058 (P. C.)—

17 C. L. J 17—36 B 639 (P. C.) In Section

(Eng) the question arose on a

the subject of purchase, was no

'Your wool' The contract was to purchase—"Your wool, 16 per another letter of the offer, and evidence was received to fix the quantity, the subject of the bargain "I am quite clear" said Lord Campbell, C. J., "from the letters which were put in at the trial that there was a contract between the parties. An offer was made, and was accepted, and the only question is as to the subject matter of the contract. I am clearly of opinion that when a specific thing is the subject of a contract and it is doubtful upon the contract what the

The defendant says, I will buy your wool. Now it is the universal practice of a matter of a contract, as no Judge defendant had been employed by the plaintiffs, who were tradesmen, as a traveller to solicit custom for them, over certain districts in which their commercial connection lay, and he having afterwards left their service, and travelled for other parties, contrary to his agreement with them they sued him on his agreement, which was in writing, to recover damages. The agreement, however, was imperfect on its face, and it becoming necessary to explain the meaning of its expressions 'your employ' and 'the ground that defendant was to travel' parol evidence in explanation, though objected to was admitted Earle C. J. said "I am of opinion that the parol evidence is admissible in order to apply the contract to the matter in question. It is not to alter or vary it. The parol evidence is admissible to show the circumstances under which the words were used." In the same case Byles J. said "It does not appear from the face of the document what the employment was. It does not appear what the 'ground' was. The subject therefore, requires to be identified. The contract is to be

2. is not admissible for the purpose of contradicting the terms of a document, but they may be admissible only for the purpose of explaining and giving effect to the document itself. Arahan Rai v Chalcorn 11 Ind Cas 101. In a plain, straightforward case, in what manner the language of the document related to existing facts. There may be cases where such extrinsic evidence is required and it will therefore be admitted. But it can only be in such cases where the terms of the documents themselves require explanation and then evidence can be led within the restrictions laid down by proviso 6 to section 92 of the Evidence Act. Where a document has stood more than fifty years it is extremely undesirable to allow evidence to be led to show that the document is not what it appears to be on the face of it. Ganpat Rao v Tukaram 41 B 710-22 Bom L R 831-58 Ind Cas 576. Where a vendor agrees to sell land to several named persons and in drawing up the agreement of sale the name of one person is mentioned and without naming the rest the word 'others' is used, there is nothing in the Evidence Act to prevent the evidence from being led in a conveyance. Veda Murthi 185-(1922) Mad 100. Where the extent of the land leased, the Court cannot look at the correspondence between the lease and the deed. Sital Prasad v Badri Prasad, 20 A L J 907-L R 34 623. Where a promissory note recited that interest at the rate of 1½ per cent was payable but it was not mentioned there as to whether the rate of interest aforesaid will be per mensem or per annum. Held, the document was therefore ambiguous and under this proviso, no evidence could be given to clear up the ambiguity. Sargu v Sukh 4 Pat L T 577. In an action for a declaration that certain alluvial accretions formed part of settled land antecedent document is admissible under this proviso for the purpose of identifying the property demised but not for contracting the terms of the settlement. Tilakdhar v Kesho 83 Ind Cas 103-27 Bom L R 819-48 M L J 611 (P C)-41 C I J 386 (P C). If in a deed of mortgage, the boundaries of the land mortgaged are not clearly defined, they should generally be taken from the deed. Nga Clo v A contract reduced to writing 11 Ind Cas 101. A contract reduced to writing, with only the document itself, with only the relation of the written language to existing facts. Ebrahim Goolam v A M Chetty 30 Ind Cas 597. Where the question is whether certain properties are indeed in the trust deed the conduct of the parties can be looked into in construing the meanings of the expressions used therein. Subramania v Rajeswar, 40 M 1016-38 Ind Cas 627. Where a deed of transfer raises an ambiguity as to the nature of interest in the property it purports to convey extrinsic evidence (including evidence as to the course of dealing with the property) is admissible. Mannulal Vol II 62 Ind 359. In this case, the court held that the deed itself, with only the relation of the written language to existing facts, is admissible. Venka 1925 P C 75 follows the same principle. stances which will show to existing facts is Cas 736. In the case of a registered mortgage deed, oral evidence cannot be led in that the property really meant as security is other than what appears in the deed. Musi Karim v Haji Mutasaddi, 90 Ind Cas 841. Oral evidence to show that one of the executants of a bond was to be regarded only as a surety is inadmissible in view of section 92. Radha v Durga, A I R 1932 Cal. 323-59 C 106. Where at the time of the sale by the Government of a certain estate some thing referred to in a written agreement, as for instance, in a contract to deliver a quantity or grain (galla) at particular time, parol evidence is admissible under certain restrictions to show what kind of grain the contracting parties had in their view at the time the contract was made. Talla v. Sidoti, 5 B H A C 87. Where a mortgage deed does not indicate by name the property mortgaged, evidence may be adduced to prove what property was mortgaged. Bimlat v. Harrison, 2 A 832.

Illustrations Illustration (a)—This illustration is based on Western v. Fines, 1 Taunt 115.

Illustration (b)—This illustration relates to proviso (3); vide also Ramjiban v. Oghur Nath, 2 C W N 1b3

Illustration (c)—“So where a deed conveyed the meesage and land called Gotton farm, consisting of particulars specified in a schedule, and delineated in a map drawn thereon, evidence that a close, not included in the map and schedule had always been occupied and treated as part of Gotton farm rejected.” Taylor § 1152 citing, Darton v. Druce, 10 Com B 261; Llewellyn v. La Jersey, 11 M & W. 183

Illustration (d)—Vide proviso (1)

Illustration (e)—Vide proviso (1)

Illustration (f)—Vide proviso (2)

Illustration (g)—Vide proviso (2)

Illustration (h)—Vide proviso (2)

Illustration (i)—Vide proviso (3); Srinat v. Naresh A I R 1932 P. 332—13 P. L. T 545.

Illustration (j)—Vide proviso (3)

93 When the language used in a document is, on its face,

Exclusion of evidence to explain or amend ambiguous document ambiguous or defective, evidence may not be given of facts which would show its meaning or supply its defects.

Illustrations

(a) A agrees, in writing, to sell a horse to B for Rs 1 000 or Rs 1,500 Evidence cannot be given to show which price was to be given

(b) A deed contains blanks. Evidence cannot be given of facts which would show how they were meant to be filled

Two sorts of ambiguities according to Lord Bacon. “There be two sorts of ambiguities of latens, patens is that which is latent; patens is that which is apparent; patens is that which is apparent up out by ma as patens is never holpen not couple and mingle with matter of averment, which is of inferior account in law, for that were to make all deeds hollow and subject to averments and so, in effect, that to pass without deed, which the law appointeth shall not pass but by deed. Therefore if a man give land to I D et I S hereditibus, and do not limit to whether of their heirs, it shall not be supplied by averment to whether of them the intention was the inheritance should be limited. But if it be limited to one of them, as if I give land to I D et I S my manor of S to I F upon the deed, but if North S, this ambiguity averment, whether of I Another sort of ambiguity spoken of before is, when one name and appellation doth denominate two things; and the second is, when the same thing is called by diverse names. As, if I give lands to Christ Church in Oxford, and the name of the church is Ecclesia Christi in Universitate Oxford, this shall be holpen by averment, because there appears no ambiguity in the words for the variance is matter in fact. But the averment shall not be of the intention, because it does not stand with the words. For in the case of equivocation the general intent includes both the special, and therefore stands with the words, but so it is not in variance and therefore the averment must be a matter that doth induce a certainty, and not of intention as to say that the precinct of Oxford and of the University of Oxford is one and the same, and not to say that the intention of the parties was that the grant should be to Christ Church in the University of Oxford. Sir Francis Bacon's Maxim, rule XXV (Works, Spedding's edition 1861, Vol. XIV p. 273). Much has been said by Di Schouler of latent and patent ambiguities in this connection, an expression borrowed from Lord Bacon, whose oft quoted canon, though Higram and Jarman has disputed it (Higram Halls p. 196, 1 Jar Halls, 429, 430) the Courts do not seem quite ready to discard. This canon regards ambiguities of words as of two sorts—patent and latent, the one where the instrument appears ambiguous, the other breed the ambiguity, since the In a patent ambiguity the words in proof with the lower or latent ambiguity (which in fact to facts and circumstances) removed by the same means presently find that writings rather uncertain) on their face with explanatory proof to make their we have just seen the latent ambiguity by merely explanatory proof, or And again by ambiguity the idea is conveyed that words are capable of more senses than one but the use of extrinsic evidence must be taken in a broader sense and applied where it is inconsistent. The argument more or equal quality, antedating as it does modern policy of were good but practice carried the force of his rule beyond his own examples and his distinction of patent and latent though convenient in some respects can hardly serve as a criterion. For in every case, as Mr Jarman has truly entitled to be placed, as possible in the

Our Courts to day are patent where the uncertainty arises upon the words of the Will before any attempt is made to apply them to the object which they describe and parol evidence is not admissible to explain such ambiguities, but is admissible in case of a latent ambiguity whereon supplying the Will to the subject matter it is uncertain what is its meaning. So extrinsic evidence may be admissible to determine the existence of latent ambiguities in the Will. Schouler's Law of Wills § 925

's rule as to ing, although by Dalrymple present day the general not the to been quoted in this as that 'We should philosopher if complete dissection of legal date subject both of the maxim and the commentary, is not evidence but pleading and although no doubt, the feelings would guide the judge as to be a repre-

the issue upon which evidence would be received, they would not necessarily determine the nature of the evidence admissible upon each issue." (17 W. Nichols' Extrinsic Evidence in the Interpretation of Wills 2 Am. Soc. Pap. 35, 378, December, 1860) See Treatise pp 425-426. So this rule cannot be relied on as a test of the admissibility of evidence, for it is still commonly said that parol evidence may not be given to explain a patent ambiguity, yet this is not generally true. Walchman v. Ill. Gen. (1919) A. C. 533, Re Alaj, (1912) 56 S. J. 111, Plowd. 1: 7th Ed. p. 590.

Difference between patent and latent ambiguities. A good test of the difference is to put the instrument in the hands of an ordinary intelligent, educated person. If he is nevertheless uncertain as to the meaning of the instrument, the ambiguity is patent. If, on the other hand, he detects the ambiguity only after consultation with counsel or other persons, the ambiguity is latent. In the illustration (b), the ambiguity is latent. It could not be filled by parol testimony as to the intention of the parties, etc. In the illustration to section 95 no one could detect any ambiguity from merely reading the instrument. The ambiguity does not consist in the language, but is introduced by extrinsic evidence. North Pl. 279.

Similar law Vile s 81 of the Indian Succession Act, (XXXIX of 19 5)

Principle The province of the Court is to interpret—not to make. It is to construe others. For from the nature of construction, to insert in the blank the property or thing omitted, which of the sons was meant by the gift to one or who was the Lady—this would be to mis evidence to explain, it is to lay down that in cases

Goodere Ev 392

Second of the past as well as the future is so simple as that it is incapable of understanding hell v

to 'J I deed exampl
Papers
word

- aim or unintelligible in it they are not held as W II & often impossible to comprehend and therefore to enforce cannot be deemed a jurat act Higmore § 2407. But even the above proposition sometimes too broadly advanced, must be understood with a certain qualification. So far as extrinsic or to bring out the

was framed, there is ambiguity is called
d. Abinger in Doe d
= 22 of an. 1840

language may be not only inartistic composition, and that in which it is one of omission of subject matter, but may be not only inartistic but confused, visible, or it may exhibit a capacity for solution as to which no one has been led or to man, some of art or terms otherwise not ordinary rules of legal construction. In a medium of total darkness the eye could not exercise its powers of vision and the mind would not be allowed to speculate on what he could not see. In the latter case, the instrument may omit the very essence of its intended operation. Thus blank may have been left for the subject or person to be dealt with or to take, say—in a deed the property intended to be passed—in a Will the legatee—in a contract the thing bought or if not a total blank what is tantamount to it as in a devise to one of the sons of J. S.

what Lady H.

admissible in cre-

tions, indeed as - expressions admitting interpretation. On the first, beyond signing a meaning to expression extrinsic evidence could have no bearing, and it is unnecessary to discuss its admissibility. From the second it would be excluded. Goodell v. Goodell 391-392.

writing is requir-

cannot be asce-

disregarded or used as an admission, and oral evidence given. Markby v. P.

7470. A mortgage document was very imperfectly drawn up. It was un-grammatical and could not be read literally so as to give any clear meaning. In order to give the construction contended for by one party or the other some words had either to be supplied or removed. Held that there was patent ambiguity in the document and no evidence could be given to supply the defect. Pam.

Gareth v. Rup Narain, 80 Ind. Cas. 914 = L. R. 5 A 542. Section 93 of the Evidence Act does not prevent evidence being given that the municipal number given in rent receipt which is different from the present number of the holding was in fact the old number of the same holding. Golstaun v. Profulla 36 C.

W. N. 583.

Rule III laid down in Colpoys v. Colpoys. In Colpoys v. Colpoys, Jacob, 465.

Sir William Grant says. In the case of a patent ambiguity, that is one appearing on the face of the instrument, as a general rule a reference to mat-terials is forbidden. It must if possible be removed by construction and not by averment. But in many cases this is impracticable where the terms used are wholly indefinite and equivocal and carry on the face of them no certain or explicit meaning, and the instrument furnishes no materials by which the ambiguity thus arising can be removed. If in such cases the Court were to reject the only mode by which the meaning could be ascertained viz., the resort to extrinsic circumstances, the instrument must become inoperative and void. As a minor evil therefore common sense and the law of England (which are seldom at variance) warrant the departure from the general rule and call in the light of extrinsic evidence. The books are full of instances sanctioned by the highest authorities both in Law and Equity. Where the person and the thing are designated on the face of the instrument by terms imperfect and equivocal admitting either or no meaning at all by themselves, or of a variety of different meanings referring tacitly or expressly for the ascertainment and completion of the meanings, to extrinsic circumstances it has never been considered an objection to the reception of the evidence of those circumstances that the instrument was not made for the purpose of the instrument.

It is a rule of law that evidence of the meaning of a word or phrase in an instrument is admissible when the word or phrase is ambiguous.

It has different meanings when used by a farmer and a merchant. So, with a bequest of jewels, if by a nobleman, it would pass all; but if by jeweller, it would not pass those that he had in his shop. Thus the same expressions may vary in meaning according to the circumstances of the testator. See also G.

W. Ry Co v. Bristol Cor 87 L. J. Ch. H. L. 414, 429. So not only in the case of an ancient deed or other document but also in the case of a modern document in which there is a latent ambiguity evidence may be given of user under it to show the sense in which the parties to it used the language which they have employed and their intention in executing the instrument as revealed by their language interpreted in this sense. Such evidence can also be adduced for the same or a similar purpose where the ambiguities in the language of the instrument is patent and not latent as for instance where the description by boundaries, of the property granted by the instrument conflicts with the description by acreage. Witcham v. A. G. (1919) A. C. 533—(1918) 87 L. J. Pr. Cr. 150

17. Ctry] in's classification of notant ambles illas 4D; notant a n) p 'e principle on which the rule is founded is, that the intention of the parties should be construed, not by vague evidence of their intentions, independently of the expressions which they have thought fit to use, but by the expressions themselves. Now those expressions which are incapable of any legal construction and interpretation by the rules of art, are either so because they are in themselves unintelligible, or because being unintelligible, they exhibit a plain and obvious uncertainty. In the first instance the case admits of two varieties; the terms, though at first sight unintelligible, may yet be capable of having a meaning annexed to them by extrinsic evidence, just as if they were written in a foreign language, as when mercantile terms are used, which amongst mercantile men bear a distinct and definite meaning, although others do not comprehend them; the term used may on the other hand, be capable of no distinct and definite interpretation. Now, it is evident that to give effect to an instrument, the terms of which though apparently ambiguous are capable of having a distinct and definite meaning annexed to them, is no violation of the general principle, for in such a case effect is given, not to any loose conjecture as to the intent and meaning of the parties, but to the clear and established usage of the trade, where either or being in are equally

no evidence
of intention

ambiguity, therefore must be understood an inherent ambiguity, which cannot be removed either by the ordinary rules of legal construction or by the application of extrinsic and explanatory evidence, showing that expressions prima facie unintelligible are yet capable of conveying a certain and definite meaning." Starkie on Evidence p. 653

Starline on Evidence p 653

Blanks and ambiguities "A document may be void for intrinsic indefiniteness of terms, or it may be, though definite impossible to enforce extrinsically, because there are no objects existing upon which its terms can operate. There are simple principles, well established in their sphere; but in concrete application both of them require discrimination from the foregoing principle concerning equivocations. Is a blank space an equivocation? It certainly fits two or more objects equally, and where it represents merely an insufficient term in an attempted description it may be treated as an equivocation, because the writer has fixed upon an object, but his words do not carry the description far enough. On the other hand, where a blank space represents a failure to make a final expression of will, the act is incomplete, to supply declarations of intention would be to set up a rival Will; there can be no interpretation, for there is nothing to interpret. It therefore depends on the particular do u

In Hayter

10 21

vi 109.4

34 34 34 34

1, 2, 3, 4

4414

25 26

pre

• • •

4-2-1

1 20

44

2

22

سید

st, ' by mont
was held to be Mourmand y

Page, 4 Ves Jr. 6

93. L R 2 P D 66 (69) where an executor named Percival of Brighton Esq the father applied to William Percival Boxall who was general agent of Wignmore § 2173. The testator had no legitimate or devise and the principle one who can claim the legacy, and to give to A B— leaves therefore no one who can claim the legacy, and in either case the testator likely enough had resolved upon a gift definitely, though turning it over in his mind as to the subject or object. Miller v Frater 2 Atk 239. Talbot v Talbot 10 B & Alc 1. Jarm Wills 441. But partial blanks may construction not perhaps by direct verbal be identified, and so too. £1000 was given to A and other of £700 to B a third of £1000 to C might well be supposed to mean six hundred pounds. Upon partial blanks on the other hand which leave the sense defective, no valid gift can be based. Mason v Bateson 20 Beav 404. And if besides a blank there is an uncertain description the Will becomes doubly inoperative. Gill v C (1909) P 157, Hubbuck's Estate (1905) P 129, Harby v Wall 1 B & Alc 103. Moreover a devise or bequest, wholly omitted by mistake is not to be inserted in a Will (Neuborough's Case 5 Madd 361), yet some part of omission might not exclude a sensible construction.

extrinsic

E

S

G

N

It

T

cl

due to a clerical mistake that the words per cent had been omitted from the mortgage deed. Hell that it was not a case of patent ambiguity as is contemplated by § 93 of the Evidence Act. Pari Bhorosay v Jani 1 A I R 103 Oudh 93-120 Ind Ca 175. This rule is not applicable where the amount of legacy is expressed by words.

Extrinsic evidence. Mr Wigram lays down the following proposition: Where the words of a Will aided by evidence of material facts of the case are insufficient to determine the testator's meaning no evidence will be admitted to prove what the testator intended and the Will (except in certain special cases. See Prop VII) will be void for uncertainty. (Proposition I—The Wignmore p 91). This proposition has been quoted by Lord Russell C J in Pe Styler (1897) 1 Ch 79 and is there well founded. It establishes the right of every claimant under a Will to bring under the view of the Court, which is to expound it every material fact to which the Will expressly or tacitly refers, it establishes that Courts of law recognise that natural dependence which exists between language and the circumstances necessary to a right interpretation of the language, and consequently that a reference to such circumstances in expounding a Will is strictly consistent with the office simply of determining the meaning of the testator's words. But if the testator's words aided by the facts derived from the circumstances with reference to which they are used do not express the intention ascribed to him evidence to prove the sense in which he intended to use them is, as a general proposition inadmissible—in other words that the judgment of a Court.

3.

one who can claim the legacy; and to give "to A. B—" leaves nothing to be claimed as a legacy; and in either case the testator likely enough had never resolved upon a gift definitely, though turning it over in his mind, as to the subject or object. Miller v Tra 1 Jarm Wills 441. But parties construction, not, perhaps by but at all events, where the cor val of Brighton Es answered the description ill for the name of a competent to fill it up relates to the subject 100" leaves therefore no one who can claim the legacy; and to give "to A. B—" leaves nothing to be claimed as a legacy; and in either case the testator likely enough had never resolved upon a gift definitely, though turning it over in his mind, as to the subject or object. Miller v Tra 1 Jarm Wills 441. But parties construction, not, perhaps by but at all events, where the cor be based Mason v Bateson 2b Beav 404. And if, besides a blank, there is an uncertain description, the Will becomes doubly inoperative. Gill v Gill (1909) P 157, Hubbuck's Estate (1905) P 129, Harby v Wall 1 B & All 103. Moreover, a devise or bequest, wholly omitted by mistake is not to be inserted in a Will (Newboogh's Case, 5 Madd 361), yet some partial omission might not exclude a sensible construction of the gift with the aid of term indicating the identity employs an uncertain term Ky 80. The Court may go further and where a person is partially described as beneficiary, but the

the rate of interest agreed upon was Re 1 per cent per month and that it was due to a clerical mistake that the words "per cent" had been omitted from the mortgage deed. Held that it was not a case of patent ambiguity. 11 is contained by s 93 of the Evidence Act. Ram Bhoroosay v Janki, A I R 1911 Oudh 93-125 Ind Cas 175. This rule is not applicable where the amount of legacy is expressed by cypher (Kell v Charmer, 23 Beav. 195), nor when property is conveyed by inconsistent description (Both v Rattle, 15 App Cas 183). Where there is a discrepancy between sums expressed in words and figures the former will prevail. Saundessar v Piper, 5 Bing N 525, Phip Ev 591

Extrinsic evidence. Mr Higram lays down the following proposition "Where the words of a Will aided by evidence of material facts of the case, are insufficient to determine the testator's meaning no evidence will be admissible to prove what the testator intended and the Will (except in certain special cases See Prop VII) will be void for uncertainty. (Proposition VI—Re Higram)

that Courts of law recognise that natural dependence which exists between language and the circumstances necessary to a right interpretation of the language and consequences that a reference to those circumstances in expounding a V meaning derived express t trustee no 1, out of the trustees, appointed by me, my trustees should entrust to Haridas Rs 5000 that may be received from my life policy and the share of Tata & Co also should be transferred to the person whose name will be disclosed by Haridas." The evidence of Haridas as to the private instructions given to him by the testator was held admissible. Biyibai v Haridas, 17 Bom. L. R. 115 = 27 Ind. Cas. 916 = 40 B. 1. In Vinmutha Nithichoudhury v Nabin Chandra, 14 C. W. N. 1100 = 14 C. L. J. 97, the appellant sued on a handwritten executed by him in favour of the respondent for the sum of Rs. 350 ' with interest at

379, it was held by this Court that where a note of hand promised repayment of a loan with interest at 5 per cent without stating either per mensem or per annum, the construction that interest must be calculated without reference to time was contrary to all practice and the ambiguity was one which might fairly be explained by previous transactions between the parties and by custom. This case, if it is any authority at all, is obviously in point; but, as the learned J^l for the Appellant has pointed out it was decided before the enactment of the Indian Evidence Act. We believe however, that the Evidence Act made no change whatever in the law on the subject and we are of opinion that there is no sufficient reason for coming to a different decision in this case. In our view the words 2½ per cent in the bond before us clearly means 2½ per cent per mensem. See also Mohamed v. Zafar, 62 Ind C^o 702, Indro Deb v. Asitpur, 16 C W N 937, Dissessur v. Bhagban 5 A W N 41. In Protab Chandra Sha v. Mohammad Ali Sircar, 19 C L J 67-41 C 342, a lahulyat recited that interest would be paid by the tenant upon rent in arrears at the rate of one anna per rupee. It did not expressly state whether interest at the rate was payable monthly or annually. The only point in that case was whether evidence could be given as to what was intended. In holding that under sections 92 and 93 of the Evidence Act oral evidence is not admissible to show the intention of the parties Mr Justice Mookerjee said "In view of the provisions of sections 92 and 93 of the Indian Evidence Act, it is plain that oral evidence was not admissible to show what was intended by."

be payable at the rate of 1 anna per month merit to be filled." See also Ram Ganesh v Rup Naram, A I R 1925 All. 34-80 Ind Cas 944, Sorju v Sulhi, 4 P L T 577

Where a lease is ambiguous, evidence of user under it may be given in order to show the sense in which the parties used the language and their intention in executing it. Prasanna v Ma Witcham v Ali don't denies his attesting witness hence liable under mad v Jaichand, A I R 1930 All 100.

L R 2 P D 66 (69),
the father applied
Wignore § 2473 The

Percival of Brighton Esq
he answered the decript on he Will for the name of a resolved upon a gift definitely, though turning it over in his mind, as to subject or object Miller v Traverse, 2 Atk 239, Taylor v Richardson 2 Drew 19 1 Jarm Wills 441 But partial blanks may in a suitable case, be supplied construction, not, perhaps by direct proof evidence of what the testator intended but at all events where the context, with or without the aid of extrinsic cir-stances, supplies a definite thing or pera legacy to "Mr B, or to 'John' or to where one legacy of '600' to C, might blanks on the other

be based Mason

is (1 11 bi
or e
of the devisee extrinsic such evidence is admiss unds Upon p

no valid gift can sides a blank there operative Gill v G W v Wall 1 B & AM
by mistake is not in 361, yet some partial ie gift with the aid of m selecting the intent uncertain term
The Court may
r ... but the

due to a clerical mistake that the words "per cent" had been omitted from mortgage deed
plated by s 93
Oudh 95=125
of legacy is exp property a comm 183)
the four

as is con-
A I R. 190
re the amount 190) nor when 15 App Ca
id figures
91

Extrinsic evidence Mr Higram lays down the following proposition
"Where the words of a Will aided by evidence of material facts of the case, are insufficient to determine the testator's meaning no evidence will be admissible to prove what the testator intended and the Will (except in certain special cases See Prop VII) will be void for uncertainty (Proposition VI—Title Higram p 91) This proposition has been ... Re Steyler (1897) 1 Ch 79 and is there we claimant under a Will to bring it every material fact to which it that Courts of law recognise language and the circumstances necessary to a right interpretation of the language ...
ing ...
meaning derived express

every expound able to between determining ed by the
are u ... don't use in which
of words
latory of his Will privately
entrust share of

and Co and should be transferred to the person whose name will be the private instructions given to as Hirala, 17 Bom. L. R. 116 (Chouhan v Nabin Chandra, see on a handnote executed

S.

by him in favour of the respondent for the sum of Rs. 350 with interest at 2½ per cent the stipulation as to interest stopping short at the rate and there being nothing expressly stated in the document as to whether the interest should be calculated annually or monthly or otherwise that the words used meant that the interest

Court observed. In Mahomed Samsoodeen

379 it was held by this Court that where a note of hand promised repayment of a loan with interest at 5 per cent without stating either per mensem or per annum the construction that interest must be calculated without reference to time was contrary to all practice and the ambiguity was one which might fairly be explained by previous transactions between the parties and by custom. This case, if it is any authority at all, is obviously in point, but, as the learned JUDGE for the Appellant has pointed out it was decided before the enactment of the Indian Evidence Act. We believe however, that the Evidence Act made no change whatever in the law on the subject and we are of opinion that there is no sufficient reason for coming to a different decision in this case. In our view the words 2½ per cent in the bond before us clearly means 2½ per cent per mensem. See also Mohamed v Zafar 62 Ind. C. 702, Intro Deb v Asim, 16 C. W. N. 957, Bissessur v. Bhagban 5 A. W. N. 41. In Irotal Chandra Sha v Mohammad Ali Siroar, 19 C. L. J. 67=41 C. 31, a tabuljat recited that interest would be paid by the tenant upon rent in arrears at the rate of one anna per rupee. It did not expressly state whether interest at the rate was payable monthly or annually. The only point in that case was whether evidence could be given as to what was intended. In holding that under sections 92 and 93 of the Evidence Act oral evidence is not admissible to show the intention of the parties Mr Justice Mookerjee said "In view of the provisions of sections 92 and 93 of the Indian Evidence Act, it is plain that oral evidence was not admissible to show what was intended by from the language used by them in Nath v Nabin Chandra, (supra) is who decided the case did not specify to interpret the instrument, they relied Samsoodeen v Moonshee Abdool (1864) before the Indian Evidence Act was placed in the statute book. It may

case before us no such consideration arises because the only evidence upon Extrinsic Evidence when not admissible A district Judge held, that, a contract, compensation for breach of which was sued for, was ambiguous on the face of it. But he held that evidence was admissible to show the intention of the parties, and he acted upon such evidence. Held this was in contravention of section 93 of the Evidence Act and illegal within the meaning of s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Joman v. Ah Yu, 14 Bur L R 58. Under section 29 of the Contract Act, an agreement is void if its meaning is not certain or capable of being made certain, and under section 93 of the Evidence Act, where the language of a deed is, on its face, ambiguous or defective, no evidence can be given to make it certain. Deoquil v. Pulamber, 1 A 275. Where the terms of a document are ambiguous on the face, the intention of the executant is to be ascertained by the language of the document itself, and not by extrinsic evidence.

ambiguities according to its own not to enforce a contract made by the parties but to make a new contract for them. Beket Ram v. Anant Ram, 31 Ind Cas 632; see also Maharashtra v. Bujatal 71 Ind Cas 436, Collector of Etawah v. Beli Maharani, 14 A 169, Norsingerji v. Penanganti, (1921) M N W 819.

94. When language used in a document is plain in itself, and when it applies accurately to existing facts, evidence may not be given to show that it was not meant to apply to such facts.

Illustration

A sells to B by deed, "my estate at Rampur containing 100 bighas." A has an estate at Rampur containing 100 bighas. Evidence may not be given of the fact that the estate meant to be sold was one situated at a different place and of a different size.

Scope of the section "The words of a written instrument must be construed according to the meaning of the words as they are used in the instrument itself." Hastings, (1100). So far as I insisted upon that must be construed instrument itself' Hastings, (1100). In an instrument of the language the parties have deliberately chosen to employ. Lord Macnaghten in ibid. So it is a rule of law that extrinsic evidence is not admissible to alter a written contract, or to show that its meaning is different from what it imports. Ram Lochun v. Inno Poorna, 7 W R 144. This section embodies the rule of law laid down by Lord C J in Shore v. Wilson, 9 Cl & F 55, where he said "The general rule I take it to be, is that where the words of any instrument are free from ambiguity in themselves, and where external circumstances do not create any doubt or difficulty as to proper application of these words to claimants under the instrument, or as to the subject matter to which the instrument relates, such instrument is always to be construed according to the strict, plain, common sense meaning of the words." In such case, evidence dehors the instrument is utterly inadmissible. If it were otherwise, no lawyer would be safe in advising upon the construction of a written instrument, nor any party taking under it, for ablest advice might be given at some future period, parole affixed to his words, or of his secret objects he meant to take away the plain language of the instrument itself." See also Lord Macnaghten in ibid, Li Po Hui, A I R 1932 P. C 525-63 M L J 418, where it was approved. In Webb v. Dyng, 1 Kay & John. 680 Vice Chancellor Wood said, "The law has become so settled by numerous decisions, as to how far external evidence is admissible, and what that species of evidence must be, that I need only sum up what appears to be the result of the authorities. Of course in interpreting any instrument which purports to deal with property, some extrinsic information is necessary, in order to make the words, which are but signs, fit the external things to which those signs are appropriate. In reality, external information is requisite in construing every instrument; but when any subject is thus discovered, which not only is within the words of the instrument, according to their natural construction, but exhausts the whole of those words, then the investigation must stop and you are bound to take the interpretation which entirely exhausts the whole of the series of expressions used by the testator, and are not permitted to go any further." So where are the words which your Lordships have to construe, and I confess that it is to my mind absolutely amazing that any one can entertain the smallest doubt as to what those words mean. I have read the words by themselves because in my view of the meaning of this instrument, they are to be read by themselves. One does not doubt that, where you are construing either a Will or any other instrument, it is perfectly legitimate to look at the whole instrument—and indeed, you must look at the whole instrument—to see the meaning of the whole instrument, and you cannot rely upon one particular passage in it to the exclusion of what is relevant to the explanation of the particular clause that you are expounding." "The true construction of the agreement depends upon the ordinary meaning of the words used, and if those words are plain and recently understood by the parties themselves and that the omission by the plaintiff and his predecessor for upwards of forty years to claim the rents now sought to be recovered is cogent evidence that such was the case. I grant that if the clause were capable of this construction, one of which supports, and the other of which would defeat the claim, the omission would afford irresistible proof that the latter was the interpretation intended by the parties. No such ambiguity, however, exists, and it seems therefore to me that, in the absence of any proof to the contrary it must be assumed that the parties knew and understood the language they were using and that in executing the agreement containing that clause they were truly expressing their intentions, and are bound by the writing they have signed. Why the agreement was so framed—what were the considerations which induced it—and why the claim was so long allowed to sleep are mere matters of speculation, but one has no right to act upon speculation to set aside a deed or agreement which is on the face of it clear and definite." So a Court must construe a deed according to the plain, ordinary meaning of its terms, and must not import words into it from any conjectural view of its intention, which would have the effect of materially changing the nature of the estate thereby created. Mussamat Bhagubai v Choudhry Bholanath, 2 I A 256=1 C 101, Millard v Bailey, 1 Eq 378; Gibson v Minet, 1 H Bl 615. In cases contemplated by this section there is General of Bombay v Hormuz 29 B 375; Babu v Sitaram, 3 Bom L R 769; S. President v Chitakaman, (1911) 2 M W N 239; Velappa v Palani, (1915) M. W. N. 25-29 Ind Cas 201; Manmatha v. Probodh, 37 C L J 52 "As us to say

for the rule laid ordinary id to have
e Courts,
gal minds
ained are accustomed to jump at a conclusion as to what a person means by considering what they, under similar circumstances, think they would have done. This is conjecture only, and conjecture on the imperfect knowledge of the circumstances of the case, because the facts known to the testator may not all be before them, and the testator's mind, as regards the attention to be paid to the claims of different parties dependent upon him, may not have been constituted as their minds are constituted, so that it cannot be concluded that he would have acted in the same way as they. We therefore must construe the Will as we should construe any other document, subject to this, that in Wills, if the intention is shown it is not necessary that the technical words which are necessary in some instruments should be used for the purpose of giving effect to it' Per Cotton L J in Halph v Carriel, 11 Old 873 (878)-49 L J Ch 801. The second regards the intention of the writer as the chief object of concern, and the mere grammatical and lexicographical meaning of the words as not strictly interpretation at all, since it is only (it is said) after the meaning of the words has been ascertained as has failed to explain the meaning of the writer, that interpretation properly so called begins,—i.e., that the gap left by the partial failure of language to express the intention has to be filled by an inquiry into other indications thereof Phip Ev 7th Ed 583. Indeed, that the object cannot be to in La 355 See also Doe v Anscot 5 M & W 365, Inter Wear Commrs v Adamson, 2 App Cas 743, 763. In the last mentioned case Lord Blackburn said: "In all cases the object is to see what is the intention expressed by the words used. But, from the imperfection of language it is impossible to know what that intention is without enquiring further, and seeing what the circumstances were with reference to which the words were used, and what was the object appearing from these circumstances which the person using them had in view, for the meaning of the words is to be ascertained in connection with the facts to which they were used."

as follows
meaning of the
put in this or the other
meaning of t

It is not the meaning of the words in the abstract, for the meaning of the words varies according to the circumstances under which they were used, and not the meaning of the writer apart from his words, for the question is one of interpretation, and what he meant to

We must seek, the meaning of the
we must seek the meaning of the
as he used them, the meaning which L Rev p 323 cited in Phip Ev 7th Ed 586.

Meaning to be ascertained from the whole document. In Boston v Fitzgerald, (1815) 15 Eust 530, Lord Ellenborough said "It is a true rule of construction that the sense and meaning of the parties in any part of an instrument may be collected ex antecedentibus et consequentibus every part of it may be brought into action in order to collect from the whole an uniform and consistent see, if that may be done" See also Damodar Das v. Dayabhai, 23 B 833=25 I A 126=2 C W N 417; Gray v. Minnethrope, 3 Ves 105; Re Venn (1904) 2 Ch 52, Kandarpa v. Isander 12 C I T 201=31 I A 359; Kalidas v. Kanhaiya Lal, 11 C 121 (69); Shookmany Lal, 24 C 834=24 I A 76; Mahomed v. Shei George, 31 M 283, Inderwick v. Satchell, (1906) 11 R 649; Brocklebank v. Johnson, 20 Bea 213, Key v. Key 4 De J M & G 73, Pande v. Surja, 25 C W N. 961 (P. C.); Grey v. Pearson 6 H L Cas 61

95. When language used in a document is plain in itself, but is unmeaning in reference to existing facts, evidence may be given to show that it was used in a peculiar sense.

Illustration.

A sells to B by deed, "my house in Calcutta"

A had no house in Calcutta, but it appears that he had a house at Howrah, of which B had been in possession since the execution of the deed

These facts may be proved to show that the deed related to the house at Howrah

Latent ambiguity Sections 95, 96 and 97 deal with latent ambiguity. These sections correspond to those of 1925. In interpreting a will thus laid down by Wigra subject of his disposition (terms which are applicable indifferently to more than one person or thing) evidence is admissible to prove which of the persons or things so described was intended by the testator. Latent ambiguity, in the more ordinary application of the term arises from the existence of facts external to the instrument; and the creation, by those facts, of a question not solved by the document itself.

These instances of latent ambiguity may be divided into two classes. In the first class, the ambiguity is open to the testator, and the evidence, however, to this class of cases we now advert, but to those in which the ambiguity is rather that of description, either equivocal itself from the existence of two subject-matters, or sought to bear

Blackacre, may be given to show that the testator intended two sons. In all would be no doubt (indeed) could be more than a gift to my son John. The embarrassment is raised when it is sought to apply to the gift, and then the discovery is made which did not occur to the testator, namely, that there are two estates Blackacre, or two sons John. In either case accordingly, there is a latent ambiguity.

In the second class, the ambiguity is not open to the testator, but arises from the subject or object in exact correspondence with it, so that it would be uncertain. Thus, in a will, "I give and bequeath unto my son John, my estate in Blackacre, to him and his heirs forever." If there is more than one son, the gift is uncertain. If there is only one son, but the estate is not certain, the gift is also uncertain. If the estate is certain, but the son is not, the gift is uncertain. If both the estate and the son are certain, the gift is certain.

which created the uncertainty, and the question which extrinsic circumstances created, extrinsic evidence was admitted to clear up. The distinction will be obviously between clearing up an ambiguity, and creating a subject Goodere Ev pp 395-96

S.

Principle The process of interpretation is a part of the procedure of the completion of the instrument. It must remain simply manifest, must be enforced. They must be applied to external objects. Somewhere possession must be yielded, or goods delivered or money transferred; and in order that the law may enforce these changes in external objects the relation between the terms of the jural act and certain external objects must be determined, as an indispensable part of the process. In short, the interpretation of the term of jural act is an essential part of the act considered as capable of legal realization and enforcement. The only difference is that the actor alone creates the terms of his act, while the interpretation of it, being a part of the enforcement, comes into the hands of the law. Wigmore § 2153. Every agreement must receive its construction from its own terms, without the introduction of any evidence dehors the instrument, unless there be some latent ambiguity. Per Rooke J in Coler v Guy 2 B & P 565, 569, see also the remarks of Lord Eldon in Smith v Doe, 2 B & B 473 (C02). But where the words stand in equilibrium, there it is super in Strode) "If you go to explain such C C 835, 841

This section has its origin in the maxim "falsa demonstratio non nocet cum de"

1265-66

Construction of the instrument depends upon a latent ambiguity in the constr the V out of Salk 234, Lord Holt said depart from the Will to Goodings v Goodings, 1 down much too large by Holt, for in several cases it is admitted it must be allowed,—namely, where the description or thing is uncertain, it must be nued by Lord Thurlow, whose ruling in Fonneren v Poyntz, 1 Bro C C 492 was considered a dangerous innovation. As late as the beginning of the 1800 there were Judges who still thought that the only proper exception was an equivocation. In Doe v Chinchester, 4 Dow 65 93, Gibbs C J said "The Courts of law have been jealous of the admission of extrinsic evidence to explain the intention of a testator; and I know of only one case in which it is permitted that is, where an ambiguity is introduced by extrinsic circumstances" Wigmore § 9170

Application of the Section "The admission of extrinsic circumstances" says Plumber M R "to remove the ambiguity in the instrument, it may be removed, a explained" In the same latent ambiguity same manner, Th

where the terms of a contract has been reduced to writing, no evidence shall be given in proof of the terms of the contract except the document itself, or, in certain cases, secondary evidence of its content. But this rule is subject to the

... 97. Karuppa Gounden v Peria
... 397 Parol evidence is admissible to son to whom, a written instrument applies or refers; and for such purpose to explain the latent ambiguities. Such parol evidence may be of the surrounding circumstances, or apparently, of statements of intention made by parties to a document. Doe v Needs, 6 L. J.
Ex 59=Cockle Cas 355 In Doe v Martin, 4 B & Ad 770, 785 Parol said: "It may be laid down as a general rule that all facts relating to the

... and in ascertaining Court is at liberty to ed upon the mind of the persons by whom the deed or will (it matters not whether it was one or the other) was executed. The Court therefore has not merely a right, but it is its duty to inquire into the surrounding circumstances, before it can approach the construction of the instrument itself" Sugden L C in All Gen v Drum
... nature of the claim prove that the claim under section 63 of the Contract Act, even though it is conditional and is not supported by consideration. Mathew v Lodge, (1910) M W N 191=20 M L J 383 A compromise decree provided for interests at 2 per cent and the question arose whether the interest was payable at the rate monthly or annually. Held that it was open to the Court to take into consideration the nature of the claim.

... Mahamud v
... tract have to
to be taken
... opolitan En
305 Where

the plaintiff sued for a declaration that he was a mortgagee in possession of certain plots and alleged that the numbers entered in the mortgage deed were incorrect, held, that oral evidence was admissible under ss 95 and 96 of the Evidence Act to prove how the description given in the mortgage deed was relevant to the existing facts. Radha Lal v Augue, 16 P O 230=21 Ind Cas 429 Where the description of property sold is such that one portion of it applies

... y to a portion
to the whole
... evidence
e description
... house or

of the property taken as a whole ... only a portion of it. Abdul Gh Cas 442 But where a desc the former part is sufficient to

... Ind
and
the
the object
d by

... u 4. Where a mortgage hearing Tauzi No 9907 but it was found that the mortgagor owned Tauzi No 9907, held that it was open to the mortgagee to prove by evidence what the property actually mortgaged was and that the mortgagor could not claim any exoneration on the ground of

... 1 Pat L R
... transic evidence transferred the
only the mortgage
mentioned in the deed that the property stood in the khata of the mortgagor and that there is an indemnity clause cannot justify the contention that only mortgage rights were intended; and if the absence of any assertion in the deed of absolute ownership on the part of the vendor mortgagee makes it possible to hold that the mortgagee's rights were sold, there is a latent ambiguity to remove which evidence can be given, Diulal v Bahram 118 Ind Cas 882-A I R 1929 Nag 267. Suit was brought by plaintiff Receiver appointed under an order of Court with authority to sue defendant for money due to a third party. The money was due under an agreement, dated 26th August, but by mistake the order referred to the money as being due under an agreement of the 25th October. Held that the intention of the parties is immaterial in construing the order, and section 95 of the Evidence Act does not apply. Bhude Behary v Ruy Narain, 30 C. 699—7 C. W. N 651. Where land with certain boundaries is sold and is wrongly described as containing a certain area, the error is regarded as a mere misdescription and does not vitiate the deed. The maxim demonstratio falsa non nocet applies. Where in a sale-deed the land sold is sufficiently identified by the descriptions of its extent and assignment and the name of the registered pattadar, the addition of a wrong survey number may be disregarded and does not render it useless as a document of title. Karuppa Gounden v Iyer Thambi, 2 M. L. T. 506—30 M. 397. Under

S. 9

A. I. R. 1930 Lah. 414

General principle and scope of the section. It is not necessary and it is not humanely possible, for the symbols of description which we call words, to describe in every detail the objects designated by the symbols. The notion that description is a complete enumeration is an instinctive fallacy which must be got rid of before interpretation can be properly attempted. For example, a devise of "the house owned by me at No. 19, Theatre Road, Calcutta" is obviously a mere shorthand indication of some simple but essential attributes of the house. How many stories, rooms, doors, windows, closets, has it? What is the colour of paper on the respective walls, the kind of carpet on the floors, it with fur certainty from others. Certainty in other words, is a relative term, it signifies that the few terms employed are the essential ones for the purpose. Had they not been in themselves sufficient, we might even have looked at term, we are to apply the devise to that house. Just as we found that the omitted terms were not essential to applying the description, so we may find that some of the inserted terms are not essential. We are doing it no violence by ignoring the non-essential terms, for neither the omission nor the insertion of non-essential terms alters its essence as a whole. By conceiving clearly the appreciate that its character as

■ comes to the
The practical
is the essential
the description,
Wigmore § 227
n, so far as lies in our view
y, 11 M. L.
le of pur

it is in
It is before
observed
by the applicant's counsel—that the maxim falsa demonstratio non nocet only applies where there is some correct description at the end of the sentence. That is whittling away the doctrine and making it ridiculous; it is a misapprehension.

Intention 'As soon as there is an adequate and sufficient definition with convenient certainty of what is intended to pass by a deed, any subsequent erroneous addition will not vitiate it' Per Parke B in Lleuellan v Earl of Jersey, (1843) 11 M & W 183 at p 189 description is treated as mere surplusage title per unum non vitatur (Interpret in the description of legacies, like those rectified by reference to the terms circumstances taken together William's

Application of the maxim in different classes of cases According to Mr (1) where an application to any innings v Crans town 7 M & W 1; (2) where there is a complete description, but the testator goes on to add words for the purpose of identifying or elaborating the previous description, these words, if inconsistent with the previous description may be rejected Armstrong v Buckland, 18 Beav 204, Shigsby v Grainger, 7 H L 273; Traters v Blundell 6 Ch D 436; (3) where there is no continuous description, and there is something answering to part of it, and something answering to other part, but two together are inconsistent, the question is which are the leading words of description? In the first class of cases under the head there is no repugnancy between the general terms and the particular superadded description, in the second and third class there is a repugnancy between the two parts of a description Theobald, 7th Ed 140

Illustrative cases If a testator devise his black horse, having only a white one (Door v Geary 1 Ves Sen, 235) or devise his freehold houses, having only leasehold houses (Day v Triq, 18 P Wms 286; Doe d Bunning v Cranston, 7 M & houses in the other w subject intended is added description though false, introduces no ambiguity; and as, by 1 e to any subject, the Court does by rejecting them. To such cases, with propriety be applied Gyns 1 Ves Jun 268; Dowsett v Sweet, Amb 175; Garth v Meybrick, 1 Bro C C 30, Stockdale v Bushley 19 Ves 381; Smith v Campbell, 19 Ves 403; Welby v Welby, 2 Ves & B 191, Richardson v Watson 4 B & Adol 733, Miller v Traters, 8 Bing 241, Doe d Smith v Gallanay, 5 B & Adol 43, and this is the proper limit of that Maxim Higram 5th Ed 61

Extension of the rule In the application of the principle in question the Courts have not confined themselves to cases which are strictly within its terms. It is often found, on a disclosure of the facts of the case that of two

'house' in a particular place, or his "B estate", or the like, then although he adds a clause to the effect that the property is in the occupation of a particular tenant, or is situate in a particular country, street or other locality, and it turns out that such clause is true only of a part of the property, the entire subject may well pass, unrestricted by additional clause, if such a construction be in accordance with general intent of the testator. Jarman 6th Ed 126, citing Roe v Fernon, 5 F&T 80, per Lord Ellenborough. In West v Laidlaw, 11 H L C 381 Lord Westbury explains the maxim falsa demonstratio non nocet in the following terms "where some subject-matter is devised as a whole S.

inaccurate enumeration of the particulars' In the case of Travers v Blindell, 6 Ch D 436, the testator was exercising a power given him by his father's Will over an estate called the Righby's Estate which his father had purchased, and Sir G Jessel after saying that the real question in issues of this description was which is the leading description, held that the words in the Will that part of Righby's Estate purchased by my father was the leading description although the enumeration of the closes, of which the Will and the estate consisted made no mention of the two closes. Tibbhorandas v Krishnamam 18 B 283 (288)

Inaccurate description The testator made a bequest of my "portrait of X" to the National Gallery and the executors sent it on there being no doubt as to the identity of the thing, bequeathed. The trustees of the National Gallery expressed doubts as to whether it was a portrait of X, whereupon the executors claimed it back for the residuary legatee. Held even assuming the description was wrong, the gift was valid and the portrait passed to the trustees of the Gallery. In re Miner, Gibson v Culham Cust v Attorney General, (1924) 1 Ch 456, a testator specifically devised 'all my messuage farm lands and hereditaments in Bently and Bombay in Essex now in occupation of Thomas Girling purchased by him of Alderman Thrope'. It was found that the testator had a farm in Bently and Bombay called 'Welham's farms' compounded of two small farms purchased by him of Alderman Thrope in 1881, and of another adjoining small farm and a field both purchased by him from Mr Carrington. At the date of the Will and death of the testator the whole of the lands so purchased were in the occupation of Thomas Girling who found them as one holding. Held that the whole of William's farm passed to the specific devisees. Norman v Norman (1919) 1 Ch 297

96. When the facts are such that the language used might

Evidence as to application of language which can apply to one only of several persons have been meant to apply to any one, and could not have been meant to apply to more than one, of several persons or things, evidence may be given of facts which show which of those persons or things it was intended to apply to.

Illustrations.

(a) A agrees to sell to B for Rs 1000, "my white horse". A has two white horses. Evidence may be given of facts which show which of them was meant.

(b) A agrees to accompany B to Haidarabad. Evidence may be given of facts showing whether Haidarabad in the Dekkhan or Haidarabad in Sind was meant.

Principle "If you go to parol evidence to remove the ambiguity you cannot well refuse it, to explain such ambiguity. Per Lord Thurlow in Shelborne v. Ingham, 1 Bro C C 338 341

Similar law *Id*s 89 of the Succession Act (XXIX of 1925)

Scope When there are two or more persons or things, and each of them exactly answers to the description in the Will, then all manner of parol evidence is admissible, (Charter v Charter, L. R., 7 H. L. 364), for the language of the Will is complied with. ever thing passes under the beque Bing 244 Thindal C J said; "Verborum latens verasificatione suppletur) applies will be found to range themselves into two separate classes. The first class is where the description of the thing devised, or of the devisee, is clear upon the face of the Will; but upon the death of the testator it is found, that there are more than one estate or subject matter of devise, or more than one person whose description follows out and fills the words used in the Will. As where the testator devises his manor Dale, and at his death it is found that he has two manors of that name, South Dale and North Dale, or where a man devises to his son John, and he has two sons of that name.

In each of these cases respectively parol evidence is admissible to show which manor was intended to pass and which son was intended to take. The other class of cases is that in which the description contained in the Will of the thing intended to be devised, or of the person who is intended to take, is true in part, but not true in every particular. As where an estate is devised called A, and is described as in the occupation of B, and it is found, that though there is an estate called A, yet the whole is not in B's occupation; or where an estate is devised to a person whose sur name or Christian name is mistaken; or whose description is imperfect or inaccurate; in which latter class of cases parol evidence is admissible to show what estate was intended to pass and who was the devisee intended to take, provided there is some indication appearing on the face of the Will to justify it. tion
"Where the object of testator's bounty or ence the person or thing intended) is described in terms which are applicable in differently to more than one person or thing, evidence is admissible to prove which of the persons or things so described was intended by the testator." Higram Proposition VII at p 110. See also In re Stephenson, (1897) 1 Ch 80, W. 129; Unsettled
the given of every ment in which the language of more objects
the case and of statements made by any parties to the document, and as to the intentions in reference to the matter to which the document relates." Steph Dig Lk art 91

This rule is applicable where two persons have got the same name as mentioned in the document, but one of them has got an additional name. Bennet v Marshall, 2 K & J 740; Doe v Allen, 12 A. & T. 451; Fleming v Fleming 31 L. J. Ex 419; Webber v Corbet, L. R. 16 Eq 515. In order to ascertain the intention of the parties to any instrument evidence of the conduct of the parties is admissible. Watson v Mohesh, 24 W. R. 176 (177), Cheetun v Chatterdhore, 19 W. R. 432.

When an instrument appears, on the face of it, to be free from ambiguity, it is to be construed according to its plain meaning. ent comes to ality v The ase, Lord

ind extrinsic
so of Lords in 87 L. J. Ch purpose of he words are applicable was intended to be denoted. Reference may in this connection be made to the Charter v Charter case. v Jeffries, 15 M & W. 161 if C. J. in Shore v Wilson

l. v. Fennel, 7 H. L. C. 650 Co v Marine Board of the Cape, (1888) A. C. 32, and of Lord Atkinson in Walchman v Attorney General, (1910) A. C. 533-57 L. J. P. C. 159. The decision of the judicial committee in the last mentioned case shows that the principle that when an S.

Co Ltd, 36 C. L. J. 212-72 Ind : - directly describes two sets apply to both, evidence may Ngacho v Ma Sa Ma, 10 B - ! provides for the payment of whether the parties meant the revenue as assessed at the date of death or as it might be re-assessed from time to time evidence may be given under this section to show what was meant. Fur and v Ham, 22 O. C. 270-59 Ind. Cas 261.

Application of the rule T Boult C. J in Grant v Grant, L. R. 6 nd of parol evidence is not admissib ng, or altering the Will of the testator, but is admitted simply for purpose of enabling the Court to understand it, and to declare the intention of the testator according to the words in which the intention is expressed. If such evidence establishes that the description in the Will may apply to each of two or more persons, and there appeared by extrinsic evidence to be two persons answering such d testator's staten Doe v Needs,

G dgment of the Court in the above-mentioned case observe it is uncertain whether a deviser had selected no evidence would have been admissible certain individual such would have been a the meaning of Lord Bacon's rule, which ambiguity could not be holpen by averment; for to allow such evidence would be, with respect to that subject, to cause a parol Will to operate as a written one; or adopting the language of Lord Bacon, 'to make that pass without writing which the law appointeth shall not pass but by writing' But here, on the face of the devise, no such doubt arises

There is no blank before the name of Gord the father, which might have occasioned a doubt whether the deviser had finally fixed on any certain person in his mind. The deviser has clearly selected a particular individual as the devisee law, in certain special cases, admit extrinsic evidence of intention to make certain person or thing intended, where the description in the Will is insufficient for the purp-

Doe v. Howells, L M. & W. 363 (367) "which is by evidence of his declaration, of the instructions given for his Will, and other circumstances of the like nature, which are not adduced for explaining the words or meaning of the Will, but either to supply some deficiency, or remove some obscurity, or to give some effect to expressions that are unmeaning or ambiguous. Now, there is but one case in which it appears to us that this sort of evidence of intention can properly be admitted, and that is, where the meaning of the testator's words is neither ambiguous nor obscure, and when the devise is, on the face of it, perfect and intelligible but, from some of the circumstances admitted in proof, an ambiguity arises as to which of the two or more things, or which of the two or more persons (each answering the words in the Will), the testator intended to express. Thus if a testator devise his manor of S to A B, and has two manors of North S and South S it being clear he means to devise one only, whereas both are equally denoted by the words he used in that case there is what Lord Bacon calls 'an equivocation': the words equally apply to either manor, and the evidence of previous intention may be received to solve this latent ambiguity." So "where one person accurately fulfils the description, and no one else does you cannot admit parol evidence to show that such person was not intended." Per Millins v. C in Re Walerton Mortgaged Estates, 7 Ch D 199; Re Roren (1915) 1 Ch 673; see also Doe v. Westlake, 4 B & Ald 57; Webber v. Corbett, L R 8 Eq 515; Howood v. Griffith, 4 D M & G 700. But the rule contained in this section is applicable where the gift is "to the four children of my cousin E. B." and where in fact E. B. had six children, two by one husband P. and four by another husband B. Hampshire v. Pierce, 2 Weg 216; see also Jones v. Newman 1 W. Bl 60; Doe v. Allen, 12 A & E 451, Grant v. Grant, L R 5 C P 727, Naseby v. Jeffry, (1914) 1 Ch 375; Hunderson v. Hunderson, (1905) 11 R 353; Re Baltic Wrightson, (1920) 2 Ch. 330. This rule is also applicable to deeds and contracts. Wigmore § 2472.

Ambiguity—Evidence of intention. It is commonly said that extrinsic evidence is admissible in cases of latent ambiguities whereas such evidence is inadmissible in cases of patent ambiguities. "But upon examination the maxim proves not to be a universal guide; for, on the one hand, there are many recognised authorities for the admission of parol evidence to explain ambiguities of the words he has used. It is to the admissibility of this species of evidence that attention is now to be turned. To say that such evidence is admissible, family, or other circumstances, that ambiguity may be removed by further evidence of the same nature. But in admitting this interpretation of the rule, all distinction between patent and latent ambiguities is lost, for in every case the Judge by whom a Will is to be expounded is entitled to be placed, by a knowledge of all the material facts of the case, as nearly as possible in the situation of the testator when he wrote it. A patent ambiguity it is true, may not be undoubtedly true. But by our hypothesis in this precise extent, and no further, is the latter branch true also. We come, therefore, to the conclusion that the distinction taken by the canon between latent and patent ambiguities is an unsubstantial one, or that the proposition does, in its second branch, assert the admissibility of evidence to show the testator's intention (as words); and that, consequently, special class of cases. It remains in admissible. Suppose, then, that evidence has been given of all the material facts, and that these have ultimate existence of more than one object applicable. The uncertainty as to which of these was in the testator's contemplation would if the investigation stopped here, necessarily be fatal to the gift. Under these peculiar circumstances, however, declarations of the testator or other direct evidence of his intention are admissible to clear up the ambiguity, pointing out (if they can) the actual subject or object of gift, among the several properties or persons answering to the description. Of this nature are the examples given by Lord Bacon, in illustration of the maxim, "Ambiguitas verborum latens verificatione suppletur; nam quod ex facto oritur ambiguitas verificatione facit tollitur"; and are styled by him as cases of equivocation." Jarman 6th Ed 516 518.

Evidence as to application of language to one of two sets of facts, to neither of which the whole correctly applies.

97. When the language used applies partly to one set of existing facts, and partly to another set of existing facts, but the whole of it does not apply correctly to either, evidence may be given to show to which of the two it was meant to apply.

Illustration.

A agrees to sell to B "my land at X, but not in the occupation of Y, but it is not at X. Evidence may be given to show to which of the two it was meant to apply."

Principle. "The characteristic of all these cases is that the words of the Will do describe the object or objects of the testator has not whatever; it only enables which the description in the devise is understood to be signified." Parke J in Doe v Needs, 3 M & W 129.

Scope of the section. This section is the converse of the preceding one; in that there is language partially applicable to two sets of facts, but wholly applicable to neither. In this case evidence is admissible to discover the intention of the person or thing bequeathed of the several subjects though the evidence may be received for subjects the language applies, inadmissible. Doe v Hascock (1841) 10 Cl & F 101.

It is found that the language exactly answers the error appears in the evidence of the testator. But according to Prof Wigmore there is no danger in receiving declarations of intention, because the precise words of the document cannot be literally applied in any event, and there is thus no contradiction between the literal and the intended meaning.

uttered part of said: 'be pre wish to recollect permit give of strictly logical course, I think, would be either to admit declarations of intention both in cases falling under paragraph 7 (—ss. 95, 97) and in cases falling under Doa v. Hiscocke, 5 M. & W. 363 (367) "which is by evidence of his declarations, of the instructions given for his Will, and other circumstances of the like nature, which are not adduced for explaining the words or meaning of the Will, but either to supply some deficiency, or remove some obscurity, or to give some effect to expressions that are unmeaning or ambiguous. Now, there is but one case in which it appears to us that this sort of evidence of intention can properly be admitted, and that is, where the meaning of the testator's words is neither ambiguous nor obscure, and when the devise is, on the face of it, perfect and intelligible but, from some of the circumstances admitted in proof, an ambiguity arises, as to which of the two or more things, or which of the two or more persons (each answering the words in the Will), the testator intended to express. Thus equivocation' : words equally apply to either; but, by previous intention may be received to show that one person accurately fulfils the

But the rule contained in this case is applicable in fact husband and wife. Bl 60; v Jeff Baito contract. But the rule contained in this case is applicable in fact husband and wife. Bl 60; v Jeff Baito contract. eg 216, see also Jones v Newman 1 W. int v Grant, L R 5 C P 727, Nassey v Hunderson, (1905) 11 R 353; the rule is also applicable to deeds and Ambiguity—Evidence of intention. It is commonly said that extrinsic authorities for the admission of parol evidence to explain ambiguities appearing on the face of the Will, while, on the other hand, the existence of a latent ambiguity will certainly not, as appears sometimes to have been supposed, warrant the admission in all cases indiscriminately of parol evidence to show what the testator meant to have written as distinguished from what is the meaning of the words he has used. It is to the admissibility of this species of evidence that attention is now to be turned. To say that such evidence is admissible, that attention is now to be turned. To say that such evidence is admissible, is confined to developments of facts with reference to which the Will was written, and to which the language of the Will expressly or tacitly refers; and therefore, it lies within the strict limits of exposition which is denied that the latter transgresses. The proposition only an otherwise unambiguous family, or other circumstances, that ambiguity may be removed by further

of the testator when he wrote it. A patent ambiguity it is true, may not be explained by any other kind of evidence and so far the first branch of the canon is undoubtedly true. But by our hypothesis to this precise extent, and no further, is the latter branch true also. We come, therefore, to the conclusion either that the distinction taken by the canon between latent and patent ambiguities is an unsubstantial one, or that the proposition does, in its second branch, assert the admissibility of evidence to show the testator's intention (as that evidence has been given of all the material facts and circumstances of the case, and that these have ultimately raised an ambiguity by disclosing the existence of more than one object or subject to which the words are equally applicable. The uncertainty as to which of these was in the testator's contemexamples given by Lord Esher, in illustration of the maxim "Ambiguus verborum latens verificatione suppletur, nam quod ex facto oritur ambiguum verificatione facit tollitur"; and are styled by him as cases of equivocation." Jarman 6th Ed 516 518.

Evidence as to application of language to one of two sets of facts, to neither of which the whole correctly applies.

97. When the language used applies partly to one set of existing facts, and partly to another set of existing facts, but the whole of it does not apply correctly to either, evidence may be given to show to which of the two it was meant to apply.

Illustration.

A agrees to sell to B "my land at X, but not in the occupation of Y, but it is not at X. Evidence may be given to show to which of the two it was meant to apply."

Principle "The characteristic of all these cases is that the words of the Will do describe the object or subject intended; and the evidence of the declarations of the testator has not the effect of varying the instrument in any way whatever; it only enables the Court, to reject one of the subjects or objects to which the description in the Will applies, and to determine which of the two the testator understood to be signified by the description which he used in the Will." Parke B in Doe v Needs, 2 M & W 129.

Scope of the section. This section is the converse of the preceding one; in that there is language partially applicable to two sets of facts, but which is applicable to neither. In this case the evidence is admissible for discovering the intention of the person or thing bequeathed. In section 95 Quin Ex 286 of the person or thing bequeathed of the several subjects though the evidence may be received for subjects the language applies, inadmissible. Doe v Hascock of the California Civil Code as there is an imperfect description or that no person or property exactly answers the description, mistakes and omissions must be corrected, if the error appears from the context of the Will or from extrinsic evidence; but evidence of the declarations of the testator as to his intention cannot be received. But according to Prof Wigmore there is no danger because the precise words of the document event, and there is thus no compromise of utterance, it is simply a question which part of the description. Wigmore § 2 said. "Conclusive as the authorities upon the subject are, it is not presumptuous to express a doubt whether the conflict between a natural wish to fulfil the intention which the testator would have formed if he had recollected all the circumstances of the case, the wish to avoid the evil of permitting written instruments to be varied by oral evidence, and the wish to give effect to Wills, has not produced in practice an illogical compromise. The strictly logical course, I think, would be either to admit declarations of intention both in cases falling under paragraph 7 (—ss. 95, 97) and in cases falling under sections 95 and 97 or section 96, Woodroffe Ev. p 663; Field Ev 6th the subject is thus laid down by

it was intended to apply to one rule established by the second clause evidence, including expressions and to

to be also dence,
under
able law on 168 Mo
correct and partly
not apply precisely legally certain that

by outside circumstances, may be more stator, in its entire scope, effectuated eaning." Wignmore § 2474 In Ryall rty to Elizabeth, the natural daughter of B B has a natural son John, and a legitimate daughter Elizabeth. The Court may infer from the circumstances under which the natural child was born, and from the testator's relationship to the putative father, that he meant to provide for Elizabeth Stringer, who had died before the date of the Will and that it was put into the Will by a mistake on the part of the solicitor. Stringer v Gardiner, 27 Beav 35=4 Deg & J 468. Criticising on that decision Sir James Fitzjames Stephen said "Such a decision as that in Stringer v Gardiner, the result of which was to give a legacy to a person whom the testator had no wish to benefit, and who was not either named or described in his Will, appears to me to be a practical refutation of the principle or rule on which it is based. Of course every document whatever must to some extent be interpreted by circumstances. However accurate and detailed a description of things and persons may be, oral evidence is always wanted to show that persons and things answering the description exist; and therefore in every case whatever, every fact must be allowed to prove to which the document does, or properly may refer; but if more evidence than this is admitted, if the Court may look at circumstances which affect the probability that the testator would form this intention or that why should declaration of intention be excluded? If the question is, 'what did the testator say?' why should the Court look at the circumstances that he lived with Charles, and was on bad terms with William? How can any amount of evidence to show that the testator intended to write "Charles" show that what he did write means "Charles"? To say that "Foster" means "Charles," is like saying that "sign" means "stone." If the question is, 'what did the testator wish?' why

pp. 166, 167.

A agree to sell to B at X but not in the
it is not at X, evidence Another common case wrongly described as containing a certain area, the error in area is regarded as a mere misdescription and does not vitiate the deed. The maxim demonstratio falsa non nocet applies. Karuppa v Periatthambi Gotundan, 30 M 397 (399). So where land is described in a document by boundaries and area is wrongly specified, the land within the boundaries will pass whether it be less or more than the quantity specified. Bhayaiah v Dacarka, 15 C P L R 163. In such a case the maxim falsa demonstratio non nocet applies, or

v. Saider, 12 W R 439, Lslim v
18 W R 25, Kazee Abdul v. Buroda am, 18 B 283; Subhoya v Mut
Harimohan v Rameswar, 64 Ind C 751; Narain v Jauahar, 50 P, I L T. 245.

to the
of the house
is adn
of the property taken as a whole the intention was to convey the whole house or only a portion of it. Abdul Ghani v Ashiq Husam, 65 Ind Cas 442 = (1923)
C 100 W 1

of an ambiguity in the description of land in a mortgage deed it is open to a party to show by other evidence what land was actually covered by the deed.
Ramchandra v Arshad Ali, 43 Ind Cas 721

Whole of it does not apply correctly to either. This section has application when the whole of the language used in a document does not apply correctly to either. Because "if I have some land wherein all these demonstrations are true, and some wherein part of them are true and part false, then shall they be, intended words of true limitation to pass only those lands where all those circumstances are true." This rule is based upon the 18th maxim of Lord Bacon which is as follows, rationem quae competunt in limitatio is devised, and there are found to and precisely corresponding to the so completely answering thereto, the latter will be excluded, though had there been no other property on which the devise could have operated, it might have been held to comprise the less appropriate subject; Jarman 6th Ed 1276 A devise of lands described in a particular place and in the occupation of a particular person

of that person
see also Falsa

Where a testator has devised all his lands at any particular place, extrinsic evidence is not admissible for other lands not situated lands having been enjoyed period of time, or of the
of his having been in the h under one distinguishing name' Per Baqqally L. J. in Homer v. Homer, 1 Ch.
758 at p 774.

98. Evidence may be given to show the meaning of illegible

Evidence as to or not commonly intelligible characters of meaning of illegible foreign, obsolete, technical, local and provin-character, etc. cial expressions, of abbreviations and of words used in a peculiar sense.

B.

Illustration.

A, a sculptor agrees to sell to B, "all my models." A has both models and modelling tools. Evidence may be given to show which he meant to sell.

Principle "Where any doubt arises upon the true sense and meaning of the words themselves, or any difficulty as to their application under the surrounding circumstances, the sense and meaning of the language may be investigated and ascertained by evidence dehors the instrument itself; for reason and common sense agree, that by no other means can the language of the instrument be made to speak the real mind of the party. Such investigation does of necessity take place in the interpretation of instruments written in foreign language, in the case of ancient instruments, where, by the lapse of time and change of manners, the words have acquired in the present age a different meaning from that which they bore when originally employed; in cases where terms of art occur;—in mercantile contracts, which, in many instances, use a peculiar language, employed by those only who are conversant in trade or commerce;—and in other instances in which the words besides their general common meaning have acquired a peculiar idiomatic meaning in which he was dwelling, or in which he passed his life, the real meaning of the language used in the instrument, in order to enable the Court or Judge to construe the instrument." Irish v. Parke said: "I apprehend two which bear upon the subject are admissible in every case for the purpose of enabling a Court to construe a written instrument, and to apply it practically. In the first place, there is no doubt that not only where the language of the instrument is such as the Court does not understand, it is competent to receive evidence of the proper meaning of that language as when it is written in a foreign tongue; but it is also competent, where technical words or peculiar terms, or indeed any expressions are used, which, at the time the instrument was written, have acquired an appropriate meaning either generally or by local usage, or amongst particular classes. This description of evidence is admissible, in order to enable the Court to understand the meaning of the words contained in the instrument itself, by themselves and without reference to extrinsic facts on which the instrument is intended to operate."

Scope of the section. In order to interpret or ascertain the meaning of a written document, parol evidence may be given of the meaning or sense in which not only words, but also signs, symbols, private marks, or nicknames, have been used. Such evidence is admissible in any case in which it is in question by the person who is in question.

class of persons

Sec 302 So in order to ascertain the meaning of the signs and words used upon a document, oral evidence may be given of the meaning of illegible or not commonly intelligible characters, of foreign, obsolete, technical, local, and provincial expressions, of abbreviations, and of common words which, from the context, appear to have been used in a peculiar sense; but evidence may not be given to show that common words have been used in a sense which does not appear from the context. Stephen Dig said Lord Thurlow in S instance where parol evidence was given to show that the word "vulgar" was used in a vulgar sense. . . . no idea of its obtained a precise that would, as

In Beacon L. & S. Co. v. L. & S. Co. 10 Q. B. 49, 53, Lord Chelmsford said: "In order to construe a term in a written instrument where it is used in a sense differing from its ordinary meaning evidence is admissible to prove the peculiar sense in which the parties understood the word; but it is not admissible to contradict or vary what is plain." See also Per Mallett v. C. in Silver's Trusts L. R. 12 Eq 183, 186. Prof. Wigmore in his Law of Evidence in considering both the theory and policy of the above rule said "That the theory of it is unsound, ought not to be doubted. There can be in the nature of things, no absoluteness of standard in interpretation. An advanced communism might conceivably bring men to such a level of intellectual uniformity that their thoughts would be expressed in invariably identical symbols. But till that day comes the varieties of individual expression and sense must be unquenchable. So long as men are allowed to grant and contract freely and so long as the law undertakes to carry out those acts by enforcement, just so long must the standard of interpretation continue to be mobile, subjective, and individual. The fallacy consists in assuming that there is or can be one real or absolute Justice Doisen it is not so much a canon of construction as a counsel of caution' (Re Jodiell, L. R. 41 Ch. D. 590). The distinguished Master of the to counsel that 'no body could, and yet the Court of Appeals ter all convinced of that precise D. 181) to say that it would vidence to fail to be convinced, that is very different from an idical mind is legally not open cory nor in policy any basis for an absolute rule declaring that when a word has a plain meaning, it is by the popular standard; neither the local nor the mutual nor the individual standard can be substituted, such a rule is still maintained by many utterances like those above quoted. But its vogue is disappearing; . . ." Wigmore § 2462.

In Brown v Byrnes, 3 E. & B. 703, Lord Coleridge J. said "Neither, in the construction of a contract, nor in the construction of a will, is the ordinary working

do not there
ed.
own

Illegible Where the writing is that in ordinary use, but illegible, the 1 L. 281. So it is assist in deciphering Masters v Masters, § 2025. Illegibility peculiarity of character, writing. Referring to the case of Cyprien, Baron Almonston observed "Words on paper are but the means by which a person expresses his meaning, and shorthand is in this respect, like long hand, and equally admits interpretation." Clayton v Nugent, 13 M. & W. 206.

in each instance whether it needs any S.
 -d or phrase in dispute Wigmore § 1955 be received, but you cannot ask a witness what is the meaning of a written document' Kirkland v Nisbet, 3 Macq Sc. App. C. 766 In most of the cases in this section the word or words may be unless from other words it is very clear that the Lord Redesdale in Jesson v Wright, 5 M & S testimony to ascertain the technical and popular use of the word Durr Jones § 455

In mercantile contracts the question has often arisen on expressions denoting a 1 Esp
 turn t
 which
 and e

was understood to mean a package of Cockburn C J said "If the term 'bale' as particular trade a signification differing ence must be received on the subject, contract" So a bale of cotton may mean a or locality, no matter how plain the apparent reader. In Smith v Wilson, 3 M & Ad 728 prove that by the customary meaning of it applied to rabbits, meant '100 dozen' In seals are named with 'and delivered from either at seller's

 "Yes, if you read it strictly Lord Abinger, said "The Court must look at each contract, and say whether in its whole spirit and meaning and did not mean or in the understanding of the parties" "Days" in a bill of lading, was held to mean "working days" Cockburn v Retberg, 3 Esp 121 In Grant v Maddox, 15 M & W 737, interpreting the word 'year' evidence was admitted of the professional usage that actors were never paid during the time of vacation In Myers v Sanl, 3 E & E 306, which was a building contract,

'dark gray or black mohair,' the goods had a dark appearance, and Jessel
M R. declaring "that is a black selvedge and not a white selvedge," and that "no evidence would convince them that black was white", declined to give effect to the plaintiff's testimony that the plaintiff's selvedge "was what was perfect" well known appeal, this was selvedge is Wigmore
 interpreted dance wit
 the "age"
 "was accor-
 Parol

evidence was admissible to show that the term 'in the month of October' according to the mercantile usage, means a particular part of the month Chait context
quali usage Whe re any
and and quib. jundad held that the ladies obtained an absolute estate Thakur v. Ro ad Jamma Kuar, 6 A L J 420, Chumal v. Bai Muli, 2 Bom L R 47-24 B
 420 Surjomoni v. Robinath 30 A 81 Kandarpa v. Jogendra, 12 C L J 391
Lalit Mohan v. Chakraborty 23 C 831
N 458, Roidas v. Bangolap 26 C
 26 C W N 425 (P C); Sulochana
Ashutosh, 27 C 44, Sibnarayan v. Tara ngini, 8 C L J 20

Local and Provincial expressions Of local usage a striking illustration is afforded by the case of a lease of a rabbit warren, where the lessee covenanted to leave on the warren at the expiration of the term 10,000 rabbits, the lessor paying for them according to the loc meant 1,200 Smit
 usage of a trade
 the ordinary or popular sense of words, it remains merely a question for the particular case whether the parties have in fact spoken according to that standard Where all the parties are members of the same trade or other circle of persons, little difficulty can arise, the only requirement is that the special sense alleged should be in fact a usage, or settled habit of expression, and not merely the expression of a few persons or of casual occasions Russian Steers
Nat v. Sitta, 13 C B N S 610 617 Where the usage is not that of a trade but of a locality, the form of it may be common reputation or commonly used documents Wigmore § 2464 Where in a deed words in use in a particular locality in a peculiar sense are employed, oral evidence is admissible under section 98 of the Evidence Act to explain the meaning of the words in question Chuddu v. Chiu, 63 Ind Cas 133

Abbreviations Where initials or other abbreviation are to be interpreted the local usage or repute is of course receivable Wigmore § 2461 A wager contract to run one greyhound against another, concluded with the initials P P Evidence was received to show that it meant—Play or Pay,—that is to say,—win the match, or forfeit the stake Atterson D said 'standing by themselves' those letters are insensible, but the evidence confers a real meaning upon and that they were inse said 'T
 also Baron Pail's
 case of a
 It is like the sculptor, . . . of a celebrated
 'mod—tools for carving' is a familiar illustration on the part of terms of art The word 'mod' was there contended on the one hand to mean modelling tools and on the other models, which latter were of great value, and evidence of sculptors and others was received in interpretation of the word 'mod' Goblet v. Beechey, 3 Sim 24, Goodere Ex 377 On this case the illustration is based Put the case of shorthand writers' notes, which a Court unskilled in the art of stenography must have explained or interpreted before it can attach any meaning to the arbitrary signs Hell v. Charmer, 23 Beav 195

Words used in a peculiar sense There is no reason in the nature of things, why the words in a particular sense, . . . use what we are seeking . . . standard is merely taken . . . in theory only a question of fact in each case whether the parties were using a special mutual sense The application of the principle has long been seen in the interpretation of descriptions in deeds, because there is there always some concrete and local object, fully known to the parties but unknown to the Court and in every such case it is obvious that the words used must be translated into things and facts, the parties to the deed almost always use terms of description which are peculiar to themselves Wigmore § 2465 Doe v. Bart, 1 T R

701, 704, Van Diemen's Land Co v Marant Board, (1906) App. Cas. 92; Squire v. Campbell, 1 Myl & C 159 "The purpose of all such evidence is, to ascertain in what sense the parties themselves used the ambiguous terms in the writing which sets forth it manifest in what sense the best definition to be applied. The effect must be limited to the subject matter. If so limited the negotiations relates to the future, and consists in positive engagements on the part of the other party to the contract. Their effect depends, not upon their promissory obligation, but upon the aid they afford in the interpretation of the contract in suit. They are not the less effective for the purpose of explanation and definition because they purport to carry the force of obligation. Per Wells J in Stoops v Smith, 100 Mass 63. In Doe v Denham, 1 A. & L 614, 652, Coleridge J said "The Courts have come to some inconsistent conclusions in cases of this kind, out from the main body of them at the time, in order to see in what sense the words were used" Wilmore §§ 2465, 2467. In Kell v. Charnes, 23 Bery 195, a bequest was "to my son W the sum of 1xx; to my son R C the sum of 0xx, the testator having in the course of his business used certain private marks or symbols to denote prices or sums of money," this usage was resorted to, and showed that the sums of £100 and £200 were signified. In Pe Osner, Samuel v Osner, (1209) 2 Ch 60, a bequest was to "my grand nephew Robert O." There was no "Robert O" but there was a "Richard O." Evidence of the memorandum of the testator showing that the testator called Richard "Robert" was admitted; see also Ellen v Halston, (1912) 1 Ch 135, Wilmore § 2467. Where a Hindu testator uses technical terms of English law in his Will and those terms have no accepted meaning in Hindu law the rule is that effect of the intention of such terms cannot be given. Jatinder W R 359, Krishnamom 317 P C = 18 Free Bombay Harbour F O B means (519), see also Jade Rat v Dhabataran Jackeriah, 2 Ind Jur 311

Who may give evidence of agreement varying terms of document.

99 Persons who are not parties to a document or their representatives in interest, may give evidence of any facts tending to show a contemporaneous agreement varying the terms of the document.

Illustration

otton, to be that three ween A and Principle "The rule under consideration is applied only (in suits) between the parties to the instrument; as they alone are to blame if the writing contains contained. It cannot be prejudiced by things ignorance, carelessness, to be precluded from proving the truth, however contradictory to the written statement of others Greenl Ev § 279, cited in Taylor § 1149, Holt v Collyer, L II 16 Ch D 718. Strangers have not assented to the compact nor can they be heard in a proceeding to set aside or reform it. Hence they are at liberty to show that the written instrument does not disclose the true character of the transaction. Burr Jones v § 449. To hold strangers bound which were behind their backs, cessat lex the rule therefore does

Scope of the section This section being an enabling provision cannot be held to prohibit the reception of evidence as to a fact in issue or a relevant fact admissible independently thereof. Pathammal v Syed Kalai Rnuhar 27 M 329, Krishna Suami v Mangala Thammal 53 Ind Cas 213. It is well settled that the word 'varying' in section 99 covers the same ground as the words or subtracting from' in section 92 (1) (b).

3) No construction of section 92 can modify which provides that persons not parties to the document or their representatives in interest may give evidence to show a contemporaneous agreement. Krishna Suami v Mangala Thammal 53 Ind Cas 213 see also Maung Kyin v Ma Shue 15 C 320=22 C W N 257 P C. So extrinsic evidence is admissible to show the real nature of the transaction, both as against and as in favour of evidencing the transaction or rectifying it. Baldeo v Puttu La evidence provided by section 92 (1) itself, one to be used only as between the parties to the instrument or by its representative in interest. This section expressly gives a free hand to persons necessary implication when read with the executants of documents against such

R 115. Under sections 92 and 99 of the Act, the law is given by the pre-emptor to show the real nature of the transaction. He being no party to the instrument. Chhuiko v Jugga 11 Ind Cas 501, Khondad v Nasar, 127 P L R 1902. Parmanan v Atrabat 20 P R 1899. Usman v Md Shaif 1927 A 204=98 Ind Cas 99. Where A purported to make a gift of his lands to his daughter B it was open evidence that the transaction was, consequently liable to be set aside against him. Jagat plaintiff is not a party to the purported transaction. Bageswari v Ishfaq 1473, 1474.

Syed 53 Ind Cas 961. The exception of a fraudulent operation of the instrument of one of the parties may introduce the fraudulent intent which accompanied and characterized the giving of the instrument. Similarly a person who is suing one of the parties to a sealed instrument upon a cause of action not arising out of the instrument may show that the instrument was in fact a mere device concocted to mislead out of dealing with one or the other parties to it and that it did not truly represent the relation between those parties. It is to be observed however that the right of a stranger to vary a written contract by parol is limited to rights which are independent of the instrument. Brown Parol Ev § 28. So when one, although not a party to the instrument has his claim upon it and seeks to render it effective in his favour as against the other party to the action, by enforcing a right originating in the relation established by it or which it founded upon it, the parol evidence rule applies. Burr Jones v § 449. A person who does not claim through the settlor is entitled to challenge the

on never to Cal
will be at they claim
L 711

Saving of provisions of Indian Succession
Act relating to wills

100. Nothing in this Chapter contained shall be taken to affect any of the provisions of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865), as to the construction of Wills.

and limits so far as relates to immoveable property situate within those territories reversed in 22 C 788 (P C)

PART III.

PRODUCTION AND EFFECT ON EVIDENCE

CHAPTER VII

OF THE BURDEN OF PROOF.

101. Whoever desires any Court to give judgment as to any legal right or liability dependent on the existence of facts which he asserts must prove

Burden of proof

that those facts exist.

When a person is bound to prove the existence of any fact, it is said that the burden of proof lies on that person

Illustrations

(a) A desires a Court to give judgment that B shall be punished for a crime

in the
to be true

A must prove the existence of those facts

Burden of Proof—its origin and place in the law of Evidence "Whoever enters in a legal controversy needs to know with precision what is in dispute, in point of substantive law in point of fact, and in point of form All this he must know before he reaches the trial. The ascertaining of it belongs, properly, to the period when you state your case, the period of pleading. It matters not what be the purpose of pleading, whether, as in the Roman system, it must be conducted. Science, therefore, acknowledges no burden of proof. In the same way, in legal proceedings in rem, where the personal element of litigation is in a measure subordinated to the social interest in the ascertainment of the truth regarding the status of persons, the legal relations of property and the like, the assignment of the position of a burden of proof is deemed of much less importance than in personal actions. In the latter class of proceedings, however, both the mentally untrained nature of the jury and the limits of time which should be devoted to the trial of any particular case have united with the fact that the tribunal must sit, as a rule, at a particular place whither it is necessary that before the trial should go upon the truth of some definite issue known as in the trial by battle, which a defensive combat. This knowledge it was the appropriate and characteristic mission of pleading to furnish and upon the issue raised by the pleadings one of the parties had the burden of proof and the other had not. (Cambridge v. Lo §§ 930, 931)

Duty of the person alleging the case to prove it The burden of proof in this sense means "the burden of establishing a case whether by a preponderance of the evidence or beyond a reasonable doubt" (Rest. T. p. 258) or as Prof. W. C. Brown states "that of a person of the law or the fact." (U. S. v. ...)

it is a profitable object and not otherwise. Here it is seen that the advantage is with B, and the disadvantage with A, for unless A succeeds in persuading M, upon the point of action A will fail and B, will remain victorious. The burden of proof, or, in other words the risk of non persuasion, is upon A. This does not mean that B is absolutely safe though he does nothing, for he cannot tell how much it will require to persuade M, a very little argument from A might suffice, or if M is of a rashly speculative tendency the mere mention of the proposition by A might without more effect M's action so that it may be safer in any case for B to say what he can on his side of the question, and thus in fact he as well as A, has more or less risk in the sense that there are always chances of A's persuading M no matter how trifling his evidence and argument.

and constitute rights and duties of pleading and procedure, which tips of duty and assign one or more of the requisites of the tribunal's action the total facts that can in any event be involved, and in the second place the law of pleading will further subdivide and apportion these facts. Ibid. If the pleadings consist of the allegation of certain facts by the plaintiff, and their denial by the defendant, the burden of proving the facts be they negative or affirmative, is upon

of
D ..
plaintiff has given prima facie evidence which, unless it be answered, will entitle him to have the question decided in his favour, the burden of proof is shifted on to the defendant as to the decision of the question itself. This con-

that the jury, after considering the evidence, are left in real doubt as to whether they are to answer the question put to them on behalf of the plaintiff, in that case also the defendant has been able to satisfy the minds of the whole jury of the burden of proof.

Burden of proof as meaning the duty of the one party or the other to introduce evidence. The party having the risk of non persuasion (under the pleadings or other rules) is naturally the one upon whom first falls this duty of going for and since with there is no first upon the proponent (a term convenient for designating the party having the risk of non persuasion). This duty, however, though determined in the first instance by the burden of proof in the sense of the risk of non persuasion, is a distinct one, for it is a duty to the party if it is not satisfied found in an opinion of Lord Justice W. R. 50, 53. 'In order to make my opinion clear I should like to say briefly how I go on. If he successful if no evidence at all was given at this particular point assumption of ther in every

y person the calling
hat in every

which are rebuttable; by presumptions of fact of the stronger kind, and by

Muthua, 7 C 225

Burden of proof whether shifts. "After all the evidence is in whether introduced by the plaintiff or by the defendant, it must appear that the person who had the burden of proof has a preponderance of the evidence in his favour, if he would win the case. The burden of proof fixes upon the party who has the duty of first going forward with the case. If he fails to introduce any duced that he has proved his case. If, however, he has introduced sufficient evidence to make out what is known as a prima facie case, then, in the absence of evidence to controvert such case, the jury would find—for the Judge would so instruct them—in his favour. Right here we run up against that other sort of burden of proof noticed above, which is not really burden of proof at all, but only the duty of that party to produce some evidence. When the plaintiff

Phelp Et 7th Ed p 30. Burden of proof means the burden of establishing a case as well as the duty or necessity of introducing evidence. The burden of establishing remains throughout the entire case exactly where the pleadings originally place it. It never shifts. The burden of proof in the sense of introducing evidence may shift constantly as evidence is introduced by one side or the other, as the one scale or the other preponderates. Phola v Bhagwant Rao 13 C P L R 159, Robins v National Trust & Co, 101 Ind Cas 303=1927 P C 515; R v Stoddard, 25 T L R 612, Radhakrishnan v Jagahu 80 Ind Cas 791 P C =47 M L J 329, Yellappa v Tippana, 33 C W N 239 P C, Man Mohan v Mathura 7 C 223.

Scope of the section Before the Court can proceed to hear a case, it is obviously necessary to determine which party shall begin, or upon whom the burden of proof of the whole case lies. The general rule is that the party who alleges any matter in issue must prove it. There is only one fact in issue, but there is a question of proof of some one being on one party. The position is practically this, that the party against whom judgment would be given must prove it. Cockle Et 123. This section is based on the general rule that the burden of proof lies on the party who asserts the affirmation of the issue, or question in dispute, according to the maxim, Ei incumbit probatio qui dicit non qui negat. (The burden of proof lies upon him who asserts not upon him who denies)—a rule which the common sense of mankind at once asserts, and which, however occasionally violated in practice has ever been recognised in jurisprudence. Hest § 269. So it is often said that the burden is upon the party having informed the affirmation of the allegation. But this is not an invariable rule, nor even always a significant circumstance, the burden is often on one who has a negative assertion to prove, a common instance is that of a promisee alleging non performance of a contract. It is sometimes said that it is upon the party to whose case the fact is essential. This is correct enough, but it merely advances the inquiry one step, we must then ask whether there is any general principle which determines to what party's case a fact is essential. The truth is that all the cases are decided on the burden of proof.

the burden of proof upon the plaintiff. If the defendant pleads a defence, and avoidance, admitting the plaintiff's allegation, but alleging further facts by way of defence, the matter is then thrown upon the defendant, if denied. But if it is there, the burden of proof of some is on one party and of others on the other party, &c. and distribution of the burden of proof is so even if the question is general.

question
general
p 121
also that W & burden
hence in 11 Q
J, C & A,
told that
and that
and upon facts that is part
and if no
but to

Syna; Wakehu v London and South Western Railway Co (1896) 1 Q B. 189 n, 196 n

S. 10
& S.

102. The burden of proof in a suit or proceeding lies on that person who would fail if no evidence at all were given on either side.

Illustrations

(a) A sues B for land of which B is in possession and which, as A asserts, was left to A by the will of C, B's father

If no evidence were given on either side, B would be entitled to retain his possession.

Therefore the burden of proof is on A

(b) Asues C for money due on a bond

The execution of the bond is admitted, but B says that it was obtained by fraud which A denies

If no evidence were given on either side, A would succeed as the bond is not disputed and the fraud is not proved

Therefore the burden of proof is on B

Scope of the section The general burden of proof is upon the party who would be unsuccessful in the case if no evidence at all were given, and such party

'65 In that case Alderson B by simply ascertaining on a proper test is, which party Now here, supposing no uld be entitled to the verdict, what particular point from the defendant's former and so on continues to be which section 101 exists upon n v Sahchulla Paramant, in the sense of the burden Inde Darlatz v Ganesh, Kali Parshel, 23 W R.

owing to particular circumstances, the very slight evidence may suffice to discharge the side—"slight evidence" means evidence which does not go the whole length of proving a particular fact, but merely suggests it Hur Djal v Raj Krisho, 21 W R 107 The burden of proving the nature of the transfer is on the person whose success depends upon the substantiation of the case set up by him Kashibai v Ladwan, 8 N L R 18 evidence of either side, that side must lead Ghasi v Manga, A I R 1930 710, see also Dadri v Baynath, A I I

103. The burden of proof as to any particular fact lies on

Burden of proof is that person who wishes the Court to believe in its existence, unless it is provided by any law that the proof of that fact shall lie on any particular person.

to be established, and which must be specially alleged in the pleading (2) Those which are merely implied from the allegation of affirmative facts, since the existence of such affirmative facts, precludes the negative thereof". McKelvey's Jt § 33 In an action for malicious prosecution, the plaintiff made two main allegations (1) that the defendant prosecuted him (2) that he had no reasonable cause for

The burden is an affirmative fact by force of the through not affirmative

Case

for

that

reason

tion of a negative, and we have been pressed with the proposition that, when a negative is to be made out, the onus of proof shifts. That is not so. If the assertion of a negative is an essential part of the plaintiff's case, the proof of the assertion still rests upon the plaintiff. The terms 'negative' and 'affirmative' are, after all, relative, and not absolute. In dealing with a question of negligence, that term may be defined to adopt the definition adopted in McKelvey's Jt § 33. Whenever a person asserts affirmative facts as present or absent, or that an eventment which he is bound to prove positively. As to the burden of proceeding — a case of introducing evidence — that at the start is with the plaintiff. He must make a prima facie case on his negative proposition before the defendant need go forward with any evidence. Of the second class of negative propositions, perhaps as good an illustration as any is found in a case where the plaintiff seeks to recover upon an express contract. In his complaint he sets contract — is upon him, the burden of proof still remains with the plaintiff. Ho where it is clearly seen, that it is burden of proceeding. McKelvey's Jt § 33. The general rule of evidence is that if in order to make out a title, it is necessary to prove a negative the party who avers a title cannot be absolved from proving it. Moshuq Ali v Husumissa 114 Ind Civ 113 = A I R 1929 Oudh 20, Pulin Behari v Watson 9 W R 190 = B L R Sup Vol 901 (F B)

Burden of proving fact to be proved to make evidence admissible

104 The burden of proving any fact necessary to be proved in order to enable any person to give evidence of any other fact is on the person who wishes to give such evidence.

Illustrations

- (a) A wishes to prove a dying declaration by B. A must prove B's death.
- (b) A wishes to prove, by secondary evidence, the contents of a lost document. A must prove that the document has been lost.

Scope of the section. The burden of proof in the sense of adducing evidence, applies not only to matters which are the subject of express allegation in the pleadings, but also to those that relate merely to the admissibility of evidence or to the construction of documents. Thus a party desiring to adduce a hearsay statement (R v Thompson, [1893] 2 Q B 12) or secondary evidence of lost deed, must first establish the conditions necessary to its reception, and if a document be ambiguous, the party tendering it has the burden of showing that his interpretation thereof is correct. Fateh v Williams, (1900) A C 176 181 (P C), Halsbury Vol 13, p 437. "The illustrations point the section which is but a rather verbose way of stating, that no per on shall be allowed to give evidence before he has shown that he is in a legal position to do so." Ant 290

General principles as regards burden of proof. The doctrine of onus probandi, only applies to a case when the mind of the Judge is in doubt as to the point on which side the balance should fall in coming to a conclusion. As a case proceeds the onus shifts from one party to another. Appa v Typpala 8-33 C W N 1238. The question on which importance when evidence has been given by both sides. Sati Pro 117. Golinda Chander, 33 C W N 227=A I R 1929 Cal 325, Ye 197 461. Dari 119 Ind Cas 222=A I R 1929 R 183, Gopal Rao v Hirralal, 83 Ind Cas 246=A I R 1925 Nag 225, Minabai v Yadro, 103 Ind Cas 166, Fateh 1238. Din v Anwar Khan 9 Lah 221=112 Ind Cas 89=A I R 1928 Lah 47. Some Dairly v Official Assignee 30 Bom L R 290=107 Ind Cas 233-47. C L J 339=A I R 1928 (P C) 77, Sunder Mull v Satiya Kuntar, 55 I A 9=47 C L J 403=32 C W N 657=A I R 1928 (P C) 64=51 M L J 127 (P C), Jeorathani v Mt Goura, 95 Ind Cas 826, Juanenba Nith v Nalini 87 Ind Cas 565=A I R 1925 Cal 1269, Gopal Rao v Hirralal, 83 Ind Cas 246=A I R 1925 Nag 225, Pahram v Kamalji, 78 Ind Cas 330=1924 Nag 363, Sawasatti v Yadorao 78 Ind Cas 887, Sonaji v Durlal 75 Ind Cas 782, Goverdan Das v Hari Lal, 69 Ind Cas 541, Mahomed v Myyubali 27 C W N 329, Nihal Chand v Gurditta 1923 Lah 641, Muhammad v Johana 190 L J 404=1922 Oudh 774, Sri Chudambara v Veerarama, 45 M 586=45 M L J 640, Almas v Majub, 36 C L J 196=(1922) Cal 461, Donamali v Jalu 1 P L T 102=5 P L J 151=55 Ind Cas 841, Sultan Si 1920. Ram Mahiton, 5 P L J 87=(1920) P 131=54 Ind Cas 652, Jhara Singh v Tolikaram, 52 Ind Cas 860. Burden of proof depends on circumstances of each case. Durlal Prosad v Nasir Ahmed, A I R 1925 Oudh 16. The placing of burden of proof wrongly is immaterial provided no party is prejudiced. Hem Chandra De v Amiyobala, 52 C 121=84 Ind Cas 693=A I R 1917 Cal 61. The question upon which party the onus of proving any particular point falls, when the onus is on the plaintiff, in its proper use, means, that, if a fact has to be proved, the person whose interest it is to prove such slight, upon which a Court could not find a judgment and decree upon that point. Ant 290. Mis-placement of the burden of proof is only a ground for remanding the case if the circumstances had been such that by placing the burden of proof on the wrong party, somebody has been misled or taken by surprise, or had no opportunity of adducing evidence. Hullal v Ramgati 11 C L R 581. Where the onus is upon the defendant to prove a certain fact, but the plaintiff, without waiting for the defendant's evidence took upon himself to prove it, he cannot subsequently say that the defendant did not discharge onus. Sajan Kuntar v Joti Prosad, 10 Ind. Cas 223. The burden of proof must be placed according to the pleadings and any preliminary examination of the parties, and, for the final decision of the case, the burden remains upon the same party. When the party who has to discharge the burden of proof, has made out a case, the burden shifts on to the other party. When, however, the Judge has heard the whole case, he must weigh the evidence and decide upon the point at issue. The burden of proof shifts on to the other party.

evidence for both parties, placing the burden of proof as it was originally placed. S. Supposing the party upon whom the burden of proof lies makes out a prima facie case, the burden shifts to the other party to rebut it.

to
at t
who
a p bur
Inn
my him
Col hav bee
cas
the person
that the fact
v. Mun. Mi
prove that it
such proof,
the law her

Varjuandas, 11 Bom L R 625=50 B 515. Where the relevant facts are before the Court and all that remains for decision is what inference is to be drawn from them, the question of burden of proof is not pertinent and this is more so at the appellate stage. Trimbakdas v. Bhatnagar, 27 N L R 75=A I R 1930 Nag 225 [47 I. A 76=43 M 567 and 49 I A 236=43 M L J, 610 (P. C.) and A I R 1922 Cal 160 Pol]; see also Muhammad v. Ibroze, A I R 1932 P C 228. In a case of two rival claimants to properties in the hands of stakeholder, there is equal burden of proof upon both. Kallari v. Karuppa, 120 Ind. Cas 379=A. I R 1930 Mad 341.

BURDEN OF PROOF—ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

Abadi—stranger in possession. Where a stranger is found to be in possession of the property, the burden of proof is on him to show that he has a license were such as disentitled the proprietor from re-entry on the site. Bhagwan v. Raghular, 86 Ind. Cas 763=A I R. 1925 Nag 396.

Assault. In a case for damages for loss of a son, who had been nt of account sum to be due

but the prima
21 W. R. 202

certain sum, which had been exceeded, the suit is not liable to be dismissed unless the defendants show that they were neither servants nor contractors for profit and loss as between had received

C. L. J. 245 = A. I. R. 1925 Cal 418 Where the accounts between two parties were settled and a balance struck, the burden is on the defendant to prove payment of the amount due Indraj Mal v. Laje Ram, 6 Lah. L. J. 593 = 86 Ind. Cas. 333 = A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 278 Every presumption is made against a person suppressing account books and on proof of a prima facie case the party suppressing has the burden of proving the contrary. Venkataramayya v. Pitchaimo, A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 164 Where a plaintiff sues for a specific sum of money due on a balance sheet, the burden is on the defendant to prove that the balance sheet is correct.

settled and a party alleges error in the accounts, the onus of proving it rests on that party Kaloo v. Nutha, 47 P. R. 1866 The onus is not on the defendant to prove the contrary, but on the plaintiff to prove his allegation that he has in the account, or in the balance sheet, a credit to the plaintiff, credited to the defendant have been made. The fact of payments by a banking firm being disavowed, the mere general statements of the banker to the effect that his books were correctly kept was held not sufficient to discharge the burden of proof that lies upon him, the books of the firm being at most corroborative evidence, particularly, if he has the means of producing much better evidence. Baboo Gunga v. Baboo Indrajit, 23 W. R. 320 P. C. The fact of payments by a banking firm being disavowed, the mere general statements of the banker to the effect that his books were correctly kept was held not sufficient to discharge the burden of proof that lies upon him, the books of the firm being at most corroborative evidence, particularly, if he has the means of producing much better evidence. Baboo Gunga v. Baboo Indrajit, 23 W. R. 320 P. C. Where the burden of proving that there was no consideration rests on the defendant, the burden of proving that there was no consideration rests on the defendant. Dol Singh, A. I. R. 1932 Lah. 135

Acknowledgment Where some

Acquiescence In case of acquiescence the onus is on the defendants to show (1) that they made a mistake as to their legal rights, (2) that they had expended money on the faith of that belief, (3) that the plaintiff knew of the existence of the mistake. Shankar v. Shankar, 13 C. L. J. 100 = 100 Ind. Cas. 100 = A. I. R. 1925 Cal 100

Admission of liability Where a defendant admits a debt but pleads that it is barred, he has to prove his plea. Where however there is no such admission, the plaintiff has to prove everything required to entitle him to a decree. Subbarayalu v. Vengalra, 123 Ind. Cas. 197 = A. I. R. 1930 Mad. 742

Adverse possession It is for the plaintiff to prove possession prior to the alleged disposssession. Raja Jagadindra Nath, 10 C. W. N. 100 = 100 Ind. Cas. 100 = A. I. R. 1925 Cal 100 A co-parcener holding an item of property left undivided at a family partition is a mere co-owner. He must prove that he has been dispossessed of the property by the defendant to his knowledge. Vaigapuri v. Mad, 27. The burden of proving title by adverse possession lies upon the person claiming to have acquired title by such possession. Kanhaya Lal v. Girwar, 27 A. L. J. 1106 = 119 Ind. Cas. 6 = A. I. R. 1929 A. 763; Madha v. English, 7 C. L. R. 364 P. C.; Jano v. Narasimha Das, 117 Ind. Cas. 803 = A. I. R. 1929 Lah. 549 Nawab v. Gopinath, 13 C. L. J. 626, Nayamtulla v. Nana, Agent. The burden of proof is on the person dealing with any one as an agent, through whom he seeks to charge another as principal. He must show that agency did exist, and that the agent had the authority he assumed to exercise, or otherwise. Assaram Bridican v Mathura Das, 11 M. L. J. 111. In a suit to recover advances alleged to have been made by the defendant to the plaintiff, the plaintiff is to prove the payment to and receipts from the defendant. Gomathi Robert Watson v Sridhar, 10 W. R. 421. Agents entrusted to collect money on account of an insolvent estate are each of them, bound to prove to the court that the money was actually paid to the insolvent. Chandrasekhar v. S. S. S. S. S. Sums charged by an agent on account of a principal are not a debt due to the principal, but a debt due from the principal to the agent. Chandrasekhar v. S. S. S. S. S. A suit against an agent for a debt due to him from the principal lies on the agent of the principal. Chandrasekhar v. S. S. S. S. S.

Arbitration When a Court is affirmed that a suit has been instituted in contravention of an arbitration-agreement, it has a discretion to stay the suit, but the burden lies on the plaintiff to show that some sufficient reason exists why the matter should not be referred to arbitration, and not on the

1. defendant to show that no such reason exists Folkart v Fatch, 61 Ind C 322; Ganesh Das v Dunga Das, 60 Ind. Cas 776.

Attachment claim Although where the assignee of a decree wishes to execute it, it is incumbent on him to apply under s 232 Civil Procedure Code 1882, yet, if at the date of the assignment, the judgment debtor's property is already under attachment, it is not necessary for the assignee to apply for a fresh attachment Hafiz v Abdullah, 16 A. 133 = A W. N 1894, 13

Auction purchaser The right of a purchaser at a revenue sale in getting rid of encumbrances is such that he is in many cases allowed to have the benefit of a certain presumption, and by virtue thereof to throw the burden of proof on his opponent, the presumption being founded mainly upon the principle that every bigha of land is bound to pay and contribute to the public revenue, unless it can be brought within certain known and specified exceptions Nityanand v Banshi, 11 C W N 341; Forbes v Meer Mahamed, 20 W. R 45

Avoidance of encumbrance A person seeking to obtain the benefit of s 12, Bengal Act VII of 1868 must give some prima facie evidence to show that the encumbrance which he seeks to avoid is an encumbrance falling within the terms of the section—that one who previously held it suit by the purchaser of it (Ben Act VIII of 1869), to on the ground by an authentic plaintiff to plaintiff is Reilly, 13 C 1

Award Any party wishing to set aside an award on the ground that the arbitrators in arriving at an unfair award either refused to hear somebody or heard the n e hearing undertakes the burden of satisfying nath, 82 Ind

Bailment burden of proof l would have exer Bhau, 74 Ind Ca by the plaintiff, it lies on the defendants to show that they took as much care of the goods as a man of ordinary prudence would, under similar circumstances t the loss occurred notwithstanding D I Ry, 82 Ind Cas 1897, 44

in transaction is whose name the

25 C W N 100, Swaiman v Men
Rati
(P Rad
Ana
pro
Sar
Pat
but
him Po
mar
Ma
lan

is not the true owner, the plaintiff can only rely on his claim as purchaser in good faith for value from a person who, by the act of the true owners had become the plaintiff. Rullo masses a receipt in proving that the

ly on the debtor

Bill of exchange T
of a hundi to prove the non presentment of the hundi tional circumstances that the drawer could not have suffered any damage owing to non-presentment Dhulka Mal v Raghubar, 88 Ind Cas 915-23 A L J 861

Bond Where the consideration for a bond is disputed the burden of proving repayment is on the person who alleges that the bond was not repaid 88 Ind Cas 251-A
as to interest on the bond
the bond without his consent Where an unregistered document, such as a bond or a receipt or an entry in an account book the execution of which is admitted or proved contains an admission or recital of the payment of consideration the onus lies on the person who alleges that the bond was not repaid
1 R 1925 Lah 64

1930 Mad 476

Boundary disputes The onus lies on the person setting up the plan to

of a boundary removed by one of the parties general direction proved by the other party lies on the party who removes it Judoonath v Kaste Aristo 19 P C=10 M I A 81 Icelandund v Moheswar Singh, 3 W R 19 P C=10 M I A 81 Where a decision of the High Court fixing Council would not interfere with the s boundary was of the vague and nature of the allegations

It
ind, esur
sion
loo

held that plaintiff should prove that lands are within his talook Ganga Maish v Madhub Chunder, 10 W R 413 In a question of boundary between a lakheraj tenure and in favour of one or of his case Beerchun parcels of land alleged to have been comprehended in one plot, where one held by

part of the land held by Nath, 12 W R 79 ..

alleging that the land

beyond his proper be the landlord Rhuday

recover a quantity of land by rectification of certain survey awards, which he averred demarcated erroneously the boundary between his zemindary and the *zemindari*s of the defendants, it was held, on a consideration of the evidence that his suit was rightly dismissed, because he failed to prove the position or existence of a stream, which he stated was the true boundary between the

Deo Bahadur Singh v Deo Bahadur Singh, 13 W. R. P. Q. 7

In ..

in ..

the ..

entitled to recover possession of any land which the drying up of the water way lay bare Monohur Choudhury v Nursingh Choudhury, 11 W. R 272

Carrier A common carrier in this country is liable as a carrier, that is he is responsible for the safety of the goods entrusted to him in all events except when loss or injury arises from the act of God or King's enemies. But his liability for loss or injury is limited to the goods actually received by him.

contract ..

carrier, on ..

negligence ..

Ind Cas ..

C L J 639.

suit is barred under Order

Abdul Qadir v Imamdin

the plaintiff in a suit under abolish the right which he

190-A I R 1929 Pat 579

In a suit instituted under Order 21, rule 63, the onus of establishing that the

to the rule

121 Where

of 1859, held

under s 235

l by s 239

23 Plaintiff

nt made by

ndant having

he plaintiff

who impugned that order by the present suit, to prove title under the purchase alleged by her by proving both the payment of the purchase-money and her possession since the purchase and the lower Court was therefore held to have been wrong in having thrown the burden of proof in the suit on the defendant Govind Airmaram v Santal, 12 B 270 On a claim being denied the ordinary tests of main business

Vol II, 230

to establish ing failed in that he acquired property in good faith and for consideration lies on him

Narayan v. Dhisraj, 2 N. L. R 87. In a suit to set aside an order dismissing a claim petition, the burden will be on the plaintiff to show that he was entitled to the property. Nachaappa v Chunnian, 4 L W 362=36 Ind. Cas. 791 S. 10

Call for evidence of a document drawn by the party proceeded den of proving
d. Cas. 1055=11

L. J. 633

Confession In a cor
tion that the confessio confession recorded under v Emperor, A. I. R 1932 Sind 201.

Consideration Where it has been admitted or proved that an admission of consideration has been made or executed in a document, the onus of proving want of consideration rest Paras Das v Suraj Bhan, the execution of which
of payment of consideration, the onus is upon the person executing the document to prove that he did not receive the consideration Firm of Ganda Singh, v Nur Ahmed, 96 Ind Cas 820=A I R 1926 Lah 653; see also Ma Ti v Ramaswami Chetty, 5 Bur L J 49=95 Ind Cas 384, Pannun Ram v Ghulam 27 P L R 403=7 Lah 297=96 Ind Cas 630=A I R 1926 Lah 491 Where a document was concluded in the following terms — I the undersigned promised to pay to A the sum of Rs 1,000 payable during the period of one year without it would have been if the suit had been brought against the mortgagor alone

Cas 732

from the recital therein drew an inference that the bond was supported by consideration Held, that there was no error of law committed by the lower Court. Jadu Mondal v Jogendra Nath, 63 Ind Cas 303. Where a person

4. executes and delivers a conveyance of his property and also gets it registered and the sale deed contains a recital of receipt of consideration, the burden of proving want of consideration for the sale is on the vendors J H Power v Dan Shue, 1 Bur L J 22 In a case of a formally registered document in which the receipt of consideration has been recited, the onus of proving that consideration did not actually pass is on the party who alleges non payment. In the case of an entry in an account book, however, the onus is on the party alleging payment to prove it Rulla Singh v Tunia Mal, 60 Ind Cas 701. Either party to a document may show that there was in fact no consideration though consideration was recited therein or that the consideration was in reality different from what was stated in the deed Krishna Kishore De v Narendra Bala, 31 C L J. 333 In a suit for redemption brought by the purchasers of the equity of redemption, the sale deed was a registered document and contained an admission of the executant that full consideration had been paid but the mortgagee contended that the sale was a sham and without consideration. Held, that the burden was on the executant of the deed and on people claiming under him to prove that what apparently happened did not happen Ehtisham Ali v Jamina Parsaul, 48 Ind Cas 365 (P C) = 24 O C 272 It is the established practice of the Courts in India in cases of contract to require proof that consideration has been actually received, according to the terms of assignees of the equity of redemption, the onus of proving that the mortgagee did not in fact receive the moneys which he acknowledged by his execution of the mortgaged deed to have received, is prima facie on the plaintiff Mulammaf Ahahyar v Muhammad Samuddin, A. W N. 1887 245

Contract. The party who alleged that a contract is conditional on the happening of a certain contingency must prove the existence of such a condition by clear and unequivocal evidence. Firm of Ganesh Lal v Firm of Debi Lal, 10 Ind Cas 265 = A I R 1927 Lah 481 The ordinary presumption is in favour of the legality of a contract and it is for those who assert that it was not entered into to perform the contract in the manner recited therein, to prove their assertion The Firm Kamari v Firm Ganpat Rai Ram Juman, 7 Lah 442 = 91 Ind Cas 304 = A I R 1926 Lah 318 The burden of proving that there was an act which rendered a contract impossible of performance lies on the party to the contract who alleges it Wuzeera v Moonooden, 77 P R 1866

Contention. Where on the decree as passed, several defendants were made jointly and severally liable, in the subsequent suit for contribution by one of them, it was for any defendant to prove that he was not liable to pay the full share, to plead and prove it did not shift the onus from who Baksh, 95 Ind Cas 1007 = A I R 1927 Lah 481 for money admittedly paid by account of defendant's share of the revenue, where the defendants plead previous payment to the plaintiff, the onus of proving such payment lay upon the defendants Mahadeo v Laboree Misser, 24 W R 250 Where in a suit between two judgment debtors to recover money alleged to have been paid in satisfaction of decrees obtained against them by J, who had been wrongfully that he entered into a contract with the plaintiff, the onus was on the plaintiff to prove that he was not liable to pay the full share, to plead and prove it did not shift the onus from who Baksh, 95 Ind Cas 1007 = A I R 1927 Lah 481 for money admittedly paid by account of defendant's share of the revenue, where the defendants plead previous payment to the plaintiff, the onus of proving such payment lay upon the defendants Mahadeo v Laboree Misser, 24 W R 250 Where in a suit between two judgment debtors to recover money alleged to have been paid in satisfaction of decrees obtained against them by J, who had been wrongfully

tion :
stand
onus
eviden
36 C L J 61 P C

Copy right—Infringement of Where in a case of infringement of copy right the complainant produces his certificate of registration and the book published at that time, and he further testifies that the book is not the same as that produced by his father the onus lies on the defence to show that matter contained in the complainant's book was also contained in the previous book Emperor v Sheo Charan, 131 Ind Cas 865=A I R 1931 All. 353=1931 A. L. J 304

Criminal cases Where the accused gave the deceased a beating the previous day and were seen by various persons on the occasion, it was highly impossible that they would murder the person the next day Sheo Ram v Emperor, 1923 Lath 480 It is the first principle of criminal law, that where a statute creates a criminal offence, the ingredients of that offence must be strictly proved, and that where the doing of an act without authority or without consent is made a criminal offence, and the statute does not expressly put upon the accused the proof of such consent or authority it is a necessary part of the case for the prosecution to negative by evidence such consent or authority Brij Basi v. Queen Empress, 19 A 74=A W N 1896, 178 In a criminal case, the burden

Courts should presume the absence of such circumstances Queen Empress v Prag Dutt, 20 A 459=A W N 1898, 117, see also Queen-Empress v Bai Mahakar, Rat Un Cr C 820 involving a departure from the o by the person setting it up Guin 27 I A 238=23 A 37 P C must be proved by those who asser 318, Lattu Begam v Nawab Mo

Mohantlal, 9 C P L R 47

Damages In a suit for damages for malicious prosecution the plaintiff no
him 334;
332
'93,

Debt and Debtor The burden of proving that a certain payment was made in full satisfaction of a debt is on the person alleging it Daraula Kania v Jitendra Nath, 49 C L J 560 It is elementary law that when a creditor sues the debtor for the payment of a debt and the defence is that the debtor paid

1. the debt to another person it is for the debtor to prove that the other person had or had been held out to the debtor by the creditor as having had the authority of the creditor to receive payment of the debt on behalf of the creditor Muhammad v Les Taneries Lyonnaises, 49 M 435=A I, R 1926 P. C 34=31 C W N 1 When a debtor pleads tender of payment as a ground for not being

Ranee Shurui Soondur 69 If a debt is proved or debtor Mobarik v Seena against the son of a deceased proving the son Mumray
ndant pleade
f establishing his case by the fact of an admission of the plaintiff that the actual consideration was different from that described in the bond Lal Singh v Chaitram, 15 C P L R 24 The burden of proof that a creditor by agreeing to an arrangement whereby a firm indebted to him conveyed to two of the partners thereof certain property in trust to pay off his and certain other debts and thereby release the remaining members of the partnership lies upon the parties who were originally liable to such creditor Kalaikhan v Madho, 3 N W. P 129

Declaratory title In a suit for a declaration of title by plaintiff who has failed to establish his title to establish obligation to tory Abd il or immovable advantage of Mega v proprietor Arana, 2 his own hammel as heir to his uncle's property and for the reversal of a deed of sale from that uncle set aside to it sion of to the ould be on the defendants the burden of proving the document by primary evidence or by secondary evidence on properly accounting for its non-production Rim v Raghu, 7 A 738

Dedication In a suit for a declaration that a certain property is waqf the onus is on the plaintiff, to prove that the property has been dedicated as waqf Akhum v Channan, 55 Ind Cas 210

Deeds In a suit to set aside an order of the Small Cause Court in which that Court had held that a certain kobala was mala fide, the onus is on the plaintiff that it has been executed bona fide Ishan Chandra v Rakimuddin, 2 B L R A C 326 N=10 W R 412 Where it is found on the face of a deed creating a trust that the transaction is bona fide, it is for the creditors who impugn the bona fide nature of the trust to prove their plea Kasheshurree v Krishna Kamini 2 May 557 Where certain deeds are duly executed and towards another every character towards and bona fide, without influencing the donor, who has acted independently of him Wajid Khan v Eicay Ali, 18 C 545=18 I A. 144 (P C) The genuineness and due execution of a bond does not dispense with the necessity of proof of consideration therefor Baboo Ghansham v. Chulouret, W R 1864, 197 S.

Where the executant of a mortgage deed denies receipt of consideration in a the executant of the receipt of the whole sum in cash, where it is proved that onus is on the Lala Lakshmi

Easement Where in a suit for possession, the defendant claims a right of easement the onus is on him to establish it Duni Chand v. Nizamuddin, 26 P. L. R. 301 Where in a suit for injunction, the defendant sets up that he had acquired a right of easement, the onus is on him to prove that he had acquired an easement Bya Ram v. Brij Lal, 26 P. L. R. 42-A I R 1923 Lab 297. Where the right to have a way of water course over certain land is disputed by the owner thereof and an order under s 532 of the Criminal Procedure Code, has been passed by the Magistrate in favour of the person claiming the right, the fact of such an order having been made will not be sufficient to relieve the latter from the onus of proving the claim in a subsequent suit by the owner to establish his right to the exclusive use of the land Obhoy Churn v. Lukhy Monee, 2 C L R 555 In an ejectment suit, the defendant in possession though a trespasser, is entitled to require the plaintiff to prove that he has superior title Kalu v. Barsu, 19 B 803 In a case where an easement is claimed over defendant that he acquired it by grant or use W R 281. In a suit to remove an allegation that plaintiff is entitled plaintiff was bound to make good the R 83 and sought

d that the ords, how virtue of after that instances
32 C W ent, even proof of
he relies valid one
W N

Kumar, 91 Ind Cas 761-A I R 1926 Cal 559 In a suit by the recorded relation is Isucar

Held that
to eject the defendant the latter sets up the existence of a tenancy entitling him to retain possession, the burden is upon him to prove the nature of his tenancy and his rights to remain in possession Probodh Chandra v. Birsinha, 71 Ind Cas 319 Where the recorded tenant of a holding who has been paying rent where the ownership of the plaintiff is proved and the defendant sets up a right of permanent occupancy, the burden of proving such a right is on the defendant.

Enhancement of rent In cases of enhancement of rent, onus lies on the landlord to show that he is entitled to such enhancement. Birendra v Ali 33 C L J 605; Hein v Kali, 26 C 832; Raj Krishna v Kali, 11 B L R App 122. Rama Nath v Jote Kumar, 11 C. L. J 1; Surja v. Danteswar, 24 C 251. But when in such a suit the tenant pleads that no enhancement should be granted on the ground that he is a tenant at fixed rate, the onus is on the defendant to prove that he is such a tenant. Gudar v Brijnandan, 5 C W N 880.

prove that he is such a tenant. Gudar v. Brihmandan, 5 C. W. N. 530.
Execution. Under section 102 of the Evidence Act when once the execution is made, it is a fact that the mortgagee has executed the mortgage. If the mortgagee is a party to the suit, the mortgagee is bound to prove that he is such a tenant. Gudar v. Brihmandan, 5 C. W. N. 530.
Execution. Under section 102 of the Evidence Act when once the execution is made, it is a fact that the mortgagee has executed the mortgage. If the mortgagee is a party to the suit, the mortgagee is bound to prove that he is such a tenant. Gudar v. Brihmandan, 5 C. W. N. 530.

Ind. Cas. 500. A person to whom a decree is transferred must prove a title to execute it if his title be disputed. Ganesh v. Chundee, 6 W. R. 126. Where, in execution of a decree, a share of an estate is sold, and the representatives of the purchaser absorb more land than belonged to that share and bring a suit to declare their rights, held that there should have been a clear finding as to what was the extent of the share originally purchased and that, in determining the claim of the representatives to the increase, the burden of a very distinct nature should be laid on them. Urnopoorna v. Rajbullu, W. R. (1864) 151. Where a person denies to have signed a particular document the burden of proving that the document signed was not intended to be what it was expressed to be is initially on him. Ghasi v. Rup, A. I. R. 1937 Lab. 602.

Lab 002

Fraud. The burden ordinarily on the person Fatima, 94 Ind Cas that it was not registrable in the place where it was done and proves that there was no fraud on the part of the purchaser to set aside a sale in execution of a decree on the ground of fraud, the onus lies upon the plaintiff to make out that the sale was fraudulent. Ramprasad v Imtari, 1 B. L. II S N 20 Where the defendant alleged that plaintiff's assignment was fraudulent, the onus was on him to prove that the transaction was was not bona fide Lalbehari v. Srinath 3 B L R A C 73 Note Where a decree holder in a suit to establish his claim to certain property as that of his judgment debtor, al- the defendant was fraudulently executed to prove the fraud Tala P. Das v. S. S. S. S. c)=10 W R 321 property thereby, it is for and suing to recover the those facts which constitute to bring the suit The mere fact vigorously

the fraud

it Rahim

by a Court of Justice in finding out whether or not a transfer is fraudulent can only be furthered with propriety by the testimony of the vendor who personally knowing the whole circumstances of the case can dispel the suspicions attaching to it. The story can then be subjected in all its particulars to cross-examination. It is an error to rely on the abstract doctrine of burden of proof. Mohideen v. Mahomed, A I R 1930 Mad 665 (41 I A 98 P C and 57 M L J 566 P C rel)

Good Faith. The burden of proving the good faith and fairness of a transaction is on the person who claims benefit thereunder. Gunabai v. Malihal 89 Ind Cr 625-A I R 1925 Nag 399

Government revenue. In a suit for contribution for money admittedly paid by the plaintiff into the Government treasury on account of the defendants' share of the revenue, where the defendants plead previous payment to the plaintiff, held, that the burden of proving such payment was upon the defendants. Mahadho v. Lahore, 21 W R 250

Guardian and Ward. Where an alienation by a guardian is questioned by a minor after attaining majority, the onus of proving that the transaction was for necessity is not always and necessarily very heavy on the defence and if it is established that the consideration for the alienation impugned went in discharge of previous debts and there is evidence that some of such debts were contracted to save the minor's estate, the burden of proof, though in the first instance it lay upon the defence, is shifted on to the minor and it is he who must show that the alienation effected by him was not for a purpose binding upon him. Krishna Rao v. Ajasami Panlay 21 Ind Cas 496, see also Hanuman Pershad Pandey's Case, 6 M I A 393, Syed Lutf Hosseins Case 23 W R 424, Omed Rai v. Shua Lal 65 D R N W P 611, Sardar Kirpal v. Balwant Singh, 17 Ind Cas 686-1 C W N 309 P C.

Hindu Law—Adoption. Where the plaintiff wants to have the adoption by the widow set aside as being without authority, the onus lies upon him. Hurdial v. Roy Krishna Bhoomiel, 21 W R 107. In a suit for possession of land by he as acq me D's adoption because the case of a person not recognized as an adoption, it is a very strong presumption in favour of the validity of his adoption. Ramkrishna v. Siru Narayan A I R 1932 Mad 198-62 M L J 116. But in ordinary cases grave and serious onus rests on persons seeking to displace natural succession by act of adoption. Datt Ram v. Nani Mal A I R 1930 Lah 579

Hindu Law—Adoption by Hindu—2—Where a legal heir of alien Nabakishore v Upendra, 26 C W. N. 322 (P. C); Nari v. Kasi, 19 C W N 370 (P. C); Radhakishore v. Mirtoonjoy, 7 W R 23; Debi Prosud v Golap Bhogal, 40 C 721 (F B)

to have been upon the Rimtaran
by a Hindu
the charge
t so charge

was a competent act of the widow Cataly Veneata v Collector of Musulipalam 10 W. R. 47 P C = 11 M I A 619 So in a suit by heir of a mortgagee against a Hindu proprietor's heirs, in possession after the death of his widow to enforce a mortgage by her, the burden of proving the money to have been advanced to

ham
B ath
on uch
the Rao

v Nam Chinnuer, 11 A 200

With the person after benefit of the estate (2) But where, in the particular instance, the charge is it the estate, the bona fide of the estate (3) The serted, or the benefit to be ng to be regarded. (4)

The lender is bound to enquire into the necessities for the loan, and satisfy himself as well as he can, with reference to the parties with whom he is dealing that the manager is acting, in the particular instance, for the benefit of the exceedent bound e in the
d. 17 v

The authority of the shebait of an
to that of the manager of an infant 14 B L R 450-23 W R 253,
(C)

Hindu Law—Inheritance
by right of inheritance, in the must establish his descent and legi
Cas 220

the onus clearly depends of an invariable obligation by rules of evidence. It leadings but it frequently is true that the normal there is a presumption to either in certain circum-
ry weak and again it may party and be fixed on the shoulders of another Sarjoo Prosad v. Deadat Lal, 1 O W. N. 958=105 S. 1

Ind Cas. 410=A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 499

Hindu Law—Partition Where in a suit for possession on the ground of a prior partition the plaintiff proves severance of interest, it will be on the defendant, who sets up a case of some of the brothers remaining joint to prove that plea Challa Lakshnakka v. Bala Rangappa, 91 Ind Cas 285=A. I. R. 1926

57=38 M. L. J. 521=22 Bom. L. R. 59

Hardat v. Dhandu, 84 Ind Cas 1011; Harnarayan v. Suresh, 1925 P. 101; Sincar's Hindu Law, 312

Hindu Law—Stridhan A Hindu wife seeking to exempt property from responsibility for her husband's debts, must clearly prove that she had stridhan, and that she purchased the property with her self-acquired funds Brojomohan v. Radha Kumaree, W. R. 1864, 60

1925 All 811

Husband and wife Where a deed of gift by husband to wife is attached as being colourable, person attaching the same must prove the allegation Nabab Mirza v. Nabab Fakar, A. I. R. 1932 P. C. 13

Income tax When an assessee states that he has no income from a particular source and officers of the Income-tax Department disbelieve him, it is

In re Bishnu Priya Chaudhury 13 Ind Cas 303=50 C. 301=A. I. R. 1921 Cal 337

Insolvency In a suit against an insolvent and the Official Assignee for

A. I. C. Deenase, 25 C. W. N. 330

Insurance A claimant under a life-policy must prove that the age of the insured is correctly given Oriental Government Assurance Co. v. Narasimha, 25 M. 201. But no such onus is cast upon the claimant where the age has been proved and admitted by the company in writing Ibid

Inventions It is for the person who claims an exclusive privilege under the Inventions Act to prove that the facts exist which entitle him to the privilege claimed. Elgin Mills Co v Muir Mills Company, 17 A 490

Jurisdiction It is for the party, who seeks to oust the jurisdiction of the ordinary Civil Court. do District Board of Tanjore v Kannusami Ali Md v Halim, 1928 L 121 (1 B), Rang Cas 256

Lakhiraj and rent free If the land in question is within the zemindari of which patni the lands are really within claim those lands as Nishtar Pirattor, the onus rests on the defendants. Bar v Hrishullesh 49 C L J 516-A I R 1929 Cal 40

Land Acquisition Where a public body seeks to acquire, under the Land Acquisition Act, any portion of a block, which is structurally connected with the main building, it must show that the portion is not reasonably necessary for the use of the house. Venkataram

Landlord and tenant In an ejectment suit the landlord comes into Court with the allegation that the tenants had cut his rahi crops. The tenants alleged that the rahi on the defendant crop was shown to himself, the onus is on him to show what the actual yield is. Bhuneshuari v Sukhdeo 6 Pat L T 419-85 Ind Cas 566-A I R 1925 P 605. When a tenant of lands in India in a suit by his landlord to eject him from them, sets up a defence that he has a right of permanent tenancy in the lands, the onus of proving that he has such a right is upon the tenant, and proof of long Nainapillai v, Ramanathan A L J 130, see also Gopala v 69. Where a tenant sets up the Revenue Records to show the fact that the rent which he pays ceases. Ram Das v Chaitan

Legitimacy Where a person claims under section 112 of the Evidence Act to be the son of a deceased person, he must prove that he was born within 280 days of the death of the deceased, and that he was in the possession of the deceased at the time of his death. those who contest his legitimacy Prilok v Luchma, 6 Bom L R 477. It is the duty of the person who claims to be the son of a deceased person to bring evidence to show that he was born within 280 days of the death of the deceased, and that he was in the possession of the deceased at the time of his death. J 1-1

M L J 56

Limitation The burden of proving that a payment was made which would bar the plaintiff who claims the debt is on the plaintiff. Atindra Nath, 49 C L J where limitation is pleaded, for to suit Bhiloo v Mattu 1327; Dinobanath v James R 67. In all actions for ejectment where the defendants are admittedly in possession, and a portion where they had been in possession for a great number of years, and a portion claim of title, it lies upon the plaintiff to prove his own title. Mohania v. Mohesh, S. 1 16 C 573=16 I A. 23 (P. C)

W R P. C 293

marriage took place to bring marriage, when there is an inference can be drawn from the oral evidence of Nabab Ali, 5 C L J.

1 (P C)

Mercantile Usage Where a contract is alleged to be an "office dhara" and where the "office dhara" refers to the practice of certain firms as seen in printed forms used by them, a plaintiff relying on the term "office dhara" must produce and prove the printed forms above mentioned Dassomal v Ram Chand, 83 Ind Cas 304=A I R 1925 Sind 80

Mesne profits Where mesne profits are claimed by a person out of possession

20 N L R 52=75 Ind Cas 826=1924 Nag. 117

Minor. Where a deed is executed by a person who alleges himself to be a minor at the time of execution, a heavy burden rests upon him or his representatives when they set up the defence of minority Sadiq Lal v Joykishore, 47 C L J. 628=32 C W N 874=A I R 1928 (P C) 152 The burden of proving that a particular deed is void on the ground that its executant was a minor at the time of its execution lies on the person who makes the allegation Munna Lal v Kameshor Dutta, 114 Ind Cas 801=A I R 1929 Oudh 113 The burden of proving that the executant of a document is a minor lies on the person alleging it Surja Prasad v Joti Prasad, 87 Ind Cas, 415=L R 11 All 283=47 A 493=A I R 1925 All 631 In a suit brought on the basis of a contract, the burden of proof lies on the party who asserts that he was a minor at the time of contract Ahanhantal v Debi Prasad, L R 11 All 219=87 Ind Cas 778=A I R 1925 All 99, Swaj v Joti Prasad, L R 6 A 283=87 Ind Cas 445=47 A 493=A I R 1925 All 631, Narain Singh v Churanji, 22 A L J 161=79 Ind Cas 945 When the validity of a contract is questioned on the ground that the executant is a minor, it is for the plaintiff to establish by prima facie evidence that the contract was valid and entered into by a person who was competent to do so Dachcha Lal v Hosan King, 66 Ind Cas 814=(1922) All 210 It is on the executant of a deed, who pleads that he was a minor on the date of the execution of the deed to prove his plea Kandhai v Mohammad, 63 Ind Cas 525; Niamutullah v Gopaj 53 Ind Cas. 136=6 O L J 376

Mortgage Where a mortgage deed contains an admission of receipt of consideration before the Sub-Registrar, the onus is upon the mortgagor to disprove his admission Gorindappa v Sontal, 109 Ind Cas 149 Where land is mortgaged without possession and possession is subsequently given to the

Cas 679 In a suit for redemption the onus is on the plaintiff to prove the mortgage he set up, that it was still subsisting Binla v Sanhata Prasad, 95 Ind Cas 915 Where a mortgagor admits execution of a mortgage deed, it is for him to prove that he has not received the consideration recited in the deed Jinca Ram v Jhanda Singh, 92 Ind Cas 316 Where land is mortgaged without possession and subsequently possession passes to the mortgagee, the burden of proving that the transfer in which possession was given was an antichresis sale in the person alleging it. A T Chetty v. Feroz Khan & Akbar, 3 Bore 27 = 6 Ind. Cas. 1011 = A. L. R. 1920 Rang 377. Where the rate of interest is usually but the burden lies on the mortgagee to prove that there was reason to borrow at so high a rate. Sagar Singh v. Mohanrao, 57 Ind. Cas. 1035 = A. L. R. 1920 O. 5.

Ordinarily the onus is on the quodammodo mortgagee to prove the validity of the foreclosure proceedings. It does not cease to be so simply because there was an entry in the register that mutation had been effected in favour of the mortgagee. Kullu v. Suran, 26 P. L. R. 751. Where the execution of the mortgage was a fraudulent and merely a to it up. Chandu v. D... of proving a mortgage upon the mortgagor. Pamji v. Mohan Lal 71 Ind. Cas. 654 = 1923 All. 411. Where once a mortgage has been admitted the onus is on the mortgagee to show that the mortgage has been extinguished by subsequent sale. Mohd. Mahomed v. Mahomed Ali 1 A. 85 = A. L. R. 1930 P. C. 91 = 51 C. L. J. 31 P. C.

Notice. Where the defendant led evidence on the issue as to notice they cannot be said to have held back their evidence because of the imposition of the onus on the other side. Ladha Pamji v. Jinda Pamji 1923 Lah. 339. The burden of proving a purchase without notice of a prior mortgage or contract is on the subsequent purchaser and the rule is the same for moveable as well as immovable property. Maung v. Bansi, 70 Ind. Cas. 325 = 2 Bur. L. J. 63 = 1913 Rang 153. The burden of proof of the giving of notice of the inquiry into the conduct of a person lies on the authority holding such enquiry. Rangaswami v. Seshan 4 L. W. 611. Where there is an affidavit of the person serving the notice of proper service thereof, the party who impugns the fact ought to prove that there was no service. Krishna v. Bhandar, A. L. R. 1928 Cal. 722.

Partition. Where in a suit for partition defendants resist by setting up acquiescence in their permanent right of occupancy in a part of the land the burden of proving existence of those rights is on them. Subra nanya v. Subra manya 56 I. A. 243 = 5 V. 549 = 31 Bom. L. R. 830 = A. L. R. 1909 (P. C.) 156. The onus is heavy on the person who desires to show that certain partition lists were not acted upon and the parties continued to be joint in possession of those lists. Venkata Krishnayya v. Rangayya, A. L. R. 1925 V. 865. In a partition suit among Muhammadans burden is on plaintiff to show that it was acquired by the help of joint fund. Yusuf Mahomed v. Abubaker, A. L. R. 1925 Sind 26.

that the
v. Muhfu
Ramanam

on a document purporting to rdanashin woman, based upon a to give satisfactory evidence the lady. Asifa Bibi
Cas. 180 = 46 A. 310

Partnership. Where the title of a deceased person to certain properties is disputed and it is shown that those properties belonged to the partnership firm the onus lies on persons claiming through the deceased person to prove that those properties belonged to him at the time of his death. Amrit v. Tayabali A. L. R. 1909 Sind 182.

Perpetual and permanent settlements. If a person sets up as against the Government a permanent or perpetual settlement it is incumbent on him to make out that case. Prosunno v. Secretary of State, 26 C. 792 = 3 C. W. N. 690.

Possession. In a suit for possession of land the plaintiff has to prove that the land lay within his holding and not for the defendants to prove that it lay outside. Sati Prosad v. Gobinda, 56 C. 80 = 33 C. W. N. 27 = A. L. R. 1909 Cal. 375. The burden of proving a subsisting title to a land lies on the party out of possession and the fact that the party in possession is forced to institute a suit under Order 21 rule 103, C. P. Code, does not shift the burden of proof on to him. Raman v. Feroz Mahomed 82 Ind. Cas. 861 = A. L. R. 1925 Sind 201. Where in a suit for recovery of possession of land or declaration of title the defendant in possession does not admit the title of the plaintiff but says that the plaintiff is his benamidar, it is for the plaintiff to prove that the defendant is not the owner. Lal Muhammad v. Ayazuddin

Sheikh, 57 Ind Cas 972. Where the plaintiffs who are in possession of a property before the institution of the suit ask for a declaration of their title and confirmation of their possession as against the defendant, who seeks to disturb the possession, it is for the defendant to show that he has a better title than the plaintiffs Mahomed Husin Mia v Abdul Hamid, 50 Ind Cas 131

S. 1

Posting of letter The presumption is that if a letter properly directed is proved to have been posted, it reached its destination and was received by the person to whom it was addressed. Kamlhya v. Khalik 8 Pat L T 633=102 Ind Cas 821=A. I. R 1927 Pat 305

Pre-emption It is a settled rule of law that a very slight proof will shift the burden to the vendees to prove the actual payment of the price entered in the deed. Abid Ali v. Har Prosad, 119 Ind. Cas 459=A. I. R. 1929 Oudh is on the vendee to prove that the consideration stated in the sale deed was really paid and there was an actual payment Ahmadjekhan v Gulmur, 75 Ind Cas 271.

1

Promissory note
the burden of proving Harishar Prosad v Mahab.
632=A. I. R 1931 Pa

on the defence to explain how document bearing defendant's thumb impression came into existence Sahdeo v. Pulesar, A. I. R 1930 Pat 593

Railway Cases Where a Railway Company was sued for compensation to prove loss of goods
to prove wilful neglect to the terms of risk-

Recital in a deed or other instrument Where a mortgage document was executed by the father of the defendant and contained a recital that the consideration had been received by the executant, the burden lay upon the executant or his representative to prove that the recital was untrue and to satisfy the Court how he became a party to a document which contained untrue recital of this description Benoybhusan v. Dharendra, 38 C L J. 114=74 Ind Cas 178 The onus of proving that a document to which a person has affixed his signature does not contain a correct statement of the facts and of the intention of the parties is on the person who makes the allegation Ramdas v Chandrabali, 4 Pat. L W 237=44 Ind Cas 399 When a party to a contract alleges that it is different from what on the face of it, it purports to be, the burden of proving his case lies on him, since there is a presumption that a transaction is in substance what it is in form. Eshoor Doss v Venkata, 17 M 190 Where the vendor admits receipt of full consideration in the sale deed, the burden lies heavily on him to explain the admission and prove non receipt of consideration. Johnstone v. Gopal, 12 Lah. 516=A. I. R. 1931 Lah. 419

Record of rights There being a presumption of the correctness of the entries in a record of rights, a party who challenges any of the same to prove it Parm T. 805=A. I. R. 87 Ind. Cas 741= an entry showing a person as possessing occupancy rights, the person who wants to challenge it ought to show it is wrong The mere fact that he was holding that the transfer in which possession was given was an outright sale lies on the person alleging it A T Chetty Firm v Mahomed Kasim, 3 Rang 367=90 Ind Cas 1011=A I R 1 the burden lies on so high a rate Saga 750 Ordinarily the onus is on the quondam mortgagee to prove the validity of the foreclosure because there was an entry mortgagee in favour of the execution of the added it was fictitious and merely a party who sets it up Chindu v Desraj the burden of proving a mortgage is on the mortgagee to show

Where once a mortgage has been admitted the onus is on the mortgagee to show that the mortgage has been extinguished by subsequent sale Mahomed v Mahomed, 57 I A 86=A I R 1930 P C 91=51 C L J 391 P C

Notice Where the defendants cannot be said to have held back their onus on the other side Ladha Ram v of proving a purchase without notice of a prior mortgage or contract on the subsequent purchaser and the rule is the same for moveable as well as immoveable property Maung v Bansi, 75 Ind Cas 328=2 Bur L J 63=1923 Rang 153 The burden of proof of the conduct of a person lies on the authority v Seshu 4 L W 611 Where there is no proper service thereof, the party who impugns the fact ought to prove that there was no service Krishna v Bhandar, A I R 1928 Cal 722

Partition Where in a suit for partition defendants resist by setting up acquiescence in their permanent right of occupancy in a part of the land the burden of proving existence of those rights is on them Subramanya v Subramanya 56 I A 248=52 M 549=31 Bom L R 830=A I R 1929 (P C) 156 The onus is heavy on the person who desires to show that certain partitions were not acted upon and the parties continued to be joint in spite of those lists Venkata Krishnayya v Rangayya, A I R 1928 M 865 In a partition suit among Muhammadans, burden is on plaintiff to show that it was acquired by the help of joint fund Yusuf Mahomed v Abubucker, A I R 1929 Sind 26

on a document purporting to be a rdanashan woman, based upon a statement to give satisfactory evidence that the document has been explained and understood by the lady Aisha Bibi v Muhfuzunnissa 22 A L J 205=L R 5 A 97=78 Ind Cas 180=46 A 810, Rumanamma v Vmana 54 C L J 183=35 C W N 633

Partnership Where the title of a deceased person to certain properties is disputed and it is shown that those properties belonged to the partnership firm the onus lies on persons claiming through the deceased person to prove that those properties belonged to him at the time of his death Ismail v Tayaballi A I R 1929 Sind 182

Perpetual and permanent settlements If a person sets up as against the Government a permanent or perpetual settlement it is incumbent on him to make out that case Prosunno v Secretary of State, 26 C 792=3 C W N 690

Possession In a suit for possession of land the plaintiff has to prove that the land lay within his holding and not for the defendants to prove that it lay outside Sati Prosad v Gobinda 56 C 80=33 C W N 227=A I R 1929 Cal 325 The burden of proving a subsisting title to a land lies on the party out of possession and the fact that the party in possession is forced to institute a suit under Order 21, rule 103 C P Code, does not shift the burden of proof on to him Raman v Fakir Mahomed, 82 Ind Cas 861=A I R 1925 Sind 201 Where in a suit for recovery of possession of land or declaration of title the defendant in possession does not admit the title of the plaintiff, but says that the plaintiff is his benamidar, it is for the plaintiff to prove that the defendant is not the owner, Lal Muhammad v Ajayudh

Sheikh, 57 Ind Cas 972 Where the plaintiffs who are in possession. S. of a property before the institution of the suit ask for a declaration of their title and confirmation of their possession as against the defendant, who seeks to disturb the possession, it is for the defendant to show that he has a better title than the plaintiffs Mahomed Husin Mia v Abdul Hamid, 50 Ind Cas 431

Posting of letter The presumption is that if a letter properly directed is proved to have been posted, it reached its destination and was received by the person to whom it was addressed Kamlhya v Khalik 8 Pat L T 633=102
Ind Cas 821=A I R 1927 Pat 305

Pre-emption It is a settled rule of law that a very slight proof will shift to show that the property is sold for a price less than what is stated in the sale-deed Even slight evidence may be sufficient to shift the onus on to the defendant Shwaja v. Rotram 89 Ind Cas 768 In a suit for pre-emption the onus is on the vendee to prove that the consideration stated in the sale deed was really paid and there was an actual payment Ahmadyekhan v Gulmu, 75 Ind

Cas 271

Promissory note the burden of proving Harihar Prosad v Mahab
632=A I R 1931 Pa
the shape of promissory notes, the burden of proof of payment is on the person
the shape of promissory notes, the burden of proof of payment is on the person

When
ius rests upon Singh, 12 Pat
he had made thumb mark upon any hand note but admitted that he had put his thumb mark on blank paper which might have been utilized for hand note the burden is on the defence to explain how document bearing defendant's thumb impression came into existence Sahdeo v Pulesar, A I R 1930 Pat 598

Railway Cases Where a Railway Company was sued for compensation for non-delivery of goods, held that the Railway must first prove loss of goods and on such proof the onus will shift to the plaintiff to prove wilful neglect on the part of the Railway or its servants, etc, according to the terms of risk-note E I Ry Co v Piyara Lal, A I R 1928 Lah 774

Recital in a deed or other instrument Where a mortgage document was executed by the father of the defendant and contained a recital that the consideration had been received by the executant, the burden lay upon the executant or his representative to prove that the recital was untrue and to satisfy the Court does not contain a correct statement of the facts and of the intention of the parties is on the person who makes the allegation Ramday v Chandabali, 4 Pat L W 237=41 Ind Cas 399 When a party to a contract alleges that it is different from what on the face of it, it purports to be, the burden of proving his case lies on him, since there is a presumption that a transaction is in substance what it is in form Eshoor Doss v Venkata, 17 M 180 Where the vendor admits receipt of full consideration in the sale deed, the burden lies heavily on him to explain the admission and prove non receipt of consideration.

Johnstone v Gopal, 12 Lah. 516=A I R. 1931 Lah 119

Record of rights There being a presumption of the correctness of the entries in a record of rights, the burden of proving the correctness of the same to prove it Parmeri L T.
807=A I R 19. 87=
87 Ind Cas 741=.
an entry showing a person as possessing occupancy rights, the person who wants to challenge it ought to show it is wrong The mere fact that he was holding

1. without rent is not sufficient Gouri v Jhanda, L R 4 A. 372. The entry in a record of the tenant . . . of the 31 Ind Cas 561 . . . favour of the . . . recovery of possession of that land, and that . . . holding, having . . . plot was part . . . A I R 1930 . . .

Registered deed Burden of proving that a registered deed was sham is on the person alleging when he was party to deed Magaraja v Vendalanni, A I R 1933 Mad 18

Release In a suit to set aside a release deed on the ground that it was obtained by misrepresentation, and that there was no consent, when the defendant pleads that there was consideration and that the arrangement came to be reasonable, the onus is on him to prove it Hem Singh v Bagaboto Singh, 8 Ind Cas 67

Rent Where the rent has never been paid the burden of proof that rent was agreed to must surely lie on the person who asserts it, and that in this case lies on the defendant in the suit for ejectment Suldeo v Abdul, L R 4 A 210

Sale Mere denial by the vendor of the receipt of the consideration acknowledge upon the . . . the plaintiff . . . Where . . . performance and under which the defendant was in possession and enjoyment of the subject-matter, and in possession of the title deeds he must establish at least a good prima facie title to the relief he seeks Rampal Ram v Subha Singh, 4 Pat L J 17-53 Ind Cas 83

Sale for arrears of revenue In a suit by a ryot against an auction purchaser, claiming protection from ejectment under the proviso of section 37, Act XI of 1859, the onus of proving the character of the holding is on the ryot Donmu v Pudnun W R 1364, Act X 123 Where a taluk is sold at a revenue sale under Act XI of 1859, the burden of proving that under tenures in the taluk fall under any of the exceptions to s 37 of that Act, lies on him who alleges the under tenures to be within those exceptions Rash Behari v Hara Mones 15 C 555 The right . . . of . . . the burden of proof on . . .

Specific performance In a suit for specific performance of a contract if the plaintiff proves his prior contract, the burden of proving a subsequent bonafide transfer for value without notice under section 27(b) of the Specific Relief Act lies on the party alleging it Ramdani v Gumani, 10 Pat L T 307 -119 Ind Cas 70-A I R 1929 Pat 300 unknown, etc . . . the margin is co . . . to specification . . . specification . . . were according . . .

Vendor and purchaser . . . his property . . . the vendee to . . . the original . . .

1. . . A person who derives his title through a purchase must prove that his vendor had a title in the property sold Gulab Din v Monji Ram, 38 P. L J 1919-51 Ind. Cas 575

Wills 'In the Court of Probate' says Baron Pyle in Baker v Ball 2 Moo P C 317 at pp 319, 320 "Where the onus probandi most undoubtedly the deceased, he is bound to pronounce his opinion that the instrument is not entitled to probate For if the party upon whom the burden of proof of any fact proved that a Will has been duly executed by a person of competent under propounding the Will, and he must satisfy the conscience of the Court that the instrument so propounded is the last Will of a free and capable testator In all cases the onus is imposed on the party propounding a Will, it is in general discharged by proof of capacity and the fact of execution for which the knowledge of and assent to the contents of the instruments are assumed Barry v Butlin 2 Moo P C 482 (484) Brojesuar v Rasil 85 Ind Cas 581, Woomesh v Pashnom 21 C 279 Surend a v Ramdas 47 C 1043-24 C W N 860, Rajendar v Ramjaval 5 Lah 263 Mullabai v Waman 69 Ind Cas 572, Lala Singh v Kumar Bijoy Protap 41 C L J 360 Raj Bachan v Shatanji, 5 O L J 519-47 Ind Cas 963 Murad v Khalim 12 Ind Cas 49-114 P W R 1911 Prasannomoy v Bailuntha 25 C W N 779 Rajdulari v Krishna, A I R (1926) Pat 269, Bundesuari v Mt Baisalha 24 C W N 674, Sorajini v Haridas, 26 C W N 113 Robins v National Trust Co Ltd 101 Ind Cas 903 (P C)-A I R 1927 P C 515 Rangaia v Sheshappa 101 Ind Cas 416 The onus of proving capacity to execute a Will lies on the person who wants to propound the Will Mrtibai v Jamselji, 26 Bom L R 479-29 C W N 45-1924 (P C) 28 The burden of proving a Will lies on those by whom it was propounded Bhagbhari v Khatun 80 Ind Cas 118 The qualified admission of a party regarding the signature of a testator does not shift the burden of proving the non execution of the Will to him Kesho v Ithai 8 N L J 173-80 Ind Cas 468-A I R 1925 Nag 427

105 When a person is accused of any offence, the burden

Burden of proving of proving the existence of circumstances that are of accused bringing the case within any of the General comes within excep Exceptions in the Indian Penal Code, or tions within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances

Illustrations

(a) A accused of murder alleges that, by reason of unsoundness of mind he did not know the nature of the act

The burden of proof is on A

by grave and sudden provocation,

Code provides that whoever except in the case provide for by section 33, voluntarily causes grievous hurt, shall be subject to certain punishments

A is charged with voluntarily causing grievous hurt under section 32

The burden of proving the circumstances bringing the case under section 33 lies on A

Scope of the section The rule that every one is presumed to be innocent till he is proved to be guilty, is sometimes spoken of as if it was peculiar to the administration of criminal law In the Indian Evidence Act, s 101 illustration

(1) it is given as a particular instance of the general principle equally applicable to a suit for ejectment and to a trial of murder. The rule merely means that a person who is accused of a crime is not bound to make any statement or to offer any explanation of circumstances which throw suspicion upon him. He stands before the Court as an innocent man till he is proved to be guilty. It is the business of the Crown to prove him to be guilty, and he need do nothing but stand by and see what case has been made out against him. As far as the case of the crown is concerned he cannot be called upon to take part in the proceeding except in so far, for his own protection, the Court may question him under s 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code. If there is a piece of evidence against the prisoner which might be cleared up one way or the other by a word from him he is not bound to say that word. He is entitled to rely on the defence that the evidence as it stands is inconclusive and that the Crown is bound to make it conclusive without any help from him. Further in making out their case the prosecution have to get rid of every presumption against it, and to a certain extent there is a presumption in favour of innocence. When the case for the Crown has closed it is for the prisoner or his adviser, to consider whether any case which he need answer has been made out against him. This will depend on the nature of the charge. The definition of every offence must be satisfied by proof and if the proof fails as regards any necessary item the whole fails. Assuming the minimum of proof to be supplied the Crown has offered evidence which may be sufficient for a conviction. The question is whether it is sufficient. It may be that the evidence is unworthy of belief, or that, if believed it is consistent with the acquittal and then the innocence has vanished. There is no presumption in favour of the existence of any particular fact which is necessary to make out innocence. If it is necessary for a man's defence to establish an alibi he must prove it. [vide section 103 illustrations]

Reg v Stokes 3 C & K 185. So under the provisions of this section an answer setting up the right of private defence must be supported by evidence giving a full account of the transaction from which the charge against the accused person arises. In re Jamsheer Sirdar, 1 C L R 62. Unless a plea that the acts with which an accused person is charged as constituting an offence came within one of the exceptions named in the Penal Code is distinctly taken by the accused the Court is not competent to infer from the evidence in the case that any such exception exists in favour of the accused. Queen Empress v Chakhar, A W N 1893 209, Queen Empress v Sulha A W N 1893 210. So this section is an important qualification of the general rule that, in criminal trials, the onus of proving everything essential to the establishment of the charge against the accused lies on the prosecution. King Emperor v Nga Chit U B R 1906, Excise 7.

This section is at variance with what was formerly the law in regard to those exceptions which are called special. Mark Ey 81. General exceptions are those applicable to all crimes and are stated in Chapter IV of the Penal Code. Special exceptions are exceptions restricted to a particular crime. Formerly of special exceptions, except one which is really a part of the charge against the accused, the onus of proving the exception was on the accused.

Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872) was thus stated by Princep J in, In the matter of the Petition of Shibu Prasad Pauling, 1 C 121 (130) "The Penal Code contained a chapter of general exceptions to offences (Chapter IV), and for certain offences special exceptions were provided. The Code of Criminal Procedure made especial provisions for these exceptions and the burden of proof to establish any of them. The effect of ss 235 and 236, was that it was for an accused person to establish the existence of any of the general exceptions; while s 237 provided that if the charge denied the existence of any of the especial exceptions to an offence, the absence of circumstances constituting such exception was to be assumed. This was the state of the law without Presidency towns until the Evidence Act I of 1872 and the Code of Criminal Procedure of 1872 were passed, when ss 235 and 237 were repealed with the rest of that Code, and in their place s 105 of the Evidence Act was enacted, which threw the burden of proof on the accused to prove the existence of any general or special exception." So far, then, as the Special Exceptions are concerned, an important alteration has been made in the law. Field J v 350. But in Empetor v Hapt Hussun, 32 A 451 at p 456, the Court observed: The Evidence Act in laying down the principle set forth in section 105 has at times been said to have introduced something new and to have put the law regarding criminal cases upon a different basis than the one upon which it stood before it was enacted. We are unable to take this view. Undoubtedly, in criminal trials, the onus of proving every particular element, if we may use the term, which goes to the making of an offence lies upon the prosecution, and if the prosecution do not prove all such elements and room is left for doubt, it is for the accused to satisfy us that a principle, but putted upon King v. Hill on Crimes, Vol 3, p 407, Reg v James Johnson, (1902) 1 Q B 510. In the case of most general exceptions the circumstances which bring the case within a general exception are circumstances within the special knowledge of the accused person and lie within the rule that when any fact is specially within the knowledge of any person the burden of proving that fact is upon him." In R v. Turner, 5 M & S 206, Lord Ellenborough said: "The question is upon whom the onus probandi lies; whether it lies upon the person who affirms a qualification, to prove the affirmative, or upon the informer who denies any qualification, to prove the negative. There are, I think, about ten different heads of qualification enu-

& P 468, Heath J in H v Stone, 1 East 639, the Judges were equally divided on the point. So even in England there has been some doubt whether if a statute creating a crime contains exemptions, exceptions, or provisos, the indictment should negative them under a plea of not guilty. 1 K B 540, an indictment and chattels of her husband, nor that she had taken them when leaving or deserting, or about to leave or desert the husband. It was contended that in as much as a wife cannot at common law be guilty of stealing from her husband, the indictment was bad as

05 was whether the exception was part of the enacting clause, or tacked on in a proviso or included in another clause of the statute. Russell on Crimes p 162. In R v ... the rule laid down in R v ... is not applicable. At Gib ... any reference to exemptions contained in ... Vict C 109 ... negative any of them. And it was held that the rule above stated applied equally to negative and ... 431, Russell on Crimes p 1 support the defence of ... dence ... believed and the jury have their ordinary duty of deciding a question of fact on the evidence before them. Mahomed v Emperor 30 C 318-1973 Cal 31

General exceptions. Under this section the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case of an accused person within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code is on the accused and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances. But this does not mean that an accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record whether produced by the prosecution or by defence that a general exception would apply then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to the satisfaction of the Court that the accused comes within the exception. Anand v Emperor, 71 Ind Cas 69-13 A 329. In a defence of insanity, the onus lies on the person alleging it is the person charged. King Emperor v Shrofin, A W N 1901 1 15 13. The party setting up the right of private defence, to prove that he was within the exceptions stated in the Code. Veeranadan v Emperor 1912 M W L 113-15 Ind Cas 310, see also Emperor v Gullu, A W N 1914 113-1 Cr L J 427. Although this section places on the accused the burden of proving in a criminal trial that they have acted within their legal rights in exercise of the right of private defence of property, still this burden can be discharged by the evidence of witnesses for the prosecution as well as for the evidence for the defence on such plea being set up. In the matter of Khatun Mukherjee 11 C L R 237. Where an accused person has raised a plea inconsistent with the defence which would bring his case within one of the general exceptions ...

from the evidence given for the prosecution or to be found guilty on the record. King Emperor v Wajid Hasan, 7 A L J 133 37 A 101-11 Cr L J 374-6 Ind Cas 559. bringing the case of accused. Aung Myat v Emperor v Ali Raja, 26 Cr L J 310. When one man takes away the life of another ...

R 1930 Oudh 408 of proof in certain already performed it which such a plea necessarily follows it is the duty of the Court to give the benefit of it. Mingal Ganda v Emperor, 25 Cr L J 107-61 Ind Cas 901-1925 Nag 37.

Special exceptions. Under the Criminal Procedure Code 1901, it was necessary, in a charge upon a section of the Penal Code containing general exceptions, to aver the absence of any special exception. In re ... or general exception of circumstances contained in any shall presume that ... Ind Cas 259-11 Cr L 612. The onus to show that any offence falls within ...

a general exception of the Gambling Act, is upon the accused and it is for him to show, in order to bring the case under s. 10 of the Gambling Act, that the game played is a game of mere skill. Ram Nuar v Emperor, 15 Cr. J. J. 276-23 Ind. Cas. 181. The burden of proving the exception of good faith is on the accused. A mistake of law does not make an exception under s. 79 of the

S. 1

the last part of section 11 of proceedings before Magistrate on or complaint in any such case shall negative any exemption, exception, proviso or condition in the statute on which the same shall be founded, it shall not be necessary for the prosecutor or complainant in that behalf to prove the affirmative thereof. Emperor v. A. J. L. T. 187-1 L. B. R. 319

Penal Code means no more and no less than 'unless authorized, or not having Division, 4 D. & A. 40.

When a person is charged with the possession of any property itself. So in a defamation case, when once the complainant has proved that the reputation, it rests with the accused. Razak v Gauri Nath, 4 P. W. Gowamma v. Verianna, 11 Mys. has to regard the absence of grave injury is proved by the accused. 19 C. W. N. 653-21 C. L. J. 377

-16 Cr. L. J. 561-30 Ind. Cas. 113 (F. B.)

Burden of proving fact especially within knowledge.

106. When any fact is especially within the knowledge of any person, the burden of proving that fact is upon him.

Illustrations

(a) When a person does an act with some intention other than that which the character and circumstances of the act suggest, the burden of proving that intention is upon him.

(b) A is charged with travelling on a railway without a ticket. The burden of proving that he had a ticket is on him.

of Le
 ar Plc
 or aio
 ing
 rec
 or

to injustice at least the production of expense and delay. In order to prevent this, it has been established as a general rule of evidence that the burden of proof lies on the person who alleges the fact which lies more peculiarly cognizant.

Ph & An
 6 T R 57; Calder v Rotherford, 3 B & B 302; Sunderland Marine Insurance Co v Kearney, 16 Q B 925; Best Ev § 274.

Not a general rule. The characteristic, then, of the burden of proof (in the sense of a risk of non-persuasion) in legal controversies is that the law divides the process into stages and apportions definitely to each party the specific facts which will in turn fall to him as the pre-requisites of obtaining action.

or rule which incidence the party nor even negative assertion to prove; a common instance is that of a promisee alleging non-performance of a promise whose case the enquiry careless or careless, in part on the fairness of putting the burden on one or the other, and thus in part on the consideration which of the parties has the means of proof more available. This last consideration has often been advanced as a special test for

to be kept in mind in There is then, no one

the subject matter of a party's allegation (whether affirmative or negative) is

Scope of the section. This is an exception to the general rule. Where the subject matter of a party's allegation (whether affirmative or negative) is peculiarly within the knowledge of his opponent it lies upon the latter to rebut such allegation. Phip Et 36, Atrath v N E Ry Co, 11 Q B D 110; Pouell v Mc Glynn, (1902) 2 Ir R 151; Holth v Ross, L R 11 Q B 531, 541, 543. In R v Turner, 5 M & S 296, 211, Bruley J said "I have always understood it to be a general rule that if a negative averment be made by one party, which is peculiarly within the knowledge of the other the party within whose knowledge it lies, and who asserts the affirmative, is to prove it, and not he who avers the negative." This rule is applicable, whether it be affirmative or negative, and in civil or criminal cases. Dickson v Evans, 11 T R 69. It is only reasonable that where one party can easily produce what holds him harmless and the other party have great difficulty in equally within the control of each party, then the burden of proof is upon the party averring the negative, but when the opposite party must, from the nature of the case, himself be in possession of full and plenary proof to disprove the negative averment and the other party is not in possession of such proof, then it is manifestly just and reasonable that the party which is in possession of the proof should be required to adduce it, or upon his failure to do so, it must be presumed it does not exist, which of itself establishes a negative. Durr Jones § 181. For instance where a carrier has undertaken to carry goods safely, fire of insurance, when in contingencies. It within the knowledge of the defendant or prisoner, a general sense of convenience shifts the burden of proof; as for instance where a hawker or pedlar stands charged with trading, without a license it is easy for him to produce his license, and so end the discussion, whereas it might throw the most serious impediment in the way of the prosecutor.

Et 201

is an impor
to be proc fact lies on

it is provided by particular person, I one side to the other shift the burden of
with respect to the respectively." Steph Et Art 96

Where the goods are solely under the control of the bailee the fact as to when loss, destruction or deterioration occurred is a

of great difficulty, upon which there are conflicting authorities. Cases may be suggested of great difficulty on either side of the general question. Suppose under the English game laws an unqualified person is prosecuted for shooting game without the license of the lord of the manor, and after the alleged offence and before the trial, the lord dies and no proof of license, which may have been by parol can be given? Shall he be convicted for want of such affirmative proof or shall the prosecution fail for want of proof to negative it? Again suppose under the law of this commonwealth it was made penal for any person to sell goods as a hawker and pedlar without a license from the select men of some town in the penalty, and he was not duly licensed. To obtain more than three hundred towns must be cited and it may be said, that the difficulty of obtaining proof is not to supersede the necessity of it, and enable a party having the burden to succeed without proof. This is true, but when the proceedings are upon statute an extreme difficulty of obtaining proof on one side amounting nearly to impracticability, and great facility of furnishing it on the other side if it exists leads to a strong inference, that such course was not intended by the legislature to be required. It would no doubt be competent for the legislature to frame a statute provision, as to hold a party liable to the penalty who should not produce a license. Besides, the common-law rules of evidence are to them to be considered as they arise. In the present case the Court are of opinion that the prosecutor was bound to produce prima facie evidence, that the defendant was not licensed, and that no evidence of that averment having been given, the verdict ought to be set aside. The general rule is that all averments necessary to constitute the substantive offence must be proved. If amounting to a confession, it could not be affirmed, which there

- on by stered & this at the
 was ort of
 that both negative
 the point
 convicted on Turner
 party who is to sustain it. The prosecutor, in general, is not called upon to prove negatively all that is stated in the information as matter of disqualification. In R v. Turner all the learned Judges concur in that principle. I concur in all the observations upon which the judgment of the Court in that case was founded; and I think every one of them is applicable in principle to this. The general principle and the justice of the case are here against the defendant. It is urged, that if we decide against the defendant we shall open the door to a great deal of inconvenience, that by no means follows, this man might have produced his license without any possible inconvenience, which would at once have relieved him from all liabilities to penalties. Probably the whole enquiry before the Magistrate was as to the fact of selling the ale, and that nothing was said about the license, but however, I think by the general rule, the informer was not bound to sustain in evidence the negative averment that the defendant negative, whether a book should be produced, or an examined copy, and many other questions of that sort where no one can arise when the defendant himself produces his license. This therefore, not being one of the excepted cases, but a case falling directly within the general rule I am of opinion that judgment must be given for the crown. Apothecaries' Company v Bentley, Ry & M 159=1 C & P 535, was decided upon the same principle. That was an action for a penalty, under the Apothecaries Act, 1815 (55 Geo III C 104), for practising as an apothecary without having obtained the certificate required by the Act. All the counts in the declaration contained the allegation that the defendant did act and practise as an apothecary, etc., "without having obtained such certificate as by the said Act is directed". No evidence was offered by the plaintiffs to show that the defendant had not obtained his certificate. The plaintiffs having closed their case, counsel for the defendant submitted that there must be a non suit. Abbott C J said "I am of opinion that the affirmative must be proved by the defendant. I think that it being a negative the plaintiffs are not bound to prove it but that it rests with the defendant to establish his having a certificate". Cf R v Harris, 10 Cox 511, Magdalen Hosp v Knolls 8 Ch D 709 724 (C A). This section cannot be utilised to help persons who are representatives of other parties and who step into their shoes. Ragharendra Rao v Venkataswami, 1929 M W N, 752-30 L W 966-A I R 1930 Mad 251. Where a person is charged with having been a member of an association declared unlawful by the Government the burden of proof is not on the accused to prove that he discontinued his membership. It is for the prosecution, to prove that he continued to be a member even subsequently to the notification by Government. Emperor v Sripath, 55 B 484=33 Bom L R 90-A I R 1931 Bom 129.

suit was called at an onus of

proof of late upon General
against a VIII of
bound,
Doorga
kherajdar
present
former

6. Plaintiff to prove that the land was lakhera village in putnee Nubo Krishna v Pioratha holding lands of considerable extent under a zemindar, it is a matter peculiarly within his own knowledge of what that holding consists, and if he alleges that one or two plots occupied by him are held under a different title, it is for him to show it Ram Coomai Ray v Peej Gobind, 7 W R 535 In a suit for pre-emption, where the pre-emptor claims the

But very proof upon the ho mu t he in gican Singh v Sheoporgriah 29 A 618, v Dhamraj v A 203-A 203, 204, 205; Makham v Jahan, 16 A L J 533 But the date of the child's birth or death is not a fact specially within the knowledge of its father It is a fact which

A's wife that the purchase money 17 M L J 339 Where the defendant company intentionally in respect of the goods to land the plaintiff acted on to deny that such cash hell that of goods, because it was a fact under this on to the incumbrancer protected interest The occupancy is a matter s and the onus under s 16 C W N 779=15 Ind Cas 30, see also Jogesh v Honnu

a tax imposed upon the averred that the tax had the plaintiff within the on the defendant Muncipalman of the Darujur order to apply this section in the nature of corporations and individuals in v Chairman, Ranch mortgage is contested by that the bond was executed and also asserted that the ff to prove his a contract if it Jodi Dhallee the limits tract Act, for loss of fire, the the Contract time of the loss f from proving re part of the ition Co Ltd)=1913 M W

In a case where the question is whether a particular act was or was not within the scope of an agent's employment the burden of proving the limit of the agent's authority is on the principal, in as much as the character of the authority is a matter specially within the knowledge of the latter. David M. Bruce v. M. K. K. Co. 45 Ind. Cas. 822, see also Sultan v. Behari, 15 C. W. N. 273; Srikishen v. Jodhari, 45 Ind. Cas. 291; M. K. K. Co. v. M. K. K. Co. 45 Ind. Cas. 81. Midan v. Praymath, 61 Ind. 64 Ind. Cas. 883, but see Jinks v. Thuker, 21 Ind. Cas. 181, Ishurnal 196.

An accused person is always entitled to hold his tongue, but where the only alternative theory to his guilt is a remote possibility, which, if correct, he is in a position to explain, the absence of any explanation must be considered in determining whether possibility should be disregarded or taken into account. Smith v. Emperor, 43 Ind. Cas. 105-19 Cr. L. J. 149. The fact that a Muhammadan girl below the age of 15 years has attained puberty is a fact within her special knowledge. Khondakar, P. Code lies in mentioned circumstances.

Where all the circumstances go to show that the intention of the accused was to employ a girl as a prostitute as soon as she was physically ready for the purpose, the burden of proving that she intended to wait until the age of majority had been reached is on the accused. Khetramoni v. Emperor, 35 C. L. J. 451-1922 Cal. 539. Where property is entrusted to a servant and such servant fails to return the property or to account for it or gives an account which is shown to be false and incredible it is ordinarily a reasonable inference that he has criminally misappropriated the property so entrusted to him and dishonestly converted it to his own use. In such cases the Courts are entitled to draw hostile inferences and presumptions from the action and statement of the servant. The provisions of 106, 114 of the Indian Evidence Act, can be applied. Sonameah v. King Emperor, 2 Cr. L. J. 100-1922 Cal. 100.

If he is not able to show what he has done with the property, the Court may infer that he has converted it to his own use. Sonameah v. King Emperor, 2 Cr. L. J. 100-1922 Cal. 100. If he is not able to show what he has done with the property, the Court may infer that he has converted it to his own use. Sonameah v. King Emperor, 2 Cr. L. J. 100-1922 Cal. 100.

received it at one time only, in a case where the accused is charged separately of receiving stolen property. Sonameah v. King Emperor, 2 Cr. L. J. 100-1922 Cal. 100.

received it at one time only, in a case where the accused is charged separately of receiving stolen property. Sonameah v. King Emperor, 2 Cr. L. J. 100-1922 Cal. 100.

offering
so by it
if the n Steggall
instrument renders it suspicious it is only reasonable that the party claiming under it should remove the suspicion Henman v Dickinson, 5 Bing 183
Clifford v Parler, 2 M & Gr 910, Lord Palmouth v Roberts, 9 M & W 471 Lord & Bright Rf Co v Lurelough, 2 M & Gr 705, Tay § 1819
A 1

107 When the question is whether a man is alive or dead, and it is shown that he was alive within thirty years, the burden of proving that he is dead is on the person who affirms it

Burden of proving death of person known to have been alive within thirty years

Principle Where there is proof of the existence of a state of things and no evidence of its cessation, the presumption is that such state of things continues for a reasonable length of time. Hence, if the question is as to the life or death of a person who has been once shown to be living, the burden of proving him dead lies at first on the party who asserts the fact Wilson v Hodges, East 312, Achenich J however denied this in In re Aldersey (1905) 2 Ch 186, Pouell Ev 411. The presumption of continuance is often not so much an inference of fact as an administrative statement of the inertia of the Court Chamberlayne's Et § 1090. Presumptions as to continuance of life are not legal presumptions, but presumptions of fact only, depending on the circumstances of each case R v Willshire 6 Q B D 336, R v Lumeley 11 Cox C C 274, Lapsley v Gritson, 1 H L C 498.

Scope of the presumption In Wilson v Hodges 2 East 312 Lord Ellenborough C J referred to it as a presumption that a person once shown to be living is to be living the for the presumption is that the party continues alive until the contrary be shown. This presumption of continuance is clearly one of the most practical importance. It is frequently impossible to prove, for instance, the existence of a certain thing in a certain state or condition at the particular moment in question. It is sufficient with the aid of this presumption, to prove such existence and state at such an earlier time that, according to the nature, it may fairly be presumed to have lasted to the moment in question Cockle Cas Ff 29. A person proved to have been alive at a former time is presumed to be alive during the probable period of life's duration, until his death is proved or a presumption of death arises Lauson's Presumptive Evidence, Rule 20. The Mahomedan law, presumed the death of a missing person ninety years after the last news of him, and the Hindu law for 12 years, before the passing of the Act. "Presumptions or immutability of absence of proof correspond to the fact that we have been heard of assumption would be reversed, and death would be presumed. What is the period which the presumption might be affected by the particular case, such as state of health and so forth, are certainly been prescribed by high authority, life. Still even the attainment of a hundred years of occasional, and not over rare occurrence, while instances have been stated extending life to almost half a century further. All ordinary experience, however certainly pointing to a period so rarely exceeding an age of 100, it would seem that this might be : : : :

 would be only a presumption, : : : :
 decision. In fact, the period ap : : : :
 all. A presumption of death at the expiration of a hundred years is recognized, however, in both the civil and Scotch Law, and in a case so long ago as the time of Lord Hale, there is a dictum of his, that if testament be made to the use of one for ninety nine years if he shall so long live, and after the death to the use of another, this shall not be contingent, for it would be presumed that his life would not exceed ninety nine years. W'ell v Lomer, Poll 67" Goodere 11 623 "The life of a person once shown to exist" says Justice Buller in an American case, "is intended to continue till the contrary is proved, or is to be presumed from the nature of the case. . . . The witness, if alive is eighty years old: an age that we may admit is an advanced one, The : : : :
 The : : : :
 II : : : :
 man, : : : :
 Hull : : : :
 consi : : : :
 case : : : :
 have : : : :
 on t : : : :

his being dead the presumption disappears, and the question has to be determined on the balance of proof. Mark II ¶ 83 Ss 107 and 108 of the Evidence Act should be read together, because the latter is only a proviso of the rule contained in the former, and both constitute one rule when so read together. Dharun v Gobind, 8 A 614

The number of units produced in the month is 10,000 units death may fairly be based, the Court will not assume, in an administrative way, that the person in question is actually dead, i. e., its inertia will not be overcome so as to enable it to act upon the basis of death until no further possibility of 17 offering it in evidence must explain its appearance, if he be called upon to do so by the issue raised (Parry v. Nicholson, 13 M. & W. 779, per Parke B.), and if the instrument be not admitted by his opponent and notice (Freemantle v. Stearn, 11 Q. B. D. 202), because, as every alteration on the face of a written instrument renders it suspicious, it is only reasonable that the party claiming it should remove the suspicion (Hennan v. Dickinson, 5 Bing. 153; Curry v. Carter, 2 M. & Gr. 510; Lord Lalmouth v. Roberts, 9 M. & W. 171; Lord v. Bright, 11 Q. B. D. 100; Lurelough, 2 M. & Gr. 763, Talbot, 11 Q. B. D. 111; Plantier v. Mitchell, 1 M. L. A. 12) (129).

Lamasuane v. Williams, 3 M. H. C. R. 2.

17 This rule is not applicable in cases of admission of a plaintiff's claim (Hamman v. Tineham, 11 Q. B. D. 111).

107 When the question is whether a man is alive or dead, and it is shown that he was alive within thirty years, the burden of proving that he is dead is on the person who asserts it.

Principle. Where there is proof of the existence of a state of things and no evidence of its cessation, the presumption is that such state of things continues for a reasonable length of time. Hence, if the question is as to the life or death of a person who has been once shown to be living, the burden of proving him dead lies at first on the party who asserts the fact. (Wilson v. Hodges, 2 East 312, Kelouch J. however denied this in In re Aldersey, (1907) 2 Ch. 1, Poicell F. 111. The presumption of continuance is often not so much an inference of fact as an administrative statement of the inertia of the Court. Chamberlayne v. I. § 1090. Presumptions as to continuance of life are not legal presumptions, but presumptions of fact only, depending on the circumstances of each case. R v. Hildreth, 6 Q. B. D. 336, R v. Lumley, 11 Cox C. C. 24, Lapsley v. Grierson, 1 H. L. C. 198.

Scope of the section. In Wilson v. Hodges, 2 East 312, Lord Ellenborough, J. said: "Where a person once shown to be living, the burden of proving his death is on the party who asserts the contrary. It is one of the most practical instances, the existence of which at particular moments in time, to prove such existence and state at such an earlier time that, according to the nature of the case, fairly be presumed to have lasted to the moment in question." (Cockle v. Cus, 29 Q. B. D. 111). A person proved to have been alive at a former time is presumed to be alive during the probable period of life's duration, until his death is proved or a presumption of death arises. Lauson's Presumptive Evidence, Rule 30, says: "A person ninety years of age is presumed to have been heard for 12 years before the passing of the Act." But the Hindu law is different.

of the Indian Evidence Act is that

Three score years and ten have certainly been prescribed by high authority as an average limit of human life. Still even the attainment of a hundred is of occasional, and not over-rare occurrence, while instances have been stated evident proof of the life,' and that the Judge should 'direct the jury to give their verdict as if the person were dead'. But if the absent party should not really have died, provision is made by the statute, then effect of this statute, then into evidence, by a certain The rule fixes, for the particular inquiry, the same thing as death, it is its legal equivalent.

Now very likely, in practice, similar cases may have been brought within 'the equity' of the statute, as Chief Justice Holt, in 1692, is reported to have 'held that a remainder man was within the equity of that law'; but we hear of no suggestion of a general seven-year rule, such as we have now, before 1805. In the case Doe d George v Jackson, 6 East 50, there was a rule for a new trial, in an action of ejectment, which turned on the question whether the plaintiff's lessee or had entered within the time allowed by the statute of limitations, which presumption (3) seems to be a rule of law, and not a rule of equity.

ends at the expiration of seven years, to be living. If a man was living at a later period, there was fair ground for the jury to presume that he was dead at the end of seven years from the time when he went to sea on his second voyage, which seems to be the last account of him. This was supporting what was justified, on the analogy of the even years; and more was questioned upon this point. It was not laid down that they must; nor was any rule of presumption put forward; nor, as I say, was it on any such point that the ruling below was questioned in the Full Bench.

In 1809, at Nisi Prius (Hopewell v De Pinna, 2 Camp 113) in an action against a woman on a promissory note, she pleaded coverture, and proved her that it knows that the party has been absent and unheard from for more than seven years. Upon evidence for the issue is upon the life this presumption (1) that he is dead.

constant change Hile Parl v Clinton, supra; In re Tetis Trust, L P 6 Ca 35. In re Benjamin, (1902) 1 Ch 723. In re Waller, L R 7, Ch 120. When the inference from experience as to the continuance of life has weakened in probability and even after it has departed the continuance of life remaining merely as an administrative assumption, additional facts may so strongly tend to establish an inference of death that the inertia of the Court will be overcome and affirmative action taken. Clamborough v Ft § 1601 108 * [Provided that when] the question is whether a man is alive or dead, and it is proved that he has been heard of for seven years by those who would naturally have heard of him if he had been alive, the burden of proving that he is alive is * (shifted to) the person who affirms it.

Burden of proving that person is alive who has not been heard of for seven years

Principle Where certain results would have followed if an act or an event had occurred (or not occurred) the absence of those results is some indication that the act or event has not occurred (or occurred). A common class of evidence of this sort is that of lack of news to show probable death of a person: the probable loss of a ship, for as it is usual for living persons to be heard from directly or indirectly, by persons having an interest in knowing, and for ship officers to leave word of their journey at the ports they touch or with the other ships they pass the lack of any such news indicates their non-existence. Wigmore Pt § 159. This is a genuine presumption of universal acceptance, is not proof of death. It is generally said to arise from the person's continuous absence from home for seven years, unheard of by the persons who would naturally have received news from the absentee. Wigmore Et § 231. There are several length of a dead? The six or eight rule is a the 12th March, 1811.

After what is a man? Obvious have a direct James Stephen Origin and growth of the rule "It is a rule of presumption that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, a person shall be taken to be dead when he has been absent seven years and not heard from. That is a modern rule. It is not at all modern to infer death from a long absence; the recent thing is the fixing of this time of seven years, and putting it into a rule. The faint beginning of it as a common law rule, of general application in all questions of life and death, is found, so far as recorded English cases show in Doe v George v Jess 1805. Long before this in 1604 the "Bigamy Act" of its provision who had married for seven years, and (2) those whose spouse had been absent for seven years, although not beyond the seas,—the one of them not knowing the other to be living within that time." This statute, it may be noticed, did not absolutely treat the absent party as dead, for it did not validate the second marriage in the penalty. Again, in convenience by want of taking themselves, upon and leases dependent or or reversioner absenting himself o "sufficient and evident proof of the life,' and that the Judge should direct the jury to give their verdict as if the person were dead. But if the absent party should not really have died, provision was made for a subsequent recovery by him. The effect of this statute then was to end in a specific class of cases, all enquiry into evidence, by a certain assumption, or, as it is otherwise called, presumption. The rule fixed for the purpose of a particular inquiry, the effect of specified facts, absence for seven years, unheard of, is to be accounted, in regards this particular inquiry, the same thing as death, it is its legal equivalent.

* These words in s 103 were substituted for the original words "when" and "on" respectively by the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act (18 of 1872), s 2.

Now very likely, in practice, similar cases may have been brought within the equity of the statute, as Chief Justice Holt, in 1692, is reported to have held that a remainder man was within the equity of that law; but we hear of no suggestion of a general seven-year rule, such as we have now, before 1805. In the case Doe d George v Jesson, 6 East 80, there was a rule for a new trial, in an action of ejectment, which turned on the question whether the plaintiff's lessor had entered within the time allowed by the statute of limitations, which

As to the period the Statute 10 also according to the duration of life, with respect to persons of whom no account can be given, ends at the expiration of seven years from the time when they were last known to be living. Therefore, in the absence of all other evidence to show that he was living at a later period, there was fair ground for the jury to presume that

As to the period the Statute 10 also according to the duration of life, with respect to persons of whom no account can be given, ends at the expiration of seven years from the time when they were last known to be living. Therefore, in the absence of all other evidence to show that he was living at a later period, there was fair ground for the jury to presume that nor was any rule of presumption put forward; nor, as I say, was it on any such point that the ruling below was questioned in the Full Bench.

In 1809, at Assi Prius (Hopewell v De Pinna, 2 Camp 113) in an action against a woman on a promissory marriage, but the husband had gone to seven years. Upon the basis of these cases, there soon appeared in the text books on evidence for the first time in 1815, a general proposition that 'where the issue is upon the life or death, this presumption (namely, that a seven years. Upon the basis of these cases, there soon appeared in the text books on evidence for the first time in 1815, a general proposition that 'where the issue is upon the life or death, this presumption (namely, that a

this presumption (namely, that a

3. which he thinks should find a place in the law of evidence Stephen published his Digest in 1876 Here, then, in seventy years, we find the rule about a seven years' absence (1) coming into existence in the form of a judicial declaration about what may or may not fairly be inferred by a jury in the exercise of their logical faculty; the particular period being fixed by reference to two legislative determinations in specific cases of a like question; (2) passing into the form of an affirmative rule of law requiring that death be assumed under the given circumstances. This is a process of judicial legislation, a departure from what is a mere recognition of a legitimate step in legal reasoning to a declaration of the legal effect of certain facts. Thayer Pre Treat Ft pp 319-321 But the Indian Evidence Act, which found place in the Statute Book in 1872 went further and by s. 107 it allowed presumption to be made of the continuance of life for a period of 30 years from the period when a person is last heard of. But this presumption is not free from criticism.

Scope of the section This section provides in effect that if it appears that a person has not been heard of for seven years have heard of him if he had been alive, and probability of his being alive, the presumption large Writ Ft 83 But sections 107 and 108 should be read together, the latter is only a proviso of the rule contained in the former and both constitute one rule when so read together Dharup Nath v Gobind Saran, 8 A 614-6 A W N 239 The two presumptions are conflicting and the circumstances might be such that both presumptions were raised. What is to prevail? It was in order to solve this question that the language of section 108 was changed upon this If the to find or refer court red and twenty years ago, so that according to the common course of natural events he could not be alive now (Vide section 114 infra); or he may prove that two years ago X went to sea in a ship which has not since been heard of. But, in all this there is no shifting Mark Et p 84 So also this presumption left his home under circumstances moment that he I & W Bench, 804, Lord Denman C J that the presumption of Law relates only to the fact of death, and that the time of death, whenever it is material, must be subject of distinct proof. The quite clear, therefore, that when no such probability exists, the presumption cannot arise. Per Sir John Stuart V C in Bowden v Henderson, 2 Sm & G the Evidence Act is a presumption was raised, that is, at the date of

v Pheasant, 14 C W N 311-Stephen J 1862 ten been alive use must evidence; 108 of t would ad at a But

and the question the Evidence Act shift, and instead given time, the de we are constrained Surgey

Kanta Ruy Choudhury 35 C 25, it is expressly laid down by Griffith J that the presumption that arises on a man not having been heard of for seven years is a presumption that he is dead at the time when the question is raised, that is, in this case at the date of the suit and not at some antecedent date that is at the time of Halkari's death in 1872. The judgment of McLean C J seems on the facts mentioned in the judgment of Griffith J to be to the same effect. A similar view was expressed by the Burma Chief Court in Molla Cassim v Molla Abdul Rahim and was accepted by the Privy Council (13 C 173). This is not the English law as may be seen in the judgment in the leading case of In re Phene's Trust (1869) 5 Ch App 139 and the cases therein quoted, and were the matter res integra we are not sure that we should attribute to the words of section 108 the effect that is given to them in the cases we have mentioned." Mohammad Sharif v Pande 111 8 A L J 1052 (F B). This section of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, according to its terms, does not require that the Court should hold the person dead at the expiration of the seven years therein indicated, but merely provides that the burden of proving that he is alive at the time of the suit is shifted to the person who asserts it. See also Shree Ram v R. R. 1920. The presumption is in the death of a person by L J 181-56 Ind C. . . . showed that a person was unheard of and there was no other evidence to show that the person had not been heard of for 40 years the presumption as to death could be drawn. Tirapathi v Ringit, A I R 1931 Oudh 40-130 Ind Cas 124-2 O W N 712. Where the nearer relations deposed that they had not heard of the person in question for seven years the presumption under the section should be drawn. Khan Chand v Mt Janandi, 1923 Lah 174. This section presumed for probate as a matter of fact and not of law, before seven years Philp Ed 7th Ed p 653.

Circumstances may create presumptions at earlier period. The legal presumption arises only at the expiration of the seven years, but the fixing this would in no way preclude the presumption of fact as the in short of the seven years. Nezille, Manning, 344, "that nothing could be more absurd than that there should be a presumption of life or death without reference to the age, circumstances, situation of life, and common habits of the party. Can there be the same presumption as to a party who is one hundred, and one who is thirty five? As to a party who was in good health upon his country. Hubbock or other similar testimony, or again, the sudden unexplained cessation of his tent with the supposition of his continuing existence." Hubbock page 174; Goodette Et. 631. So death may be proved by reputation, by hearsay, or by

8. evidence of facts inconsistent with the theory of the existence of life. The presumption will arise that the death of the absent has occurred before the expiration of seven years where any of the following circumstances are shown:—(1) That within that time he was in a desperate state of health. Wes's v. Burchmore 13 Ves 362. In the above mentioned case "the health was very bad—the chancellor speaks of it as desperate." (2) That within that time he embarked on a vessel which has not since been heard of and is long overdue inquiries having been made at her ports of departure and destination. Lauson Presumptive Evidence, rule 50, Merrill v. Thompson Helt, 550. In the above case the Court, observing: "The presumption of his death does not rest upon the fact that he has not been heard of for seventeen months, but upon the weightier circumstance that the vessel has not been heard of for seventeen months." In Pe Smyth 25 L J (P & M) 1, Sir Creswell Creswell said: "I do not find in the affidavits any statement that enquiries have been made at Barcelona or elsewhere about the crew. The affidavits only state that neither the vessel G S, nor any of the crew have been heard of. I should undoubtedly presume that the vessel has been lost, but it does not follow that the crew or some of them may not have been saved. The case had better stand over until you have written to the agent of the ship at Barcelona and ascertained whether any of the crew have survived." Similarly in Re Bishop, 1 Sw & Tr 307, the same learned Judge said: "I think probably the vessel is lost, but it does not appear that any inquiries have been made at Palermo as to whether any of the crew have arrived there or have been heard of." (3) That at sometime within that period he has encountered a "specific peril," which includes not the ordinary dangers of travel or navigation, but some unusual or extraordinary danger. Fagle's Case, 3 App Pr 220, Lauson Presumptive Evidence, rule 51. (4) That his habits, character, domestic relations, &c., are such as to lead to the inference that he is more likely to die than those showing ex-within that period he home or domicile or rule 52. A son, after the death of his father and knowing of a provision in his Will, to take effect on the death of his mother, leaves home. He is not heard of for many years. He will be presumed to be dead. Karsten v. Karsten 15 N Y (S) 966. On March 25 1866, S left her home and was never heard of again. She depended on an income payable in quarterly instalments. She did not appear to claim the amount due in June, 1866. In a proceeding in 1875 the presumption is that she was dead after June, 1866. Re Beasney L R 7 Eq 498.

quently to the end of seven years. Lauson Pre Ev Rule 53. In 1829 R. left her family in England and went to Paris where she took a situation as governess. She continued to correspond with her relatives. In 1835 she wrote to her sister from Paris, saying that she was about to accept another situation and stating, that she had become a Catholic. On receipt of this letter her sister replied in a letter of remonstrance reproaching her for her abandonment of the Protestant religion. No reply was received to this letter, and she was not subsequently heard of. There is no presumption that she died in 1847. Bowen v. Henderson 2 Sim & G 360. In this case it was said that the principle on which the dead based: with some draw from when no such probability exists the presumption can not arise. In this case all the circumstances tend to show that after what had taken place between L and her friends it was extremely improbable she would have entered into further communication with them. She had abandoned her religion and her friends wrote to her a letter of remonstrance and reproach for doing so. The reproaches were not calculated to encourage further communications. I think this circumstance, taken in connection with the rather eccentric course of life which it death at the ex-

re it is improbable
ard of at or would icile or where in g been alive subse

appeared from her. There she remained for a long time, but she could have viewed it follows of information the lady were Eq 1, it was and "The circumstances of the present cases are not such as to render it safe to make that presumption at present. Hugh Morgan left Ireland for America some time before the year 1859, resided there for some years, married there, came back to Ireland with his wife in 1879 for a temporary purpose only, he sold all his property in Ireland and after a few months returned to America, whither his wife and son followed him. It is contended, however, that because he has not since been heard of by his sister, the only member of his family who remains in Ireland, I am therefore to presume that he is dead. But suppose that an alien comes into this country and stays for a few months, or that a person who is not an alien, but has his residence abroad, comes here and, stays for a little time, and then leaves having—to put an extreme case—no relatives here, and not heard of for seven years, is the presumption, therefore, to be made of his death? I haves nding that idwell

"C said: "Here a girl of about sixteen or seventeen years of age, whose father was a farmer, chose, for some reason which does not appear, to leave her father's house and to go no one knew whither. But it seems that in August 1814, she was at Portsmouth, and that she then intended to go abroad. Therefore it is but reasonable to presume that all along she has been concealing herself, and that she never intended to return home. The mere fact of her 1834 for seven years for a crime. He last that year. The records showed that he resumption that he was dead in the year 507, Lauson Pre Ev Rule 53, see also Re Ocean Co, 2 I R 1.

Law Accord-
would appear 100ke's Digest
70 Lal, 2 Hay.
10 W R 484;

C 134 Note, Watnuddur v Ram
W R 891, Ghasee v Jasouddee, H C 1. It is only when the provisions of section 108 of Act I of 1872 will apply. Parameswar Rao v Bissessar Singh, 1 A 53 (F B). Where a person claims another's property on the allegation that the latter was missing and has not been heard of for more than seven years, the question whether such person is to be presumed to be dead is one of fact. In re Estate of John D. Bick, 11 B 1. W N 1889.

239 Balaya v Kirtnapra, 11 M 118, Hari Chutman v Moro Lalchandra, 11 B 89; Jaywant v Rinchanhao, 18 Bom L R 11-40 B 232-33 Ind C 181, Pondur v Jalali, 71 Ind C 305-32 M L T (H C) 6. Under the Mahomedan Law, the share of a missing person cannot be distributed until seven years have elapsed since his birth. Ali v Maharban, 2 A 625; R. v. Doulat v Khya, 2 Agr 59. But in a later Full Bench case of the same High Court those cases were overruled. In that case Mahmood J. said: "The rule of Mahomedan Law that a missing person is to be regarded as alive till the expiry of 90 years from the date of his birth, is a rule of evidence, and not of succession in inheritance etc., within the meaning of section 24 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act." Mirar Ali v Bulh Singh, 7 A 297 (F B) = A W N 1881, 333. So the rule contained in section 103 of the Indian Evidence Act, applies to the case of a Mahomedan, who has been missing for more than seven years when the question of his death arises in cases to which under the provisions of section 24 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act (VI of 1871) the Mahomedan Law is applicable. Ibid, see also Imdad Ali Ghulam v Jilani, 12 P R 1892; Moolah Casseri v Moolah Abdul, 2 C L J 236-15 M L J 317-7 Bom L R 892-2 A L J 798-10 C W N 33-33 C 173-32 I A 177; Yusuf Ali Beg v Ayub Beg, 11 A L J 355-18 Ind C 920, Miraj v Abdul, 43 A. 673.

Time of death. Though under ss 107 and 108 of the Indian Evidence Act, a presumption is made that a person has died on the presumption of death, nor on the other upon the presumption of the continuance of life. Rango v Mudi Yappa, 23 B 296. Whenever the question as to the exact time of death arises, it must be dealt with according to the evidence and circumstances of each case, when the death is alleged to have occurred at any time not affected by the presumption of law as to seven years. Dharip Nath v Gobind Saran, 8 A 614 = A W N 1886, 239, see also Guru v Lachhman, 14 M L J 464. The law on the subject is thus stated by Richards C J in Mohammad Sharif v Bande Ali, 31 A 36-8 A L J 1052 (F B). "They contended that it must be presumed that Madad Ali died sometime during the first seven years during which according to the evidence he was not heard of, and that upon the expiry of the first seven years it must be presumed that he was dead. In my opinion this contention is not correct. The mere fact that the evidence adduced by the plaintiffs went to show that Madad Ali had not been heard of for more than seven years raises no greater presumption than that Madad Ali is dead. There is no presumption that he died in the first seven years or in the last seven years. The presumption merely is that he was dead at that time. The burden of proof is on the plaintiff. If it was Nath v on which Richards who delivered the judgment in the case, I think that he misinterpreted and misunderstood the passage from Taylor on Evidence, which he quotes. The period of seven years which the learned author there speaks of is in my opinion the minimum period during which it is necessary for the plaintiff to show that the person whose life or death is in question has not been heard of and that if the evidence shows the person had not been heard of for 14 or 15 years instead of seven, the presumption would not be carried one bit further. There would be merely the presumption that the man is dead; but there would be no presumption that he died at any particular moment of the period during which he has not been heard of. In the last edition of Taylor on Evidence the passage is as follows: "although, however, a person who has not been heard of for 7 years is presumed to be dead, the law raises no presumption as to the time of his death, and if any one who seeks to establish the precise period during those seven years at that the time, he

It seems to me that this argument proceeds upon the assumption that if Dillar had sued during his life time, the evidence as to the disappearance of Mudal Ali would have been exactly the same. This would be a very rash assumption. Seven or eight years ago there must have been many persons who might have heard of the existence of Mudal Ali who are now dead and gone. Reliance was also placed upon the case In re Phene's Trusts, L R 5 Ch App 139. In that case the question was whether or not Nicholas Phene Mill had survived his uncle who died on the 5th January, 1811, leaving certain property by Will to his nephews in equal shares. Nicholas Phene Mill was one of his nephews. Sir G. M. Gifford L J examined the authorities upon the question of presumption and finally decided that it lay upon the administrator of Nicholas Phene Mill to show by affirmative evidence that the latter had survived his uncle. At page 151 the Lord Justice says "It is a general well founded rule that a person seeking to recover property must establish his title by affirmative proof. This was one of the grounds of decision in Doe v Nye and to assert as an exception to the general rule that the onus of proving death at any particular period, either within the seven years or otherwise, should be with the party alleging d not of presumption but of proof, or with the real substance of the actual decisions, or the sound parts of the reasoning in Doe v Nye or with the principles to be deduced from the judgment in Underwood v King. The true proposition is, that those who found a right upon a person having survived a particular period will necessarily the person asse

equal force to the case when it is essential for the plaintiff's claim that he should establish the death of an individual at a particular period. Lastly, the appellants relied upon the judgment of Karamat Hussain J, in the case of Mussammatt Akbari unmissa v Sayed Bashir Ali S A No 486 of 1909. With great respect I think the learned Judge fell into the same error as the Judges who decided the case stood

of Nc
Bhusl

was c

11 C L J

enacted by se

time of the suit, but there is no presumption as to the precise time of his death.

I

s

#

c

j

j

1 until the seven

the whole of the presumed dead from the moment the seven years commenced. But the contention was overruled, and Lord Denman Chief Justice, in delivering the judgment of the Court stated thus—"The absence of Mathew Knight abroad for seven years, without having been heard of, is evidence from which a jury might reasonably presume, and in this case have properly presumed, his death. This period has been adopted as the ground for such presumption in analogy to the Statutes of 1 Jac 1 C II relating to bigamy, and 19 Car 2 C 6, as to the continuance of lives on which leases were held, and the lessor of the plaintiff clearly proved the first of the points necessary to maintain the case. But such absence abroad for seven years, though it naturally leads the mind to believe that the party is dead, and therefore is sufficient evidence to warrant a presumption of fact that the party was dead at the end of seven years, clearly raises no inference as to the exact time of the death; and still less that such death took place at the end of seven years. Absence for the period has no tendency to induce the belief that life has ceased at that precise time; and no case has been cited, nor do we know of any, in which it has been laid down as a rule of law that the loss of a vessel in which a person sailed might be presumed, after having sailed on a foreign voyage, that it might be time case on appeal in the Eschequer Charter.

 'Now, when nothing is heard of a person for seven years, it is obviously a matter of complete uncertainty at what point of time he should be heard of. In other words it is presumed that his not being heard of has been occasioned by his death, which presumption arises from the considerable time that has elapsed. If you assume that he was alive on the last day but one of the seven years, then there is nothing extraordinary in his not having been heard of on the first day, and the previous extraordinary lapse of time is not a presumption of death. The presumption of death is not a presumption of death.

question is raised before a Court as to whether a person is alive or dead. These sections do not lay down any presumption as to how long a man was alive or at what time he died. Band Veeramma v Gangala, 16 Ind Cas 43; Pooma-loori v Chelakapattar, 33 M L J 295-(1917) M W N 722-6 L W 633; Alwaraj Fatima v Abdul 19 A L J 713-63 Ind Cas 236; see also Re Phen's Trusts, L R 5 Ch 139, Re Lene's Trusts, L R 6 Ch 356; Re Rhodes, 30 Ch D 586, R v Lumley, L R 1 C C R 196, Lalchand v. Mahant, 42 T L R 159; Punjab v Natha, A I R 1931 Lah 582 (F B)-183 Ind Cas 889, Meher Khan v Salhi, A I R 1932 Lah 45-131 Ind Cas 97, Gudra v Jangi, 124 Ind Cas 25; Jangi v Gudra, A I R 1932 All 365-1932 A L J 170, Jewan v Keuar Redti, A I R 1930 All 427-1930 A L J 469. The earliest date to which the date when the suit was filed. Jeshankar Ind Cas 525; see also Basharat v Naje 0; Faqir v Dan Bahadur, 21 O C 143-46 Ind Cas 503, Monohar Lal v Chuni, L R 3 A 393, Muhannad v. Abdul, 64 Ind Cas 468, Rekhab Das v Mt Sheobai, 45 A 466-21 A L J 393-7; Fateh Ali v Ahmad 00 Ind Cas 446; Mahadeo h 13, Jagannath r v Mahadeo, 115 Ind Cas 626. If a person has not been heard of for seven years that is a presumption of law that he is dead but at what time within that period he died is a question of fact. It is essential that the presumption is essential. A. 24-30 289 (P. C).

see also Ganesh Das Amora, In the goods of, 13 C L, J. 578-97 Ind. Cas. 217- A I R 1926 Cal 1056

By persons who would naturally have heard of him "Persons who would naturally have heard of him" is not confined to a particular class; they may be relations or strangers Lawson's Pre Li Rule 15; Doe v. Deakin, 4 B. & Ald 433 A wife, who left her husband and is in keeping of another is not one of the persons who would naturally hear from him if he were alive Kantabai v Umabai, 117 Ind Cas 205-A I R 1929 Nag 127.

Not been heard of "Not been heard of" means that none of the "persons" an action was brought on the policy in 1874 and the question was whether N was then dead He had left his home in England for Australia in 1867, and follows: A niece of man on the street "passing crowd" o her mother and all thought her d been 'heard of' ble grounds, then Assurance Co v.

Edmonds, 2 App 1 that not being thing about him was dead, added "you cannot say that a man has never been heard of, when in the first place one of his nearest relations comes and says she saw him alive and well within three years; still less can you say that he has never been heard of when every member of the family states that they heard that which is now stated" On appeal this was held to be an error "The direction," said Lord Chancellor Hatherley, "seems to me to come to this In the first place, if the jurymen believed Mrs C's assertion to be correct, and thought she had seen him alive and well, of course that ends the case But then he adds: member of the n, as far as that i for the jury- them whatever t on as arising when every member of the family had heard what she said, because, be it true or be it not true, the fact of their having heard it would prevent the assumption arising I think that would be the reasonable inference from that language, other hand presumption that he is dead,—that is, that he has never been heard of by any of his relations for the space of seven years,—when you find that every one of the relatives has come forward, and every one of the relatives heard that he was alive" Therefore it appears to me that the Lord Chief Baron plainly and distinctly directed the jurymen that they had no evidence before them at all came to the conclusion that Mrs. C's story was not to be believed. On the contrary, it seems to have been laid down in clear and precise terms, that if every member of the family has heard of him, whether by a credible story or not, then there is a probability of his being a of death would not arise. And Lord Blackburn in had failed in proving the actual death of n the rule of law which is generally laid down man has not been heard of for seven years at he is dead. It is generally so enunciated correct way of enunciating it, but I think it may be fairly enough put in those words for this purpose. I think, having regard both to the reason of the thing and the decisions we must take 'not being heard of' in a certain sense. There was seldom or never a man who had reached the age of forty with regard to whom it would not be easy to call scores of people to say, 'I was at school with him, I knew him perfectly well, and I have not heard of him for the last seven years.' But that would not be enough to raise a presumption that he was dead, because if ever so much alive, those people might not have heard of him. My lords, it appears from the case of Doe v. Anletric (15 Q. B. 731), that it presumption that there should have been an he was alive, would analogy, but it is something like the case of a search for documents; where you are allowed to give secondary evidence of a document, you must search the places where the document would in the natural course of things be, if it were still in existence, and having proved that you have done that, you may then give your secondary evidence. In like manner, in order to raise the presumption that a man is dead from his not having been heard of for seven years, you must of him if he was a ld k is dead who said so, but afterwards is that Mrs. C. had seen him' in Australia, but that he did not l a report would hardly witness saying he had not posing the jury men had n, would or would not the a seven years' absence I think certainly they would It seems to me that when she said, 'I have seen the man in the streets arising from the relative, including and it turned the onus the other might have been proved that the man else. If that had been proved it had never made that statement. When d all the others had heard it from her, statement affected the onus, yet think many lawyers themselves,—would be under the commonly enunciated rule about a man's not being heard of for seven years, that there has not been a physical hearing of him, and seven years and at the think was at it that ot see!

him than the other, and the fact that he had been seen about him which might raise a presumption in his favor, but I do not think that because I think, though I think the presumption, yet the facts might be such as to create a reasonable doubt was not a reasonable person came and be said, after it was proved that the man who told them that had been educated into the belief that he had seen the brother, could it be said that evidence, so explained, put an end to the presumption arising at the end of seven years? I apprehend not, yet the wording of the Lord Chief Baron in the first line might have led the jury to think so; and I must acknowledge that when I read the whole through, I think it did lead the jury to think so, whether so meant or

Robert Nutt has been heard of, no matter how or where, and even you are satisfied that the hearing was founded upon a mistake, that mere fact of hearing is enough. That I think would be misdirection."

Presumption of survivorship When two persons, and especially when two relatives, have perished in a conflagration, it often arises in questions of succession to estate

Greenl § 29 Direct proof, however, can seldom be procured in these cases, and in several other codes, recourse is had to the particular circumstances connected with the case. These presumptions are based on the strength of age and sex. Ibid The common law however does not attempt to ascertain, in the absence of any evidence on which to go the survivor of a common catastrophe. Strictly it may be said that the common law presumes neither that one survived nor that all perished at the same moment. Lauson Pre Ev p 293 But by leaving the matter as one unascertainable, "the practical consequence", as has been said, is nearly the same as if the law presumed all to have perished together at the same moment. It is, in fact, exactly the same where two persons (whether of the same or different ages, sexes or physical conditions) perish in an accident, ship wreck or battle, and there is no evidence to show which one of the several survived, the law will not raise a presumption from the fact that one was younger or stronger, or of the more hardy sex, that he survived an older or weaker or a less hardy victim. The party alleging that one survived the other must prove it, the onus is on him.

the survivorship of one to prove

1 Meriv 307; Wollaston v Berke

Re Wheeler, 37 L J (P & M) 40,

Wing v Argrave, [1883] H L C 183; In re Benyon, (1901) P 141, In re Fisher, (1915) 1 Ch 309. General, Wynne

1 Hag said fair and reasonable in these unhappy cases to correct the presumption at the same instant of time than to resort to any presumption on account of the degree of robustness."

1 Court said "Instances have occurred where the question has been, which of the two survived the existence of a state of things at a particular moment such existence may fairly be presumed generally thought it is presumed, until the contrary is proved C 72 (79).

Scope of the section When the existence of a person, or personal relation, or a state of things, is once established by proof the law presumes that the person, relation, or state of things continues to exist as before, till the contrary is shown, or till the question is shown to exist.
Taylor Et al § 1

or object, or relation, or state of things, is shown to have existed at a given time. In reality, however, a genuine rule of evidence usually declares merely that certain sufficient evidence for the jury's finding of a 109 of the Evidence Act cannot be overruled. Keyan v Mt Lin, 8 Bur L T 292-33
In nasorgats are predecessors in interest within the meaning of s 223, Berar Land Revenue Code. Ramchand v Ratnanath, 98 Ind Cas 674-A I R 1927 Nag 99

Partners This section presumes that the partnership continues until the partnership brings an action not partners. It is proved that the presumption is that they continue to be so. Anderson v Clay, 1 Stark 405, Cromwell v Nedman, 22 Barb 510, Clarke v Alexander, 8 Scott N R 161; Clarke sumption finds legislative sanction in section 256. Cummingham said, "By burden of proving that persons who are shown to have been acting as partners have ceased to stand in that relation to each other is thrown on the person who affirms it, and by this section the further presumption is created, that the relations of such persons continue to be governed by the terms of the original contract which has expired, so far as they may be applicable to a partnership determinable at will. The same rule within the same limitation, obtains in the case of a tenancy which is continued after the expiration of the term limited by the lease." Cum Contract Act Notes under s 256. "The evidence of a joint interest in the plaintiffs was sufficient prima facie. It was shown that they were partners in business two or three years previous. The witness stated that he had frequently done business with held that the partnership could be dissolved only by a special notice, and that,

D.

Principal and Agent An authority to do an act, once shown to exist is presumed to continue until the contrary is proved. Prall v Palmer, 4 Ark 456, Law on Pres. Fr Rule 3.
 case of principal and agent Rayan v La agency is terminated in any of the ways
 Act the agent or the third person concerned is affected by the termination only from the date when it becomes known to him. The same rule applies where it is his notice by death, or by insanity, that the agency is terminated. L. C. v. F. p. 41.
 see also Contract Act s. 152-235. If a man were on several occasions to authorise his mistress to order goods from a tradesman on his credit, the jury would be amply justified in finding him liable for articles supplied after the termination of the connection in the absence of any proof that the tradesman had received notice of such termination. Riffin v Lamb, 12 Q. B. 464.

Landlords and tenants When once the relation of landlord and tenant is admitted or proved to exist it will be presumed to continue until it is shown by affirmative proof that it has ceased to exist. Mohun Uthas v Sur Shem, 21 W. R. 5, Mung Sam v Maung Tin, U. B. R. (1897-1901) Vol. II, 114, Tiru v Sangudien 3 M. 118, Ismahar v Dulpin, 7 C. L. J. 202, Dattatraya v Sridhar, 17 B. 736. Mere non-payment of rent though for many years, would not affect the landlord's right to tenant once existed. Bima Charan L. J. 72, Mung Lal v Abtool, 4 C. 314.
Premsook v Bhuyia, 22 A. 517 (F. B.); Ismahar v Gobordhin, 7 C. L. J. 202 Dudaja v Krishna, 7 B. 34. Failure of payment of rent by the tenant to the landlord does not alone operate to create in favour of a tenant a title by adverse possession. Reayudh v Chand, 21 C. L. J. 453, Maung Lun v Maung Shue, U. B. R. (1892-96), vol. II. 363; Troulkhoo v Mohana, 7 C. L. R. 490; Tiru Charna v Sangudien, 3 M. 118; Mridan v Kumar, 7 C. L. J. 610. So where a tenant holds over after the expiration of the term, he is impliedly held subject to all the covenants in the lease which are applicable to his new tenancy. Toniano v Young 2 Camp. 50, Thomas v Parlier, 1 H. & N. 63. Tay § 197, Chatur v Alukund, 7 Cal. 710, Bu Nath v Raghu Nath, 16 C. W. N. 496, Kishori Lal v Administrator General, 2 C. W. N. 203, Jumal 419. Chatterdhari, 16 W. R. 185; Beni v Raj Kumar, 6 C. W. N. 589. See also section 116 of the Transfer of Property Act and section 51 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The relation is presumed to have ceased. Dattatraya, Ind. Cas. 555. Where it is proved that the tenant of the plaintiff at one time, it is for the defendant, under s. 114, Evidence Act, to show when the relationship of landlord and tenant ceased and possession became adverse. Charan v Tullusee, 28 M. L. J. 361-27 Ind. Cas. 84.

110. When the question is whether any person is owner

Burden of proof as of anything of which he is shown to be in possession, the burden of proving that he is not the owner is on the person who affirms that he is not the owner.

Principle Where title to land becomes material, the fact of present possession alone may serve to create a presumption of ownership, the emphasis is on the document to the opponent the contrary. It is because it is so obvious that it is a Hari v Dhan in some lawful and any made in quiet support possession is forthcoming it is resorted to Sumner in Syed 1 C. L. J. 340.
 most common muniments of title to real estate is the presumption, from long possession, that such possession is lawful rather than unlawful,—in other words, that it is supported by a grant. It has become a well established rule that the peaceable possession of real estate is presumptive evidence of title until the contrary is shown. The title which adverse possession gives is one in fee simple, and consequently its acquisition must be safeguarded and all the avenues of approach to it watched with the argus-eye of the law that no one is wronged. Theoretically, at least possession is the primitive mode of acquisition of all property, and constitutes the ultimate foundation upon which every title rests. It constitutes also the only means of enjoyment of property. Hence it is necessarily the conspicuous badge or sign of ownership. This is a principle firmly imbedded in all common law jurisprudence. Burr Jones § 75. It is held that the presumption arising from possession is a presumption of seisin in fee. Bull N P 103, 103, Asher v Whitlock, L R 1 Q B 1—35 L J Q B 17; see also Jayre v Price, 5 Taunt 346; Dainty v Brocklehurst, 3 Ex 207.

Scope of the section. The fact of possession, in the eye of law, suggests always ownership, and whether it is put in Latin as potior est conditio possidentis, or in colloquial Anglo-Saxon that "possession is nine points of the law" it goes without saying that proof of the possession of property is prima facie evidence of title to it both with regard to moveable and immovable property. Indeed it may be said that the presumption has attained its full growth. Pollock says: "It has been said that there is no doctrine of possession in our law. The reason of this appearance, an appearance capable of deceiving even learned persons, is that possession has all but swallowed up ownership, and the rights of a possessor, or one entitled to possess, have all but monopolized the very name of property." Webb's Pollock on Torts 417. The same learned Judge, in comparing the status of owners in olden time and now, says that the owner in possession was protected against disturbance, but the rights of owner out of possession were obscure and weak. To this day it continues so with regard to chattels. For many purposes, the true owner of goods is the person and only the person, entitled to immediate possession." Ibid 416. This presumption of ownership theory that such possession is rightful assigned for this presumption are the principles of law to suppose until the contrary is shown, that possession is lawful rather than unlawful that since the rightful owners of property are not likely to consent that their property remain in the continued possession of others to the first point made in this case on the part of the defendant is, that the ownership alleged was not sufficiently proved, it was proved by the captain in the ordinary way, that the owners by whom as such, he was appointed and employed, were the persons in whom the ownership is by the declaration averred to be. And though it afterwards appeared by his answers on cross examination, that the ownership was devised to those persons under a bill of sale executed by himself as attorney to one Laurence Williams the former owner, it did not on that account become necessary for the plaintiffs to produce that bill of sale, or the ship's register, or to give any further proof of such of their property, the prima facie evidence of proof or title deeds on the necessary in support of de, in consequence of the adduction of some contrary proof on the other side" Robertson v French, 4 East, 150. In Jones v Williams, 2 M & W 326, Parke B. said: "Ownership may be proved by proof of possession, and that can be shown only by acts of enjoyment of the law itself." Possession, therefore, has a twofold value: it is evidence of ownership and in itself the foundation of a right to possession. Hori v Dhond, 8 Bom L R 96. Under this section, possession when long and continued upto a recent date, leads to a presumption of title. This section refers to the presumption to be made of ownership based on the circumstance of such possession, and allows the plaintiff with such prima facie title to claim a decree where no superior title is proved on the other side. Per Ranade J in Hanmantrao v Secretary of State, 2 Bom L R 1111-25 B 287; see also Ma In Lun v Ma In Hla, L B R (1893-1900), 85. Where there has been continued possession in assertion of a right, the right should be presumed to have lent a legal origin, if such a legal origin was possible and this presumption applies even if the alleged right in its inception rests on a foundation invalid in point of law and the Court will presume that the performance of all acts and the existence of all circumstances necessary to support the presumption are consistent with the law. Katagin A I R 1930 N 100. Possession under an unregistered instrument must be presumed to have had notice of such possession, and could not claim any priority over the unregistered instrument. Bhikhu Ras v Udu Naram, 25 A 366-4 W N 1903, 81. Under this section, possession short of the statutory period which may give a title by presumption, does not create a presumption of ownership, and shift the burden of proving title to the other side. Neither side can show title, the possession is not sufficient to create a presumption of ownership.

(U S) 109^u Burr Jones § 74. Possession affords prima facie presumption of ownership, for men generally own what they possess. Webb v Dob 7 L R 307. Thus it is sufficient to maintain trespass on real property against a wrong doer. Elliot v Kemp, 7 M & W 312. Porter v 295. "If a person is in actual possession show that at least C & P 5.

first dispossessed, can, after the summary relief under that section, rely in a regular suit for ejectment on s 110 of the Evidence Act. Haradhan v Isuar Das, 2 Pat L J 61-38 Ind Cas 797. Where nothing else is proved by the person in possession, he cannot maintain a suit for ejectment. Specific Relief Act when proved by limitation, rely in a regular suit for ejectment on s 110 of the Evidence Act. Haradhan v Isuar Das, 2 Pat L J 61-38 Ind Cas 797. Where nothing else is proved by the person in possession, he cannot maintain a suit for ejectment.

different object the (1900) 1 Ch 19, June 30, Phup Ev 7th Ed 103. Though section 110 of the Evidence Act recognizes a presumption that the person in possession also has a good title there is no corresponding section saying that the person with the title should be presumed to be in possession. Kashu Nath v Ganesh, 1923 Bom 361-77 Ind Cas 506. The presumption of a title is not a presumption of ownership. Nizam Din v Niram Din, 1919 A I R 1179. Where a person is in possession of property and he uses it for four months of every year for tethering his cattle, such possession is prima facie evidence of title, but Court should not say that the person's ownership is established. Kashichand v

Atmaram, 119 Ind Cas 701—A I II 1929 Nag 318 Prior peaceful possession is prima facie evidence of ownership under this section and is a good title against all persons except the true owner and can be relied on in successfully at another who has no title to the land in Cas 680 Possession acquired tortuously can show no better right 2 Green L

Possession, meaning of The word "possession" contemplated by this section is to be understood as opposed to juridical possession and to denote actual present possession Mi Lin Kin v Nga La, U B R 1905, Evidence, 7 Where the possession of a person is peaceable and obtained without ousting any property law Hanmantrao v Secretary of State, 2 Bom L R 1111—25 B 287 The mere length of possession by a mortgagor is not in all cases of itself sufficient to justify the Auar v Pir Balsh, A W present possession, and he prima facie evidence of This section means that Sambhasheo v Mahadeo, 10 N L R 189

the burden of proof will be shifted to the defendant to prove title to himself and his right to oust the plaintiff Mi Lin Kin v Nga La, U B R 1905, Evidence 7 There is no presumption that the property left by a person long deceased is part of undivided estate When land has been in the exclusive possession of others for a long period, the person asserting that it forms part of an undivided estate should be required to prove the fact Maung Lee Po v Maung Lee Gale, U B R (1897 1901) Vol II, 418 Where in a suit to eject the defendant from a house which had been in his possession for 5 years without interruption, on the ground that he first entered the premises temporarily with the permission of the plaintiff's father and the defendant in reply alleged a sale, the burden of proving permissive occupation clearly lay on the plaintiff

e out a title of his own.
 6) Vol II, 371 Where the wrongful dispossession of ion by defendant, and the held that the burden of proof lies on the plaintiff Maung Tun v Maung Pu U, U B R (1902 1903) Vol II, Evidence, 7 Where the question is whether any person is owner of any thing of which he is shown to be in possession, the burden of proving that he is not the owner is on the person who affirms that he is not the owner Ma Illa v Ma Thail U B R (1892 1896) Vol II, 377 There is a clear distinction as to the onus of proof between a case in which a plaintiff sues to obtain possession of land by redemption of a mortgage, and that in which the defence to a suit for possession of land is twelve years' adverse possession by the defendant In each case it is for the plaintiff to plead his title, and if that title is put in issue, he must make it out by at least prima facie evidence before the defendant can be put to proof of his defence In the second case, where the defence is twelve years' adverse possession the defendant must plead and make out the title he alleges, and thus show that the title of the plaintiff which otherwise had been proved or admitted was lost. Parmanand v Sahib Ali, 11 A 438.

Where plaintiff who averred that defendant had been in possession for over 20 years of certain land, and had regularly paid the government revenue thereon during that period as the registered holder of the land in the Shuggi's books, however, stated that during this period defendant had only been in permissive occupation, having rented the land from plaintiff without paying rent for it, the defendant on the other hand, while admitting that the land was originally owned by plaintiff asserted that plaintiff had sold the land out and out to him, and that he had been in adverse possession ever since for over 20 years, held that the burden of proof lay on plaintiff to establish her title and to show that a sale . . . it is in the registered book . . . which . . . rent . . . 100 . . . there . . . ent . . . 1 person seeking to oust another out of the possession of the landed property, to which the latter has already succeeded and in whose favour mutation of names has also been effected, after regular enquiry by a Revenue Officer, is bound in the first instance, to prove that his right is superior to that of his adversary Nasibulnissa v Mansoor Ali 120 P W R 1909=4 Ind Cas 965 Possession in prima facie evidence of title against the person in possession Krishna Iyer v Sreenivasulu Cas 121=33 M 173 This section lies on the party who is out of possession (1872 1892), 102 In a suit for possession where both parties deny previous possession are both denied, the plaintiff should still make out his title and in prima facie evidence of title and is primarily exclusive, and it is for him, who impugns this exclusive title, to show his own right Krishna Chetty v Chunder, 1 W Adjudhya v S 5 W R 218, 1892, 458, Laldas v Kashiram, 4 B H C A C 60, Pir Baksh v Jhanda, 151 P R 1892; Hassan v Farah, 121 P. R. 1892; Lachko v Har Sahai, 12 A. 46=A W. N 1888, 43 Maung Ya Bang v Ma Khin U B R (1892-1896) Vol II 234; Nga Shwe Yon v Nga Kang, L B R (1872 1892), 133, Ma Khin v Ram Persad, 6 B R L T 185=21 Ind Cas 333, Aslum v The Crown, 88 L R. 141=16 Cr L J 133=27 Ind Cas 202.

Where a person is in possession of land and another person claims to be the owner but does not produce any evidence to show that he is the owner, the person in possession is entitled to continue in possession and the burden of proof lies on the person claiming to be the owner.

is on him who alleged a disclaimer Brown v King 5 Metc 173 Where a person is proved to be the owner of personal property with the present right of possession, the presumption is that he continues to be owner with the right of possession, until there is evidence that he has parted with that ownership or right of possession and the mere fact that the property is in the possession of another, with his consent shift the burden of right of property of one person is she will not be adju! proof of its having distinctly become so, for every presumption is in favour of the possession continuing in the same subordination of title Lauson Pre Lt 210

What constitutes possession The acts of enjoyment from which the ownership of real property may be inferred are various, as for instance, the cutting of timber, the repairing of fences and banks, the perambulation of boundaries of a manor or parish, the taking of wreck on the foreshore and the granting to other of licences or leases under which possession is taken and held, also the receipts of rents from tenants of the property, for all these acts are fractions of that sum total of enjoyment which characterises dominium Hills Lt 60, see also Harbey v Conderoy (1912) A C 599 Doe v Arkwright, 5 C & P 575 St Leonards v Ashburner, 21 L T 593, Hoolway v Roule, 1 A & E 114 In cases of possession every act of enjoyment or possession is a relevant fact, since the right claimed is instituted by an indefinite number of acts of user exercised animo domini But inasmuch as such acts are more or less discontinuous in their character—and in the case of ancient rights the evidence of them is by lapse of time rendered even more so—the question for the tribunal is whether the acts proved are so numerous and so connected that the right of possession may be inferred from them If they are so frequent and of such a character as to constitute a continuous open claim it is exercise it, the mere discontinuity

Ibid Acts of possession and enjoyment of land as cutting timber, repairing hedges, granting leases etc may be evidence of ownership, not only of the particular piece or quantity of land with reference to which such acts are done reality or similarity of the other piece of rent constitutes a of jungle lands possession is presumed with the rightful owner Leelanund v Basheeroomissa 16 W R 102, Moochee Ram v Bissambher Roy, 24 W R 410, see also Munshi Maharaj v Bepari Singh A W N 234-3 A L J 567, Basanta Kumar Ray v Secretary of State 44 C 808

111. Where there is a question as to the good faith of a

Proof of good faith in transactions where one party is in relation of active confidence transaction between parties, one of whom stands to the other in a position of active confidence, the burden of proving the good faith of the transaction is on the party who is in a position of active confidence.

Illustrations

(a) The good faith of a sale by a client to an attorney is in question in a suit brought by the client The burden of proving the good faith of the transaction is on the attorney

(b) The good faith of a sale by a son just come of age to a father is in question in a suit brought by the son The burden of proving the good faith of the transaction is on the father

Principle In the ordinary transactions of life, fairness and honesty are presumed and conveyances, sales and contracts generally are presumed to have been made in good faith until the contrary appears Burr Jones Pt § 13 The allegation of bad faith is one which the plaintiff according to section 101 is bound to prove in contrast to the defendant. The plaintiff having been entirely in the hands of the defendant, would be destitute of the means of proving affirmatively the mala fides of the transaction whilst the defendant, in such a transaction, may fairly be subjected to the duty not only of dealing honestly but of preserving clear evidence that he has done so Mt 1 Pt 86 The broad principle on which the Court acts in cases of this description is that, wherever there exists such a confidence, of whatever character that confidence may be in a transaction between the fairest explanation and communication of every particular relating to the one who seeks to establish a contract with the person so trusting him. Per Page Woolf C in Tole v Williamson, 1 Pq at p 535

Scope of the section The rule is that the burden of proof is always upon the party alleging a fraud but there is one large class of cases which forms an important exception. When a question arises between a trustee and a beneficiary or between other parties who are in a fiduciary relation as to the good faith of transaction between them, a peculiar burden is imposed upon the one in whom the trust is reposed. When the complaining party proves such relation, the burden of proof is cast upon the trustee or other persons holding the relation of trust to show that the transaction is fair and reasonable and that it was entered into by the other party. To state the rule resulting takes place in a business transaction the person holding the influential position, the law presumes everything against the transaction and casts the burden of proof upon the person benefited to show that the confidential relation has been, as to that transaction at least suspended and that it was not fairly conducted as if between strangers. In equity, persons standing in certain relations to one another—such as parent and child, man and wife, attorney and client, confessor and penitent, guardian and ward—are subject to certain presumption when transactions between them are brought in question and if a gift or contract, made in favour of him who holds the position of influence, is impeached by him who is subject to that influence the Courts of equity cast upon the former the burden of proving that the transaction was fairly conducted as if between strangers, that the weaker was not unduly impressed by the natural influences of the stronger or the inexperienced overreached by him of mature intelligence. Per Lord Penance in Parfill v Larling L R 2 P & D 462 One of the most important requisites of the validity of these transactions between persons acting under the influence of these confidential relation is that the party presumably under the influence of the other should have had independent advice for a lawyer who is devoted entirely to the interest of the party he is called upon to advise, and in whom that party has entire confidence. Burr Jones § 180 In Rhodes v Bate L R 1 Ch App 257 Lord Justice Turner said "I take it to be a well established principle of this Court, that persons standing in a confidential relation towards others cannot entitle themselves to hold benefits which others may have conferred upon them unless they can show, to the satisfaction of the Court, that the person by whom the benefits have been conferred had competent and independent advice in conferring them." In other words every contract entered into by persons standing in such a relation is treated as being uberrimae fidei and may be vitiated by silence as to matters which one of two independent parties making a similar contract would be in no way bound to communicate to the other nor does it matter whether the omission is deliberate, or proceeds from mere error of judgment or inadvertence. Malony v Kernan, 1 Dr & Wat p 29 The mere fact that the mortgagee was a money lender and that the mortgage was executed for funds advanced during a litigation on behalf of the mortgagor, is not sufficient to create such a relation of active confidence between the mortgagor and mortgagee as to throw the burden of proof good faith under section 111 of the Evidence Act, on the mortgagee Thakurdas v Jai Raj Singh, 26 A 120 (P C) = 31 I A 46 = 8 C W N 569 Persons taking a benefit from another over whom they stand in a position of commanding influence, must take upon themselves Portab Bahadur v Shcoraj, 1 O C W N 1903 70 To prove stands, in a fiduciary relationship to the other, it is certainly not necessary to prove that all the accounts on which the contract is based are correct Shamulthone Dutt v Sunita Bala 12 C W N 1102 = 36 C 493

Position of active confidence : The words "active confidence" indicate that the relationship between the parties must be such that one is bound to protect the interests of the other. This is the case between father and son, where the son is just come of age, and between legal practitioner and his client. Markby Ev p 86 Sub-sections (2) & (3) of section 16 of the Indian Contract Act, run as follows : (2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing principle a person is deemed to be in a position to dominate the will of another—(a) where he holds a real or apparent authority over the other, or where he stands in a fiduciary relation to the other, or where he makes a contract with a person whose mental capacity is temporarily or permanently affected by reason of age, illness or mental or bodily distress. (3) Where a person who is in a position to dominate the will of another—is in a position to exercise its influence in the particular case is presumed. But again, this habitual influence may itself be presumed any of these suspected relations, as they may be called, to be in a position of commanding influence over those from whom they take a benefit. In either case they are called upon to rebut the presumption that the particular benefit was procured by the exertion of that influence and was not given with due freedom and deliberation. They must take upon themselves the whole proof that the thing is righteous. (Gibson v Jesyes (1801) 6 Ves 266 276) A stringent rule of law

(1806)

in such

by one and the influence which naturally grows out of that confidence is possessed by the other and this confidence is abused or the influence is exerted to obtain an advantage at the expense of the confiding party the person so availing himself of his position will not be permitted to retain the advantage, although the transaction had existed long asserted and who are placed in have influence over them by which acts the person having such influence obtains any benefit by himself in each transaction. L R 7 Ch 329 (Hatch 9)

'Position implies lawful relation See Horsgreave v Everard 6 Ir Eq

1. Vess 285 and adopted by Lord Cottenham in Dent v. Bunnell, 1 My & Cr 23 (277); Bullage v. Southey, 2 H. 331, 510; Pollock's Contract p 53. In Parfitt v. Lauley, L. R. 2 P. & D. 462 Lord Penzance, laid down that such position includes the positions of a parent and child, man and wife, doctor and patient, attorney and client, confessor and penitent, and guardian and ward. But the list is by no means exhaustive. His lordship added to the list of suspected relations that of promoters of a company to the company which is their creature Erlander v. New Sombrero Phosphate Co 3 App. Cas. at p 1230. But the soundness of this decision is doubted by Sir Frederick Pollock. He says: "The present doctrine is applicable? . . . in a promoter between them and the company was a fair one? cf. Owen v. The Great Eastern Railway Ltd and Lighth Co., (1889) 23 Q. B. D. 568-58 L. J. Q. B. 519, where the duty is put on the ground of agency." So this section refers to transactions between attorney and client, doctor and patient, guardian and ward, trustee and cest que trust, spiritual advisers and those whom they advise, wherever in fact a real or apparent authority is calculated to give one party to the transaction the means of dictating terms to and robbing the other party of perfect freedom of will. Huguenin v. Baseley, 2 W. & T. L. C. 597, Cum Contract, 6. . . . in fact the Court is not bound by authority which the Court judges to be influence founded on the confidence exists, or to require such proof thereof. It may think fit. In the absence of any special relation from which such influence is presumed, the burden of proof is on the person impeaching the transaction and he must show affirmatively that pressure or undue influence was employed. Blackie v. Clerk, 15 Beav. 595, Toker v. Toker, 31 Beav. 629; Pollock on Contract, 581. To treat undue influence as having been established by proof of the relations of the parties having been such that the one naturally relied upon the other for advice and the other the will of the first in giving it, is erroneous. it must be further established that a person in a sed the position to obtain unfair advantage for himself and so as to cause injury to the person relying upon his authority or aid. Fayyaz uddin v. Kutabuddin, 10 Lah. 761-30 P. L. R. 288-116 Ind. Cas. 899-A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 309. Where the donee is in active confidence burden of proof of good faith of the gift is on the donee even if the donor is not a purdanasheen lady. Fithal v. Narayan, 31 L. W. 471-61 M. L. J. 878.

Relation of confidence is presumed to continue. "Where a relation of confidence is once established, either some positive act or some complete case of abandonment must be shown in order to determine it" it will not be considered as determined whilst the influence derived from it can reasonably be supposed to remain. Per Turner L. J. in Rhodes v. Bate, (1866) 1 Ch. 252, 257, 260-30 L. J. 267; Holman v. Loyne, 4 D. M. G. 270. Where the influence has its inception in the legal authority of a parent or guardian, it is presumed to continue for sometime after the termination of the legal authority, until there is what may be called a complete emancipation, so that a free and unfettered judgment may be formed independent of any sort of control. Archer v. Hind on various that without s. said that as a e authority before of course does not at time Pollock's

Contract p 587.

Agent. It is possible for an agent dealing directly with his principal to make a contract which the Courts will uphold, but such transactions, to be maintained, must be characterised by the utmost good faith. There must be no misrepresentation, and an entire absence of concertment or suppression of any fact within the knowledge of the agent, which might influence the principal, and the burden of establishing the perfect fairness of the contract, in such cases, rests upon the agent. Such transactions are never upheld, unless it is clearly shown that there has been, on the part of the person trusted, that most marked integrity, that uberrime fides, which removes all doubts respecting the fairness of the contract. Condit v. Blackwell, 92 N. J. Eq. 481 (Am.); Ex parte Lacey, 11 Ves. 625; Brookman v. Rothschild, 3 Sim. 153; Rothschild v. Brookman, 2 D. & C. 100; Phul Chand v. Lalji, 25 A. 358-23 3 B. L. R. 127-21 W. II 340-11 A 1 L. II O. C. 31, Wajed Khan v. Pushong v. Moonia, 10 W. R. 129

Parer with his naturally when the circumstances are such that the former assumes a fiduciary relation. In the case of a child's gift of its property to a parent, the circumstances attending the transaction should be vigilantly and carefully scrutinized by the Court, in order to ascertain whether there has been undue influence in procuring it; but it cannot be deemed prima facie void; the presumption is in favour of its validity; and, in order to set it aside the Court must be satisfied that it was not the voluntary act of the donor. Burr Jones § 190. In the case of a conveyance by a child to its parent, just after attaining majority the burden is upon the parent to show, in the clearest, and most satisfactory manner that it is in every particular worthy of receiving the sanction of a Court of Equity. Burr Jones § 190, Branbridge v. Brown, L. R. 18 Ch. D. 188; Wright v. Vanderplank, 25 L. J. Ch. 753; Hartopp v. Hartopp, 25 L. J. Ch. 471, Denisdale v. Denisdale, 25 L. J. Ch. 806, Bury v. Oppenheim, 26 Beav. 694; Potts v. Bury, 21 D. & C. 142. With regard to the application of the rule to the case of a applicable in cases of persons in loco parentis such as uncle 'in loco parentis and niece (Vide Archer v. Hodson, 7 Beav. 551; Maitland v. Irving, 15 Sim. 487) step-father in loco parentis and step-daughter (Kempson v. Ashbee, 10 Ch. 15, Pace v. Pace, 7 L. J. Ch. 260). As regards the application of the rule to the case of a donee (e.g.) father, to advise the donor (son), or even to manage his property on his behalf, the burden of proving undue influence is on him. Lakshmi v. Lakshmi

Husband and wife From the confidential relations which exist between husband and wife, a presumption of undue influence arises in relation to any transfer of property between them, and in order to sustain a conveyance or gift by the wife to the husband, the burden of proof is upon him to show that the transaction is fair and proper. Omnia, 11 M. I. A. Najban, 20 A. 417, 20 Beav. 521, relation between husband and wife, the husband is in a position of influence over the wife. In such a case, the burden of proving good faith is on him. To uphold the transaction, it must be shown she was given that care and advice which was due to her in her situation. Duarka Prasad v. Nasir Ahmed, 11 O. L. J. 219-78 Ind. Cas. 850-1925 Oudh. 16. Where the vendor had been living separately and was not under the vendee's influence the rule as to burden of proof in section 111, does not apply. Jai Lal v. Sheo Chand, 6 Lah. L. J. 408-85 Ind. Cas. 293-A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 123

Spiritual adviser According to the English law spiritual influence would be presumed between a clergyman and any person placing confidence in him. Dent v. Bennett, 7 Sim. at p. 564, see also Nottidge v. Prince, 29 L. J. Ch. 857;

1. Ves 287 and adopted by Lord Cottenham in Dent v Bonnell, 1 My & Cr 277, Billage v Southree, 2 Ha 531, 540; Pollock's Contract p 653. In Parfitt v Lawless, L R 2 P & D 162 it includes the positions of a parent and attorney and client, confessor and . . . list is by no means exhaustive. It includes relations that of promoters of a company to the company and their creature. Erlanger v New Sombrero Phosphate Co 3 App Cr at p 1230. But the soundness of this decision is doubted by Sir Frederick Pollock. He says "But is not personal confidence essential to make the present doctrine applicable? And has any case gone the length of casting in a promoter the burden of proving in the first instance that a contract between them and the company was a fair one? Cf. Eden v. Mid-dale's Railway Locomotive and Lighting Co. (1859) 23 Q B D. 368-58 L J. Q B 512, where the duty is put on the ground of agency". So this action rests on transactions between attorney and client, doctor and patient, guardian and ward, trustee and cest que trust, spiritual advisers and those whom they advise, wherever in fact a real or apparent authority is calculated to give one party to the transaction the means of dictating terms to and robbing the other party of perfect freedom of will. Huguennu v Barely, 2 W & T L C 537, Cum Contract, 69. As to certain well known relations, indeed, the Court . . . an influence . . . of as it may think fit. In the absence of any special relation from which such influence is presumed, the burden of proof is on the person impeaching the transaction and he must show affirmatively that pressure or undue influence was employed. Blackie v Clerk, 15 Beav 595, Toler v Toker, 31 Beav 629; Pollock's Contract, 531. To treat undue influence as having been established by proof of the relations of the parties having been such that the one naturally relied upon the other for advice and the other was in a position to dominate the will of the first in giving it, is erroneous. That merely proves influence. It must be further established that a person in a position of domination has used the position to obtain unfair advantage for himself and so as to cause injury to the person relying upon his authority or aid. Fayyaz uddin v Kutabuddin, 10 Lah 761-30 P L R 288-116 Ind Cas 899-A I R 1927 Lah 369. Where the donee is in active confidence burden of proof of good faith of the gift is on the donee even if the donor is not a purdahshin lady. Pithal v. Narayan, 34 L W 424-61 M L J 878.

Relation of confidence is presumed to continue. "Where a relation of confidence is once established, either some new act or some complete case of . . . it will not be considered . . . reasonably be supposed . . . 1 Ch 252, 257, 260-83. . . the influence has its inception in the legal authority of a parent or guardian, it is presumed to continue for sometime after the termination of the legal authority, until there is what may be called a complete emancipation, so that a free and unfettered . . . Archer v. Rudon . . . ous that without . . . said that as a . . . authority before . . . f course does not . . . t time Pollock's

Agent. It is possible for an agent to make a contract which the Courts maintained, must be characterised by no misrepresentation, and an entire absence of concealment or suppression of fact within the knowledge of the agent, which might influence the principal and the burden of establishing the perfect fairness of the contract, in such cases rests upon the agent. Such transactions are never upheld, unless it is clearly shown that there has been, on the part of the person trusted, that most marked

. . . principal to be . . . must be . . . of any . . . principal and question and section 111 of the Evidence Act applies Surat Singh v Daldeo, S. 8 N. L. R 150.

Medical attendant and patients The rule applicable to a transaction 603, Pratt v Barker, 1 Sim 1.

gift sued the son
the deceased donor
could be seen that was very intimate with him and had sent money, and the son had not only disinherited his son and his wife but he stripped himself of all the property he was possessed Held that the donor's son had merely to prove that the donee was in a position to dominate the will of the aged donor and that the gift was unconscionable and by so doing he was able to shift the onus of proving good faith on to the shoulder of the donee Safdar Ali v Nur Mahomed, A. I. R 1930 Sinl 25 underlying this section high undue influence

Anderson v Weatherill, Parfit v Laurels,
C 849 In Venkata-
C 849 Ind
Wills and of proof
having been use of gifts
might be

mer
the
to
the its inc
inf
other matters or transactions But the principle must not be carried too far When a jury sees that, at and near the time when the Will sought to be impeached was executed, the alleged testator was, in other important transactions so under the influence of the persons benefited by the Will, as to them, he was not a f
such as f directly influenc
H L. C 6

influence is presumed to have been exerted unless the contrary is shown It is therefore, in all dealings with those persons who are so situated, always incumbent on the person who is interested in upholding the transactions to show that its terms are fair and equitable The most usual mode of discharging this onus is to show that the lady had good independent advice in the matter, and note 1 therein altogether at arm's length from the other contracting party and in the absence of such proof, the transaction would be set aside. Bibee I Kh v Shaila Kh 22 W R 443, Kanailal v Kamini 1 B L R O C 31 N, Jogannam v Gangaiah 9 W R 297, Taloor Din v Awarab Sjed, 21 W P 210 P C 13 B L R P C 427. Where a person seeks to bind a purdanashin by a document alleged to have been executed by her on her behalf by a third person on clear and strict proof of the agent's authority must be given. It is incumbent on the Court, when dealing with the disposition of her property by a purdanashin woman to be satisfied that the transaction was explained to her and that she knew what she was doing and especially in a case where for no consideration and without any deprive her of all her property

81 see also Furthums v

Bu loor v Stamsonni sa 11 M I A 551, Panna Lal v Bamasundari 6 B L R 732, Iam Ier let v Rince Hoohttee 7 W R 99; Hasanalli v P 27 Bom I R 184-86 Ind Cys 896, Deo Kuor v Man Kuor, 17 A 1, A hhaar Kuor v Thal ur Dis 17 A 125-A W N 1895 24

To charge a purdanashin woman upon an instrument alleged to have been executed by her it is necessary that satisfactory evidence should be given that the document was explained to and understood by her. Sudhistal v Solors 8 C 215-8 I A 39 (P C), Annala v Bhuban 29 C 516 (P C)=23 I A 71-5 C W N 499-11 M L J 164-9 Bom L R 386; Shandati v Jogo Bbi 29 C 710 (P C)=29 I A 127-C C W N 682-4 Bom L R 444, Kubra v Ajothia 7 A L J 115-6 Ind Cys 699, Muhammad Ali v Ram-an 24 C W N 977 (P C), Hasanalli v Rupulla 27 Bom L R 181-86 Ind Cys 896, Blagual v Choh 2 Jh L J 689, Annada v Bhuban 3 Bom L R 36, Amirbai v Al lul 3 Bom L R 658, Man Singh v Nauall bah, 2 Pit 601=73 Ind Cys 892, Muhammad Shafi v kalsuri Di, 4 Lah 467, Bholana h v Bhutnath 40 C L J 393.

The Court when dealing with a deed alleged to have been executed by a purdanashin lady must before it gives effect to it satisfy itself first that the deed was actually executed by her or by some person duly authorized by her that he notes that those who rely upon documents executed by purdanashin ladies should satisfy the Court that they had been explained to and understood by those who executed them. Bindubasini v Giridhari, 3 Ind Cys 330-1 P C L J 115, Samsuddi v Abdul 8 Bom L R 781-31 B 165, Debroos Banoo v Nurib Sjed, 15 B L R 167-23 W R 453, Sivthri v Vasudevan, 3 M 215, Phundo v Bisra A W N 1883 246, Marian Bibi v Sakina, 14 A 8-A W N 1891, 213. Where it is proved that the lady was of business habits was literate and of considerable intellectual capacity the Court will be less inclined to interfere with the deeds which have been prima facie properly executed or to interfere with transactions to which her consent had been deliberately given. Bindubasini v Giridhari, 12 C L J 115=3 Ind Cys 330 see also Thirathman v Gunyswari 96 Ind Cys 571-1906 P 529. Transactions with a purdanashin widow should not be enforced unless they are strictly fair and equitable. Attahour v Bhoiraj 3 C P L R 118. In a transaction with a Mahomedan purda lady it is the duty of the plaintiffs to show that they were free agents in the matter, and having a clear knowledge of what they were doing accorded their consent to it. Behari Lal v Habiba Bibi 8 A 767-A W N 1886 91 see also Ram Chunder Dutt v Duarkanath 16 C 330, Sunder Koomatee v Keshores Lal 5 W R 246. Where a person claims under a deed of sale alleged to have been executed by a purdanashin lady living apart from her relations without those natural advisers who would under ordinary circumstances help her with their counsel and especially where the person profiting by the transaction occupied a position of confidence he ought to give the lady B L R 5=29 I al v The puttee 7 nuktair, at an exorbitant rate of interest, the security being ample, appears to be a hard and unconscionable bargain on which the contract for such rate of interest would not be enforced. Kamini Sundari v Kali Prasanna, 12 C 225=12 I A. 215 (P C) Party relying on a deed executed by a pardanashin lady must prove that it was taken with full knowledge. Ali v Rabi Begum, 95 Ind Cas 506=A I R. always be careful to see that deeds taken fairly taken that the party int she was about the pardanashin V N 1133 The protection which the law throws around a pardanashin lady in respect of deeds executed by her demands that the burden of proof shall rest, not with those who attack, but with those who found upon the deed, and the proof must go so far as to show affirmatively and conclusively and that the deed was not only executed by, but was explained to and was really understood by the grantor. It must also be established that the deed was not signed under duress but also from the free and independent will of the grantor. Kali Bakshi v Rungopal, 18 C W N 282=(1911) M W N 112=16 O C 371=19 C L J 172 (P C), see also Keshub v. Kailha, 17 C W N 991=20 Ind Cas 717, Kaminee v Krishna, 16 C W N 649=39 C 933=16 Ind Cas 110, Sharukh v Shro Prasad 41 Ind. Cas 435, Mariam Bibi v Shauk Mahommed Ibrahim, 28 C L J 306=48 Ind Cas 561, Kailash Chandra v Latifannessa, 51 Ind Cas 556 In order to enforce a document executed by a pardanashin lady all that is necessary is to convince the Court that the transaction was a fair one and that the lady understood the act to which she was subscribing. Bhaquati v Choti, 2 Lab L J 689=55 Ind. Cas 636; see also Motilal Das v The Eastern Mortgage and Agency Co Ltd, 25 C W N 265=47 I A 265 (P C), Kamauati v Digbijai Singh, 43 A 525=15 L W 1=48 I A 381 (P C) The Court when called upon to deal with a deed executed by a pardanashin lady, must satisfy itself upon the evidence, first that the deed was actually executed by her or by some person duly authorized; secondly, that she was about to do; and thirdly, that the transaction was had independent and competent approval, it simply means that the advice shall be removed entirely from the suspected atmosphere and conveyed from the clear language of an independent mind, free from that taint of interest, and the party acting should know precisely the nature and consequences of the transaction. It is not an inflexible rule that a pardanashin lady must have independent legal declaration by the transferor, a pardanashin lady subsequently made, that she had not understood what she was doing obviously is not in itself conclusive. It must be a question whether, having regard to the proved personality of the lady, it has been established that the transaction was fair. If the answer is in the affirmative, the onus which rests on them. Of course matters Birlat Unnasa L 693=25 A L J 311-8 Pn who takes a document from a pardanashin lady is bound to prove the validity of the document from every possible angle of attack, when the bonafides of the document are challenged. Kalamjan Bala v Sahajan Bala, 117 Ind Cas 799= A I R 1926 Pn 529; Ram Sumran v. Gobinda Das, 5 P 616= A I R 1926 P 582.

112 The fact that any person was born during the continuance of valid marriage between his mother and any man, or within two hundred and eighty days after its dissolution, the mother remaining unmarried, shall be conclusive proof that he is the legitimate son of that man unless it can be shown that the parties to the marriage had no access to each other at any time when he could have been begotten.

Principle "The legal presumption that he is the father whom the nuptials show to be so, is the foundation of every man's birth and status. It is a plain and sensible maxim which is the corner stone, the very foundation on which rests the whole fabric of human society; and if you allow it once to be shaken there is no saying what consequences may follow." Rutledge v Curdthorpe Nicholas Adlt Birt. 161, Lawson Pre Ct 141, "Maternity admits of positive proof, but paternity is a matter of inference because the connection of a child with its father is secret, but it may be established by a substantial fact (bed) that is, a legally constituted relation between him and the mother of the child."

Origin and growth of the rule In accordance with the maxim pater est quem nuptiae demonstrant (he is the father whom the marriage indicates) the rule is the same where the child is born in wedlock, whether begotten before or after the marriage. Garner, 2 App Cas 723, 723. By the ancient common law, if the husband was within the four seas at any time during the pregnancy of the wife, the presumption was conclusive that her children were legitimate. R v Murray 1 Salk 122; R v Allerton, 1 Ld Ray 123, Lawson Pre Ct 141. In the case of Allen de Martone v Simon, the son of Gullan (1301) Y. B. 32 & 33 Edw 1 p 1.

child born established
he may conclusive
a man upon his
a motives of
in the peril
ried that in e, although during the
; while in

bastard, because of the strictness and refused—except in the case of natural impossibility—to make any enquiry into the paternity of a child whose mother's husband was within the realm. In Fletcherham v Julian, Year Book, 7 Hen IV 9, decided in the seventh year of the rei ful mi in the upon a of its a v. Per decided that the presumption could be rebutted by other proof. In 1807, Lord Ellenborough laid it down that the illegitimacy of the child might be shown where the legitimacy was impossible, in the five cases, (1) where the impossibility arose from the husband being under the age of puberty. In a case in the Year Books it was held that the issue was a bastard where the husband was under fourteen the impossibility arose from the husband by natural infirmity. In Ivrcraft's Case a man was married in that state twelve weeks child was adjudged illegitimate. (3) W length of time elapsed since the death of sibility arose from the absence of the husband—as where he was outside the realm at the time the child was begotten (R v Allerton, 1 Le Roy, 395; R v Maidstone, 12 East 550). (5) Where the impossibility was based on the laws of nature. In Perdrell v Perdrell & Stearns 4 Cr 1 was held that it was necessary to show and wife, after 1 and he going to St born. The evidence being strong that the husband had not visited the wife during that time, the presumption of the legitimacy of the child was held to be overthrown, and he was declared to be illegitimate. Goodright v Saul, 4 Term Rep 358

In Horgrate v Horgrate, 9 Beav 255, Lord Langdale laid it down that the presumption that a child born of a married woman is legitimate may be rebutted by showing that the husband was (1) incompetent; (2) entirely absent, so as to have no intercourse or communication of any kind with the mother, (3) entirely absent at the period during which the child must in the course of nature have been begotten, (4) only present under circumstances affording clear and satisfactory

House of 1 Case, 1 Sim husband no intercourse unsatisfactory take to the modern English law in concise language the ancient policy of the law of doubt may be excluded from other circumstances, although the husband be within the four seas, the modern practice permits the introduction of every other question of fact, when you answering a presumption it may be answered by any evidence that is appropriate to the issue."

Under this section, there is conclusive presumption that a child born during the continuance of a valid marriage is a legitimate issue of parents no matter how soon the birth be after the marriage. Umra v Muhammad Hayat, 79 P R 1907. Under this section, the onus is on the claimants to prove that he was born within 280 days after the death of his father and the burden of proving non-access between his mother and father is upon those who deny his legitimacy. Narendra Nath v Ram Gobind 29 C 111 P C = 29 I A 17 = 6 C W N 146 = 4 Bom L R 213. It is a peculiarity of the English law that it does not concern itself with the conception, but considers a child legitimate, who is born of parents married before the time of his birth, though they were unmarried, when he was begotten. That peculiarity of the English law has been imported into India by this section. Muhammad v. Muhammad, 10 A 289. The legal presumption as to paternity raised by the section of the Evidence Act is applicable only to the off-spring of a married couple. Gopalaswami v Arunachalam, 27 M 32. Where the husband charged his wife with having committed adultery and prayed for dissolution of marriage and where the charge of adultery rested on the bare fact that she gave birth to a child 330 days or 333 days after the date when petitioner had last access to her. Held that, though, under the circumstances, very considerable doubt is thrown upon the honesty and truth of the wife's assertion that the petitioner was the father of the child, Courts are not justified in the absence of any other evidence, v Gatham, 27 M L J 580 = 16 M L T 50. According to English law a child and Hethe nine months Gopi, A I R Bhasson v (P C) = 123 consider and act upon the opinion of experts contained in treatises to which it is referred. John Howe v Charlotte Howe, 25 M L J 54 = 14 M L J 447 = 1913 M W N 983 (F B). Where a boy was born about seven months after his father and mother were lawfully married and it was not disputed that they

Jai Singh v Jagir Lal v Palani 49 M 533 = A I 1923 and the wife was living 1924 held that this section need, to disprove legitimacy,

2

Had no access to each other now proved. In this section it should be remembered that the words "access" and "non access" mean the existence or non existence of opportunities for sexual intercourse. Banbury Perrage, 1 Sim & Sta 179, 5 CL & F 250. In the above case Lord Eldon said: "Lord Hale in Hosyell v Collins, decided that the issue for the jury was as to the fact of access, or as I understand it, the question is of a reference to the of the word but result, namely, the procreation of children. By access I mean opportunity of having sexual intercourse." Per Alderson B in Cope v Cope, 1 M & R 275. "Access is such access as affords an opportunity of sexual intercourse." Bury v Philpot, 2 M & K 349. Lord Longdale in one case calls it "generative access" saying "The absence of sexual intercourse, where there has been some society, intercourse, or access has been called 'non generating access'." Hargrave v Hargrave, 9 Beav 225. In R v. Inhabitants of Mansfield, 1 Q B 444 it appeared that a wife was deserted by her husband, who went to live with another woman, that the wife at the end of three or four years married another man and had two children, that eleven years after the second marriage she again co-habited with her husband. It not appearing where the husband was between the time of his deserting and returning to his wife, it was held that the evidence was insufficient to show non access when the children were begotten. "The question is" said Lord Denman, "whether in this case there be any evidence of illegitimacy, and to establish that it is necessary to show non access of the husband. That may be proved by circumstances, one of which certainly is an adulterous intercourse between the husband or wife and another party. But here the whole proof consists only of that fact. We are not told what the husband was doing or where residing at the time the children were begotten." In Bury v Philpot, 2 M & K 349, the wife of P left him and went to live with her father. Shortly after, her father dying, she formed a connection with one H, with whom she went to live. P took a house opposite where they resided and had frequent interviews with her. She had two children during this time. It was held that they must be declared legitimate. "Access" said the Master, "is such access as affords an opportunity of sexual intercourse, and where the fact of such access between a husband and wife within a period capable of raising the legal inference as to the legitimacy of an after born child is not disputed, it were proved that she slept every night with her paramour from the period of her separation from her husband, I must still declare the children to be legitimate. The interest of the public depends upon a strict adherence to the rule of law." In Van Aernam v Van Aernam, 1 Barb Ch 375, the wife of the plaintiff was found to have been in adultery with another man. The court held that the presumption of sexual intercourse is very strong. Ploices v Berry, 31 J Ch 680. In that case B was married in 1829, became a lunatic in 1833, and was confined in a lunatic asylum until his death. His wife, who lived twenty five miles away, occasionally visited her husband, but the keepers of the asylum had strict orders not to allow them at any time to remain alone together. He was presumption of sexual intercourse is very strong. Ploices v Berry, 31 J Ch 680. In that case B was married in 1829, became a lunatic in 1833, and was confined in a lunatic asylum until his death. His wife, who lived twenty five miles away, occasionally visited her husband, but the keepers of the asylum had strict orders not to allow them at any time to remain alone together. He was

Russell v Russell, (1924) P 1
the fact of sexual intercourse fact of meeting, and, therefore, of sexual

But proof of access is not conclusive R. v Inhabitants of Winstfield, 1 Q B 441, Cope v Cope 1 M & Rob 275, R. v Shepherd, 6 Bing 283, Pandaya v Pali, 1 M H C 478 for sexual intercourse had existed—house—and the fact itself not being the presumption that it did take place four walls, and the fact of sexual testimony, but by circumstantial evidence raising a strong presumption against the fact. To state this principle briefly—the proof of sexual intercourse being conclusive, the presumption cannot be attached, but the evidence by which such fact is to be established may be contradicted. The law is not so unreasonable minute

If such founded
re El

that the suit was governed by s 112 Evidence Act, and the burden of proof was on the plaintiff Pirlok Nath v Lachmin, 25 A 403 (P C) = 7 C W N 617 =
5 Bom L R 474 = 30 I A 142

A sues B, his father, and C the adopted son of B, for partition. B disowned a long been co
no son
tenance, and B met it by bringing one for restitution of conjugal rights, and became reconciled to each other though she lived in her mother's house the first wife settlement in id, that (1) in the meaning of s 14 of the F

fidelity and produc
legitimacy must in (1911) 1 M W N
of a person born
and any man, it

marriage had no access to each other at any time when he could have been begotten Delipa v Rela, 49 P L R 1914 = 23 Ind Cas 409. The pre-

Cope v Cope, 1 M. & Rob 276; Atchley v Spragg, 33 L. J. Ch 315; Stevens v S. Moss, 2 Cowp 591; nor of opportunities for access (R v A Cross v Cross, 3 Paige, 139), or had not access or opportunity.

King v Inhabitants of Somton, 5 Ad & Ill 180, Russell v Russell, (1924) A C 687. Sir James F. James Stephen says: "Neither the mother nor the husband is a competent course with."

to be relevant whether the mother or her husband in applications for affiliation orders of the husband at any time when the wife may give evidence as to the person by whom it was begotten. Steph Dig Fr Art 98 are also R v Luffe, 8 East 207; Cope v Cope, 1 M & R 272 4; Legge v Filmonds, 25 L. J. Eq 125 (135), It v Mansfield, 1 Q B 444; Morris v Davies, 3 C & P 215, Haues v Draeger, L. R 23 Ch D 173. But a deposition of the husband is admissible to prove that he had never sexual intercourse with his wife before the marriage. The Poulett Peerage, 1000 A C 227. C said: "I shall submit to properly admissible. There was and and wife were within the four years you must presume that there was intercourse, and that you could not possibly contradict it. I think that idea is completely exploded. The question is to be treated as a question of fact, and, like every other question of fact when you are answering a presumption it may be answered by any evidence that is appropriate to the issue. My lords that is not exactly the question which arises upon the objection taken here. The question is whether it is possible for a husband to be asked whether he had intercourse before marriage with the woman who afterwards became his wife. I confess I shall be startled if I thought that that which appears to have been in the mind of Sir John Romilly (vide Anon v Anon, 22 Beav 481; 23 Beav 278) at the time he gave the decision referred to could be held to be the law of England. Is it conceivable that a man taking to wife a person whom he imagined to be a pure virgin, and finding out that he had been deceived and that the woman was pregnant when he married her should not be at liberty to say afterwards that, so far as he was concerned, he had every reason to believe that she was not a virgin, having spurious issues put upon him he should not be at liberty to say, "I never had intercourse with my wife before marriage"? The testimony of the parents that they have or have not had connection has on the same grounds of decency, morality, and policy—been, until recent times, uniformly rejected by the Judges. Taylor § 950. But the rule is otherwise under this section. So in India a married woman can be examined as to non access of her husband during her married life, without independent evidence being first offered to prove the legitimacy of her children. Roxaris v Ingles 18 B 468, see also John Haues v Charlotte Haues, 38 M 466; Bai Kamala v Babu Bhai 9 J Ind Cas 834=28 Bom L R 607; Parbati v Maharaj, 10 Ind Cas 188. In Premchand Harn v Ra Gahel A I R 1927 Bom 504 D. 1 " "

"Having laid down by effect that intercourse & divorce suit Charu v Ma 10 Ind Ca

(F B) The law of England is that the declarations of a father or mother cannot be admitted to bastardise the issue born after the marriage. The Evidence Act does not contain any such rule. Bai Kamala v Babu Bhai 28 Bom L R 607=A I R 1926 Bom 348

Proof of marriage. It is upon the person who claims to be the legitimate issue of his parents to bring forward satisfactory evidence in support of their marriage. In such case no certain inference can be drawn from the evidence as to the conduct of relations and friends. Thakur Anjal v Narab Ali Khan,

2. 9 Bom L R 264=5 C L J 1=17 M L J 56 It is a well recognised rule of law that when a particular relationship is shown to exist, such as marriage, for the purpose of s 112 divorce of the plaintiff from relying on the section show when the divorce took place. If the defendants are unable to show that the divorce took place at a time which excludes the plaintiff from the operation of s 112 then the conclusive proof in favour of the plaintiff arises and can only be displaced by its being shown that the parties to the marriage had no access to each other at any time when the plaintiff could have been begotten by the husband of his mother Bluna v Dhudapp applicable in any way to a marriage which is valid but is fasid, a division of marriages merely be applicable to Mahomedan void ab initio fasid and valid. In any case, it is held that the word 'valid' in that section should be construed as 'lawful' so that the presumption would not apply to fasid marriages Kamru v Hasan Ahmad, A I R 1926 Oudh 231=92 Ind Cas 82 in order to render a take place after L R 115 (1873)

P C

Question of legitimacy is question of evidence The question of a child's paternity is not one of succession, of any religious institution or usage within the meaning of s 112. Tin v Michon, U B R (1914) Where the point of decision is would be governed by s 112 and not by the personal law of the parties Ibid

Mahomedan Law The section proceeds upon adopting the period of birth as the point of legitimacy, but unless the date of the birth is referred to the date of the Alqadad months. A remarriage between a husband and his death, but second husband, is to be considered legitimate under s 112 of the Indian Act. Alqadad happening within three months of the expiry of three months after the death of her first husband. In the Indian the death of the husband, is a question to be determined Mazhar Ali v Budh Singh, 7 by this Act legitimacy can be legitimate under s 112 of the Sobrab 15 babad High Hizra v idha Singh L J 713, 721 The meaning of s 2, Mahomedan Law within the rule of the Indian

7 A 291 (F B), 1 Sibt Mahamed v rule of Mahomedan meaning of s 2, Mahomedan Law

Bibi v. Churagh Din, A I R 1930 Lsh 97, see also Muhammad v. Ali Baksh, 76 P. II 1891, Hajira v. Amina, A I R 1923 All 570

Presumption of legitimacy Where a party admits the paternity of the other party but pleads that he is not the father, the presumption is in favour of legitimacy the being in favour of legitimacy the to prove it Dulari Singh v.

1 practical purposes of, while the order is of proving access

Ma Mya v. Ma Shue Ban, 46 Ind Cas 620 Before a presumption of legitimacy can arise under this section all the facts specified in the section must be proved Maroti v. Illahi, 69 Ind Cas 465 Where plaintiff claims to recover property as the son of B by his lawfully married wife D and defendant denies that D ever gave birth to a child, and sets up that plaintiff is the son of one E the onus of proof is on the plaintiff to show that D gave birth to him or to any child before invoking the presumption under s 113 Rao Nar Singh v. Batimaha, 44 A. 470-20 A L J 271-66 Ind Cas 902 There is no presumption in favour 696 The presumption that a particular woman has passed the age of child-bearing is or by the light of general knowledge and partly l son in question It has several times been of fifty-three years has been passed, but each case must depend on its particular circumstances Haynas v. Haynas, 80 L J Ch 303, Re White (1901) 1 Ch 570; Hills Ev 2nd Ed 57; Widow's Trust, L R 11 Eq 403, In re Millner's Estate L R 14 Eq 245, Davidson v. Hampton, 18 Ch D 213, Lyddon v. Elleson, 19 Beav 565, Croxtan v. May, 9 ch D 388 In re Hooling (1893) 2 Ch 567 Where divorce in the sense n must be taken woman and her

113. A notification in the Gazette of India that any portion of British territory has been ceded to any Native State, Prince or Ruler, shall be conclusive proof that a valid cession of such territory took place at the date mentioned in such notification

Proof of cession of territory Scope of the section St 24 & 25 Vict c 67, s 25 does not protect s 113 of the Evidence Act, though it does not disallow it This section has provided that a notification shall be conclusive proof that a valid cession of such territory has taken place at the date mentioned in such notification of prerogative of the law is valid other hand, that it follows, as a matter of course, and that section v Ganesh Dev

by the Act 24 & 25 Vict chap. the sovereignty or dominion of the Crown over any part of its territories in India, or as to the allegiance of British subjects, could not by any legislative Act, purporting to make a notification in a Government Gazette conclusive evidence of a cession of territory exclude inquiry as to the nature and lawfulness of that cession. The British Crown has the power without the intervention of the Indian Parliament to make a cession of territory within British India to a foreign prince or feudatory. Lachminarain v. Partap Singh, 2 A 1 Dinohar v. Deoram 1 B 367 (P C) = 3 I A 10. This section was an attempt for political reasons to exclude enquiry by Courts of justice, into the validity of the acts of the Government. But it has been decided by the Privy Council in Dinohar v. Deoram 1 B 367 (P C) that the Indian Legislature had no power to do this, and the section is therefore, a dead letter. Var b, Pt 87

114 The Court may presume the existence of any fact which

Court may presume it thinks likely to have happened regard existence of certain being had to the common course of natural facts event, human conduct and public and private business, in their relation to the facts of the particular case

Illustrations

The Court may presume—

(a) that a man who is in possession of stolen goods soon after the theft is either the thief or has received the goods knowing them to be stolen unless he can account for his possession,

(b) that an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless he is corroborated in and the instrument was accepted or endorsed within a period shorter than that within which such things or states of things usually cease to exist is still in existence,

(e) that judicial and official acts have been regularly performed

(f) that the common course of business has been followed in particular cases,

(g) that evidence which could be and is not produced would, if produced be unfavourable to the person who withholds it,

(h) that if a man refuses to answer by law the answer if given ends of the

to such facts as the following in do not apply to the particular case before it —

as to illustration (a)—a shop keeper has in his till a marked rupee soon after it was stolen and cannot account for its possession specifically but is enter is tried for certain machinery the arrangement the common care-sons A B and not apart from each and the accounts and the accounts render previous concert highly of exchange, was a man of ignorant person, completely under

A influence —

as to illustration (d)—it is proved that a river ran in a certain course five years ago, but it is known that there have been floods since that time which might change its course —

as to illustration (e)—a judicial act, the regularity of which is in question was performed under exceptional circumstances

As to illustration (f)—the question is, whether a letter was received. It is shown to have been posted, but the usual course of the post was interrupted by disturbances.

...ment which would
...d but which might
...which he is not compelled by law to answer, but the answer to it might cause loss to him in
...h it is asked
...obligor, but the circum-

Scope of the section "The effect of this section, coupled with the general repelling clause at the beginning of the Act, is to make it perfectly clear that Courts of Justice are to use their own common sense and experience in judging of the effect of particular facts, and that they are to be subjected to technical rules, whatever on the subject" Vide the Speech of Hon'ble Mr. Stephen in the
...assumption to law of evidence Vide
...or the most part, cases of what in ...artificial rules as to the effect of
...vide its decision, subject however,
...to understand or to apply, but
...question Ibid A 'presumption'
...may draw a particular inference from a particular fact or from particular evidence, unless and until the truth of such inference is disproved Lauson Pre Ev 639 "Presumptions are of two kinds, natural and legal or artificial. The natural presumption is when a fact is proved wherefrom, by reason of the connection founded on inference, the existence of another fact is directly inferred. The legal or artificial presumption is where the existence of the one fact is not direct evidence of the existence of the other, but the one fact existing and being proved, the law raises an artificial presumption of the existence of the other" Gulich v Loder, 13 N J (L) 72 "The terms of this section are such as to reduce to their proper position of mere maxims, which are to be applied to fact by the Courts in their discretion, a large number of presumptions to which English law gives, to a greater or less extent, an artificial value. Nine of the most important of them are given by way of illustration' Steph Intro p 175 Presumptions of law are in reality, rules of law and part of the law itself, and the Court may draw the inference whenever the requisite facts are developed, whether in pleading or otherwise, while all other presumptions, however obvious, being only inferences of fact cannot be made without the intervention of a jury Best on Presumptions, 18; Lauson Pre Ev 641, Justice v Long, 52 N Y 523 When certain facts are admitted or proven, the Court takes notice, without further proof, of all such presumptions and inferences arising from them as are warranted by uniform experience, and also all such consequences as are known to flow from the laws which govern the matter, and which are applicable to the proven or admitted facts Heils v Silliman, 93 Ill 261 (Am) A presumption must be based upon a fact, and not upon inference or upon another presumption Lauson Pre Ev Rule 118 A presumption cannot contradict to such an explana-

of the explanation
of determining where evidence in a point

presumption of law is functus officio as a presumption of law." Such a presumption, therefore, cannot shift "the burden of proof" in the strict sense of that term and the most that it can effect is a shifting of 'the burden of evidence'—the burden of going forward with new evidence. The Act indicates that it is for the Court, such a presumption

v Dayal, 1 N L

'common' can only

Just

87—inf

dra

of

m

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

in the experience of the

Sicka & Co 53

The illustrations appended to this section are not statements of the law qualified only by particular exceptions. They are merely what they call themselves illustrations or instances of the application of certain maxims out of many possible instances. Gotinda v Emperor, 69 Ind Cas 957=23 Cr L J 678

ILLUSTRATION (A)

Recent possession of stolen property. In a criminal case, the burden of proof always lies in the first instance on the prosecution, for the accused is presumed to have committed the offence.

may shift to

been established

after they possession

property recently after the commission of a theft is prima facie evidence that the possessor was either the thief, or the receiver according to the other circumstances of the case. R v Langmead, 1 L & C 427, Taylor § 140, Russell L of Crimes p 1482. In R v Langmead, 1 L & C 427, Pollock C B said: "If no other person is involved in the transaction, and the whole of the case against the prisoner is that he was found in possession of the stolen property, the evidence no doubt points to a case of stealing rather than a case of receiving, but in every case, except indeed where the possession is so recent that it is impossible for any one else to have committed the theft, it becomes a mere question for the jury whether the person found in possession of the stolen property stole it or received it. The evidence, therefore, is that the person found in possession of the property, having stolen it, it will be for the jury to decide whether he received it. In the same case, per Lord Russell, the property has been stolen, and has been found recently after its loss in the possession of the prisoner, he is called upon to account for having it, and on his failing to do so, the jury may well infer that his possession was dishonest, and that he was the thief. If he had been found in possession of the property, they may infer that he was the thief. It is more difficult to say that they are satisfied that he is not the actual thief." See also R v Smith, Ry & M 290, Bayju v King Emperor, 11 A L J 94=18 Ind Cas 681=14 Cr L J 121, In re

Exall, 11 A L J 94=18 Ind Cas 681=14 Cr L J 121, In re

Exall, 11 A L J 94=18 Ind Cas 681=14 Cr L J 121, In re

Exall, 11 A L J 94=18 Ind Cas 681=14 Cr L J 121, In re

Exall, 11 A L J 94=18 Ind Cas 681=14 Cr L J 121, In re

Exall, 11 A L J 94=18 Ind Cas 681=14 Cr L J 121, In re

Exall, 11 A L J 94=18 Ind Cas 681=14 Cr L J 121, In re

Exall, 11 A L J 94=18 Ind Cas 681=14 Cr L J 121, In re

Exall, 11 A L J 94=18 Ind Cas 681=14 Cr L J 121, In re

Exall, 11 A L J 94=18 Ind Cas 681=14 Cr L J 121, In re

Exall, 11 A L J 94=18 Ind Cas 681=14 Cr L J 121, In re

Exall, 11 A L J 94=18 Ind Cas 681=14 Cr L J 121, In re

Exall, 11 A L J 94=18 Ind Cas 681=14 Cr L J 121, In re

Exall, 11 A L J 94=18 Ind Cas 681=14 Cr L J 121, In re

section is merely an example, and it cannot be relied on as summing the presumptions which may be drawn from recent possession of stolen property. Musem v Emperor, 17 Cr L J 32-32 Ind Cas 160. The possession by the accused of the jewels of a person who has been murdered for the sake of her jewels, if unexplained is presumptive evidence that the accused was the murderer as well as that he committed theft. In Nainamalai Konan, 14 L. W 418; but see property. In a criminal case the onus is on the prosecution to prove beyond reasonable doubt the guilt of the accused and the burden never changes. Satiya Charan v. Emperor, 62 C 223-68 Ind Cas 515, Reg v Isaac, (1914) Cr App.

of the accused in respect of property proved to have been stolen must be defined as a presumption but extends to a presumption. R 1930 Pat

Where accused persons are found in possession of stolen property soon after the theft and they are unable to explain their possession they can be held guilty of receiving stolen property knowing it to be stolen under s 411 I P Code. Yaman v Emperor, L R 5 A 81.

Possession unexplained The reasons on which this presumption is founded are well stated in a learned note to the report of Cockin's case, 2 Levin, 234.

If the change of possession has been forgotten, still less if it be an article of bulk or value. If, then, it be reasonable under such circumstances to call upon the party in possession to account for such possession it can not be unreasonable to presume against the lawfulness of that possession when he is unwilling to give an account, or is unable to give a probable reason why he cannot. Now there is no reason in general why an honest person should be unwilling to give an account, or unable to give a probable reason why he cannot. He is not honest and some one else is.

of wood, it it was taken
This is a acquitted
v. Croun

of this nature, you should take it as a general principle that when a man in whose possession stolen property is found gives a reasonable account of how he came by it, as by telling the name of the person from whom he received it, and who is to be a real person, it is incumbent on the prosecutor to show that the account is false; but if the account is not reasonable or improbable on the face of it. Suppose, for instance, a I were to say, I bought it for prima facie, a reasonable account, and I ought not to be convicted of felony unless it is shown that that account is a false one. See also R v. Smith, 2

4 C & K 206, see R v Schuma 86 L J K B 395, R v Norris, 86 L J K B 810 R v Grunberg 33 F L R 425 (i) The presumption under the section is discretionary with the Court having due regard to the circumstances (ii) the presumption means that the law exempts the crown from proving the guilt of the accused unless he gives some explanation as to how he came by the goods. If he gives any explanation which in the opinion of the jury may possibly be true although they do not necessarily believe it then the crown cannot rely upon the presumption and must prove the guilt of the accused just as in any other criminal case and did not prove his innocence affirmatively Buthnath v Emperor, 35 C W N 291.

Explanation not inconsistent with the identity of the property The explanation to be given by the accused of his possession of the stolen property must not be inconsistent with the identity of the property. A beetle head stolen from the house of W and identified by W as his. E says, 'I cannot remember where I must be acquitted. But if E says, "I bought this beetle head at a sale eight years ago this contradicts the identity, which remains a question on which E's guilt or innocence depends." Queen v Evans, 2 Cox C C 270, Lairson v E. Gou. In that case Allerson B said to the jury "If the prisoner said in the first instance, 'why, really I cannot tell where or how I got this beetle I should have said that I have been indicted for stealing it. I does not deny that the prosecutor. Where however the prisoner is shown to have claimed the property found in his possession, and sworn by the prosecutor, to be his own property by right of a purchase made eight years ago and a continued possession up to the present time, I should say that that was not so reasonable an account of his possession as to exempt him from the necessity of accounting for it to the satisfaction of the jury, for if it be true the prosecutor is wrong and the identity of the thing found with that is disputed. If the prosecutor should satisfy the jury that the beetle in question was his, then the statement of the prisoner accounting for his possession of it must be false, and he must be presumed to have stolen it, although it was fifteen months after the loss. The thing which was eight years ago, or of the prosecutor case, the prisoner is guilty.

of the articles stolen: i.e. whether they are of a nature likely to pass rapidly from hand to hand; or of which the accused would be likely from his situation in life or vocation, to become possessed innocently. Best § 211. So what is or is not recent, within this rule depends upon the cost, bulk or transferability of the thing stolen. Suppose the Pitt Diamond or the Crown Jewels were stolen and, after the lapse of one or two years found in the possession of a person in a comparatively humble station of life, who refused to give any account of where he got them would there be anything harsh or violent in presuming that he had not come by them honestly? But suppose the goods lost were merely a pair of shoes or a coat, such as in his station of life it would be natural and proper for the prisoner to wear, and that these were not traced into his possession until after a few months from the loss, would it be violent a presumption as to deem 'Even if the point were not settled process of reasoning to the conclusion, from recent possession without reference to the nature or paper piece of money of the stolen might have less weight as of Harvard University or Powers Greek Slave, or an elephant, and after the larceny of such property It would ordinarily be more probable that the possessor could prove by other evidences than his own testimony, how he obtained the possession in the latter case than in the former. It is equally clear, upon authority and upon reason that the presumption from recent possession of stolen property depends upon the nature of the property. "Lairson Pre Ev p 606 'A couple of sacks are stolen from a farmer. A month afterwards they are found in the possession of another person. This alone cannot raise an inference that the latter stole them. Cochran's Case, 2 Lewin, 235. The reason for this limitation to the rule is well expressed in a learned note to this case, by the author. 'If the property' says the writer 'has not difficulty of giving an account. After an interval of time the means of proof are the here the die and little circumstances subsequent or antecedent tending the truth may not the recollection of facts or enmities may have grown up and the occasion may be laid hold of to gratify a vindictive feeling. Again the circumstances in life of the party may be a bulk, and as it may happen to be an article that is more or less frequently brought under the party's view. Judges therefore hold and most reasonably hold that a person is not to be called upon to give an account at a distant period after the theft. The question however of distance of time or recent possession must be at all times one of fact under the circumstances and a jury under the Judge's direction must ultimately decide.' In Cochran's Case, 2 Lew 235 Coleridge J said to the jury. 'If I was now to lose my watch and in a few minutes it was to be found on the person of one of you it would afford the strongest ground for presuming that you had stolen it. but if a month hence it were to be found in your possession the presumption of your having stolen it would be greatly weakened because stolen property usually passes through many hands.'

Two bundles of woollen cloth were stolen from M. Two months after they are found in the possession of P. The presumption is that P stole them. R v Patridge 7 C & P 340. The presumption is that P stole them. R v Patridge 7 C & P 340. time is to be considered. stolen. If they be a long time be

March 1st. On June 1st they are found in A's possession. This raises no presumption against A. R v Adams 3 C & P 600, R v Hewlett 2 Russ on Cr 728 (note), R v Delerst 2 Stark Ev 449 note R v —, 2 C & P 459. A horse disappears from the possession of its owner on December 17 1849. On June 20 1850 it was found in the possession of C. This does not raise a presumption that C is the thief. R v Cooper 3 C & K 318. In that case Maule J said he thought there was no case to go to the jury—the possession was not sufficiently recent. Where a man is found in possession of a horse six to make it necessary for the prisoner to account for his possession. In re Puthenvithal, 2 Weir 777. Where a bullock which has been stolen was sold by the accused in another place about two or three months afterwards and thought

Possession of stolen property to any presumption under this 800=32 Cr L J 614=A I R: underneath a house during the to find it, if he were given Rs 1 complainant where the bullock in the place indicated by the accused. Held that it must, from the circumstances spoken to, be presumed that the accused was in possession of the bullock when it was tied up in the jungle, from which possession, it might undoubtedly be presumed that he was the person who stole the animal. Don Be v Crown 1 L B R 333. An accused cannot be convicted for the possession of stolen cooking utensil fourteen months after theft. Empress v Keshub Dutt, A W N 1881, 155. But when stolen property is traced to the possession of an accused person three weeks after the theft took place, the proper presumption is, not that he was one of those who committed the theft, but that he received the stolen property knowing or having reason to believe it to be such. Whether a presumption of theft or of receipt of stolen property should be drawn would depend on would arise where the accused is in possession of the stolen property three weeks after it was stolen. Sen Be v Crown 1 L B R 30=7 Cr L J 30: Empress. 1914 M W N 84. fact that the accused does not give rise tion would arise when of such stolen articles. 101=32 Bom L. R.

possession of articles is recent or otherwise. But every case must be judged on its own facts. If a few stolen articles are found in possession of a person under circumstances which may give rise to the probability of his coming by them honestly sometime after the theft the presumption under the law might not arise against him. Emperor v Ekabbor, 27 Cr L J, 617-91 Ind Cas 361-A. I R 1926 Cal 925; Necha v Emperor, A I R 1928 Nag 213-103 Ind Cas 801. Where, more than six months after the dacoity, some ornaments consisting of a pair of bangles, a bracelet and ear rings were found in the possession of the accused, held, that having description, and covered by upon to explain L J 436-29 A. 133. Where the possession of property, stolen some years before, reasonably and circumstantially explained, such explanation should not be rejected merely because it is unproved Talu v Empress, 15 P R

as soon after the theft Jannullahdin, In re, 26 M L T 389-11 L W 43-53 Ind Cas 119, Joenuallah v Emperor, 22 C W N 597-46 Ind Cas 158-19 Cr L J 702, Ramhit v. Emperor, 20 A. L J 178-65 Ind Cas 849-23 Cr L J 722-26 Cr L J 578-A. Cas 650-27 Cr L J 986, Cas 471-A I R 1926 Lah Ind Cas 514-A I R 1926

Possession must be exclusive In order to give rise to the presumption in this illustration the possession must be exclusive. The possession of a watch by the wife of the accused is not sufficient Sorenson v U S 8th C C A 168 Fed 785. It is not sufficient that the stolen goods were found in the house of the wife of the accused, where he does not live People v Kubulis, 298 Ill 523, Wigmore § 2513, Lauson Pre Ev ¶ 599. The two accused in this case were husband and wife and both were in possession of the stolen property within such a short time of the theft as to raise the usual prima facie presumption

Empress, U B R (1897 1901) Vol I 171. Where stolen property was found in the Camp of a party of refugees, it was held that it was not proved in whose possession it was, to justify the conviction of any one of them for theft Nga ed that and in Held and it arise

ILLUSTRATION (B).

Corroboration of evidence of accomplice. Although as a matter of law, of of are the less liable would the evidence of the accomplice be to suspicion and discredit Emperor v Lakshmi, 6 Bom L R 1091=29 B 251 For further discussion on this topic vide notes under s 133 infra

ILLUSTRATION (C)

Presumption as regards Bills of Exchange Bills of exchange and promissory notes enjoy the privilege of being presumed prima facie to be founded on a valuable consideration Collins v Martin, 1 B & P 651, Holliday v Atins, 5 B & C 501 The law raises this presumption in favour of these negotiability in fact, may reasonably be made in w

and other

Instrumer

is that a note is of the value of the sum promised thereby to be paid in order to encourage the free circulation of negotiable paper by giving confidence and security to those who receive it for value, and this principle is so comprehensive in respect to bills of exchange and promissory notes which pass by delivery that title and possession are considered as one and inseparable and in the absence of any explanation, the law presumes that a party in possession holds the instrument for value until the contrary is made to appear, and the burden of proof is on the party attempting to impeach the title. These principles are certainly in accordance with to correspond with the general pursuits. Goodman v Simo

But where fraud or illegality is shown, the burden is on the holder to show that the instrument is not tainted. Jones v El & B 238 said It certainly proven to have been a presumption that of it and would place that such proof casts upon the plaintiff the burden of showing that he was a states of America, want of consideration holder Wallace v Bank 1 Ala 667

no fraud nor any suspicion of fraud on to prove that he gave value for Ell 638, overruling Thomas v Newlon 2 B & Ald 294; see also Robinson v 3 M & W 72, Berry v Alderhan B 244, Moti v Mahomed 20 B 267, Sulhasam v Gulab 16 Bom L R 743, Madhoram v Nanda, 53 Ind Cas 930 But this presumption does not arise where the endorsement is forged or the consideration is unlawful Banla v Secy of State, 36 C 239, Rindas v Lal Chand 101 Ind Cas 325=1927 Lah 137

ILLUSTRATION (D)

Continuance of condition qua it is in human nuance at a l existence of ce or cont continuance used to bring es will depend ce is in issue So far then n, the nature rol Wigmore continuance or hen, therefore, the existence of a person, or personal relation, or a state of things, is once established by proof, the law presumes that the person, relation, or state of things continues to exist as before, till the contrary is shown, or till a different presumption is raised, from the nature of the subject in question. Price v Price, 16 M. & W. 232. When things are once proved to have existed in a particular state, they are presumed to continue in that state until the contrary is shown. st Ev § 405. Although contrary, the settlement of a pauper, or the appointment of a party to an official situation, will, at least for a reasonable time, be presumed to remain in force

M I A 194. Section 104 of the Evidence Act relates to the continuance of the existing state of things and not against a new state of things. 24 A L J 76. 745-24 A L.

Section relates to the existence of certain facts and not their probative value. Nanda Kumar v Emdad Ali 44 C L J 265-A I R 1927 Cal 49. Where in existence at a particular time of a fact of a continuous nature gives rise to a rebuttable presumption within local limits that it existed at a subsequent time or has previously existed. The limits of time within which the inference of continuance possesses sufficient probative force to be relevant must obviously existence at a particular time as long as it continues to exist either backwards or forwards, whether onwards or downwards, is an inference of fact and may therefore be rebutted. Secretary of State v Upendra Narain Roy, 71 Ind Cas 212, 1900 Cal 212, 20 C L J 212, 20 A L J 212.

presumption as to the continuance of the state of things. Hiranmoy v Rangan, 29 Ind Cas 691-26 C. W. N 43; see also Soudamini v Secy of State, 33 C L J 1 E A-152.

1 J 47 Under this illustration a person who is once proved to be a professed member is presumed to continue as such during his lifetime. But the presumption is rebuttable. Mussammatt Shahat v Allah Bachayo, 9 S L R 196 = 34 Inl Ca 501. It is not right to presume from the fact that a man is a member of an association when it is lawful that he continues to be a member after it is declared unlawful. This is not a matter of presumption, there must be evidence of continuing membership. Emperor v Dharmanand, 33 Bom L R 233 = A I R 1931 Bom 263, Emperor v Sripad, 55 B 481 = A I R 1931, Bom 120.

Subsequent existence. Similar considerations affect the use of subsequent existence as evidence of existence at the time in issue. Here the disturbing contingency is that some circumstance operating in the interval may have been

the dey
and 831

431
100

In A V D U 1735 (to have been)
 at some previous never presumed

ILLUSTRATION (E)

Presumption a
that a rule of official (those upon whom of due performance

1

1

4

1 - MAY 1968

13

1. ON

and!

08 of new

are found

in the p3

formality or detail of required procedure, in the routine of a litigation or of a public officer's action, next that it involves to some extent the "security of apparently vested rights" so that the presumption will serve to prevent a too wholesome uncertainty and finally, that the circumstances of the particular case add some element of probability. Wigmore § 2534. There is a well known maxim of law omnia praesumuntur rite esse acta this is an inference of reasonable probability arising out of the experience of mankind. The law assumes done will be performed all Ex 391 In Berry an

... officers Just call of the peace, constables etc, it was sufficient to prove that they acted in those characters without producing their appointment. Where successive decisions are inconsistent with a general order of the Court, a reversal of that order ought to be presumed. Bohun v Delessert, 1 Coop 21. Man v Richells 2 Coop 8. Again on an indictment of bigamy, proof of the solemnization of the first marriage in a Warrant is sufficient to prove the solemnization of the first such marriage.

7 Cox

and a lot of

presump

Deputé / Legat

R 19 8 Pr: 10 8

195

have been done

certain things are

spect of any right

to prove that the

on arises of the

1932 Cal S33

53 C 718-1 Part

Applying the

was produced
that

in arise

I R
G of gate

it was so promulgated Khurshid v Rimigany Municipality, A I R 1932 Cal. 833=35 C W. N. 823 From the mere fact that the warrant for the arrest of a judgment debtor bore the signature of the sheristadar it cannot be presumed under s 111 (a) that the sheristadar had been duly appointed to sign warrants De v F, A I R 1932 Cal. 845; see also Girdhar v Emperor, 3 Pat L J 636 an offence under Penal Cod the back of the paper instead of in the body of the sanction merely because there was not sufficient space left on the front side held that the initial presumption was that all the official acts were done in a regular manner hence the sanction was valid. Emperor v Dhan Chand, A I R 1930 Lah 81 Where a committing Magistrate writes at the foot of the deposition that the cross examination is being reserved by him and that the accused has not been given an opportunity for cross-examination done properly and be presumed to have cross-examination to Emperor v Mahtab, A I R 1930 Sind 54

Regularity of Judicial acts Where a Court having general jurisdiction acts in a case, its jurisdiction so to act will be presumed Lauson Pro Ev R Co to all "t to his R In ings by Magistrates, the maxim omnia praesamuntur rite esse acta does not apply to give jurisdiction has never been questioned Here, then, the jurisdiction, should at all events have appeared on the face of the examination, supposing proof of it abunde not to have been necessary" But where the ral in a special must be shown

Under all judicial v Blackwood general pow diction being acta finds, proceedings Ind Cas 5 will assume correctness id v Kanto, the Peace minutes of a

be drawn that it was given up To hold others and to presume that the Court failed to do so 1923 Lah 121=68 Ind Cas 710 After a filed his accounts and they have been accepted tion as to their accuracy does certainly arise and it is open to parties to rely on guardian and ward Gopal v San e presumption arising under this sect 'ourt's proceedings can only be ove Sheo Darshan v Assessor Singh 5 C applicant before the Court is attempting to rebut that presumption it is not for the Court itself to give assistance to the otherside or to deal with the matter otherwise than impartially Sohaglati v Surendra Mohan, 4 Pat L W 296=41 Ind Cas 661 Before the deposited admitted
must be the prisoner's presence It should not be merely presumed under s 14 illustration (e) to have been so taken and attested Queen Empress v Riding 9A 720=A W N 1887, 228 Where a point is definitely raised in the ground is of appeal and the Court makes no mention thereof in its judgment, it must still be presumed to have performed the judicial act of writing a judgment regularly and properly Har Charan v. Lachman, A I I 1928 Lah 91

Regularity of Official Acts The presumption is that one who is proved to have acted in an official capacity this rate, and I

the proof of their Where is the line were trustees" T duty requires it
the court of

strong presumption
ence of clear proof
urt is bound to admit plaintiff that the re-
Farzand, 9 A L J
Act are conducted 1823 which are appli-
notice to all binding upon ction 61, the
ive been regu-
9 Ind Cas
Court in ral Judge
ified the ders 114
was a correct copy
he supervision of the Bom L R 1519=

322 f Cutch
but not require

which has been in the manner provi-
R m v Sohana,
this section illus-
it -

71
Re

Gaya, 8 O W. A. 214
ra v Manmohan, 57 I. A. 214 held to
v. Bal
med, 3)

C. W. N 242, Emperor v Mahrab, A. I R 1930 Sind 51-31 Cr L J. 121 S.
 An order issued under s 31 may be oral order by a police constable issued disregard s 114 illustration (c) and assume irregularity in official acts. A Sessions Judge should presume that a confessional statement placed on record by the Magistrate was voluntarily made. Public Prosecutor v Nagaraju, 129 Ind Cas 229-32 Cr L J 262-A I R 1931 Mad 42-59 M L J 114. The presumption as to official acts can be applied to a sanction order under s 196, Mysore Cr Pro Code Reg 1904. In the case of Setharama Sastry 8 Mys L J.

by the post m

of the notice

Evidence Ac

L R 26-A i

tration, it i

"Regularly

procedure. The regular performance of official acts does not imply that the representation made to them must be correct. Jagdeo Narain v Balak Gope, (1921) Pat 343-63 Ind Cas 226. The action of a Deputy Commissioner under Regulation XVII of 1836, is purely ministerial. His acts therefore, are official acts and the presumption contained in s 114 illustration (c) of the Evidence Act applies to them. Juala Baksh v Nevarish is short, a Court might require stricter proof that all the formalities for publishing the notification had actually been carried out. Emperor v Bal Krishna, 55 B 356-A I R 1931 Bom 132

ILLUSTRATION (I)

Presumption as regards common course of business In commercial

4. or that his name could not have been adopted by any other person. In the absence of all evidence the mere fact that the full name was his name does not justify the conclusion that he and nobody else could be the author thereof. Ranjit Singh v The Crown 26 P L R 403=83 Ind C 13 308=96 Cr L J of a particular case can form a foundation for a fair presumption that an appointment was made. Mulchand v Jaman 443

443

Ind Cas 6

the time when a receipt was given for them the presumption under this section is that the ordinary course of business was followed in the case in question. The mere statement by appellants' counsel that these sums are not always paid at the time when the receipts are given are sufficient to throw the onus on the prosecution of proving that the plea was wrong. Empress v Imetshah 193 Lah 566. This illustration is not exhaustive and the general language of the section applies to all acts and proceedings which might be presumed to have been done in the usual course of business. Laxmi Pillai v Ram Chitra 193 M W N 183=20 M L T 223=31 M L J 311=35 Ind C 13 421

ILLUSTRATION (G)

Withholding evidence—presumption from. The illustration refers to evidence which can be and is not produced. Girish v Emperor 1 I R 183 in the power of the other to have testified to facts within his knowledge. The testimony is proper subject of inquiry and in the Courts of law. Laxmi Pillai v Ram Chitra 193 M W N 183=20 M L T 223=31 M L J 311=35 Ind C 13 421

he claims. The presumption is that if produced the deed would injure his claim. Haldane v Harley 4 Burr 2486. In cases like this it is laid down that the case of written evidence presents the strongest illustration of the extent of the rule. The non production of documentary evidence within the party's power raises it is said in several cases a very strong presumption that if produced it would militate against him who withholds it. Therefore in an action of trespass where the plaintiff relied upon bare possession although it appeared that he had taken the premises under an agreement which was not produced the Judge charged the jury that the possession of the close at the time of the trespass was more than nominal.

In affirming the verdict of showing the lease to be a good one. Try 1217. Gen v Dean of Windsor, 21 Berr 6-9 the court is always to be taken most strongly against the persons who keep back a document and the circumstance that the body keeping it back is a corporation does not in the slightest degree affect the inference that the present members from blame in that respect if willful suppression is shown. Corporation and yet the they cannot now receive" It is well observed by Mr. Evans in substance, that if the weaker and less satisfactory evidence is given and relied on in support of a fact when it is uncertain testimony was intended to conceal 2 Evans Pothier, 149.

S.

In Draithurite v Coleman, 1 Hurr & Well 239, which was an action by the indorsee against the drawer of a note, the only evidence of notice of dishonour was the statement of the defendant to a witness "I have good time"

Lord
oduced,
Denman
ceived

the letter, and as he does not produce it, it might be fairly inferred by the jury that it was in time" But the other members of the Court were of a contrary opinion and a new trial was ordered. But in the case of Cutler v Corfield, 1 Q B 814, which six years later came before the same Court, and nearly before the same Judges, a different conclusion was reached. In Bell v Franks, 4 Mon & Gr 447, also an action by the indorsee against the drawer of a bill of exchange it appeared that the defendant had told a witness that he expected to receive by post a notice of its dishonour, and afterwards gave him a letter he received by post, requesting him to negotiate a renewal of the bill, but the letter, which had found its way into the defendant's hands, was not produced at the trial. It was ruled that the jury was dishonour had been given. See also Lobl. party does not produce a document in that its production will damage his case carrying on business and the non-production was not sought to be explained, held that the Court was entitled to draw an inference under s 114(g) of the Evidence Act. Gu, Sankar Das, 111 I account books by

L J 47; Sankara Linga

Every deed being the best evidence of its own content, its non-production raises the presumption that it contains some defence, in other words, there is some endorsement on the document which the plaintiff does not like. Mahammad v Zakur, 21 A L J 961-97 Ind Cas 82-A I R 1926 All 741, Ahmed v Ali Ibrahim, 27 Bom L R 746-1925 P C 177, Sreenath Roy v Secretary of State, 50 C 276-70 Ind Cas 510-1923 Cal 230-36 C L J 315, Secretary of State v Upendra Nath Roy, 36 C L J. 316, Harendra v Durga, 62 Ind Cas 697. Where a document is a very old one the possibility of its having been lost and being no longer in existence is naturally much brighter than in the case of a document of recent date. Consequently the presumption arising an old

Cas 65

saying that they have been destroyed and the matter dealt with by the books could be easily proved by secondary evidence which is admittedly in the possession or power of the party and which he does not attempt to place on the record. the opposite party is entitled to the presumption that these books if produced would have gone against the contentions of the party, not producing them. Secretary of State v G T Sarain, A I R 1930 Lah 364. But no presumption can be made of their title deeds in respect of which they did not produce. A I R 1 quite as strong in the case of my Das v Mihar Lal, 71 Ind Cas not produce certain books

Exception. A does not produce one of his muniments of title. He proves that it is in the possession of B from whom he cannot obtain it. There is no presumption against A. Gilbert v Ross, 7 M & W 121. Marston v Downton 1 Ad & Ll 32. In the first case it has been ruled that where the evidence alleged to be withheld is unattainable, the presumption does not arise. Therefore if a deed be in the possession of an adverse party, and not produced, or if it be lost and destroyed, no matter whether by adverse party or not, secondary evidence is clearly admissible, and if the deed be in the possession of a third person who is not by law compellable to produce it, and he refuses to do so the result is the same. Lanson Pre Ev 169

Necessary witnesses not called. Where a witness is not called by the

in this illustration arising from non production of evidence to the contrary inference supported by adequate evidence. Demissetti v Demissetti 13 L W 293 = 63 Ind Cas 749 (P C). Where in a suit for profits of land the recorded collections are suspiciously low, and the defendant neither produces nor gives any evidence to show what was collected the Court would be justified in presuming that the full amount of the rents had been collected and is

Comp v ... A I R 1930 Lah 163 = 120 Ind Cas 606 = 31

Cr L J 131

Where the plaintiffs are the best persons to give evidence as to the 'interest' possessed by them in a religious institution to prove the locus standi for the purposes of s 92 Civil Procedure Code, and they merely put the defendants into the witness box, their failure to go into the witness box goes strongly against them. Kirpa Singh v Ajaypal Singh A I R 1937 P C 230, Allah Ditta v Bhagwan, A I R 1930 Lah 401, Kirpa v Ajaypal 11 Lah 142 = A I R 1933 Lah 1.

ILLUSTRATION (II)

S.

Refusal to answer—presumption for This illustration does not contemplate the testimony of a party in a civil or criminal suit, because "every person in the kingdom, except the sovereign, may be called upon and is bound to give evidence, to the best of his knowledge, upon any question of fact material and relevant to an issue tried in any of the Queen's Courts; unless he can show that he is exempted by some exception in his favour" Per Willes J in Baird v Fernandez, 12 C M N S 3, 39. So in such a case he is compellable by law to give answer. So also this illustration does not contemplate the case of witnesses who are not compelled to answer on the grounds of privilege (Vide ss 121-129). To make adverse presumption for not answering in those cases would be extremely inequitous. This illustration contemplates cases where a person is not bound to answer but can answer if he so desire, e.g. the case of an accused under s 342 Cr. Pro Code Sub-section (2) of that section runs thus "The accused shall not render himself liable to punishment by refusing to answer such questions, or by giving false answers to them; but the Court and the jury (if any) may draw such inference from such refusal or answers as it thinks just" So the

which can serve the ascertainment of the truth, this duty includes equally the

ILLUSTRATION (I)

Documents in the hands of obligor—Presumption from When, in the course of dealing, a debtor gives security to his creditor for the payment of the debt in the shape of documentary evidence either alone or accompanying muniments of title, it follows that on the payment of debt, the document should no longer be allowed to remain in the creditor's custody, and hence has arisen the rule that possession by the debtor of the evidence of a debt, as a note, bond, Burr Jones § 70(a); Abdul Karim Teming 5 M L R 619; Ganesh v Ind Cas 308. So the obligor's circumstance in favour of payment, and should turn the scale if the other evidence of its discharge when it is proved not to have been paid or satisfied? I think it is not" Pothier (Obligations, 73) says that Boisen holds that possession of the note affords a presumption of its payment but if he allege a release he must prove it, for a release is a donation, and a donation ought not to be

1. presumed Pothier differs, and thinks it should be presumed unless the creditor shows the contrary. But Pothier agrees with Boisen, that if the debtor was the general agent or clerk of the creditor, having access to his papers, possession of the document has been removed on or if he was removed on the Here me with his ept " The document has been discharged is subject to the qualification that, when the bond is in possession of the obligor but the circumstances are to maxim would apply or in v Harri, 12 Lah L J 21 = suit to enforce a mortgage, the defendant's case was that the mortgage deed

C L J 43 = 48 Bom L R 1888 The presumption of discharge on him L R to the inds of the obligor the obligation is discharged. But in raising such a presumption the Court has to take into regard any might have been stolen the burden when, both the parties produce their initial 175 =

the drawer alleges that the is on him to prove Cas 650, Chaudhary (P O), Binayal v

Dinkur, 20 Ind Cas 308 Illustration (i) only refers to presumption that may be raised. It does not follow that such presumptions would shift the onus of proof. Where, in a suit on a usufructuary mortgage bond, the defendant pleaded discharge and produced the discharge written thereon and the persc have been paid was not examined, held that the mere production of the bond proving the discharge which lay on the W 604-18 M L T 94-(1915) M W N 638 In a claim for recovery produced the agreement a Court placed the onus on the defendant. Held not discharged. Held (1) that the onus was wrongly placed as the presumption under s 114 illus (1) would be a piece of evidence in defendant's favour but did not shift the onus of proof which was on the defendant to show that he had discharged his obligation Jagannath v Amra, A I R 1931 Lah 299-134 Ind Cas 495

OTHER PRESUMPTIONS.

Acceptance At estate is devised to, or a gift is made to A. The law presumes that it is beneficial to A, and that he accepts it. He may disclaim it, but to work thus a disclaimer must be proved. Towson v Ticknell 3 B & All 31. Thompson v Leach, 2 Salk 618 In the first case it was said "I think that an estate cannot be forced on a man. A devise, however, being prima facie for the devisee's benefit, he is supposed to assent to it until he does some act to show his dissent. The law presumes that he will assent until the contrary is shown.

Advancement. The English doctrine of advancement in the country as being under English law also Kernick prevailing in the Bombay Presidency, a purchase by a husband in the name of his wife does not raise any presumption of a gift to the wife or of an advancement for her benefit Motibahu v Purshotam, 11 B.M. L. B. 975=29 B. 306. There is no presumption of an advancement by the name of a son being used as purchaser, other than in the case of a stranger being used Sayyad v Ullap, 13 M. I. A. 232, Gopas Krist v Ganga Proshad, 11 M. I. A. 53.

Adultery. A married man enters a house of prostitution and remains there all night. The presumption is that he committed adultery while there Evans v Evans, 41 Cal. 103 (Am), Asiley v Asiley, 1 Hagg. Ecc. 720, Lawson Pre. L. 323.

Alteration. Alterations, erasures and interlineations appearing on the face of writings, whether under seal or not, are presumed to have been made before their execution or completion Lawson Pre. L. 452. In the early history of the common law, the law examined the instrument for the purpose of

in an ordinary case, part of his case, or the mere infirmity or factorily explain the state of the document. But this wholesome rule admits of exceptions if there be, independently of the instrument, corroborative proof strong enough to revert the presumption which arises against an apparent and who seek to enforce an altered instrument, to show the circumstances under which it was made. 3 M. H. C. R. 247. The party, although in avoiding the has the custody of its original state. it on a contract to indemnify A on certain notes made on March 16th. The contract is also dated March 16th.

... should be presumed to I think this rule is demanded by s of this country, and especially e contracts made are drawn by the rd to interlineations and altera-
of the defen plain very

tolerated—might, perhaps, in country, like that of Great Britain, in regard to a negotiable upon stamped paper, the very cost of which would induce special care in the drawing of it, but I than injurious. It neous evidence, and without regard to any suspicious appearance of the alteration, would I think, in many instances, be doing such manifest injustice as to shock the common sense of most men. "In this conflict of opinion," says Woodruff J in Maybro
"Smyth v E D Smith 1 (Am), after an exhaustive review of all the authorities most in accordance with the seal or otherwise, it was made with the intent greatly to the disadvantage of the holder or party getting up the instrument that he made them unlawful against his own interest.

No pre-ration is in different ink,
its face, or
f proof, rests
it to the satisfaction of the Assent A statement is proved to have been made in the presence of H

It will be presumed that H heard it. Hochreiter v People, 2 Abb App Dec 363

... of a deed does not necessarily import an Imam Ali v Bay Nath, 10 C W N igh v Bhagwant, 5 Ind Cas 202; Jagathishore, 21 C W N 225 (231)= ss who has seen the deed executed v Laxmanrao, 10 Bom L R 913-33
B 44 Where there is nothing to suggest that the attesting witnesses signed after the mortgagor the Court can rely on the presumption under s 114 and hold that he signed after mortgagor. Radha v Nagendra, 134 Ind Cas 767-53 C L J 586-A I R 1931 Cal 806

Benami The mere fact that the deeds are in the possession of the mortgagor does not of itself prove that the mortgagee was a mere benamdar for the mortgagor. Hiraji v Vishnu, 1923 Bom 429 Property purchased by the father of a joint Hindu family in the name of his minor son is presumed to be becomes the property of the family. Bhaghat Pat 20 W. R 269, Sayyud v Ullap, 13 M 1
6 I A
W N
M 214;

Kumudbala 28 C W N 151, 226-26 C 871-4 C W N 1; 5
409 (P. C); Sreman v Gopal, Narshina v Srinivasha, 43 M 112

Best evidence Best evidence not produced though available raises adverse presumption. Rameshwar v Baji Lal, 33 C. W N 430-27 A L J, 261-49
C L J 403-31 Bom L R 721.

Bond Independently of a statute of limitation or in the absence of one, S. after a lapse of time the law presumes that the claimant was conscious of the lapse of time and that he intended to relinquish it. Law Pre Ev in the case of a claimant who has been in the possession of property for a long time, it will sit still and not be disturbed, and to acquire it, there must be a demand. Ch 545 "Ever Stamford, 2 Vt. 211, where the claimant made a demand.

to make the demand affords a presumption either that the claimant was conscious it was satisfied or intended to relinquish it" Lauson Pre Ev 371 But in India this presumption is of little value as a bond becomes time barred after a lapse of the time mentioned in the Indian Limitation Act (IX of 1908)

Blank-paper Where a person places his thumb impression on a blank paper, the understanding between him and the person to whom he delivers the paper ordinarily is that it is to be converted into a valuable security. Balisa v Emperor, A I R 1932 Pat 335=13 P L T 568 Where it is shown either by proof or by admission that the thumb impression on the suit hand note is

233=A I R 1931 Pat 219

Character The character, habits and personal appearance of a person are presumed to continue as proved to be at the time of the past. Law Pre Ev. Rule 32 "It might be presumed that a person who has been in the possession of property for a long time, it will sit still and not be disturbed, and to acquire it, there must be a demand. Ch 545 "Ever Stamford, 2 Vt. 211, where the claimant made a demand.

Child bearing age The presumption that a particular woman has passed the age of child bearing is one of fact to be determined partly by the light of general knowledge and partly by the facts of the person in question. It has been held that a woman who has been married for a long time, it will sit still and not be disturbed, and to acquire it, there must be a demand. Ch 545 "Ever Stamford, 2 Vt. 211, where the claimant made a demand.

three months, who had never had but one child (born when she was between twenty one and twenty two years of age) and lived afterwards with her husband for twenty-four years until his death, is presumed to be past child bearing. In re White, (1901) 1 Ch 570 In delivering the judgment, Buckley J said "A number of cases have been cited, but the material ones to my mind are these, Haynes v Haynes, 35 L J Ch 303, where it was held that a spinster aged fifty three years and two months must be presumed to be past the age of child bearing. Dandoon v Kimpton, 18 Ch D. 213, where the lady was a spinster of the age of fifty-four, and Hyddon v Edison, 19 Beav 565, where she was a spinster and aged fifty &c. It will be observed that in all the cases to which I have referred the ages were less than . . . will also be remarked that I have . . . children in re Widour's Trust, I . . . so to consider whether the cases relating to spinsters do not equally apply to widows who have had children. The only difference that occurs to me is that there is nothing to show in the case of spinsters whether they are or have been capable of child bearing which in the case of a widow who has had a child there is. On the other hand, if there has been a long lapse of time since the birth of a child—in this case twenty four years—the presumption will be that the capacity of child bearing has ceased." See also Payne v Long, 19 Ves 571; Groves v Groves, 12 W R 45, Levy v Hodges, Jac 395, Miles v Knight, 12 Jur 686, Dodd v Wake, 5 Deg & Sm 226; Brandon v Woodthorpe, 10 Beav 453, Brown v Pringle, 4 Hare, 121, Edicard v Tuch, 23 Beav 271; Davis v Birch, 8 Jur 114.

Conduct From a person's conduct in not claiming the property while others were actually contesting their right to it, an inference against his title can certainly be drawn. Kumarswami v Narayanswami, A I R 1932 Mad 762=36 M L W 186=1932 M W. R 850=159 Ind Cas 760.

Conflicting presumption In the case of conflicting presumptions the presumption of payment is stronger than, and will prevail against, the presumption of life, of the presumption of innocence is stronger than, and will prevail against, the presumption of knowledge of the law.

of innocence, and the presumption of knowledge of the law against the presumption of innocence. Law, 1 re 122 (Jayne v Price).

contrary and stronger presumption will prevail after his departure from his native country and conflict of the presumption of the second party indicted at have been contended.

answer is that the presumption of his being so is that But when it is recognized that when certain facts are presented in an invariable formula the finding thereon shall always be the same way, the logical impossibility of a conflict of presumptions becomes apparent.

affix inconsistent conclusions to the same state of facts at the same time. 9 Encyclop Ev "Presumptions" p. 891. The market values, so to speak, of the various presumptions have been sometimes sought to be established, but so Keeping, then, to the expression as it is one party to a cause relying upon a given party upon another. Which party is to prevail in every case is a question on the nature of the respective presumption.

Burr Jones § 101.

Co-sharer's possession Mere possession or occupation of the property by one co-sharer does not constitute adverse possession against the other co-sharer of hostile title or otherwise. 52 Where property is in the possession of one of the co-owners was advised Bharat v Ganga, 9 Ind Cas 425 The possession of joint S. property by one co sharer does not

v Sheikh Akbar Ali 1 C L R 364; Udaram v Dujan, 78 P L R 1909,

Death Where among some relations the evidence on the question who died first is quite evenly balanced, the Court is entitled to say that the probabilities are in favour of the younger man surviving the elder Kulkarni v Laxmibai, (1922) Bom 347

Debts Debts once proved to exist are presumed to continue until the contrary is shown Isa B v P B, 20 Ind Cas 1000 an entry indebted the debt is in money without o
demanding payment the presumption is that the debt has been paid Laxman v Durga Singh, 22 O C 335-54 Ind Cas 95

Delay in enforcing rights Where the long delay of the plaintiff in bringing the suit has prejudiced the defendants and has prevented them from bringing the best evidence that would otherwise have been available to them, the tendency of the Court must invariably be to make an inference against the plaintiff unless good cause tance to such presumption in given Brij Raj Saran v Bas 561 Under a possessory m not transferred to the mortgagee and no steps had been taken by the latter or his heirs to recover the amount Held that under the circumstances it was hat the tabai v ence of in on rain v 1896.

Documents It is a general though not a conclusive presumption that a document was made on the day of the date it bears Mina Kumari v Rajah Bijoy Singh 21 C W N 585 P C, Parshatani v Nazer 84 Ind Cas 846
Davies v Loundes, 7 Scott N R at 214, Queen v Waters M & W 95, Hunt v Marsey 5 B & Ad 902 When a document is not produced after due notice to produce and after being called for, it is presumed to have been duly stamped, unless it be shown to have remained unstamped for some times after its execution Closmadene v Correl 18 C B 36 5 H L 624, Steph Dig 7th Ed Art regard the regularity of 417, Lau son Pre E
Nanka, 106 Ind Cas
unregistered and such
it has been shown the produced but was not produced the presumption is that the document is not necessary to effect the purpose for which they were executed Tajesicar v Ajab Singh, 118 Ind Cas 865-A I R 1929 Nag 257

Duty All persons are presumed to have duly discharged any obligation imposed on them either by unwritten or written law, Best Ex § 318, Lam v Kalab, 36 Ind Cas 100 by her invalid. The husband's consent is, in the absence of prohibition, always to be implied. Laxmibai v Suranathbas, 1 Bom L R 420=23 B 789. Where an adoption has been requested in for a period of 33 years, it is presumed that the necessary consent of some person competent to give away the adopted son had been obtained. Anandiao v, Ganesh, 7 B, H C App 33. The Court, when it is satisfied that permission to adopt exists, will exact slight proof of the

S.

Law one they prevc
409 Where a family migrates from Guzerat where the Mayukha prevails, it must be assumed that the family has settled Chandra Dassia, 20 C 409. Where a family migrates from Guzerat where the Mayukha prevails, it must be assumed that the family has settled Chandra Dassia, 20 C 409. Where a family migrates from Guzerat where the Mayukha prevails, it must be assumed that the family has settled Chandra Dassia, 20 C 409.

Hindu Law—Endowment A person seeking to set aside an alienation on the ground that the property alienated is debutter or endowed property, must adduce proof that the same was endowed in perpetuity. Proof that the rents and profits have been utilized for the idol is insufficient. Konuar Doorga Nath v Ramchunder, 2 C 311 (P C)=4 I A 52.

Hindu Law Joint Family Hindu families are ordinarily governed by the law of their origin, not by that of their domicile. Lalkea v Gunga, W R 1804, 56. Where parties, who are not Hindus, reside in a Hindu country and, adopt the customs of Hindus, have lived as Hindu families do joint in food, and in Hindu family, there is a presumption of continuance of joint right of every member. Moonaye v Lomun, 2 W R 283. If brothers are found to be living together as a joint Hindu family, they must be presumed to be joint in property. Dharm Chand v Raj Mohshee 5 W R 445, see also Gane v Kanae, 3 W R 165 & W R 82, Lukhun v Madho, 5 W R 278, Gane v Kene, 4 B H C A C 169, Nandiani v Chootoo, 1 Agra 255. Where the family is joint and there is a nucleus from which the property may be training at the expense of the joint family property. Golul Chand v Hukun Chand, 145 P L R 1916=109 P W R 1916.

Hindu widow One who claims title under a conveyance from a woman, with the usual limited interest which a woman takes, and who seeks to enforce

1. reasonable to satisfy himself of the existence of such necessity Bhagant v Debi Dayal, 12 C W N 393=35 C 420 (P C) It is general presumption of law that the acquirer of property intends to retain dominion over it, and in the case of which estate in her husband's estate. I L J 5

Husband and wife In R v Hughes, 2 Lewin 229, Thompson J said "The law out of tenderness to the wife, if a felony be committed in the presence of the husband, raises a presumption prima facie that it was done under coercion" See also R v Connolly, 2 Leon 230; R v Knight, 1 C & P 116 The mere fact of marriage raises no presumption with regard to any property standing in the name of a wife that the beneficial interest must be in her husband Before a fact added to indicate fact to the husband Subudhi Tatuani I wife, but in Kumari v

Identity Identity of name raises a presumption of identity of person where there is similarity of name is an unusual one; but alide for several persons known of drawn if the name were only John Smith which is of very frequent use there might not Rhydes are there is every But Henry Thomas

Infancy Infancy once contrary is proved Law P that a son is over age It is emancipated as in the days Re Lillieshall, 7 Q B 158

In R v Smith, 1 Con 260, Earl J said to the Jury "Where the child is under the age of seven years, the law presumes him to be incapable of committing a crime, his actions as e unacquainted with guilt, yet this presumption will diminish with the advance of the offender's years and will depend upon the particular facts and circumstances of his case' 1 Russ 109; Mayne Ev Law, 402

Innocence The law presumes the innocence of a person charged with crime until the contrary is proved beyond a reasonable doubt Law Pre Et Rule 90 "It is greatly to be regretted that the so called presumption of innocence in favour of the prisoner at the bar is a pretence, a delusion an empty sound It ought not so to be, but it is Rufus Choate said that this presumption is not a mere phrase without meaning; that 'it is, in the nature of evidence for overcome,' that 'trial,' that 'it to one witness' it is of no avail hazardous to say, by prosecution, very one, as he self and answer if criminal procedure from inception to close, is designed to shut out presumptions of innocence and invites the presumptions of guilt. The secrecy of complaint making at the magistrate's office, the mysterious inquisition of the grand jury room, the publicity of the arrest, the commitment to the lock up, the demand of bail, the delay of trial, the enforced silence of defence till prosecution has done its worst, are all so many steps and strokes to blacken the accused before he is when he is put on trial, is he put in the dock? Why does he not have place with the by-standers, who are simply presumed innocent? The 'presumption', in the presence of such things, is a contradiction of terms. How can a person be presumed innocent who is presumably guilty? The fact that he is restrained of his liberty presumes guilt. There is no other construction to be placed on the restraint. Human nature is not capable of any other. Yet human nature ought to presume innocence till the contrary is proved. From Ten years a Police Court Judge New York, Funk and Wagnalls, 1884.

Professor Thayer says 'To sum it up the substance of all this is, as I have said the proof—appears to the party in may be

it may eight of yes no ption is is accompanied by another rule
by him against whom it op

moment these conceptions give way to the perfectly distinct notion of evidence proper—i.e., probative matter, which may be a basis of inference, something capable of being weighed in the scales of reason and compared and estimated with other matter of the probative sort—so that we get to treating the presumption of innocence or any other presumption, as being evidence in this its true sense, then we have wandered into the region of shadows and phantoms." Prof. Thayer's article in Yale Law Journal of March 1897.

The rule underlying the presumption of innocence merely means, that a person who is accused of a crime is not bound to make any statement or to offer any explanation of circumstances which throw suspicion upon him. He stands before the Court as an innocent man till he is proved to be guilty. It is the other by a

to rely on th
the Crown is h
in making out this case, the prosecution is to get rid of every presumption in favour of innocence The great majority of mankind manage to get through life without committing a crime, and those who assert that a particular person is guilty of a fact against which there is a presumption insuperable to something evanescent convince a jury that the Commander in and a pocket In the case of a member of the natural thing in the world Mayne's Cr duct or crime was alleged whether in a criminal offender or in strictly
R 1929

st B, A alleged that B, who had chartered his by which a loss happened with

Ellenborough said 'that the declaration, in imputing to a highly dangerous com having wrongfully put on board a ship, an article of a highly dangerous com bustible nature, imputes to the defendants a criminal negligence, cannot well be questioned In order to make the putting on board wrongful, the defendants must be cognizant of the dangerous quality of the article put on board, and if being so they yet gave no notice, considering the probable danger thereby on board for which your at least. We are, therefore, of opinion, upon principle and the authorities, that the burden of proving that the dangerous article in question was put on board without notice rested upon the plaintiff alleg out notice of its nature and qu is, in favour of innocence, intentions, the law presumes th wrongfully intended, till the has, in clear language, pointed out the distinction between these cases where criminal intent must be proved, and those where it will be presumed "Where an act, in itself indifferent, if done with a particular intent becomes criminal there the intent must be proved and found but where the act is in itself so lies on the defendant, and in
" R v Woodfal, 5 Burr 2667,
v Wallace, 3 Ir R S N 38, R v

"It seems well established that, where in a criminal case there is a conflict
the presumption & Ald 356)
business of the
has been said that (Re Hobson,
at C J in Re
case of Nibarin
a fact that an after a gun was hired, may be error of law to led under such
C 893
ers of criminal loubt' A great doubt beyond

the case? If the case is to turn on the matter of reasonable doubt, how can it turn aright, unless the turning point be ascertained and fixed beyond a reasonable question? The learning of the books on this subject is vast. It begins with the Bible—that is to say, the book writers make it begin there, though it does not appear that the inspired writers were sufficiently inspired to hit upon the favourite expression. Its equivalent, lawgivers since the time of Moses, find in the Mosaic provision, which forbade the death penalty till the crime 'be told thee, and thou hast heard of it, and enquired diligently, and, behold, it to be true, and the thing certain' (Deut. xvii. 4). This is said to be the amplification of Moses as definer of the doubt. Modern authorities do not seem to have done much better. But it is not because they have not tried. One author says that 'the persuasion of guilt ought to amount to such a moral approach nearer a solution and resembles a definition once heard in a charge to a jury. The Judge who gave it is admittedly one of the ablest and clearest headed jurists who ever sat upon the Bench. He is the man whom Rufus Choate called one of the ablest minds of the state. As near as memory serves, his words were as follows: 'Just what a reasonable doubt is, gentlemen, it is Insanity. Insanity once proved to exist is presumed to continue. But, aliter, as to temporary insanity, produced by drunkenness, violent disease or otherwise. Lauson Pre Ey Rule 31. In 1837 H. was inflicted with insanity, resulting from a violent disease. There is no presumption that H. was insane in 1838. Crouse v. Holman, 19 Ind. 30. In that case it was said: "Every man being presumed to be sane till the contrary is proved, the burden of proving insanity certainly rests in the first instance, on the party alleging the insanity. How period, or even several months later. The force of presumption arises from our observation and experience of the mutual connection between the facts shown to exist and those sought to be established by inference from those facts. Now, neither observation nor experience shows us that persons who are insane from the effect of some violent disease do not usually recover the right use of the mental faculties. It is, therefore, a presumption of a general kind in deciding upon its effect upon the burden of proof or law for it may authorize the jury to infer that the same condition or state of mind attaches to the individual at a later period. There must be kept in view the distinction between the inferences to be drawn from proof of an habitual or apparently confirmed insanity, and that which may be only temporary. The existence of the former,

1. once established, would or recovery, and in it to continue. But if th with some violent di alleging the insanity of time which bears directly upon the subject, he himself merely with proof of insanity at an earlier period' Laurin v Pre pp 22. It is proved it is presumed to continue. Prin v Dy. A lunatic un der a person, the mind when be O M 660, re also Snool v Watts 11 Beav 105; Hill v Clifford, (1907) 2 Ch 236, 1a; Gruften v Foxwell, (1897) A C 658-66 L J Q B 716

Intent and knowl
doing to have intended result Lau v Pre Li colluded with an incol action for libel broug whether W intended to tendency of the libel being injurious to H. W is presumed to do so Haire v Wilson, 9 B & C 643. "The Judge", said Trutercher C J in that case, "ought not to have left a question to the jury whether the defendant intended to injure the plaintiff, for every man must be presumed to intend the natural and ordinary consequences of his own act." And Littledale J added
'If the tendency of the publication was injurious to the plaintiff, then the law will presume that the defendant, by publishing it, intended to produce the injury which it was calculated to effect." A baker is charged with delivering adulterated bread for the use of a public asylum. It is proved that A delivered the bread. The presumption is that he intended it to be eaten. King v Dero 3 M & S 12. Lord Ellenborough said, that it was a universal principle that when a man is charged with doing an act, of which the probable consequences may be highly in the doing the act, the use and supply of for otherwise they A debtor makes makes also a "conveyance" law presumes that the intent of the conveyance was to defraud creditors Ex parte Villars, L R 9 Ch App 413. Lord Chancellor Cairns said "It is true that under this as under previous statutes of bankruptcy the acts are specified which if done by the bankrupt are not only acts of fraud but are also, if followed by bankruptcy, void. One is a con veyance of property for the benefit of creditors it fraudulent or by way of fraudul of these acts, namely, a conveyance of these special provisions have always and as to the other id from the rule
veyance must be to delay or to against, and perhaps B forges C's
as no account will. The presumption ish 2 Den C C 493. "The recorder" t in order to prove an intent to defraud defrauded, or who might possibly have been defrauded. But it is not necessary that at all necessary. A man may have an intent to defraud and yet there may not be any person who could be defrauded by his act. Suppose a person with a good account at his bankers and a friend with his knowledge forges his name to a cheque, either to try to credit or to imitate his handwriting, there would be no intent to defraud, though there might be parties who might be defrauded, but where another

per . of the act Lauson
Pre R v Munslow, 1 Q B 758 P 276, R v Cooke
 8 C & P 582, R v Shefford, R & R 169, R v Beard 8 C & P 143 'A same man' said Chief Justice Shaw in Com v Yonl, 9 Meto 93 (Am) 'a voluntary agent
 intend the neccs
 therefore, one destroy another's life the natural and necessary conclusion from the act is harm to the person accused the intention to take life or do him some great bodily har Empress v Tulsha, 20 A 143, Imperor 37 C 317, Reg v G etically impossible for the pro establish affirm tively the is fair and justifiable presur abducted it is undoubtedly The intention is more or less a matter of inference though there may be cases where the matter is capable of direct proof It is for the accused to explain away incriminating circumstances Jouaya and others v Emperor, A I R 1930 Lab '63

Issues me impossibility v Boldero 15 ion
 — Frazer v Frazer, Joe 586,
 1 Cox 325, Overhills Trusts
Monton v May L R 11 Ch D presumption that a person see also Pounaloori v Chela-

Lapathi 33 M L J 295

Joint Property Where a piece of land is adjacent to a piece of joint ners of the joint property the assertion Ma Bi

Knowledge of Law Every one is presumed to know the law when ignorance of it would relieve from the consequences of a wrongful act or from liability upon a contract Lauson Pre Ex Rule 1 The presumption that every body knows the law is often spoken of but it is clear that there is no such general presumption When Mr Dunning in arguing before Lord Mansfield, said The laws of this country are clear evident, and certain, all the Judges know the laws and knowing them administer justice with uprightness and integrity That learned Judge replied As to the certainty of the law mentioned by Mr Dunning it would be very hard upon the profession if the law was so certain that every body knows it, that it costs much money to know what it v Rinfall Cowp 38 Is it not a mock on the Louisiana, Pend Cole to ref Wh
 Law
 ing
 part
 New Hd

4. which the law itself ought to have afforded, he would hint that he lived by his profession, and that the knowledge he had acquired by hard study for many years, was "imparted" We may, therefore, safely say with knew shows 715

L R

who saw him presiding at the election must have known as a fact that he was the returning officer, and every elector who was a lawyer and who had read the case of Reg v Queens, 2 E. & E 56, would know that he was disqualified. B was mayor and returning officer, was every law that he was disqualified? I agree that

But I think that in Marlindale v Falkner explains the law." And Lush J added "A maxim has been cited which it has been argued imputes to every person a knowledge of the law. The maxim is ignorantia legis neminem excusat, but there is no maxim which says that for all intents and purposes a person must be taken to know the legal consequence of his acts." The maxim properly understood is true, but it is a rule of presumption, adopted from necessity, and to avoid an evil that would otherwise constantly perplex the Courts in the administration of the criminal law, that is the plea of ignorance. Hence the maxim, 'that ignorance of law excuses no one' Lawson Pre Et 11.

Legitimacy It is well established that every reasonable presumption will be indulged in for the purpose of upholding a marriage and establishing the legitimacy of the offspring Lawson Pre Ev 139. A child born in India must under ordinary circumstances be presumed to have his father's religion and his corresponding civil and social status Mahomed v Raja Sayed, A I R 1931 Oudh 177-8 O W N 349

Cas 551

But presumption of a valid marriage from two persons living together as man and woman cannot be drawn where the union is between a man who is an Ahir and a Brahmin widow, who cannot prima facie contract a valid marriage Gulab Chand v Bhayatal, 119 Ind Cas 698=A I R 1929 Nag 343. A

Mahomedan Law The Mahomedan Law is only the law of this country ya Ashore & action between that converts community may since their conversion have voluntarily imposed upon themselves would be governed by the Mahomedan Law Mahomed Sidick v Haji Ahmed, 10 B 1 There is no presumption of joint family in Mahomedan Law Jal e Ali v Raj Chandra 10 C L R 469=8 C 831 N, Karim Balsh v Rahum, 21 P L R 1900

injury to Lauson
902 (N)

But when the thing is under is such as ordinarily does proper care a presumption accident Lauson Pie Co Rule 14(b) Where a person is under a duty either by law or by contract the failure to discharge the duty raises a presumption of negligence against the person charged with such duty Ibid Rule 19 (c), see also Ash Kanta v Chandra Kanta 28 C W N 104 Tishu Digambar v B B & C I Ry Co 85 Ind Cas 415 A presumption of negligence arises against a common carrier of passengers where an injury is received by a passenger caused by the breaking down, or failure of the carrier's vehicle, roadway or other appliances for transportation, or by some error of his servants in operating them In other cases the mere fact of injury does not raise a presumption of negligence on the part of the carrier Lauson Pre Co 129

Personal appearance Personal appearance of a person is presumed to continue as proved to be at a time past Lauson Pre Et Rule 32

Possession Where little or no evidence of actual possession or title can be procured it would be almost impossible to administer justice, without having recourse to legal presumptions Moharuel v Toofany 4 C 206=2 C L R 446 When evidence of possession is conflicting, the presumption is that possession follows title Hastir Singh v Raj Kumar Babu 3 C W N 876

Religion The opinions of individuals, once entertained and expressed and the state of mind, once found to exist are presumed to remain unchanged until the contrary appears Thus all the members of a Christian community being presumed to entertain the common faith, no man is supposed to disbelieve from his own

Justice Greaves such and law under which the parties are born In the goods of Jnanendra Nath Roy 26 C W N 799 But the sounder view tend to the presumption that he still continued Where in consequence of the conversion

Barlow v Orde 13 M I A 377 But to acquire a new status the change of religion must be made honestly and without any intent to commit a fraud upon the law Per Lord Watson in Skinner v Skinner 25 I A 31 (41)=25 C 537 (746) Skinner v Orde 11 M I A 309 (374) Even where the conversion is bonafide the convert is not allowed to cast off an obligation which he had previously contracted and which at the time of the contract was in his sole duty by any act of his own Wayne v Cr Lau § 650, Emperor v La ar 30 M 331

Sanity Sanity once proved to exist is presumed to continue Lauson Pre Et Rule 31 Every man being presumed to be sane till the contrary is proved the burden of proof certainly rests in the first instance on the party alleging the insanity Crouse v Holman 19 Ind 30, Lauson Pre Et p 27

Services An agreement to pay for services rendered and accepted is presumed unless the parties are members of the same family or near relations

A and his wife board and lodge in the house of B the brother of A, and as to him in carrying on his business. There is no presumption that either the services on the one hand or the board and lodging on the other were paid for. Davies v Davies 9 C & P 87

Solvency Solvent contrary is proved. If day A is presumed. Ball, 9 Barb 271, 1

Statutory Presumptions There is no impropriety in referring to a thing as having been done when that thing is required to be done by a section in a statute. Brindaban v G I P Railway Co, 21 A L J 825=90 Ind Cas 1039=A I R 1929 All 369 (F B)

Tenancy, nature of—Presumption The presumption in favour of permanent tenancy implies that there is ground for inferring that the nature was always intended to be and always was hereditary, or that it acquired that character by subsequent grant. But a presumption in favour of a transaction is unusual regularity, it cannot be made in favour of that which offends legal principle. Satiya Sri v Kartik 15 C L J 237=16 C W N 227=13 Ind Cas 596

— that her husband is left presumption arises. R 1929 Nag 127 Where was compounded it is to be presumed that the criminal Court acted according to law and the presumption is that the criminal case was withdrawn and not compounded. Sadho v Jindra 116 Ind Cas 749=A I R 1939 All 456. Where in a charge of misappropriation and that there was some that there was no conclusion on the basis of the confession and Cas 605=A I R 1935

M 493=54 M L J 607 The mere signing of a particular entry does not raise an irrebuttable presumption of law against which no evidence can be adduced by the maker of the signature. Emperor v Ram Rang 109 Ind Cas 221=29 Cr L J 493=A I R 1928 Lah 820 The tendency of English Courts to presume a tenancy in common rather than a joint tenancy has no ally the reverse

Presumpt on the absence dict on of a 329 There he course of accused for a preliminary enquiry and no inference can be drawn against the non disclosure of his defence at that stage. Kumar Prosad v Emperor 5 Pat L T 656=A I R 1927 Pat 292 Where there is nothing to indicate that the Court had not satisfied itself of the service of notice, it must be presumed that the Court was so satisfied. Amar Singh v Rala Singh 102 Ind Cas 17=A I R 1927 Lah 506 Where the posting of a registered letter is proved but it was returned with a note of the postman that the addressee refused to receive it the presumption arises that he refused to receive it. Sher Afal v Mohan Lal 94 Ind Cas 103=A I R 1926 Lah 520, see also Girish Chandra v Ashore Mohan 23 C W N 319 A school leaving certificate issued by a public servant in a native state can be presumed under s. 114 Evidence Act to be of the same character as a school leaving certificate issued in British India. Maharaj Bhanudas v Krishnabai 28 Bom L R 1225=50 B 716=A I R 1931 Bom 11 It is a violent presumption drawn from one's knowledge of human nature and of Indian village life which it is the duty of a tribunal in a case of dhatura poisoning to apply, namely, that the food pertaken at the evening meal by a husband in an ordinarily constituted house is prepared for him and served to him by his wife. Emperor v Har Puri, A I R 1936 All 73=9 Ind Cas

The mere fact that in the Revenue Records the sons of a particular person are shown as jointly owning land is not sufficient to raise a certain presumption that the person was the owner of the land. Nath Singh v Mohan Singh, 8 Lah

L J 485=27 P L R 721=97 Ind Cas 241=A I R 1926 Lah 659 By S. taking over the sale and paying the full price a co owner waived his own claim to sue, held such action on the part of the co owner is presumptive evidence that the sale by another co-owner was not bad for want of necessity Basant

Iddepalli v Itukmaramma, A I R 1935 Visu 222 When a person is at liberty to stop something done in his house and is found not to do so the presumption is that he is an accessory to the doing of that thing and he may loing of it Marika v
 the vacant plot of land it was he who built

to prove that it was he the Sind 716 The fact that been committed many any inference against 347 An attempt to fr against a convict of Crown, 86 Ind Cas 344
 (c) of s 64 A of the Be being proved that Cl (a) h under s 144 of manner required

(b) and ed, and it
 been published in the
ya Prasad, 9 A L J.

evidence or by both The question of the loss of the original is only material in so far as it may raise a presumption one way or the other under s 114 of the and consideration therefor from long continued payment of higher rate Idia, see also Pena Kasupha v Raja Rajeswar 42 M 475=50 Ind Cas 16 Conceal-taking along in a cart persons one of whom has blood stained clothes and a broken head and these persons are subsequently found to have taken part in

5. Jacoity recently before being taken away in the cart, the burden lies upon the cart man so found in the circumstances to disclose what he knows about the circumstances in which he was found. Failure to discharge the burden will lead the Court to the irresistible conclusion that he must have known that those persons were in that cart. Where by one bigger Gobind Ram A I R 1930 Pat 293-126 Ind Cas 369

CHAPTER VIII.

ESTOPPEL

115. When one person has, by his declaration, act or omission intentionally caused or permitted another person to believe a thing to be true and to act upon such belief, neither he nor his representative shall be allowed, in any suit or proceeding between himself and such person or his representative, to deny the truth of that thing

Illustration

A intentionally and falsely leads B to believe that certain land belongs to A and thereby induces B to buy and pay for it

The land afterwards becomes the property of A, and A seeks to set aside the sale on the ground that, at the time of the sale, he had no title. He must not be allowed to prove his want of title

Estoppel meaning of "Estoppel is when one is concluded and forbidden in law to speak against his own act or deed, even though it be to say the truth." Co Litt 35 (a); cited in Ashpital v Byron 3 B & S 474 (1889), Simon v Anglo American Telegraph Co (1879) 5 Q B D 188, C A per Bramwell, L J at p 202, Halsbury Vol 13 para 488. So there is said to be an estoppel where a party is not allowed to say that a certain statement of fact is untrue, whether in reality it be true or not. Estoppel, or conclusion, as it is frequently called by the older authorities, may therefore be defined as a disability whereby a party is precluded from alleging or proving in legal proceedings that a fact by the matter giving rise to that

The rule on the subject is thus laid down: "But words or conduct wilfully causes another things, and induces him to act on a position, the former is concluded from averring against the latter a different state of things as existing at the same time." "The whole doctrine of estoppel of this kind, which is fictitious statement treated as true, might have been founded in reason, but I am not sure that it was. There is another kind of estoppel—estoppel by representation—which is founded upon reason and it is founded upon decision also." Per Jessel M R in General Finance & Co v Laborator, L R 10 Ch D 15(20). So also in Simon v Anglo American Telegraph Co, L R 5 Q B D 202 Bramwell L J said: "An estoppel is said to exist where a person is compelled to admit that to be true which is not true and in act upon a theory which is contrary to the truth

"On the whole, an estoppel seems to be when, in consequence of some previous act or statement to which he is either party or privy, a person is precluded from showing the contrary of the state of facts. Estoppel is not to be taken as a rule of law, but as a rule of equity, and it is not to be presumed that a person is bound by it de jure

■ taken to be true, not as against all the world, but against a particular party, S. and that only by reason of some act done it is in truth a kind of argumentum ad hominem. Hence it appears that 'estoppels' must not be understood as synonymous with conclusive evidence,—the former being conclusions drawn by law against parties from particular facts, while by the latter is meant some piece or mass of evidence, sufficiently strong to generate conviction in the mind of a tribunal, or rendered conclusive on a party either by common or statute law." Best Ev § 533. Estoppel may accordingly be taken to be that which concludes the party against whom it is set up, from disputing his own averment, whether that averment be direct as for example the statement of any given fact or constructive as legally deducible from the circumstances, and the " can be Some m description of Lord Cole in which he says—"An estoppel is where a man is concluded by his own act or acceptance to say the truth' (Co Litt 352) as though the doctrine were based on the principle of shutting out truth by a technicality. It is founded however in fact, on no such absurdity. The whole principle of estoppel is, that what has once been affirmed or represented to be truth, or established to be so in a judicial controversy shall not be contradicted by either the affirmant, the party against whom it has been established or those claiming through him, to the disparagement of those who, being in a position to avail themselves of it, have acted on it, Goodere Ev p 532

Principle "In our old law books, said Mr Smith in his notes to the Duchess of Kingston's case truth appears to have been frequently shut out by the intervention of an estoppel, where reason and good policy required that it should be admitted. However, it is in no wise unjust or unreasonable but on the contrary, in the highest degree reasonable and just that some solemn mode of declaration should be provided by law, for the purpose of enabling men to bind themselves to the good faith and truth of representations on which other persons are to act." The general principle is thus stated by Lord Chancellor (Campbell), with the full concurrence of Lord Kingsdown, in the case of Cumincross v Lorimer, 3 H L C 829. The doctrine will apply which is to be found, I believe in the laws of all civilized nations that if a man either by words or by conduct has intimated that he consents to an act which has been done, and that he will offer no opposition to it although it could not have been lawfully done without his consent and he thereby induces others to do that from which they otherwise might have abstained he cannot question the legality of the act he had so sanctioned, to the prejudice of those who have so given faith previous licensee * Sarat Chandra v Gopal Chunder 20 C 296 (311)=10 I A 203. The principle that a party cannot both approbate and reprobate the same transaction, is applicable to Indian cases. The maxim is founded not so much on any positive law as on the broad and universally applicable principle of justice Shah Mahanlal v Srilishna Singh 2 B L R P C 41=11 W R P C 19=12 M I 157. It is a principle of natural equity which must be universally applicable that where one man allows another to hold himself out as the owner of an estate and a third person purchases it, for value from the apparent owner, in the belief that he is the real owner the man who so allows the other to hold himself out shall not be permitted to recover upon his secret title unless he can overthrow that of the purchaser by showing either that he had direct notice or something which amounts to constructive notice of the real title, or that there existed circumstances which ought to have put him upon an inquiry that if prosecuted would have led to a discovery of it Maung Lee Gale v Maung Kyau Yau, L B R. (1893-1900) 158

Estoppel is a rule of evidence. "An estoppel is not a cause of action—it is a rule of evidence which precludes a person from denying the truth of some statement previously made by himself Per Lindley L J in Lou v

5. Bowen, (1891) 3 Ch 82 at p 101. In the same case, at p 105 Bowen L J added "Estoppel is only a rule of evidence, you cannot found an action upon estoppel" Estoppel is only important as being one step in the progress towards relief on the hypothesis that the defendant is estopped from denying the truth of something which he has said. An estoppel filling up the gap in the evidence to produce this right to relief is found in the Railway Company, L R 3 Q B 581 "estoppel itself" Per Bowen L J in (1893) 1 Ch 618 at p 628. Similarly in Manman v Manman (1890) 15 Q B 503, C A, Farwell L J at p 144=78 L J P & A 74, said "No consent or admission can justify a decree, it is the duty of the Court to protect the public by seeing that a divorce is obtained only on proper evidence, and so fully is the interest of the public recognised in the matter that by the Act of 1860 (23 & 24 Vict C 144) s 7, any person may intervene between decree nisi and a decree absolute to show cause why the decree should not be made absolute on the ground of collusion or the suppression of facts, and the King's Proctor may intervene at any time during the progress of the cause or before decree absolute. The grounds and the only grounds on which a decree for dissolution can be made are set forth in section 27 of the Act of 1857. It is sufficient to say that a decree for judicial separation is not made available by the Act as one of such grounds. If such a decree is available at all, it is by virtue of the ordinary rules of evidence. I do not doubt that, as between the parties, the ordinary doctrine of estoppel applies, as was held by the Judge Ordinary in Finney v

by express section 31 by per oral any substantive right in rem representative. No estoppel of a point of law. Diamant Cas 665=A I R 1919 All both by plaintiffs as well as 9 Ind Cas 472=A I R 1977
Oudh 97 Estoppel is a rule of evidence which in certain circumstances prevents a person from denying established facts and compels him to abide by a declaration. Per Lord Shand in Sarat Chander Dey v Gopal Chander Laha, 20 C 296 (311)=19 I A 203 Perally v Saler Khanubai 7 Bom L R 100=A W N 1886, 101. Rule of estoppel affects substantive rights. Wahidan v

the Indian statute mainly act, and the principle to be most inequitable and or by conduct amounting to representation, has induced him to act as he would not otherwise have done the person who made the representation should be allowed to deny or repudiate the effect of his former statement, to the loss and injury of the person who acted on it. Per Lord Shand in Sarat Chander Dey v Gopal Chander Laha, 20 C 296 (311)=19 I A 203

Rule of estoppel whether applicable in criminal cases. The principle of estoppel has no place in criminal law. Mohoram v Emperor, 40 A 393=16 A L J 414=19 Cr L J 615=45 Ind Cas 51

Estoppel is neither admission nor presumption. The branch of the law of Evidence of which that of estoppel forms part is referred to by text writer as "a Good piece of evidence". It is therefore to be distinguished from those statements which become in themselves the foundation of independent rights for other persons, by virtue of some doctrine of substantive law—in other words binding estoppels, etc. Thus, if A claims that his boundary line runs to an oak tree, and B admitted this, B's extra-judicial admission of the boundary is not merely evidence for the truth of the other facts on which A rests his claim.

But if B has made his statement to A under such circumstances that A was justified in acting on it and has built up to the line he claimed, B's concession may by estoppel become the foundation of a new right for A, wholly irrespective of the validity of the grounds of his original claim. Here the field of substantive from that of presumptions in the circumstance that an estoppel is a personal disqualification laid upon a person peculiarly circumstanced from proving peculiar facts. A presumption is a rule that particular inferences shall be drawn from particular facts whoever proves them. Steph Introduction p 175

estoppel,
stantive
n other lifferent
waives

all right to deny, for the purposes of the trial, i. e., it removes the proposition in question from the field of disputed issues. But statements which are not estoppels or judicial admissions have no quality of conclusiveness and on principle cannot have. Wigmore § 1059 Estoppel like judicial admissions has the similar effect of concluding all dispute of the fact. But here the distinction is that the estoppel is an obligation made by a rule of law, of the same

§ 2539

Different kinds of estoppel according to English law. Estoppels according to English law have been divided into three classes (1) By matter of record (2) By deed (3) In pais

(1) By matter of record. A matter of record, as its name would import, is something that has been recorded in a court of law. It is at once the narrative and the more usual form in which the

of the Civil Procedure Code and sections 40 and 41 of the Evidence Act

Estoppel by deed. An estoppel by deed is that which binds the parties to the instrument and those claiming through them to its statements and operation, as an admission of the truth, thus, at least as to the matter intended to be affected by the instrument, and the facts recited in it. The solemnity of good Ad cense d for by the deed, and the deed contained a recital of the plaintiff having invented the improvements in question, invention being of course of the essence of the validity of the patent. The defendant pleaded that the invention was not, in fact, a new one; setting up the defence as a ground why he should be relieved from the liability to payment, contracted on the faith of the patent's validity. The Court, however, held him concluded, that is to say estopped, by the recital. It was observed by Mr Justice Farnham "The law of estoppel, is not so unjust or absurd as it has been too much the custom to represent. The principle is, of either fraud, illegality, or immoral purpose, it would not apply, and any of these grounds could be set up to displace the estoppel. The meaning of estoppel says Baron Morton 'is this—that the parties agree for the purpose of a particular transaction to state certain facts as true, and that so far as regards the transaction, there shall be no question as to the truth of the statement. It is opened where the statement is made for the purpose of the contract, for persons cannot be allowed to make a statement and then deny it.' Horton v Westmins.

Indeed it is not necessary that there be suppression or omission of the real truth. A woman securing to her a pecuniary payment in return for future cohabitation would naturally be silent as to the consideration, but being in fact for an immoral purpose it would be bad and the obligor would not be estopped from showing the nature of the consideration. Goodale L.R. 535. So also a party may prove that he never executed the deed, or that it was obtained by fraud or duress or otherwise tainted with illegality. Collins v Blenkinsop 15 Q.B.D. 369. Priestman v Thomas, 9 P.D. 70, 210, R. & H. 117. Q.B.D. 300, Poulton v Adjustable etc Co, (1903) 2 Ch. 430.

In general however in order to conclude the party by his deed by way of estoppel it should be pleaded for if his adversary does not rely upon the estoppel the Court and jury are not bound by it, but the jury may find the matter at large according to the fact and the Court will give judgment accordingly. He asks them their opinion, and they are bound to give it. Where, however, the title of the party is barred by estoppel and he has no opportunity of pleading it the jury are bound to find for him. Evans p. 461. In India the recital of the deed is binding as an estoppel. 100 Ind. Cas. 1037.

Ba. Bahar. A.I.R. 1927 All. 395. The strict technical doctrine of the English law as to

C. 1035. Where the plaintiff executed a deed of mortgage, he cannot afterwards sue to cancel it alleging that it was a fictitious one for the purpose of depriving the next reversionary heir of his right to the property. Mutazid v Bhogwan, 11 P.R. 1875. The doctrine of estoppel by deed in its technical sense cannot be said to exist in India. Johnstone v Gopal, 12 Lih. 516—A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 419.

Estoppel in cases of recital in documents. When a person with a limited interest in certain property styles himself the owner of it and mortgages it to another he would be estopped if he subsequently acquires the property from setting up his limited interest as against the claim of the mortgagee. And the auction purchaser of such proprietary interests of the mortgagor with notice of all the facts, being a person claiming from them would be equally estopped.

That the mortgagor had mortgaged the property to the mortgagee in pari delicto portion of the property to which he was himself a party, will not interfere to relieve him from its obligation. Where a person is guilty of a fraud in the acquisition of property, the law will not allow him to set up the fraud as a defence. Showing its real character, the claims of justice, equity and good conscience will be established. It is by allowing the law to be applied to the case of a party who has committed a fraud that the law is able to do its duty.

Sabuktulla v Hari, 10 C L R 199 In a suit for possession of lands, a plaintiff is not bound down by the recital, as to his vendor's title to the lands, in the document of sale, but is at liberty to prove such title differently. Gour Monee v Krishna Chandra, 4 C 397 The mere fact of a vendor declaring in her deed of sale of a moiety of a landed estate, that the other moiety did not belong to her was held not to be conclusive against her being the proprietor. Aunhoo v Boodhoo, 13 W R 2 The rule of estoppel by deed or by writing as now in force is this that, if a distinct statement of a particular fact is made in a deed and a contract is made with reference to that statement then the party who makes that statement cannot deny the truth of it. Thakur Abdul v Miyan Wahid Ali, 6 O C 355

Estoppel in pais. An estoppel in pais is that which, though not existing as matter of record or under the solemnity of a deed, may nevertheless under the circumstances, conclude equally with the higher species of averment. It may exist in writing not being under seal in oral statement, or even in conduct as were but few, and these existed its ownership. It was said by W 285 The acts of parties by way of estoppel are but few, and are pointed out by Lord Cole Co Litt 352 (a). They are all acts which anciently really were and in contemplation of law have always continued to be acts of notoriety not less formal and solemn than the execution of a deed such as livery, entry acceptance of an estate and doctrine that the maxim—(on applied under circumstances of great variety)—has grown up that a tenant or those claiming under him, cannot dispute the title of the landlord under whom they came into possession. This has been applied to the case where the letting was by an agent and the landlord unnamed, and the principle would extend to that of any party coming in under the permission of the owner as in the instance of a lodger a servant or any other licensee. Indeed so far has the doctrine been carried in practice, that where the object is the only course to be pursued to be pursued ejectment Goodere Ev 547 tance of a bailment Standard Bing 330 Biddle v Bond 6 B) 1 Q B

1 Deg 1 & J 33

Extension of the doctrine in modern times. In modern times and in more complicated relationships of society which have been growing up the doctrine of estoppel has been considerably extended in application beyond its more ancient limit, and especially in reference to the mercantile and more general transactions of mankind. It has been rested too less upon technical grounds than upon the broad basis of good faith and personal honesty—and the principle is to hold men to those representations whether written or unwritten—whether by word of mouth or of conduct—whether intentional or unintentional—upon the faith of which others have been induced to act to the change of any previous position. In a case which has always been regarded as a leading one on this subject, that of Richard v Scars 6 A & M 1148 the law was thus laid down by Lord Denman C J. But the rule of law is clear that, where one by his words or conduct, wilfully causes another to believe the existence of a certain state of things, and induces him to act on that belief, so as to alter his own previous position, the former is concluded from averring against the latter a different what later case of Gregg appendix to Pickard v my mind at the time of the trial, and the principle of that case may be stated even more broadly than it is there laid down. A party, who negligently or culpably stands by, and allows another to contract on the faith and understanding of a fact which he can contradict cannot afterwards dispute the fact in an action against the person whom he has himself assisted in deceiving. The former case, it will be observed might possibly seem by the expression 'wilfully cause almost to imply a fraudulent representation only; and to limit the application of the doctrine to that state of things,—while the latter extends it to a case of mere omissive silence or passive acquiescence, and that not culpable merely in the more obnoxious sense of the term but even negligent, and a good deal of discussion has arisen as to the precise limit of the rule. It is now, however, established that the word 'wilfully' is to be understood not in the sense of intentionally, but practically deceptive. Good E 551

The discussion of the proposition as laid down by Lord Denman came before the Court in the case of Freeman v Cooke, 2 Ex R 604, where Lord Mansfield in delivering the judgment, after adverting to the rule as laid down by Lord Denman, thus commented on it — "Whether that rule has been correctly acted upon by the jury in all the reported cases in which it has been applied is not now laid down in the term."

the party represents that to be true which he knows to be untrue at least, but he means his representation to be acted upon, and that it is acted upon accordingly and if, whatever a man's real intention may be, he so conducts himself that it is to be true, and believe that it was it as true the party asking from contesting its truth and a duty cast upon a person truth may often have the same effect. As for instance, a retiring partner omitting to inform his customers of the fact in the usual mode, that continuing partners were no longer authorized to act as his agents is bound by all contracts made by them with third persons on the faith of their being so authorized. Lord Mansfield's statement of the law was reviewed by Lord Campbell C J in Howard v Hudson 2 El & Bl 1 where he said "Now I accede to the rule laid down in Pickard v Sears, and in Freeman v Cooke. If a party wilfully makes a representation to another meaning it to be acted upon and it is so acted upon, that gives rise to what is called an estoppel. It is not quite properly so called but it operates as a bar to receiving evidence contrary to that representation as between those parties. Like the ancient estoppel this conclusion shuts out the truth, and is odious, and must be strictly made out. The party setting up such a bar to the reception of the truth must make the representation."

the rep makes exposition of the law given in the later case of Freeman v Cooke which in effect expounds the word wilful to mean simply intentional—and this probably accordingly, was what Lord Mansfield in the same case of Howard v Hudson too. A particular expression, observed in Pickard v Sears, has been used in the judgment in Freeman v Cooke. As it is important in any commercial case, in which a rule or criterion of law is a part of the law, and a principle of law is a principle of law.

S.

to another, and that other acts upon that false representation, the person who has made it shall not afterwards be allowed to set up that what he said was false, and to assert the real truth in place of false hood which has so misled the other. This is a principle of universal application, and has been particularly applied to cases where representations have been made so as to state the property of persons about to contract marriage, and where, upon the faith of such representations, marriage has been contracted. There, the person who has made the false representation has, in a great many cases, been held bound to make his representation good. And in a later part of his judgment, he thus adds — "These principles are plainly and perfectly intelligible, and quite consistent with good sense, and I am of opinion or decision to which I am a slightest degree, question their propriety."

has been carried, and may be carried necessary that the party making the representation should know that it was false, no fraud need have been intended at the time. But if the party has unwillingly misled another, you must add that he has misled another under but the person

It will not do
then that some come to him to make it good. The whole doctrine was very much considered at law, for it is a of the Rolls. An appeal was then preferred before the Lords Justices, and finally it came before the House of Lords. But up to this point,—(the doctrine as laid down by Lord Cranworth)—both in the lower appellate Court, and on the final appeal in the House of Lords, there was no difference of opinion among the Judges. Lord Cranworth, however, who, on the original appeal to the

she made that statement, she final appeal before the Lords

Justices, only terminated in ation accordingly of this ds, on its second and final to be Chancellor, found though he had at the same Chancellor, these being the three Lords by whom the appeal was heard, Lord St Leonards, was in the minority, and the ultimate decision was accordingly in conformity with the opinion of Lord Cranworth and Brougham. Had Lord Cranworth not to speak of that which a party held out his mind,

the terms
and were doubt the

5 alter his own the latter n what later cas appendix to my mind at the time of the trial and the principle of that case may be stated even more broadly than it is there laid down A party who negligently or culpably of a fac against it case, it will be observed might possibly seem by the expression wilfully caused almost to imply a fraudulent representation only, and to limit the application of the doctrine to that state of things,—while the latter extends it to a case of mere omissive silence or passive acquiescence, and that not culpable merely in the more obnoxious sense of the term but even negligent, and a good deal of the rule It is now, however be understood not in the sense of Lit 551

laid down by Lord Denning in Woolley, 2 Ex R 604, where Lord adverting to the rule as laid down whether that rule has been correctly in which it has been applied is not now the question but the proposition contained in the rule itself as above laid down in the case of Pickard v Sears must be considered as established By the term 'wilfully' however, in that rule we must understand if not that the party represents that to be true which he knows to be untrue, at least that he

the representation would conduct, by negligence or omission, where there is a duty cast upon a person by usage of trade or otherwise to disclose the truth may often have the advantage of longer author ed with third person ment of the law was reviewed by Lord where he said Now I Freeman v Cooke If a party wilfully makes a representation on which it is acted upon and it is so acted upon, that gives rise to what is called an estoppel It is not quite properly so called but it operates as a bar to receiving evidence contrary to that representation as between those parties Like the ancient estoppel strictly made out must show, both the representation and that he did so act

Though Lord Campbell in enunciating the proposition he was laying down makes use of the expression wilfully, it will be noticed that he adopts the exposition of the law given in the later case of Freeman v Cooke which in effect expounds the word wilful to mean simply intentional—and this probably accordingly, was Howard v Hurd particular expression in Pickard v Freeman v Cooke As the rule is there explained, it takes in all the important commercial cases in which a representation is made, not wilfully in any bad sense of the word not maliciously or with the intent to defraud or deceive but so far as

as an estoppel it must be a representation of an existing fact and of not mere intention or future promises. Also, estoppel, does not confer any title but is merely a rule of evidence which prevents one party from denying the existence of a fact which he represented as existing and upon which representation another person had been induced to act to his detriment. Hindustan Co-operative Society v Secretary of State, 56 C 939. A mere representation of an intention cannot amount to an estoppel. An estoppel must be a representation of an existing fact. If binding at all a representation de futuro must amount to a promise. Dhundo v Keshab, 7 Bom L II 179.

Estoppel in equity The modern or equitable estoppel is founded upon representations and arises out of Caspert, Estoppel p 18 The gener thus laid down "No body ought asserting a just demand unless by the truth or asserting the demand who would work some wrong to some other person mething, by Collie L R representation, I on this basis it seems to me that it is of the very essence of justice that between those two parties their state of facts which the two parties show Per Lord Blackburn in Burkin Caspert Estoppel p 19 It is a principle of natural equity which must be universally applicable that where one man allows another to hold himself out as the owner of an estate, and a third person the re permit purch amour which led to 376 67 L vide A 550, Pacific

The section whether exhaustive of all kinds of estoppels In Ganges Manufacturing Co v Souraymull, 5 C 669 at p 678 Garth C J said 'It has been further contended by the appellants, that ss 115 to 117 contained in Chapter VIII of the Evidence Act lay are now intended to be in force in British India as rules of Evidence; and that they are repealed, except those which the Act contains But if this argument were well founded the consequences would indeed be serious The Courts here would then be debarred from entertaining any questions in the nature of estoppel which did not come within the scope of ss 115 to 117, however important these questions & fallacy of the argument of evidence The enactment evidence It is founded upon Scars, II Ad & E 469 and other cases, that where a man has made a representation to another of a particular fact or state of circumstances, and has thereby wilfully induced that other to act upon that representation and to alter his own previous position, he is estopped as against that person from proving that the fact or state of circumstances was otherwise' - The rule of estoppel admissible to disprove facts stated by a party.

are matters of infinite variety, and are which are dealt with in Chapter VII of the estopped, not only from giving particula relying upon any particular arguments or contention which the rules of equity and good conscience prevent his using as against his opponent. A large number of cases of this kind will be found collected in the notes to Doe v Oliver 1 C. & D. 775; and whatever the true meaning of section 2 of prevent a person from giving t debar the plaintiffs in this ontention as against the rtresna Claudia 33 C 91b ice Woodroffe said 'Th

19 admittedly not a case of estoppel by misrepresentation which is dealt with by section 115 of the Evidence Act. Sections 116 and 117 of the Evidence Act deal with cases of this kind of estoppel viz of a Bill of Exchange.

It has been argued in part on the analogy of the tenancy law, but it has however been correctly submitted that these sections are not exhaustive of the doctrine of estoppel by agreement. See also Bharganta Beulah v Hummat Bida'ar 20 C W N 1935 (140); Gotta v Sivaram, 23 M L J 330, In re United Indian Sugar Mills Co Ltd 1930 A L J 305=A I R 1930 All 330, but see Asiatic Petroleum Co v Harendra Lal 35 C 901=12 C W N 721=8 C L J 31, where none of the previous cases were considered. This equity differs essentially from the equity of estoppel by representation, which is not a rule of law.

of the previous cases were considered. This equity differs essentially from 115 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, which is not a evidence that was formulated and applied in Courts by its origin from the jurisdiction assumed by the Courts in the case of, or to prevent fraud, Munir v. State of India, 29 B 580-7 Bom L 115 of the law of estoppel, by which the Courts in India are to be governed are found in s 115 of the Act there is no need to fall back upon the analogies of the Mahomedan Law in a case of presumption arising between the Hindus. Ajundhia Chaudhuri v Chhatarpal 4 A L J 10-

A W N 1907, 88

Requisites of section 115 To constitute an estoppel under this section the following are necessary, namely, —

It must have been made known to the party that it (5) The other party must have been induced to act upon it (Brynum v Preston 69 Texrs, 287-5 Am St Rep 49) (6) Or acts conduct or declarations of a person, by which he designedly induces another to alter his position injuriously to himself but it must be executed and not merely executory Camp Rul Cas Vol XL 104

Declaration, act or omission This section deals with a case of estoppel by misrepresentation. Rup Chand v Saraswar, 33 C 915 (921) Under this section such misrepresentation may be made by declaration act or omission. Jetha bhai v Aasha bhai, 28 B 399 (407) "It is a very old head of equity" said Lord Eldon in Erans v Bidel 11 Ves 183 "that if a representation is made to a person, and he acts upon it, it is a matter of interest upon the faith of that representation that he should not be treated as not having seen it."

296 Where there is no representation by a person to whom the plaintiff has been induced to believe and truth must have been unaccessable. Mohammad v Mohammad, A I R 1930 All 817, Johnstone v Gopal, A I R 1931 Loh 419, Abdul Mahboob, G Luck 382. The law on the subject is thus stated by Brett J in City & London & North Western Railway Co., L. R. 10 C. P. 347—H. L. J. S. C. P. 10.

"If a man by his words or conduct wilfully endeavours to cause another to believe in a certain state of things which the first knows to be false and if the second believes in such a state of things and acts upon his belief, he who knowingly made the false statement is estopped from averring afterwards that such a state of things did not in fact exist."

"If a man either in express terms or by conduct makes a representation to another of the existence of a certain state of facts which he intends to be acted upon in a certain way and it is acted upon in that way in the belief of the existence of such a state of facts, to the damage of him who so believes and acts, the first is estopped from denying the existence of such a state of facts."

"If a man what ever his real meaning may be, so conducts himself that a reasonable man would take his conduct to mean a certain representation of facts and that it was a true representation and that the latter was intended to act on it in a particular way and he with such a belief does it in that way to his damage, the first is estopped from denying that the facts are as represented."

"If in the transaction itself which is in dispute, one has led another into the belief of a certain state of facts by conduct of culpable negligence calculated to have that result, and such culpable negligence has been the proximate cause of leading and has led the other to act by mistake upon such belief to his prejudice, the second cannot be heard afterwards as against the first to show that the state of facts referred to did not exist." This view was approved of in the much later case of Stonington & Co. v. Lyons, L. R. 19 Q. B. D. 68, by a unanimous judgment of Lord Fisher and Lords Justices Fry and Lopes. In that case Lord Fisher said: "An estoppel does not in itself give a cause of action; it prevents a person from denying a certain state of facts. One ground of estoppel is where a man makes a fraudulent misrepresentation and another man acts upon it to his detriment. Another may be where a man makes a false

In Lord's
instances of cases innocent misrenegligence. It a man's conduct
Pt. 468. Estoppel inference from the facts found. To create an estoppel it is not sufficient to Col. 1: 1. It is to be held that the statement would have acted in the way he id as a fact defendant
ed another Narsingday

Intentionally. Ex parte S. & Co. v. S. & Co. 171 L. R. 109 at 171 Lord Newman represents that to be true which he knows to be untrue, at least that he means his representation to be acted upon, and that it is acted upon accordingly and if whatever a man's real meaning may be, he so conducts himself that a reasonable man could take the representation to be true, and believe that it was meant that he should act upon it and did act upon it as true, the party making the representation would be equally precluded from contesting its truth, and conduct by negligence or omission, when there is a duty cast upon a person by usage of trade or otherwise to disclose the truth, may often have the same effect—as for instance, a retiring partner omitting to inform the customers of the firm in the usual mode agents is bound of their being and 'The word 'wilfully' which is used in the judgment of Pickard v Sears has been well commented upon in the judgment in Freeman v Cooke. As the rule there explained it takes in all the important commercial cases, in which a representation is made, not wilfully in any bad sense of the word, not maliciously or with intent to defraud or deceive but so far wilfully, that the party making the representation on which the other

That is the true criterion' See

Coventry v Great Eastern Railway

Lafone, L R 19 Q B, D 68, Cornish v Abington, 4 H & N 549

no ground for the suggestion that the person making the representation which induces another to act must be influenced by a fraudulent intention

Chunder v Go

cases of Ganga

7 M 3 Lord

majority of the Judges that if the element of fraud be wanting there that case also) the Court seems to have taken the view that in order to constitute an estoppel, the representation founded on must have been made with an intent on to deceive, and an opinion was indicated that the law of estoppel under the Indian Evidence Act in some respects differed from the law of England. It was there said (7 Mad 8) 'The term intentionally was, no doubt, adopted advisedly. By the substitution of it for the term 'wilfully' in the rule stated in Pickard v Sears 6 A & E 469 and explained in Freeman v Cooke, 2 Exch 634 and Cornish v Abington 4 H & N 549, it was intended to exclude cases in which it was not intended to deceive. In this view On the contrary, as the rule had been modified in England by there substituting the word 'intentionally' in the rule established for the word 'wilfully' which had been previously used it seems to their Lordships that the term intentionally was used in the Evidence Act for the purpose of declaring the law in India to be the same as the law in England. A person who by his declaration to act upon the meaning of true, and believe was given

'Estoppels arise on various grounds, says West M A in L R 19 Q B D 68, 'all of which the judgment in Carr v North Western Railway Co, L R 10 C P 307, endeavours to state, and each of the grounds on which an estoppel may arise, there stated, is intended to be independent and exclusive of the others. An estoppel does not in itself give a cause of action; it prevents a person from denying a certain state of facts. One ground of estoppel is when a man makes a fraudulent representation, and another man acts upon it to his detriment. Another may be where a man makes a false statement negligently, though without fraud, and another man acts upon it. And there may be circumstances under which, where a misrepresentation is made without fraud and without negligence, there may be an estoppel.' While it is not in all cases necessary to show actual knowledge of the facts on the part of the one against whom the estoppel is claimed, it should at least be shown that the declarations were made under such circumstances that he ought to have had such knowledge or that they were made negligently and recklessly. Lafone

Thorn's, 13 Corn R 772. He cannot urge, as an excuse, that he had forgotten them. When a person through misapprehension, ignorance or inadvertence, does acts or makes declarations which mislead another to his injury but when at the same time there is no wilful deception or culpable negligence and no intention that the representation should be acted upon as true by the other party and when nothing accompanies it that is equivalent to a promise that the representation is true, the person making the declarations or doing the acts is not estopped from proving the truth against the party thus misled. It follows that there is no estoppel when the declarations are made in good faith and in ignorance of the real facts in other words when made innocently and by mistake. J. & J. nee & 277, Westminster v. L. & L. 26 P. L. R. 1903. It is not essential that the intention of the person making the declaration should be to induce another to act or abstain or that he should not have been under

Dun v. Dugan 118 Cal. 411 L. 1421. Under this section it merely may there be active inducement on the part of the declarant of a belief in the mind of another person but it is enough if declaration is such by which the declarant in the ordinary course permits some body declaration and to act on that belief. Barclay N. 473 = 41 R. 1923 Cal. 419. It is not present received that there should be any connection with the misrepresentation which is the subject of estoppel. Barber v. Jugel 3 Pat. L. J. 451 = 35 Ind. C. 173.

Who can take advantage of the representation. Only the person to whom the representation was made or for whom it was designed can avail himself of it. A person who receives statements at second hand, not intended for him, clearly has no right to act upon them. In fact it is equally clear that a mere by-stander who has overheard a statement made to and for another has no better right to act upon it than if it had been communicated without authority to him; and so it has been decided. If however, the declaration was intended to be acted upon by some third person who is not here it, but to whom it was time to be allowed for acting of the law more than that act not his own or that of his

Only such person can take advantage of a representation for whom it was meant. Jogesh Chandra v. Entaz Ali, A. I. R. 1927 Cal. 31 = 97 Ind. C. 625. Estoppel applies not only in favour of the person induced to change his position but also in favour of a transferee of such a person. Bhujilal v. Shro Gohul, 7 L. R. 213 (Rev) = 15 Ind. C. 770 = 22 C. W. N. 891. To the decree holder it is likewise. Sicaminatha Vallala v. Durnahiga, representations, induce others to

How a representation may be made oral or written. G. I. P. Ry v. Hammand presentation a party cannot be estopped. D. 134 = 1922 P. C. 319 = 16 L. W. 692. A representation to form the basis of an estoppel may be made by statement or by conduct; and conduct includes negligence. Halsbury Vol. 13 p. 377; Freeman v. Cooke, 2 Lx Ch 654.

representation is as to some state of facts alleged to be at the time actually in existence. If the representation be binding

299 (497)
orge White
30), where His lordship said
If it is anything it is 118-8

. and fect 161, ake

us, for instance, where a person leads another to believe that Though such him his heir and then leaves his property away from him breach of the ands, it
ntation
him elf
it
First
Ed 637;
139; Ind
bour
The
Commissioner, 16 W R 34; Chidwick v. Manning, (1836) A C 2 of estoppel by representation is applicable to some state of facts alleged
as 164;
principle
on where denying sioner 16
47,
that utions
i not acts"
appel
A C 117=
1 Qr 149=

National Bank of New Orleans, L Sailesh v Bechar, 40 C L J. 67; In Fairfield S B Co v Gardnre, 101
Cas 385, Bayrang v Bhagican, 11 O
Commissioner, 16 W R 34; Chidwick v. Manning, (1836) A C 2 of estoppel by representation is applicable to some state of facts alleged

.
1
A representation as to a future con anc
1
33 Ind Cas 355

Estoppel, whether should be pleaded An estoppel in pais need not be also to be in order to make it obligatory Cira Rau v Reiana Rau, 2 M H C h

.
A C 117=
1 Qr 149=

.
that utions
i not acts"
appel
A C 117=
1 Qr 149=

.
A C 117=
1 Qr 149=

.
A C 117=
1 Qr 149=

.
A C 117=
1 Qr 149=

.
A C 117=
1 Qr 149=

.
A C 117=
1 Qr 149=

.
A C 117=
1 Qr 149=

.
A C 117=
1 Qr 149=

.
A C 117=
1 Qr 149=

.
A C 117=
1 Qr 149=

Nag 916 A question of estoppel can only be raised by Dhanpat, 52 Ind Cas 739, Shaikh Abdul Hakim v Mt Barira, C Pat L J 273=

2 Pat L. T. & G.-61 Ind. Cas. 847; East Srup v. Myers Stanton, 46 P. R. 1918-35 P. L. R. 1918-37 P. W. R. 1918-37 Ind. Cas. 670; Perennay v. Baid, 47 Ind. Cas. 953; Chand v. Sarda, 22 C. W. N. 179. Defence of estoppel can always be taken if it is warranted by the facts proved or admitted even if these facts have not been specifically pleaded. Cooperative Loan v. Shanmugam, A. I. R. 1950 Nag. 25.

Onus of proof. To entitle a plaintiff to recover from a defendant, on the ground of estoppel, a loss occasioned through culpable neglect on the part of the defendant the plaintiff must prove that the negligence complained of occurred in the particular transaction in which his loss arose, and also that such negligence was the proximate direct or real cause of the loss. Longman v. Bith, 1 Ch. Tr. Times, 74 L. J. Ch. 474-(1905) 1 Ch. 616. A person who relies on estoppel by negligence must show that he was led into the belief on which he acted to his detriment. A solicitor was ordered by his client to investigate the title to and prepare a conveyance of property adjoining his (the solicitor's) property. In the conveyance a small portion of the solicitor's property was confused, but the client did not believe that he was buying the small portion in question. The client subsequently brought an action claiming the land. Hell, that the solicitor was not estopped from setting up the truth. Bell v. Marsh, 72 L. J. Ch. 30-(1901) 1 Ch. 574-581 L. T. 605-61 W. R. 925. The estoppel must be strictly interpreted and any point in doubt must be decided against the estoppel. Abd. Smith v. Norman Smith, 6 Lath. L. J. 45-50 Ind. Cas. 525-1924 Lath. 469. The onus of establishing facts giving rise to estoppel is upon the person who pleads it. Ugra Sen v. Jind, 35 A. 723, Ahmed v. Safian, 97 Ind. Cas. 597, Brenley v. Butuntha, 46 Ind. Cas. 474; see also Sheo Tahal v. Bhanel Shukul, 1931 A. L. J. 653-A. I. R. 1931 All. 659.

When truth of the matter known to both the parties no estoppel arises. When the party affected has received timely notice that the representation is not true, he cannot enforce the estoppel. Dunston v. Paterson, 2 C. H. N. S. 195, Sandys v. Holgion, 10 Ad. & El. 472. So the party claiming the estoppel must not himself have been negligent. "Where the condition of the title is known to both parties, or both have the means of knowing it, there can be no estoppel." Brant v. Virji, Knouff v. Thompson 16 Penn. State 361.

To learn the truth. Morgan v. Farrell, L. Vol. XI p. 103. This section does not apply to a case where the statement relied upon is made to a person, who knows the real facts, and is not misled by the untrue statement. There can be no estoppel where the truth of the matter is known to both parties. A false representation, made to person who knows it to be false, is not such a fraud as to take away the privilege of infancy. Mohiree Dhee v. Dharmodas, 30 C. 639 P. C. -30 I. A. 111-7 C. W. N. 411-5 Bom. L. R. 421. Estoppel by conduct does not arise where the party misled had no means of knowing the truth. acts Maung Si v. Ma Kyol, when the truth of the matter v. Sorolar Singh, 27 C. 407. When both parties are

L ay
P eq
of
A
A k
~

1
F
k
1 2
t

property to D who was aware of the title of the parties Swad: v Gost: 36
 C L J 78 Where the position the admission of the parties which did nothing not operate as an estoppel in the present suit Mehra v Dew Ditta 2 Lab 88 =3 Lab L J 223=62 Ind Cas 1665 There cannot be a case of estoppel where the person pleading the estoppel was put on notice and would by reasonable ad v Ananda
 where the state is not misled
 by the untrue statement Jaramath v Jaikishor Prosad, 1 Pat L J 16=31 Ind Cas 375 Estoppel does not arise where both parties have equal means of knowledge both of the facts and of the law Tel Chand v Gopal Datta, 13 Ind Cas 482=46 P R 1912, see also Prasanna Kumar v Sitalanto Raut 16 C L J 202=17 C W N 137 There can be no estoppel where the whole of the record, deed or document in which the statement relied on is contained, shows the truth Menanji v Secretary of State, 14 Bom L R 651

Estoppel by representation—change of position brought about by it A by word or conduct induces B to believe that a certain state of things exists and B in that belief acts in a way in which he would not have acted unless he so believed and is thereby prejudiced, then A cannot in any subsequent proceeding between himself and B or any one claiming under B be heard to deny that that state of things existed. But A will not be estopped from averring the truth in any other proceeding. The estoppel only arises in favour of some person whom A has induced by word or conduct to do or abstain from doing some particular thing Powell v Maltby 469 Where one by his words or conduct wilfully causes another to believe the existence of a certain state of things, and induces him to act on that position, the former is concluded from aver-state of things as existing at the same time So it is clear that if a person so conduct draws a certain inference and acts thereon the person so conducting himself cannot gainsay such inference Cornish v Abington, 4 H & N 519 Carr
 v L & N W Railway Co, L R 10 C P 307, In re Blackley Ordinance Co, (1867) L R 3 Ch 154, Hollins v Fowler, L R 7 H L 757, Newton
 v Iddiard 12 Q B 975, In re Collie 8 Ch D 817, Horsfall v Halifax and Huddersfield Union Banking Co, 52 L J Ch 599, Couldrey v Burtum 19 Ch D 304 The other party must have acted upon the act or conduct Daniels v Ev Ins Co 48 Connecticut, 105, Earl v Stevens, 57 Vermont 474 Before an estoppel can take place it would be necessary for the party relying on the same to establish that he had been led to do something detrimental to his own interest owing to the action of the other person Nisar Ali v Muhammad Ali 119 Ind Cas 337=A I R 1929 Oudh 494=6 O W N 519 What this section mainly regards is the position of the person who has been induced to act, and the principle on which the law rests is that it would be most inequitable and unjust to him that if another by a representation made or by conduct otherwise to deny
 of the without fortunate

for him, but it would be unjust even though he acted under error, to throw the consequences on the person who believed his statement and acted on it as it was intended that he should do estoppel has been occasioned to whom

v Shafi 1931
 R 390=A I R 1931
 been created, the main person, to whom it has v Das, 4 C. L. J 373
 act on the faith of a fact the question such fact

in an action against the person whom he has assisted in deceiving. An estoppel of this kind is not created by a wilful, negligent and culpable misrepresentation, unless the person so deceived does not act in accordance with the misrepresentation. Innes v Topley, 70 P R 186. The meaning of this section is that no declaration, act or omission will amount to an estoppel unless it has caused the person whom it concerns to alter his position and to do this he must both believe the facts stated or suggested by it and act upon such belief. Durga v Jhinnora, 7 A 111-A W N 1885 1886 see also Silino v Lally Lam Lal, 7 C L R 481, Jhinnora v Durga, 7 A 1886 (1 R)-A W N 1886 10, the statement not having been made to the person who seeks to render the other liable, and not having come to his knowledge as a matter of no avail, and it not being shown that he has acted on the faith of such statement. Timmenson v Thompson, 31 L J 12 267. It is a settled principle of the rule of estoppel that in order that a particular declaration, act or omission of a certain person may constitute estoppel against him the person to whom it is made must show that he in accepting the truth or the truth thereof has acted upon such detriment. Immed v Gaffan, 97 Ind Person making a representation cannot subsequently deny what he represented when the person to whom it was made acted upon it. Deval Nigpur Pulchay v Co-Operative Hindustan Bank, 111 53 C (22-97 Ind Cas 606-A I R 1926 Cal 10-9. Where the plaintiffs made statements in a suit inconsistent with those made by their father in a previous suit against the same defendants but the plaintiffs did not claim the property in suit through their father and there had been no change in the position of the defendants by reason of the prior inconsistent statement, the plaintiffs were not estopped. Nripendra Nath v Bisanta Kumar, 29 C W N 861-89 Ind Cas 207-A I R 1925 Cal 1105. A tenant desiring to erect jucca structures on the leased land asked the permission of the landlord whose agent in reply wrote to say that the lease was a permanent lease and gave the tenant right to erect buildings, but it did not entitle him to hold at fixed rate and that the rent was liable to enhancement after proper legal notice and that pending consideration of a proposal to fix the rent permanently, the tenant might commence the house if he liked. Held that the statement of the latter was a statement of fact and not an expression of opinion, and the house having been erected, the landlord was estopped. A H Forbes v L J 543 (P C) In effect prevents the plaintiff, the plaintiff, induced by had a fixity of tenure, them. It gives effect to the representation that induced them to act as they did. In the case of Tamsdin v Dyson, L R 111 L 129, the principle which governs this class of cases is stated by Lords Kingsdown in the following terms—"The rule of law applicable to the case appears to me to be this. If a man, under a verbal agreement with a landlord for a certain interest in land or what amounts to the same thing, under an expectation, created or encouraged by the landlord, that he shall have a certain interest, takes possession of such land, with the consent of the landlord and upon the faith of such promise or expectation, with the detriment his previous position Bhagwan Singh v. Dhanraj, 22 Ind (Rev), Gusain v. Ram Ralha, 50 Ind Cas 123, Abdulla v. Fateh 62 Ind Cas 809

Before advantage can be taken of the doctrine of estoppel, the presentation of the action of the party seeking to estop as cause and effect. There must be admission on the part of the person sought to be estopped, a declaration, act or omission the person seeking to estop was led to believe a thing to be true and, thirdly, that by such act or omission the party seeking to estop was not only led to believe a thing to be true which in fact was untrue but to act upon such belief to his prejudice. Ram Boran v. Ram Nihora, 57 Ind Cas 263, see also Giriyabai v. Sadasiv, 22 Bom L R 974-58 Ind Cas 394; Kannulal v. Gaur Saha, 5 P L J 521-1 P L T 546-57 Ind Cas 353; Rajib Hussain v. Ling Raju, 54 Ind Cas 962; Harlal v. Basanta Singh, 75 P. W R 1918

Where by his admission of a compromise before the Revenue Court, the plaintiff induced the defendant to withdraw his suit in that Court, he is estopped from bringing another suit in a Civil Court. Gulab v. Badhana, 45 Ind Cas 331. Before applying the rule of estoppel it must be shown that a previous inconsistent statement in some way affected the result of the litigation in which it was made. But if the defendants were never proper parties to the previous litigation they cannot in any way be estopped from pleading something inconsistent with their former statement. Raghunath v. Sheolal, 13 N L R 69-39 Ind Cas 849. If a man under a verbal agreement with a landlord for a certain interest in law, or what amounts to the same thing, under an expectation created and encouraged by the landlord that he shall have a certain interest, takes possession of such land with the consent of the landlord, and upon the faith of such promise or expectation with the knowledge of the landlord and a Court of equity will give effect to the expectation. The Crown Act, 1872, which is not limited and applied in its jurisdiction as limited by fraud. There is no estoppel where a person seeks to deny a promise made by him in land was not originally moulded in a form recognised by law; the Court of Equity will give effect to the promise. Secretary of State v. Morrison, 52 L J Ch 622. Morrison v. Universal

Marine Insurance Co, L R 8 Exch 197, Hell v. Marsh, (1903) 1 Ch 622. Halsbury Vol XIII p 384. The mere payment of money under a mistake of fact induced by the representation in circumstances when there is not the slightest difficulty in getting it back is not such damage or prejudice as will stand by while the owner of the land afterwards for the contrary. Murray v. Murray, 11 Ch 622. The fact that the owner of the land has asserted a certain right on the assumption of fact against persons who were parties in the previous suit. Edwards v. Edwards, 11 Ch 622.

v. Sheo Chaudh, 102 Ind. Cas. 481. A party cannot approbate and reprobate with knowledge of the facts, and if the husband or the wife once deliberately affirms the marriage he or she cannot subsequently object to the marriage. Therefore, where a previous petition for declaring the marriage a nullity has been dismissed by consent of parties a second petition is not competent. H. v. H., 20 Bom. L. R. 523-110 Ind. Cas. 26-A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 27. Where the widow of a deceased co-partner who died divided in status from the other co-partners allowed the other co-partners to sell to one of the family members including herself in order that the heavy debts due by the family may be discharged, thereby here by participating in the benefit that had accrued from the transaction, she Munshi Chaudh v. I. advantage of the de loose with justice and

Ind. Cas. 286-A. I. R. 1925 Fmd. 175. A Hindu co-partner who takes property under the Will of another co-partner and acts up to the terms of the Will is estopped from subsequently contending that the Will is invalid. Lakshminamma v. Sreenivasa, 101 Ind. Cas. 679-A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1066. Where a testator having either no title or an imperfect title to land devises it by specific description to or upon trust for a person for life with remainder over, one who obtains, or accepts, or retains possession of property under the Will and who neither has, nor proposes to have, any title thereto except under the Will, is estopped as against any remainder man or other person claiming under the same Will from asserting that the testator was not entitled to such an estate in the property as to be entitled to be executor, test and generally from setting adverse to,

 taken it,
 by him to 12. It is a that, where to, and a third person purchases it for value from the apparent owner, in the belief that he is the owner, he cannot afterwards allow the other to set himself out

Unless a person is found guilty of either an overt act or of an act of omission which is likely to induce the other side to believe that he is entitled to commit the particular act complained of there can be no question of estoppel. A plea of estoppel in such case can only be maintained if the conduct of the person against whom the estoppel is alleged, is found to be fraudulent. Ram Dutt v. Chhotah, 4 O. W. N. 1019. Where the vendor by his conduct induced a belief in the vendee that he had a good title to the property he is estopped from going back on the same, even where he was not fully aware of his legal rights. Uatu Doyal v. Lalji Sahai, 25 A. L. J. 878. Where certain lands belonging to a talukdar were wrongly described as rent free lands in the village accounts but on a reference to the they were accounts
 ped from

by giving effect to their previous the lands.
Sur Singh v. Secretary of State, 28 Bom. L. R. 1213-A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 590. No actual verbal representation is necessary to give rise to estoppel. It is quite enough that the conduct of the party leads another to act in the belief that he asserts no claim to the property. Azizullah v. Ghellam, 17 S. L. R. 63-80 Ind. Cas. 991.

Where par
 Co. of the

his claim was r neous cause in

Mullesar, 21 A 316 = A W N 1899, 101 In order to avail him self of the doctrine of estoppel, the plaintiff should prove that the defendant, by representation which he knew to be unfounded intentionally misled the plaintiff into a position prejudicial to the interests which he would otherwise have possessed Pichurayyan v Subbayyan, 13 M 178 In order to prevent the owner of land who is charged with standing by and allowing another person, who believes he had a good title thereto, to enter on the land and spend money in improving it, from recovering possession thereof, fraud and deceit on the part of the owner must be clearly proved, Langlois v Rattray, 3 C L R 1 In order to raise an equitable estoppel against the lessors, it is incumbent upon the lessee, to show that the conduct of the owners, whether consisting in abstinence from interfering or in active intervention is sufficient to justify the legal inference that they had by plain implication, contracted that the right of tenancy, under which the lessees originally obtained possession of the land should be changed into a perpetual right of occupation Beni Ram v Kundan Lal, 21 A 496 (P C) = 3 C W N 502 A plea of estoppel by general conduct raised by the plaintiff will fail if it is proved that a proper inquiry would have acquainted the plaintiff with facts Phundo v Bhisma, A W N 1883, 246 The plaintiff who upon misrepresentation by defendant, released a right to him, believing his statement in preference to getting information any where, which information he might have easily obtained, is relieved from fulfilling the terms of the release Meli Ravi v Denu Dayal, 73 P R 1869

The rule of estoppel ought not to be applied rigorously as against a poor woman The same inferences should not be drawn from or same construction should not be placed upon, her silence and delay in bringing a suit as might be reasonable and proper in another case Kaniz Fatima v Abbas Ali, A W N 1887 84 The Court ought to decline to relieve a party asking for it who has countenanced the acts of which he complains Bhyro v Mussammal Lekhrane Kori, 16 W R 123 Where a representation is such that a reasonable person would act on the faith of it the person who has made the representation cannot get rid of the estoppel by saying that the person, to whom he made the representation would not have been deceived if he made proper enquiry Nandalal v Sukkman 13 C P L R 30

Parties who, by false representation, induce others to enter into contracts are estopped from afterwards falsifying their statements, and, if necessary may be compelled to make them good Radha Krishna v Shureesunnisa, W R 1864, 11

A judgment by consent raises an estoppel, just in the same way as a judgment after the Court has exercised a judicial discretion in the matter Laxmishankar v. Vishnuram, 1 Bom L R 534 = 24 B 77 An attesting witness to a Will cannot sue to have it quashed on any ground, as he is estopped from doing so by being an attester of the Will Jumma v Juam, 188 P. R 1893 Though the person, who elects to take a legacy under a Will, may be estopped from setting up a title contrary to its provisions, still, if such person be in possession, he cannot be ousted except by one who can prove a better title to the property Probodh v Harish, 9 C W N 309 On a decree being passed on compromise, the judgment debtors will be estopped from objecting to the execution of the same Kashi Das v Ishan Chander, 31 C 314 (P C) = 9 C W N 49 The Civil Procedure Code allows of a decision by an umpire in certain events and hence, parties, who have submitted to the decision of an umpire without taking any objection cannot afterwards call that decision in question in a Court Kupru v Venkatarammaya, 4 M 311 A person can be precluded by his conduct from objecting to an irregularity in procedure which he himself invites Timmanna v Putabhatta 2 Bom L R 90 Where interest has been paid by a banker to a depositor at a certain rate per cent, a renewed deposit will also carry interest at the same rate, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary; and the banker will be estopped from questioning such rate Mikundi v Balakrishna, 3 A 328 The owner may be, in respect of a trade-mark, as in respect of any other right, estopped by his conduct from denying the title of another person Larouque v. Hooper, 8 M. 149 A purchased possession of property, in the name of B, and allowed B to occupy and retain possession of the property B mortgaged the property to C for a valuable consideration If A and those claiming through him were estopped from asserting as against C, his or their title to the property and the mortgage was valid Hally Dutt v

And Chandler, March 29; Putnam v. Putnam, 3 W. R. 87; Putnam v. Putnam, 18 W. R. 120; Putnam v. Putnam, March 29. On a decree of compromise, the judgment of the court will be stayed from effect to the execution of the same. Kish v. Putnam, 31 C. 214 (P. C.) 1 C. W. N. 42.

If a gentleman entrusts to his own men of business a blank paper duly mimed as a bond, and signed and sealed by himself in order that the instrument may be duly drawn up, or money raised upon it for his benefit, and if the instrument is afterwards drawn up, and money obtained upon it from persons who have and must in the absence up in accordance with Super. Div. 5 C. 39)
by X and Y's omission properly. Chun humun
fusing a registered letter

A person having right of pre-emption may dispute or affirm the validity of the sale of the land to a third person. If, by his conduct towards the venditor for the sale, he makes the latter believe that he has elected to affirm the sale, he is estopped from attacking the sale or enforcing his right of pre-emption over the property. Bura John v. Jiganna 135 P R 1948. In a pre-emption suit on the foreclosure of a mortgage, the mortgagor did not appeal from the foreclosure decree but allowed the auction to take place under it. Hell that such conduct was sufficient to impute that the mortgagor had acquiesced in the sale being made absolute. Jouaher Ali v. Kalandar 135 P R 1842. A obtained a decree for pre-emption against B on condition that the price should be paid by A. A mortgaged the land to C and A did not pay the price. In a suit by C to enforce his right of pre-emption, Hell, that B having accepted the mortgage from A and made A believe by such conduct that he treated him as the proprietor of the land in question was estopped from pleading as he did. Gulrang v. Panna 131 P R 1830.

morig
not lie
name
name

entered into a Hell it does in plaintiff's
 has mortgaged

✓ mortgages property as unencumbered when as a matter of fact, it is subject ✓ to a charge, cannot, when he subsequently becomes himself entitled to enforce ✓ such charge, set up such charge against the mortgagee Ridhey Lal v. Mahesh
Prasad 7 A 864

If a creditor, in execution of a money decree which he holds against his debtor, sells certain property as that of the latter, he will be estopped from afterwards setting up, as against the purchaser, a previous mortgage which had been created in his own favour of which he had given no notice to the purchaser at the time the property was sold and in ignorance of which the purchaser bid for the property and paid the full price Agoichand v Balkha the mortgagee, and

the decree for paying off the mortgagee, the mortgagor passes to the purchaser the effect of may
not

A mortgagee, who has the mortgaged property, disclosing his mortgage lien, against the title of a bonafide id v. Shib Sahar, 21 A 309= execution of a money decree puts in property for sale without notice of his mortgage and thus allows an innocent he is estopped

possession was given to defendants in virtue of an unregistered mortgage deed and gave their consent to the mortgage, they could be equitably estopped from claiming possession of the same property under a registered instrument as against the Where a his mortga bidder, an subsequen
v. Mayer, 11 C 100
case of Pickard v. Sears (6 Ad. & El 40), that where a man by his words conduct wilfully induces another to believe in a certain state of facts, so as embodied
under Roy & C

Where a mortgagee relinquished the debt and the bond and the mortgage security in consideration of his getting some other land instead and the relinquishment was acted upon by a third person to his prejudice the as not made led also that enurance of Shina Redi

was unencumbered, held that by such conduct he the prior date of his encumbrance would, had he acted otherwise, have entitled him. Rai Seeta Ram v Kishun Dass, 3 Agra 402 A man who has represented to an intending purchaser that he has not a security in property to be sold, and induced him under that belief to buy, cannot, as against that purchaser, Munoo Lal v Lalla Chooner of half of a certain piece of land only two-fifths of the said land the spectively to a brother and sister it was endorsed by his sister This an assignment amounted to an estoppel as against her, or any one claiming empowered his acquie-

from setting
escence took induced him
P. R. 1882
to enter into the sale transaction Nihola v. Dhanoo Where without objection, a defendant allowed a purchaser of the plaintiff's interest in the suit to substitute his name on the record (the original plaintiff having withdrawn from the suit), he was estopped from contending that the suit had abated. Bar Chandra Roy v Bansi Dhar Roy, 3 R L R A. O 215. An auction purchaser not questioning the acts of his predecessor within 12 years will be estopped from objecting. Sidyal v Goura Roy 18 W. the judgment debtor, with the co. and asked for time for paying. contest the validity of the sale if. On his prayer being granted, he without paying the full decretal amount on the day fixed, took further time. Held, that it would be contrary to reason and equity that he should turn round and repudiate the agreement, and that the agreement estopped him from contesting the legality of the sale. Ultam Chandra v Khetra Nath, 29 C. 577.

A purchaser of land, who lies by for five years allowing another person to occupy the land and afterwards to sell it, is estopped by his own conduct from afterwards claiming the land from a bona fide purchaser without notice. Mohesh Chandra v Kaur Chander, 1 Ind Jur N S 266. A plaintiff suing to realise his security under a mortgage is estopped from recovering on the or to buy without notice of brought the property to sale. a person in execution of a hypothecation to his partner, ascer, and the sale has taken place, obtains an assignment of the hypothecation deed and sues on it, he is estopped from denying that the sale took place free of encumbrances. Kastura v Venkatasahayappa, 15 M. 412. Where a decree holder, by mistake, put up to sale he is purcl purcl Propri 265. Person who steps in during an auction sale, assumes the character of a principal laches in questioning the alienation, but are also found purchasing the land from the transferor to the exclusion of the other collaterals, or cultivating the lands under the purchasers, or exchanging it with them, they must be taken to have acquiesced in the alienation and estopped from suing to contest it. Amur v Zelo, 42 P. R. 1902.

should have been sued against does not operate as an estoppel against him from contesting its validity in a subsequent suit. Mohunt Das v Nil Komal, 4 C. W N 283.

The maxim caveat emptor applies to execution sales. In execution proceedings a judgment-debtor is not bound to come forward. In the absence of any misleading on his part so as to estop him from asserting his title, mere silence on the part of the judgment debtor, or his omission to come forward, cannot operate as an estoppel. Gurupada v Irappa, 14 B 558. A decree altered by agreement of parties with respect to the mode of payment and the interest payable, cannot be executed as a decree. And the acquiescence of the judgment debtor in it Debi I debtor for under section 115 of the Evidence Act so as to preclude him from maintaining that the execution of the decree is barred by lapse of time Mina Koonuar v Jagat Setam 10 C 196-13 C L R 385-10 I A 119 P C. A judgment creditor by putting up the rights and interest of his judgment debtor in a talook for sale in execution is not estopped from afterwards claiming a portion of that talook under a different title, e.g. under a mortgage Chunder Kant v P 11 W 17 W I. the sale thereby at a high anterior

Hossain, 10 C L J 605-4 Ind Cas 739. The auction purchasers at the execution of a decree were not estopped from asserting, as against a person claiming to be a mortgagee prior to the sale of the property purchased that in fact the property was their own independently of the auction sale. Pantil Hanuman v Musti Issadullah 7 N W P 145. There could be no question of estoppel by conduct by who derives his title from the former Tasanji v heir, though he cannot prove a Will, under which he claimed a larger share in a former litigation in which no question of inheritance was raised. Moulvi Ahmedoolah v Gour Huree, 15 W R 251. When in a suit for redemption the assignee of a usufructuary mortgage put forward or consented to put forward the original mortgagor as the person entitled to redeem, he is not thereby estopped from afterwards giving for redemption in his own account, for the defendant could not be said to have been in any way induced to alter his position or to do any act in consequence of any conduct on the part of the plaintiff. Mahammad v Vannu 11 A 386-A W N 1859 136. Where a plaintiff, who was the nearest heir, allowed other heirs to join him in a redemption suit and such heirs spent money and actively assisted in prosecuting the litigation the plaintiff could not, after recovering the property, assert his superior title as the nearest heir, and that he was estopped by his conduct from asserting such superior title the principle being that where a person has conducted himself so as to mislead another he cannot gainsay the reasonable inference to be drawn from his conduct. Bhagwant v Rayu 9 Ind Cas 415. Where a person brought on the record, at the instance of the decree holder, as the representative of his brother and had also claimed a share and it was then decided that the property was the sole property of the deceased and that neither he nor his brother had a right to share therein Rajamannor v Venkata Krishnayya 25 M 361-12 M L J 183. Where a purchaser under a registered instrument purchased the property with full knowledge of the existence of an optionally registrable but unregistered encumbrance thereon the doctrine of equitable estoppel applied and the purchaser could not claim as against the said encumbrancer. Miran v Ramasa, 6 C P L R 112. In a suit for pre-emption under the Oudh Laws Act, the defendant, in order to establish a plea of estoppel has to prove that the property was offered to the plaintiff at a certain price and that he expressly consented to the purchase of the property by the defendant.

venue and the Court should not be satisfied with anything short of this. Some Judges have thought that such a plea should not be allowed at all in a case like this. Bank of Upper India v. Muzila Hoj, Prasad 10 O C 257. Where tenants have paid, for a period extending over fourteen years, an enhanced rate of rent an implied contract to pay at the same rate in future years may be inferred though they now and then expressed discontent without however resorting to the Revenue Courts for redress. Their conduct in accepting rates containing these terms even after protest may operate as estoppel in subsequent years. Bangthi v. Ringappa Appa 1 Ind 17 M 51. A grantee of lands as long as he holds a religious office in a temple is estopped from setting up a title inconsistent with that of the grantor and an alienee from such grantee is similarly estopped and the alienation itself is invalid as against the trustees of the temple. Thayilagam v. Venkatarama Krishnayyan (1916) M W N 119-33 Ind Cas 688. When a grantor, by a recital is shown to have stated that he is seised of specific estate upon the assumption that such an estate was to pass an estate by estoppel is created between the parties and those claiming under them, in respect of any after acquired interest of the grantor, the newly acquired title being said to feed the estoppel is applicable to Hindu conveyances in cases before the Privy Council. Krishna Chandra v. Iyad Lal 33 C L J 701-21 C W N 218-53 Ind Cas 663. It is not competent to a mortgagee to go behind a mortgage to dispute the right of the mortgagor to enforce redemption. Jingji Ram v. Sheoraj Singh 30 Ind Cas 231. In a suit by a creditor to recover money the debtor pleaded that the plaintiff was bound by the terms of a contract arrived at between the debtor and a third person for the purpose of paying off the plaintiff's debt. There was no proof that the defendant was induced by the plaintiff to break his contract with the third person. In the circumstances the defendant could not invoke the aid of the doctrine of equitable estoppel against the plaintiff, and content that he was bound by the contract entered into with Commercial Bank Ltd. Compromise is not estopped the instance of another. 111 v. Prasanna Kumar 31

In Cas 859. Agreement of rent by a lessee held from the mortgagee on behalf of the mortgagor. Invalidation of the mortgage on behalf of the mortgagor. 764 On the of a share be allowed but without co is it a that the alienation of the 1st defendant giving up his section 115 does not apply and there is Jana (1915) M W N 237-28 Ind Cas

536 Where land stood in Revenue Registry, and the tax receipts appeared to be in the joint names of husband and wife the very fact that the wife was living on the property sought to have put the mortgagee on enquiry to ascertain what her real interest was. So she was not estopped from showing that the land was her sole and separate property. P L R M Mejappa v. Ma Mejel 8 Bur L J 124. Under Hindu Law a son has from birth an indefeasible right as a coparcener in the family property and mere unfriendliness on the part of his father cannot destroy that right unless and until he is regularly separated off and given his share of the family estate. He is therefore competent to contest the alienation of ancestral property if opposed to the principles of Hindu Law. But he loses his competency under s 115 of Act I of 1872 where he has condoned all that his father has done and he

5.

the Court to grant him a declaratory decree
Alam Shah v Nur-anah Shah, 63 P 8 Ind. Cas 801. An act may involve, and may create an estoppel. So, if a man take an active part in carrying out a mortgage on behalf of another, as by signing the deed, his acts may amount to a declaration of the validity of the mortgage as against any claim but his own. Mussammal Buro v Mir Muham 100 D. I. P. 1019, 201-1 C. 201.

debtors who were jointly liable under the decree in his favour no under the decree. Held that the person who omitted to raise the objection was estopped from denying that the judgment debtor was still the owner of the decree. operative Town Bank v S V K Shunni, 0 Rang 265. Persons opposing appeal in particular Court is estoppel then accepted the payment of Rs 10 and the case was remanded to the

 The defendant having accepted the compensation money was equitably

1584 = A I R 1930 All 8
Sheikh Dhannu v Sheolal, Ram Samej, 134 Ind Cas
uadu, 131 Ind Cas 669 =
 A I R 1931 All 216, Mh
v. Tirunarayana, A I R 1932 Mad 198; Omrao v. Ramkis, 11
 Lah 281

Mistake A mere mistake in a deed common to all parties or, on account of which no one
 create an estoppel
 L. R. 11 Eq 12
 party Halsbur
 Bom 64; Syed
 Ind Cas 639 =

whether this time of the se, 26 C
 view was
 n Dharria
 "On the mortgage id No 133
 to have the deed cancelled on the ground that it was an infant. This could be interpreted by Ganesh I that having regard to that section proof of fraud on the part of the infant is not essential. The learned Judge in that case relies on the fact that in Sarat Chunder v Gopal Chunder, 20 C 296 and in Mills v Fox, 37 Ch. D. 153, no the Evidence Act in respect, I am unable to which the learned

Judges in that Court rely as substantiating their proposition when carefully examined appear to one not to warrant the conclusion arrived at. This has been pointed out by Mr. Justice Jenkins, and concurring as I do in his criticism I need not refer to what he has said. The case of Mills v Fox, 37 Ch. D. 153

I said "Then it was Evidence Act by his infant may estop him—would be practically contract by his ocation isability out of or it and Barlett

v Welle, 1 R. & S. 836. It follows therefore that when the present law declares that an infant shall not be liable upon a contract, or in respect of a fraud in connection with a contract he cannot be made liable upon the same contract by means of an estoppel under s 115. I, therefore, agree that there is no estoppel whatsoever in this case founded upon any representation or alleged representation on the part of the plaintiff. On appeal to the Privy Council, their Lordships said "But their Lordships do not think it necessary to deal with that question now. They consider it clear that s 115 does not apply to a case like the present where the statement relied on is made to a person who knows the real facts and is not misled by the untrue statement. There can be no estoppel where the truth of the matter is known to both parties." Mohors Bibee v Dharma Das, 30 C 639 (P. C.)—7 C. W. N. 441. In Jagor Nath v Lalla Prosad, 31 A 21—5 A. L. J. 674, Banerjee J said "I do not however, deem it necessary to express any opinion on the point, although it

if it be
to say that by deed s imposed

on the capacity to contract. So if a person sues an infant upon a contract such contract having been entered into on the faith of a representation by the infant that he was of full age the infant will not be estopped from pleading his minority in answer to a claim to fix him with personal liability for a money

But though this section acting on well recognized "ud" In the latest case of 'The question in this appeal estoppel against the minor led himself to them as a major leed in their favour. It is the view of this Court differing from a minor must now ons of their Lordships Jai Kishore, A I R the plaintiffs respondents it is argued that the question was expressly reserved by their Lordships of the Privy Council as early as Mohori Bibee v Dharmodas Ghose, 80 C 539 (P C) = 7 C W N 441 and the consistent decisions of this Court from Ganesh Lal v Bapu, 21 B 198, Dadasaheb Dasarathrao v Bai Nahanit, 41 B 480 = 41 Ind Crs 180 = 19 Bom L R 561; Jasraj Basinal v Sadashiv Mahadev, 46 B 137 cannot be held to be overruled by the observations in the recent Privy Council case, Sadiq Ali Khan v Jai Kishore, supra, particularly as similar observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council are to be found in Mahomed Syedol v Yeoh Doi, 43 I A 956 (P C) = 19 Bom L R 163. This last, however, was a case from the Strait Settlements and their Lordships observed 'A case of fraud by the appellant on the subject of his age was set up, but it cannot be doubted that the principle recently given effect to in the case of R Leslie Limited v Shell would apply and such a case would fail. In that case it was held by Lord Sumner and other Judges that where a minor by fraudulently representing that he was of full age induced the plaintiffs to lend him money, such an action by the plaintiffs to recover the amount of the advance on the ground that he had obtained it by fraudulent misrepresentation must fail, even though fraud was proved against the minor. On the present question, the other High Courts have differed from this Court. Dhurma Das v. Brahma Dutt, 25 C 616 = 2 C W N 53 on appeal 26 C 381, Akhan Gul v Lakha Singh, A I R 1928 Lrh 609, Vaikentarama v Anthumoolam, 38 M 1071 = 29 Ind Cas 749, Jagannath v Lalla Prosad, 31 A 21 = 5 A L J 674 = (1905) A W N 267, Ganganand v Rameshwar, A I R. 1927 Pat 271 = 6 Pat 398. As for the observations of the Privy Council in the recent case of Sadiq Ali v Jai Kishore supra, cited for the appellant, the arguments are not reported, but the Courts differed. Their held that the mort ecuted by them was a t of minority being s of the deed founded on is sufficient for the decision of the case such a deed executed by minors being admittedly a nullity according to Indian law and incapable of founding a plea of estoppel. I am unable to interpret this decision otherwise than as overruling the view of this Court and as agreeing with the view of the other Courts. No amount of argument can the view of this Court be utted by minors is incapable of his view of the law, even if in les minors, the general intention the rule of evidence in this section substantive law in s 11 of the Contract Act per Best C J in Chitturam v Crase, 5 Bing 177. Balagowrada v Gadigippa, 31 Bom L R 340 = 118 Ind Cas 698 = A I R. 1929 Bom 201, see also Maung Sin v. Ma Lun, A L J 1927 Rang 103 = 5 Bar L J 441. If a minor by his conduct, allow his mother to act as the guardian of her sons and manager of the family property and to mortgage it, it is immaterial for the purposes of estoppel that his conduct was due to a mistaken impression as to his age. Nathubai v Mulchahund, 3 Bom L R. 525. A minor, who manage his own affairs, and covering again the same Singh v Shree Nanfin, evidence of fraudulent representation on the part of the minor, the principle of estoppel cannot be invoked. Kumar Gangmanul Singh v. Utharaja Sir Rameswar Singh, 6 Pat 338=8 Pat L T 739=102 Ind Cis 419-A I R 1927 Pat 271; but see Jiraj v. Satriu, 1923 H 169. The mere fact that the purchaser from the guardian of a minor of properties belonging to the minor took a letter from the minor stating that there was necessity for the alienation does not estop the minor from impeaching the sale, so long as it is not shown that the minor caused or permitted the vendee to believe that necessity existed. Sitaram v. Mulchand, 115 Ind Cis 175-A I R 1929 Nag 221. Where a minor executes a sale deed honestly representing that he was a minor and the vendee believes that representation and acts upon it, the minor is not estopped from setting up his minority and the sale is void as a plea. Koluri v. Phumulari, 23 L W 521=94 Ind Cas 853-A I R 1929 M 107. This section is no more than a nullity.

no one
a minor
contract. Punjab v. Bhagat Rao, 96 Ind Cas 803-A I R 1926 Nag 491. When in a suit a person then alleged to be a minor was represented by his brother with whom he the suit, he is estopped against him in majority just one.

In I C 603=24 A L J 817-A I R 1926 A 673. A minor is not estopped from setting up his minority. Hari v. Roshan 1923 Sind 6=71 Ind Cas 161. The conduct of minors cannot be pleaded in defence of their right to repudiate the act of their guardians during their minority. But if their guardians had acted for their benefit and after attaining majority they continued to derive the benefit which the transaction conferred on them, it is not open to them to take advantage of the absence of registration, particularly when the parties can

n
ir
C
T
h
A
h
is a bar to a suit for ejectment on the expiry of the lease. Ponnuswami v. Subramanian, 53 I J Cas 419. A minor is not estopped from pleading his minority.

another that he is a major, and that other lends money on a promissory note signed by the minor the minor may be in a suit on the promissory note estopped from pleading his minority. Jasraj v. Sadashiv, 23 Bom L R 975, see also Harij Mal v. Abdul Halif, 20 Ind Cis 267, Lemudomal v. Ghurumal, 14 S L R 101=62 Ind Cas 237, but see Jambagathachi v. Rajamannarsami, 57 Ind Cas 678. But where there have been no misrepresentations by a minor as to his age or where misrepresentation has not misled the opposite party there can be no estoppel and infancy can be successfully pleaded. Wasinda v. Sita, 1 Lah 389=59 Ind Cas 393. Gadu

Kundan v. Magan, A I R 1 minor, represented to the he was a major and sold to him possession of the house, he being a person within the contemplation of this section and having by direct declaration intentionally caused the plaintiff to believe that he was a major, was precluded absolutely from denying the truth of that assertion. Dadasaheb v. Bai Nahani, 19 Bom L R 561=41 B 480=41 Ind Cas 180. But the law of estoppel must be read subject to other laws such as the Contract Act, and a minor cannot be made liable upon a contract by means of estoppel under s 115 of the Evidence Act. Golam Abidin v. Hem Chaudhari, 20 C W N 418=32 Ind Cas 389. As a general rule, except in cases of fraud the doctrine of estoppel is not applicable to an infant, and the Court is never astute to hold

5. that his acts &
his contracts,
admissions of 17 C W N. 10 A min
guardian, though it may against him in a quest
v Susila, A I R 1933

the
w far it militate
Nandamur

Person "The term 'person' in this section is amply satisfied by holding it to apply to one who is of full age, and competent to enter into a contract and I cannot bring myself to think that it could have been the intention of the Legislature, by such in the law of estoppel in 26 C 381=3 C W N 413=111 Ind Cas 175=, that the person in this Balanagouda v Godigeppa 1929 Bom 201, but see "person" in this section should not be narrowed down so as to exclude Asinda Ram v. Sita Ram, 1 Lah 389=59 Ind Cas 393.

Admission whether operates as estoppel Admissions do not operate by way of estoppel but it is for the party making them to explain those admissions. Secretary of State of India v. Tidyarat, A I R 1929 Lah 718. An admission made by the defendant when both the plaintiff and the defendant were under Manyan, 7 L R 201 (Rev) in various cases that he was an ex-proprietary the law cannot create estoppel against 5 A 43 (2)

Attestor of a document—if and when estopped The mere attestation of a party does not estop him from asserting that he had the knowledge of the contents of a document or that he was not bound by the recitals in the document. Shuba Ram v. Ram Pyara Mall, 116 Ind Lah 224=112 Ind Cas 89=A I R agon Singh, 47 C L J 189=107 Ind V 533=26 A L J 553=A I R 1913. The mere attestation of a document cannot Chrup v. Krishen Sahai, A W N 1883, 142. Abdul Aziz v. Abdulla, 26 P L R 215=7 Lah 1 R 1925 Lah 413; Azizullah v. Ghulam, 10 Ind Cas

815. Attestation of a deed whatever except that he independent Pan luranj

35 C. L. J
7 Ind Cas

264. Party estopped from pleading fraud It is not open to a party to plead Ram Lal v. Har Lal, 237. Estoppel is an of his rightful claims further of his rights particularly to conceal his shall be allowed 3 A 257 (Rev) ged, fraudulently endorses it over to another person, cannot, in a suit by such person for the recovery of the consideration paid by him for the hundi, set up the forgery of it as a bar to the suit Bishnu Churn v. Rajendra, 5 A 302=A W N 1883, 6.

A person sued for possession of half the properties on the ground that it was joint property of himself and the defendant. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiff's share was sold to him by the plaintiff. The plaintiff was held under these circumstances to be estopped from denying that the sale was colourable. to the rule of pari delictum he 39 P. R. 1892; see also I. Ojodhyaram, 6 W. R. 31 (P. C.)—It is not possible for a party who does not come into Court to have recourse to the doctrine of estoppel. 20 C. W. N. 677—33 Ind. Cas. 762. A judgment debtor defeated by showing that the attached house did not belong to the judgment debtor, the judgment debtor cannot claim either the ownership in the whole house and site or the equitable interest to the extent of the sums spent in building the house. Suba Rao v. Veeramayya Siam, A. I. R. 1930 Mad. 293—126 Ind. Cas. 279.

Estoppel cannot be set up against a Court to give effect to a statute. Mad. 622. Singh v. All India Co., 433; Cal. 1929. A law giving rise to the jurisdiction of India Ltd., A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 802 and unlawful by statute, a party cannot, by representation, any more than by other means, raise against him an estoppel so as to create a state of things.

cannot create a state of things which a Court can give effect to. Cal. 1929. A representation as to a question of law cannot give rise to an estoppel. Rajambai v. Shanmuga, 70 Ind. Cas. 653—

1923 Mad 11 There cannot be any estoppel against a statute and a statutory defence not set up in a prior suit can be set up in a subsequent suit. Nisar Chandra v Bhust Molla, 65 Ind Cas 851. So there is no estoppel against the Act. W N 329=1922 Cal 436=49 C 437=51 Ind Cas 403; Bangshi v Umar, 5 Luck 731=A I R 1930 R 1930 Nag 191, Mirza v Hanta Lou v Sulhara, 58 C 1452=50 Pat 431=30 C W N 354 P C, 1930 M L W 300.

Sibai Subramania v Subramania, A I R 1932 Mad 409=25 M L W 300. Bimalabala v Deb Kinkar, A I R 1932 Pat 267. An admission on a point of law is not an admission of a "thing" so as to make the admission matter of estoppel within the meaning of s 115 of the Evidence Act. Jogant v Swan 21 A 235=A W N 1=85, 66; Tel Chand v Gopal Das, 13 Ind Cas 482=45 P R 1912. No estoppel can be pleaded against the directions and prohibitions enacted by the statute law and against the rights accruing to any party by reason of such directions and prohibitions. Chudambarachalliar v Vaidil, 123, 38 M 519.

There can be no estoppel against an Act of Parliament or against an Act of legislature provisions of 135=35 B 67. 4 Ind Cas 4. Ripusudan mortgagee is inapplicable. Haridas, 42 C 455=19 C W N 203=20 C L J 183.

Declaration, act or omission must be of an unequivocal and unambiguous character. To create an estoppel against a party, his declaration act or omission must be of a certain character. Vilo 6 Bom L R 864. It must be clear. India, 2 H. Raghunath tion, act of Astamoorth as an estoppel cannot be created by an ambiguous document so too it cannot be created by an ambiguous act. Mamasa v Sallayyu, 46 Ind Cas 609. A representation, to found an estoppel, must be clear and unambiguous, not necessarily susceptible of only one interpretation, but such as will reasonably be understood in the sense contended for, and for this purpose the whole document must be read. 891 8 Ch 82 C. A. anagh, (1902) A C 117. rd Building Society v his is merely an application. "must be certain to" 379; see also Ram v 25; Goyanan v Nilo Lab L J 45.

Plea of acquiescence—Necessary elements. Where one person constructs a building on another's land though the owner of the land was aware that the building was allowed to be constructed and that he could not after such lapse of time turn round and ask for a demolition of the building. Muhammed Hussain 891=255=A I R 1932 A I R 1932 years before the construction, c.

deception only where there is duty to speak; in other words, as Digelow points out, 'duty to speak, which is the ground of liability, arises wherever and only where silence can be considered as having an active property, that of misleading' (Digelow on Equity, vol I, p. 517). To take one illustration 'The silence of A in the presence of B and C who are negotiating in regard to a sale of property, from B to C, estops A from claiming the property as against C, upon the conclusion of the sale but knowledge by an owner of property that silence may be treated as a true cause of the change of position, in the other case, it cannot be so considered. The question consequently arises, whether there has been on the part of the defendant a disregard of a duty to speak. As was observed by Lord Chancellor Thurlow in For v Mackrell, 2 W & T L C 703, has been taken which would not have taken obligation on the party to bring his silence concealment which must amount to a fraud in the sense of a Court of Equity, and for which it will grant relief, is the non disclosure of those facts and circumstances which one party is under some legal or equitable obligation to communicate to the other, and which the latter has a right, not merely in foro conscientiae, but jure et de jure, to know" Per Moulsterjee in Joychandria v Srinath, 1 C L J 23 (25)=32 C 357, see also Mohunt Das v Nil Komul, 4 C W N, 283, Mier. Doyal Mouji, II Bon one of the three brothers knowledge of the building on the land fact that they knew asserting their own rights they were consequently estopped from asserting those rights in a suit Dhanpal Das v Guwandutta, 2 Lab 258=61 Ind. Cas 120=10 P L R 1922. An absence from interference on the part of the owner of land, upon which another man is building does not raise an equitable estoppel against him. In order to estop the owner, it must be proved that besides his abstinence there was a mistaken belief in the builder that the land was his own property. Mahammad Umar Jarga v Mora, 6 A L J 57=1 Ind Cas 821, see also Ismael v Broughton 5 C W N 816

thus, is no application where the person who is acting is under no duty to speak. Kanchan v Kamala, 21 C L J 441=29 Ind Cas 734. A duty to speak arises whenever a person knows that another is acting on an erroneous assumption of some authority given or liability undertaken by the former, or is dealing with or acquiring an interest entire or main cause, but one of the causes of the change of position, and whether upon due regard to all the circumstances, it is just that the defendants should be prejudiced in the manner in which they have been prejudiced by the omission of the plaintiff to speak Thomas Bonclay v Syed Hossem 6 C L J 60 When silence is of such a character and under such circumstances that it would be a fraud upon the other party, for the party which has kept silence to deny what his silence has induced, it will operate as an estoppel Jol pomull v Saroda, 7 C L J 604

Estoppel by omission The acquiescence or estoppel which will deprive a man of legal rights must amount to fraud. A man is not to be deprived of his legal rights unless he has acted in such a way as would make it fraudulent to set up those rights. The element, or the requisites necessary to constitute fraud of that description are these — In the first place, the plaintiff must have made a mistake as to his legal rights (e.g. expended some money or must have done so (e.g. sold defendant's lands) on the faith of the defendant's representation. The possessor of the legal right must know that the defendant's representation is inconsistent with the right claimed.

inconsistent with the right claimed. If he is in the same position as the plaintiff and the doctrine of acquiescence founded upon conduct with a knowledge of your legal rights. Fourthly, the defendant, the possessor of the legal right must know of the plaintiff's mistaken belief of his rights. If he does not, there is nothing which calls upon him to assert his own rights. Lastly the defendant, the possessor of the legal right must have encouraged the plaintiff in his expenditure of money or in other acts which he has done either directly or by abstaining from asserting his legal right. Where all these elements exist, there is fraud of such a nature as will entitle the Court to restrain the possessor of the legal right from exercising it but nothing short of this will do. Hemangini Debi v. Bijoy Singh 73 Ind. Cas. 273, see also, Bishan Singh v. Bulanda 4 Lah. L. J. 419. The estoppel under this section may arise by reason of either a declaration, an act or omission, but in either case there must be an intention on the part of the person against whom the estoppel operates to cause or permit a belief in the mind of another. In the case of a mere omission, no such intention can well be imputed unless the true facts are known to the person whose omission is in question, but where there is a deliberate declaration or act causing or permitting such belief and inducing another to act upon it, it must be presumed that such declaration or act was intended to have its ordinary and natural effect upon the mind and actions of the other party. Rail v. Forbes, 3 Pat. L. T. 467-67 Ind. Cas. 744-(1922).

P 209 Mere acquiescence on the part of the true owner, or omission to volunteer any advice or assist in ascertaining the truth by such owner. A person acted in such a way as

The illustration to section 115 of the Indian Evidence Act sets forth what one is bound who intentionally and falsely leads a purchaser to suppose he is taking a perfect title. There is an obligation to truth in speech, and act, but no obligation to speak or act where no confidence is given or accepted merely for the purpose of guarding or furthering the interests of strangers proceeding wholly in meritis and with an omission to inquire which is equivalent to knowledge. Basantappa v. Ranu, 9 B. 96.

S died leaving three sons and a daughter H who was the plaintiff in this case. S died more than 12 years prior to the suit, and upon his death his three share of inheritance under the Mahomedan Law, by avoidance of the deed of sale mentioned above. The defence to the action was that the plaintiff, having omitted to enter her name in the Government record, was estopped from maintaining her claim against the defendant who was a transferee without notice. Held, that there was no evidence on the record to show that the omission on the part of the plaintiff to have her name entered in the Government Revenue records were intentional within the meaning of s. 115 of the Evidence Act or that it was by reason of such omission that the defendant altered his position so as to operate as an estoppel against the plaintiff and that, as the plaintiff's title was admitted, she should get a decree in her favour. Gobardhan v Hirsat, A W N 1887, 110. The doctrine of estoppel cannot be said to rest absolutely upon any notice of duty on the part of the person sought to be estopped; and the word "omission" used in section 115 of the Evidence Act does not mean only an omission to perform a duty as is prescribed by law. Munak Ram v Rani Sutar, 27 Ind Cas 611.

Estoppel by waiver. Where a party to a suit agreed to a decree in favour of his opponent on certain conditions which were not afterwards fulfilled and by their conduct in the course of a suit preclude themselves in a subsequent suit from asserting rights which they have waived deliberately. Jinti v Kama-lathammal, 7 M H C 263. A waiver is an intentional relinquishment of a known right or such conduct as warrants an inference of the relinquishment of it unless the person against whom the rights and of facts which could or the enforcement of such rights. No ignorant that it has been committed and confirm it. Dhanul Dhar v Nathu, 12 B & B 128. Darby v Louden R Co, 11 L C 223. Austen v Chambers, 6 Cl. & F 1. La Banque v La Banque 13 App Cas 11. Imbala v. Whitehall, 6 C. L J 111. Nripati v Jalindri, 91 Ind Cas 407. Jahanlar v Rani Lal, 37 C 440.

Order of Court. There can be no estoppel where a party acts under a mistaken impression as to the legal effect of an order. Abdulla Sahib v Muhammad Husain, 5 Mys L J 182. An involuntary act done by a person in pursuance of an order of Court cannot operate as an estoppel against him and prevent him from enforcing the remedy given to him by law. Isha Dey v. Bala Lal, 115 Ind Cas 67 = A I R 1929 Lah 42; see also Mani Lal v Durga Prasad, 5 Pat L T 425 = 3 Pat 930 = 60 Ind Cas 667 = 1924 P 673 = 1924 Pat 254; Balagobind v Sheo Kumar, 82 Ind Cas 181 = 2 A L J 791. Where a party has adopted an order of the Court, and acted under it he cannot after he has enjoyed a benefit under the order contend that it is void for one purpose and invalid for another. Jogeniranath v Khola Buz 72 Ind Cas 354.

Application of equitable estoppel in case of part performance. Where there the poss les ejec be C 1 pow the actings and conduct of the parties have carried the incompletely executed engagements into effect. The doctrine of part performance has not been applied in a case when a Hindu widow even though remains in possession thereof. Raj Baha Ind Cas 822 = 2 Pat 677 = 4 Pat L T 33 will not fail to support a transaction clothed imperfectly in those legal forces to which finality attaches after the bargain has been acted upon. The law of India is not inconsistent with the principles applied by equity in such cases but on the contrary follows them. Mahomed Musa v Aghore Kumar, 19 C W N 251. When in pursuance of an agreement to transfer property the intended trans- and not been ecuted subject uined between time as the

5. subsequent legal question falls to be determined Gajendra Nath v Moulari, 27 C W N 159, see also Pitamber v. Ramcharn, 28 C W. N 157

Estoppel and Adoption In a suit by reversioner for a declaration that an adoption, by a widow is invalid, no estoppel arises as against the plaintiff by reason of the mere fact that he concurred in the adoption which was supposed to be a valid Gurlingasuamy v Ramalakshma delivering the judgment on this point estoppel can arise from ignorance of law which law The adoption took place in 1858 considerations consequent on the growth of under an invalid adoption concurred in both of a religious act option generates

by marrying him to a girl of her own caste at the funeral ceremony of her husband estoppel by adoption Kanabumal v Virasami 15 M Vinayak Rao v Lalshumlat 11 B 381 A widow represented that she had authority to adopt, and the ceremony of adoption was carried out on the faith of the representation and the marriage of the adopted son was celebrated by the adoptive mother, the adoption was then challenged by a reversioner and the adopted son in order to defend his right incurred heavy responsibilities, held, that the adoptive mother was estopped from maintaining a suit for a declaration Kunuar v Balwant Singh, 5 Dharma 349, see also Durga v Khushpalo, A 397=5 M L J 66

The rule of estoppel by conduct does not apply to a case where no doubt was entered and all the belief in conduct contributed to the persistence of the adoption in that belief, and that in consequence of the inheritance. Where an adoption from her deceased the circumstance of an invalid adoption only when, by a course of conduct long continued on the part of the family which has purported to affiliate him, his situation in his original family has been so altered that it would be impossible to restore him to it Parvathibogamma v Ram Krishna Rau 18 M 145=5 M L J 41; Kutaru v Babai 19 B 374 Where a person is treated by another in such a way as leads him to believe that he is the adopted son of that other and on that footing and on account of such acquiescence and by reason of such encouragement he severs his connection with his natural family or undergoes a change of circumstances in such a way that when restored to his natural family his position would be very different from what it would have been if he had never left it the person through whom he will be established Chand, 85 Ind C 96 Ind C 97.

adoption is invalid, circumstances may arise in which the adoption on which hardships to be caused to the adopted boy in upsetting the adoption on which the person who sets up the estoppel to prove conclusively, that he was in fact adopted by the father resiling from the story of the adoption, but it is enough damaged if he proves to the satisfaction of the Court that the likelihood of his being prejudiced by the alteration of position was so great that the Court will presume that the adopted boy must have been damaged. Also, estoppel being simply a principle of the law of evidence, it creates no substantive rights of an absolute character but commonly operates to close the mouths of certain people who have acted in a certain way from estoppel. It will operate only in the manner customary among the Agarwallas. The story of the regular Brahminical adoption of the same boy previous to the Agarwalla adoption was invented with the object of giving to latter adoption the rights of collateral succession. The acts and representations of the plaintiffs were set up as estopping them

Parasuramappa v

L. R. 1927 Mad 711

that the
that the Dhan-

J 273 =

49 M. L. J. 173 (P. C.) Where a person executed a registered document declaring he had adopted another, and in mutation proceedings described himself as the

into a compromise wherein for ion of repudiating such adoption, no adoption Kumbar Dutt v on a matter of law as to the validity of an adoption creates no estoppel Rajmal Anima v Shanmuga, 70 Ind. Cas. 653 = 1923 Mad 11

under s. 115
position of law supported the
a representa-
an estoppel
arrangement
as partitioned ng a son and y be the legal position as regards the validity of the adoption. It was estopped from questioning the validity of the same Ichhnan v Banwar, 114 Ind. Cas. 711 = A. I. R. 1929 Lah. 16. But where a person was at best a mere witness for the adoption of a boy by a Hindu widow and had no knowledge of the facts, he cannot operate in the matter to which validity of the adoption and Amarendra v Banamali, 10 F. I. R. 1930 Pat. 417.

Estoppel by acts of Government officer. A Government officer had no authority to waive the rights to which the escheat, and a decree founded thereon by a court, operate as estoppel. The Collector of Maultipat. 2 W. R. 61 P. C. = 8 M. I. A. 539.

Inconsistent pleas. It is an elementary rule that a party litigant cannot 1st L. 11-10-00 Ind. Cas. 610. A person who successfully sues another for rent cannot subsequently be heard to impugn that the defendant was a tenant. Jitan Mahton v Lala Bhagwan, 64 Ind. Cas. 262.

5. Neither he nor his representatives. Where a person by his own solemn and deliberate act wilfully induces another to believe the existence of a certain state of things, and to deal with him on the faith of it, he and as a general rule his heirs or those who claim under him are bound to make good the representation so made and will never be allowed to retract it. Moonshee Syeed Ali v. The execution sale acquires and does not consequently judgment debtor does in the v. Jogendra Chandra 23 Ind. Nandu v. Jogendra 70 Ind. In his legal representative Syed Md Hasan v. Syed Ali, 10 O & A 11 1229. It is not open to the representative of a lessor to prove that the state of the original lessee was other than what was described in the deed of lease. Isicor Chandra v. Goursunder, 193 Cal 603. Where the conduct of a grandfather has given rise to estoppel, the grandson claiming through him is bound by it. Moman v. Dhannu 1 Lah 31-5 Ind Cas 869. A subsequent mortgagee is bound by the representation made by the mortgagor to prior mortgagee and is estopped from challenging the validity of the prior mortgagee so far as it affects the share which was subsequently mortgaged. Gurdayal v. Taid Husain 51 Ind Cas 766. A mortgagee who purchases the property at a sale in execution of his decree on the mortgage is bound by an estoppel that would have bound his mortgagor. Kalidas v. Prasanna 15 Ind Cas 189. The doctrine of estoppel is applicable to persons claiming under those whose conduct had led to change of position. Riyah of Deo v. Ablulla 45 C 909-45 I A 97 (P C), Badri Bhai v. Brij Nath 5 O L J 458-47 Ind Cas 934. Jigannath v. Syed Abdulla 16 A L J 576-35 M L J 46-20 Bom L R 851-22 C W N 891-28 C L J 162-45 Ind Cas 770 (P C). The equitable doctrine of estoppel as laid down in 11 B L R 46 which applies to any person is equally binding on the purchaser of his right title and interest at a sale in execution of the decree. Mohamed Moaffer v. Kishore Mohan Day 27 C 909 (P C)-21 A 129-5 M L J 101. In Debdendranath Sen v. Mirza Abdul Samad 10 C L J 150 (165), Moolji v. Jyoti 13 C 153 said 'It was ruled by this Court in Kishore Mohan v. Mohamed, 13 C 153 (193) contrary to the principle deducible from Richards v. Johnston, 4 H & N 660 and Herne v. Rogers (1891) 1 Q B 230 that the estoppel that would bind A would also bind the execution purchasers of his interest. This view was subsequently affirmed by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee and they rested their conclusion on the ground that the principle of estoppel, founded in that case upon the decision in Ram Doomar v. Moqueen L R 11 A sup Vol 40 applied not only to A but also to the execution purchasers of the interest of A who were equally bound by it as they had purchased only his right title and interest. This is in accord with the statement of the rule by Kay L J in Mad v. Thomas 18 W R 21. No doubt, the statement sometimes has been made by text writers (Hukum Chand on res judicata, 204 and Casper on estoppel 2nd Ed 66) apparently on the basis of judicial dicta of the highest authority that as there is no privity between the purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree and the judgment debtor whose property is sold, the purchaser at the execution sale is not bound by the estoppel of the judgment debtor. Thus in Anundo Mo observed that the on the same footing as the title of the mortgagor or of a person claiming under him, a voluntary alienation from the mortgagor. Again in Imrit Koer v. Debed Pershad 18 W R 201 Sir Richard Couch remarked with reference to purchaser at an execution sale that they were not in direct from the party and were therefore not bound by the estoppel. In the observations of Sir Barnes Peacock in Dinendra Nath v. Court 7 C 107-8 I A 65 'There is a great distinction between a private sale in satisfaction of a decree and a sale in execution of a decree. Under the former the purchaser derives title through the vendor and cannot acquire a better title than that of the vendor. In the latter, the purchaser, notwithstanding he acquires merely the right, title and interest of the judgment debtor acquires that title by operation of law adverse to the judgment debtor and freed from all alienations or incumbrances effected by him subsequent to the attachment of the property.

sold in execution'. On the authority of these observations it was ruled by this Court in Parlu Lal v. Mylu, 11 C 101 that a purchaser at an execution sale was not the representative of the judgment debtor for the purpose of the rule of estoppel. Substantially to the same effect are the decisions in Ringo Monee v. Raj Coomarsee 6 W R 197, Gour Sunter v. Hem Chander, 16 C 375 and Bishu Chander v. Fualet Ali, 20 C 236. There can be no question, however, that the rule so widely formulated in these judicial dicta, is neither supported by authorities nor defensible on principle. It will suffice for our present purpose to refer to the judgment of the Full Bench of this Court in Jehan Chunder v. Beni Midhab, 24 C 62 in which it was pointed out that the view taken in these cases the decisions of the Judicial

 " I I A 101 and Dinendra v.
 " See also Ridha Kanta v.
 " It v. Lalramol, 18 M 13;
 " Iepin v. Jogeshwar, 31 C.
 " Nandatal v. Jogendra, 38 C W N 105, Sashubhusan v. Debnath 60 Ind Cas 705, Prolyot v. Jori, 16 Ind Cas 792. A person is not estopped from instituting a suit for a share of joint ancestral property by the circumstance that he claims under one who, when sued on a former occasion as trustee, never pleaded that he was a co-purchaser. Surnomoyee v. Gunga 2 W R 264.
 An admission by an adoptive mother, in a suit brought by her mother in law to set aside the adoption, that an alleged unomuttaputti, under which her mother in law had previously professed to adopt a son to her deceased husband was valid, would not estop her adoptive son from denying the validity of that instrument in a suit subsequently brought by him for the assertion of his rights under the adoption. Anundomoyee v. Shreeb Chunder, Mateh 155. Where a trustee does any act in relation to the trust of which he is a trustee by way of estoppel, Kesharai, 15 B 625.
 on son, the real revere
 Ind Cas 50.

The doctrine of estoppel cannot bar the plaintiff's claim in a suit, when the person is a trustee of the property.

L J
 come
 by
 necessary implication the interest which he had in the property. Dadabhai v.
Cousin, A I R 1925 P C 306. A purchaser at an execution sale is bound by the same rule of estoppel as the judgment debtor and consequently he cannot dispute the validity of a mortgage which the mortgagor himself is estopped from questioning. Nandatal v. Jogendra Chandra, 36 C L J 421. Where a plea of estoppel is raised a person is bound by the previous knowledge of the former owner. Sharpu v. Shri Radhika, 15 R D 43. Acts in representative character do not create estoppel on personal claims. Ram Horakh v. Hanwant, A I R 1930 P C 249.

Constructive estoppel. The law knows no such thing as constructive estoppel. Parsotam Gir v. Arboda, 21 A 505 P C = 3 C W N 517 = 1 Bom L R 700 = 26 I A 175.

Fraud whether necessary to give rise to estoppel. This section embodies the rule of English law on the subject of estoppel. "The doctrine of estoppel is based on a fraudulent purpose and a fraudulent result. If, therefore, the element, or fraud is wanting, there is no estoppel. There must be deception and change of conduct in consequence." Ganga Sahai v. Hira Singh, 2 A 809 (F B).

Estoppel whether can arise when document is inadmissible. The rule of estoppel

in th
Ram
 by w none

entry at settlement merely amounts to an admission and there was no change of position of the tenant to his detriment Cohli v. Naul Mumtar, 1 R 3 A 252 (Rev). A chattal - brothers owned a house which was attached and sold in execution of a decree against D. L. obtained a preliminary decree for the partition of his share but before it was made final, the house had been sold. The defendant who was a tenant thereupon executed a Sarkhat in favour bought by the purchaser for ejectment, and executed a Sarkhat in favour of the plaintiff's right to get it vacated.

41 A 651-17 A L J 805-61 Ind. Case 518 Where a landlord with knowledge of an alienation accepts rents from the alienee, he is as much bound by the alienation as if he had expressly assented to it. Pargul v. Singh v. Keltir Nath, A W N 1892, 107; see also Gunga v. Rim Guli, 2 Agra 45, Gala v. Rimji, 73 P R 1900, Puri v. Godar Khan, 161 P R 1883. An owner of land omitting to sue for demolition of buildings, when the infringement of his right is first threatened or commenced is estopped from claiming demolition, but is only entitled to compensation. Bhagh v. Nahir, 77 P R 1871. A tenant cannot be permitted to object to the terms of a patta when he has accepted previously mulir patta for a series of years; for that constitutes a representation by conduct that the landlord's were proper ones, which, of course, would in so many words. See Sankarachari. The service of a notice for ejectment under poses the existence of the relationship of landlord and tenant between the person who causes it to issue and the person to whom it is served. And the landlord cannot afterwards bring a suit for ejectment in a Civil Court to eject the same person from the same land, alleging that it is not tenant but only a purchaser. Baldeo v. Indad, 15 A 189-A. W. N 1893, 93.

The previous acceptance of a pattah from one who was neither a registered Yeomabdar nor lawfully entitled to the Yeomab; but who performed the service for some time, apparently under a deed of assignment executed in his favour by the previous Yeomabdar, is a good defence to a suit by lawful owner against the riyats to enforce acceptance of pattas, when the owner's conduct is such as to justify the belief of the riyats that the assignee was authorised to collect rent from them until the assignment was questioned by the owner and a notice of his title given to them. Khador v. Subramanya 11 M 12. The Rajah of Tipperah granted Sanad chits to certain tenants permitting the tenants to construct embankments to a silted up tank and to re excavate the tank, but no rent was reserved for the tank. The tenants acting upon that sanad, spent money - regard to the Rajah ing that the ah Birenda ment from previous. A party cannot. Backergu money deposited by decree of rent is to a recognition of depositor not having principle of estoppel. 192-11 Pat 257. estop the landlord from denying the status of a person claiming rights on the basis of such misdescription. Ganpat v. Baghubu, 13 L R 326 (Rev). Where a person had been in long enjoyment as a co tenant to the knowledge of the Zemindar who also sued him as co tenant, held that the zemindar was estopped from disputing the status of the tenant. Hishmit v. Wali, 15 R D.

5 rule that an occupancy tenant who makes usufructuary mortgage of his holding to another man is estopped from alleging that the other man is his sub-tenant has no application where the mortgage is unregistered and so ineffective to pass the mortgagor's rights in the property Ram Charan v Shiva Jagat, L R 3 A 161 (Rev)

Landlord and tenant Where a landlord wrongly described a person as an exproprietary tenant in a rent suit, he is not estopped from denying the Lachchi v Bhawanji B L R 8 (Rev)
 in ejectment and the tenant agreed to pay a not eject him and the landlord collected the enhanced r

Nath v Bhaqua

Shabbir Ali, 8

as a rent decree

estopped from

decree and not a :

882 A misdescription of a person as occupancy tenant in rent receipts and suits for arrears of rent does not amount to grant of occupancy rights or have the effect of estoppel Ashrofi v Kishori Ramani, L R 6 All 64 (R v) A tenant by acquiescing in the payment of enhanced rent is not precluded from raising any objection under section 29 of the B T Act W H Meyrick v Deepa Pandai, 3 Pat 825 There is no peculiarity in the law of estoppel in India as distinguished from that of England; the law of India is comprehensively set forth in s 115 of the Evidence Act Taking of a rent each year under a mistaken belief may bar by estoppel the owner from any claim for mense profits during the particular year or years for which such rent was received Mitra Sen Singh v Asst Janki Kuar, 26 Bom L R 1134-40 C L J 468-70 L W 566 (P C)=46 A 728=51 I A 326=83 Ind Cas 946 A grove holder after cutting the trees in the grove was allowed to remain in possession on payment of rent He planted fresh trees and for 3 or 4 years, the zemindar did nothing to prevent it Held, he was estopped by his inaction from ejecting the grove holder Ram Singh v Hannu, L R 4 A 352-9 O & A L R 1057 and they were not ord or his in

 an estoppel
 and that he
 'Jadannah' v
 Syed Ali v

Manick Chandra, 27 C W N 969 The granting of receipts in the ordinary course of business by a landlord to his tenant is not an admission of such a formal and deliberate character as to prevent the former from denying the relationship of tenant Habib v Salamat, L R 4 A 174 (Rev) A decree holder landlord who in execution of a rent decree purchases the holding subject to liability for a second rent is not estopped from proceeding against

v Bhatu Modi
 it be permitted to certainly cannot
 the tenant be originally deemed
 3-4 Pat L T
 is incorrectly

described in rent receipts issued by the zemindar does not estop him from denying that receipt Bhatu Modi v Bhatu Modi, L R 4 A 8 certainly for and kept quiet
 so erected

into the land ing that he had leave The first Durga Varma
 and from denying
 a person's occupancy rights by reason of the fact that he allowed him to be recorded in the settlement as occupancy tenant, because the consent to reversioner relinquished his rights to a portion of the inheritance in favour of the widow in consideration of receiving a relinquishment from the widow of all her interest in the remaining portion of the inheritance neither he nor any person claiming through him, could set up that her relinquishment was not binding on him and did not operate on the portion of the inheritance relinquished in favour of the widow Jogendra v. Monindra 17 Ind Cis 978. The attestation of a reversioner to a document implies only that there was necessity for the alienation and does not create estoppel Amasiraj Pillai v. Kuthilingan, 21 M. L. T. 30 = (1917) M. W. N. 78-79 Ind Cis 10, but see Ganai Singh v. Sulab Singh 19 P. L. R. 1911. But where the reversioner in fact the purchaser to believe the recitals of the document to be true and to act on them they are estopped by conduct Bhubaneswari v. Hirathan 21 C. W. N. 728. In Hirsi Ashen Bhaqit v. Kashi Pershad 42 C. 870, the Judicial Committee only laid down that a thoughtless reversioner should have a door of escape from an uncomfortable position rather than bind him down conclusively by the stringency of the equity brought about by his conduct Piruramarelli v. Maharelli, 6 L. W. 250 = 23 M. L. J. 260 4 Ind Cas 196. Where a Hindu widow in possession of her deceased husband's separate immovable property his concubine and his illegitimate daughter with the concurrence of the next reversioner effect a distribution of the property in pursuance of an instrument in writing to which they were parties, and a remote reversioner attests such instrument and consents to, and assists in the distribution of the property, such remote reversioner would be estopped by his conduct from questioning the legality and validity of the distribution or of assignments made by those who shared in such distribution. See Dasi v. Gur Sahu 3 L. 36. A reversioner by unknowingly accepting the mortgage of the land in the joint holding sold by a widow to another reversioner is not estopped from contesting the validity or its sale Sheva v. Hyat 32 P. W. R. 1914 = 103 P. L. R. 1914 = 23 Ind Cas 6. The interest of a Hindu reversioner is an interest expectant on the death of a qualified

of sfer
sfer
by

ped from claiming as a reversioner R 1930 All 430. Where a reversioner cla in to property when the success nd by that agreement Raghubir 11 = A. I. R. 1936 All 498, but see

Polhar Singh v. Dutar A. I. R. 1930 All 683 = 1930 A. L. J. 688 = 125 Ind Cis 1

Estoppel by acts of agents his agent to cheat a third party

The principal is estopped from acting of his a
A principal

clothed with a larger authority than that e such persons have acted in that belief to their detriment cannot rely upon any secret limitation of his agent's authority or upon any private understanding he may have with him of which the rest of the world must necessarily be ignorant. 'Strangers and Lord Ellenborough 'can only look to the acts of the parties and to the external indicia of property and not to the private communications which may pass between a principal and his broker, and if a person authorise another to assume the apparent right of disposing of property in the ordinary course of trade it must be assumed that the apparent authority is the real authority Pickering v. Busi 15 Earl 38 (43), Casperz v. Entoppel 177. Similarly in Ramsden v. Dyson, 1 E. & L. A. 126 (158) Lord Cranworth said. If indeed the principal knows that the person dealing with his agent have so dealt in consequence of their believing that all statements made by him had been warranted by the principal and knowing this allows the person so dealing to expend money in the belief that the agent had an authority, which in fact he had not it may be that in such a case, a Court of Equity could not allow the principal afterwards to set up want of authority in the agent. But this equity, where it exists, depends absolutely on the fact that the knowledge on which it rests can be brought home to the principal.'

Casperz Estoppel 178 But an agent cannot set up his own breach of trust Harris v Truman, 51 L J Q B 338 Where a tenant without Zemindar's permission makes a grave on the abadi, the mere fact that the servants of the Zemindar stood by and did not object cannot amount to the agent's acquiescence so as to estop Zemindar from interfering with the grave Khuda Balsh v Jasshankar, 115 Ind Cas 628 An endorsement by an agent of a decree-holder on a holder
 mad, 8

wife by a valid talak on 21 7 1919, and requested the Lari to communicate it to the plaintiff, his wife. She La informed her on 24 8-1919 but stated by mistake that the talak was dated 2 8 1919 instead of 21 7-1919 The plaintiff's suit for deferred dower was filed on 25-7 1922, more than three years from the real date of the talak Held that the defendant was estopped from showing that the date of the talak was earlier than 21 8 1919 Kathirayamma v Urothel Marakhor, 133 Ind Cas 375 = A I R 1931 Mad 647

Difference between s 115, Evidence Act, and section 43 of the Transfer of Property Act The difference in language between s 43 of the Transfer of Property Act and the language of the illustration to s 115 of the Evidence Act seems to be that, under s 43 of the T P Act, mere erroneous representation will apparently where the ill tionally and fal of the transferee in the truth of the erroneous representation, where the illustration to s 115 implies that the transferee must have believed the inten tional and false representation and acted in the faith of such representation Halkudhar Narain v Aadar Sayal, 28 M L J 41-27 Ind Cas 785, see also Ram v Baldeo, A I R 1932 All 643

Family arrangements Where parties settled their disputes amicably and families to construe acts done out of kindness and affection, to the dis tute of the doer of them Where two surviving brothers constituted a Mitakshara family, and the elder brother naturally and properly treated his younger brother, who had been born deaf and dumb, as a member of the family, and entitled to equal rights, until it became absolutely clear that his mildty was incurable, held that there was no ground for supposing that the elder brother intended to divest himself of his own property or to waive any rights, accruing to him by reason of his younger brother's incapacity and that there was no principle of law founded on the doctrine of estoppel or laches, or the law of limitation or otherwise, to hold, under the circumstances of the case, that the elder brother's acts and conduct had an effect and operation which he could not have intended or contemplated Lala Muddun Gopal v Khukhundu Koer, 18 C 341 (P C) = 13

 I A 9

One estoppel against another In a case of one estoppel against another the parties are set free and the Court has to see what their original rights are Jucanlal v Behari Lal, 152 P W R 1918-45 Ind Cas 69

Benami Where a father, whether Hindu or Muhammadan purchases a property in the name of one of his sons the ordinary presumption is that it is a benami transaction and not that it is an advancement in favour of the son 67 If part
 have character,

they cannot come in on his death under Order 22, rule, 3 Dorcas v. S. 1
Chittimoram, A I R 1930 Mad 221-53 M L J 48

Estoppel by election Where a man has an option to choose one or other of two inconsistent things, when once he has made his election, it is final and cannot

7 App Ca 360 potest
 Co Lit 146 a

Carpenter on Estoppel it both eat your cake, and return your cake Per Crompton J in Crompton v. Dickinson, 11 B & L 152 To illustrate the doctrine of election, suppose by A Will or deed, gives to B property belonging to C, and by the same instrument gives other property belonging to himself to C, a Court of equity will hold C to be entitled to the gift made to him by A only, upon the implied

he provisions of the instrument, by renoun-favour of B, he must, consequently make rned he is put to his election, to take either under or against the instrument, if C elects to take under, and consequently to conform with all the provisions of, the instrument, no difficulty arises, as B will take C's property, and C will take the property given to him by A, but if C elects to take against the instrument, that is to say, retains his own property and at the same time sets up a claim to the property given to him by A an important question arises whether he thereupon incurs a forfeiture of the whole of the benefit conferred upon him by the instrument, or is merely bound to make compensation out of it to the person who is disappointed by his election W & T Leading case Vol I p 312 It is an obligation imposed upon a party to choose between two inconsistent alternative rights or claims, in cases where there is clear intention of the person, from whom he derives one, that he should not enjoy both Every case of election, therefore presupposes a plurality of gifts or rights with an intention, express or implied of the party, who has a right to control one or both, that one should be a substitute for the other The party who is to take has a choice, but he cannot enjoy benefits of both Story Eq Jur § 1077; see also section 35 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1892) and, section 180 of the Succession Act (XXIX of 1925) "The doctrine" says Fry L J in In Re Vardon's Trusts, 81 Ch D 275 (279) "rests, not on the particular provisions of the instrument which are on it"

and general intention But the election must be a voluntary act, not forced upon him by circumstances over which he had no control Asia v Nurjan, A I R 1933 Cal 39

Estoppel by negligence It is true that there can be no negligence unless 776 Before
 onduct, there
 the general
 1906, 19 Q B D 68;
 nd essential condition
 he transaction itself,
 d that it is impossible to treat them separately is that the negligence must not only be calculated to have the misleading effect attributed to it but must be proximate or real cause of that result Bank of Ireland v Evans' Charities in Ireland, 5 H L Cas 389 per Parke B, Suan v North British Australian Co, 7 H & N 603, 633

Other cases After the right to get either rescission or reformation of the contract is barred, it is not competent to a party to a contract enjoying the benefit under it to say that he is not bound by one of its terms Sashi Kant v Gopal Shel, 82 Ind Cas 970-A I R 1925 Cal 359 Admission in a different proceeding that one had sold the land does not act as estoppel so as to do away with the necessity of registering the document Maung Po Yin v Maung Tet Tu, 86 Ind Cas 205=A I R 1925 Rang property made by a number of donors joint of the donors had no right to make the g 85 Ind Cas 516=A I R 1925 Mad 990 of certain shares from a widow during her life time he is estopped from denying the truth of the representation in suit between himself and the representatives of the lady Mahamed Hasan v Ali Hardir, 85 Ind Cas 509=A I R 1925 Oudh 337=12 O L J 1 Estoppel is purely personal and will not affect others in so far as they claim a title otherwise than through the person primarily Umaram v Purul, 85 Ind Cas 510=A I R 1925 Cal 993 A defendant cannot be allowed to set up his own fraud in defence Where a plaintiff claiming a title by purchase sues for declaration and possession, it is not open to the defendant to show that it was she who provided funds for the purchase by means of a fraud on the reversioner to which she and the plaintiff were parties Pachayammal v Devanammal, 22 L W 313=A I R 1925 Mad 1016 A man who has represented to an intending purchaser that he has not a security and induces him under that belief to buy, cannot, as against that purchaser, subsequently attempt to put his security in force Jia Lal v Saera Bibi, 99 Ind Cas 2=A I R 1927 Oudh 104 Although the house of an agriculturist is ordinarily unsaleable, still the conduct of the agriculturist judgment-debtor may estop him from pleading that the house is not saleable Ganga Bishun v Jogmohan, 6 P 251=102 Ind Cas 616=8 Pat L T 563=A I R 1927 Pat 233 Where the question arose whether a company was liable to be assessed to companies' tax by the assessment by a suit in the civil Court Bombay Co Ltd v Municipal Council of Dindigul, 108 Ind Cas 26=27 L W 243 Even if the compromise is beneficial to a party's interest, but he has not taken any benefit out of or under it, that is not a bar to a suit for a compromise from challenging it I R 1928 Cal 334 interest purported to be his right as a rival but the purchaser at an execution sale of that person's right and interest who got his name mutated in the sherista of the superior landlord on payment of an enhanced rent is not so estopped Jaladhar Mandal v Amrita Lal Roy, 105 Ind Cas 641=A I R 1928 Cal 87 A muafidar who has mortgaged his muaf had expressly enacted that the mortgagee cannot deny the mortgagee's title by a suit in the civil Court I R 1928 Cal 87 A muafidar who has mortgaged his muaf had expressly enacted that the mortgagee cannot deny the mortgagee's title by a suit in the civil Court I R 1928 Cal 87 mistake but claiming to be a proper party to a legal proceeding, takes step for the purpose of establishing his title by a suit in the civil Court I R 1928 Cal 87

of certain property as a mutawalli and holds possession of it on that basis, he cannot afterwards turn round and say, that the muaf being void, he was in possession in his own right and claim the property as his own as against the beneficiaries Rahya Banu v Najara Binu, 55 C 449=32 C W N 219 commercial speculations cannot claim on another basis when he finds the first basis prejudicial to him He cannot both approbate and reprobate Hurrim v

Valan Gopal 33 C W N. 193-49 C L J 335-27 A L J 106-A I R 1929 P C 77 Where a person admits execution before the Registrar after the document has been . . . he was ignorant of . . . W N 407-29 I . . .

purchase the property of his other co-sharer, he is estopped from exercising his right of pre-emption Rameswar v Ghisaran Prasad, 27 A L J 665-A I R 1929 All 531 For purposes of estoppel an order by consent, not discharged by mutual agreement, and remaining undisturbed is as effective as an order of the Court made otherwise than by consent and not discharged on appeal. Charles Hubert v Edward Keith, 115 Ind Cas 7-A I R 1929 (P C) 289-57 M L J 429 (P C) A party who takes advantage under partition, is estopped from pleading impartiality Narendra v Narendra, 10 C L J 267-A I R 1929 Cal 577 Where a County Court Judge has tried an action which he had no jurisdiction to try, and the unsuccessful party appeals the respondent is entitled to raise the point of jurisdiction notwithstanding that it was not raised below, and the fact that no objection was taken to the jurisdiction in the county Court does not create any estoppel by conduct Simpson v Crouie, (1921) 3 K B 213-90 L J K B 578 Where in prior land acquisition proceedings there was a declaration that minerals beneath a particular land could be used by the Government for the purpose of construction of a bridge and the owner of the land received compensation on that footing and after the completion of the bridge he sued for a declaration that he was entitled to the remaining mineral in the land, held, that he was not estopped cannot be heard later or after the sale to plead that the figure was unduly low and the sale should therefore be set aside Ramanatham v Ramanathan, 117 Ind Cas 705-30 L W. 995 A person creating a charge or a mortgage is estopped from saying that he is not entitled to create the charge or mortgage on the property Shanlar v Ganpat, 31 Bom L R 439-119 Ind Cas 186-1929 Bom 227

A usufructuary mortgagee cannot deny the title of the mortgagor and set up adverse possession unless he actually leaves the holding and enters under a different status Jai Nandan v Lmrao 119 Ind Cas 568-A I R 1929 All 305

Where a widow makes a gift of her husband's property in her possession promise which amounts to a settlement of a doubtful claim, it is binding on him, even though at the time when he entered into it he was a mere reversioner. There is nothing to prevent him from so acting as to estop himself by his own conduct from subsequently claiming a property to which he may succeed Moti Shah v Chandharp Singh, 48 A 637-96 Ind Cas 590 Where an order directing the payment of the decree by instalment was passed at the request of the judgment debtor who subsequently acted upon it, he is precluded from contending that the order was not binding on him Fielding v The Firm of Janaki Das, 95 Ind Cas 243-A I R 1926 Lab 465

A Hindu widow executed a mortgage as guardian of her adopted son, subsequently she sold the properties to the plaintiff as her own. The plaintiff held that the plaintiff was not estopped from . . .

took a lease of the properties from the third person. In a suit for redemption of the mortgage, held, that the mortgagee was estopped from setting up the plea of tenancy Gauri v Mangla, 7 L R 171 (Rev)-A I R 1926 All 463 As between a mortgagor and his mortgagee, neither can deny the title of the other for the purposes of the mortgage, but the estoppel does not arise in a suit neither based on nor connected with the mortgage Deo Kali v Ranchoor Bux 92 Ind Cns 19-13 O L J 208-A I R 1926 Oudh 253 Where in case of an alienation a person entitled to challenge it is present at the mutation proceedings and when there is every opportunity of objecting to it does not object he cannot challenge the alienation subsequently Ram Sarup v Ram Saran 96 Ind Cns 915-A I R 1926 Lah 650 Where a person purchases certain property in execution of a money decree expressly subject to a mortgage on it and admits the existence of the mortgage it is not subsequently open to him to challenge the mortgage in a suit on the mortgage by the mortgagee Gouri Dorao v Huchand 95 Ind Cns 563-A I R 1926 Nag 146 Where the owner of a property keeps quiet when his property is being sold as belonging to the judgment debtor in execution and sale, he is estopped

Singh, 27 P L R 260-A I R 1906 Cal 111 A person who has been successful in the Small Cause Court that the suit was one triable by the regular side he ought not to be allowed when the suit is filed on the regular side to turn round and plead that it ought to have been filed in the Small Cause Court Kartar Singh v Nanda 95 Ind Cns 816-A I R 1926 All 664 Where a lease is taken on the understanding that it would be for the benefit of the local public and this formed part of the consideration for the lease, the lessees cannot afterwards turn round and claim an absolute interest in the lands leased and deny rights to the public Pearry Lal v Surendra Nath 88 Ind Cas 505-A I R 1925 Cal 1233 A mere undertaking may operate as an estoppel, though it may not amount to a contract Shanesh Chandra v Bechar Gope 84 Ind Cas 124-A I R 1925 Cal 24 Where mortgagor higher interest to get extension mortgages for execution of the mortgage could not be enforced in the mortgagee's hands 1925 Cal 723-48 M L J 121 There can be no estoppel in favour of a party who was not misled except by his own ignorance of the law Anyad v Ashraf 2 O W N 83-87 Ind Cas 445-A I R 1925 Oudh 568 A person is not precluded from setting up an inconsistent case in a subsequent litigation The contention put forward in the previous case itself becomes a foundation for any subsequent contention to arbitration through Court proceedings on the ground that the mortgagor has not complied with the conditions of the mortgage deed Tuanj v Sona Hanji 57 Ind Cas 633-A I R 1925 Cal 7

812 The person to whom a notice has been given to the effect that a property is going to be sold and who intimates his refusal to purchase can not be allowed after the sale has been made after his refusal to turn round and seek to enforce his right of pre-emption through the Court The doctrine of estoppel applies to all sorts of cases including pre-emption cases Don Mahomed v Bunt Zahir 87 Ind Cas 414

A person is not entitled to give an undertaking to a criminal Court to abstain from certain action to go and file a civil suit for declaration that the undertaking given by him was of no effect Ramsaran v So Pratab 91 Ind Cas 596-A I R 1925 All 605 Where the vendor under a contract for sale of immovable property stated to the vendor that his (the vendee's) money was ready and that the title deed was being engrossed and where those two matters alone were wanting to complete the sale and where the vendor gave five days' notice to the vendee to complete the sale the vendee was estopped from denying the truth of his statements Mohitlal v Haji Moora 41 C L J 331-83 Ind Cas 41-27 Bom L R 814

Where a prior vendee induced a subsequent vendee to believe that notwithstanding prior sale deed the vendor continued to be owner and to purchase property in that belief he is estopped from claiming priority under his sale deed N 596-90 Ind Cns 875-A I R 1925 Cal 723-48 M L J 121 In the settlement record may amount to estoppel Mallikarjun v Ramkrishna 41 C L J 331-83 Ind Cas 41-27 Bom L R 814 A person who obtains possession of land claiming under a deed or Will he cannot afterwards set up another title to the land against the Will or deed though it did not operate to pass the land in question and if he remains in possession till 12 years have elapsed and the title of his testator's heir is extinguished, he cannot claim by possession an interest in the property different from that which he could have taken if the property had passed by the Will or deed Jagsewar v Pamluran, 7 N L J 82-78 Ind Cas 810-A I R 1921 Nag 73 Where there is a contract for sale no decree for possession can be given unless the title is completed by a registered deed and an agreement between parties to do away with the necessity expressly requires it Munir

68, Dharam Chant v Muz 8

20 C W N 307 But an undertaking may operate as an estoppel though in the absence of consideration it cannot amount to a contract Situations may arise in which a contract should be held to be an estoppel as in cases where only an adequate right of action would exist in favour of the injured party if estoppel were not allowed In such a case estoppel may sometimes be available to prevent fraud Shantesh Chintari v Lechu tope 10 C L J 67-1925 Cal 91

The donee of a property is not to not belong to the donor but was

Moolchand, 76 Ind Cas 128-1923

sign the award and as a result would otherwise have prosecuted the other party is estoppel from contesting the validity or the award Moharshi v M Lina 77 Ind Cas 41

It cannot be said that a Mahomedan tenant in common can be held to be represented by another Mahomedan tenant in common merely because their interests are identical Karim Bikh v Mahaj Udlin 40 A 311-L R 5 A 5 (Rev)-22 A L J 13-78 Ind Cas 1035 A mortgagor is estopped from pleading in a suit on the mortgage that he had no title to the property at the date of the document But if the mortgagee is proved to be well aware of the

erty, the plea of estoppel

924 Nag 363 Where the names and the son on t to alienation, he is there-

be deemed to have re-

Haibullah, 1924 All 721.

Where a person gets another's name recorded as owner of a moiety of the property, and on the faith of that another purchases it at an auction sale the former can not later on claim ownership of the same Mathura Prasad v Anandi, 21 A L J 498 L R 4 A 501-74 Ind Cas 911 A dispute under s 145 Cr Pro Code relates only to possession of the properties and consequently a compromise of the proceedings does not estop a party from denying the title of the other Gopi Das v Madho Lal, 45 A 162-1923 All 77-23 A L J 932

In order to maintain a plea of estoppel in a pre-emption suit, it must be proved that the plaintiff believed the representation made and brought his suit on the basis of it Banke Behari Lal v Nanna Lal, 73 Ind Cas 372 Where the mortgage deed clearly purports to be executed by the mortgagor as the proprietor of the property in his own interest he is estopped from denying the interest which he represented as his own proprietary right in the deed Bry Tarun v Raghunandan 71 Ind Cas 941 (1933) Pat 49

Where a co sharer had been allowed by other shares to treat certain land as his exclusive holding and he grants a perpetual lease of a small portion of the land so as to confer occupancy right on the tenant and at a subsequent partition the land was allotted to another co sharer held that the co sharer was estopped from disputing the title of the occupancy tenant to the land Iej Singh v Munshi, L R 4 A 51-90 & A L R 430

Even where the mortgagors are trustees acting in a public capacity and not for their own benefit they are estopped from denying their title and cannot set up as a defence against the mortgagee that the property so mortgaged is trust

Bry Ratan v Ragh

non of certain plots

as upon title after-

Held that there was

Chandra, 4 Pat L 1,

730 A statement in the Court of an Assistant Collector during the mutation proceedings to the effect that the plaintiff and two others were in possession of the property in equal shares and that mutation of names may be made accordingly, does not prevent the plaintiff from asserting his right to the entire property in Civil Court subsequently Ramratan v Bindu, 9 O & A L R 20=72 Ind Cas 832 Where in execution of a money decree the decree holder under a bonafide mistake brought to sale certain of his own properties as those of his judgment debtor and the sale was confirmed and delivery of possession was made to the purchaser, held that the decree holder was estopped from setting up his own title to the properties as against the auction purchaser.

a decree against that of one of the
of the proceeding
and even allowed the sale to be confirmed, they are estopped

from bringing a

Though a lease of
ree brothers still it
n the same interest
brother who did not
y of the same Bya
ere in execution of attached and sold as

had knowledge jections whatever
from bringing a
on the ground

Ind Cas 797
n mortgages on
by them Alla
en by the agent
in the absence
ancy rights the d no occupancy

Zemindar is not estopped from asserting that the sale was rights Kamla v Misra, L R 3 A an application with the defendant arbitration On the next day G R before the, Court lasted for over a

ferred to plication bitration
oughout on behalf
on the ground

of refer ion as to writing
Court will tain the de if it is 123 Ind

mortgage from a person in possession and obtains possession it is not permitted to question the mortgagor's title Surendranath v Ahluwalia Mohan, 29 C L J 434=52 Ind Cas 59 A mortgagee brought a suit for possession of the mortgaged property against a person whom he treated as the mortgagee for redemption of ing his right to represent

Cas 356
ty by estoppel must satisfy ictive notice of the title of the es which could put him on ence Act affords no definition chaser making a reasonable a 969=9 L W 318=(1919)
for his own private purpose mortgages land which is afterwards sold in Court auction at the instance of the mortgagee, can sue on behalf of the temple to recover the landlord's interest, which claim against the mortgagee. Sahib v El Ind

Cas 197 Where a person by his conduct in a redemption suit had elected to affirm the sale and to act upon it, he is estopped from suing for the cancellation of the sale of equity of redemption on the ground of fraud. Chanham v Behari Lal

Ind Cas 997 It is not open to the lessee to question the validity of the mortgagee's ejectment by the auction purchaser. Ind Cas 997

Cas 705 Where a person after his tolls in a Municipality has been accepted, represents to the Municipality that he bid on behalf of himself and another person and asks that such other person should be regarded as co contractor and the latter joins in this petition of representation and pays money on which the chairman officially accepts the amount tendered by both the person who did not join in the original bid is disputing his liability under the contract. Municipal Council v Kannu-

Ind Cas 705 The admission of liability under a decree obtained against the ward does not create an estoppel and debar the Court of wards from challenging the validity under the Court of Wards Act not having been complied with the decree was not validly obtained. Punjab Court of Wards v Lala Hanwar Bhan, 126 Ind Cas 796-31 P L R 710-A I R 1930 L

Nanda v referred by the lower court the right to acquired in the decree, and therefore is not estopped from prosecuting the appeal. Kailashbad v Khanhalla 124 Ind Cas 239-31 P L R 668-A I R 1930 Lab 26 Where a lease granted by one co sharer confers no right upon the lessee there is nothing to prevent the grantor from joining the other co sharers to eject the lessee who is found to possess no right in respect of the land in dispute. Panchanan v Anant, A I R 1932 All 457. If the grantors so that any person were the absolute real transaction conveyance Ts

Where par certain rights, which they allege they have in connection with certain proceedings in Court being brought to an end, they cannot thereafter allege the continuing existence of those rights. Muhammed Ibrahim v Chandan Singh, 63 Ind plaintiff was estopped from denying the right of the defendants under s 115 of the Evidence Act. Ananta Murarrad v Gunn Nitha, 22 Bom L R 415-57 Ind Cas 143 A dispute was settled by arbitration. Subsequently two of the arbitrators purchased the interest of one of the parties to the dispute and sought to upset the arrangement arrived at as a result of the arbitration. In the circumstances they were estopped from doing so. Dudhai Singh v Karan Singh, 55 Ind Cas 506 When a person appeared at the time of the mutation in respect of the sale in dispute and expressed his consent to it he cannot subsequently come forward to impugn it. Muhammad v Wali, 2 Lab L J 306 Where some of the mortgagees led a subsequent purchaser of a portion of the mortgaged property and a puisne mortgagee of the remainder to believe that the whole property was unencumbered, they were precluded by the doctrine of estoppel from setting up their rights under the prior mortgage against the mortgagee Sahbudhin account, a party is estopped from suing for ar

the decretal debt as well as interest of time in the Court to enable him to pay the amount he (the judgment debtor) cannot at a later stage of the proceedings dispute the item of interest, and is bound to pay interest from the date on which he admitted his liability to pay interest Narayan v Raoji, 6 Bom L R 417-23 B 393. A party cannot take benefit of a transaction and at the same time repudiate it when the transaction is one and indivisible. Where the property of a judgment-debtor is sold in execution of a decree and the sale-proceeds go in satisfaction of the decree, and the judgment-debtor accepts the payment of the decree, he cannot impeach a part of the sale Annapurnabai v. Ramchandra, 43 Ind Cas 178. Where two persons embark upon a joint adventure for the purpose of extinguishing a prior mortgage and taking a first charge on the property it is the legal duty of each to inform his co mortgagee within a reasonable time that he had still an outstanding claim under the prior mortgage and the omission to give the information amounts to such an omission as is contemplated by s 11 of the Evidence Act and operates as estoppel Pandurang v Narayan, 44 Ind Cas 547. A judgment-debtor got an execution sale postponed on undertaking that he would not raise any objection on the ground of regularity or irregularity of the sale. He failed to set it aside on the ground that he had not given the time he had still an outstanding claim under the prior mortgage and the omission to give the information amounts to such an omission as is contemplated by s 11 of the Evidence Act and operates as estoppel.

Zemundary, 27 C L J. with that brought 533 A transfer 132 without not, by dnapur and in prior suit brought against him by the defendant agreed to give up possession of the decree of in pursuance of that arrangement but its validity was sought to be questioned after the death of the mother by the executants themselves Held that they were estopped I R 1930 All 687. A Will cannot be altered by interest to another of the Contract Jacob v The of nearly five years prior to the suit for rescission of contract on the ground of defect in title of plaintiff's vendors and onerous covenants is highly prejudicial to the defendant's vendors, especially when the plaintiff was previously seeking to enforce the contract against his vendees notwithstanding the defects. Plaintiff's conduct in enforcing the contract against his vendee and laches of five years work out an estoppel against him and equally debar him from enforcing his claim Soralji v Tarachand, A I R. 1930 Sind 66. A purchaser at a Court sale of a judgment debtor's property is not bound to inquire into the title of the vendor at all. He is not estopped from claiming the property if he is buying it in good faith.

but it does not mean that the encumbrance charge or any other claim against the property has been established. In connection, therefore, with the sale of immovable property subject to an encumbrance the auction purchaser is entitled to contest the factum and the validity of the encumbrance. There is no rule of estoppel which can prevent him from impeaching the charge on the property. M. Vin Kuar v. Ishar Das A I R 1930 Lah 40, see also I. Atumma v. Partab Singh, 31 A 553-36 Ind Cas 203 (P C), Ala Sultan v. Mohallat Khan, A I R 1921 All 79-43 A 489, Gimesh Moheshwar v. Purushottam 33 B 311-11 Bom L R 26, Narayan v. Umbar 35 B 276-13 Bom L R 307-10 Ind Cas 913. The fact that after the death of the successful pre-emptor the vendor himself has become the legal representative is not enough to estop the latter from taking the benefit of the decree. Bramaban v. Durag Singh, A I R 1920 All 220. The mere fact, that a corporation has granted license under certain chapter of a Municipal Act does not preclude it from refusing to grant a different license under some other provisions of the Act. Corporation of Calcutta v. Siemens Bena 35 C W N 831.

116 No tenant of immovable property, or person claiming through such tenant shall during the continuance of the tenancy, be permitted to deny that the landlord of such tenant had at the beginning of the tenancy, a title to such immovable property and no person who came upon any immovable property by the license of the person in possession thereof shall be permitted to deny that such person had a title to such possession at the time when such license was given.

Principle *Where a man having no title obtains possession of land under a devise by a man in possession who assumes to give him a title as tenant he car

He
un ba nd
est
St
C
I
r

plaintiff, and then refused to pay his rent under an idea that he might contest the plaintiff's right, but the plaintiff could not be supposed to come to trial prepared to meet such a defence and to make out his title, such an action as the present does not involve the question of title. In the same case Grose J said 'It has been said that the rule of not giving in evidence nil habuit in tenements in an action for use and occupation is a technical rule, but in my opinion no rule is better founded in justice and policy than this. The general rule is admitted that in such an action as this the tenant cannot dispute the landlord's title, se' 'The principle is the contrary, it is his out of possession 41

Scope of the section : The estoppel of a tenant is one of the most notice-

abl
bu
or 53

S.

pp 515-517 But this section does not debar one, who has once been a tenant, from contending that the title of his landlord has been lost or his tenancy has been determined. I from contending this tenancy Amnu v over after the expiry that his landlord the zemindar and Gooroo Pershad.

recover possession of a house from the defendants alleging that they were his tenants under a lease which he had granted to them, and that though the term of the lease had expired they refused to vacate, the defendants having passed the Kabuliyat to plaintiff could not be heard to deny the latter's title as ground for refusing to give up possession. Patel v Hargovan, 19 B 133 Plaintiff alleging a purchase of land from A and B and that he afterwards granted them a patta and retained them in possession, sued to recover possession on the ground of the tenancy having expired. He tendered in evidence a consent decree obtained against B for arrears of rent. Held that the decree worked no estoppel against B by virtue of s 116 of the Evidence Act and did not relieve the plaintiff of the necessity of proving his case completely. Soltir Moulai v Nisomal, 1 C L R 528 Two persons mortgaged certain property and five years later joined with another mortg party him five years after, estopped from showing that the mortgagors were not, at the date of the lease, entitled to the whole of the property comprised in the mortgage. Prosunno Kumar Sen v Mahaborat, 7 C W N 575 A person who obtained possession of property from another is estoppel from denying the title of that other to the property at the time he was so let into possession. But where the defendant obtained possession of certain property under a rental agreement from one who was the manager of certain charity to which the said property was attached held that the defendant he was entitled to manage the pro that therefore the Will and

43 Ind Cas 47 A tenant, deny his land possession to him Ma (35 Ind Cas 7, 24 C L foll), see also Ekoba Go Alah Bahsh v Lai Khan, 67 Ind Cas 269, see also Mahomed v Uberoi 89 Ind Cas 590=12 O L J 501, Mahomed v Zahiruddin, 101 Ind Cas 771 Pundlik v Urkuda, 97 Ind Cas 992, Dajalal v Ko Lon, 6 Rang 657, Sidik v Mahomed, 21 S L R 185, Vertannes v Robinson, A I R 1928 Rang 162, Currumbhoy v L T Creet, A I R 1933 P C 29 A person who executes a lease in favour of another, is estopped from denying that other's title to grant the lease. It is immaterial whether he was the tenant of some other person before the execution of the lease. Chandoo v Purbhoo, 59 Ind Cas 707 A person entering into a covenant in his Kabuliyat is bound to recognise rights so recorded even if such rights were incorrectly recorded and had no real existence. Mudnapore Zemindari Co Ltd v Nares Narain, 38 C L J 317=63 Ind Cas 161; Samsuddin v Aga Syed 11 O & A L R 1041 expiration of the only surrendering 50 Ind Cas 591 97, 37 All 557 =55 Ind Cas 953, a landlord from the talquzar Seth Surjun Entries in revenue correctness which has under s 42 of the F Jai Kuar v Lathu, it not under circumstances which would establish a relationship as between the parties of landlo and tenant, the tenant is not estopped from showing that the person to whom he paid the rent is not the landlord Abdul Rappak v Promadi Sundari, 80 Ind Cas 22 Tenant in possession prior to lease also is estopped Meal Ram v M Bholi, A I R 1925 Lah 60 Where a property is leased by a person without title to it and the lessee is ejected by the true owner it is not open to the lessee in a suit by his lessor against him to deny the plaintiffs' title Moti Lal v Jai Vahomed 47 A 63=85 Ind Cas 756—A I R 1925 All 275

Though the tenant and show that his Such a plea does confession and aver on the ground that the lessor's title has been defeated by a title paramount in the case of complete eviction a question of continuance of paramount terminating the in the case of a partial eviction demand the distinction is quite apparent but "attornment" in the sense in which a mere agreement in favour of a third party to pay rent but has been defined as the act of the tenant putting one person in the place of another as his landlord Jogendra Lal v Mahesh Chandra, 55 C 1013=32 C W N 559=112 Ind Cas 172=47 C L J 387 Where the rights of the vendors of the plaintiff become extinguished by adverse possession of a plot of land by defendant for more than 12 years, the defendant will not be estopped from pleading acquisition of title by adverse possession and denying plaintiff's title to plot even though the defendant, after purchase of the plot by the plaintiff had obtained his permission to occupy the plot Maung Ba Than v Maung Sein Win, A I R 1929 Rang 170 Where the mortgagees in possession allow the mortgagees to remain in occupation of the mortgaged properties as tenants and the mortgagees duly execute and register the mortgage, the mortgagor cannot claim the subsists between them and plead that the lessor v Krishna Chandra Woods, L R 3 Q

The mere fact that a person has taken a lease from the Municipal Board cannot estop him from setting up another party to that lease If any one pleads that the lessor and the lessee are the same person, the Municipal Board cannot set up the fact that the lessor and the lessee are the same person between them.

may have been the nature of a person's possession prior to a lease, once he takes a lease deed in respect of the land from another he is thereafter estopped from denying the title of the lessor Maung Kyue v 907=L R 3 A 623 only.

No tenant. "The true ground of estoppel is" according to the statement of Vice-Chancellor Sir P H Page Wood, in Longford v Selmes, J K & J 220, 229, "that a tenant may not dispute the right of his landlord by saying that he had nothing in the property. It is equally clear" he observes, "that he may, nevertheless, show that the landlord had an interest at the date of the lease, which has since determined." The ground of the doctrine, as stated in Lush J, in Vorton v Woods, (1863) L R 3 Q B 658 at p 671, is that as much as the parties have agreed that they should stand in the relation of landlord and tenant, and the one accordingly receives possession, from the other and enters premises, so long as he continues in possession, he cannot be heard to deny the state of facts which he has agreed shall be taken as the basis of the arrangement; in other words, he cannot set up that the landlord has no title." The principle is exactly expressed by Patty C B in Wagon v P (1883) 12 L R 1r 69, 72,—"The defendant is estopped from alleging that his lessor had not at the time of letting, any estate in the premises. He may, however, on proper pleading show, that the estate which the lessor had at the time of letting had expired before the commencement of the action."

may dispute the title of one from whom he did not get possession, and to whom he has not attained, in the strict sense of the word, at the request or with the privity of the person from whom he did get possession. Gregory v Doulie, 3 Bing 174. Cornish v Scatchell, 4 B & C 171, Lell Mahomed v Kallmes, 11 C. 519. A tenant who has repeatedly acknowledged that a person in possession of the proprietary right is entitled to receive rent and who has in fact attorned to him cannot afterwards be allowed to question the validity of the title of such person for the reason that the instrument by virtue of which possession of the proprietary right had been obtained was unregistered. Shums Ahmed v Ghoolam Moher, 3 N W P 113. A tenant who was not let into possession by the person seeking to eject him is not estopped from denying the plaintiff's title, he may show that the title is in some third person or in himself. Venkata v Aiyanna, 31 M L J 712-20 M L J 157-26 Ind Cas 817 (F B). A grantee of lands so long as he holds a religious office in a temple is estopped from setting up a title inconsistent with that of the grantor, and an alienee from such grantee is similarly estopped and the alienation itself is invalid as against the trustee of the temple. Section 116 of the Evidence Act is not exhaustive of the law of estoppel. Thayellajam v Venkatarama Krishnayam, (1919) M W N 10-33 Ind Cas 888. This section applies not only to tenants let into possession at the beginning of the lease but also to tenants who are already in possession and continue in it. Harat v Dindi, 25 Ind Cas 615. An adverse action taken by a third party, whether that third party be the Government or some other rival claimant cannot have the effect of terminating the relationship of landlord and tenant and the tenant will be estopped by this section from denying the landlord's title. Kudhumi v in Kanna Thara, (1918) M W N 376-8 L W 41-45 Ind Cas 655. Under this section a tenant is precluded from denying the title of the landlord, but it is open to him to question the status of his landlord. Lokoram v. Bulya Rao, 53 Ind Cas 43. A tenant who has executed a lease but has not been let into possession by the lessor, is estopped from denying his lessor's title in the absence of proof that he executed the lease in ignorance of the defect in his lessor's title or that his execution of the lease was procured by fraud, misrepresentation or coercion. Malham v Bursakhi, 123 P R, 1919-50 Ind Cas 591. A tenant inducted of land by one person cannot alter by the character of his possession and make a difference to the landlord going over to another person and paying rent to him. Abdul Halim v Pana Mia, 61 Ind Cas 494. A tenant cannot deny the right of the person from whom he took the tenancy. Janki v Ram Sahai, L R 4 A 398, Sital Prasad v Badai, 69 Ind Cas 647. A tenant can prove cessor of landlord's title by ouster by the latter on ouster. Ramaswami v see also Alagapillai v Ramaswami, 49 Ind Cas 892, Hopcroft v Keys, 9 bing 613

Where in a suit by has been admitted, the landlord's title. Rutter

626 The section of the
who has been put in pos of English law which enacts that a tenant who was so let into possession could not deny his landlord's title. The plea of estoppel is of no avail where tenants

ain members of the egal position or by possession of their effect upon their Pal Singh, 4 O W

Pal Singh, 40 W

estopped

t=29 Bom

applies to ✓ Asurn,

tenant, it

... of the
... R

1 R
2 281

at 281
probi-

prohi-

does not lie lessors. Also 1927 Cal 94
"The rule" is

as a tenant from disputing in a Court of law the title of his landlord, is a rule tending to general convenience. I am aware that there is a qualification of this rule, if qualification it can be called, and that there are cases in which the tenant has been permitted to show that a landlord could not justify a distress in all of these, however, the right of the landlord to demand his rent is admitted, and the plea has been either that his title has since expired, or that the tenant has been compelled to pay sums which he was entitled to deduct from the rent, these cases therefore rather confirm than impeach the general rule, but the tenant here brazenly disputes the landlord's right to demand."

Or person claiming through such tenant When the relation of landlord and tenant is once established, it attaches to all who may succeed the tenant immediately or remotely, and the succeeding tenant is as much affected by the acts and acknowledgments of his predecessor as though they were his own (Crease v Larrat 1 Group M & R 919. The assignor of a lease is estopped equally with his assignor Sayor v Nerdham, 2 Funt 270; John v Blair, 1 L. P. 89, See d Bullen v Will, 2 Ad. & El. 17, See d Mansel v Palmer, 3 Bing 41. But a third person not claiming possession of the land who has brought goods on to the land by the licence of the tenant, is not estopped from disputing the lessor's title. Tilman v Henman, (1893) 2 Q. B. 169. So persons not claiming possession of land through the tenant are not estopped from denying the title of the lessor. Maharaja of Jaipur v Suraj Singh 41 A 671-20 A L J 615-(1922) A 333. Where the lessors accept and act upon the talukdary, the lessors as well as the persons claiming under them are equally estopped from denying the validity of the lease. Hari Mond v Durgathan, 91 Ind. Cas 661-A I R 1926 Cal. 682. The estoppel operates against persons claiming through the tenants, as for instance sub-leasees (Cajera on Estoppel 105, Dar d Knight v Smythe, 1 M & S 347, London and N. W. Rail Co v West, L. R. 2 C P 533; Barwick v Thompson, T. R. 453. An under tenant is bound by estoppel as against his lessor under s 116 and is estopped from denying the title of the original landlord. Where the lessor obtains a decree for ejectment against the lessee he can execute the decree against the sub-lessee also. Sheikh Yusuf v Jyotish Chandra, 33 C. W. N. 1132-A I R 1932 Cal. 241. This section which enacts the rule of estoppel of a tenant is not exhaustive of all principles of estoppel as between landlord and tenant. The basis of the principle is the fact of the letting of the tenant into possession which creates the estoppel. If a tenant consents to give up possession to a party claiming title adverse to the landlord's title that party is estopped as the tenant would have been from disputing the landlord's title. Ayubulla v Bilal, 35 C. W. N. 652-54 C. L. J. 151.

During the continuance of the tenancy A tenant cannot, in the absence of fraud or mistake, question the title of a person to whom he has attorned (Oravenor v Woodhouse, 1 Bing 38, Hall v Butler, 10 Ad. & El. 204; Doe d Blarlow v Higgins, 4 Q. B. 367), or paid rent (Carlton v Doxcoek, (1835) 51 L. J. 659), or at whose hands he has submitted to a distress, (Panton v Jones, 11 Q. B. 270. Conner v Blandu 1 Bing N. C. 45). A tenant is as has already been said, estopped from disputing his title as against his landlord, and as against all persons claiming through the landlord, during the continuance of the tenancy. The words of the section are "during the continuance of the tenancy". The words "during the continuance of the tenancy" are to be construed as meaning "during the continuance of the tenancy" and not "during the continuance of the tenancy" as the words "during the continuance of the tenancy" are to be construed as meaning "during the continuance of the tenancy".

the subject of the tenancy. The words of the section are "during the continuance of the tenancy". The words "during the continuance of the tenancy" are to be construed as meaning "during the continuance of the tenancy" and not "during the continuance of the tenancy" as the words "during the continuance of the tenancy" are to be construed as meaning "during the continuance of the tenancy".

of the plaintiff is estopped from disputing the title of the landlord at the beginning of the tenancy.

to deny relation Devulraj Duklumalla, 25 Ind Cas 721 : A tenant who has been let into possession cannot deny his landlord's title however defective it may be, so long as he has not openly restored possession by surrender to his landlord Mussamat Bilas Kunicar v Desing, 19 C W N 1207 P C -29 M L J 735; Mahomed Humtar v Aurang, 60 Ind Cas 502-3 Lah L J 227 In a suit brought by the plaintiff in ejectment on the expiry of the lease, it is not open to the defendant under s 116 of the Evidence Act to say that the plaintiff is not the sole landlord, when the defendant had been inducted on the land by the plaintiff and when the lease in favour of the defendant had been executed by the plaintiff alone Alimuddin v Alanaddin, 38 Ind Cas 531 This section only operates as an estoppel during the continuance of a tenancy and not after it has come to an end. A tenant is liable to pay rent to the person who has the real title Mahadeo v Janarayan, 62 Ind Cas 850 But it is open to the tenant to prove a subsequent cessor of the landlord's title, and one way in which the tenant can show that the title had determined such an one who has a term of years cannot set up during the continuance of such relation any title adverse to the landlord inconsistent with the legal relation between them and however notoriously and to the knowledge of the other party, acquires by the operation of the law of limitation title as owner of any other title inconsistent with the title of the landlord Iarug, d) The against him in ejectment during the continuance of the tenancy and is decreed against him Verlaunes v Robinson A I R 1928 Rang 162 A tenant is not estopped even before or after the expiration of the term from showing that his lessor's title has determined Downs v Cooper, 2 Q B 256, Langford v. Selmes, 3 K & J, 220, 229, Gippins v Buckland, 1 H & C 236; Wogan v Doyle, 12 L R Ir. 39; Sergeant v Nash Field & Co (1903) 2 K R 304, 313 C A But if the tenant came into possession of the land as a tenant, he would seem to be that Do v. Smythe, p 401; see also 513, Ayululla v. Oudh 174-8 s 116 which next action was temporary only and ceased to operate when he gave up possession of the land and when his tenancy according be decided as the case could Agabeg v James Golder, 57 I A

At the beginning of the tenancy. The words "at the beginning of the tenancy" in this section only apply to cases in which the tenants are put into possession of the tenancy by the person to whom they have attorned, and not to cases in which the tenants have previously been in possession Lal Mahomed v Kallanus, 11 C. 519 (explained in Keludas v. Surendra 7 C W. N 596); Swanell 2 R & C 471 R.

that relationship ceases A 226-33 Ind Cas 97. dlord had no title at a that since its commencement it has expired or has been defeated because the bar operates only during the continuance of the tenancy Rama Suami v Alanga Pillai, 79 Ind Ca 881-1925 Mad 143 Where under s 116 of the Evidence Act a tenant duri

the continuance of the tenancy is not estopped from denying that at the beginning of the tenancy his landlord had any title to the demised premises. It is open to a tenant in a suit for recovery of rent to show that the title of his landlord has expired or have legally determined. Rim Raha v Munna Lal, 32 P L R 338-A I R 1931 Lah 243. This section only provides that a tenant cannot be permitted to deny that the landlord at the beginning of the tenancy had a title to the property. He is not estopped from saying that on the death of the lessor or the property did not devolve on the plaintiff but devolved on some body else. Madan Lal v Mt Gour Das, 26 A L J 1255-110 Ind Cas 376-A I R 1928 All 650. A tenant attorning to the mortgagee and paying rent to him will be estopped from questioning the mortgagee's title in a suit for ejectment by the mortgagee. Nagindas v Bahalal, A I R 1930 Bom 391-32 Bom L R 692.

How a relationship of landlord and tenant is created. A relationship of landlord and tenant can be created either by written contract or by verbal contract, when the landlord has put the tenant in possession of the land. It may also be inferred from the Casperz on Estoppel, 102. 1 established between the parties the landlord's title. There must be put into possession by the landlord in order to estop the tenant from disputing the landlord's title. The question in each case is whether a new tenancy has arisen. Of course in support of the contention that there was no relation of landlord and tenant between the parties the tenant may assert that the contract of tenancy is void or voidable on account of misrepresentation or fraud. Shanker v Jagannath, 30 Bom L R 741-111 Ind Cas 911-A I R 1928 Bom 165. Payment of rent is evidence of permissive occupation, and in all cases furnishes a strong presumption against the tenant. It furnishes the landlord with a prima facie case, but the circumstance is always open to explanation, and where rent has been paid under a mistake or upon misrepresentation, it is open to the tenant to rebut the presumption. Gratenor v Woodhouse 1 Bing 38, Bogers v Pitcher, 6 Taunt 202, Casperz on Estoppel 113, Williams v Bartholomeo, 1 B & P 326, Doe v Clarke Perke Ad Cas 239, Fenner v Duplock, 2 Bing 10, Doe v Barton, 11 Ad & El 307; Doe v Francis 2 M & R 57, Doe v Brown, 7 Ad & El 447, Hall v Butler, 10 Ad & El 204, Carlton v Boucock, 51 L T 659, Serjent v Nash, (1903) 2 K B 304 C A, Knight v Cox, 18 C title in per on ock, 51 strong

Landlord as a benamidar. In cases where the doctrine of estoppel does not come into play, it is open to the tenant-defendant to urge that the plaintiff, as benamidar for the beneficial owner, is not entitled to claim rent from him. Rahimannessa v Mahadeb 12 C L J 428. In that case at page 431, Mr Justice Aookherjee said: "The District Judge, as we have already stated, has held that the plaintiff was a mere benamidar and consequently claim rent from him. This is a judicial decision, but in fact, a series of decisions of this Court in cases of Don-elle v Kedarnath, Cherbutty v Don-elle 20 W R 17 R 44 and Kailash Mondal also, reliance may be placed to some extent upon the case of Jaynarain Boss v Kadambini Das 7 B L R 723. In some of these cases, there are expressions to be found in the judgments to the effect that the doctrine of estoppel recognised in English law should not be adopted in this country. It is not necessary for us to consider, whether this view is not too widely expressed, and whether such a position could be maintained in view of the provisions of section 116 of the Indian Evidence Act. It is sufficient for us to hold that in cases where the doctrine of estoppel does not come into play, it is open to the tenant-defendant to urge that the plaintiff, as benamidar for beneficial owner is not entitled to claim rent from him. We may

... that in the long history of the ... As already ... S.

143 and Gregory v Deridge, 3 Bing 471. But in a suit for rent, instituted by the person, in a 116 from rent, somebody else nature Dogar 1907; see also Charan, 9 Ind Cas 89. But it is executed by general law, has no

 tant can deny his right
 also Kuthaperumal v.
 *I L J 597.

7. A party obtaining possession of those premises, title against the has collected rent in v Narayan, 13

M 395

Acceptance of lease under coercion, etc. A person who, under coercion, takes a lease, is not bound by his acceptance, nor is he estopped, by paying rent to the person granting the lease, unless the payee let him into possession. Estoppel would be confined to the case where the lease was given by a Collector or Suraj Bakshi. A lease made to a Collector for a tenure liable to pay revenue on account of an estate, is not a lease, and cannot create an estoppel.

can deny his landlord's title existing at the commencement of the lease, the rule only applies where the tenant has been let into possession. If through ignorance or mistake a tenant has executed a rent note and has been put in possession by the lessor it seems that he can dispute the lessor's title. All Luxembourg v Dev 72 Ind Cas 855. A tenant who has executed a lease but attornment was made by payment of rent. But the onus of proving want of title is on them. Chengtu Sookor v. Jaheruddin Mondal, 91 Ind. Cas. 669 = A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 720. Where a tenant being already in possession has made an attornment or acknowledgment of the tenancy, he may show that he did so

5. through ignorance, mistake or the like Bishen v Fule Huram, 112 Ind Cas 382

Assignee of landlord : A tenant is not prevented from questioning the title of the alleged assignee of his admitted landlord. Ranee Tillasurree v Ranee Ashmedh, 21 W R 101. Cornish v Scarell, 8 B & C. 471; Coleridge v MacKenzie, 4 M & G 143. The defendant mortgaged in 1895 an unrecognised sub-division of a Narwa but remained in possession of it under a rent note executed in favour of the mortgagee. The mortgagee assigned his rights to the plaintiff. Plaintiff sued defendant in ejectment and the latter pleaded that the mortgage, the lease and the assignment were void. Held that the defendant having attorned to plaintiff it was not open to him to contend in the ejectment suit that plaintiff had no right to let out the property on rent. Darilas v Shamal, 22 Bom L B 149-58 Ind Cas 595. But in the case of an assignee of the lessor, though he is to all intents and purposes in the same situation as the lessor, and takes the benefit of and is bound by a lease by estoppel, the law is different. See Ind Cas 595 and Ind Cas 596 that the lessor had no such title as he

7 L. J. O. S. 18, Juc v Wood, Cr
M & W 337, 343; Doe v Wiggins, 4 Q. B. 367, 375; Sturgeon v Wingfield 15
M & W 224; Cuthbertson v Irving, 4 H. & N. 742; Halsbury Vol 13 p 405

Disclaimer of right to evict. The authorities show that a tenant in India is not precluded by an admission of tenancy from showing that the nature of the tenancy asserted by him to the knowledge of the landlord has been for the

the right to evict
by the tenant to the
of a right in con
is a tenant at will or e Fitzan v. Moad,
the right

16 Ch D 780 A landlord merely be receiving rent cannot preserve his right to other claims continuously derided by the tenant The fact that such assertion adverse character when disugri v Banaji, 27 Ployd, 15 W R 233, Durga Prosad, 12 B Ngapa, 7 B. 96, 99, Mamunura v Narayana, 3 M 44, Narayana v Mamunabai, P J. 136; Santharan v. Periasami, 13 M 467

Whether sections 116 and 117 are exhaustive Sections 116 and 117 of part of the analogy of the tenants' estoppel It has however been correctly doctrines of estoppel by 97) 1 Ch D 440 on appeal which is not provided for 747 = 3 C L J 629 = 33 C

747-3 C L J 629-53
The principle of the rule in such cases is that where property is taken under an instrument and the taking possession is in accordance with a right which could not have been granted except upon the understanding that the possessor should not

1, there is an
1 20 Ind Cas
1 a dictum in
erty to dispute
Evidence Act
y Statute, Act
her v Small,
116 and 117
applies The e Act are not exhaustive in force in British India Mhaiganta v Himmatt, 20 C. W. N. 1335-21 S. C. L. J. 103 In decided by this Court that sections 115 to

of the late Chief Justice Sir Richard Garth to which I wish to draw attention is at p 678 There he is reported to have said 'It has been further contended by the Appellants, that ss 115 to 117 contained in Chap VIII of the Evidence Act lay down only rules of estoppel which are now intended to be in force in British India, and that those rules are treated by the Act as rules of evidence; and that which th would in

ing any of sectic administration of the law' I desire to point out that the principle of law which was laid down by Chief Justice Zundal (vide notes under principle, supra) to which I have referred it is refe- has who den mad poe the defe Dar ..

claiming by him can controvert the landlord's title He cannot put another person in possession

This I believe, down by Bu 768n) This e v Gonne, 2 (1893) 2 Q B v Bradley, 5 (of the arguments an estoppel except during the term? Serjt, Byles answered A tenant is at all times estopped from disputing the title of his landlord and referred to a long line of cases, including Doe v Smythe 4 M & B 347 At a later stage of the argument, Mr Justice Vaughan Williams repeated the question, 'whether the estoppel does not end with term' Serjt Byles answered the estoppel is limited in point of extent; but there is no authority for saying that it is limited in point of time Wilde C J then intervened with the following observation "In Co Litt 47(6), it is said that 'if a man take a lease for years of his own land by deed indentured, the estoppel doth not continue after the term indeed, for, by the making of the lease, the estoppel doth grow, and consequently, by the end of the lease the estoppel determines. The only qualification I am aware of that has been engrafted upon that rule, is, that if the tenant comes into possession before he dispossessed the landlord pointed out in Accident when the tenant had permission in the foundation dispute the title of his existence of the estoppel conditions are present, such notices as long line of decisions

v Guru Prosad, 11
simplified recognised
ugurnath, 7 W R 25,

723 n We have further the weighty opinion of Sir Subramanya Ayyar C J expressed in the case of Muthamayan v Sinna Sama Vayan, 23 M 526 that

16. the law has not in this respect been altered by the Indian Evidence Act, and that now, denying (see also Ram Chandra)

that this view is erroneous and that the law as Indian Evidence Act is an intentional der subject In my opinion, there is no foundation for the contention that the

the continuance of the tenancy, a tenant of an immoveable property or persons claiming through such tenant, cannot be permitted to deny that the landlord of such tenant, at the beginning of such tenancy, had no title to the immoveable property This does not imply that after the expiration of the tenancy the

by a rule of substantive of evidence, not being are not excluded by action does not contain the whole law of estoppel Thus the tenant's estoppel operates even after the termination of the tenancy Majibar v Isab Surati 32 C W N 867-A I R 1928 Cal 548.

Licensee of a person in possession There is no distinction, so far as concerns the law of estoppel, between a licensee and a tenant, and a licensee who has obtained possession by aid of the licensee, before he can show that his

Vol 13 p 404 In obtained possession in the garden, and title In delivering case of a person who Doe d Knight v Lady up possession to the party coming through him, has a was held in that case, not that the party claiming as landlady to the tenant was altogether estopped from trying the right, but that the tenant must first restore possession If the defendant here has any right, she might, in the first instance, have brought ejectment, or have entered on Mrs Johnson and dispossessed her But she takes neither course She fraudulently obtains permission to go upon the land, and holding the land extends also as a servant" even the case of permission, Vol 106 107 had en to isting aran mere cense under sbury es of

Vol 13, 424 The respondent came upon the land in dispute by the appellant, who caused M T to redeem it from mortgage, after which it was held jointly by the families of M T and the respondent About 15 years subsequently according to the respondent, the appellant made over the land altogether to him and M. T. The respondent also raised the question of the appellant's title. The burden of proof being entirely on the respondent and no limitation being establish ndant is proved to be permissive, he is estopped from denying plaintiffs' title under this section Mah Ill v. Maung

1. Consequently the licensee is not prevented from asserting that he must not be turned out Uthadesa v. Ma San Me, 7 R 617—A. I R 1930 Rang 29

Estoppel between mortgagor and mortgagee Where a mortgagee is put into possession by the mortgagor in pursuance of the contract of mortgage, he is estopped from denying the title of his mortgagor during the continuance of the mortgage. The principle of estoppel between the mortgagor and the mortgagee works in favour of and against both of them. The mortgagor is estopped from denying his own authority to mortgage the property. On the other hand the mortgagee is estopped from denying the authority of the mortgagor to mortgage his property. Rad As' v. Ma San Me, 7 R 617—A. I R 1930 Rang 29. 11 O L J 722, see also Lakshmi Surendra v. Khutundra, 29 C L J 434, Kadalan v. Oothinan, 10 Ind Cas 2. Jadunandan, A I R 1925 All 753, Deb med v. Hanyu, 35 B 507, Gulab v. Duran, 48 C 591 (P C), Jogini v. Bhutnath, 31 C 146, Shamsharan v. Mokkoda, 15 C W N 703, Ranjana Saha v. Dhiku Singh, 10 C L J 264—16 Ind Cas 246; Kanara Venkata v. Ramaswami, 10 M 75, Maha is estopped from denying his title as long as he has possession. Rajnarayan, I. R. 1925 All 108. the date of the mortgage. death of the mortgagor persons who are his heirs under the Hindu Law did not succeed to his occupancy rights in accordance with the special rules laid down in Act 12 of 1881. Mahadeo v. Ram Raj, A I R 1930 All 108

Estoppel by landlord A landlord is estopped from alleging his want of title to the premises (Trevinn v. Lawrence 2 Smiths L C (13th Ed) 605), against tenant, though not, it has been held, the invalidity of a lease granted by him in good faith, but without necessary consent. Canterbury Co v. Cooper, 73 J P 225, Phup Ev 659

117. No acceptor of a bill of exchange shall be permitted to deny that the drawer had authority to draw such bill or to endorse it, nor shall any bailee or licensee be permitted to deny that his bailor or licensor had, at the time when the bailment or license commenced, authority to make such bailment or grant such license.

Explanation. (1).—The acceptor of a bill of exchange may deny that the bill was really drawn by the person by whom it purports to have been drawn

Explanation (2).—If a bailee delivers the goods bailed to a person other than the bailor, he may prove that such person had a right to them as against the bailor.

7. Estoppel—In cases mentioned in this section an estoppel by agreement. As has been well based on a conventional state of facts that, for that very reason, the parties never in practice come to any express agreement about them at all and the estoppel is nothing but the carrying out of what the parties as honest men must have intended if they thought about the matter at all at the time they made the bargain (Crabbe's Estoppel, 12, 21). The parties are deemed to have dealt with one another on the basis of their rights being regulated by a conventional state of facts. The tenant and licensor, the terms that the bill amounts to an undertaking to pay to the order of the drawer and all are instances of estoppel therefore of the estoppel in a transaction in each case." I Chunder, 3 C L J 629.

Negotiable Instruments—In the case of the acceptance admits the genuineness of the signature of the drawers to assume that re. Philips v Im Thurn L R 1 C P 163. "The object of the law merchant" says Byles J in Suan v North British Australian Co, 2 H & C 175, "as to bills and notes made or become payable to bearer, is to secure their circulation as money; therefore honest acquisition confers title." So whenever one of the who has enabled such Ashurst J in Lachbarre is thus led to question that it is incumbent upon the handwriting of his drawer's name into the acceptance of the Bank, 46 the same case it nature of the signature has been used case of a bill paid upon presentment, as to one accepted and afterwards paid." The rule is thus stated by Stephen "No acceptor of a bill of exchange is permitted to deny the signature of the drawer, or his capacity to draw, or, if the bill is payable to the order of the drawer, his capacity to endorse the bill though he may deny the fact of authority of the agent principal, though the bill is accepted in bank, the acceptor may not deny the fact that the drawer, endorsed other bills without drawers. If they must be who actually But in India section 1. In really drawn at liberty to d by sections 41 runs s not relieved knew or had the bill."

reason to believe the endorsement to be forged when he accepted the bill."

Section 42 says: "An acceptor of a bill of exchange drawn in a fictitious name S.
 that such name is fictitious,
 an indorse-
 to be made lay down
 imptions as regards consideration, date, time of acceptance, time of transfer, order of endorsement and stamp. This section further authorizes the presumption that the holder is a holder in due course. Section 119 provides that the Court shall, on proof of the protest presume the fact of dishonour. Section 120 makes provision for estoppel against denying original validity of instrument by the maker of the promissory note, drawer of a bill of exchange or cheque, and acceptor of a bill of exchange. Section 121 makes provision for estoppel against denying capacity of payee to endorse. Under section 122, no endorser of a negotiable instrument shall, in a suit thereon by a subsequent holder, be permitted to deny the signature or capacity to contract of any prior party to the instrument. In an action on a promissory note or a bill of exchange against a person whose name properly appears defendant to show that the sign principal, whether the defend Co v Deuan Chand, 117 Ind 4

Bailor and to claim that Wilson v Ande
 246, Hunderson,
 and those with whom pro
 bears a close resemblance vide section 116 supra
 the bailment is determ paramount Biddle v

goods is estopped
Burr Jones § 285,
v Griffin, 10 Bing estoppel non la

do not question the general rule in Cheesman v Enall, a connection with wharfs possession of property were there has been no special to that of a tenant who, estopped from denying he is evicted by title

 the same, whether the

acts
Rog
So
 this
 him
 delivered the property to the true owner, who had the right to possession upon demand by the latter, even before legal proceedings have been commenced Such demand by the true owner is equivalent to eviction by title paramount Burr Jones § 285. Stephen thus states somewhat differently, the general rule
 "No bailee, agent or licensee is permitted to deny that the bailor, principal, or licensor, by whom any goods were entrusted to any of them respectively was

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT.

Biddle v Bond, supra by Lord Blackburn, in a considered a Judge who knew laid down there
 ordinary contract of non-delivery of goods delivered them
 for an interpreter
 I defend the action
 goods

on behalf of the
 If he takes the latter
 but he must prove it;
 says Lord Blackburn,

that person
 laid down, and it seems to me rightly Therefore, I am of opinion that on the right and title and by the have not named any such person or that any person has such a right terms that they are not defendants for themselves only As between no defence Therefore, if we plaintiffs and the defendants, succeed in the action." Rogers 318 (325) In the same case rival claimants to the copper proceedings against the rival Kathrine
 Robinson v
 of bailment
 this case
 "A bailee
 bailor to the
 So
 what Yelv
 and there has been
 the jus tertii, if
 authority of the
 is In that case,
 (at p 233),
 Blackburn J delivering the judgment of the Queen's Bench, said (at p 233),
 "We think that the true ground on which a bailee may set up the jus tertii is founded is determined by what is equivalent
 It is not enough that the bailee has become person We agree in what is said in Bettley v
 aware of the nature of Read, 4 O R 511 517 that to allow a depository of goods or money, who has acknowledge
 no claim
 himself
 ever
 may be entitled to relief under an interpretation Thorne v Tilbury 3 H & N 531, 537, that a bailee can set up title and by the
 is supported
 to produce
 the goods and rections of the
 such delivery"
 Thackerseydas,
 other than the delivery of the

Landley v

the claim
 Dock
 Jenk
 the

See also Civil & Criminal may, however, equally with a tenant, shew that the time of a goods has expired since the bailment Thorne v Tilbury, 3 H & N 531 So the facts shew that there has been what Shelbury v Scotsford, Yelv
 and there has been
 the jus tertii, if
 authority of the
 is In that case,
 (at p 233),
 Blackburn J delivering the judgment of the Queen's Bench, said (at p 233),
 "We think that the true ground on which a bailee may set up the jus tertii is
 founded is determined by what is equivalent
 It is not enough that the bailee has become
 person We agree in what is said in Bettley v
 aware of the nature of Read, 4 O R 511 517 that to allow a depository of goods or money, who has acknowledge
 no claim
 himself
 ever
 may be entitled to relief under an interpretation Thorne v Tilbury 3 H & N 531, 537, that a bailee can set up title and by the
 is supported
 to produce
 the goods and
 rections of the
 such delivery"
 Thackerseydas,
 other than the
 delivery of the

17 C W N. 300-310
 bailor, claims goods bailed, he may apply to the Court to stop the title to the goods Contract Act, § 167 ed with knowledge that another than the bailor the bailee cannot set up the claim of such third person cannot take the law Ex parte Davies, 19 Ch D 86, S. which goods have been taken by title paramount, and, if good excuse to him against his bailor of Shelbury v Scotsford, Yelv 23 in thief and had been forcibly taken away from the bailee by the rightful owner, and it was held that the thief could not maintain an action of trover for the ground that the eviction of the horse of his promise to return it to his by be able to avail himself of such a default. If the bailee knowing of the adverse claim, has said to his me have a commission, and I have afterwards set up against his bailor the title of the adverse claimant, because he would have acted with his eyes open," and Lush J added, "I am of opinion that when a person in such a position, knowing of two adverse claims to goods elects to take part of one of the claimants and to sell the goods as his, he is taken this in the trustee

Licenses of patentee, etc : One who manufactured goods by consent of and of th to it with the c pater

293 The United States Supreme Court in an oft-quoted case said : "Having actually received profits from the sales of the patented machine, which profits ion of the defendants y an agent or a joint joint owner cannot setting up the illegality s § 285 The analogy lackburn 'So long as the lease remains in force, and the tenant has not been evicted from the land, he is estopped from denying the lessor's title to that land, but he is entitled to show that a particular parcel was never comprised in the lease. So a licensee stranger can show Le v Adie, 3 App this rule does not ot acting under it 284, 289), or a iage (A W) Ltd) by the licensee of & II 930, Taylor Crossly v Dixon, mth, 26 Ch D.

7.

A licensee of a trademark also is estopped, as against his licensor, from questioning the latter's title to the trade mark. Jagannath v Cresswell, 40 C 814. In delivering the judgment Inam J said: "The first question that I have to consider is whether the defendant can be allowed to deny the plaintiff's title. The contract between the owner of a trade mark and his licensee is like a contract between a landlord and his tenant, and as between landlord and tenant so between licensor and licensee the former's right cannot be questioned by the latter. In Clarke v Adie, L R 2 A C 423, which was a case of a patent Lord Blackburn said 'Although a stranger might show that the patent is as bad as any one could wish it the licensee must not show that,' and in the same case Lord Cairns said 'In an earlier case' . . . N S 713. Hood

Grover and . . . V C held that the fact of a patent having been found invalid at law in an action between the patentee and a third party, could not be set up against the patentee by his licensee in a suit upon the same patent. The position as the licensee of a patent . . . 19 (154); Ebrahim v Essa Abbr 24 M . . . C 214, "In India there is no system of registration nor is there any provision for a statutory title to a trademark so that the rights of the parties must be determined in accordance with the principles of the English common law." Per Jenkins C J, in British American Tobacco Co Ltd v Mahboob Buksh, 38 C 110 at p 117, see also G S H v Messrs Jagannath, 42 C 262 = 19 C W N 1. When the plaintiffs, the traders of the trade marks and business of a jute burlor, gave a licensee to the defendants, the right to use and authorize others to use exclusively the trade marks and to hold the good will of the business of original jute-burlor and the marks without any interference by the proprietors for a particular period on . . . to repudiate licensee of a trade mark cannot put an end to the relation of licensee and licensee by repudiation of the other party is a . . . concurrence . . . al o . . . opted . . . will . . . have . . . 503 =

Johustone v Milling, . . . by a person who is not acquire the property been imported by him . . . 39 A 123

Warehouse man A warehouse man who, on receiving an order from the seller of malt to hold on account that he so holds it, cannot set up purchaser that by the usage of trade till it is measured and that before seller became bankrupt. Stonord man in possession of goods attorns to the buyer of them, acknowledging that . . . the price or . . . represents . . . and and say . . . d, 6 B & S . . . Watson 2 B & C . . . 1895) 1 Q B 521, . . . stoppel in pairs is . . . ears, 6 A & E . . . H & N 549, and . . . on this principle . . . defendant have found the-up = title

v. Demick
7 Bing 339, in which Tindal G J stated "the defendant is estopped by his own admissions; for unless they amount to an estoppel, the word 'estoppel' will be blotted from law" The admission in the present case namely, the statement by the defendant that he held the sugar at the plaintiff's order and disposal, is certainly no less strong than in Gosling v Birnie; and lastly, in the case of Knight v Wiffen, L R 5 Q B 660, in which the principle upon which an estoppel in pais arises is again enunciated, and it is again pointed out how it applies" The general rule is that a bailee of goods who has acknowledged that they belong to a the title of that person Hanes v Bing 337 Where a wharfinger for certain persons, and transferred it was held that he could not resist an action on the ground that they had not been separate property passed to the person who lodged it possession, sold a quantity of them to refusal to order by a superinte

mere pror
found an

CHAPTER IX.

OF WITNESSES

118. All persons shall be competent to testify, unless the

Who may testify Court considers that they are prevented from understanding the questions put to them, or from giving rational answers to those questions, by tender years, extreme old age, disease, whether of body or mind, or any other cause of the same kind

Explanation—A lunatic is not incompetent to testify, unless he is prevented by his lunacy from understanding the questions put to him and giving rational answers to them.

Witness must be competent. Incompetency, denotes the legal incapacity to give evidence. In many cases, the testimony of a witness is excluded, not on the ground of incompetency, but on the ground of interest, and (2) incompetency from mental capacity. On the former ground, not only were parties themselves and their husbands and wives excluded, but also all persons who were in part jure with either party, or otherwise substantially interested in the proceedings. Successive statutes have abolished this kind of incompetency, leaving the fact of interest in the proceedings to affect credibility.

8. merely. Coale Gas Lt 213. The early common law rules of exclusion prevented persons who by reason of their relationship to the parties were not supposed to be competent to the suit. (c) The trend of these exclusions was absent in the same direction as the present rules excluding persons from acting as jurors, thus giving another illustration of the influence of the old jury system. The substantial disappearance of these rules of exclusion may be traced between the years of 1823 and 1853. McIntosh Ex § 212.

Infidels and Atheists In England formerly all persons not Christians were excluded from testifying, but at the present time there is no exclusion upon the ground of religious belief, or the lack of it. The theory of the oath has always been that it gave a peculiar sanctity to testimony and that without the oath there was no guarantee of truthfulness. Under these circumstances (and the law recognized no substitute for the oath) it was quite natural that persons who, by reason of their religious belief, felt no force in the oath should have been excluded from testifying. In fact, without a change in the theory it would have been inconsistent and absurd to have allowed a person who refused to take an oath or if taking it, took it only as a matter of form to give his testimony. The broadening of the form of the oath, with the recognition that other religious beliefs besides the belief of the established church might exercise the same influence over the mind, and furnish the same guarantee of truthfulness resulted in the final disappearance of this rule of exclusion. The English Courts have now held that it was held for the English Courts to the effect that a person who refused to take an oath or if taking it, took it only as a matter of form to give his testimony.

testimony of three witnesses whose depositions had been taken under oath administered in accordance with the Gentoo religion should be received. There is nothing in the argument of Lord Chief Justice Willes at p 40 313. There is nothing in the argument that, as Christianity is the law of England, no other oath is consistent with it and, for the reasons already given, this argument carries no weight with it. Though I have shown that an infidel cannot be excluded from being a witness and though I am of opinion that infidels who believe in a God and future rewards and punishments in his other world may be witnesses yet I am as clearly of opinion that if they do not believe in God or future rewards and punishments they ought not to be admitted as witnesses. The principle of this case was subsequently approved by Lord Mansfield in Atcheson v Eves 11 1 Cowp 382, and thereafter re-affirmed in other cases Re v Gilliam 1 Esp 285, Edmonds v Rouse, Ryan & Moody 77. It is evident from this that at that time the Courts had found no way to admit the testimony of atheists. In the case of the suit of Quakers so obnoxious to the early English Churchmen whose members refused to take oath, no little difficulty was experienced in bringing them within the rule of competency, so much, in fact that a special statute was required to extend this privilege Stat 7 & 8 William III C 31 allowed Quakers to affirm where other persons were required to take the oath. Later however statute was required to extend this privilege. But in 1853, the allowed Quakers to affirm where other persons were required to take the oath.

 Later however or any per on Vict C 68)
 1889 (51 & 5)
 ing to being sworn, and stating as the ground of such objection that he has no religious belief an oath
 he expressly
Reg v Moore

61 L J N C 80, Nagh v Ali Khan, 8 T R 411 As regards the question how far it is necessary to follow a statutory form of oath or affirmation, reference may be made to Salomons v Miller, 3 Ex 778, Lancaster v Heaton, 8 El & Bl 952, Wolsel v Worthington 13 Ir Ch R 311, Camp Rul Cas Vol. XI p 111

Parties to the suit The old rule as to the incompetency of parties to the suit to be witnesses was founded upon the prejudice supposed to exist on account of personal interest in the result At the present day it has been entirely abolished, except in the one case of an accused person upon trial for the crime charged against him

Husband and wife of party. The husband and wife of a party may testify in all cases, but is not compellable to disclose private or confidential conversations and communications (File s 120 infra)

Pecuniary interest of a witness Originally persons pecuniarily interested in the suit were not permitted to testify In Dent v Biser, 3 T R 27, 36, Buller J defined the rule of exclusion on the ground of interest to be whether the witness is to gain or lose by the event of the cause This however, has entirely changed except with respect to a witness to a Will who is also a beneficiary under the Will This has been said to be the sole survivor of the numerous exclusionary rules making witnesses incompetent by reason of relationship or pecuniary interest Best Ev (Chamberlain sur El) p 178, note To day a person interested in the outcome of a suit is allowed to testify the same as a disinterested person, but the adverse party may show by cross examination the nature and extent of that interest as affecting the credibility of the witness Melchey v R § 216

Sex In spite of the example of the surrounding peoples notably of Scotland there seems never to have been in the law of England any general testimonial disability based on sex Wigmore § 517

Scope of the section Under this section all persons are competent to testify unless the Court considers that they are incapable of giving evidence its extreme
 same kind
 to him and if a person

to testify as a witness is a condition precedent to the administration to him of an oath or affirmation and is a question distinct from that of his credibility when he has been sworn or has affirmed In determining the question of competency the Court under this section has not to enter into enquiries as to witness's religious belief or as to the knowledge of the consequences of falsehood in this world or the next It has to ascertain in the best way it can whether, from the extent of his intellectual capacity and understanding he is able to give a rational account, of what he has seen or heard or done on a particular occasion If a person of tender years or of very advanced age can satisfy these requirements his competency as a witness is established Queen Empress v Lal Sahai 11 A 183 According to English law every sane person is a competent witness in both civil and criminal cases except a child who does not understand the nature of an oath Powell Ev 197 But in India, where a person is competent to testify according to the provisions of this section but is unable to administer an oath or affirmation, the Court may administer an oath or affirmation to him in such manner as it may think fit and the evidence so given shall be recorded in the proceedings and shall be admissible in evidence

10 O C
 at n 149
 d te
 a l
 d
 even though under the age of seven years may be sworn in a criminal prosecution provided such infant appears on strict examination by the Court to possess sufficient knowledge of the nature and consequences of an oath, in proceeding so that the appellate Court may feel satisfied as to the capacity of the child to give evidence. Tulsi v. Emperor, 110 Ind. Cas. 799-29 Cr. L. J. 767-A I. R. 1928 Lah. 903, see also Hanuman Sarma v. Emperor, A. I. R. 1932 Cal. 723-36 C. W. N. 691.

Duty of Court in cases of witnesses of tender years In Nafar Sheikh v King Emperor, 18 C W N 147 at p 150 Mr Justice Mookerjee said 'It has further been argued that under section 118 of the Evidence Act, he was bound to ascertain, before those children of tender years were examined as witnesses, whether they had capacity to understand and to give rational answers. Reliance has been placed upon the decision in Fakir v Emperor, 11 C W N 51, which, it has been urged, is an authority for the proposition that it is obligatory upon a Judge to test the capacity of a witness of tender years by appropriate questions and to form his opinion as to the competency of such a witness before the actual examination commences. It may be conceded that there are expressions in the judgment in the case mentioned which tend to support this broad statement, but in my opinion the proposition thus widely formulated is not justified by the terms of section 118 of the Indian Evidence Act. That section lays down that all persons shall be competent to testify unless the Court considers that they are prevented from understanding the questions put to them or from giving rational answers to those questions by tender years. The Legislature has not prescribed an inflexible rule of universal application to the effect that before a child of tender years is questioned, the Court must by a preliminary examination test his capacity to understand and to give rational answers and must form an opinion as to the competency of the witness before the actual examination commences. In fact the case of Queen v Whitehead L R 1 C C R 33 shows that the incompetency of the witness may very well appear in the course of his examination in chief and that the evidence of a witness so found to be incompetent may at any stage be withdrawn from the jury. The true rule on the subject is concisely stated by Brewer J in Heeler v United States, 159 U S 523 in these terms. The decision of this question (whether the child witness has sufficient intelligence) primarily rests with the trial Judge who sees the proposed witness notices his manner his apparent trial The question of the capacity of the witness to testify is a question for the Judge himself to decide and not for the jury although after he has decided in favour of the competency of a witness it is for the jury to determine the amount of credit to be given to the statements made by such witness. Queen v Hossein 8 W R Cr 60 A Judge can act on the evidence of a child of tender years if he is impressed by its intelligence and demeanour and the

been in fact made. It may turn out in the course of the examination at the trial that the evidence falls so short that the evidence which the judge gives. On his capacity, he suggests capacity of -3 Pat 91-3

Pat L T 649=66 Ind Cas 73=23 Cr L J 233 In the case of a child of tender years produced as a witness the Court should examine it after being satisfied that the child is intellectually sufficiently developed to enable it to understand what it has seen and to afterwards inform the Court thereof Dhan Ram v Emperor, 13 A L J 1072, Ghulam v Emperor, A I R 1930 Lah 337; contra, Nafar v Emperor, 41 C 406 The Judge must form his opinion as to the competency of a witness before his actual examination commences Fahlu v Emperor 11 C W N 51

Child witness Children of six or even five years of age have been allowed to testify upon the Court being satisfied as to their capacity to give rational testimony R v Holmes 2 F & F 788, R v Perkins Moody C C 175, Sheuring v Sheuring, (1892) Times, Nov 11, P & Baster 1 East P C 413 Where not satisfied, the testimony of a child of seven (R v Forsyth, 93 L T 217) or even eight (P v Williams 7 C & P 320) has been rejected Where in a murder case a small boy, who was an eye witness to the murder, was not examined in the Sessions Court on the ground of his youth, held that the Sessions Judge especially considering the importance of the witness, ought not to have refrained from examining him unless, under the words of section 118 of the Evidence Act, he considered that the boy was prevented from understanding the question put to him, or from giving rational answers to those questions, by reason of tender years Queen Empress v Ram Seval 23 A 90=A W N 1900 211 A child of tender years if a competent witness when such child is intellectually sufficiently developed to understand what it has seen and afterwards to inform the Court about it, this sufficiency may be tested even in examination in chief, understanding is thus the sole test of competency S Rasul v Emperor, A I R 1930 Sin 1 129=130 Ind Cas 514, Nafar Sheikh v Emperor 41 C 406=18 C W N 147 Dhan Ram v Emperor, 38 A 49=13 A L J 1072 Evidence by child should be accepted with caution Mann v Emperor A I R 1930 Oudh 400 Where the Court is of opinion that the child upon whom an offence under s 376 I P Co is committed is unable to give relevant information in the matter by reason of tender years and consequent immaturity of judgment, it should not examine the child at all Ghulam v Emperor, 31 P L R 612=A I R 1930 Lah 337

Oath A witness who has taken oath in the usual form may be asked whether he thinks such oath binding on his conscience, but not whether he considers any other form more binding The Queen's Case, 2 Br & Bing 284 A person who does not believe in the sanctions of religion will not be bound by an oath Thus, where a witness who had been sworn on the voir dire stated in answer to the opposing counsel that she did not believe in a future state of rewards and punishments and regarded the obligation of an oath as no higher than that of her word it was held that the Judge had acted properly in rejecting her evidence Maden v Catanack 7 H & N 360 It is not enough that a person has a religious belief unless he is able to say what form of oath is binding on his conscience Nagh v Ali Khan S T L R 444 Where in a trial for murder the Sessions Judge deliberately abstained from administering an oath or affirmation to the only eye witness to the murder on the ground that she was only 6 or 7

In every case where a witness is applied with the provisions of the Evidence Act, the provisions of which are cases in which it clearly appears that the witness does not understand the moral obligation attaching to an oath or affirmation or the consequence which may arise from giving false evidence of such a person, 6 Pat L J 147= The evidence of a boy v is admissible prescribed form though it should be required before proceeding to ask the witness the question put thereafter the requirement by the Oath-Act. If the witness of such an oath a witness, these facts may the statement of a witness the witness was not that the omission of under-

Act and

"omission" in section 13, Oaths Act, includes any omission and is not limited to accidental negligent omissions Empress v Sambhu, 11 C P L R Cr 16 Whether a child understands the nature of an oath or not, he should when examined as a witness be examined on oath or affirmation Queen Empress v Sheoratan, 5 C 242 Oudh, Queen v Amrita, 22 W R Cr 1; Pua v A E, 2 L B R 322, see also Queen Empress v Marsu, 10 A 207 = A W N 1888, 86, contra, Golla Chinna v Emperor, 15 Cr L J 161 = 22 Ind Cas 737, Queen v Scua, 23 W R Cr 12 = 14 B L R (T. B) 294, Queen v Ilary, 22 W R Cr 14 = 14 B L R 51, Queen v Perumal, 7 Weir, 827, Nandalal v Nistaram 27 C 440

Insanity There was a person lunatic and idiot, in the superstitious is an infliction sent from heaven, at all Co Litt 6 (b), Comyns, 2 Leach Cr C, 3rd ed 482, Wig upon Littleton said "Non compos mentis is of four sorts (1) An idiot, which from birth is by a natural defect of the mind, (2) A man that idiot

(3)

he

hath not under (4) To be a lunatic, he must be such as he depriveth himself Cole on Little, down in 1842 standing may have arisen, nor whether it be temporary and curable, or

ment or longer
254 = 5 C

as a witness, it no
Till, 2 Den & P C C
then argued that any

always prompting him In the same case it is said that it is disastrous if mere delusions were held to exclude a witness Some of the greatest and wisest of mankind have had a particular delusion This broad and rational to disqualify must be such the specific subject of the In three particular respects intent, in two of them the

the subject to be testified about. If on this subject no aberration appears the person is acceptable, however untrustworthy on other subjects. Thirdly, the mere fact of soundness at the time of trial is no longer sufficient; for derangement or defect at the time of the event to be testified to, may make the person untrustworthy. The other elements, the cry in Durham v Durham, of persons of unsound mind, their own knowledge, and their statements have been acted on. But it is evident that statements they must be in question "with caution, and evidence of the facts"

Idiocy. A person incapacitated to such an extent that he is unable to understand the subject in reference to which he is called as a witness is incompetent. Naturally incapacitated persons are not permitted to testify. This rule has always existed and exists to day. The question of whether a person has sufficient capacity to testify is a question of fact for the Judge to decide and he may hear testimony on the point, as well as examine the person himself. McKelvey's Ev § 217

Drunkenness. It follows from modern theory of mental derangement that intoxication even habitual, does not in itself incapacitate a person offered as a witness. The question is, in each instance, whether the witness was so bereft of his powers of observation, recollection, or narration, that he is thoroughly untrustworthy as a witness on the subject in hand. First, then, the capacity of observation at the time, of the events to be testified to, may be such as would exclude the witness as unfit for this requisite, and to declare alone to be considered be so affected that the intelligent and truthful narration may appear to be destroyed temporarily. Wigmore § 400. But that a witness was drunk on the occasion to which he is called upon to testify goes to his credibility and the weight of his evidence, and not to his competency to testify. Drunkenness at the time of testifying is not sufficient to disqualify the witness from testifying. It is for the Court to determine from the present conduct and appearance of the witness, whether he is in such a state as to comprehend the obligation of oath, and to testify intelligibly, or whether he should be excluded. Burr Jones § 724. To render the witness incompetent it must be shown that, at the time of his examination he was non compos mentis, deranged in mind, from some cause the effect of liquor, or any other cause. No drunken man should be permitted to give evidence, but this never can apply to drinking men, even, though incapable of managing their estates. The point of enquiry is the moment of examination; is the witness then offered so besotted in his understanding as to be unimpaired, to recollect and to state the facts, where they do recollect with clearness and intelligence." So a drunkard is a competent witness, when free from the influence of liquor. Banks v Goodfellow, L R 5 Q B 519, R v Hill, 2 Den 254, Spittle v Walton, L R 11 Eq 420

Accused whether competent witness. Section 312 (4) of the Criminal Procedure Code provides that no oath shall be administered to the accused. See also sections 5 and 6 of the Indian Oaths Act. As no oath can be administered to an accused person so he can not be examined as a witness. In the Full Bench case of Emperor v Nga Po Min, A I R 1932 Rang 190-10 Rang 511 (F B) Page C J said "At common law an accused person cannot be either examined or cross examined (R v Payne, 1 C Cr 317) and the reason is that there can be no sanction that such a person will speak the truth. In India an accused person is 'competent to testify' within s 118 Evidence Act (1 of 1872), but such a person is incompetent to be a witness, for an oath cannot be administered to him, and all witness affirmation before they can lawfully any Court. In jure non creditor nisi and 6 Criminal P C (5 of 1898), 406=20 Ind Crs 741. Thus where several accused are tried jointly one accused cannot be sworn and therefore cannot be examined as a witness against other co accused. Reg v Hanmantha 1 Bom 610; Empress v As 720 Queen Empress v Cr L J 342. But an application for transfer of the case under section 526 Ghulam v Emperor, 3 Ind 46=23 Cr L J 399, see also Gallagher v Emperor, 54 C 52. So in India an accused person is not entitled to give evidence on his own behalf. In England the disqualification of the accused in criminal cases to testify for himself seems not to have been questioned in policy until Bentham's time. But his arguments in this respect took longer for their fruition in legislation than any other of his proposals for abolishing witnesses' incapacities. By the Criminal Evidence Act 1898 (61 & 62 Vict C 36) the disability of the accused to appear as a defence witness has been removed. Before that time, it had become customary in England to allow the accused to make a statement to the jury to tell his story not on oath and not as a witness but in the guise of an address or argument on the testimony and the whole case. R v Malins 8 C & P 242 P v Walling 8 C & P 243 R v Dyer 1 Cox Cr 113 R v Williams 1 Cox Cr 363 A v Shumnum 15 Cox Cr 122, R v Millhouse 15 Cox Cr 622. That the formal grant of competency then was so long withheld was due rather to a hesitation founded on the supposed interest of the accused himself. His failure to use the right of testifying would (it was believed) damage his cause more seriously than if he were able to claim that his silence was enforced by law. But chiefly, his exercise of the right to testify would (it was believed), in subjecting him innoc his or Engl should Criminal Law Vol I p 412 said. I am convinced by much experience that questioning the accused or the power of giving evidence is a positive assistance and a highly important one to innocent men and I do not see why in the case of the guilty there need be any hardship about it. Similar remarks also occurred in Lord Alton's Recollections of Bar and Bench where at p 176 he said. It will be convenient here to refer to the effect of the passing of the Act which enables prisoners to give evidence. I had long been impressed with the absolute necessity of such a measure in the interests of justice for the protection of the the prosecution may comment upon any evidence given under the Act by a person charged [R v Gardner (1899) 1 Q B 150] but he must not comment upon the failure of any such person or of the wife or husband of such person to give evidence. Stat 61 & 62 Vict C 36 s 1(b). But it has been held that the Judge may comment upon such failure. R v Rholes (1899) 1 Q B 77, R v Smith 84 L J K B 213 31 T L R 617. There are, however many cases in which it would not be expedient or calculated to further the ends of justice so to do. Kops v The Queen (1894) A C 653. A person discharged by the police and not brought before the Magistrate is not an accused person. In India the evidence of such a person is admissible although he has been illegally discharged by the police. Queen Empress v Mona Puna, 16 B 661.

Counsel engaged in a case. A police officer or advocate conducting a prosecution should never be sworn, unless he is called as a witness, and if so called, he should be allowed to depose only to those facts which he knows and of which he is, in accordance with the witness Empress v. Kenlu, 6 P. L. 1

v. Peary, 40 C. 893 Ladd Goudary
182, Chandreshwar v. Bishneswar, 5 P. 777

Miscellaneous Where a witness gives a satisfactory explanation of his presence on the scene the mere fact that a person is a tailor or weaver by itself is hardly any ground for discrediting his evidence. Emperer v. Ramjan, 1 P. 1932 Lab 12-32 Cr. L. 1130

119 A witness who is unable to speak may give his evidence

Dumb witness in any other manner in which he can make it intelligible, as by writing or by signs, but such writing must be written and the signs made in open Court. Evidence so given shall be deemed to be oral evidence.

Scope At the time when unscientific ideas prevailed concerning mental derangement and defect, the deaf and dumb were so far treated as idiots that they were presumed to be incapable of testifying until the contrary was shown. Hale, Pl. Cr. L. 34, R. v. Ruston, 1 Leach 3 C. & P. 127, Morrison v. Leonard 3 C. & P. 127 To day this presumption has disappeared. Wignore § 498 In People v. McGee 1 Den 21 Jenett J. said "The woman was of sense sufficient to have interpreted the signs and made them intelligible to her by the signs." See also Harrod v. Harrod, 1 Key & J. 9 Persons affected with such calamities have been found by the light of modern science, to be much more intelligent in general, and to be susceptible of far higher culture, than was once supposed. Still, when a deaf mute is addressed as a witness, the Court in the exercise of due caution will take care to ascertain before he is examined, that he possesses the capacity of understanding the nature of an oath, and of giving evidence in a satisfactory manner by the use of signs or by writing. 1 Leach 403; R. v. M. v. Hill, 14 M. & W. 100 In a case where a deaf and dumb witness in Court cannot give competent evidence, the Court may appoint a competent witness to write down the answers of the witness. 5 O. C. 246 witness who is so deaf and dumb that it is impossible to make him understand the questions put in cross examination, is not a competent witness and his evidence, if taken ought to be struck out, and a conviction based solely on his evidence must be quashed. Tenkattan v. Emperor, 14 Ind. Cas. 655 (1911) 7 A. 395 (F. B.)

which

are then read to the witness to understand and that he is to be asked where a deaf and dumb witness is unable to happen of the details of certain events, and cannot understand questions or communicate the events that he is attempting to tell about, his testimony cannot be taken. When the witness, by reason of physical injuries to the throat, was unable to speak, the Court was justified in permitting her to nod for yes, and shake her head for no, and to write answers for which the simple affirmative and negative signs were inappropriate. Burr Jones § 719

120. In all civil proceedings the parties to the suit, and the husband or wife of any party to the suit, shall be competent witnesses. In criminal proceedings against any person, the husband or wife of such person, respectively, shall be a competent witness. S.

Parties to civil suit, and their wives or husbands. Husband or wife of person under criminal trial husband or wife of any party to the suit, shall be competent witnesses. In criminal proceedings against any person, the husband or wife of such person, respectively, shall be a competent witness.

Reason of the rule It was a favourite doctrine of common law that husband and wife were one person in the law. Since parties were incompetent to testify in their own behalf it followed that, if the legal identity of husband and wife was conceded they are not competent witnesses for or against each other. Burr Jones § 733 Blackstone thus stated this ground of exclusion 'But in trials of any sort, they are not allowed to give evidence for or against each other, partly because it is impossible their testimony should be indifferent, but principally because of the union of the persons, and, therefore if they were admitted to be witnesses for each other they would contradict one maxim of the law nemo tenetur seipsum accusare' Black Com 443 see also section 3 of Act XV of 1852 and s 14 of Act II of 1875. But even in England by statutes this incompetency of husband and wife has been gradually removed both in civil cases (see 21 Jac 1 C 10 s 6, the County Courts Act 1846, s 8; the Evidence Amendment Act 1853, s 1 and the Evidence Further Amendment Act, 1869, s 31 and to a large extent in criminal trials by a series of Acts culminating in and superseded by the Criminal Ev Act 1898. Phip 7th Ed 437, see also R v Lord Mayor of London 16 Q B D 772, Director of P P v Blady, (1912) 2 K B 89, 92, Leach v R (1912) A C 305. This section does away with this rule of the common law. In India that bar has been removed by this section. (Place of rule as in England) rule of positive law, and natural justice. Per Sir (25) Cr. Mr Livingstone

nce, prepared by him for the state of Louisiana says "The exclusion of interested testimony having been examined and found to be injurious to the investigation of truth, and its admission to be attended with not be reduced to one of a quantity that has no finds no place in the proposed code, and fruitful sources of uncertainty, expense, delay, and inconvenience in the law. If the search after truth requires that interested witnesses, and even the parties themselves, should be interrogated to discover it, are there any relations in which the offered witness may stand to the parties that exclude his testimony." (1) The code now offered does not contain the exclusion of husband or wife, as with sufficient reason this person tries of course

Civil cases Even before the passing of the Indian Evidence Act, it was held in Queen v Khyroollah 6 W R 21 Cr (K B) by the majority of Courts that in India, upon trials in the Mofussil, a wife was competent to give evidence for or against her husband, or for or against any person tried jointly with her husband. This rule has been incorporated in this section. Bastardy proceedings under section 488 Criminal Procedure Code, and civil proceedings within the meaning of section 120 of the Evidence Act, and the defendant thereto may give evidence on his own behalf. Nur Mahomed v Bismulla Jan, 16 C 781, see also In re Tokee v Abdool, 5 C 500 under section 488 of the 61 provided that on wife's petition for divorce founded on adultery, coupled with cruelty or desertion, both husband and wife are competent and compellable as to cruelty or desertion. Section 2 of Stat 32 & 33 Vict C 63 enacts that parties to an Stat 40 & 41 a civil right or competent and was made

may be,
nce at any or jointly
I shall not pplication;
or husband

as the case may be, of the person so charged, to give evidence shall not be made the subject of any comment by the prosecution, (c) The wife or husband of the

the position of an accused), the husband or wife of such person, respectively, shall be competent witness. But the accused is not a competent witness in a criminal case. The complainant or the husband or wife of such complainant is a competent witness in a criminal proceeding, although this section makes no provision for it, because in all criminal cases the crown is always the nominal prosecutor.

Pross 2 new under Divorce Act R section 52 of the Indian Divorce Act and shall be other witness, Bretton, 4 A.

49 (51) Section 52 of the same Act enacts. "On any petition presented by a wife, praying that her marriage may be dissolved by reason of her husband

61 s 6

121. No Judge or Magistrate shall, except upon the special order of some Court to which he is subordinate, be compelled to answer any questions as to his own conduct in Court as such Judge or Magistrate, or as to anything which came to his knowledge in Court as such Judge or Magistrate but he may be examined as to other matters which occurred in his presence whilst he was so acting.

Illustrations.

(a) A, on his trial before the Court of Session, says that a deposition was improperly taken by B, the Magistrate. He cannot be compelled to answer questions as to this, except upon the special order of a superior Court.

(b) A is accused before the Court of Session of having given false evidence before B, a Magistrate. B cannot be asked what A said except upon the special order of the superior Court.

(c) A is accused before the Court of Session of attempting to murder a police-officer whilst on his trial before B, a Sessions Judge. B may be examined as to what occurred.

Principle. A Judge is not bound to leave the bench and testify as to anything. Public policy would authorize his refusal. If the Judges are made competent witnesses, it would have a tendency to lower the standard attempt. Burr Jones § 764 In Duke of Buccle 5 E & I App 429 433, Cleasby B said "With respect to those who fill the office of Judge it has been felt that there are grave of made subject of cross examination and comme put) in relation to proceedings before it properly may say

no of

Scope of the section. Calling the Judge as a witness is an exceedingly rare event. Nevertheless, it has sometimes happened that a presiding Judge inconsistent that the function stand as a witness he has all the

of a w .
but not
n ques Court
return
arising,
custody for contempt? The first would be unseemly, it not un would be passing judicially upon his own case. The last would disorganise the Other like results may be conceived as proceedings Reg v
Live testimony as a Richell v Justice, K
iving evidence upon matters which they saw, when sitting as Judges, unless they arrive at such know ledge by virtue of investigation which they were making as Judges. A Munsiff should not be called upon to depose to what took place before him in the course of a trial which he was conducting as a Munsiff. High Court Proceedings, 27th Nov. 1871, 2 Weir 777-6 M H C App 12. The privilege given by this section is the privilege of the witness & of the Judge of whom the question is asked.
If he waives such privilege, it does not lie in the mouth of any other person to assert it. A committing Magistrate, who is cited as a witness in a Session Court cannot be compelled to answer questions as to his own conduct in Court, except under the special orders of the Court to which he is subordinate. If he does not object to answer such questions, there is no prohibition to his doing so.
Empress v Chidan, 3 A 573-A W N 1831, 37

Judge, whether competent witness. In arguing a question as to the duty of the Court not to have rendered a certain judgment, counsel put this case
"Sir, let us put the case that one man kills another in your presence, you observing it, and another who is not guilty is indicted before you and is found guilty so as to incur the penalty of death, you ought to reprieve the judgment against him, for you are knowing to the contrary, and should make further report to the king, to give him pardon. No more should you give judgment in this case, before causing those to appear by whose hands the king was paid." Gorcoigne C J said "Once the king himself asked of me the very case that

him just to you say it, 7 H IV, 41, pl 5
mons, 13 How St Tr
aving, cited the above
lge do not think in his
of that private know
i think that Judge might and sure I am, now he private knowledge ought g whereby the prisoner might be convicted or acc

then get a pardon

"A Judge" says Mr Taylor "before whom the cause is tried must conceal any fact within his own knowledge, unless he be first sworn (R v Anderson, 7 How St Tr 874, Hurpurshad v Sheo Dayal, 3 I A, 259, 286); and consequently witness (Ross v Bul .. . may then be sworn [181]. In this last case, the proper witness, should I because he can hardly misibility of his c Ross v. Buhler, 2 M

exercise judicial functions may give evidence in a case pending before him when such evidence can and must be submitted to the independent evidence judgment of other persons exercising similar judicial functions sitting with him at the same time. So also a Sessions Judge is a competent witness, and the giving of evidence by him does not preclude him from dealing judicially with the evidence of which his own forms a part. Queen v Mookla Singh, 13 W R 60 Cr. In a case in which a Deputy Magistrate took an active part in the capture of parties charged with having been members of an unlawful assembly and where he tried them on that charge, Phear J said, "It has been held, which govern the co person is not necessa an inquiry into or investigation of facts, because he may have been himself a witness of some of the facts which are the subject of the inquiry or investigation, if he does do so he, so far from being under any such obligation as that which the Deputy Magistrate seems to have referred to, is bound to state to the prisoner or other person concerned, or to make known to him so far as he can, what are the facts which he himself observed, to which he himself can bear testimony And, moreover, the prisoner who is being tried by a Judge in this the Judge who, owed as a witness, in our opinion,

Court It is always dangerous for any man in whose right conduct others are concerned to set up and endeavour to carry out a fiction such as this. It is most specially dangerous for a Judge, who is under the grave responsibility which attaches to the office of a Criminal Judge, to attempt anything of the kind. The Deputy Magistrate if he thought it right, as he did, to take upon himself the duty of trying the prisoners in this case, ought to have made no pretence whatever of any sort, he ought to have frankly avowed and openly stated in his Court all the part which he had taken, and the facts which he had observed, and made his own evidence part of the record in the case. The awkwardness of a Criminal Judge being the principal witness in the case which he has to try is no doubt, most apparent, this however, is reason for his declining to try the case, not for his endeavouring to assume an unreal character." Hutro Chandra Paul and ors, 20 W R 76 Cr

In Empress v Donnelly, 11 C 405 the question arose whether a Magistrate can himself be a witness in which he is the sole Judge of law and fact. In answering the question in the negative Martini J said: "As to the second point, whether the conviction is illegal because the Magistrate himself gave evidence, that question seems to me to resolve itself into this: Is a sole Judge of law and fact competent to decide a case in which he has himself given evidence? It has been strongly contended on the part of the Crown that he is so, and that there is no impediment in law to a Judge giving evidence, and then disposing himself of the case by his sole opinion. No instance of this kind has, however, been found and no authority of any Judge or text writer has been cited in support of such a proposition. The English cases (they are very bad and very old) do not go farther than to establish that a person having to exercise judicial functions may give evidence in a case pending before him when such evidence can and may be given by other persons, exercising similar functions. In Queens v. Norman (C 1) a case in England is cited in which even under the circumstances a Judge has been called as a witness in a trial on which he was sitting later than the trial of Lord Stafford. Two cases are cited—one the case of Queen v. Taragial and the other the case of Queen v. Taragial.

occasion very fully, to the conclusion that he lays down as the result of the English cases. In the absence, therefore, of any authority for the position that a sole Judge of law and fact may give evidence, and then decide a case in which he has been a witness.

If he gives his evidence upon any matter of importance, the party against whom his evidence tells could not venture to test his credibility either by cross

B L R A Cr 15 are conclusive that one who is sitting as a sole Judge is not competent also to be a witness." See also Queen v. Manikam, 19 M 263.

Although a Magistrate is not disqualified from dealing with a case judicially merely because in his private capacity he has been a witness in a case, he should not initiate the proceedings, there is no necessity for him to do so. offence and initiated the prosecution, and where he is one of the principal witnesses for the prosecution. Queen v. Bholanath, 2 C 23; see also Sudhama v. Queen, 22 C 222; Arish v. Queen Empress, 20 C 857. In the case of Mudh 21 C 167; Saidar Khan v. Emperor 21 C 167; Alimuddin v. Emperor, 29 C 392=6 C W.

N 300. It is one of the oldest and to him out of Balusa, 22 M 100; Arish and belief v. Sheo Dyal, Khodes Naram v. Emperor 21 C 167; Alimuddin v. Emperor, 29 C 392=6 C W.

50 Ind Cas 301, Arishore v. Ganesu, 3 W R 200, Arishore v. Ganesu 3 W R 121.

Where a Magistrate, trying a case of riot, made a local inspection of the scene of the alleged offence and was influenced by such inspection in arriving at his verdict, the conviction was set aside. Arishore v. Ganesu, 3 W R 200, 725= Arishore v. Ganesu, 3 W R 121.

v. Abdul, 21 C 300.

Husband and wife—Old rule of excluding their evidence The principle with the old disability of husband
The record of judicial ratio and ounds and policy of this privilege forms one of the most curious and interesting chapters of the law of evidence. It is curious because the variety of ingenuity displayed, in the invention of reasons ex post facto for a rule so simple and so long accepted, could hardly have been believed but for the recorded utterances" Wigmore § 2278. The reason of the privilege is thus given by Buller J in his trials at Assizes, 286. Husband and wife cannot be admitted to be a witness for each other, because contrary to the legal policy of marriage. In Burley v. Dixie, Lee Cas. to Harlowe, 261. Lord Hardwicke L C J said: "The reason why the law will not suffer a wife to be a witness for or against her husband is to preserve the peace of families." The following reasons are stated by Sir William Blackstone in his commentaries: "If they are admitted to be witnesses for each other they would contradict one maxim of law nam scilicet promissa causa testis esse debet, and if against each other, they would contradict here he said: "The reason is ascribed by Lord that they are not to be permitted to testify for or against each other. Most of these reasons" says Prof. Wigmore "do not call for particular dissection: their very statement is void of force. "Hard", "hardship", "policy", "peace of families", "absolute necessity", some such words as these are the vehicles says Mr. Jeremy Bentham by which the faint spark of reason that exhibits itself is conveyed. These are the leading terms, and these are all you are furnished with, and out of these you are to make an applicable decision and intelligible proposition as you can. [As to the 'policy' of the situation]

comes of injustice
m and (if that wife injustice in olistic, would in e, grant to every e and with the
the family and sle
s! s but ther ight
p an

quality of which it principal crime is criminal, is itself
was one object of wife and children

own nature) so many privileges (such as the privilege of the husband and wife) which gave birth to this immoral rule, is to convert that sacred condition into a nursery of crime. The reason now given was not I suspect the original one. Drawn from the principle of utility, though for late and polished times it has been the original of the two persons thus connected. On questions relative to the fountain of all reasoning" IV, C V, Wigmore § 22-8. But this cannot be. The Commissioners on Common Law Procedure, in their second report of 1833 said: "The question how far communications of married persons inter se should be a matter of testimony in Courts of Justice stands on a different ground (from that of compelling one to testify to facts against other) So much of the state

married state behaviour, a e in their
r antiquity
The reason
of a ely to have
f the identity
person in law
is the IX Pt
subject

of such testimony would have a powerful tendency to disturb the peace of families, to promote domestic broils, and to weaken, if not to destroy, that feeling of mutual confidence, which is the most endearing solace of married life Taylor § 909

Scope of the section 17 Vict C 83, which disclose any communication made to her by her husband during the marriage" The protection afforded by this section is greater than that conferred by the English Statute. There only the husband and wife are protected from disclosing any communication made to him to her by his or her marriage partner. But in India, he or she is not permitted to disclose that communication. Steph Dig Ev art 110, Markby Ev p 93. As according to the rule of interpretation, words importing the masculine gender includes feminine, the word 'he' includes the word 'she' and the word 'him' includes the word 'her'. So this section confers the same privilege on the wife that it confers on the husband. Markby Ev p 93, General Clauses Act (X of 1897) s 13. The words "compelled to disclose" or 'permitted to disclose' clearly imply that the party concerned is not made or allowed to say or do something by

Per Subramanya Ayya

the same case Doddai

declining to receive in defendant to his wife

house under a search w

to such a case. A document even though it contains a communication from a husband to a wife or vice versa in the hands of third persons, is admissible in evidence, for in producing it, there is no compulsion on or permission to the wife or husband to disclose any communication. The section protects the individuals, and not the communication if it can be proved without putting into the box for that purpose the husband or the wife to whom the communication was made. For these reasons we think the exhibit V was rightly received in evidence. A third person who has overheard a conversation between husband and wife while it was going on may testify to it. Greenl Ev 15th Ed Vol I p 347, but see R v Pamerter, 12 Cox Cr 177. The principle applies quite irrespective of whether either spouse is a party to the cause. Moreover the death or divorce of the other member does not affect the policy of prohibition. Again, the other member may always waive the privilege. Greenleaf § 333 (C). A c

the other spouse was also conversation at which a proved by him. R v Sn

R v Balrett, 7 C & P

communications or communications, and the question may thus arise whether certain conduct by one spouse in the presence of the other—such as the payment of money or the signing of a note—is to be treated as a communication. Greenl Ev § 254

the communication sought

at the seal of the

the pass between

435 Doc'ter v

1897. It extends involved, as well

It is, however,

limited to such matters as have been communicated during marriage. Taylor § 909 A. This section is limited to such matters as have been communicated

"during the marriage"; and, consequently, if a man were to make the most confidential statement to a woman before he married her, and it were afterwards to become of importance in a civil suit to know what that statement was the wife, on being called as a witness, and interrogated with respect to the communication, would as it seems be bound to disclose what she knew of the matter. Taylor § 91.

tion of husband and is required to be g.

Parliament, and had married another person, was offered as evidence against her former husband, Lord Altonley held he has created energy "It never can while the parties remained in the most intimate of relations, shall be broken, whenever, by the misconduct of one party, the relation has been dissolved" Monroe v Turstleton, Pea Add Cas 221 explained and confirmed by Lord Ellenborough in Aregon v Ld Hinnaid, 6 East, 192, 193. Where there is no 'representative in interest' who can consent, under this section, to the husband to his wife during even if willing, to disclose such and is not his "representative" The prohibition enacted by in interest for the purpose of the section rests on no technicality that can be waived at will, but is founded on a principle of public policy which no Court is entitled to relax.

91 No statement of an incriminating nature guilt under section 302 I P Code to her husband Ishanan v Emperor, 1923 Lah 40 In Muhamad 914 Cr = 261 P L R 1914-15 Cr L J 613-25 convicted of murdering her step son on the charge by her to

and the strength of a confession him alone of the body

is not admissible, as husband within the meaning of s 122, Evidence Act. The effect of the confession is not admissible under this section. 105 Cr = 14 Cr stated to injure his and does not section Millar

v v 1972 An

the father L R nical on without incriminated given J 316 = of one hand is of the accused as to certain communications between In re Gopal at v Crown, 34 P R 1914 Cr = 27 communication made by an arbitrator to whom he had accepted bribe from a Khambatta, A I R 1930 Lah 280

the object of the confession is not admissible under this section. 105 Cr = 14 Cr stated to injure his and does not desk drawer," in effect communicates to her not only the words but also the act of placing the package. While his domestic acts are ordinarily not to be treated as communications, nevertheless it is always conceivable that they may by special circumstances be made part of a communication. To formulate a precise test would perhaps be impracticable. It is clear however, that the mere doing of an act by the husband in the wife's presence is not a communication of it by him, for it is done for the sake of the doing not for the sake of the disclosure. There must be something in the way of an invitation of the wife's presence or attention with the object of bringing the act directly to her knowledge. Except in such cases, the privilege cannot cover anything but an utterance of words, spoken or written. Wigmore § 2337.

123. No one shall be permitted to give any evidence derived from unpublished official records relating to any affairs of State, except with the permission of the Officer at the head of the department concerned, who shall give, or withhold such permission as he thinks fit

Principle On the principle of public policy, the official transactions between the heads of the departments of state and their subordinate officers are in general treated as privileged communications. Greenleaf Et § 251. In Beatson v Shene, 5 H & N 838, 853, Pollock, C B said: "We are of opinion that it cannot be laid down that all public documents, including treaties with foreign powers and all the correspondence that may precede or accompany them, foreign Affairs in this country, containing matters injurious to the reputation of a foreigner or a British subject, can it be contended that the person referred to would have a right to compel the production of the letter in order to take the opinion of a jury whether the injurious matter was written maliciously or not? We are of opinion that, if the production of a state paper would be injurious to the public service the general public interest must be considered paramount to individual interest of a suitor in a Court of Justice."

Scope of the section This section follows the English law as laid down by the majority of the Court in Beatson v Shene 5 H & N 838 instead of the view of Martin B in that case and of Field J in Hennessey v Wright, 21 Q B D 509 and makes the public officer the Judge of whether a communication made to him in official character should or should not be disclosed. So under this section the Judge is bound to accept, without question, the decision of the public officer referred to. This view is confirmed by s 169 which forbids the Judge even to inspect the documents. Beatson p 94 service—an enquiry in public, may do appears to us therefore that the question whether the production of the document would be injurious to the public service, must be determined, not by the Judge, but by the head of the department having the custody of the paper; and if he is in attendance and states that, in his opinion, the production of the document public interests and not that the documents are confidential or official which alone is no reason for their non production; nor that their production might prejudice the crown's own case or assist the other party which is rather a fiction unless overborne by some plain over-Henry Greer Robinson v The State of New = 1931 A C 701-61 M L J 943 P C; see & G 183 In Poulett v Ati Gen

 The party in this case ought to ing is the fountain and head of justice and equity and it can not be presumed that he will be defective in either, and it would derogate from the King's honour to imagine that what is equity against a common person should not be equity against him" See also Esquimaux v Wilson, (1920) A C 358, 366 But privilege in matters under s 123 should not be claimed unnecessarily Mehtah v Secretary of State, A I R 1933
 Lah 157

Affairs of state would, no doubt, be held to include any matters of a public nature with which the Government is concerned Gun Ev. 354. So no person will be required to testify with regard to state secrets or as to correspondence between Government officials on matters of public business, if in the opinion of the head of the department, such disclosure would injuriously affect the public interest Best Ev 537 But any officer having the custody of records, not being records of which the production may, on special grounds be refused, is bound to produce them on receiving summons to that effect 2 Weir 781 Statements made by witnesses in the course of departmental enquiry into the conduct of upon their trial on charges of taking under s 123, 124 or 125 of the Evidence Act 431-16 Ind Cas 77 Statements made before the Income Tax Collector governed by section 123 of the Income Tax Act 1917 = 82 M 62 = for General
 rd relating to be claimed 387 = 26 Cr

387

Official records relating to affairs of state The protection of documents official, which alone is no reason for their non production Asiatic Petroleum v Anglo Persian Oil Co (1916) 1 K B 822-85 L J K B 1075 A libel case by a lieutenant colonel, who was engaged in the service of the Government Court of enquiry appointed by the plaintiff's conduct in the mining military secretary of the commandant minutes of the report

 2 B & B
 H & N 8
 v May, 2,
 in the case of that Home v Bentinck
tson v Slane, 5
 contra, Robinson
 Where the documents of the House
 cannot be disclosed
 v Cobbett 5 L J P international affairs

... Mr. Justice Williams J said "I agree although not perhaps exactly on the same grounds" "State papers, despatches, minutes, or documents of any such description which relate to the carry-of a public nature and in the possession character as Secretary of State were held in India Company, 11 L J Ch 71, corresponde

... A report of an accident made by a railway company to the Ministry of Transport was held protected Aikin v L & N E Ry Co (1930) 1 K B 527, so also reports by an Inspector to the Local

... (All Gen v Nottingham, 20 Inland Revenue to his superiors by Government Analyst to the Home office as to post-mortem examination of corpse (Williams v Star Co, 72 J P Jo 65); police report under the Irish Crimes Act (R v McCornack, Crimes Act Cas 244, Ashton v Waterford 42 Ir L T Jo 77) as well as communications between the Director of Public Prosecution and his Assistant (R v Benson, 151 C C C Sers Pap 705) are held protected Phip Ev 190 Where letters addi-

would not see, those letters s 123, Evidence Act, and nd decide under s 162 r late, A I H 1933

Loh 157 In a prosecution for per- part of these for the pro- cation was that the Kabulyats in question on which they were written do not the date of the Kabulyats of Stationery, Calcutta depo on his own experience but on in respect of which privi- prepared to let the Court or of the witness was not admissible Emperor v Joffrel Hossain, 59 C 1046=36 C W N 514=A I R 1932 Cal 468

Who determines the necessity of secrecy Although the party who relies upon a public document may be prepared to lay before the Court the original or such secondary evidence of it as has been raised by statute to the rank of an original of any public department of stat urality Commissioners v Aberde account to the Court that his opi should be produced in open document shall not be put in department is alone competent to judge whether the disclosure of a document will be injurious to the public interest, he alone is competent to take this objection

124 or ma so acc its 44 T. can pre

3 depends will furnish to the designing officials too ample opportunities for abusing the privilege. The lawful limits for the privilege are, extensible beyond law makes the public officer in his official consideration that the public interest to disclose the communication. Secretary of State v. Saminatha Nadar, 119 Ind C 718. Where certain statements were made to a station master of a State Railway but there was nothing to show that they were made to him in official confidence, the communications are not protected. Emperor v. Bhagnath, A I R 1929 O 115 513-6 O W N 937. In a recent Madras case the Court observed "The question for decision is whether the evidence referred to shall be given or withheld. If the objection is taken by the proper person, the Court will not go behind it." Secretary of State v. Saminath Nadar, A I R 1930 Mad 312, see also Garudachar v. Abbas Khan, 8 Mys L J 474. But in Henny Greer Robinson v. The State of South Australia, 35 C W N 1121 (P C) at p 1126, Lord Blanesburgh after reviewing all the previous cases said "The power of the Court to call for the production of documents for which this privilege is claimed and to determine the validity of the claim for itself was much discussed in argument. The result of the discussion has been, as their Lordships think, to confirm the view of Griffiths C J in Macones Wireless Telegraph Company v. The Commonwealth, 16 C L R 178, where in effect he concludes that the Court has in these cases always had in reserve the power to refuse the production is sought to the State which in no way out of exercise be carefully guarded so as not to occasion to the State any mischief which the privilege, as v. Stone, currently have publicity is the Minister's statement is, v. Aberdeen, nevertheless, each case of Henderson by judicial pronouncement, by reason of the thing, Lindley M R for example, in Joseph Hargreaves, Ltd [(1900) 1 Ch 347] was not prepared to set any limit to the power of the Court to call for production of a document for which this privilege is claimed. The propriety of Field J's own practice in the matter as described by him in Hennessy v. Wright, (21 Q B D 509), has, pace the observations upon it of Isaacs J in Griffen's Case (not been challenged, and hitherto, it has usually been in cases where the state was not itself a party litigant that the difficulty has been suggested whereas in the present case the authority is if any, should a document is found to exist. But to of this judgment of the authorities is, their entitled to prescribe in any particular case the manner in which the claim of privilege shall be made if the claim is to be allowed. It may, in one case, if thus advised accept the unsworn ments, provided of course, that such power be exercised so as not to destroy this found to exist. But to of this judgment of the authorities is, their entitled to prescribe in any particular case the manner in which the claim of privilege shall be made if the claim is to be allowed. It may, in one case, if thus advised accept the unsworn statement of a person. It is not a matter of course that a person should be required to make a statement. S.

it ought to appear that the mind of a responsible Minister had been brought to bear on the question of the expediency in the public interest of giving or refusing the information asked for, and Lord Coleridge insisted on an affidavit being produced from the President of the Board of Trade himself. In the present case their Lordships are not required to make upon this subject any one that has not been expressed inadvisedly or lightly or as a matter of mere departmental routine, but is one put forward with the solemnity necessarily attaching to a sworn statement. Lastly, the privilege the reason for it being what it is, can hardly be asserted in relation to documents the contents of which have already been published."

124. No public officer shall be compelled to disclose communications made to him in official confidence, when he considers that the public interests would suffer by the disclosure

Principle In Hennessy v Wright, L R 21 Q B D 509, 512, Field J said "There are two aspects of this question. First, the publication of a state document may involve danger to the nation. If the confidential communications made by servants of the Government or by inferiors to superiors in the Government are liable to be made public in a Court of law, it is thought proper to say 'fiat justitia' and the country in a war be injurious to servants of the Crown. It is of all freedom in their official that."

a secret secret
brun secur
of duty
for the

stances had made of no matter how since " (1) The official should be de in the course it signifies nothing malicious or criminal conceded is a rally in favour n exoneration, by hypothesis of testimonial n hardship to officials may cases are rele of the argur negotiations conceded. There ought to be a protection for 'secrets of State' in this narrow sense. But this done, what remains? In only three or four of the precedents has there been even a pretence that the matters actually preserved from disclosure are of such a nature that they should be kept secret. If they are not then that (3) in the necessity of public disclosure when matters are of public interest. Ordinarily they are not in any community under a system of representative Government and removable with that solidly with the veil of common routine of every intelligent man and every eye can seldom be legitimately closed. It is of partisan politics or personal interest. If the responsibility of officials to explain and to justify their acts is the chief safeguard against oppression and corruption. To concede to them the power to suppress the truth is to concede to them the power to suppress the truth.

to obstruct investigation into facts which might fix him with a libelous
 If ignore § 2378

Scope of the section There is a marked difference between this section and section 123. This section is confined to public officers, though who are such is not defined. Section 123 embraces every one. This section makes the officer himself the judge of the propriety of waiving the privilege. In no case has the Court any authority, if the objection is raised by proper authority. Section 123 is confined to public officers, though it is not so stated. Section 123 is confined to public officers, though it is not so stated. Section 123 is confined to public officers, though it is not so stated.

the Government
 North Et 310 Statements whether oral or written, made by an officer summoned to attend before a Military Court of Inquiry are not part of the minutes of the proceedings of the Court. 1. Delivered to the Commandant
 and on great
 v Lord Rol

the govern-
person up closed'
cludes onl
with the
the other
own discr
6 C. W. N

section import no special degree of secrecy and no pledge or direction for maintenance, but include generally, all matters communicated by one officer to another : Agaraya Pillai v Secretary of State, 26 Ind Cas 101 (P), the privilege as to the production extends even to those which are confidential.

10 10-0 1000 0000

When he considers that the public interest would suffer by the disclosure of the document, he may refuse to disclose it. This section follows the English law and makes the officer the judge as to whether or not the disclosure should not be made. Harmath

246. An officer's refusal to disclose a document on grounds of public policy is final. It is not competent to the Court to call for and examine the secret archives of the state in order to satisfy itself of their confidential nature. Lala Tribhuban v Deputy Commr, 47 Ind Cas 225-5 O L J 2341 but see Collector of Jaunpur v Jamina 44 A 360 where the Court observed that it is for the Court to decide whether or not a particular document for which

404 A 246 An officer's refusal to disclose a document on grounds of public policy is final. It is not competent to the Court to call for and examine the secret archives of the state in order to satisfy itself of their confidential nature. Lala Tribhuban v Deputy Commr, 47 Ind Cas 225 = 5 O L J 234; but see Collector of Jaunpur v Jamna 44 A 360 where the Court observed that it is for the Court to decide whether or not a particular document for which privilege is cl confidence" S.

Beatson v Sle
the officer in official of the document.
dicious Is it to be ordinate
of the

dependent upon a party, who knows or must know, the contending parties, and may have the most serious reasons for a decision in the case.
to another
Judge is flimsy pr
some pet
In the case of the Judge, you have sacred guarantees; in that of a politician you have none. External pressure will curb down the politician, whilst you will behold the Judge more e ung and baffling its baneful influence left to the Judge on the Bench, in instead of allowing a secretary, or any member of the Government, to silence him, to interfere w

When
interest of (1911) 2 M
in official disclosure
it
the
In

Brayburn,

On grounds of public policy, the official and their subordinate ations Chatterton v
communications between a provincial governor and his attorney general on the state of the colony, or the conduct of its officers (Wyatt v Gore, Holts N P Cas 299), or between v Maxwell,
the Com-10), and the y of State
1 Cranch
state will

5. 5 P W R Cr 1913=5 Ind Cas 711 The customs superintendent could not claim privilege as to what took place between him and the Emperor, 2 Ruku where the secondary evidence of certain documents had been admitted in the Court.

section can be also not ad- section in correspondence between President to the Government Padmanbhuah v Town 53 It is doubtful whether a Railway station master is a public officer within the meaning of this section Emperor v Bhagwati, Ind Rul (1930) Oudh 174 During a police investigation under s 61 of the Bombay District Police Act K, an Excise Inspector, in reply to enquiries by the police wrote a letter containing what he knew of an alleged offence under s 296 Penal Code Held, that K for the purpose of the case must be considered to be a private person, that he was not a person to whom the communication was made, he was the person by whom it was made and the letter did not fall under s 124 of the Evidence Act Barjora Frameje In re, A I R 1932 Bom 196=34 Bom L R 258

125.* No Magistrate or police-officer† shall be compelled to say whence he got any information as to the commission of any offence, and no Revenue-officer shall be compelled to say whence he got any information as to the commission of any offence against the public revenues.

Explanation.—"Revenue-officer" in this section means any officer employed in or about the business of any branch of the public revenue.

Principle A genuine privilege for communications, on the fundamental principle of privilege, must be recognized for communications made by informers to the Government encouragement can be created only by informant's identity of the Earl C J said 1r 90, ten to discuss the truth a rule which has universally obtained on account of its importance to the public for the detection of crimes that those persons who are the channel by means of which information is given to the Government will be very unwilling to stop it, but it does not appear to me that there is any necessity for it in this particular case" So it is absolutely essential to the welfare of the state that the names of parties who interfere in situation of this kind should not be divulged; for otherwise, be it from fear, or shame, or the dislike of being publicly mixed up in inquiries of this nature,—few men would choose to assume

* This section was substituted for the original s 125 by the Indian Evidence Act (1872) Amendment Act, 1887 (3 of 1887)

has under s 125 of this Act have 1 in command of military police in of 1887, s 13] and in Bengal (vide the disagreeable part of giving or receiving - the consequence would be that many - Dallas C J, in Home v. Bentuck, 2 B Trial, 32 How. St Tr 102; R v. O'B

Briant, 15 L. J. N S Exch 265 These matters are either those which concern the administration of penal justice, or those which concern the administration of the same, but subject

Scope of the section The law recognizes the duty of every citizen to communicate to the government and to its officers such information as he may have concerning the commission of offences against the laws, and for the purpose of encouraging the performance of that duty without fear of consequences, the Courts have long held that when the Government is immediately concerned, as was the case in the names of persons is when and to whom it is made.

In Rex v Alers, 6 Q.B. 780, the Court said that the informant must be a person who has been applied in cases of crime or misdemeanour by the Crown or some other authority, and not a private individual.

In Gray v Pentland, 2 Serg & R 23, Home May, 2 Smith J., Burr Jones § 763

he related it to a friend, another quarter, a majority to be asked the name of that friend, and they all were of opinion that all those questions which tend to the discovery of the channels by which the disclosure was made to the officers of justice were, upon the general principle of the convenience of public justice, to be suppressed, that all persons in that situation were protected from the discovery, and that if it was objected to, it was no more competent for the defendant to ask the witness who the person was that advised him to make a disclosure, than to ask who the person was to whom he made the disclosure in consequence of that advice, or to ask any other question respecting the channel of communication, or all that was done under it. R v.
Hardy, 24 How St Tr 808, Green Et § 250. It may now be taken as settled rule that witnesses for the crown in criminal prosecution undertaken by the Government are privileged from disclosing the channel through which they have received or communicated information (R v Watson 32 St Tr 1, R v Richardson, 3 F & F 693, A G v Briant, 15 M & W 169, Mirles v Beyfus, 25 Q B D 491) but it has been ruled that a detective cannot refuse on grounds of public policy to answer a question as to where he was secreted. Webb v Catchlove, 31 L R 159. In R v Berrard 1 F & F 210, when objection was taken to a question put to a witness, whether he had gone to a certain place as a spy, Lord Campbell, allowed the objection to prevail, on the ground that the question was not relevant. But if the witness was really called upon to draw with O'Brien,
the Government punishing individual prosecu-
discover from

police officials & discovery from Amrita v King I " " " " " "
 In Weston " " " " " " will only add a " " " " " "
 does not in exp^{re} " " " " " " whence he got " " " " " "
 rule is taken on " " " " " " of the foundation of the rule show that the

Q B D 309) A fortiori if objection is taken, it cannot since the law allows ss" but Coelburn C J ordered him to answer the question, which in the particular instance turned out to be material, the information having been supplied by two girls not called; "they could have stated," said the Judge "how it was they had come to know that the bottle was where it was found, and perhaps could have given some clue to the person who put it there" R v Richardson, 3 F & F 693 So in England the line between public and private prosecutions not being clearly drawn for this purpose, it is for the Judge to decide whether the information is protected or not Roscoe Cr T 181 The English rule was followed in an Indian case before the passing of the Indian Evidence Act In re Mahesh Chandra, 13 W R Cr 1 (10) But under this section the rule is applicable both in cases of public and private prosecutions A mere suggestion that the complainant should show that the house raided was not the one referred to the rule embodied in the production Cr L J 47=29

Ind Crs 70

The words "information as to the commission of any offence" in this section, only enacted the rule which, as said by Eyre C J in Hardy's case, 24 How St Tr 808, has universally obtained, on account of its importance to the public for the detection of crimes, that those persons, who are the channel by means of which the information is necessarily disclosed, should be protected. But having regard to the distinction between a police officer and an officer of the salt department, the latter cannot be considered a Police officer within the meaning of s 123 Evidence Act, and may therefore be compelled to say whence he obtained the information as to the commission of an offence Reg v Gowla, Rat Un Cr C 183 So also a superintendent of a police station Queen Empress v Rana v Emperor, 16 C W N 431=15 between questions which a witness is not permitted to answer, and questions which he cannot be permitted to answer. The latter class of questions of the former class are in no way refused to answer such questions from his refusal Mahomed Ali 277

126. No barrister, attorney, pleader or vakil shall at any time be permitted, unless with his client's Professional communication express consent, to disclose any communication made to him in the course and for the purpose of his employment as such barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil, by or on behalf of his client, or to state the contents or condition of any document with which he has become acquainted in the course and for the purpose of his professional employment, or to disclose any advice given by him to his client in the course and for the purpose of such employment.

Provided that nothing in this section shall protect from disclosure—

(1) any such communication made in furtherance of any * [illegal] purpose.

* This word in s 126 was substituted for the original word "criminal" by the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act (18 of 1872), s 10

- (2) any fact observed by any barrister, pleader, attorney S. or vakil, in the course of his employment as such, showing that any crime or fraud has been committed since the commencement of his employment.

It is immaterial whether the attention of such barrister, * [pleader], attorney or vakil was or was not directed to such fact by or on behalf of his client.

Explanation.—The obligation stated in this section continues after the employment has ceased

Illustrations

(a) A, a client, says to B, an attorney "I have committed forgery and I wish you to defend me"

As the defence of a man known to be guilty is not a criminal purpose, this communication is protected from disclosure

(b) A, a client, says to B, an attorney—"I wish to obtain possession of property by the use of a forged deed on which I request you to sue"

The communication, being made in furtherance of a criminal purpose, is not, to defend has been made

has been embezzled, employment

Principle . . .
as to matter
in the str permitted
by his cli
tion of legal advisers by clients, the apprehension of compulsion or disclosure by the legal advisers must be removed; and hence the law must prohibit such disclosure except on the client's consent. Wigmore § 2291, Philip Ev 170, Per Mountainey B in Jonesley
Great Central Railway, (1910)
Anderson v Bank L R 2 meaning of the rule is this of our law, litigation can only be properly conducted by professional men it is absolutely necessary that a man in order to prosecute his rights or to defend himself from an improper claim, should have recourse to the assistance of professional lawyers, and it being so absolutely necessary, it is equally necessary to use a vulgar phrase, that he should be able to make a clean breast of it to the gentleman whom he consults with a view to the prosecution of his claim, or the substantive . . . he able to place . . . and that the cor . . . with his consent . . . (al agent)
that he . . . he meaning of . . . enough v Gaskel . . . of this rule, is not o
the busines
protection
holten, and

* This word in s 126 was inserted by the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act (18 of 1872), s 10.

5. aid of men skilled in jurisprudence, in the practice of the Courts, and in those matters affecting rights and obligations, which form the subject of all judicial proceedings. If such communications were not protected no man in the same learned Judge remarked in another case would dare to consult a professional adviser, with a view to his defence, or to the enforcement of his rights, and no man can safely come into a Court either to obtain redress, or to defend himself. Bolton v Corporation of Liverpool 1 My & K 94 95. No privilege can be thus required for any communication which is made for the purpose of committing a criminal or fraudulent act or of aiding no part of the client's interests nor within a legal adviser, were the rule otherwise.

the purpose of illustrating his criminal purpose. Harris v. The State 111 Cal. 277. Russell v Jackson 9 Hare 392, Follett v Jefferyes, 1 Sim N S 317, R v Cox 14 Q B D 153, Williams v Quebrada (1895) 2 Ch 751, Bullivant v A G for Victoria (1901) A C 196, Ramsbotham v Senior, (1869) 8 Eq 575n, In re Postlethwaite, (1897) 35 Ch D 723.

Scope of the section
reason of public policy or attorney of the party cannot be compelled to disclose communications made to him or letters or entries. Greenough v Gaskell 1 My & K 101. In this case the plaintiff was assisted by consultation, with Lord Lyndhurst Tindal C J and Parke J, 4 B & Ad 876, and it is mentioned in one in which all the authorities have been reviewed in 2 M & W 100 per Lord Abinger and is cited in Russell v Jackson, 15 Jur 1117. In settling the law on the subject Green v Green 1 Ex 237, see also Berd v Lovelace 19 Eliz in Chancery Cary's R 88 Austen v Vesey Cary's R 89, Kelway v Kelway Cary's R 127 Dennis v Codrington, Cary's R 143 Wilson v Russell 4 T R 753, R v Withers 2 Camp 578, Wilson v Troup, 7 Johns Ch 20, Mills v Odd, 6 C & P 728 R v Shaw 6 C & P 372. 'This protection,' says Lord Chancellor Brougham 'is not qualified by any reference to proceedings pending or in contemplation. If, touching matters that come within the ordinary scope of professional employment, they receive a communication in their professional capacity either from a client or on his account and for his benefit in the transaction of his business or which amounts to the same thing if he is his behalf matters, the client they are to hold them and it is not to be confined to disclose the information, or produce the papers in any Court of law or equity, either as a party or as a witness. Greenough v Gaskell, 1 My & K 101. In Pearce v Pearce, 1 Deg & Sm 25. Knight Bruce v Knight 1 My & K 101.

it is nevertheless an obstacle to the investigation of truth. It ought to be strictly confined within the narrowest possible limits consistent with the logic of its principles. Wigmore § 291, Broad v Pitt 1 M & M 283-3 C & P 518, Foster v Hall 12 Pick. Mass 89 97. Communications made by a client to his pleader expressly for the purpose of incorporation in the pleadings are not confidential and are not privileged. Bibi Sona v Mir Abdul, 6 S L R 1. Under this section a pleader cannot disclose the contents of a document reat price to pay for the privilege remains an its obstruction in plain e of a general policy, but it is nonetheless an obstacle to the investigation of truth. It ought to be strictly confined within the narrowest possible limits consistent with the logic of its principles. Wigmore § 291, Broad v Pitt 1 M & M 283-3 C & P 518, Foster v Hall 12 Pick. Mass 89 97. Communications made by a client to his pleader expressly for the purpose of incorporation in the pleadings are not confidential and are not privileged. Bibi Sona v Mir Abdul, 6 S L R 1. Under this section a pleader cannot disclose the contents of a document necessary Barkanta v Bhailal, 1930 Ind Rul. Bom 89 An executor of a client cannot be presumed to give his consent to the pleader stating the contents of it from the mere fact that the executor, had deposited to its contents as a witness Ibid S.

Privilege is irrespective of litigation being original theory of privilege the confidences when given for the purpose of securing aid in action in which they were given It is obvious that the privilege would be wholly inoperative if a suit, gains. Williams for the so; on it made are not incident) with was in death, the present law proceed Greeno Ald E B 4, L attorney 1 Deg & 12m 12 Knight Bruce V C said "I suppose Cromack v Henthcote to be now universally acceded to, as far as any discovery by the solicitor or counsel is concerned, or dispute is immaterial" Cas 333-26 Bom L R 887, M v Corrie, 8 Q B D 356

Advice sought for miscellaneous non legal purpose A lawyer is sometimes employed without reference to his knowledge and discretion in the law—as where he is charged with finding a profitable investment for trust funds In such cases, where he is charged with finding a profitable investment for trust funds, he is not to be held responsible for the result. Madd 47; Brown W 98, Doe v W it is not easy to find advice

Where the general purpose concerns legal rights and obligations a particular incidental transaction would receive protection though in itself it were merely commercial in nature—as where the financial condition of a shareholder is discussed, in the course of a proceeding to enforce a claim against a corporation. But apart from such cases, the most that can be said by way of generalization, is that a matter committed to a professional legal adviser is prima facie so committed for the sake of the legal advice which may be more or less desirable for some aspect of the matter, and is therefore within the privilege, unless it clearly appears to be lacking in aspects requiring legal advice Vigmore § 2296

Barrister, Attorney, pleader 21 of Act II of 1855, where the word "pleader" has been added. Under that Act it was held Chandra Kant, 9 W R Cr Lell Now the question is whether the word "pleader" includes Mooktears. In construing this section the Court in Abbas Peela v Queen Empress, 2 C W N 484 (488)—25 G 766, observed "The pleader for the Appellants contended that the statements made by the accused to the Mukteer Kedar Nath were privileged, and that without the consent of the accused, Kedarnath could not be called as a witness. The Court held that the barrister is placed in Act I

6. not, without the consent of his client, disclose any communication made by the client to him in the course of his professional employment or any advice given by him professionally to his client, the knowledge of which he shall have

'express' before the word 'consent' which makes it specially stringent in favor of the privilege. Now, there is no suggestion in this case that the accused expressly consented to Kedar disclosing in Court the statement or statements made to him by the accused inasmuch as he was a Muktear and that consequently the statement and we have been referred to a case of the Queen v Chandia Kant Chakrabarti

1 B L R A C 8, which proceeded upon Act II of 1855. As we have already pointed out, section 24 of the old Act is different from the section in the present Act. The Procedure Codes, Act XXV of 1861 and Act X of 1872 did not contain any definition of the term "pleader." Act X of 1882 for the first time defines the word as follows—"Pleader", used with reference to any proceedings in any Court, means a pleader authorized under any law for the time being in force to practice in such Court, and includes (1) an advocate, a vakil and an any muktear or other person in such proceeding. The result who appear in a Court in any a purpose of pleading in any particular case, come within the category of pleaders; and section 126, if we take it, be construed as applying to all persons who come within the category of pleaders as defined in the Criminal Procedure Code. It would indeed be a strange anomaly if muktears who act in certain Courts as pleaders were the Indian Evidence Act and were not regarded as privileged cognized position as barristers.

We may say that the provision which was contained in Act II of 1855 and which was subsequently amplified by section 126 of the present Evidence Act embodies one of the wise principles of the English law, and that although in England there is no distinction as to the conditions of all persons who plead. Now by the amendment of section 24 (1) by Act XXV of 1861, "pleader" used with reference to any proceeding in any Court, means a pleader, or a muktear authorized under any law for the time being in force to practice in such Court, and includes (1) an advocate, a vakil and an attorney of a High Court so authorized, and (2) any person appointed with the permission of the Court to act in such proceeding. Now the word "pleader" includes not only muktear, but also an advocate, with the permission of the Court.

In interpreting the Indian Evidence Act which was placed in the Statute Book as early as in the year 1872. The question is whether the communication between the accused and the muktear is privileged. If we are to accept the interpretation of the Empress in Empress v. Hume, the reason given by the Privy Council, in holding that the communication is not privileged, is that the word "attorney" in the Act is meant, and not "advocate," and that the word "attorney" follows in their proper order after vakils. There is, therefore, by law no privilege as to communications between muktears and their principals, and the witness testimony ought to have been received and laid before the jury. "The reasons given for this decision seem equally to apply to the language of the present section." Woodroffe proper order after vakils. There is, therefore, by law no privilege as to communications between muktears and their principals, and the witness testimony ought to have been received and laid before the jury. "The reasons given for this decision seem equally to apply to the language of the present section." Woodroffe

Evidence Act, 8th Ed p 901 But on principle such communications should be excluded and it is anomalous that provisions of this section apply to inter-

S. 1

are recognized by the Courts and, though not mentioned in the section, they would probably obtain the same protection as the persons mentioned " Mark
Ev p 96

According to English law, the privilege attaching to confidential professional disclosures is strictly confined to the protect those made

Wheler v Le M

but see R v Giff

Duchess of King

agents (Mosely v

Webb v Smith, 1 C & P 337) and friends (Wheler v Le Marchant, 17 Ch D

675), Phil Et 170 There is no ground for encouraging the relation of client

and

to

the

is not

for

(Lee v Birrell, Camp 3,

Hecker v Le Marchant, 17 Ch D

675), Phil Et 170 There is no ground for encouraging the relation of client

and

to

the

is not

for circumstance that

Wigmore § 2302.

Shall at any time be permitted, etc In every case the privilege is the right not of the legal

he can alone waive it,

allowed to disclose ar

15 Q B D 114 The legal adviser is not competent to waive the privilege

R v Leveson, 11 Cox 152, Wilson v Rastall, 4 T R 758, Lyell v Kennedy, 27 Ch D 1, Kay v Poorun Chand, 4 B 631 But it is as client and not as party to a cause, that he is entitled, for the reason of the privilege applies to all clients as such, whether or not they are parties when the disclosure is sought from them Hence, the privilege equally forbids disclosure by the attorney of a client not in any way concerned in the cause Wilson v Rastall 4 T R

759, R v Withers, 2 Camp 578 Conversely, when the client is not a party then on general principles the party cannot invoke the privilege Merile v

Moore, 2 C & P 275, Wigmore § 2321 The client may claim the benefit of the rule, although no fee has been paid, or although there has been no formal retainer The privilege has been recognized even in cases where the attorney did not consider that he was to show that the relation § 749 But a waiver

debars him from insisting

And subject to such waiver, when once communications or statements are privileged they always remain so (Pearce v Foster, 15 Q B D 114, Bullock v Carry, 3 Q B D 356, Haslam Foundry etc v Hall, (1857) 3 T L R 776), as the privilege is not destroyed by death but may be claimed by the personal representatives of the client who was entitled to it Bullivant v G for Victoria

(1901) A C 196, Wills Ev 2nd Ed p 285 But although the rule "once privileged always

Quel

does

admi

docu

Previous

time

obtained a copy of the privileged document or has perused its contents, he is at liberty to give secondary evidence of them, if due notice to ails to this extent that a document waiver, this does not affect the matters to which the privileged quering production has at some

26. produce the original has been given. Will: Ev 2nd Ed 285; see also Mint v Morgan, 8 Ch 361, Lloyd v Mostyn, 10 M & W. 478, 481, 482, Calcraft v Guest, (1898) 1 Q B 759.

Anytime The word "anytime" in this section is significant. When a communication is once privileged it is "always privileged." Per Cockburn C J in Bullock v Carry, 3 Q B D 356, Per Landley L J in Calcraft v Guest, (1898) 1 Q B 761. The privilege continues for the purpose of future litigation change of solicitors, or that the
 . . . Clinton, 19 Ves 268), or the
 . . . v. Broun, 7 Hare, 79), or the
 . . . C 196, Pouell Ev 233. The purpose of the privilege to secure, it, when the relation ended, or it could be compelled to disclose the which the disclosure might not be used to the detriment of the client or his estate. Wigmore § 2323, Pearce v Foster, L R 15 Q B D 114, 118, An Attorney, In re 84 Ind Cas 353-A, 1 R 1925 Bom 1 (F B), Wilson v Rostall, (1792) 4 T R 759, Parker v Yates, 12 Moo P C 520, Explanation to the section

Express consent The privilege is designed to secure the client's confidence in the secrecy of his communication; hence, the privilege is not violated by his own will permits to be made is always been recognized that a waiver
 . . . al, 21 How St Tr 1, 341, Merle v Moore, to the client and not to the attorney

But such waiver can be express or by implication. As regards waiver by implication there is some conflict of decisions. Woldram v Ward, Style 449, Mackenzie v Yeo, 2 Curt Eccl 866, 876. In India the matter is set at rest by use of the words "client's express conduct." The question in this connection may well arise whether there can be a waiver by a deceased client's representatives. That an executor or administrator may exercise authority over all the interests of the estate left by the client, and yet may not incidentally have the right, in interest of that estate to waive the privilege concerning confidential communications affecting it, would seem too inconsistent to be maintained under any system of law. It is generally agreed that in testamentary testis the privilege is divisible, and may be waived by the executor the legatee. Wigmore § 2329, Doe, 9 Hare 387, 392, Greenlaw v King, in this section includes "representatives" whether the executor of a client can waive this privilege in respect of a will where there are various beneficiaries having conflicting interests under the Will. Barkanta v. Bharial, 1930 Ind Rul Bom 88

The consent required by this section should be given on each occasion when a communication of the kind described is sought to be made admissible in evidence. A consent given to the disclosure of some privileged matters in a civil suit is not sufficient authority for the disclosure of the same matters in a criminal case arising out of the suit. Queen Empress v Gulshan, A W N 1890, 172. A failure on the part of a client to claim privilege where he is under "consent" given by him to his otherwise privileged holder. Sind 47. The statement person without the consent ery improper on the part thout his client's consent.

purpose of his on law that an or on behalf s professional nications were t 1 Myle & ary 69; Burr

Jones 748 This privilege protects from disclosure two classes of communications (i) confidential communications which have passed at any time between the party or witness and his legal adviser in his professional capacity for the purpose of the former obtaining legal advice for the protection of his interests, information procured in pursuance of such communications for the same purpose and notes and other records of such communications and information made for the same object, (ii) similar communications, information, notes and records, whether commenced or only to counsel or solicitor, cases to be tried on the client's behalf Halls

Ev 2nd Ed 276, Greenough v Gaskell 1 My & K 98, Minet v Morgan, 8 Ch 361 Anderson v Bank of British Columbia, 2 Ch D 644 Wheeler v Le Marchant, 17 Ch D 675, Sontpuort etc Co v Quicl 3 Q B D 315 'If the protection was confined to proceedings begun' says Lord Chancellor Brougham in Greenough v Gaskell, 1 Myl & K 98, 102, 'or in contemplation then every communication would be unprotected which a party makes with a view to his although at the time not allowed to extend over such client if it only included communications more or less connected with judicial proceedings, for a person often times requires the aid of professional advice upon the subject of his rights and liabilities with no reference to any particular litigation and without any other reference to litigation generally than all human affairs have in so far as every transaction may by possibility become the subject of judicial inquiry. The communications may be either oral or written Pearce v Foster, 15 Q B D 114 A communication with a solicitor for the purpose of obtaining legal advice is protected though it relates to a dealing which is not the subject of litigation, provided it be a communication made to the solicitor in that character and for that purpose' See Jessel M R in Wheeler v Le Marchant, 17 Ch D 682, Minet v Morgan, L R 8 Ch 361 Absence of litigation or prospect thereof at the time the confidential communications are made is no excuse for disclosure An Attorney, In re 84 Ind Cas 353 = A 1 R 1925 Bom 1 (F B) It is misconduct from consulting in his case as the opposite party the fact that there was no definite agreement by the first party makes no difference Maung Maya v Sun Singh U B R 1897—1901 Vol II 368 On general before a party nature draft prepared by a muktear of some statements made by the complainant which with some alterations were meant to be incorporated in a petition of complaint to be presented to the Court is a privileged document Mayan v Emperor 37 C W N 68

By or on behalf of his client Neither client nor solicitor need act personally each other in order that the privilege

may or of D 61 M R said He may employ a third person to write the letter, or he may send the letter through a messenger or he may give a verbal message to a messenger In the second case the same learned Judge also observed The actual communication to the solicitor by the client is of course protected and it is equally protected whether it is made by the client in person or is made to the solicitor in person or to a clerk or subordinate of the solicitor who acts in his place the solicitor or his protectee, with a view to re v Lucette re v Hoffman, Mc N & G

627, 639, Glyn v Gaulfield, 3 Mac N. & G 463, 473, Carpmael v Poole 9 Beav 16, Ford v Tennant, 32 Beav 162, 168, Goodall v Little, 1 Sim N S 155, 163, Steel v Stuart, 1 Phil Ch 471, 475

Contents or condition of any document with which he has become of a pre existing document of the matters voluntary, in the language 33, 35), to perceive a fact to counsel and a deed or other written communication of this sort is not

instrument

confidential it is within the privilege, and the testimony of the attorney on the stand cannot be required Wigmore § 2308; see also Bulstrode v Felchmere 1 Freem Ch 5, Anon, 5kin 404; Bottomly v Osborne, Perke Add Ch 99, 101 R v Upper Boddington 8 Dowl & R 726; Bale v Kinsey, 1 Cr M & R 35 Masston v Dounes 6 C & P 331, Heathley v Williams, 1 M & W 523, Doe v Watkins, 3 Bing N C 421; Herring v Clobery, 1 Phil Ch 91, Hibbert v Knight, 9 Exch 11 Davies v Waters, 9 M & W 608, 612 A solicitor is not bound to disclose the nature or contents of the mere statement of, a of the solicitor that he receives a communication enough to protect it Volant v Soyer, not be such as passed directly between

of such a nature as the purpose of being legal advisers, then

Lishnu v New York, a Will in the course and cannot be examined in a subsequent case Basil, 31 Bom L R 1046—

the nature or contents of the mere statement of a professionally qualified person may be submitted to a document produced with employment be Bukantz

Relevancy or necessity of the communication The Courts have not always used consistent language in answering the question whether the privilege is limited in some way to communications necessary or material or relevant to some purpose of the consultation In Gillard v Bates, 6 M & W 547 the Court observed "The test is, whether the communication is necessary for the purpose of carrying on the proceedings in which the attorney was employed" The test laid down in Cobden v Kennel, 4 T R 431, is that the Court should see "whether the communications were made by the client to his attorney in

7 How St Tr 1229 Boules L C B 111

in protecting secrets disclosed by the client to his attorney to be, as has been said, in favour of the client, and principally for his service, and that the attorney is in loco of the client, and therefore his trustee, does it not follow from thence, that everything said by a client to his attorney falls under the same reason? I own I think not, because there is not the same necessity upon the client to trust him in one case as in the other, and of this the Court

I see any im-

an attorney or the client talks to him at large as a friend, think the Court is not under the same obligations to guard such secrets, though in the breast of an attorney" In the same case Monteney B added If this original principle be kept constantly in view, I think it cannot be difficult to see any other which may arise upon this either is, or by the party concerned can the attorney

the attorney

not, nor can

shall invariably keep secrets possibly by any man living be supposed to be necessary for that purpose, that the attorney is at liberty, and in many cases—as particularly, I think, in the present case—the attorney ought to disclose It is thus further elucidated by Douson B "Nothing that came properly to the knowledge of the attorney in defence of his client's cause ought to be revealed I will suppose an unknowing man to have twenty deeds by him, and he delivers them all to his attorney to see which were relative to suit he looks them over finds not half of them applicable to close the matter necessary, and I what came to this man's and in the next place that the client could not think it necessary. It is therefore, not whether the fact or the statement is actually necessary or material or relevant to the subject of the consultation, but whether the statement is material as a fact for the purpose of the client to obtain advice on that subject. Ignore § 2310

Communication must be confidential. The moment confidence ceases, as Lord Eldon in Privilege cases Jarkhurst v Jouten 194 216 Greenough v Gaskell 1 Myl & K 98 104 letters in order to be privileged must be professional communications of a confidential character for the purpose of getting legal advice. Gardner v Innes, L R Exch D 49 53, Oshes v Wood, (1891) P 237 246. The privilege assumes of course, that the communications are made with the intention of confidentiality. Ignore § 2311. The law in India on this point is practically the same as in England, and that in interpreting section 126 of the Evidence Act a Court may rightly refer to English cases, as shown by Hestrop C J and Sargent J in the case of Munon Haji Harun v Maute Abdul Kasim 3 H 91 in which Chief Justice Sir M Hestrop said 'Communications to be protected by that section (126) of the Evidence Act must we think be confidential. The word 'disclose' shows that common sense seems to require that communications must be confidential or private. Section 126 of the Evidence Act must be of a confidential nature. Judges in the course of their duties exactly the principle follows. L R 5 Ch 703, Daniell v Tanner 16 Q L 9 App Cas 81 R v Roberts 12 C 265. In Dwyer v

The privilege does not extend to matters of craft which the attorney knows by any other means than confidential communications with his client, though if he had not been employed as attorney he probably would not have known them. The case is Tanner, 16 Q B D 1. The name of the client is Mohan Singh under § 126 is of a very limited character. It protects only such communications as are made to the legal adviser in confidence in the course and for the purpose of his employment. And if the communication is not made in confidence then the communication is in no sense privileged. Bhagwan v Deoram A I R 1933 Sind 47. Communications made to legal advisers in order to be protected by this section must be confidential. A communication made to a pleader in order that it might be communicated to the Court as one of the statements in a plaint and in order that a decree might be obtained is not such a communication but on the contrary is one made expressly for the purpose of disclosure and express consent to the disclosure was therefore actually given by client. Abdul Hussein v Dibi Sona Dera 4 S L H 50.

Communication distinguished from acts clients conduct. Appearance Abode etc. The question is does the privilege cover only that knowledge of the client's utterances or also that which is given rise to a communication. It is sometimes discussed as if the word communications was synonymous with utterances of words, that is, who favour it. The largest answer repudiates the limits of the word communications as if it included no more than utterances voluntarily disclosed and without any utterance of the point of view of the alleged knowledge of the attorney.

attorney is restricted to that which he obtains by the sense of hearing only, or includes also that which he learns by seeing; and this mode of statement corresponds more closely to the distinction between utterances and acts of the client Wigmore § 2306 In Robson v Kemp, 11 Esp 32, 55 Lord Ellenborough L C J said "The act (of destroying a power of confidence and communication as an attorney character One sense is as privileged as privileged as to what he hears, but not to what he sees, where the knowledge

But in gham said corrector s t, something o a certain y other man y v. Foster, 1 11 & 12 100, Donoghue v Stevenson, A legal adviser may give evidence of a fact respect to matter which "Buller J in his over a fact of his own without being counsel or produced in the case, he shall be examined to the true time of execution, so, if the question were about an erasure in a deed or a Will, he might be examined as to the question whether he had ever seen such deed or Will in other plight for that is a fact of or to be permitted to discover any confession such heard" "There is marked contrast the statement of Lord Ellenborough in Martin, in Brown v Foster, can they be them consistent with Mr Justice Bronson's distinction between a communication and an act? The truth is that each is right, under some circumstances, and all are harmonious, when the proper allowance is made Looking back at the reason of the privilege it is seen to secure the client's freedom of mind in committing his affairs to the attorney's knowledge It is designed to influence him when he might be hesitating between the positive action of disclosure and the inaction of secrecy There is, therefore, by hypothesis, always some voluntary act of dis otherwise have existed in hand, then, those data event, but mere observation as the colour of his hat known by such acts without any purpose of as his adviser—such as in the roll of bills from the communications of gham and Mr Justice would have been equally cognizant On the other hand almost any act, done by the client in the sight of the attorney and, during the consultation, may conceivably be done by the

whether, h The torney's t token cy, and e comes, that n that is, atent—, en case, s to be s, which entially committed to the attorney, and thus be not privileged Obviously no fixed form of rule can be stated for the present application of the principle In the ordinary case, it is only the expressed communications of the client that will be privileged. Higmore § 2306 For the purposes of section 126 of the Evidence Act, it is immaterial whether the communication which is sought to be protected was verbal that is to say, by word of mouth or by demonstration. In a suit for the revocation of a patent in which the question for decision was the formation and process of working of a stove owned and used by the defendant the plaintiff tendered in evidence a vakil who had been employed by the defendant in some previous proceedings and had in the course and for the purpose of his employment, visited the defendant's premises at the latter's invitation, in order to make himself acquainted with the working of the stove. Held that the knowledge acquired by the vakil as to the formation and process of working of the stove amounted to a communication made to him by his client in the course and for the purpose of his employment and that therefore, his evidence was inadmissible under section 126 of the Evidence Act. Gopi Lal v Lakhpat Lal, 48 Ind Cas 603=16 A L J 987

No adverse reference from claims of Privilege If a client party claims the privilege no inference should be drawn against him as to the unfavourable facts. Per Lord Chelmsford in Wentworth v Lloyd, 11 Higmore § 2322, Weston v Leary Mohan, 20 C W N 17 P C Whatever the drawing of such it is this very dis

Judge to determine the privilege The claim of privilege being made the trial Judge is to determine. This follows from the usual of no give to the party's oath in answering a bill of discovery. Higmore § 2306 Ordinarily an attorney's statement that a document is privileged is sufficient. Volant v Soyer, 13 C B 281 But in Lyell v Kennedy L R 27 Ch D 1 21, Colton L J said The Court must be satisfied clearly satisfied, either from admissions or from other documents that the oath of the defendant by which he claims his protection cannot be really available for the purpose for which it is put forward. Higmore § 2323

Third person over hearing The law provides subjective freedom from client by assuring him of exception from its process of disclosure against himself or the attorney or their agents of communication. This much but not a whit more is necessary for the maintenance of secrecy of communication. Since the privilege is a derogation from the public interest it would be improper to extend its prohibition to third persons who obtain knowledge of the communication. One who overhears the communication whether with or without the client's knowledge is not within the protection of the privilege. The same rule ought to apply to one who surreptitiously reads or obtains possession of a document in original or copy. Higmore § 2326

Presence of third person If a third person is present and occupies more than a passive position in the communication, the privilege is lost. Bhagwati v Deviam A I R 1933 Sind 47

Joint interest The privilege attaches to communications between persons having a joint interest with the communication. See q as between partners. Wilson 59 L J 813 directors and shareholders. Woodhouse v H 30 T L R 59, Per Mayon trustee and cestus qui trust (Falbot v Marshfield 2 Dr & S 549 Per Mayon 22 Ch D 609, Re Portlethwaite 3 Ch D 722), even though the party receiving the communication has paid for the communication (Bacon v Bacon 31 L T 349), lessor and lessee as to production of the lease (Doe v Thomas, 9 B & C 289), reverser and tenant for life as to common title (Doe v Dale 3 Q B 609), two persons stating a case for their joint benefit (G v Litch, 2 J & W 291), or a husband and wife who are only collusively in contest (Ford v Pontes 5 Jur N S 993 alibi if the contest is genuine) Nor does a privilege attach as between joint claimants under the same client—e.g., between claimants under a testator as to communications between the latter and his solicitor (Russell v Jackson 9 Hare 387) But where communications relate to matters outside the joint interest they are privileged even as against a party bearing the expense of the communications—e.g. communications between plaintiff corporation and its solicitors as against a defendant ratepayer as to matters not connected with the rates (M of Bristol v Cox 26 Ch D 675) or between a trustee and his solicitor as against the cestui que trust where the communication is not made but to enable him to resist litigation by cases of joint interest it

Where the consultation was had by several joint for joint statements and neither could be able to obstruct the other in the § 2328 In re an Attorney

Joint Attorney There may be a relation, not of an absolute confidence The chief instance occurs a common interest, and each communications are clearly privileged

Yet they are not privileged in a controversy between two original parties in as much as the common interest and employment forbids concealment by either from the other Higmore § 2312, Daugh v Crook 1 M & R 10 Perry v Smith 9 M & W 681, In re an Attorney, 84 Ind Cas 353 (F B) 10 Bom L R 887 But if a solicitor be employed for two parties as for mortgagee and mortgagee and peruse on behalf of the former his abstracts of the title, he cannot as against him disclose their contents (Doe v Walling 3 Bing N C 421), and where a professional man was engaged by vendor and purchaser to prepare the deeds, and the draft conveyance was confidentially deposited with him by both parties it was held that he could not produce it at the trial against the interest of the purchaser's devisees though with the consent of the vendor Doe v Seaton 2 A & E 171 Where two persons having a dispute about a claim made by one of them upon the other went together to a solicitor, one of them made a statement and instructed the solicitor to write a letter to a third party on the subject of the claim—it was held that in a subsequent action between these two persons both the statement and the letter were admissible in evidence Shore v Bedford 5 M & Gr 271, Griffith v Davies 5 H & Ad 502 In all these cases the question would seem to be was the communications made by the party to the witnesses in the character of his exclusive solicitor? If it was the bond of secrecy is imposed upon the witness, if it was not the communication will not be privileged Perry v Smith 9 M & W 687, Pagall v Sprye 10 Beav 51 Taylor § 936 A communication to the opposing party's attorney, as such, is clearly without privilege nor if reposed could be accepted Karim 3 B 91, Varston v Downes 310, Ainsworth v Harding (1900) 2 C 110

Time of consultation The privilege exists not for the sake of the legal profession in general but for the sake of clients needing legal advice It therefore assumes that the relation of client and adviser has been formed (or is forming) for a particular person as client and communications are protected not merely when the person consulted is a professional legal adviser, but when the relation was a confidential one Gaskell 1 common law seems plain not certainly predict the attorney's acceptance of the employment, the former must be protected in his preliminary statements when making the overtures, even if the overture be refused. It would further be immaterial that the refusal was due to a disagreement as to fees demanded, for upon preliminary statement the privilege covers the preliminary statement.

Any advice given by him. No legal adviser is permitted, whether during or after the termination of his employment as such, unless with his client's express consent to disclose any advice given by him to his client during, in the course, and for the purpose of such employment. Steph Dig Act 115. So not only communications made to an attorney, but any advice given by him to his client is also privileged. Client are also within the privilege. This seldom been brought into for securing the use of his of the tenor being 0

Crown case—Communication between prosecutor and attorney. Commu

Proviso (1)—Communications in furtherance of any illegal purpose. Profane oral communications are not privileged when such communications are for an unlawful purpose having for their object the commission of a crime. Then they partake of the nature of a conspiracy or attempted conspiracy, and it is not only lawful to divulge such communications but under certain circumstances it might become the duty of the attorney to do so. The interests of public justice require that no such shield from merited exposure shall be interposed to protect a person who takes counsel how he can safely commit a crime. People v Ian Alstine 57 M. Ch 69. Moreover no such enterprise falls within the just scope of the relation between legal adviser and client. The case of William v Quebrada Rj etc 10 (1895) 2 Ch 701 was considered one of unusual gravity and importance. And Helreich J in delivering the opinion of the Court said. It is of the highest importance in the first place that the rule as to privilege of protection from pr which pass between a litigant should not be in any way depa that it is essential to the due adminis be upheld. On the other hand where or amounting to fraud especially in st good faith the whole askedness to the light of advise his clients in what privilege

Commercial or transaction sh the Court manner they may commit crime or fraud with impunity hence the privilege does not extend to communications made in furtherance of prospective criminal acts. If his duty t disp use w every des public wel Gariside v no confil L J said purpose w solic t m role to a the In m be over legal ere a

Hood & C said. I should first beg leave to consider whether an attorney may be examined to any matter which comes to his knowledge as an attorney. If he is employed as an attorney in any unlawful or wicked act his duty to the public obliges him to disclose it. No private obligations can dispense with that universal one which lies on every member of the society, to discover every design, which may be formed contrary to the laws of the society, to destroy the public welfare. For this reason, I apprehend that if a secret which is contrary to the public good—such as a design to commit treason, murder, or perjury—comes to where he is concerned the obligation to the client' boundaries of this limitation. It has not always been kept in mind that the privilege, in its very fundamental presupposes what Bentham so drastically censured—the furnishing of legal advice to the culpable client, as well as to the worthy one: to a client who if the law were duly enforced would lose in the litigation. How, then, can the privilege continue to exist at all, if any exception is to be made by which the confidences of the guilty are to be disclosed merely the practical point of view, and to let it cease to be a cloak for criminal contrivance an arbitrary limit for this exception thus to do violence to the theory of the privilege. Looking at the reasons upon which it rests, they appear by their natural limits to end with the same conclusion. They predicate the need of confidence on the part not only of injured persons, but also of those who being already wrong doers in part or all of their cause are seeking legal advice suitable for their plight. The confidences of such persons may legitimately be protected, wrong doers though they may have been, because the element from an element of right, because properly be employed to obtain the redress, and because the legal adviser must not habitually be in position of an informer. But these reasons all cease to operate at a certain point namely, where the desired advice refers not to prior wrong doing but to future wrong doing. From that point onwards, no protection is called for by any of these considerations. Upon this much there has been a fair consensus among all who have declared themselves upon the subject. But certain minor points of detail still remain, if a practical rule for disclosure it to be settled upon. (1) Must not the advice be sought for a knowingly unlawful end? (2) Must not that unlawfulness be either a crime or civil wrong involving a moral turpitude? (3) Must not the attorney have so far abandoned his professional attitude as to have become, by assent to the design, a partner in the client's intended wrong? Wigney v. Wigney § 2298. The law on the subject is thus laid down by Boulton v. Jones in Corney v. Fannahill, 1 Hill, N. Y. 33, 35, 41. It is the client, either in the commission of a crime, or the doing of a wrong, by force or his presence towards the perpetration of the fraud. One who is charged with having done an injury to another, either in his person, his fame or his property may freely communicate with his counsel, without the danger of having his confidence betrayed through any legal agency. But when he is not disclosing what has already happened, but is actually engaged in committing the wrong he can have no privileged witness. In Annesley v. Earl of Anglesea 17 How St Tr 1229 Mounteney B said. A man (without any natural call to it) never discover this declaration, because he was retained as attorney. This prosecutor applies in the same manner to a second, a third, and so on, who and

and the document came into the hands of the plaintiff, it was held that there was no rule relating to privileged communications preventing its production in evidence. Paicheappa v Mt U, L. B. II (1873-1892), 412. There is no protection approved by the Evidence Act in a doctor as such. When a doctor is called to give evidence he is in a case Edua May Olua v Haroll I A. L. J. 14.

127. The provisions of section 126 shall apply to interpreters, and the clerks or servants of barristers, pleaders, attorneys and vakils.

Principle. It has never been questioned that the privilege protects communications to the attorney's Taylor v Foster, 2 C. & K. Kennedy L. R. 27 Ch. D. 1. It is penible to his work, and early committed to them by must include all the persons

Scope of the capacity, Gorkum, communication, the sed extends to such a communication, a communication to a pleader 3-2 C. W. N. 649. The evidence Maung Mya U v Sun Singh, U. v Queen Empress, 25 C. 736, it is also privileged. But the in the attorney's office, nor the was an attorney Barnes v.

11. C. W. N. 649

128. If any party to a suit gives evidence therein at his own instance or otherwise, he shall not be deemed to have consented thereby to such disclosure as is mentioned in section 126; and, if any party to a suit or proceeding calls any such barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil as a witness, he shall be deemed to have consented to such disclosure only if he questions such barrister, attorney, or vakil on matters which, but for such question, he would not be at liberty to disclose.

Privilege. The privilege mentioned in section 126 is designed to secure the client's confidence in is not violated by receiving permits to be made. S. 360, 480. Merle v Moore is a waiver by implication. In deciding it, regard must be had to every waiver is not element of fairness and consistency. A privileged person would seldom be found to waive, if his intention not to abandon could alone control the situation.

* This word in s. 128 was inserted by the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act (18 of 1872), s. 10.

communications as may appear to the Court necessary to be known in order to explain any evidence which he has given, but no others

Principle The privilege being for the protection of the client in his suit only be defeated if the disclosure was still obtainable it has never been Wigmore § 2324

Scope of the section Under the old law (s.c. Act II of 1855 section 22) a party to a suit who offered himself as witness was bound to produce any confidential writing or correspondence that had passed between himself and his legal adviser The reason for this rule is not very clear and the present section abrogates it so far that such correspondence need be produced only if it is necessary to explain the witness's evidence The English law at present is to protect professional communications and to leave them unprotected at the examination of which the law to disclose no man would do with a view to his defence Greenl Ev § § 236—240 given or opinions stated their oral or documentary properly relating to the business in hand and to all documents books papers or instruments which may be properly information of his attorney Crosby v Burr Jones § 750 same principle the privilege extends the purpose of obtaining the advice of counsel and to the opinion of counsel based upon such statements Burr Jones § 750

In Munchershaw Bezonj v The New Dhurnsay S & W Co 4 B 576 which was a suit for a declaration by reason plaintiff while in payments made by the permission of the defendant had a letter from the original document with a case for opinion upon matters connected with it He now produced a translation of the document Mr Incrarity for the defendant called for the production of the case submitted to counsel Hest J in disallowing the production said In drawing up the Indian Evidence Act chiefly from Taylor on Evidence, Sir James Stephen plainly intended to adopt in section 129 the principle that if a party becomes equires it be made to disclose every thing necessary to the true comprehension of his testimony

The argument that properly order a perusal of it, protected by it is against an adversary in litigation Here the document which the plaintiff is asked to produce is in its nature a confidential communication The plaintiff wanted advice for his personal guidance in fulfilling a contract of service The statement which he laid before counsel with this view is his own property in substance as well as form it not being suggested that the consultation was in furtherance of any fraud I do not find it necessary to

0. compel a disclosure of it, in order to explain the evidence given by the plaintiff and in the absence of such necessity it would be wrong to put pressure on the plaintiff. It is obviously desirable that communications with professional advisers should be unembarrassed by any such fears as a contrary duty would give rise to. frank communication by their candour statements, and useless litigation would thus be promoted in numberless cases in which an exact knowledge of facts would have enabled a counsel or solicitor to nip it in the bud by timely warning or suggestion. Lastly, a compulsory disclosure of confidential communications is so opposed to the popular conscience on that point, that it would lead to frequent falsehoods as to what has disclosures made under section 130 should not be enforced in any case except when they are plainly necessary. Letters written by one of the defendants servants for the purpose of obtaining information with a view to possible they might under the circumstances. Brigro Das v. ... compelled cannot mean 'suborned' and it uses the words 'compelled to disclose' with reference to the case when a man has offered himself as a witness and must refer to the force put upon the witness after he is in the witness box. Moher Sheikh v. Queen Empress, 21 C 302. Statements of witnesses recorded for the special purpose of being shown to a legal adviser with a view to ascertaining whether there is a good cause to go to the Court are privileged under this section. Dr. ... v. Fromroz 43 Ind Cns 71. The documents for which privilege could be claimed would the lay client the defendant of the suit attach to them. Central India Spinning v. G. I. P. Railway 29 Bom L R 414-102 Ind Cns 420-A 1 R 1927 Bom 367.

130. No witness who is not a party to a suit shall be

Production of title deeds of witness not a party compelled to produce his title-deeds to any property or any document in virtue of which he holds any property as pledgee or mortgagee or any document the production of which might tend to criminate him, unless he has agreed in writing to produce them with the person seeking the production of such deeds or some person through whom he claims.

Principle. The title deeds to land in England were always a secret of

at the time of the common law, and were so dominant in public interests that a compulsory public registration of the secret of the title instruments comes to be a vital (if selfish) consideration for the occupants of the land. Their possession may be unquestioned, but the instruments under which they claim are constantly defective in some important feature. A boundary may vary, a release be missing, a rectification in correct—a score of defects of one sort or another might be discoverable in the chain of title. But the possession and the title are as yet unquestioned and thus the security of title depends practically on preserving these defects from ascertainment by persons opposed in claim who might be only too glad to take advantage of them. It comes therefore to be a fundamental maxim of the law that the documents of title shall be kept secret. It is the realty need for such protection, not by what tive for demanding n

 help them Where a person holds a document, not his own, but subject to a lien which would be lost by his surrender of possession or owns and holds a document, such as a bill of exchange, whose continued possession is necessary for the enforcement of his rights under it he may fairly claim not to be compelled to surrender it for evidential purposes in litigation between other parties Wignore § 2211

Protection of title deeds by persons not party to a suit No witness who is not a party to a suit can be compelled to produce his title deeds to say property Pickering v Noyes 1 B & C 263, Adams v Lloyd, 3 H & N 351, Doe v Date, 3 Q B 609, Egremont v Egremont, 14 Ch D 158
 Where an attorney is called upon, whether by subpoena duces tecum or otherwise, to produce deeds or papers belonging to his client, who is not a party to the suit, the Court will inspect the documents, and pronounce upon their admissibility according as their production may appear to be prejudicial or not to the client, in like manner as where a witness objects as to the production of his own title deeds Copeland v Watts, 1 Stark 95, Army v Long, 9 East 478, Peynolds v Rouley 3 Rob La 201, Travis v January, 3 Rob 1 for are in the hands of the agent or in the hands of the owner himself, their in the judgment of the Court it may 3 C & P 591, Pickering v Noyes, 1 B
 3, Doe v Thomas 9 B & C 288, Bull v
 12 Q B 711, Doe v Hertford, 13 Jur
Kemp v King 2 Mo & Rob 437, R v
 3 C & P 591, Pickering v Noyes on

of the
 tion of
 from a
 where not being themselves parties the whole merits cannot be tried Greenl Ev § 409 (n) A Will as well as the title deeds of an estate in mortgage to the party whose privilege is invoked, and the mortgage deed itself would be within the protection The object is to protect property by excluding the means of picking holes in the document under which it is held Indeed it is not necessary that the deeds should be even those establishing the title They would be within the protection of the rule, though called for to show the title's defeasance Thus in a case in which the witness an attorney was required to produce a deed of assignment with a view of showing a departure with the deed that it was the deed of his Cresswell J observing — "The it which the law authorised to produce it or to answer any as not a title deed It was however, called for as such and it was intended to show that the title was no longer in the defendants It need not be even strictly a deed — any document or paper having relation to the title would be within the protection The ion of which title might be capable f ejectment where the titl of the les or of a gentleman who had been in treaty but which treaty had gone off was title that had contents of f had refused
 . Goote v Ex

PP 150 151
 The protection against the production of the deeds would extend to all discovery of their contents It was observed by Baron Alderson It would be perfectly illusory for the law to say that a party is justified in not producing a deed, but that he is compellable to give parol evidence of its content, that would give him or rather his client through him, merely an illusory protection if he happens to know the contents of the deed, and would be only a round about way of getting from every man an opportunity of knowing the defects there may be in the deeds and titles of his estate. I am clearly of opinion therefore, that when a party refuses to produce a deed, and is justified in so doing, he ought not to be compelled to give parol evidence of its contents. Davies v Wales, 9 M & W 606

There have been cases in England in which the Court has taken on itself the inspection of the document production would be prejudicial to considered as objectionable, and would now upheld, and for the cogent Soyer, 13 Com B 236 'Suppose' to examine the document and, in title deed,—his decision might be made the subject of an argument in open Court by bill of exception, and thus the contents of the deed might be communicated to all the world. But Professor Wigmore says, "This principle, then, that the disclosure of title deeds in litigation between other parties was not compellable, appears to have been always accepted in English Courts coming down as an unquestionable tradition and it was occasionally extended to documents other than those affecting land, though it seems ever to have been regarded as limited by trial Court's discretion." Wigmore § 2211, see also Miles v Dawson, 1 Esp 405, Copeland v Watts, 1 Stark 93, Reed v James, 1 Stark 132, Corson v Dubois Holt 239, Roberts v Simpson, 2 Stark 203, Harris v Hill 3 Stark 140, R v Hunter 3 C & P 591, 592, Mills v Odby 6 C & P 728, Doe v Langdon, 12 Q B 711. The rule appears to be the same in India. Vide Order XVI, r 6 of the Civil Procedure Code and s 16 of the Indian Evidence Act.

Although a witness cannot be asked to testify to the contents of such a document, Doe v named case instrument for the contents 1 & R 726, 3 Bosc 367.

Imrit v Sidhar, 15 C L J 9

Any document in virtue of which he holds the property as pledgee or mortgagee. Mortgagees or pledgees when not parties to a suit are not hold any property. Vide Doe v Ross Lidelett 24 L J Costa Rica Republic

Document the production of which might tend to criminate him. Upon principles of reason and equity, a Judge will refuse to compel either a witness or a party to produce a document the production of which may tend to criminate him. 2 Taunt 115, Roe v New York Press Hotel Co (1897) 2 Q B 124. But a book of account cannot be withheld on the ground that it tends to incriminate him. "It is a novel if not a somewhat startling proposition that an officer of a corporation can refuse to produce its books, when he is asked to account for property which has been committed to his charge, upon the ground that the production of the books may tend to incriminate him. If such rule were to prevail, it is not difficult to see how of the books of a public or private property which had come into his hands claiming that the production of though the production was solely for the purpose of the document may remain within the protection of the rule also the privilege does not extend to Bradshaw v Murphy

Documents in the official custody of the witness. Bradshaw v Murphy 7 C & P 612

Unless he agreed in writing etc. It amounts to waiver on his part.

S. 1
S. 1

131. No one shall be compelled to produce documents in his possession, which any other person would be entitled to refuse to produce if they were in his possession, unless such last-mentioned person consents to their production.

Production of documents which another person having possession could refuse to produce

Principle This section is intended for the protection of persons whose title deeds and other documents happen to be in the hands of their attorneys, stewards, etc., Falmonth v. Moss, 4 Price, 455. In such a case the owner's consent is a necessary condition precedent to the production of the documents. Port Et 315

Scope of the section Examples of persons having documents in their possession are agents, attorneys, trustees, mortgagees, etc., Whitely Stokes, Vol II p 922. Is it in his possession the document nor is he asked to testify about them. The answer depends upon the other privileges of the client irrespective of the privilege under s 120 infra. The attorney is but the agent of the client to hold the deed, if the client is compellable to give up possession, then the attorney is, if the client is not, then the attorney is not. It is merely a question of possession and the attorney in this respect is like any other agent. The extent of the client's obligation to produce must therefore be taken as determining the present question. It follows, then, that when the client himself would be privileged from production of the

cl
ol
cl pe
client is privileged as Cas 99 101, see also 140; Nixon v. Mayo,
Doe v. Ross, 7 M & W
2 A & E 171, 181, B
produce his client's C & P 728, 731. In Newton v. Chaplain 10 C B 356, Maule J said. "The privilege of the
as if he would discover custody
Esp
Temp
Ry
719, procedure Pearson v. Fletcher, 11 orsen v. Dubois, Holt 239, Copen v
1 Price 455, Nauling v. Howard, 288, Doe v. Langdon, 12 Q B 711,

132. A witness shall not be excused from answering any question as to any matter relevant to the matter in issue in any suit or in any civil or criminal proceeding, upon the ground that the answer to such question will criminate, or may tend directly or indirectly to criminate, such witness, or that it will expose, or tend directly or indirectly to expose, such witness to a penalty or forfeiture of any kind:

Provided that no such answer, which a witness shall be compelled to give, shall subject him to arrest or prosecution, or be proved against him in any criminal proceeding, except a prosecution for giving false evidence by such answer.

Principle According to the English Law it is set led rule that a wife

1453, May v Haulins 11 Ex 210 R v Garbel 1 Den C C 36, Carr v Worcester 6 M & S 191 Paulhurst v Leuton 1 Mer 401, Pye v Bitterfell 34 L J Q B 17, Chester v Worby 18 C B 939 R v Lord George Gordon 21 How St Tr 535, Ex parte Reynolds L R 29 Ch D 298, R v Boye 1 B & S 330 Upon a principle says Mr Stowell of humanity as well as of policy every witness is protected from answering questions by doing which he would criminate himself Of policy because it would place the witness under the strongest temptation to commit the crime of perjury, and of humanity because it would be to extort a confession of the truth by a kind of duress every species and degree of which the law abhors It is pleasing to contrast the humanity and leniency of the law of England in this respect with the cruel provisions of the Roman Law which allowed criminals and even witnesses in some instances to be put to the torture for the purpose of extorting a confession Stowell of Ideals

the views of many active lawyers and Judges on this question. A majority of those consulted have expressed the opinion that no innocent person would suffer and that more guilty ones would be detected and convicted if the provision would be repealed. Commenting on the English rule Prof. Wigmore says: "In preserving the privilege however we must resolve not to give it more than its due significance. We are to respect it rationally for its merits not worship it blindly as a fetish. We are not merely to emphasize its benefits but also to concede its shortcomings and guard against its abuses. Indirectly or ultimately it works the common detection of guilt judicially and finally cannot be denied."

But in India the witness was not excused from answering any question relevant to the matter at issue in any civil or criminal proceeding upon the ground that the answer to such question would incriminate or might tend directly or indirectly to criminate him or that it would expose, or tend directly or indirectly to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture. It contained, however, that no answer the witness might thus be compelled to give for the purpose of punishment for false evidence, or be used as evidence against him in any criminal proceeding. This section re-enacts the provision of section 32 of Act II of 1855.

The reason for the change in thus stated by Turner C J in Queen v Gopal Das, 3 M 271, 279. Under the English law a witness was not bound to criminate him self, but if he thought fit to do so his admission on oath was equally admissible in evidence against him as any other admission. This state of the law in some cases tended to bring about a fracture of justice, for the allowance of the excuse when the matter to which the question related was in the knowledge solely of the witness, deprived the Court of the information which was essential to its arriving at a right decision. To avoid this inconvenience, and to obtain evidence which a witness refused to give it was suggested that, when the question was material to the issue, it should be left to the discretion of the Court.

generally, the answer should be from any punishment etc. will depend on the nature of the answer related, or at least a criminal proceed-ure di- Judge no option.

end desired, the production of evidence from unwilling witnesses, was sought by depriving them of the privilege they had theretofore enjoyed of claiming excuse, but remove any not be used of the law and it was an an infraction of the criminal law, had exposed themselves to penalties. In the same case Muttusami Ayyar J said "The necessity under which the witness lay of explaining how the answer might criminate him, amounted in some cases—as observed by Baron Colclough in Alams v Lloyd, 3 H & N 382 and Macle J in Fisher v Ronalds, 12 C B 762, since overruled by R v Boyes, 1 B & S 311—to a virtual denial of the privilege and to an evasion of the rule that no extract when a proceed compel to an answer continued in the sworn examination of the accused in a criminal case. It seems to me that the legislature in India adopted this principle repealed the law of privilege and thereby obviated the necessity for an enquiry as to how the answer to indemnify and thus of the rule

when a criminal proceeding is of absolute privilege does not apply proviso to this section McGill Cr L J 25

Scope of the section This section abolishes the law of privileges and creates an obligation in a witness to answer every question material to the issue, whether the answer criminate him or not, and gives him a right, as correlated to that duty, to claim that that answer shall not be admitted in evidence against him in criminal prosecution. Under this section it is not in the power of the Judge to excuse a witness from answering if the question is relevant to the issue. Queen v Gopal Das, 3 M 171. Section 32 of Act II of 1855 is repealed almost totidem verbis in this section. Per Innes J in ibid. Where an accused person has made a statement on oath voluntarily and without compulsion on the part of the Court to which the statement is made, such must be overruled Ibid Where a person he is alleged to have incriminated himself act that he was the person who gave the Samayyamar, 2 Wier 794 A statement another, made by a witness in a civil this section of the Act, for which unst criminally If the statement were false he might be prosecuted for giving false evidence Maladin v Queen Empress 3 O C 80

Taking a thumb impression of a witness by the Court is not equivalent to asking a question and receiving an answer within the purview of the proviso of this section and therefore, such a thumb impression may be proved against the persons giving it in a criminal trial Tunno Miah v King Emperor, 16 C W N 503-15 C L J 399-13 Ind Cas 925-39 C 348 Where an incriminating question is put to a witness, the Magistrate should explain to him his position, and should advise him of his right, or otherwise, he may be induced through ignorance of the state of the law, to deny the truth for fear of penal consequences In re Jaddonath Dutt 2 C L R 181, but see 1 Wier 153-8 M H (App) 29 When a co accused is cited as a witness his position is sufficiently protected by this section Raja Ram v Emperor, 5 Lah L J 49-73 Ind Cas 521-24 Cr L J 633

Proviso This section makes a distinction between those cases in which a witness voluntarily answers a question and those in which he is compelled to answer, and has given him a protection in the latter of those cases only The words 'be compelled to' clearly answers which a witness has objected excused from giving, and which then he give Queen Empress v Ganu Sauba, per Birwood J in ibid, see also per term 'shall be compelled' in section 132 appears to be the correlative of the term 'shall be excused' and they presuppose the rule that every person giving evidence on any subject before any Court or person authorized to administer oaths and affirmations shall be bound to state the truth, and an authority competent at the time to excuse or compel compliance with this rule They also suggest that the witness has objected to the question and has sought and been refused excuse, and even constrained to answer The terms of this section when read with the rest of the Act afford protection only to answers to which a compelled to give" in this section are not a mere surplusage, but apply to when he asks to be excused such a statement without warrant used against him in his Empress 21 C 392, Haidar L J 409-9 C W N 911 Bhalaj Rat Un Cr C 3-10 C L J 399-13 Ind Cas 925-39 C 348 Samayyamar, 2 Wier 794 A statement another, made by a witness in a civil this section of the Act, for which unst criminally If the statement were false he might be prosecuted for giving false evidence Maladin v Queen Empress 3 O C 80

660 The answers J 39 Ind v Sa mu boy being omitted to object, perhaps owing to the want of legal advice to answer the question, on the ground that the answers would criminate them In re Jaddonath Dutt 2 C L R 181, but see 1 Wier 153-8 M H (App) 29

S.

Ramuddu, 2 Weir 792 - When incriminating questions are put from the Bench to a witness, who has become already entangled by self contradictions, such questions should be put with the object of furthering the ends of justice in the judicial proceeding, in truth, and not with a view possibly be taken against the witness under this section should as a rule, be explained by the Court, before any incriminating question is put in the above circumstances Ma Mo Ma v Queen Empress, L B R (1893 1900) 91 Where the accused had made in a previous enquiry under ss 162, 163 of Act VI of 1882, depositions on oath, without the Exic against accused is suing for defendant to answer evidence Act inga Sahai L J 186

A witness must claim the benefit of the protection afforded by this section before a question is subsequently raised 206-43 Ind Cas 823-19 Cr L J 68 59 Ind Crs 325

on a answer either tion not the witness has object 43 A 92-18 A L J L J 825 "Compulsion"

in a criminal made certain the Court of the innocence of the accused and subsequently a prosecution was launched against the witness for such statements which proved to be false held that the statements were not excluded by this section of the Evidence Act Emperor v Banarsi, 46 A 254=77 Ind Cas 829-77 A L J 144 25 Cr L J 417

A statement made on oath by a person before a Coroner at an inquest held by him cannot be used against him in a trial for a charge based on such evidence as a statement tending to prove his guilt Emperor v Kazi Danood 50 B 56=93 Ind Cas 220=27 Cr L J 433=28 Bom L R 19=A I R 1226 Bom 141

A person who answers questions put to him by court of without seeking the protection of s 132 of the Evidence charge of defamation and all that he is under s 499 I P Code Peddabba Pea L W 210=116 Ind Cas 337=30 Cr L I R 1929 Mad 286=56 M L J 570, Bai Shanta v Mirao, A I R 1920 Bom 141=50 B 162=28 Bom L R 1 (F B), Rimchandra Rao v Mahomed 10 Mys L J 421

133. An accomplice shall be a competent witness against an accused person, and a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is ar putu

conviction for the crime. This argument is only broadly related to the maxim ne mo turpitudinem suam allegans audirendus est. The notion underlying the maxim is that a person who comes upon the stand to testify that he has at a former time spoken falsely or acted corruptly is by his very confession, a liar and a villain, and therefore untrustworthy as a witness. The argument, however, was judicially repudiated from the very beginning—partly on the ground of necessity, partly on the ground that turpitude, though self-confessed, was no hindrance unless there had been a conviction of crime. Higmore § 520, 526. In Tungs Case, Kelyng. 18, the Court observed: "It was resolved that some of these persons who were equally culpable with the rest may be made use of as witnesses against their fellows, . . . and the law alloweth every one to be a witness who is not convicted . . . and if it were not so, all treasons would who conspires with never so many." See also Charmou's Trial, 12 How Trial, 33 How St Tr 691-921. Albott C J said: "It is a deep and a seldom fully them, and can of untainted precaution, it is considered. His purpose does by that very acknowledgment depreciate his own personal credit. If, . . . administration of . . . incredible, the it must not only happen that many heinous crimes must pass unpunished, but great encouragement will be given to bad men by withdrawing from their minds the fear of detection and punishment through the instrumentality of their partners in guilt, and thereby universal confidence will be substituted for that distrust of each other which naturally possesses men engaged in wicked projects and which often operates as a restraint against the perpetration of offences to which the co-operation of a multitude is required." Higmore § 520. At common law, when two or more persons were tried upon the same charge, each and all were naturally disqualified. Only by ceasing to be a party in the cause could one then become a witness, for or against his co-defendants. Higmore § 4-0.

Accomplice meaning, of . . .

ins such a relation to the criminal act that he would be jointly indicted with the defendant he is an accomplice. White v Common Wealth Century Digest Vol 14 Col 1780, cited Ramasami v Emperor, 19 B 363, 19 Cr 1-9. If of convicting the guilty, he is charged, he can not be an accomplice, who purpose of supplying marked money for the detection of a crime cannot be treated as that of an accomplice. Ibid.

An accomplice confesses himself a criminal. No man ought to be treated as an accomplice on mere suspicion, unless he confesses that he had a conscious hand in the crime or makes admission of facts showing that he had such a hand. If the evidence of a witness is such as to show that a person is an accomplice, and his testimony must be given with great caution. Emperor v. Porey Han 268 = 10 Cr L J 530. A person offering to assist in the receipt of illegal gratifications and those who assist under compulsion. Queen Empress v. Magculal, 14 B 115, Queen Empress v. Chagan 14 B 331, King Emperor v. Mathar, 26 B 193 = 3 Bom L R 691, Emperor v. Plurid William Smither, 26 M 1 = 3 Weir 521.

So an accomplice is a person who in some way concerned in the commission of a crime for which the accused is on trial. This includes principals and accessories whether before or after the fact. A person against whom, there is sufficient evidence to indict for the crime upon which the accused is standing trial is his accomplice. Mere knowledge or belief that a crime is to be committed renders of the constitute an accomplice, the mere concealment of knowledge that a crime has been committed does not make the person concealing his knowledge an accomplice. This is the general rule and is sustained by the majority of cases. Folk v. State 36 Ark 117 (Am), Gallin v. State 40 Tex Cr App 116. However this may be in the case of an accessory after the fact it is well settled that all accessories before the fact if they actually participate at all in the preparation for the crime are accomplices within the rule, but if their participation is limited to the knowledge that a crime is committed renders Hatson v. State, 9 Tex App 60, Goulden v. Emperor, 27 M 2. A person who assisted in the removal of the dead body from the place of murder to the pit in which it was buried, was not an accomplice.

A voluntary participation in the commission of the crime is required to constitute an accomplice. One who either by threats or coercion inciting in him a fear that he is in danger of losing his life or liberty under and by reason of such coercion and fear participates in a crime is not an accomplice. Whether a person is not an accomplice depends upon the facts in each particular case considered in connection with the nature of the crime. This is usually determined by the Court as a question of law. Parties to be accomplices must participate in the commission of the same crime. Thus a person who receives stolen goods knowing them to be stolen is not an accomplice of the thief where the receiver did not participate in the commission of the larceny. The receiving and the larceny are distinct crimes. In perjury all persons who with knowledge of the falsity of the statement aid in the commission of the crime have been held as accomplices. Underhill Cr Ev § 69. A person from whom a charge of murder is brought is not an accomplice of the murderer. 809 F. 11. A person who aids in the commission of a crime is not an accomplice if he is not guilty of the crime.

Informant about it till the 21st June must be treated in the same way as that of an accomplice. Aga Po That v. Queen Empress 1 L B L 29.

The mere fact that a person is cognizant of an offence and omitted to disclose it for him an accomplice when it does not amount to an offence. Ishan Government are justified in charging of murder. 809 F. 11. A person who aids in the commission of a crime is not an accomplice if he is not guilty of the crime. 809 F. 11. A person who aids in the commission of a crime is not an accomplice if he is not guilty of the crime. 809 F. 11.

Claudia v. (Cm inc Q) associates with criminals solely for the purpose of discovering or making known their crimes and who acts throughout with this purpose and without any criminal intent is not an accomplice and it is immaterial that he encouraged or aided the commission of the crime. Emperor v. Clurbin 3 Ind Cr 111, 15 C W N 171 = 11 Cr L J 560.

But where from the facts of the case, it appears that a person took an active part in carrying away the person whose death the accused was charged with having caused, after he had been grievously injured, left him in the field where he was subsequently found dead, those witnesses are no better than accomplices. Alimuddin v Queen Empress 23 C 361 A bribe giver is an accomplice. Marsul h Khan v Emperor, 3 P W R Cr 1919 To constitute an accomplice there need only be the intention of assisting in the commission of a crime but he need not know exactly what crime was being committed. An indication of the meaning of the word 'accomplice' may be found in section 337 of the Cr Pro Code. Surya Kant v Emperor, 24 C W N 119 Where a witness is found, from his own testimony, to be privy to the crime alleged to be committed by accused, his evidence is no better than that of an accomplice. Muhammad v Emperor, 6 Lah L J 599 = A I R 1917 Lah 203 A person who has knowledge of the commission of an offence but keeps quiet for some days is no better than an accomplice. United Sikh v Emperor 2 Cr L J 1011 = 96 Ind Crs 867 = 30 C W N 816, see also Hayatu v Emperor A I R 1929 Lah 540 A person convicted and sentenced continues to be an accomplice. Alisab v Emperor, A I R 1933 Bom 24 = 34 Bom L R 1438

Who are not accomplices Witnesses to payment of bribes are not accomplices, unless they co-operate in the payment of the bribes, or are instrumental in the negotiation for Emperor 33 C
 649-10 C W N
 C 144 Emperor v E
 Ind Cas 18 But persons who accompany another, who is entrusted with and carries the money, that the money is to they do not actually they know
although an Mutil
 2 C W N 672

Where money is lent to a money lender for obtaining the relief voluntarily given against the punishment, held that such payment was not an illegal gratification but money extorted and that the money lender advancing the money could not be regarded as an accomplice of the Police officer. Akhoy Kumar Chuckerbutty v Jagat Kumar Chuckerbutty 27 C 925 = 4 C W N 755, see also Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Upendra 12 C W N 140 = 6 Cr L J 334 A person charged with an offence by the police, but discharged by the Magistrate after examination of the witnesses for the prosecution, because he found that no crime has been made out which, if un rebutted we be said to be an accomplice. Nga Maung v Queen 407 Queen v Behary 7 W R Cr 44, Abul B

A policeman or other person procuring to obtain a conviction is not an accomplice. R (1893 1900) 865 over 1892) 140, see also Queen v tion is not necessary in entered into communications conspiracy to the police authorities, under whose direction they continue to act till the matter can be so far matured as to ensure a conviction. In such persons the rule as to corroboration does not apply. The early disclosure is considered as binding the party to his duty and though a great degree of disfavour may attach to a case is not treated as that of Cr C 423 One who defiles the body of the deceased after Jehana v Emperor, 73 Ind

Accomplices in particular crimes In dealing with intoxicating liquor the buyer is a woman—may be of the crime, a other partner Corroborate
who have
to the
the nature
lultery, the
is in incest
is a crime
after age
 C & P

604, Wigmore § 2060 But the word "accomplice includes a person who consents to the commission of an unnatural offence with him or her R v. Jellyman, 11 C & P 604, R v. Tate, (1908) 2 K B 680

Distinction between accomplice and informer In criminal cases the distinction between an informer and an accomplice assumes at times considerable importance, and in order to determine whether a witness who first associated with the wrong doers and subsequently gave information to the police belongs to the first category or is an accomplice whose evidence cannot be accepted without corroboration, it has to be seen whether the witness had entered into the conspiracy for the sole purpose of defeating and betraying it or whether he is a person who concurred fully in the criminal designs of his co conspirators for a time and joined in the execution of those till either out of fear or for some other reasons he turned on his former associates and gave information to the police. If at the time when he joined the conspiracy he had no intention of bringing his associates to book but his sole object was to partake in the commission of the crime, he cannot be called an informer but is an accomplice, and his position is not modified simply because later on he turns round and carries information to the police. Maungat Rn v Emperor 10 Lah L J 262=110 Ind Cas 616-29 Cr L J 740=A I R 1928 Lah 647, see also Karim Buksh v Emperor, 9 Lah 550=109 Ind Cas 593-29 Cr L J 577-A I R 1928 Lah 193

Scope of the section (1) An accused person can be legally convicted upon credit unless it is corroborated in some material particulars tending to show that the accused committed the offence with which he is charged, (4) It is for the Court to matter be may or may Act) is wor

against the a corroborated by the evidence of another approver, or by the confession of a person who is being tried jointly with the accused for the same offence implicating both himself and the accused, (6) It is the duty of the Court to scrutinize with care such corroboration as that mentioned in (5) but whether it is to be treated as evidence against the accused or not is to be determined by the Court having regard to the circumstances of the case. Aung Hla v Emperor 9 Rang 404=1931 Cr C 875-A I R 1931 Rang 235 In case of retracted confession of a co accused evidence also Awar v not illegal a f an accomplice the practice of the Courts to require corroboration of such evidence. Queen Empress v Hallu, 7 A 160=A W N 1831 314 It is only under very exceptional circumstances that a conviction based only on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice could be sustained. Hau Khau v Emperor, 57 P L R 1902=5

P R
convic
on wh
v Tyr
three shut crit
of r
in
the dar
truth the accomplices will make out a stronger case against the more favourable to themselves than the real truth will warrant give their evidence under an absolute certainty of impunity

some of them hope, not only to avoid prosecution, but to retain their appointments in the government service Ibid 'This section was not necessary' says Mr Justice Markby "as s 118 makes all persons competent to testify, except those who are disqualified by law." It requires that the evidence phatic statement in the desired to encourage accomplice This, however cannot have been the case, because in s 114 we find given, as one of the presumptions based on the common course of human conduct, the presumption "that an accomplice is unworthy of credit, unless he is corroborated in material particulars" Moreover, no conviction based on the uncorroborated evidence of appeal, except under the charge to the jury on such uncorroborated uncorroborated evidence— would however have been in the Letters Patent 35 M 397, namely — material particulars before it can be acted upon, it is open to the Court to convict upon the uncorroborated evidence if the Court is satisfied that the evidence is true. The Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872), section 133, really intend to lay down that a conviction upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is not illegal where the evidence of an accomplice and Miller JJ answered, in material particulars before it can be acted upon uncorroborated testimony if evidence is true. In the Indian Code law is of 1872, which in witness against it proceeds upon opinion there or renders nugatory or which requires and in all circumstances corroborated in material to the Court to act on perfectly true. The to guard against such (not the Court shall be a general rule) convict on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice (See Best on Evidence, page 182, Chittenden) danger of relying on such evidence is so great that the judges always advise the juries not to convict, or tell them they ought not to convict, unless the story of the accomplice is corroborated.

Queen v Chutterdharee, 5 W R 10 W R 80 Cr ; S.
 63 Cr ; R v Stubbs, 25 L J N V R 80 Cr ; R v Naul Jan, 8 W R 19 : W R 17 Cr ;
R v Mohima Chunder Doss, 15 : 18 W R Cr
 45, 1 Hale P C 303, 301 : r 1377; Rex v.
Rudd, Cowp 331; Rex v Atwood, 3 Leach, C L 538; Durham's Case, 2 Leach
 C L 538

The subject of the credibility of the testimony of an accomplice and the necessity for the corroboration in order to sustain a conviction are involved in some confusion. The proposition that an accused person may be convicted on the evidence of an accomplice alone, and that the testimony of an accomplice must be corroborated, are both sound, though this involves a seeming inconsistency. The proposition that an accomplice must be corroborated does not mean that there must be cumulative or independent testimony to the same evidence in a murder case that a court be-

law which prevents a conviction. There are decisions in which it has been held that the testimony of one accomplice cannot safely be relied on as material corroboration of that of another accomplice for the purpose of these provisions; and that the material corroboration required means corroboration as against individual accused. It has been pointed out that s 133, that a conviction cannot be based on the testimony of facts of evidence which an accomplice's testimony incites has been rebutted. Indeed s 114, Evidence Act itself indicates that it is for the Court to consider whether the maxims given in the illustration do or do not apply to the particular case before it. In King Emperor v Maithar, 26 B 193=3 Bom L R 694, after referring to the Supreme Court (Sup 459) the Court held that the general principle unless corroborated in material particulars. But along with this principle must be borne in mind the qualifications, taken apparently from Peacock C J's judgment, contained in the further illustrations which the Court is directed to consider when determining the facts of the case. The Court cannot do so. The decisions however show the principle on which the Judges have acted. Their successors to consider are applicable to the circumstances in Deo Nandan v Emperor, in considering whether the rule applied to the evidence of an accomplice unless corroborated) applies to any particular case, it must be remembered that all persons coming technically within the category of accomplices cannot be treated as precisely on the same footing and that no general rule on the subject can be laid down. In Elahee Bux's case above referred to an observation was cited of Buller J that the testimony of the approver must be received and left with the jury under such directions and observations from the Court as they think fit.

in mind the qualifications, taken apparently from Peacock C J's judgment, contained in the further illustrations which the Court is directed to consider when determining the facts of the case. The Court cannot do so. The decisions however show the principle on which the Judges have acted. Their successors to consider are applicable to the circumstances in Deo Nandan v Emperor, in considering whether the rule applied to the evidence of an accomplice unless corroborated) applies to any particular case, it must be remembered that all persons coming technically within the category of accomplices cannot be treated as precisely on the same footing and that no general rule on the subject can be laid down. In Elahee Bux's case above referred to an observation was cited of Buller J that the testimony of the approver must be received and left with the jury under such directions and observations from the Court as they think fit.

might be acted on with as much safety as that of any other witness. That we think, is still the law and it would be misdirection either to omit to give the jury a suitable warning or to tell the jury that an approver's evidence against a particular accused has received independent corroboration when this is not in fact the case." Raghunath v Emperor A I R 1933 Pat 96=13 P L T 80.

Under sections 118 and 133 Evidence Act an accomplice is a competent witness. Nga Po Lin v King Emperor, U B R 1906 Evidence 3-5 Cr L J 300, Karomal v Emperor, 81 Ind Crs 881=25 Cr L J 1057. Although it would generally be most unsafe to convict an accused, on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, the evidence thinks that it is his duty to convict.

156, Queen Empress v Maganlal 11 B 143, Queen v Godai 5 W R Cr 1, Empress v Shahu 5 C P L R 1 Cr, Crown v Hossainee, 27 P R 1869. The evidence of an accomplice may be admitted without corroboration, if the witness is not open to the same charge as the accused. In the matter of Rajom Kant 13 W R Cr 24. The evidence of an approver has to be most carefully analysed and considered. It must be so far above suspicion that a Court has no alternative but to accept and act upon it. When the Court believes in the approver's evidence in part, and disbelieves in the evidence altogether. Balkaran v Emperor. The well known rule of criminal law is unless he is corroborated in material particulars" which is formulated in section 114, illustration (b) of the Ev friend of his own, who actually the rule rests, and it is a very sound rule. The rule is not an absolute one. It is evident from section 114 (illustration b) and section 133 of the Evidence Act, but it is only in exceptional cases that the corroboration can be dispensed with. A witness who does not carry very much weight is not sufficient corroboration of an accomplice. Narain Singh v Emperor 12 O L J 499=89 Ind Crs 261=26 Cr L J 1317=A I R 1925 Oudh 715, Emperor v Bhim Rao, 27 Bom L R 190=86 Ind Crs 72. Though illustration (b) of section 114 is the corroboration of an accomplice. Emperor v Emperor A I R 1925 Nag 78, Mannalal v Emperor, A I R 1925 Oudh 1. An accomplice is a competent witness and may be examined on oath. Joseph v Emperor, 3 Rang 11=26 Cr L J 492=85 Ind Crs 236=3 Bur L J 265. Abdul v Emperor, 47 A 39, Balchand v Emperor, L R 197 (Cr). Where first statement requires corroboration from independent sources such corroboration cannot be sought in accomplice's evidence recorded in Sessions Court. Raman Mohan v Emperor, A I R 1933 Cal 146.

Accomplice evidence and corroboration In R v Rudd, 1 Cowp 331 336, Lord Mansfield, after referring to the competency of accomplices as approvers said "Though under this practice they are clearly competent witnesses, this single testimony, alone is seldom of sufficient weight to convict the offenders." "As to it it cannot be clearly Lord Holt, that in 1775) that the principle of accomplices, 2 In 1784, corroborative evidence was not recognized as sufficient to convict the offenders, and it was not until 1811 that the principle was fully established." Let the evidence be taken in the presence of the jury and the judge, and the jury be allowed to exercise their discretion as to the weight to be given to the evidence, and

100, Kashemali v Emperor, 36 C W N 874, Sher Singh v Emperor, 36 C L J 916=140 Ind Cas 19=A I R 1932 Lah 621, Ghena v Emperor, 137 Ind Cas 95=32 P L R 16=A I R 1932 Lah 180, Surendra v Emperor, A I R 1932 Cal 377, Emperor v Alisab, 34 Bom L R 1453, Musnheb v Emperor, A I R 1932 Oudh 321, Kashemali v Emperor, 36 C W N 874

Although in criminal trials it is the settled practice to require other evidence in corroboration of that of an accomplice, yet the manner and extent of the corroboration required are not so clearly defined. Some Judges have deemed it sufficient, if the witness be confirmed in any material part of the case, others have been satisfied with confirmatory evidence as to the corpus delicti only, but others, with more reason, have thought it essential that corroborative proof should be given of the prisoner having actually participated in the offence, and, when several prisoners are tried, that confirmation should be required as to all of them, before all can be safely convicted. R v Stubbs, 23 L J M C 16. This last is undoubtedly now the prevailing opinion, the confirmation of the w no confirmation at a circumstances of the

on the contrary every when he shall afterwards endeavour to fix the crime upon the prisoner. Farler, 8 C & P 106, R v Wilkes, 7 C & P 272, R v Moore, 2 C & P 270, R v Addis, 6 C & P 398, R v Wells, M & M 326, R v Sheenan, Jebb C C 54, R v Carey, Jebb C C 263, Taylor Ev § 969, Green Ev § 381. 'It is a practice' said Lord Abinger in R v Farler 8 C & P 107, 109 "which deserves all the reverence of the law, that Judges have uniformly told juries that they ought not to pay any respect to the testimony of an accomplice unless the accomplice is corroborated in some material circumstances. Now, in my opinion, that corroboration ought to consist in some circumstance that affects the identity of the party accused. A man who has been guilty of a crime himself will always be able to relate the facts of the case, and if the jury, without identifying the persons in were to break open a house and to show th

a man is f impunity

The danger is, that he n detected, he will purchase

Criticising on the above statement of law, Chief Baron Joy in his Evidence of Accomplices said "There are different opinions entertained upon the subject—First some hold that the corroboration required must go to the criminality or identification of every prisoner on trial, accused by the accomplice—lastly, others are of opinion that the points of corroboration are not necessarily confined to the criminality or identification of any of the prisoners, but that it is enough if the testimony of the accomplice is confirmed in such and so many material parts of it as may reasonably induce the jury to credit him as to the entire narrative, and among other parts as to the guilt of the prisoners. The first opinion appears plausible, and the arguments in support of it are specious and are apt to captivate those who do not attentively consider the subject are of the defects vidence is not in its ly to the prisoner

What therefore is required is to throw something, no matter of what nature, into the opposite scale improve the something

y that the o try the be many
mal confidence in the testi ration as to that part of the orrect and accurate manner of the transaction show t

He was cool and collected, that he po is fresh that he was an observer, if we find that in every point in which brought into contact with his they fit into one another and correspond exactly, it is good ground for presuming that his entire narrative is correct. The accomplice, who must be supposed to know the whole details is expected to relate them, and is thus exposed to detection in a variety of ways. There is, therefore, less necessity for breaking the general uniformity and destroying the harmony of the rules of law, in this case, than in the other. Similarly in Tidd's Trial, 33 How St Tr 1183, in charging the jury Garrow B said
 'It may not be unfit to observe to you here that the confirmation to be desired to an accomplice is not a repetition by others of the whole story of the accomplice and confirmation of every part of it, that would be either impossible or unnecessary and absurd and therefore you are to look to the circumstances to see whether there are such a number of important facts confirmed as to give you reason to be persuaded that the main body of the story is correct. You are rich of you, to ask yourself this question Now that I have heard the accomplice and have heard other circumstances which are said to confirm the story he has told does he appear to me to be so confirmed by unimpeachable evidence as to some of the persons affected by his story or with respect to some of the facts stated by him, as to afford me good ground
 ers or other fa
 upon the wh
 such as I may 487, R v B
 a rule of law
 just as much prudent perso
 Express 14
 an accomplice
 founded on dence the Cor
 corroborated
 error of law, b circumstances
 24 Cr L J
 3 734 Emper
 place in the Emper
 follow
 other accor
 suspi
 about the si
 dence
 ed m
 the eviden ments of tests but is a truth becomes Rattan D
 nothing
 corroborated
 so There is partial and is corrobora tion Evid
 the accused words, it r particulars
 hand there:

- suspi
 affects in other material
 had m orrobo-

Sureshchandra v. Emperor, 47 C L J
Latafat Hossain v Emperor, 33 C W N
Emperor, 48 C L J 481; Narain v

Emperor, 107 Ind Cas 97=29 Cr L J 209

Corroboration as regards the identity of the prisoner In England originally there was no necessity of specific corroboration as regards the accused's identity R v Don and 99 Han C L J 215, 1827. R v Rirkelt and Brady, R & R 252 and finally prevailed both of the circumstances of th Cr E 152, see also R v Sheehan, Jebb 54, R v Addis, 6 C & P 388, R v Webb 5 C & P 595, R v Wilkes, 7 C. & P 272, 273, R v Parler, 8 C & P 106; R v Kelsey, 3 Lew Cr C 45, R v Dyle 8 C & P 261, R v Bullett, 8 C & P 722, R v Stubbs, 7 Cox Cr 48, 49, MP Clory v Wright, 10 Ir C L 514, 521, Everest's Case, 2 Cr App 130, Warren's Case, 2 Cr App 194 In Everest's Case supra, it was held that corroboration must be as regards 'some particular which goes to implicate the accused' But in Wilson's Case, 6 Cr App 125 the Court said 'It must not be supposed that corroboration is required amounting to independent evidence implicating the accused' In Blatherwick's Case, 6 Cr App 281, the Court said "Everest's Case, goes too far Wilson's Case is the correct statement of the law" See also Watson's Case, 8 Cr App 249 In Cohen's Case, 10 Cr App 91, 101 Reading L C J said "It is sufficient to say that Everest's Case and Wilson's Case seem to us to lay down the right principle" Again in Threlfall's Case, 10 Cr App 112, 117, the to decide whether Everest's of opinion has arisen in the main in reference to the question whether the corroborative evidence must connect the accused with the crime The rule of practice -g a person What is ory of the only in-

 are which does not connect the accused with it, or if the only independent evidence relates to the identity of the borative evidence?
 imply that it may be

it arduu
 Judge who conviction depends is worthy Lench
 where it
 on the jury
 C 183, per
 After ext
 o the con
 in Key v
 that the stances of iron does
 he crime,
 is confr-
 iv of the sult of
 is been

mation as to a material circum-accused in relation to the crime twenty five years practice, it was 1876) (7 Cr & P 272) Baron

 "advise juries to require, is a consideration to the of guilt on the particular person charged. You may I give contact on the evidence of an accomplice only if you can safely rely on his testimony, but I advise juries never reference of law, that Judges have uniformly told juries that they ought not to put any weight to the testimony of an accomplice, unless the accomplice is corroborated in some material circumstance. Now in my opinion, that corroboration ought to consist in some circumstance that affects the identity of the party accused. A man who has been guilty of a crime himself will always be able to relate the facts of the crime, and if the confirmation be only on the truth of that fact, without satisfying the jury that it is really no corroboration at all. It would not at all tend to show that the party accused participated in it. In J & D's (5 Cr & P 261) John Gurney and Albion in some cases in direct, it has been held that you will find that in the majority of recent cases it is laid down that the confirmation should be in some matter which goes to connect the prisoner with the transaction. In R v Bullett (8 Cr & P 732) the prisoner was indicted for receiving stolen sheep. The evidence consisted of the statement of an accomplice and to confirm it it was proved that a quantity of mutton or wool in size with the sheep stolen was found in the prisoner's house. John Patterson said: If the confirmation had merely gone to the extent of corroborating the accomplice as to matters connected with himself only, it would not have been sufficient. But here we have a great deal more, we have a quantity of mutton found in the house in which the prisoner resides, and that I think is such a confirmation of the accomplice's evidence as I must leave to the jury.

The effect of the view expressed later by Duon Parke in Reg v Stall, 25 L J M C 16 = D R C C 55, and shew that in his time, although there had been doubt in the past the law as formulated by him was accepted as the correct law to be the law to the time of passing of the judgment to the present day.

Corroboration must be independent testimony which connects the accused by connecting or tending to connect him with the crime. In other words which confirms in some way the crime has been committed to determine the nature whether the case falls within the rule of practice at common law or within that class of offences for which corroboration is required by statute. The language of the statute 'implies the accused' compendiously incorporates the test applied to the

the evidence which would be required as corroboration except to say that the story of the accomplice that the accused committed the crime is true, not merely that the crime has been committed but that it was committed by the accused.

The corroborating
 the crime it is sufficient connection with the crime in Reg v Bullett (8 Cr & P 732) which are offences, nearest,
 the

call for some explanation, and it is because they do not always appear to be to the same effect that this Court was especially constituted in order that we might lay down rules for future guidance.

In Reg v Evers, 2 Cr App R 130, the Court said: 'The rule has long been established that the Judge should tell the jury to acquit the prisoner if the only evidence against him is that of an accomplice, unless that evidence is corroborated in some particular which goes to implicate the accused.'
 We think 'tell the jury to acquit' should read 'warn the jury of the danger of rated as regards every single statement Sureshchandra v. Emperor, 47 C L J 471 = A I R 1928 Cal 309, see also Latafat Hossain v. Emperor, 33 C W N 58 = A I R 1928 Cal 745, Kailash v. Emperor, 48 C L J 481; Narain v. Emperor, 107 Ind Crs 97 = 29 Cr L J 209

Corroboration as regards the identity of the prisoner In England originally there was no necessity of specific corroboration as regards the accused's identity R v Despard, 28 How St Tr 346, 487; R v Burdett and Brady, R & R 252 and finally prevailed the circumstances of the case, 172, see also R v St 5 C & P 595, R v Willes, 7 C. & P 272, 273, R v Farler, 8 C & P 106, R v Kelsey, 3 Lew Cr C 45, R v Dole, 8 C & P 261, R v Bullett, 8 C & P 722, R v Stubbs, 7 Cox Cr 48, 49, St Clary v Wright, 10 Ir C L 514, 521. Erce's Case 2 Cr App 130, Warren's Case, 2 Cr App 191 In Erce's Case supra, it was held that corroboration must be as regards "some particular which goes to implicate the accused" But in Wilson's Case, 6 Cr App 125 the Court said "It amounting to independent evidence" Wilson's Case, 6 Cr App 281, Wilson's Case is the correct statement of the law" See also Watson's Case, 8 Cr App 249 In Cohen's Case, 10 Cr App 91, 101 Reading L C J said "It is sufficient to say that Erce's Case and Wilson's Case seem to us to lay down the right principle" Again in Threlfall's Case, 10 Cr App 112, 117, the same learned Judge said "Without attempting to decide whether Erce's Case or Wilson's Case But in R v Will's (19 no intention (in R v C and R v Blatherwick"

In 28, the same learned Judge however reviewing the law said, "The question of opinion has arisen in the main in reference to the question whether the corroborative evidence must connect the accused with the crime The rule of practice

mation as to a material circumstance occurred in relation to the crime twenty five years practice, it was

What is only the time which it relates to which were of a person he case is very not argued by Judge who a conviction does tend to rely on it as a per ex con ed in Fe v ly that the instance of Baron does the crime. ere is confir of the suit of 13 been

Nature and extent of corroboration "A confirmation does not mean that there should be independent or his testimony would be u Justice Maule at p. 171. Indeed be confirmed in every detail o in the case, it would be merely Again, the corroboration must i place and therefore one accomplice's evidence is not corroborative of the testimony of another accomplice. Rex v. Noakes 5 Car & P 326" Per Lord Pending J in Rex v. Barker & Ellis 86 L. J. K. II 29 (73) So long established a rule of law
here.

merely because it proceeds upon the theory of an accomplice. The Courts should give proper effect to the provisions of section 111, illustration (b). The rule in section 111, illustration (b) and that in section 133 are part of one subject and both are found in most of the great judgments, and neither section is to be ignored in the exercise of judicial discretion. The illustration (b) to section 111 is the rule, and when it is departed from, the Court should show, or it should appear that, the circumstances justify the exceptional treatment of the case. Queen Empress v Chagan Dayaram 11 B 331. Although a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the evidence of an accomplice, the evidence of an accomplice is not sufficient to convict a person, who is an actual perpetrator with the principal offender. In dealing with the question what amount of corroboration is required in the case of testimony given by an accomplice the Court must exercise careful discrimination and look at all the surrounding circumstances in order to arrive at a conclusion whether the facts deposed to by the person alleged to be an accomplice are borne out by those circumstances, or whether the circumstances are of such a nature that the evidence purporting to be given by the alleged accomplice should be supported in essential and material particulars by evidence abundant as to the facts deposed to by that accomplice. Kamala Prasad v Sital Prasad, 28 C 339=5 C W N 517. The evidence of a pardoned accomplice taken with the statements of unpardoned co-prisoners is not sufficient by itself to warrant the conviction of those who never confessed. Queen Empress v Phagya Rat Un Cr C 750. Where material discrepancies occur between the statements of the accomplice and the statements of the Police and their depositions in the case is no corroboration and consequently the conviction is not valid. Crown, 36 P W R 1910 Cr = 11 Ind C 100. The rule laid down in illustration (b) to section 111 applies to all persons, who technically come within the definition of an accomplice.
 case will effect its application. Deonandan v Empero 11 Ind C 100. In cases where the act of the presumption enacted in s 111
 6 S L R 106=17 Ind C 100.
Malhar, 26 B 192=2 P W R 1910 Cr = 11 Ind C 100.
 There is no evidence of an accomplice in Hannun v
 accomplice, the course of practice not to convict an accused person on the uncorroborated testimony of an approver, and the corroboration ought to consist, in some circumstances, in the testimony of a person who is not an accomplice. Byr Krishna, 6 Bom L R 117. The testimony of an accomplice is not sufficient to convict the accused of an offence, unless it is corroborated by independent evidence to be that which is derived from unimpeachable or independent evidence

3. as distinguished from that derived from the earlier statements of the accomplice or the statements of other accomplices Ibid per Chatterjee J
There must be corroborative evidence spoken
Cr C convict who are no better than accomplices if this evidence is not corroborated in material respects by other independent evidence in the case Jogendra Nath v Sangar Das 2 C W N 55

The rule of evidence contained in s 133 and in s 114 (b) of the Evidence Act amounts to nothing more than a direction to all Judges and Magistrates that a fact cannot reasonably be held proved within the meaning of section 3 if there be no other evidence of it than the statement of an uncorroborated accomplice. Crown v Ramchand, 6 S L R 195-11 Cr L J 262 19 Ind Cas 531 See also s 114 of the Evidence Act enacts a rule of presumption, and read with s 4 of the Act it indicates that this is not a hard and fast presumption inculcated by rebuttal & presumptio juris et de jure Emperor v Shumoo 7 Bom L R 93 3 Cr L J, 33

Prior to the Evidence Act, the rule not of law but of practice was that a conviction could not be founded on the unsupported evidence of an accomplice that the accused person's statement was no evidence against a fellow prisoner or one tried jointly with the person making the statement and that such statement was only admissible in evidence when made in the witness box. Crown v Nihal Singh, 31 P R 1866 Cr, Queen v Jumeemulla 124 P R 1867 Cr, Queen v Boora 125 P R 1866 Cr, Deva v Crown, 27 P R 1867 Cr, Queen v Jairam 28 P R 1867 Cr, Crown v Ruheemce, 35 P R 1867 Cr, Queen v Godas 5 W R Cr 11, Crown v Hooraince 27 P R 1869, Empress v Shaker 5 C P L R 1 Cr. But where a Magistrate treated a mere witness as an accomplice and granted him conditional pardon his evidence does not require corroboration. Reg v Patechand, 5 B H C Cr 85. In ordinary cases the uncorroborated testimony of an approver is not sufficient to convict a person charged with an offence. Queen v Fulu 3 B L R A Cr 66, Queen v Iyer 3 W R Cr 8, Queen v Nawab Jan 8 W R Cr 19, Queen v Jamsagar 8 W R Cr 57, Queen v Chirag 12 W R Cr 5, Queen Empress v Shalin 11 Cr L J 782, Queen Empress v Bpin, 20 C 970, Naragadu v Emperor, 13 Cr L J 240-10 Ind Cas 69, Habla v King Emperor, 4 Ind Cas 531-12 C 118-11 Cr L J 71, Queen v Kalla Chand, 11 W R Cr 21. It is not safe to convict upon the uncorroborated evidence of an approver and the testimony of his wife who is obviously interested in supporting his story which has procured pardon cannot be regarded as independent corroboration of the approver's evidence. Sullan v Emperor, 33 P L R 13. Evidence in corroboration need not be direct. It may be circumstantial evidence. Kunwar v Emperor, A I R 1032 Oudh 86-9 O W N 1136.

Although s 114 illustration (b) provides that a Court may presume that the evidence of an accomplice is unworthy of credit, unless corroborated, it is not 'must' and no decision of Court can make it 'must'. Therefore in the case of all that has been said to the contrary in law, the evidence of an accomplice stands on the same footing as any other evidence. The Court is not obliged to hold that he is unworthy to consider after taking into consideration all the circumstances—one of which being that he is an accomplice—whether it is or does not rely on the evidence. To entirely rule out the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice might in many cases lead to miscarriage of justice. Imperial v Mathews, A I R 1929 Cal 322.

Judge's duty in charging the jury. In Rex v Ballewille (1916) 2 K P 658-86 L J K B 28 Lord Reading in delivering the judgment of the Court said "There is no doubt that the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice is admissible in law—see Rex v Atwood, 1 Lech C C 161. But it is a dangerous rule of practice at common law for the Judge to warn the jury of the danger of convicting a prisoner on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice or accomplices, and in the discretion of the Judge to advise them not to convict upon such evidence, but the Judge should point out to jury that it is within their legal province to convict upon such unconfirmed evidence—Reg v

L. J. M. C. 10 and Memorandum, In re L. J. M. C. 193—(1901) 2 Q. B. 115. This rule of practice has become virtually equivalent to a rule of law; and since the Court of Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, 17 Edw. 7 C. (23), came into operation this Court has held that in the absence of such a warning by the Judge the conviction must be quashed—Per v. L. J. K. B. 1013—(1903) 2 K. B. 618. If after the proper caution by the Judge the jury nevertheless convict the prisoner, this Court will not quash the conviction merely upon the ground that the accomplice's testimony was uncorroborated. It can but rarely happen that the jury would convict in such circumstances. In considering whether or not the conviction should stand this Court will review all the facts of the case and will bear in mind that the jury had the opportunity of hearing and seeing the witness when giving their testimony. As the rule of practice at common law was founded originally upon the exercise of the discretion of the Judge at the trial and moreover as it is anomalous in its nature, it is much to be regretted that it requires confirmation of the testimony of a competent witness, it is not surprising that it has led to the differences of opinion as to the nature and extent of the corroboration required, although there are propositions of law applicable to corroboration which are beyond controversy. The Legislature has sought to lay down in section 114 of the Evidence Act, the rule that the testimony of an accomplice is unworthy of credit so far as it implicates an accused person unless it is corroborated in material particulars in respect of that person, and it is the duty of a Court which has to deal with an accomplice's testimony to consider whether it is or is not, and in a case tried by jury, to lay the principle relating to the reception of such evidence before the jury. See Malabar, 21 W. R. Cr. 69. The necessary (1) that there is no rule of law prohibiting the conviction of an offender upon the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, (2) that, as a general rule of practice, it is considered unsafe to convict upon such evidence, and (3) to point out any circumstances in the particular case which, in the opinion of the Judge afford a sufficient reason for relying upon the evidence. 2 Weir 708—4 M. H. C. Vol. 459. Where the evidence of an accomplice is uncorroborated, the correct practice requires the Judge not merely to tell the jury that it is unusual to convict on such evidence but also to tell them that it is unsafe, and contrary both to prudence and practice to do so. But his omission to state the above particulars does not amount to an error in law. Per v. Gauhati 6 B. H. C. Cr. 57, see also In re Palaziam 2 Weir 796. If the jury found a prisoner guilty on the uncorroborated evidence of an approver after the Judge in his summing up had pointed out to them the desirability under the circumstances of such corroboration the High Court on appeal would return to set aside the conviction. Queen v. Mahima 6 B. L. R. App. 108 10 W. R. Cr. 37. But where a Session Judge has failed to warn a jury that it is unsafe to convict merely upon the testimony of the approver, and where the Judge has not properly explained to the jury the law and practice regarding such cases there is a misdirection of a very serious nature. Malabar v. Emperor 12 M. H. C. In his charge to the jury should the approver was given on condition that it will be an error in summing up acting upon the uncorroborated evidence of the accomplice was corroborated by a fact which did not amount to my corroboration at all. Jinnabhai v. Emperor, 29 C. 782—6 C. W. N. 553. The evidence of an approver should not be believed without material corroboration and in order to see whether there is such a corroboration it is the duty of the Court to scrutinize and marshal out very carefully the proof relating thereto. Where this duty has not been properly performed by the lower Court the High Court will interfere on the revision side and set aside and set aside and set aside. Malabar v. Emperor, 9 Ind. 1911, Queen v. Elahce 57 Ind. Cas. 576—29 Cr. L. J. 311—A.

as distinguished from that derived from the earlier statements of the accomplice or the statements of other accomplices. Ibid per Chatterjee 171. There must be corroborative evidence not only as to the identity of the person spoken of as the accused but also as to the corpus delicti. Reg v Chatur, 171 Cr C 102; Reg v Nankulhan, Rat Un Cr C 102. A person cannot be convicted upon the evidence of witnesses who are no better than accomplices. This evidence is not corroborated in material respects by other independent evidence in the case. Jogendra Nath v Sanjay Gao, 2 C W N 55.

133 and in s 114 (b) of the Evidence Act a direction to all Judges and Magistrates to be proved within the meaning of section 133 than the statement of an unreliable witness. Crown v Ramchand, 6 S L R 195 = 14 Cr L J 262 = 19 Ind Cas 531. Section 114 of the Evidence Act enacts a rule of presumption, and reading s 4 of the Act it indicates that this is not a hard and fast presumption incapable of rebuttal, a presumptio juris et de jure. Emperor v Shrinivas, 7 Bom L R 153 3 Cr L J 33.

Prior to the Evidence Act, the rule not of law, but of practice was that a conviction could not be founded on the unsupported evidence of an accomplice that the accused person's statement was no evidence against a fellow prisoner or one tried jointly with the person making the statement and that such statement was only admissible in evidence when made in the witness box. Cr v Nihal Singh, 31 P R 1866 Cr, Queen v Jameemata 121 P R 1866 Cr, Queen v Boora, 125 P R 1866 Cr, Deva v Crown, 27 P R 1867 Cr, Crown v Jaram, 28 P R 1867 Cr, Crown v Rukmensee, 33 P R 1867 Cr, Queen v Godai 5 W R Cr 11, Crown v Hoorainee, 27 P R 1869, Empress v Shrinivas 5 C P L R 1 Cr. But where a Magistrate treated a mere witness as an accomplice and granted him conditional pardon his evidence does not require corroboration. Reg v Fatchchand 5 B H C Cr 85. In ordinary cases the uncorroborated testimony of an approver is not sufficient to convict a person charged with an offence. Queen v Palsi, 3 B L R A Cr 6, Queen v Palsi 9 W R Cr 11, Queen v Nawab Jan 8 W R Cr 19, Queen v Humagar, 6 W R Cr 57, Queen v Chirag 12 W R Cr 5, Queen Empress v Shrinivas Rat Un Cr C 814, Reg v Chatur 171 Cr C 102; Jamiruddin v Emperor, 12 Cr L J 782; Queen Empress v Bipin, 20 C 970, Aajagadu v Emperor, 12 Cr L J 240 = 10 Ind Cas 111 = 12 O C 118 = 11 Cr L J 71, Q. It is not sufficient to convict upon the evidence of an accomplice and the testimony of his wife who is obviously interested in supporting his story which has been procured by a pardon cannot be regarded as independent corroboration of the approver's evidence. Sultan v Emperor, 33 P L R 13. Evidence in corroboration need not be direct. It may be circumstantial evidence. Annur v Emperor, A L R 1932 Oudh 80 = 9 O W N 1136.

Although s 111, illustration (b) provides that a Court may presume that the evidence of an accomplice is unworthy and is not 'must' and no decision of Court can be based on all that has been said to the contrary, it stands on the same footing as any other evidence and the Judge should hold that he is unworthy to consider after taking into consideration whether it does or does not corroborate the evidence. Emperor v Annur 1932 Oudh 80 = 9 O W N 1136.

been a rule of practice at common law for the Judge to be careful of convicting a prisoner on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice or accomplices, and in the discretion of the Judge to advise them not to convict upon such evidence; but the Judge should point out to jury that it is within their legal province to convict upon such unconfirmed evidence. Reg v Shrinivas in England as far back as the 10th December 1662, after conference with all the Judges." Then quoting extracts from Sir Mithew Hale's Pleas of the Crown, King v Attwood, 1 Leach Cr C 111, King v Jones, 2 Camp Rep 131 and from King v Durham, 1 Leach Cr C 174, he continued: "The law as above laid down that a conviction is legal, though supported by uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice has been admitted by Lord Denham in Rex v Hastings and another, 7 C & P 112, by Baron Almonson in Rex v Wilkie, 7 C & P 272; and by many other . . . ruled by the Court of Criminal Appeal . . . of England, therefore, upon this . . . America is the same, and in that country, where in most of the states new trials are granted . . . the verdicts were . . .

Act II . . . by whom the evidence is given . . . desired corroboration . . . not the intention of the Act to render inadmissible any evidence, which but for the Act, would be admissible . . . lessen the legal effect of the evidence . . . in answering the question may be . . . places."

Amount of corroboration. A conviction based on the totally uncorroborated story of an accomplice is bad in law. Queen Empress v Shudlungappa, Rat Un Cr C 841, Crown v Raja Mihar, 71 P R 1866 Cr, Crown v Motum, 11 P R 1867 Cr, Ator v Queen Empress U B R, (1892-1899) Vol 1, 103. An approver's evidence cannot be accepted unless it is corroborated in material particulars by other independent evidence. Lad Khan v Crown, 19 P W R 1912 Cr = 13 Ind Crs 938 = 13 Cr L J 182 = 47 P L R 1912, Queen Empress v Krishna Dhat, 10 B 319, P S Narayan v Emperor, (1914) M W N 263 = 15 Cr L J 117 = 24 Ind Crs 153. Not only as to the persons spoken of by an accomplice must there be corroboration, but there must be some prima facie direction. Reg v Chatur, Rat Un Cr C 841. The evidence of two or more accomplices requires corroboration equally with the testimony of one. Queen v Dwarika, 5 W R Cr 18 = 1 Ind Jur N S 100, Queen Empress v Dhonda, Rat Un Cr C 810, Queen Empress v Kunjan Menan, 1 V L J 397, Queen Empress v Shudlungappa, Rat Un Cr C 841. The evidence of two or more accomplices requires corroboration equally with the testimony of one. Queen v Dwarika, 5 W R Cr 18 = 1 Ind Jur N S 100, Queen Empress v Shudlungappa, Rat Un Cr C 841, Nga Paw v Q E, L B R (1872 1892) 51. An accomplice is a competent witness and there is no absolute rule of law which enacts that the conviction on the evidence of an accomplice is bad, but there is an established practice, founded on the judicial experience of generations, which requires corroboration by some untainted witness. . . .

only to it nting not me Sias
Cas 174
oboration
practice

more persons having been concerned should be confirmed, not only as to the instances of the case, but also as to the identity of the prisoners, and any prisoner as to whom his testimony is not supported should be acquitted. Rex v Imani Palad, 3 B H C Cr 57. In dealing with the question what amount of corroboration is required in the case of testimony given by an accomplice, the Court must exercise careful discrimination and look at all the surrounding circumstances in order to arrive at a conclusion, whether the facts deposed to

by the person alleged to be an accomplice are borne out by those circumstances or whether the circumstances are of such a nature that the evidence purporting to be given by the alleged accomplice should be supported in essential and material particulars by evidence abunde as to the facts deposed to by that accomplice. The amount of criminality is a matter for consideration, and when a person is only an accomplice by implication or in a secondary sense his evidence does not require the same amount of corroboration as that of a person who is an actual perpetrator with the principal offender. Although a conviction is not illegal, merely, because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, the evidence of an accomplice, ordinarily speaking, should be corroborated in material particulars, and such evidence should be accepted with a great deal of caution and scrutiny. Kamali Prasad v Sital Prasad, 5 C. W. N. 517-28 C. 339. The corroboration of the required, should be such corroboration in a prudent man, on the consideration of that the evidence is true, not only as to the but also so far as it affects each person. Srinivas Krishna, 7 Bom. L. R. 269-3 Cr. 100, 10 C. W. N. 962-1 Cr. L. J. 11-33 C. by the accomplice himself, though consistent, are insufficient for the corroboration. The evidence requisite for the corroboration must proceed from an independent and reliable source. Peg v Malapa Bin, 11 B. H. C. A. C. 196. The confession of one of the accomplices against the accomplice is not sufficient. Heikh Sheru v Emperor, 81 W. R. Cr. 43, Hakam Singh v Emperor, A. I. R. 1929 Lih. 850-1929 Cr. C. 626, Queen v Hamsaran, 8 A. 306-A. W. N. 1885, 311, Queen v Durrani, 5 W. R. Cr. 18, Mahomed Usuf v Emperor, 114 Ind. Cas. 457-A. I. R. 1909 Nag. 215.

The rule laid down in s. 111, illustration (b) corresponds with the rule observed in England. Reg v Ramasami, 1 M. 391-2 Weir 799. It is unsafe to convict a person on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. Queen Empress v Indad, 8 A. 120-A. W. N. 1886, 7, Maung Lay v Emperor, 77 Ind. Cas. 429. The initial presumption is that the evidence of accomplices is only where there are any special circumstances and leave no reasonable doubt as to the belief. Nja Wa v King Emperor, 1 U.

The law as expressed in ss. 114(b) and 133 of the Evidence Act is in no respect different from the law of England, but simply reproduces a rule of practice viz., that a conviction based on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is not illegal, that is, it is not unlawful. But experience teaches that it is not safe to rely upon the evidence of an accomplice, unless it is corroborated, and hence, it is the practice of the Judges, both in England and in India, when sitting alone, to guard their minds carefully against acting upon such evidence when uncorroborated and, when trying a case with a jury, to warn them that such a course is unsafe. Not only it is necessary that evidence should be corroborated in material particulars but the corroboration should extend to the identity of the accused person. There must be corroboration independent of the accomplice or of the accomplice and the confessing prisoner, to show that the party accused was actually engaged directly in the commission of the crime charged against him. It is of no value and makes no difference if there are two accomplices. A second accomplice does not improve the position of the first, nor does the fact that there are two make it unnecessary that both should be corroborated. The accomplices must be corroborated not only as to one, but as to all of the persons affected by the evidence; corroboration of his evidence as to one prisoner would not justify his evidence against another being accepted without corroboration. Queen v Empress Ram Saran, 8 A. 306-A. W. N. 1885, 311; Emperor v Jamal, 11 C. W. N. 536. If some part of his evidence is satisfactorily corroborated, the

is good ground for believing him in other parts in which there is no corroboration S. 13 Queen Empress v Kunjan Menon, 1 M L J 397 (I. B)

can'tio n great deal of
 in ord to swear falsely is the hardly applies own tes y his fastens roby
 shows a at ha
 L J. 33 Cr.

When . . .
 testifies an sidered as boration.
 unless cor
 worthy of belief, applies to persons to whom a pardon has been tendered on condition of their making a full disclosure of all the circumstances of the crime in which they profess themselves to have been participants and subject to the penalty of being themselves placed upon their trial, if, in the opinion of the Court, they have spoken falsely or kept back anything important It does not apply to a cr
 upon the evide
 and have unc
 share in it T
 made by them at the time of their trial, is good corroborative evidence under s.
 157 of the Evidence Act Empress v Tandra Dhal, 4 C P. L R 1

As regard
 the testimony
 circumstances
 Facts, which
 the offence
 the w portio
 the accomplice

, but
 sons,
 V N
 Cas
 1-A
Reg v Badhu, 1 B 475.
 must be corroboration
 with the offence alleged Ind Cas 636 Section
 133 or the Evidence Act contains the rule of law, section 114, illustration (b) being merely a sort of guidance to assist the Courts It is impossible to lay down any rule as to what extent an accomplice must be corrob
 with suspic
 shift guilt
 perjury on occasion, (iii) because he hopes for pardon, or has secured it and so favours the prosecution Barhat Ali v Crown, 2 P R 1917 Cr = 36 Ind Cas.
 66, Nand Singh v Crown, 9 P W R. 1917 Cr

No hard and fast rule approver's evidence be rejected on that point it happens to be of all other facts and consider aside as worthless unless it worthy character Bichunta v I 833; see also Balmokund v Cr show that the co accused or some of them approver at or in the vicinity of the places of commi
 v The co-accu

more reliable witness than the accomplice who is examined under conditional pardon, although proper corroboration is necessary in cases of both Sudam Chandra v Emperor, A I R 1933 Cal 148

A conviction based on the uncorroborated testimony of an approver is illegal. Gurdit Singh v Crown, 52 P L R 1918=44 Ind Crs 967=19 Cr L J 439, Pan Gang v Emperor, 42 Ind Crs 1002=19 Cr L J 47

The retracted confession of an accused person may be sufficient corroboration of the approver's story as against himself but not against a co accused. Palia v Emperor 12 P W R Cr 1949=49 Ind Crs 604=20 Cr L J 188, In re Damur Veerabhadra, 12 L W 385=61 Ind Cas 528

The approver's evidence is :
it may be of belief for various and unless the Judge is satisfied corroborated in some material and

L T 757 Where the corroboration was the recovery of certain articles alleged to be some of the articles stolen and subsequently produced from the house of the accused, his house was into the were traces of error

The approver referred to as appellants to join in the decoy and bearing consecutive number was strong corroboration of the approver's story as to the appellants having accompanied him to the scene of the occurrence Hakim v Emperor, 1923 Lah 163

The production of stolen property by an accused person even from a place which is not in his own possession may be accepted as material corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice who has deposed that the accused joined him in committing the burglary or theft Mahomed v Emperor, 111 Ind Cas 417=29 Cr L J 863

with a 29 L
of cri

illegally scrutinized Fred Latimer
all known rule
less he is corro
not onal cases oration of
is accused amstantial
In 1 Cas

evidence of their connection with the crime. Lah 111 Ind Cas 423=30 Cr L J 922=A I R 1929 Oudh 321 The mere presence of a person in the house is not a corroboration Abou v Emperor 1929 M W N 698 An approver is unworthy of credit unless corroborated in material particulars. Where the only witness who corroborated him was his son aged 7 years who parrot like repeated what he had been tutored to say, it is unsafe to convict the accused on such evidence. Meher Singh v Crown, 11 Lah L J 223=30 P L R 422=A I R 1929 Lah 287

Corroboration is not necessary in cases of belief in evidence that the accused

evidence Hilari
R 421,
borat on each case
of su-
29 Lah

In deciding a criminal case with reference to the evidence of an accomplice Court must take into consideration the maxim that it is unsafe to convict a person upon the evidence of an accomplice unless he is corroborated in material particulars both as to the circumstances of the offence and the identity of the person whom he implicates. Lady Mohar v Emperor, 111 Ind Cas 623-A. I. 1929 Nag 222-30 Cr L J 331 see also Mahomed v Emperor, 114 Ind Cas 457-30 Cr L J 311-A I II 1929 Nag 215, Sundaram v Emperor, 9 M W N 791, Mahomed Usuf v Emperor, 111 Ind Cas 457-30 Cr L J 311-A I R 1929 Nag 215; Musa v Emperor 114 Ind Cas 609-A I R 9 Nag 233-30 Cr L J 333, Hakam Singh v Emperor A I R 1929 Lah 1, Monohor v Emperor, A I R 1930 Cal 430, Sheo Bashi v Emperor, A. I. 1930 Pat 161

It is the main duty of the prosecution to bring the accomplice character of evidence to the notice of the Court and then invite it to believe it by reference to the corroborative evidence on record. Mahomed Usuf v Emperor, Ind Cas. 457-30 Cr L J 311-A I R 1929 Nag 215. The foremost essential condition for accepting the approver's statement is that it must be trustworthy statement. Lodys v Emperor, 111 Ind Cas 623-30 Cr L J 331-A I 1929 Nag 222

Rejection of Accomplice evidence: If the evidence of an approver is rejected, it must be discarded as a whole and the defence cannot have argument, any more than the prosecution. Sheo Bashi v Emperor, 11 Pat L T 1-A I R 1930 Pat 164

134 No particular number of witnesses shall in any case be required for the proof of any fact.

Principle "And after all, what is it worth?" said Jeremy Bentham in his Elements of Judicial Evidence B IX, pt VI C 1 § 1, 'In the multitude of witnesses says the proverb, there is safety, in the multitude of witnesses there may be some sort of safety but nothing more; it is by weight, full as much as by tale, that witnesses are to be judged. Pundere non numero From numbers (by weight)'. -

former -
a nur -
is nar -
their agreement with other matters of fact too notorious to stand in need of corroboration - single witness (especially if situation and character be taken into account) will be enough - instances, a crowd of witnesses - and wanting in the balance - be bar whose experience is opposed to the testimony has been of regard to mendacity) f -

I do not mean to say that (as it is said to be) to insinuate) that the position of a single witness against perjury No security, the greater that security, (be it or less), is not so necessary as that you should pay so great a price for it as you do pay, and must pay by the license you thereby grant to commit the crime in the presence and view of two witnesses. I make assertion against this by way of which cause a man to be taken to liberty. This is a question of liberty? What is the meaning of it? What my own meaning is?

more reliable witness than the accomplice who is examined under conditions of pardon, although proper corroboration is necessary in cases of both Sudas Chandra v Emperor, A I R 1933 Cal 148

A conviction based on the uncorroborated testimony of an approver is illegal Gurdi Singh v Crown, 52 P L R 1918=44 Ind Cas 967=19 Cr L J 439, Pan Gang v Emperor, 42 Ind Cas 1002=19 Cr L J 47

The retracted confession of an accused person may be sufficient corroboration of the approver's story as against himself but not against a co accused Pallia v Emperor, 12 P W R Cr 1949=49 Ind Cas 601=20 Cr L J 189 In re Damur Veerabada, 12 L W 385=61 Ind Cas 528

The approver's evidence is in itself of little weight. It may be of belief for various reasons. The approver taken at the end of the trial v Emperor, 56 Ind Cas 667=21 Cr L J 507, see also Kalia v Emperor, Lah L J 296. An accused cannot be convicted unless the Judge is satisfied that the evidence of the accomplice was corroborated in some material and satisfactory manner Dhanu v Emperor, 2 Pat L T 757. Where the corroboration was the recovery of certain articles, alleged to be some of the articles stolen and subsequently produced from the house of the accused, his house was searched and the articles were found. Eaching the

int
were ances
peror

The approver referred to a story by one A who invited him along with the story told by the approver. They were seen with the approver. The possession of the three articles was strong evidence.

corroboration of the approver's story as to his presence at the scene of the occurrence Hakim

The production of stolen property by an accused person even from a place which is not in his own possession may be accepted as material corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice who has deposed that the accused joined him in committing the burglary or theft Mahomed v Emperor, 111 Ind Cas 447=29 Cr L J 863

The testimony of a proffered accomplice requires to be carefully scrutinized with anxious search for possible corroboration Macdonald v Fred Latimer, 29 L W 155=112 Ind Cas 876=A I R 1929 P C 15. The well known rule is that the evidence of an accomplice is of little weight unless it is corroborated by other evidence.

evidence of their connection with the crime Lah v Emperor, 423=30 Cr L J 922=A I R 1929 Oudh 321. The mere presence of a person is not sufficient evidence of his guilt.

1929 M W N 293. An accused person's son aged 7 years who is unable to convict the accused is unsafe to convict the accused. Lah L J 223=30 P L including the character and antecedents of the approver and the degree of suspicion attached to his evidence Hakim Singh v Emperor, A I R 1929 Lah 860. The degree of suspicion attached to his evidence is a material consideration. Hakim Singh v Emperor, 111 Ind Cas 447=29 Cr L J 863. The degree of suspicion attached to his evidence is a material consideration. Hakim Singh v Emperor, 111 Ind Cas 447=29 Cr L J 863.

he may safely violate any engagement, however solemn, contracted under similar circumstances 2 Artificial rules of this kind hold out a temptation to the subornation of perjury, in order to obtain the means of complying with them 3 They produce a mischievous effect on the tribunal by their natural tendency to react on the human mind, and they thus create a system of mechanical decision dependent on the number of persons.

do
ag
cor
proceed on intelligence and credit, and not on the number of the witnesses examined or documents produced in evidence—is a just one, there are cases where, from motives of public policy, it has been wisely ordained otherwise Best & §§ 597 601; Wigmore § 2033

"What we must conclude, then, is that our whole presumption should be against any specific rule requiring a number of witnesses, or corroboration of a single witness; that such arbitrary measurements are likely to be of little real efficacy and to introduce disadvantages greater than those which they purport to avoid, and that therefore any such rule, when advanced for a specific issue—for example, treason or perjury—or for a specific witness—for example, an accomplice or a raped complainant—must justify itself by experience as overwhelmingly useful and efficacious" Wigmore § 2033

Scope of the section Section 28 of Act II of 1855 enacted "Except in cases of treason, the direct evidence of one witness, who is entitled to full credit shall be sufficient for proof of any fact in any such Court or before any such person But this provision shall not affect any rule or practice of any Court that"

or anc
Ta
tion either for treason or misprison for treason, the offence is required to be established on the testimony of not less than two witnesses This is a statutory provision of the reign of William III, and requires the oath of either two witnesses to the same overt act, or one to one, and the other to another overt act of the using part of the act or treason even though part of the general proof; as for instance, in an indictment for adherence to the Queen's enemies, proof that the accused was a part of the Queen's enemies. In the case of an indictment for

per
sup cou
of a aga
Cr

Now
violation up prosad, 22
witnesses
also Raja Prosonno v. Romonte 10 W II 236, Govindo v. Narain, 21 W. R. Cr 18; Arjun v. Emperor, 53 A 598=A. I. R. 1931 All 363.

In Queen Empress v. Ghulet, 7 A 41 at p 50 Dulton, J said "R. Harris, 5 B & A 926, has been followed in Mary Jackson's Case, 1 Lew C 270, in R. v. Whealland, 8 C & P. 238, in R v Hook, 15 D & R. and in cases As regards all these cases I remark generally that the assignment of perjury, and of showing question of defending, is not law in India

135. The order in which witnesses are produced and examined shall be regulated by the law and the court.

in which witnesses are produced and examined shall be regulated by the law and practice for the time being relating to civil and criminal procedure respectively, and, in the discretion of the Court.

witnesses and criminal procedure respectively. In the absence of any such law, by the discretion of the Court.

Attendance of witnesses This chapter deals with the examination of witnesses, by incorporating the rules of English law on the subject. The o produce any documents. This chapter does not say the production of witnesses or documents before the Court. The Civil and Crim Provisions have be na

m
"r

been recognized and enforced by the common law from v Long, 9 East 473 The process by which this writ is enforced is the subpoena ad testificandum, commonly called subpoena, which commands the witness to the trial to give his testimony It is a writ or order directed to place to testify

line right to comp.
tion of the Common Law Courts; and statutes generally power § 707 attend
early

to hear and determine any suit, may so call for all adequate proofs of the facts in controversy, and, to the end, may require the attendance of witnesses before it," ments, and must be an Accordingly, we find it extend"

Accordingly, we find it extend."

Exclusion of witnesses from Court room. Before discussing the general principles, it is proper to call attention to the exercise of its discretion, direct the exclusion of witnesses, while the testimony of other witnesses is being given. Burr Jones & Co., Inc. v. L. E. 1400-1402. When excluded the must not be seen.

 of the case; and those have testified. Best § is called putting or which has prevailed
 and Scotland from an

the truth by securing testimony not influenced by the statements of other witnesses or the suggestions of counsel as well as to prevent collusion and covert of testimony among witnesses. While this order will generally be made by the Court on the application of counsel, before the examination of the witnesses, it is generally held to be a matter of discretion, rather than of strict right; yet in some States it may be claimed as a right. Burr Jones § 807. Parties to the litigation except for some impropriety will not generally be excluded, since their presence is usually necessary to a proper management of their case. Nor will an attorney for one of the parties be excluded, but see Everett
v. Lordham, 5 C & P 91; Promitory v. Baddely, Ry. & M 130
 The same is true of one who is party in interest, though not a party to the cause.
 ice of such agent
 with the facts that action or defence

The mere fact of the necessity for the presence of such an agent will not out-its discretion. Expert witnesses nce be given upon the question or if there is any reason to apprehend that the expert witnesses are liable to be influenced by the testimony of other witnesses.
 order of
 are being

Burr Jones § 804, Delje v. Isaacson, 11 & 1 191; Charnock v. Jennings, 3 C & K 378; Fussel v. Pilson, 28 R L Jo 810, Ramsden v. Jacobs, (1922) 1 K
 B 640; Contra, Outram v. Outram, (1877) W N. 75; Usher v. Henuood, 20
 S J 598; Tay § 1400

Judge
 Moo &
 rt room
 witness

out it would not render him incompetent hear his evidence and pass upon States, 1 Okl Cr 291, Burr Jones § 8
Cobbet v. Hedson, 1 E & B 11, Philp

Pro
 tion
 Proc
 tion
 befo few
 with circu
 the r Gree
 in re
 and intro
 parti

coun has discretion, the Court has also power and jurisdiction to direct the order in which witnesses cited by a party shall be examined. In the goods of Gopesar Dulla, 16 C W N 265-39 C 215 In Kedar Nath Ghosh v Blupendra Nath Dose, 5 C W N. 21, at the close of the examination-in-chief the first witness called, Mr Jackson referring to cross-examination of the plaintiff by his counsel. In a Court is very slow to in which witnesses should be examined. I think that in the present case the ordinary practice should regulate the order of examination. At the conclusion of the cross-examination of the complainant on the ground that the cross-examination of the complainant before some other witnesses will embarrass and prejudice the defence, the mere fact that the complainant, a sickly man, is present in Court and may not come on some other day due to his bad health, is not sufficient of the defence, but the defence Moosa Hay is not the duty of the

L R 136

the discretionary control of the trial Judge

And where permission has been given to recall a witness omitted to be examined by the other side, the Court may question the evidence to be introduced, out of its order, in the examination-in-chief, though the witness is needlessly protracted, arrest it, and the Judge may on motion Burr Jones § 814. On behalf Cr P Code as not thereby vitiated Nayan N 170-A I R 1930 Cal 134.

Right to begin. In the regular order of procedure, the party having the burden of proof to support the substantive allegations should begin. As a subject of burden of proof lies on that party who ordinarily the plaintiff. Additional facts of the relief begin. Civil C L R 274.

prove the other party. The day to which he is bound to give evidence (if any) and may then address the Court generally on the whole case. The party beginning may then reply generally on the whole case. Civil Procedure Code, Order XVIII, rule 2. If there be some defendants who support the plaintiff's case, in that case, they should address the Court and call their evidence before the other defendants. Haji Bibi v. Sultan Mahomed, 32 II 599. Where there are several issues the burden of proving some of which lies on the other party, the party beginning may, at his option, either produce his evidence on those issues or reserve it by way of answer to the evidence produced by the other party; and in the latter case, the party beginning may produce evidence on those issues at a later date. The party beginning may then begin; but the other party may then begin; but the Judge shall admit the evidence if he thinks that the fact, if proved, would be relevant and not otherwise.

As regards order of production of witnesses in criminal cases, rule 2, Chapters XVIII XX, XXI, XXII, XXIII, of the Criminal Procedure Code

136 When either party proposes to give evidence of any fact, the Judge may ask the party proposing to give the evidence in what manner the alleged fact, if proved, would be relevant, and the Judge shall admit the evidence if he thinks that the fact, if proved, would be relevant and not otherwise.

If the fact proposed to be proved is one of which evidence is admissible only upon proof of some other fact, such last-mentioned fact must be proved before evidence is given of the first fact mentioned, unless the party undertakes to give proof of such fact, and the Court is satisfied with such undertaking.

If the relevancy of one alleged fact depends upon another alleged fact being first proved, the Judge may, in his discretion, either permit evidence of the first fact to be given before the second fact is proved, or require evidence to be given of the second fact before evidence is given of the first fact.

Illustrations

(a) It is proposed to prove a statement about a relevant fact by a person alleged to be dead, which statement is relevant under section 32.

The fact that the person is dead must be proved by the person proposing to prove the statement, before evidence is given of the statement.

(b) It is proposed to prove, by a copy, the contents of a document said to be lost.

The fact that the original is lost must be proved by the person proposing to produce the copy, before the copy is produced.

(c) A is accused of receiving stolen property knowing it to have been stolen.

It is proposed to prove that he denied the possession of the property.

The relevancy of the denial depends on the identity of the property. The Court may, in its discretion, either require the property to be identified before the denial of the possession is proved, or permit the denial of possession to be proved before the property is identified.

(d) It is proposed to prove that the accused is the cause of the effect.

It is proposed to prove that the accused is the cause of the effect.

It is proposed to prove that the accused is the cause of the effect.

It is proposed to prove that the accused is the cause of the effect.

It is proposed to prove that the accused is the cause of the effect.

Para I 'The reception of clearly incompetent evidence is a practice which leads to the expense of money which may follow. Mc y shall offer his evidence in for the counsel to determine, unless it is made to appear to the Court that some undue advantage of the opposite party is thereby attempted. When evidence is offered which proves or tends to prove any relevant fact, it is to be presumed that this will be followed by such other proof as is necessary to establish the proper connection. Hence, it is of no consequence in what order the evidence is introduced, so far as its ultimate legitimacy is concerned, provided in its relation to the other evidence in the case, it is at the end pertinent to the issue. A case consists frequently of various parts neither one of which makes it out and to hold that a party is not entitled to introduce any part until he establishes the whole is that the particular involved in the issue

ded by other he case. The testimony is unsworn must be allowed to begin somewhere upon the expectation that other links are to be afterwards supplied, and for this the Courts rely upon the statement of counsel professional honour being a guarantee against abuse. For example, the Court may permit a sheriff's deed to be given in evidence before the judgment and execution on which it is founded are introduced and where one relies on his right as assignee of a bond he may introduce the bond in evidence before he shows a title and interest in it. Burr Jones § 812. So it is clear that relevant may be given in evidence as of right and not depend upon itself but rests upon some reception as a matter of privilege. In other the absence of that testimony without which it been declared that the relevancy of testimony need not always appear at the time when it is offered, since it is the usual course to receive at any proper and convenient stage of the trial, in the discretion of the Judge any evidence which the counsel shows will be rendered material by other evidence which he undertakes to produce. If it is not subsequently thus connected with the issue it is to be laid out of the case. Green Ev § 51(a). But if the testimony is apparently irrelevant before counsel can ice otherwise or in some nt. But on cross examination much more latitude is necessarily allowed to counsel. In the absence of such assurance the evidence should not be received. If it is plain and there es not rought idence re not relevant

Para 2 Vide Section 104 illustration and Notes. It often happens that an agent for instance to carry a message and bring back an answer or do some other act, is put into the box before his agency or authority is proved. There upon an objection is taken by the opposing counsel that the evidence is not receivable, because the agency, etc., is not proved. An undertaking, is usually then given that evidence to prove the agency will be forthcoming at a later period, whereupon the case proceeds. If the proof of agency should break down, the whole of the alleged agent's evidence is expunged from the Judge's notes. It would often be highly inconvenient to interrupt the witness in his story, and call another witness in the middle of his examination, to prove the agency It is to meet such a state of things that the clause is provided Not S 1 F. p 319 S. 1

Para 3 Vide notes under para (1) It is doubtful whether s 136 gives the Court any discretion to allow evidence to corroborate a witness to be given
" Ujan v King Emperor
re a Judge suggests to a evidence on a parti erel for cross examina
a is satisfied with the evidence so far as it has that have been called has not such a suggestion and it l have a just cause of complaint if the Judge afterwards turns round and says I decide against you on that point. Havaji Bhajant v Dhondiram 6 Bom

L R 636

Examination in chief 137. The examination of a witness by the party who calls him shall be called his examination-in-chief

Cross examination The examination of a witness by the adverse party shall be called his cross-examination

Re examination The examination of a witness subsequent to the cross examination by the party who called him, shall be called his re-examination

138 Witnesses shall be first examined in-chief, then (if the adverse party so desires) cross examined, then (if the party calling him so desires) re examined

The examination and cross-examination must relate to relevant facts but the cross examination need not be confined to the facts to which the witness testified on his examination in chief

The re-examination shall be directed to the explanation of matters referred to in cross-examination and if new matter is by permission of the Court introduced in re examination, the adverse party may further cross examine upon that matter

Direction of re ex amination

Witness
called by any
party

Every party to a suit is entitled to have all the witnesses, whom he desires to call, and is ready at the trial to produce, heard by the Court, whatever opinion the Court may form by anticipation as to the probable value of the evidence when it shall be given. Looloo v. Rajender, 8 W R 364, see also Bungshee v. Chowdhry, 1 W R 263; Morno v. Bheem, 6 W R 231, Choudhury v. Shib, 11 W R 220; Jaisingjee, 2 M I of taking upon witness should be J 156=27 Ind Cas 220

Witness to testify orally When testimony is to be given in Court at a trial, it is to be given verbally, in the presence of the Court and jury, where the behaviour, expression, and gesture of a witness may be seen. One cannot write out his testimony, and read it to the jury himself, or have it read. One of the strongest indications of the truthfulness of a witness is his manner under the particular circumstances which surround the giving of his testimony. This is of course, lost to the jury unless the witness testify orally before it. Whenever orally such facts testify from his own ice is brought out between the ideas and language of various witnesses in reference to their own knowledge of the facts about which they are questioned. One witness will know a thing extent of giving With certain made by sign

Referring the truth of a part transaction will probably ever be devised by human ingenuity. If a witness is asked a question which requires a long answer, the witness should be allowed to answer in his own words. The Court should not be concerned with the form of the answer, but with the substance. The witness should be allowed to answer in his own words, and the Court should not be concerned with the form of the answer, but with the substance. The witness should be allowed to answer in his own words, and the Court should not be concerned with the form of the answer, but with the substance.

Examination in chief The first rule is this — Counsel can ask a witness whom only as are strictly relevant to the issue. A matter immediately in issue. No question direct examination, the probable answer to which cannot have a tendency to prove the offence or defence, or other matter put in issue by the pleadings. And relevant facts must be proved in the legitimate way, a fact may be most material, still that is no reason for admitting hearsay evidence. Again, counsel must confine his questions to matters of fact; he inferred from witness on any matter scientific witnesses training or special competent judgment on any matter in issue. Pouell Ev 526. Generally it is not the province of the Court to examine witnesses and as a rule Courts should leave the witnesses to the pleaders to be dealt with as is provided in section 13. Janki v. Sheo Narain, 82 Ind Cas. 154=25 Cr L J 1226. The necessity for expediting trials frequently precludes the Court from permitting the repetition of questions especially in direct examination. To repeat a question once excluded for any other purpose than to seek, in good faith, its introduction after a change of condition in the proof, is opposed to the canon under consideration Chamberlayne's Et § 551.

Importance of examination in chief Cross-examination is far easier than examination-in-chief. In cross-examination one cannot avoid getting answers which are not desired, but in chief a great deal depends upon the way in which witnesses are examined. Lord Alton's Recollections of the Bench and the Bar The examination of a witness in chief or the direct examination of witnesses as it is sometimes called, is very much underrated in its significance and its importance. Parry's Seven Lamps of Advocacy, 82-85. If a direct examination is properly and skilfully conducted, the impression thus made by an honest witness is more lasting than any argument of counsel. The vivid story of a single witness told in a winning way will leave a first impression upon a juror's mind that no eloquence can efface. It is no easy matter for an advocate to get his own evidence properly before a Court and jury. It is an important fact for him to remember that cases are often won or lost by the straight forward statements of the witness.

words learnt by
And they had Advocacy, pp

An impression very generally prevails in both branches of the profession that the examination in chief is the most important part of the trial.

powers of no inferior order so to interrogate each witness, whether, learned or unlearned. Ibid p. 37. The examination in chief is the most important part of the trial. It is the duty of counsel to bring out clearly, and in proper chronological order every relevant fact in support of his client's case to which the witness can depose. This task is more difficult than may at first sight appear. The timid witness must be encouraged, the talkative witness repressed, the witness who is too strong a partisan must be kept in check. And yet counsel must not suggest to the witness what he is to say. An honest witness, however, should be left to tell his tale in his own way with as little interruption from counsel as possible. In criminal cases, the duty of counsel exercise your sagacity at the moment, it must depend upon the particular facts of the case." Ibid p. 37.

Duty of counsel It is the duty of counsel to bring out clearly, and in proper chronological order every relevant fact in support of his client's case to which the witness can depose. This task is more difficult than may at first sight appear. The timid witness must be encouraged, the talkative witness repressed, the witness who is too strong a partisan must be kept in check. And yet counsel must not suggest to the witness what he is to say. An honest witness, however, should be left to tell his tale in his own way with as little interruption from counsel as possible. In criminal cases, the duty of counsel for the prosecution is wider. It is the practice, and probably the duty, of a prosecuting counsel to ask a witness questions favourable to the prisoner, for he must lay all the material evidence before the Court, whether it tells in favour of the prisoner or not, and not unduly press for a conviction. Powell Ev 526, Ramranyan v Emperor, 42 C 422

The Rambling witness. Testimony in itself intelligible is often rendered difficult of comprehension by the incompleteness, or the want of continuity, with which it is presented. These evils are due either to the defective mental constitution of the witness, or to his moral weakness, or to his personal hostility, or to the in- . . . ital constitution manifests itse . . . many indivi . . . a single object duals there . . . individual it is and persistent . . . useless to expect any exhaustive and coherent statement of the facts within his knowledge. Any idea which suddenly arises in his mind, during the course of his narration, diverts his thought into another channel; he loses sight of many details which he should . . . ithout conscious . . . ness of the omission . . . lea his effort to explain it leads him . . . when he returns to the fact at which it was abandoned, while to the comprehension of the whole a witness of this defective mental . . . binson's Forensic Oration, Wignores

Jud Proof § 160

The dull and stupid witness. The same obstacles are encountered in eliciting the evidence of a dull and stupid witness. His perceptions are cloudy and indefinite. His processes of recollection and reflections are slow and examination must be . . . his story in order to . . . effort of his memory, to construct questions which contain some word or phrase suggestive of the missing thought, to contrive methods of explanation or illustration which enables . . . ties . . . or . . . of Timid and self-conscious witness. . . . testimony of a witness whose moral . . . id self consciousness is subject . . . L. E.

disclosure of . . . work through . . . he omits or . . . ideas uttered, however, than he becomes conscious of their error. If he now attempts an explanation, it usually results in his entire discomfiture. If he persists in the misre . . . arises in the fear . . . hoods and suppress . . . knowing matters of importance to the . . .

Binson's Forensic Oration p 120, Wignores . . .

Judicial Proof § 160

The Bold and Zealous witness. . . . The main weakness of a . . . 15 . . . 16 . . . n . . . if . . . 5 . . . 5 delivered, and avails himself of every opportunity to assert his own opinions S. 1

Incompleteness or obscurity in the difficulties of an entirely different

the examination of the rambling, the self conscious or the stupid witness arise from intellectual or emotional defects, and can be overcome by enlightening the mind of the witness, or by assisting him to bring his impulses under control The obstacle encountered in an compelled to yield it, to communicate it in language which makes it as valuable as possible Where such a witness is the sole repository of ideas which are

course than to produce him,

he should avoid him altogether

Principles of Judicial Proof

y 100

Paul Brown's Golden Rules—Examination-in chief 'No better general rules" says Mr. Wrottesley, "for the examination of witness in chief, that we know of" Brown, who was one of took the test of experience the United States, and rowed largely from them concluded to give the rules in full" Wrottesley on examination of witnesses p 40 The following are David Brown's Golden Rules for the examination-in chief of witnesses —

"1 If they are bold, and may injure your cause by pertness or forwardness, observe a gravity and ceremony of manner towards them which may be calculated to repress their assurance

"2 If they are alarmed or diffident, and their thoughts are evidently scattered, commence your examination with matters of familiar character, remotely connected with the subject of their alarm, or the matter in issue, as for instance,—Where do you live? Do you know the parties? How long have you known them? etc And when you have restored them to their composure, and the r of the ca may agai

"3 If the evidence of your witness be unfavourable to you (which should always be carefully guarded against), exhibit no want of composure; for there are many minds that form opinions of the nature or character of testimony chiefly from the effect which it may appear to produce upon the counsel

"4 If a witness is imbued with preju unless there be such that witness on as possible dices some alone

If the
to least
him direc
you, a mina
still be own ca

"5 Never call a witness whom your adversary will be compelled to call. This will afford you the privilege of cross examination—take from your opponent the same privilege it thus gives you—and, in addition thereto, not only render everything unfavourable said by the witness doubly operative against that party, but also deprive that party of the power of counter acting without an object, nor without being able to connect that object with the case, if objected to is irrelevant

7 Be careful not to put your question in such a shape that if opposed for informality, you cannot sustain it or at all events produce strong reason in its support. Frequent failures in the discussion of points of evidence enfeeble your strength in the estimation of the jury, and greatly impair your hopes in the final result.

final result

'8 Never object to a question from your adversary without being able and disposed to enforce the objection. Nothing is so monstrous as to be constantly making and withdrawing objections; it either indicates a want of correct perception in making them, or a deficiency of real or of moral courage in not making them good.

"9 Speak to your witness clearly and distinctly, as if you were awake and engaged in a matter of interest, and make him also speak distinctly and to your question. How can it be supposed that the Court and the jury will be inclined to listen when the only struggle seems to be whether the counsel or the witness shall first go to sleep?

10 Modulate your voice as circumstances may direct—Inspire the fearful and repress the bold.

11 Never begin before you are ready, and always finish when you have done. In other words do not question for question's sake, but for an answer.

allow money best & own way. The advocate may either is own way, or he may bring out his testimony is intelligent and honest the stories but if he is stupid and inclined to speak of irrelevant matters, it is Wrottesley p 38 But strictly must depend upon your discernm recall facts by recalling all the associated circumstances, however irrelevant they must repeat the whole of a long dialogue and describe the most trivial occurrences of the time, in order to arrive at any particular part of the transac tion With such you have no help for it but to let them have their own way deayours to disturb the r confusion in the ideas of ng At your object But s, happily more rare who ve no order of events

 - on, your only chance of queating that they will
 ■ with their own mental ibition, with disconnected facts, which you will afterwards connect together in your reply, or which may dovetail with the rest of the evidence, so as to form a complete story' Ilrottesley 11 62 citing Cox's Advocate

Continuous narration without question May not the witness narrate his knowledge in continuous speech and without the interruption of questions? It is obvious that this method, on the one hand has often the advantage of preserving continuity and clearness of thought for the witness himself and saving time for all parties concerned. Wigmore § 767. 'One of the important branches of advocacy' said Mr Harris 'is the examination of a witness in chief. One fact should be remembered to start with, and it is this, the witness whom he has to examine has probably a plain straightforward story to tell, and that upon the telling it depends the belief or disbelief of the jury and their consequent verdict. If it were to be told amid social circle of friends it would be narrated with more or less circumlocution and considerable exactness. But all the facts would come out, and that is the first thing to insure if the case is as I have suggested, in private, all the company would understand it, and if the narrator were known as a man of truth, all would believe him. It would require the events would flow put audience, let the same. His first feeling is that he must not tell it in his own way. He is going to be examined upon it, he is to have it dragged out of him piecemeal, disjointedly, by a series of questions—in fact, he is to be interrupted at every point in a worse manner than if every him about what he was going is not unlike a post mortem. to the painful operation. Now the best thing the advocate can do under these circumstances is to remember, that the witness has something to tell, and that but for him, the advocate, would probably tell it very well, in his own way. The fewer interruptions, the the less questions will be needed specially to see that the story be matter." Harris on Hints on Advocacy; --

Objection to questions by other party The general principle governing the time of the objection is that it must be made as soon as the applicability of S; Kissen Kamini v Ram Chandra, W R 244 For evidence continued ordinarily be made as soon as the question is stated, and before the answer due, not to subject of the question, but to some feature of the answer. Wigmore § 13, vide p. 73 supra. If objection be not made in proper time it is generally considered as being waived. But the rule of waiver is not applicable in case of inadmissible evidence Miller v Madho Das 23 I A, 106 (116)—19A 70, Sri D. v. D.

by
to r 21
to Lac
be
On

Cross Examination When a witness has been examined in chief, the other party has a right to cross examine him. The powers of cross examination has been justly said to be one of the principal, as it certainly is one of the most efficacious tests, which the law has devised for the discovery of truth. By means of it the situation of the witness with respect to the parties, and to the subject of litigation, his interest, his motives, his inclination and prejudices, his means of knowledge of the facts to which he has used those means, his powers all fully investigated and ascer of the jury, before whom he has testified, and who have thus had an opportunity of observing his demeanour, and of determining the just weight and value of his testimony. It is not easy for a witness who is subjected to this test, to impose on a Court or jury, for however artful the fabrication of falsehood may be it cannot embrace all the circumstances to which a cross examination may be extended Greent Ev § 416; Starkie Ev Vol I, 160. On the ex adverso W. D.

may be led into such a strait that what he will not say, he cannot deny. For as in an oration we generally collect scattered proofs, which singly do not appear to press on the accused yet by being put together, prove the charge so a witness of this sort should be asked many things as to what went before—what crime after—as to place, time, and persons, and other things so that he must fall upon some answer after which he must necessarily either confess what is desired, or contradict his former statements. If this does not happen, it may become apparent that he will not speak, or he may be drawn out and detected in some falsehood foreign to the cause or by being led on to say more than the matter requires in favour of the accused, the Judge may be led to suspect him, which will damage his cause not less than if he had spoken the truth against the accused. If the truth given by a witness is consistent with frequent case) one witness contradicts produce by art that which usually happens accidentally. Apart from these witnesses are usually asked many questions which may be useful as to the lives of other witnesses as to their own character and position may crimes they have committed their friendship or enmity to the parties—in the answers to which they may either make some useful admission, or be detected either in a falsehood or the desire of injuring the opposite party.

It is certainly implied by s 133 of the Evidence Act that a party must have had an opportunity to cross examine and does not mean that merely a right to cross examine a witness without an opportunity being offered for cross examination is sufficient compliance with the requirements of the law. Mohi Singh v Dhanuk Dhan: 73 Ind Cas 339=24 Cr L J 595=(1923) P 53

Cross examination as a distinctive and vital feature of English Law. For centuries past the policy of Anglo Saxon system of Evidence has been to experience so often found value. It may be that in more than one sense it takes the place in our system which torture occupied in the medieval system of the civilians. Nevertheless of trial by law to attended 405, 't observed what a varied it stages will at o statement of any influence of a p fabrication of the trial by law to attended 405, 't observed what a varied it stages will at o statement of any influence of a p fabrication of the

which the law has devised for the ascertainment of truth, and is certainly a mo may be led into such a snarl that what he will not say, he cannot deny. For as in an oration, we generally collect scattered proofs, which singly do not appear to press on the accused yet by being put together, prove the charge so a witness of this sort should be asked many things as to what went before—what came after—as to place, time, and persons, and other things so that he must fall upon some answer after which he must necessarily either confess what is desired, or contradict his former statements. If this does not happen, it may become apparent that he will not speak, or he may be drawn out and detected in some falsehood foreign to the cause or by being led on to say more than the matter requires in favour of the accused, the Judge may be led to suspect him, which will damage his cause not less than if he had spoken the truth against the accused given by a witness inconsistent with frequent & produce by witnesses of other witnesses as to their own character and position any crimes they have committed, their friendship or enmity to the parties—in the answers to which they may either make some useful admission, or be detected either in a falsehood or the desire of injuring the opposite party

It is certainly implied by s 138 of the Evidence Act that a party must have had an opportunity to cross examine and does not mean that merely a right to cross examine a witness without an opportunity being offered for cross examination is sufficient compliance with the requirements of the law Moti Singh v Dhanuk Dhan, 73 Ind Cas 339—24 Cr L J 595—(1923) P 53

Cross examination as a distinctive and vital feature of English Law For centuries past the policy of Anglo Saxon system of Evidence has been to regard the necessity of testing by cross examination as a vital feature of law The belief that no safeguard for testing the value of human statements is comparable to that furnished by cross examination, and the conviction that no statement (unless by special exception) should be used as testimony until it has been probed and sublimated by that test, has found increasing strength in lengthening experience. Not even the abuses the mishandlings and the puerilities which are so often found associated with cross examination have availed to nullify its trial by law to attended

405, "t

observed what a very different shape their story appears to take in each of these stages, will at once see how extremely dangerous it is to act on the ex parte statement of any witness and still more of a witness brought forward under the influence of a party interested. However artful says Mr Starkie, the fabrication of the falsehood may be, it cannot embrace all the circumstances to which the cross examination may be extended, the fraud is therefore open to detection for want of consistency between that which has been fabricated and system

ry of reign
been
You
ough
ugh
plex and da h ut this abuse
of this unique
s merits. If mination, not system of
however has
e, & Camp
s and has
of these for want of invent on ipal tests
ly a mo t

former, which is to be regretted, as the point still appears to be left open' Powell v. Powell, 200 A. 2d 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000

When a witness has been examined in chief the other party has a right to cross-examine him R v Burdett, 6 Cox 458; Lord v Colvin 3 Drew 232, 235. But the question often arises, whether the witness has been so examined he witness is called merely is proved by another witness, Gibson, 1 Ad & El 48, 1 Stark 132, Rush v Smith, 1 M & A 94; Summers v Mosely, 2 C & M 477, Dracgirdle v Bailey, 1 F & F 536. In England, when a competent witness is called and sworn, the other party will ordinarily, in strictness, be entitled to cross-examine him, though the party calling him does not. Brook 2 Stark 472; Phillips v Famer 61, R v Murphy, 1 A M & O 201, 1. Unless he was sworn by Ch D 642. Rush v. Smith, 1 C M & R 91, Hood v Mackinson, 2 M & R 213 or, unless an immaterial question having been put to him, his further cross-examination has been stopped by the Judge (Greay v Carr, 7 C & P 64) Green Ev § 435. And even where a plaintiff was under the necessity of calling the defendant in interest as a witness, for the sake of formal proof only, Id that he was the examined to the whole of cross to that o The right is adverse I R 1932

Lab 105-155 Ind Cas 209

A witness summoned and examined by Court cannot, as of right, be cross-examined either by the prosecutor or by the accused. The Court as a general rule, should however, allow the parties to cross-examine the witness if they desire to do so. Chwas v Queen, S C 275 Oudb. Such a witness is a witness of the Court. "The Court may allow the parties to cross-examine him with whether said in an the parti counsel cross exa v Dwyer Gurudas Gurish, 5 C 614, Sharfara v Dhinno, 16 W R 257

It is the duty of the Magistrate to insist on the trials proceeding from day to day and rigidly to check prolix examination and cross-examination of witnesses in exercise of the powers inherent in all Magistrates to prevent abuse of process. F. IV Sole v Crown, 11 S L R 27

Death of witness after examination in chief Where a witness dies after examination in chief but the stances there is may even R 1925 A 127, R witness's examination but for the voluntary act of the witness himself or the party offering him—as by a postponement or other interruption brought about immediately must be where the death of witness prevents cross-examination under such circumstances that no responsibility of any sort can be attributed to either the witness or his party it seems harsh measure to strike out all that has been obtained on the direct examination. Nevertheless, the principle requires in strictness nothing less. The true solution would be to avoid any inflexible rule and to leave it to the trial Judge to admit the direct examination so far as the loss of cross examination can be shown to him not in that instance a material loss. Wigmore § 139. In R v Mitchell, 17 Cox Cr 503, a dying woman was examined in chief, and after her cross examination had continued for about 10 minutes, the Magistrate stopped on account of her condition. She died a few minutes after. Her evidence was held inadmissible. But in Fuller v Rice, 4 Gray 343 Shaw C J said: "No general rule can be laid down in respect to unfinished testimony. If substantially complete it ought not to be rejected."

Cross examination by Court. In Nur Buz Kazi v Empress 6 C 279 Garth C J said: "We think it right to point out to the Sessions Judge, that the course which he adopted in the examination of the witnesses for the prosecution was irregular, opposed to the provisions of section 138 of the Evidence Act and not fair to the prisoners. We find that on the examination in chief being finished, the Judge questioned almost all the witnesses at considerable length upon the very points to which he must have known that the crosson either side have omitted to put some material question or questions, and the Court should, as a general rule leave the witnesses to the pleaders to be dealt with as laid down in section 138 of the Act. The Judges' power to put questions under s 165 is certainly not intended to be used in the manner which we have had occasion to notice in the present case." Generally it is not the province of the Court to examine witnesses and as a rule the Court should leave the witnesses to the pleaders to be dealt with as provided for in section 138. Jinnah v Sheo Narain, 82 Ind Cas 154.

"Although we do not regard it always safe to interfere with the discretion of counsel while cross-examination privilege is abused it seems but right that the control over cross examination assuming as in R Mining Co v Buxton Mining Co, 91 Ind Cas 101 that examination of witnesses must not be pro-

logically relevant opinion of the trying drawn without going
y protract the case
" 4 C W N 221

So where the examination of a witness is needlessly protracted it is within the discretion of the Court to arrest it. Burr Jones § 814, Danks v Kanhaiya A I R 1922 Oudh 124. This discretion the Court can use even where a witness is examined in chief. Standard L J Co 80 C. But a Court should not arrest the examination of statements by a witness or the repetition of interrogatives, until full answers are obtained. Burr Jones § 814.

Cross examination, whether should be confined to relevant facts. In England great latitude will not be stopped by the relevant facts and calculated neither the credit of the witness may be relevant and of the examination. In cross examination irrelevant to the matter in issue, the answer to which may tend to affect his credit, but he will not always be obliged to answer the question and if he does answer it he cannot as a rule be contradicted. He may be asked questions which affect his veracity, such as, whether he has been convicted of a crime, whether he is a relation, or intimate friend, or under any special obligation, to the party who calls him, whether he is not identified or connected with him in interest, whether he has not been a party to any such transaction, or whether he is not otherwise connected with the adverse party; and the court may, in its discretion, require the witness to answer such questions as may be asked him, touching any of the matters hereinbefore mentioned, and may, in its discretion, require the witness to answer such questions as may be asked him, touching any of the matters hereinbefore mentioned, and may, in its discretion, require the witness to answer such questions as may be asked him, touching any of the matters hereinbefore mentioned.

Powell Ev 533

the cross examiner's case Berwick v Murray, 19 L J Ch 231, 280, Morgan v. Brydges, 2 Stark, R 314; R. v. Murphy, 1 Arm M & O 296. So also under section 139 of the Evidence Act an accused has the right to cross examine prosecution witnesses at the conclusion of their examination in chief and such cross examinations may be on all points and by means of all questions not disallowed by the Evidence Act. Cross examination need not be confined to matters raised elsewhere in the evidence Mohomed Ali v Emperor, 12 Cr L J 277=10 Ind Cas 917, R v Ishan, 6 B L II App 88=15 W. R. Cr 341; Major v Murray 19 L J Ch 231, Subramanyam v. Government of Mysore, 6 Mys L J 551 (F B).

ask questions of the witness as to his transactions with a third person. Powell

B N. S 388
separately tried subject matter of 23 T L R 460
Crc

action,
witness
issue in
on the Manufac
M L J knewled
(4) his

deems obligatory, or by such affirmation or declaration as may by law be substituted for an oath. Proportioned to these is the degree of credit his testimony deserves from the Court and jury. Archib Cr P (27th ed) 483, Beas §§ 22 6, 189 195, Phip Ev 401. It is unprofessional on the part of counsel to cross-examine a witness as to facts within his personal knowledge. Donald Watson v Peary Mohan, 40 C 808=18 C W N 18. Where counsel acting under instructions from the court cross-examines a witness as to facts which counsel did not substantiate by evidence, it is unprofessional conduct on the part of counsel. People v and the parties to the suit, the imputation complained of ought to have been withdrawn. In re Messrs Crompton & Co v Secretary of State, 26 M L J 549

Knowledge, ing the weight of opportunities of power of memory and perception, and any special circumstances affecting his cross examination to impeach,

Although a witness is perfectly disinterested, although he is a man of only answered and accounted for by the other party, so as to convince the witness himself that he laboured under a mistake (See Munsterberg, Psychology and

3. Crime) Where there is a doubt, therefore, whether the evidence given by a witness is not founded on some misconception, it is the duty of the counsel who cross-examines him to question him as to the sources of his knowledge, his reasons for believing the fact to be as he has stated, his reason for recollecting it the circumstances attending its occurrence, whether it was light or dark, and whether he was near or distant at the time, it occurred, and the like, so that the tribunal may be able to judge of the degree of confidence it should place in the witness's testimony. If a witness refuses to answer such questions, or does not answer them his credit in questions on omissions, testimony.

Disinterestedness A witness to be perfectly credible, must not be in the slightest degree biased or partial to one party or the other. Therefore, if it appears that the witness is prejudiced against the party against whom he appears or has before expressed sentiments indicative of such prejudice, or it appears him for the same or a similar offence acts charged in the indictment against offences which detract proportionately from

is presented. Asking a witness at this stage, to repeat the evidence given on direct examination may well serve to test the truth of the original statements, and be, therefore, entirely within the legitimate rights of the party. Ability to repeat a story not only involves memory and accuracy; it throws valuable light on the questions as to whether a narrative concerns actual facts, in which case the reality of the events or circumstances narrated will enable the witness to repeat them as often as asked, with substantial accuracy, or, the story is a fabricated one, in which event, attempts at repetition may well break down, unless the story is a short one, or learned with remarkable thoroughness and retentiveness of memory. Chamberlayne's Ev § 552. Where perjury is claimed, by reputable counsel, directly or by implication from conduct, the Court in exercise of its administrative function for the furtherance of justice, may permit repetition on cross examination, not alone of the same questions asked on direct examination but of questions asked on cross-examination, to which the examiner cannot get an answer or only one with which he is not satisfied as being in accordance with the facts. He will, if permitted, ask the same question until he gets either an answer, or one which he thinks is true. With many perhaps most, witnesses the test is one of the most effective that can be employed. Where the mind of the witness is interposing a barrier of falsehood or equivocation between the examiner and the true state of his own mind the effect of repeating the question, psychologically, is not unlike that of an ancient battering ram. Each blow, delivered at the same point adds its quota of disintegrating force until the barrier is broken down. The auto-suggestion of the witness that he remains steadfast to the pre-arranged story is steadily undermined by the counter suggestion of the insistent questions, until it is mastered hand, the canon ect perjury no such gain is promised, a trial judge may exclude questions on cross examination which are chiefly argumentative or combative in their nature. Chamberlayne's Ev § 553.

Judge may restrict number of counsel in the examination of a witness The Court may expedite trials by declining to permit more than one counsel to intervene in the examination of any given witness. He may properly require that a counsel who has started the examination or cross examination of a witness, sel on the same side, 1 M & Rob 400, elaboration, conflict one of administration and circumstances may arise which will justify or require a trial judge to permit more than one counsel to interrogate a witness. The practice and certain obvious considerations affecting it are thus stated by Lord Ellenborough in Doe v Roe, 2 Camp 280: "Convenience certainly requires that the examination of a witness should be carried on by one counsel only."

clearly cannot

another, in the right, in his dis-

hands. Very

If a gentleman

embarrassed

in the power of the relief. And other

that the gentleman

questions to a witnesses where several defendants rely on separate defences

tried in the same

action." "The witnesses

are to be examined

by the counsel successively,

in the same manner."

Should the examining counsel

deviate from the customary practice or right of the Court to permit

undoubted. When such a deviation

interferes with the interests of expediting

business,

it is proper to intervene or prescribe

general conditions

to avoid useless

repetition, or other waste of Court's

time. Chamberlayne's Ev § 555, Wigmore § 783

What facts are not relevant in cross examination. In cross examination too the facts inquired into must be relevant. A witness may not be cross-examined as to facts not in issue.

qu

lay

is c dit

cor

ina

exi

po

of an

the aff

by

co

su

da

de

Nc

erc

ch

qu

12

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

S.

facts that will actually be extracted will be favourable or unfavourable to the cross examiner's purposes. It is here that the art (that is, the technical skill) of cross examination enters. On this hangs all the lesser rules of the art. Hence it is that it must call to its aid so many other elements than mere knowledge of law. Experience of human nature, judgment of chances, knowledge of the case, tact of manner,—all these things, and more, have to do with the art. Yet the theory of the process underlies and influences at every point. To cross examine or not to cross examine,—that is the fundamental question, which springs from the essential nature of the process and arises anew for every part of every witness's testimony. The greatest cross examiners have always stated this as the ultimate problem. Wigmore § 1368

David Paul Brown's Golden Rules for cross examination '1 Except in indifferent matters, never take your eye from that of the witness. This is a channel of communication from mind to mind, the loss of which nothing can compensate —

' Truth, falsehood, hatred, anger, scorn, despair,

And all the passions,—all the soul is there

"2 Be not regardless either of the voice of the witness. Next to the eye this is perhaps the best interpreter, of his mind. The very design to screen conscience from crime—the mental reservation of the witness—is often manifested in the tone or accent or emphasis of the voice. For instance it becoming important to know that the witness was at the corner of Sixth and Chestnut Streets at a certain time the question is asked were you at the corner of Sixth and Chestnut Streets at six o'clock? A frank witness would answer, perhaps I was near there. But a witness who had been there, desirous to conceal the fact, and to defeat your object, speaking to the letter rather than the spirit of the enquiry, answers, "No" although he may have been within a stone's throw of the place or at the very place, within ten minutes of the time. The common answer of such a witness would be, I was not at the corner, at six o'clock. Emphasis upon both words plainly implies a mental evasion or equivocation and gives rise with a skilful examiner to the question. At what hour were you at the corner, or at what place were you at six o'clock? And in nine instances out of ten it will appear that the witness was at the place, about the time, or at the time about the place. There is no scope for further illustrations, but be watchful I say, of the voice, and the principle may be easily applied.

'3 "

honest;

a thunder

dignity. Bring to bear all the powers of your mind not that you may shine but that virtue may triumph and your cause may prosper

4 In a criminal especially in a capital case so long as your cause stands well ask but a few questions, and be certain never to ask any the answer to which, if against you may destroy your client, unless you know the witness perfectly well, and know that his answer will be favourable equally well, or unless you be prepared with testimony to destroy him if he play traitor to the truth and your expectations.

"5 An equivocal question is almost as much to be avoided and condemned as an equivocal answer, and it always leads to or excuses an equivocal answer. Singleness of purpose clearly expressed is the best trait in the examination of witnesses, whether they be honest or the reverse. Falsehood is not detected by cunning but by the light of the truth, or if by cunning it is the cunning of the witness and not of the counsel.

6 If the witness determine to be witty or refractory with you you had better not quarrel with the that he does you do assured

upon the case may

"8 Never underestimate your adversary, but stand steadily upon your guard, a random blow may be just as fatal as though it were directed by the S.
no often cures, and sometimes jury, kind to your colleague, civil to your antagonist, but never sacrifice the slightest principle of duty to an overweening deference towards either."

Cross examination of the perjured witness "It seldom happens that a witness's entire testimony is false from beginning to end. Perhaps the greater part of it is true, and only the crucial part—the point, however, on which the whole case may turn—is wilfully false. If at the end of this direct testimony, we conclude that the witness we have to cross examine, comes under this class, what means are we to employ to expose him in the jury? Let us first be certain we are right in our estimate of him—that he intends perjury. Embarrassment is one of the emblems of perjury, but by no means always so. The novelty and difficulty of the situation—being called upon to testify before a room full of people, with lawyers on all sides ready to ridicule or abuse—often occasions his own accustomed language

If, however, the manner of the witness and the wording of his testimony bear all the earmarks of fabrication, it is often useful, as your first question, to ask him to repeat his story. Usually he will repeat it in almost identically the same way.

possible, the Try him b quickly to t
rather than has no facts

it to mind as a whole, and not facts entirely dissociated with it entirely unprepared for these new for answers. Distract his thoughts and then suddenly, when his considerations to which you had same question a second time. E and very likely will give a different in the net. He cannot invent answers as fast as you can invent questions, and at the same time

his answers
from the it appears

he will not keep no confused and you have made
the Art of Cross

examination pp 50-53

But Nothing
whose in methods

manner to be displayed towards such a witness. It all depends upon the individual character you have to unmask. In a large majority of cases the chance of success will be greatly increased by not allowing the witness to see that you suspect him, before you can lead him to commit himself as to various matters with which you

Wellman, the Art of Cross

"You must sometimes try or repugnancy to know feigned. The following this sort of cross-examination: 'Open gently, mildly, do not appear to doubt him (the witness)

are not afraid

and collateral

from the main

between the tale he had told and the questions you are about to put to him. Then by slow approaches bring him back to the main circumstances by the investigation of which it is that you propose to show the falsity of the story.

"If however you adopt the other course (i. e.) to show that you suspect him at the first, and instead of surprising the witness into the betrayal of his falsehood you resolve to bring out of him the truth by a bold and open attack—to awe him, as it were, into honesty,—aspect and voice must express your consciousness of his perjury and your eye upon him will certainly help you to assure stated as a general rule, that a and fully in the face with a steady cast down or wanders restlessly speaking the truth or what he believes however timidly, will look at you when he answers your questions, and will

at first, you patience. upon reformation will be test points have been instantly he matter or purpose culars which he must upon which you surprised him into invention on the moment. It is probable that after such a diversion of his thoughts he will have forgotten what his answers were, what were the fictions with which he had filled up the

and so one so

at not ideas, your own to cross examination in the middle of his narrative, then jump to the end previous question S. 1 e he speaks from perplexed and will

 acts by association,

"When you are satisfied that the witness is drawing upon his invention, there is no more certain process of detection than a rapid fire of questions. Give him no pause between them, no breathing pause, no time to rally. Few minds are sufficiently self-possessed to maintain a consistent story under such a catechising. If there be a pause or a hesitation in the answer, you thereby lay bear a t the ans
 and he
 him to time and place, and names. 'You heard him say so?' 'Where?' 'Who were present?' 'Name them' 'Name one of them' Such a string of questions following one upon the other as fast as the answer is given, will frequently confound the most audacious. Fit names and times and places are not readily invented or if invented not readily remembered" Recd's Conduct of law suits, 307-308

Truthful witness "The truthful witness has been said to be the most difficult of all to cross examine. I cannot help differing so much from that opinion as to
 I say truthful
 If it were so, it
 ful witness is true
 truth-
 is the
 ining,

wine to acco-
 an wo
 an

Flippant witness When a witness comes into the box with whet with a determined pose of the head, as "counselor I am your man, tickle me," id masterful being to deal with He come determined to answer concisely and sharply, means to say "no" and "yes", and no more, always to be accompanied with a lateral nod, as much as to say, "take that" D. tal be ch I have used the masculine pronoun, this witness is ver friends, she to
 "any counselor as et should carefully absta witness down" His encourage that fine frenzied exuberance, which, bye and bye will most surely damage the case she has come to serve Harris Hints on Advocacy pp 65, 107, Wigmore Principles of Judicial Proof § 160

The Dogged witness The Dogged witness is the exact opposite of the one I have just been dealing with He will shake his head rather than say no
 As much to say "You don't catch me You see him, gentlemen and you see me I am up to him" He seems always to have fear of perjury before hi eyes, and to know that if he keeps to a nod or shake of the head, he is safe He is under the impression that damage the case he must, whatever he says

He will answer
 magnifies his indep
 'uprightness and himself to have ever
 coverer Ibid
 dazzling luster that virtue he believes
 not the actual dis-

The Hesitating
 truthful witness, c
 to cross-examine the answer will have upon the case and not what the proper answer is By no tutions and you begin
 what effect

3. means hurry this individual. Let him consider well the weight of his intended answer, and the scale into which it should go, and in all probability he will put it into the wrong one after all. If he should, leave it there by all means. Hesitation, however, may result from a desire to be scrupulously accurate in which case you must be careful that the mere strictness of language does not convey a false impression. The latter sometimes, even in advocacy, kills where the spirit would make alive. Ibid

The Nervous witness A nervous witness is one of the most difficult to deal with. The answers either do not come at all or they tumble out two or three at a time, and then they often come with opposites in close comparison, a 'Yes' and a 'No' together, while "I don't know" comes close behind 'I believe so' or 'I don't think so' is a frequent answer with this witness as it is with the lying and the truthful witness. They are all partial to the expression, but all from different and opposite motives.

You must deal gently with this curious specimen of human nature. He is to be encouraged. It is no use to bray him in a mortar. You should deal gently with a weakness of this kind as you would with a shy horse. Great allowance is always made for a nervous witness, who invariably receives the sympathy of the jury. You have to guard, therefore, against offending that sympathy, as you undoubtedly would by a severe tone or manner. Ibid must be dealt with cunningly and question out of character at only, straightforwardness may not be out of place with the jury. Whatever of honesty, whether of appearance, manner, tone, or language contrasts with the vulgar, self asserting and mendacious acting of this witness will tend to destroy him. It will be the antidote to his craftiness. It is strange, but, true, that no man can be what is usually understood as a "cunning person" and conceal the fact. He is not really a shrewd man but only thinks he is tries to be, and above all wishes to be thought so. He always pretends that he has some deep and hidden meaning in what he says and does, which no amount of skill or perception on your part can penetrate. He would be an impostor to the world if he could! but the only person he really imposes upon is himself. Every one can see that he tries to appear what he is not and that he pretends to know a great deal more than he does. This is the man to show to the jury in his real character and they will enjoy your good humoured exposure of the cheat. Ibid

The canting Hypocrite The canting hypocrite is not the least pleasing object of creation when in the witness box, nor is he the most difficult to cross examine. He invariably speaks from the very best and purest of motives. His desire is only to speak the truth, no not merely that but without so much as an apparent tinge of partiality. He has no interest in the case—no feeling. It is such a pity it could not have been settled out of Court as he proposes himself to be arbitrator.

in a sense of
at an
and
you aches
he is
he is e be a gap somewhere hard by or a somewhat lower fence that he may scurry over and so not do violence to himself in the event of a mishap. His evidence which may and will be always on the confines of truth, must be closely examined. He is too excellent quantities at a time with it the shadow of cost. Ibid

The Positive witness There is another class of witness which may be mentioned, and that is the positive witness (generally a female or of female tendencies). It is usually very difficult to make the witness unsway anything she has said, however mistaken she may be, but you may sometimes lead her by her that she must be wrong. Such questions as 'How can that be?' will only draw the answer, 'I don't know how it can be, but I know it is' Ibid ^{to convince}

S. 13

Spy ■ ■ ■ witness
tion or suspicion,
whether the
of the credit remains to be fixed design
in punishing morally, and his evidence against them, the mere character of spy ought not to prejudice, or stain the credit of the witness To this man no guilt of the plotted offence attaches. Another description of spy may be a man, who has undesignedly been present at to join it, or a
and either of th
further than h
repentance or o

upp
Anc
lerr
with
and con
con
stor
max
CO. 2

ral, and often the mediator, the witness by a skilful adver-favourable to the witness in as character he bears of a spy; argue a want of self respect
is. 171-179

AN EVALUATION OF DISORDER

scientific facts from the knowledge of the expert as will help his case, and thus and to the fact that the expert given against him mind is that no question to give the expert
 and thus afford him an oppor-
 way, for his opinions, which otherwise have fully brought

pp. 74-75

and examination.

Heuman's

The Art of

Cross examination,

"A successful method of cross-examination is to gradually and gradually defended. If it now and then witness is to be taken over is a very different one from that which the examiner has resolved he shall travel. The examiner must not, however, for an instant, lose his temper, nor suffer his attention to be drawn from the time he means to take. When the witness is taken over, the examiner must not let the witness know ex

 de ex
 so
 in
 to en
 en
 204 460

Woman witness "Women, I have usually found are much better witness of what they have seen than men. Men reflect on and draw inferences from what they have seen, and are apt to mix in their evidence what they surmise must have happened with what they actually saw happening. Women usually tell what they saw. Their evidence, however, is reliable only so long as their passions are not excited. Their evidence, however, is reliable only so long as their husband or children, or hatred word they utter can be trusted.

Bar p 69 "Now and then rosiest perjury, but when she is called as a witness she far surpasses man in the perspicuity of her narrative and in the honesty of her replies. No counsel who has any pretence to tact ever tries to get the better of a plain country woman giving evidence at the assizes. You treat her with pride
 these artifices
 mind in the Cross exam-
 but even ide up her Ayar's

Re examination When the cross examination of the witness is concluded, the party who called him has the right to re-examine him on all matters arising out of the cross examination for the purpose of reconciling any discrepancies that may exist between the evidence on the examination in chief and that which has been given in cross examination; or for the purpose of removing or diminishing any suspicion that the cross examination may have cast on the evidence in-chief, or to enable the witness to state the whole truth as to matters which have only been partially dealt with in cross examination. If there has been no cross-examination, it is unnecessary. And it is, as a rule, unnecessary. already put in chief Only such with and arise out of the cross-ex- ever, may in his discretion cretion
 D 504

Queen's Bench
 that c
 be pro

expressions used by the witness on cross examination, it may be in evidence doubtful, as also of the motive by which the witness was induced to use those expressions, but I think he has no right to go further, and to introduce matter witness's evidence in chief is not directly or indirectly challenged in cross examination, there is of course no occasion nor any right to re-examine thereon Wills Ev 2nd Ed 328

139. A person summoned to produce a document does not become a witness by the mere fact that he produces it and cannot be cross-examined unless and until he is called as a witness

Cross examination of person called to produce a document

Scope of the section Where a witness is summoned by subpoena duces tecum merely to produce documents, he need not be sworn Perry v Gibson, 1 A & E 48; Summer v Moreley 2 C & M 477 But if he has to speak to the proper or safe custody of the document the course of business in his office with respect to documents, filing, noting, docketing, and the like or to do more than merely produce, he must be sworn Nort Ev 323 When a witness is not sworn 1 A & E 48, Summer x 355 But if he is called is entitled to cross examine him so although he is not examined but is merely called to produce a document But a party is not entitled to cross examine a witness called by mistake, if the mistake be discovered before any question is put to him Wood v MacInson, 2 M & R 373 In the above case Coleridge J said "Upon the whole it appears to me that the more satisfactory principle to lay down is this, that if there really be a mistake, whether on the part of counsel or officer, and that mistake be discovered before the examination in chief has begun the adverse party ought not to have the right to take advantage of his mistake by cross-examining the witness Here the learned counsel explains that there has been a mistake to prove, but knew other withdraw his no right to called action, led to here

Witnesses to character

140. Witnesses to character may be cross-examined and re-examined.

Scope Where witnesses are called simply to speak to the character of a prisoner, it is not usual to cross examine them except under special circumstances R v Hodgkins, 7 C & P 298, but no rule of law expressly forbids this Taylor § 1429, see also R v Wood 5 Jur 225 But where a witness for the prisoner having proved that he had known him for some years, and given him a good character, any further taken 'Did you object to the prisoner of that The man his belief Wood, 5 Jurist 225

141. Any question suggesting the answer which the person putting it wishes or expects to receive is called a leading question.

Leading questions

Leading questions—meaning of A leading question is one which suggests to the witness the answer which it is desired he should give If the questions

2. are asked to which the answer "Yes" or "No" would be --

which is put in such a way as to suggest to the witness the answer which is expected or wanted. There is no particular form which will make a question leading, or will save it from being such. The fact that a question is put so as to require a categorical answer does not necessarily make it leading, though it may do so, nor does the fact that a question is put so as to avoid a categorical answer.

Willis v Quimby, 31 N H 485

one, when it indicates to the witness that the witness expects and desires to have confirmed by the answer. Is not your name so and so? Do you reside in such a place? Are you not in the service of such and such a person? Is not your name such and such? It is conveyed to the witness that the witness expects and desires to have confirmed by the answer.

It is very clear that a question is leading which suggests to the witness the answer which is expected or wanted. It is conveyed to the witness that the witness expects and desires to have confirmed by the answer.

It is very clear that a question is leading which suggests to the witness the answer which is expected or wanted. It is conveyed to the witness that the witness expects and desires to have confirmed by the answer.

It is very clear that a question is leading which suggests to the witness the answer which is expected or wanted. It is conveyed to the witness that the witness expects and desires to have confirmed by the answer.

"no" the answer is "yes" that in the proposed in that desired. And it be proved which is not proved. More properly, such questions may be called misleading, and are objectionable both as likely to mislead a fair witness. Durr Jones § 816.

142. Leading questions must not, if objected to by the adverse party, be asked in an examination-in-chief, or in a re-examination, except with the permission of the Court.

The Court shall permit leading questions as to matters which are introductory or undisputed, or which have, in its opinion, been already sufficiently proved.

Principle "The assigned reason is that the witness usually has a strong feeling in his mind, and is disposed to answer anything which is suggested to him. He is not to be trusted to give an answer which is not the truth. He is to be treated as a witness, and not as a party. He is to be examined in a fair and honest manner, and not in a manner which is designed to elicit a particular answer. He is to be allowed to reflect and answer after an exertion of his own memory. Joseph Chitty's Practice of Law, Vol III, 892. But Chief Justice Appleton in his Evidence said: "The end proposed in extracting testimony is the obtaining of the actual recollection of the witness, not the allegations of another person suggested to and adopted by the witness. The real danger is that of interrogating and the witness will answer as he may suggest, instead of reflecting and answering after an exertion of their own memory." Joseph Chitty's Practice of Law, Vol III, 892. But Chief Justice Appleton in his Evidence said: "The end proposed in extracting testimony is the obtaining of the actual recollection of the witness, not the allegations of another person suggested to and adopted by the witness. The real danger is that of interrogating and the witness will answer as he may suggest, instead of reflecting and answering after an exertion of their own memory." Joseph Chitty's Practice of Law, Vol III, 892.

the expectation on his part and with an understanding on the part of the witness that he will assent to the truth of the false facts thus suggested ' Appellou
Ex 227

S. 1

Scope of the section The witness must not be examined in chief by means of 1-1-2 allowed to frame his questions to the witness in such form as to suggest what answer he desires to receive Wills 2d Ed p 315 Such evidence would obviously be inadmissible of the party Phipps v 166 Court of appeals of all Courts excluded terms

Reg IV of 1797, s 6, Madras Reg VII of 1827, s 36) the oldest of the Regulation Presidency of Bengal) and which may be taken in principle as a sample of the others, provides — 'In the examination of witnesses leading questions suggesting an answer, or having a tendency to such suggestion, are to be carefully avoided, and the interrogatories to them are to be proposed in such general terms as may bring forth all the information they possess and lead to a discovery of the truth' Up to the point of dispute, however,—that is while the examination is introductory only to what is material,—the witness may be led. Were it otherwise a very unnecessary consumption might be had of the time of the Court, and a great infliction practised on its patience Goodeve

'It is often a convenient way of examining' says Mr. Alison to ask a witness whether such a thing was said or done, because the thing mentioned aids his recollection and brings him to that stage of the proceeding to which it is desired he should dilate. But this is not always fair, and when any subject is approached, on which his evidence is expected to be really important, the proper course is to ask him what was done or what was said, or tell his own story. In this way also, if the witness is at all intelligent & more consistent and intelligible statement will generally be got there by putting separate questions' Alison's Practice, 546

But the determination of what is, and what is not leading is in itself frequently one of difficulty, whenever the test has to be applied to any particular question. And the particular difficulty on the one hand is to secure that all the essential portion of the narrative be given in its entirety, and on the other to prevent a needless prolixity of statement. It is not a very easy thing says Mr Stirling, to lay down any precise general rule as to leading questions. On the one hand, it is clear that the mind of the witness must be brought into contact with the subject of enquiry, and on the other hand that he ought not to be prompted to give a particular answer - a leading question to which the answer 'yes' or 'no' would be conclusive to particularize in framing the question each individual case. Stirling on Evidence p. 101.

The "Yes or No" test suggested by Mr. Starke is not however as submitted a very accurate and at all events must not be taken as an universal one. There are many instances in which it would be the natural response, without the question which evoked it being leading. Thus, suppose it was required might be natural requisite present? the quest words, to other hand all such question as— Did one say so and so? or did he do so and so, —while obviously capable of being answered by the curt—"Yes or No,"—would by suggesting what it was required of the witness to state, naturally provoke the reply. An illustration may be supplied from the duly practice of all Courts, where the question is one of personal identification. If there be no ground of suspicion, the individual is pointed out to the witness, as he is asked directly,—"Is that the party?" and the answer is the simple—"Yes or No." Let the witness, however, be suspected, the question would not be allowed to be put in that form, and the witness would be told to look round the Court, and point out the individual in question. The invitation to the answer—"Yes or No"—would, in truth be leading or not, according to the circumstances. Goodeve Et 217

One great test as to whether a question were to be regarded as leading would be its tendency to elicit an answer conveying rather in itself the result of facts, than a statement of the facts themselves, from which the Court was to draw the result. Thus, if it were a question of some given arrangement come to at a
 was
 and such e, leaving
 is necessary,
 d one, where le the mind inquiry, when hecks upon ight require

Winn v. L. D. 101, Goodell L. D. 218

Merely suggestions in the way of stimulants to the memory accordingly would not fall within the category of leading questions, and may be made wherever the incapacity to answer sufficiently appears to arise either from want of recollection, or absence of some connecting link with the subject of examination. Thus the names of persons, or places, or dates, may be suggested, and sometimes particular transactions, or connecting circumstances. Though a touch stings only to memory, they might awaken the whole association in the mind, all the entire tune. In a firm, the names might e them on repetition, but could not rehearse them from memory. So he might be asked as to his knowledge or recollection of a particular date or circumstance, and he might be led from them to more detailed allusions as to occurrences in connection with them. have made a given statement which another particular conversation, offers, statements, or other matters sworn to have been made in the course of a conversation. In such cases, therefore, this form of enquiry is absolutely necessary for obtaining complete information on the subject. So where a witness is called to prove affirmatively what a witness on the other side has denied, as for instance, to prove that on some former occasion, that witness gave a may frequently arise in proving e such other statement, without a ough, C J said: "I have always the meaning of a leading question was an advocate who produces a Leading questions such as can properly be put in cross examination of a hostile witness cannot be put by the Public Prosecutor in examination-in-chief. Dhannu Beldar v. Emperor, 2 Pat L T 737. The refusal to allow a question to be put in cross-examination merely because it was in form a leading question would be improper. If it is so disallowed the counsel should ask both the question and the order to be recorded. Dey v. King Emperor, 9 L. R. 88 = 9 Bur. L. T. 133 = 17 Cr. L. J. 500 = 36 Ind. Cas. 468

If objected to, etc. If the objection is not taken at the time, the answer will be taken down in the Judge's notes. Sometimes the Judge himself will interfere to prevent a leading question or series of leading questions being put; but it is the duty of the opposing counsel to take the objection, and it is only

At the same time, it is of leading questions

much weakened, for scarcely escapes the notice of the Judge. It is advisable, therefore, for a counsel, examining in chief or on re-examination, not to put leading questions except of course as to those points on which they are expressly permitted by the Act. Nort Ev 325

The Court shall examine from being open to review, (Lauder v D 681, Exp Bottomly it seems any in the interest cases (Phipson Ev 453) —

(1) Introductory matters. — Leading questions may always be asked on merely introductory matters, such as name or occupation of a witness. Cockle's Cas 266. So also leading questions are proper where they are merely introductory and designed to lead the witness more quickly to matters which are material to the issue. For example, in cases of conversations, admissions or agreements, the attention of the witness may be drawn to the subject, occasion, time, place, &c. — anything on said. Questions and if so, what he and experience of a witness are largely within the discretion of the Court, and, unless it manifestly appear that such questions are put for an improper purpose, such discretion is not receivable as error. Burr Jones § 817

"The good sense of the rule" says Mr W D Evans in his Notes to Pothier II, 226, "is perfectly manifest with respect to all cases where the question propounded involves an answer immediately bearing upon the merits of the cause and indicating to the witness a representation which will best accord with the interests of the party. But where the questions are merely introductory, where the mere answer of 'yes' or 'no' will leave the point of the case precisely as it found it and a — inquiry to be reluctant position to interrupt the course of examination

2 On other matters not in dispute. A question is not objectionable as leading when it relates to matters as to which there is no dispute. In most cases it is necessary to prove a certain number of uncontested facts, in order that Judge and the perin put in th

3 Assisting memory. Even upon points which are keenly contested between the parties who calls him to sought to be inquired indication of the point be unintelligible. that "A was a bankrupt" appear in the next Gazette, reasons was allowed to be asked, Nichols v Dowding 1 Stark 51 remember the suggestion, but allowed to be the terms by questions necessary for that; if his memory is at fault, I may suggest contemporaneous events, with a view to stimulate or fix his recollection" Wigmore § 777. It is not necessary to name all the details, the mention of one or more of the remainder of the person's adult A related situation is that of a person too ill or too lethargic of speech to be able to articulate sentences; here the sentences may be framed for him suggestively, leaving him as little as possible to articulate and yet avoiding the danger of a misunderstood signal of assent or dissent Wigmore § 778.

be in the highest degree unfair so to prompt the witness. Best v. Wharf 502. See also Berenger if the witness has a question, cases often here it would be in the highest degree unfair so to prompt the witness. Best v. Wharf 502.

5 Contradiction Another exception arises where it is desired to show that a witness on the opposite side has, at another time made a statement contrary to his present statement. When the attention of such witness has been called to his alleged contradictory statement, and he has answered the direct question whether the parts of his statement are true, See Stark 7, on this, h a case, the, and relative, leading form, ence, Taylor, should only, the cause; the, parts of the, ere, however,, radiation, the, Ev 414.

6 Adverse witness A similar situation arises where the witness, though called by party examining, is in fact biased against his cause and in this case his testimony is adverse. In such a case, See Stark 7, on this, h a case, the, and relative, leading form, ence, Taylor, should only, the cause; the, parts of the, ere, however,, radiation, the, Ev 414.

Discretion of the court in allowing or refusing leading questions is not generally a ground for appeal. See Stark 7, on this, h a case, the, and relative, leading form, ence, Taylor, should only, the cause; the, parts of the, ere, however,, radiation, the, Ev 414.

stated that the right to lead in cross examination exists whether the witness be favourable or not. Parkin v Moon 7 C & P 408 In that case the plaintiff's witnesses (who, it seemed, were willing one on the part of the usual way. The defendant's leading questions ought not to be put to person B in admitting leading questions said: 'I apprehend you may put leading questions to an unwilling witness on the examination in chief at the discretion of the Judge, but you may always put a leading question in cross examination whether a witness be unwilling or not

Further question: 'Will you allow him for asking questions of a witness unwilling or not?' (Parker v Moon 7 C & P 409) some restriction should surely be imposed where the witness betrays a vehement desire to serve the cross examining party. It is no answer to say that the party, who originally called the witness has brought the evil on his own head for a fraudulent witness might purport to conceal his lies in favour of one party, and thus induce the other to call him, or he might be an attesting witness, or other person whom it was necessary to examine in order to establish some technical part of the case. To allow such a witness to have the most favourable answers suggested to him through the medium of leading questions, would be obviously unjust. Taylor Ev § 1431 In America the Judge in his discretion, may prohibit leading questions from being put to an adversary's witness, who shows a strong interest or bias in favour of the cross examining party and needs only an intimation to say whatever is more favourable to his cause. Mooly v Howell 17 Pick 495, Taylor § 1431

What may be in the mind of the witness at the time he gives his evidence, is not for the jury to decide. It affords the witness an opportunity to state what he really intended to say, and not what he has stated to the jury. Conversely such a question may become improper on cross examination because it may by implication put into the mouth of a witness, a statement which he never intended to make, and thus incorrectly attribute to him testimony which is not his. Wigmore § 780, Courteen v Fouse 1 Camp 43, Edmonds v Walter 3 Stark 8 The law on the subject was thus laid down by Mr Joseph Chitty in his Practice of the Law, 2nd Ed 111 91 'It is an established rule as regards cross examination, that a counsel has no right, even in order to detect or catch a witness in a falsity, falsely to assume or pretend that the witness had previously sworn or stated differently to the fact or that a matter had previously been proved when it had not. In fact if a witness is debased below the level of a St Tr 751 Mr Erskine alleged seditious meeting asked: 'Then you were never a spy?'—As you call it, you take any title you choose. I say there should be no name given to a witness on his examination. He states what he went for, and in making observations on the evidence, you may give it any appellation you please. After repetition of the practice, Mr Gibbs on the other side contended: 'I am sorry to interrupt you but your question is the proper one of a cross examination. You can but perjure him.'—us you have done just now. Mr Erskine: 'But, on a cross examination or counsel are not called to be so exact. The questions that are put are not to be upon all the previous parts of the evidence of everybody, they load us in point of time so much, and that that the time for observation upon the character and situation of a witness is so apparent that as a rule of evidence it ought never to have been departed from," Higmore § 780.

144. Any witness may be asked, whilst under examination, whether any contract, grant or other disposition of property, as to which he is giving evidence, was not contained in a document and if he says that it was, or if he is about to make any statement as to the contents of any document, which, in the opinion of the Court, ought to be produced, the adverse party may object to such evidence being given until such document is produced, or until facts have been proved which entitled the party who called the witness to give secondary evidence of it.

Explanation.—A witness may give oral evidence of statements made by other persons about the contents of documents if such statements are in themselves relevant facts.

Illustration

The question is, whether A assaulted B.
C deposes that he heard A say to D and I will be revenged on him.' The motive for the assault, and evidence may be given about the letter

Object of the section In this section we have a rule for the purpose of currying
evidence
grant or
writing.
document enforced, or the right to give secondary evidence made out by this section merely points out the manner in which the provisions of sections 91 and 92 as to the exclusion of oral by documentary evidence may be enforced by the party to the suit. 'Documents which in the opinion of the Court might be produced' would of course include the cases referred to in section 91 where the law requires a matter to be reduced to the form of a document. Care must, however, be taken not to apply it to cases in which oral evidence is given of statements of other people about the contents of documents, when those statements are relevant (vide illustration). Suppose for instance, that the question was whether A had murdered B. A witness might prove that A had said "B's bond is inequious, I will kill him sooner than pay it," without the bond being produced, the reason obviously being that what the witness wants to prove is not the contents of the document, but A's feeling about the contents of the document, as applying a motive for his crime. Cun Li pp 64, 326.
Even where the adverse party does not object it is the duty of the Court not to allow inadmissible evidence. Yule § 298. Criminal Procedure Code; Imperial v. Deol 100 Ind 53 (67=29 C W N 300. A private duty containing
for
like under ss 141, 144 and 155 make the document itself evidence
11=23 Ind Cas 893

145. A witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in writing or into writing and relevant to matters in question, without such writing being to him, or being proved, but, if it is

Cross examination
as to previous statements in writing

showing to the tribunal either that the witness cannot remember or incorrectly members or that he is willing to falsify as to the contents, is entirely taken way by the requirement that the writing must be shown to him at that stage the rule, then, so far as it does not allow the counsel to wait until the putting in his own case, but requires him in a lance, before cross-examining, to produce and to show the writing to the witness, is both unsound in principle and unfair policy." Green v Er § 157(a)

Scope of the section Under this section a witness may be cross examined as to previous statements made by him in writing, when his attention may be drawn to the parts of the former writing which are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him. But in the examination in chief, before the Court of Session, his attention should not be directed to his deposition before the Magistrate. Queen v Rinchandra, 13 W R 13 Cr. The complainant's pleader

ing
80, ving
the
gment, Annie J said: "We observe that the Deputy Magistrate was together wrong in refusing to allow the complainant's pleader in cross examination to question the witness as to the facts of the case made statements before the Magistrate on the first time. He was, moreover, at liberty to cross examine the witnesses, as to previous statements made by them and reduced to writing, without showing the writing to the witness. Queen v Rinchandra, 13 W R 13 Cr. The Deputy Magistrate per bat the act and is e used as explaining o i not given evidence"

Where a person employed by another for the purpose of writing up his account books had made entries therein on information furnished by that other person, such entries could not be regarded as previous statements made by him in writing which could be given in evidence to contradict him as witness. Tuchershaw v New Dhermsey, 4 B 476

If the defence wishes to cross examine a witness on a previous deposition drawn to him. In such the whole the time of argument with a view to the discrepancies being pointed out. In view of the strict Subbiah v Emperor, 1929 M W N 789. In view of the strict ment which are practice in this (v)=26 A L 1930 Lah 991, 59, Kallam v

The deposition of a witness which has not been read over to the witness. act be witness at 15
04 Ind Cas 10
previous statements of a prosecution witness used under s 145, for cross examining the person or under s 155 of the Evidence Act for discrediting the evidence of the witness cannot be used as substantive evidence against the accused. Bishen Dutt v Emperor, 25 A L J 991=105 Ind. Cas. 677=28 Cr L J 915=A. I R 1927 All 705

It is not necessary in order that an accused person may be allowed under s. 163 to contradict a statement used by the witness of what the witness saw. 45 C L J 561 = I R 1927 Cal 644, see also Jadunandan v Emperor, 101 Ind Crs 212 = A I R 1927 Oudh 321.

Writing need not be produced in absence of intention to contradict. Ramalakshmi v Naqaram, 93 Ind Crs 133 = A I R 1925 Mad 145 - 48 M L J 59. A statement made by a witness before a coroner is admissible at the trial of the accused for the purpose of impugning his statement. Ind.

A statement made by a witness cannot be disbelieved without his attention being drawn to the documents inconsistent with his examination. Ram v A. 138 = 33 M L T 303. egam v Ali Begam, 138 = 33 M L T 303. UP W R 1914-127 P L R 1914-22 Ind Crs 861.

Where the purpose of the production of the document must have been well understood by the witness and from the record of the deposition it was manifest that after being shown the document, he was directly asked whether it was not a fact that he was at a particular place on the alleged date as was clear from the document and when on re-examination no attempt was made to elicit explanation; Held the witness was properly contradicted. Bukhari Nath v Prasannomoyi, 1923 P C 109. Where a Court finds certain discrepancies between a witness's statement made before it and that previously made before another Court, the witness should be asked to explain them as required by s. 145 of the Evidence Act. S. v. Datt, 1921 Ind Crs 291.

Previous statements, unless used to impeach a witness given in the suit, cannot be used for any other purpose. un- less the specific statement they cannot be used Crs 267. The evidence conditions and for the purposes described in the Evidence Act, section 145. Nga Seik v Aja Pu U B R (1913) 3rd Qr 181 = 22 Ind Crs 676. The deposition of a witness in a previous case is not relevant in a subsequent case in which he is examined, except to contradict him. Queen Nolo v Kristo 8 W R Cr 87. Although section 145 of the Evidence Act admits of previous statements being referred to, for purpose of cross-examination, it does not authorise a Court to treat such statements as evidence against an accused. Ritua v Emperor, 157 P L R 1911 = 10 Ind Crs 119 = 12 Cr L J 214.

In a trial for giving false evidence the record of a previous deposition is not admissible.

to the Evidence Act to try to impeach a witness by means of contradictory statement unless the contradictory statement is put to him in cross-examination. Maung San v. Emperor, Ind Rul (1930) Rang 91.

Police diaries. It is only what is written in the Police diaries that can be used under s. 115 of the Evidence Act to contradict the witness and what the Sub-Inspector of Police stated that a witness said or did not say, is inadmissible. The way to prove these portions of the written statement of a witness which have been specifically put to him in order to contradict him is for the accused to mark the passage or passages in the copy from the police diary given to him and then to ask the writer of the statement to say that it is a true copy. Dharam Singh v Emperor, 105 Ind Cas 162-21 Cr L J 313-A I R 1928 Lah 507-9 A. I. Cr. R 567. If police diary is used, the provisions of s. 145, Evidence Act and s. 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code will have to be borne in mind. Ashu Rani v Emperor, 26 A. L. J 159-9 L R 11 Cr-109 Ind Cas 120-29 Cr L J 472 (2)-A I R 1928 All 250. A Police officer who recorded the statements cannot be cross-examined under section 161 of the Evidence Act, with regard to such statements, such cross-examinations being allowable only with regard to the entries properly recorded in the diary kept under s. 172 Cr. P. Code, if the Police officer refers to such entries for the purpose of refreshing his memories. Dillon Goss v Emperor, 33 C 1023-10 C. W. N 890-1 Cr L J 79.

Where a police officer making an investigation under this section took statements from the persons who were afterwards called as witnesses, the accused person would be entitled to call for and inspect such documents and cross-examine the witness thereon, as such statements would not amount to a portion of the diary referred to in section 172. Jhkas v Queen Empress, 16 C 610; Sheru Sha v Queen Empress, 20 C 612, Empress v Dhanu, 21 C 140, W N 193, Empress v Salera Teh 9 C P 1. A statement made by a witness can be used only to contradict the witness. King Emperor v Kumaramuthu 29 Cr L J 251, Dhulai v King Emperor, 11 Cr L J 117. Only those portions of the statements of witnesses made before the police as have been actually used under s. 162, Criminal Procedure Code, to contradict the witness in the manner provided in s. 115, Evidence Act, in the course of the trial are admissible. Statements made by a witness in parts of the judicial record and in parts of the statements cannot be used in determining the guilt or innocence of the accused. Ind Rul (1920) Lah 162.

First Information
 person
 corrobor
 Evidence
 Act prov
 Emperor
 Hayat
 R. 1923
 Un
 execution,
 applies to
 is bound
 a copy th
 part of trial or if
 and is opinion
 this copy
 in the r
 Lab, L
 also Em
 S'0, Ha
 348-A J 14-
 put to th
 Emperor v I Statem
 enti
 the
 41 C
 was Amudly v. Emperor
 crimination report against th

was Asmudly v. Emperor
 crimination report against th

S. 14

It is not necessary in order that an accused person may be allowed under s 162 to contradict the very words used by the random of wh
 45 C L J
 I R 1927 Cal 644, see also Jadunandan v R 1927 Oudh 321

Writing need not be produced in absence of intention to contradict Ramakka v Nagaram, 92 Ind Cas 133=A I R 1925 Mad 145=48 M. L J 89
 A statement made by a witness before a coroner is admissible at the trial of the accused for the purpose of impugning the credit of the witness, even though the accused had no opportunity to cross-examine the witness Emperor v Raghuo, 28 Bom L R 775=97 Ind Cas 37=27 Cr L J 1061=A I R 1926 Bom 404

A report made by a Police officer in connection with an enquiry made by him in the exercise of his lawful jurisdiction is not admissible in evidence in a judicial proceeding unless the Police officer is examined as a witness Billoo Ram v Kunkun Ram, 88 Ind Cas 586=A I R 1925 All 808 A witness cannot be disbelieved without his attention being drawn to the documents inconsistent with his examination or further cross-examination I 138=33 M L T 309 (P C)=1923 egam v Ali B qam, 9 P W R 1914=127 P L R 1914=22 Ind Cas 861

Where the purpose of the production of the document must have been well understood by the witness and from the record of the deposition it was manifest that after being shown the document, he was directly asked whether it was not a fact that he was at a particular place on the alleged date as was clear from the document and when on re-examination no attempt was made to elicit explanation, Held the witness was properly contradicted Bailauth Nath v Prasannomoy, 1923 P C 409 Where a Court finds certain discrepancies between two depositions before another Court, it is not necessary to require a witness to produce the original document before another Court. See s 145 of the Evidence Act. Previous statement of a witness given in the suit, cannot be legitimately used, and even then the particular matter or point must be placed before the witness as one for explanation in view of its discrepancy with the evidence tendered, unless the specific statements are put to the parties sought to be contradicted, they cannot be used in evidence. Thunlan Nath v D. N. Nath, 1923 P C 207 The evidence in a previous case is not relevant in a subsequent case in which he is examined, except to contradict him. Queen Nolo v Kristo, 8 W R Cr 87 statements being made before a Court to contradict the evidence of a witness in a previous deposition. See s 145 of the Evidence Act. See also Emperor v 157

When the depositions in a former criminal trial were used to contradict the evidence of a witness in a subsequent trial, it is not necessary to produce the original document before another Court. See s 145 of the Evidence Act. See also Emperor v 157 to the Evidence Act statement Maung Sar.

Police diaries: It is only what is written in the Police diaries that can be used under s. 115 of the Evidence Act to contradict the witness and what the material to the issue, he might be afterwards contradicted by secondary evidence. Still the question remains, as to whether the cross-examining party might first interpose evidence out of his own turn, to prove the loss or destruction of the document, or to show that it was in the hands of the opponent, that he had notice to produce it, and that he refused to do so; and might then cross-examine the witness as to its contents. Taylor § 1447; Green P. § 161.

Admission not put to party. When an admission is not put to the party making it and the party making it is not examined on it under s 145, the admission is not legal evidence, and is not admissible. Muhar ram v Birkitt, A I R 1939 Lah. R Lah 1923
 114, Saradamba v Putta Biharam, I L J 11
Guj v Emperor, A I R 1930 Lah 191. Failure to object to the admission of a previous statement made by a witness does not amount to the use of it as substantive evidence or its use against the provision of s 145 of the Evidence Act. Ganley v Buldeo, A I R 1929 Pat 485.

146. When a witness is cross-examined, he may, in addition to the questions hereinbefore referred to, be asked any questions which tend—

Questions lawful in cross-examination

- (1) to test his veracity,
- (2) to discover who he is and what is his position in life, or
- (3) to shake his credit, by injuring his character, although the answer to such questions might tend directly or indirectly to criminate him or might expose or tend directly or indirectly to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture.

Scope of the section. Sections 132, 136, 137 and 148 together embrace the whole range of questions which can properly be addressed to a witness. R v Gopal Das 3 M 271 (273). In section 138 it is stated that cross-examination must relate to relevant facts. In addition to questions on those facts a witness can be asked any questions as regards the facts mentioned in this section. So this section extends the power of cross-examination far beyond the limits of section 138, which confines the cross-examination to relevant facts, including facts in issue. Markby Ev p 106. All the questions covered by s 146 are governed by the provisions of ss 143, 173. Ibid p 107. Sections 148 152 were intended to protect the witness against being improperly cross-examined. Ibid p 107. "Cross-examination to credit is necessarily irrelevant to any issue in the action, its relevancy consists in being addressed to the credit or discredit of the witness in the box so as to show that his evidence for or against the present witness is that he was uncomfortable when he accounts is to adopt a course which the George Farwell, in Bombay Cotton Mutual Shirlal, 19 C W N 617—171. statement of a witness being testimony, when require the examination of the witness always be understood. J in Perkins usually allowed great latitude of enquiry, III only by the judge in the trial, of principle, the skill, the

6.

of answers with each

the parties respectively, and th of confidence they may safe Hathaway v Crocker, 7 Metc 266; Wigmore § 941

the truthfulness and our any question to that a question may tend to fairly directed towards 259 It is permissible edit but when questions answered them, the ex not allowed. Many examination it is usual to 1933 Cal 474.

To test his veracity A witness may be cross examined not only as to all facts which reasonably tend to affect the cross examination
which are relied on some of the witness

But this term is perhaps somewhat misleading as suggesting that any cross examination is permissible which tends in any way whatever to disparage the character of the witness unless it has so of knowledge, 2nd Ed 823.
witnesses was 1

R 67 (H L) "I cannot help saying, that it seems to be absolutely essen tial to the proper conduct of a cause, where it is intended to suggest that a witness is not speaking the truth on a particular point, to direct his attention to the fact is intended altogether

that imputation
it by as a matter
to explain,
has been put to him,
story he tells ought
of credit My lord,
witness you are bound
making any explanation
only a rule of profes sional practice in the conduct of a case, but it is essential to fair play and fair dealing with witnesses Sometimes reflections have been made upon excessive cross examination of witnesses, and it has been complained of as undue, but it seems to me that a cross-examination of a witness which errs in the direction of cases may be far more fair to him than to leave him without cross examination, and afterwards to suggest that he is not a witness of truth.

I mean upon a point on which it is not otherwise perfectly clear that he has had full notice beforehand that credibility

ment that misshapely

impeached, and is to be impeached, in ry to waste time in putting questions to him will not do to impeach the credibility of a witness upon a matter on which he has not had any opportunity of giving an explanation by reason of there having been no suggestion whatever in the course of the case that his story is not accepted "

To discover who he is and what is his position, etc As preliminary to common practice
more behalf he was clings towards the crimisable in order
in favour of the § 259 "The range

(external circumstances from which probably bias may be inferred is infinite. Too much refinement in analysing their probable effect is out of place. Accurate concrete rules are almost impossible to formulate, and where possible are usually undesirable. In general these circumstances should have some clearly

... or, as it is usually
... sorts of circumstances
... to one of the parties
... (L. 7 C & P 350), or
... than a party who is involved on one
... is otherwise prejudiced for or against one
... ment, present or past, by one of the parties, is also usually relevant. The tendency of civil litigation between the witness and the opponent is usually relevant not only as a circumstance tending to create feeling but also as involving conduct expressive of feeling; and while the mere fact of litigation upon a disconnected matter may not necessarily show bias, still it is well to attempt to distinguish and refine for the purpose of exclusion. That the witness is or has been under indictment may have several bearings: (1) if the indictment, present or past, was laid by the opponent's procurement or for an injury to him, it is relevant as having tended to excite in the witness a hostile feeling to him; (2) if the indictment was

tion can be attempted suggestion of personal prejudice; and the decision should be left entirely in the hands of the trial Judge. Higmore § 919

Character — ... of the Evidence Act, ch 57
gi ne
m te
bi
his untruthfulness, are actual qualities having probative force because conceived of as existing in or attributed to him or more of these qualities, to restore reputation is not the immediate, telling reason.
bias, resorted to for ure the impor position,
and a

Kind of character, Veracity as the Fundamental Quality from the point of view of modern psychology, the moral disposition which tends for or against truth in connection with other testimony, is of testimonial credit. In determining the relevancy of character as affecting the credit to be given to a witness, since the truth upon and in his case or as and for quality, or probal leads us bad more truth This must be inference Character

er, any other trait or ... involving necessarily truth telling This namely, whether ity in particular,

is admissible. The argument for the use of bad general character to discredit a witness is, in brief, that it necessarily involves an impairment of the truth telling capacity, that to show general moral degeneration is to show an inevitable degeneration in veracity, and that the former is often more easily betrayed to observation than is the latter. Wigmore § 922. The argument in favor of the above statement is thus forcefully stated by Toomer J in State v Boswell 2 Dev 210, 'Should a witness, whose general character is proverbially false to licentiousness and lewdness, who in his habit is regardless of the precepts of religion and reckless of the consequences of vice, be entitled to the same credit as another whose character is without stain, and whose whole life has been marked by piety, virtue and truth? An unprincipled man, although grovelling in other vices which he has long practised, may for selfish purposes artfully conceal the weakness of his character on the score of veracity. Should not such habits lessen the weight and impair the credit of a witness, although he may have established no general character bad as to truth?' 'The arguments made in answer to these' says Prof Wigmore 'are chiefly three (1) that as a matter of human nature, a bad general disposition does not necessarily or commonly involve a lack of veracity, and that therefore the former is of little or no bearing probatively, (2) that the estimate of an ordinary witness as to another's bad general character is apt to be formed loosely from uncertain data and to rest in large part but on personal prejudice and on mere differences of opinion as to facts of belief or conduct,—a chance of error which is relatively in Atwood v Impson, 40 N. J. 341, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, 1879, 1880, 1881, 1882, 1883, 1884, 1885, 1886, 1887, 1888, 1889, 1890, 1891, 1892, 1893, 1894, 1895, 1896, 1897, 1898, 1899, 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905, 1906, 1907, 1908, 1909, 1910, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923, 1924, 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930, 1931, 1932, 1933, 1934, 1935, 1936, 1937, 1938, 1939, 1940, 1941, 1942, 1943, 1944, 1945, 1946, 1947, 1948, 1949, 1950, 1951, 1952, 1953, 1954, 1955, 1956, 1957, 1958, 1959, 1960, 1961, 1962, 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966, 1967, 1968, 1969, 1970, 1971, 1972, 1973, 1974, 1975, 1976, 1977, 1978, 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988, 1989, 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995, 1996, 1997, 1998, 1999, 2000, 2001, 2002, 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009, 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015, 2016, 2017, 2018, 2019, 2020, 2021, 2022, 2023, 2024, 2025, 2026, 2027, 2028, 2029, 2030, 2031, 2032, 2033, 2034, 2035, 2036, 2037, 2038, 2039, 2040, 2041, 2042, 2043, 2044, 2045, 2046, 2047, 2048, 2049, 2050, 2051, 2052, 2053, 2054, 2055, 2056, 2057, 2058, 2059, 2060, 2061, 2062, 2063, 2064, 2065, 2066, 2067, 2068, 2069, 2070, 2071, 2072, 2073, 2074, 2075, 2076, 2077, 2078, 2079, 2080, 2081, 2082, 2083, 2084, 2085, 2086, 2087, 2088, 2089, 2090, 2091, 2092, 2093, 2094, 2095, 2096, 2097, 2098, 2099, 2100, 2101, 2102, 2103, 2104, 2105, 2106, 2107, 2108, 2109, 2110, 2111, 2112, 2113, 2114, 2115, 2116, 2117, 2118, 2119, 2120, 2121, 2122, 2123, 2124, 2125, 2126, 2127, 2128, 2129, 2130, 2131, 2132, 2133, 2134, 2135, 2136, 2137, 2138, 2139, 2140, 2141, 2142, 2143, 2144, 2145, 2146, 2147, 2148, 2149, 2150, 2151, 2152, 2153, 2154, 2155, 2156, 2157, 2158, 2159, 2160, 2161, 2162, 2163, 2164, 2165, 2166, 2167, 2168, 2169, 2170, 2171, 2172, 2173, 2174, 2175, 2176, 2177, 2178, 2179, 2180, 2181, 2182, 2183, 2184, 2185, 2186, 2187, 2188, 2189, 2190, 2191, 2192, 2193, 2194, 2195, 2196, 2197, 2198, 2199, 2200, 2201, 2202, 2203, 2204, 2205, 2206, 2207, 2208, 2209, 2210, 2211, 2212, 2213, 2214, 2215, 2216, 2217, 2218, 2219, 2220, 2221, 2222, 2223, 2224, 2225, 2226, 2227, 2228, 2229, 2230, 2231, 2232, 2233, 2234, 2235, 2236, 2237, 2238, 2239, 2240, 2241, 2242, 2243, 2244, 2245, 2246, 2247, 2248, 2249, 2250, 2251, 2252, 2253, 2254, 2255, 2256, 2257, 2258, 2259, 2260, 2261, 2262, 2263, 2264, 2265, 2266, 2267, 2268, 2269, 2270, 2271, 2272, 2273, 2274, 2275, 2276, 2277, 2278, 2279, 2280, 2281, 2282, 2283, 2284, 2285, 2286, 2287, 2288, 2289, 2290, 2291, 2292, 2293, 2294, 2295, 2296, 2297, 2298, 2299, 2300, 2301, 2302, 2303, 2304, 2305, 2306, 2307, 2308, 2309, 2310, 2311, 2312, 2313, 2314, 2315, 2316, 2317, 2318, 2319, 2320, 2321, 2322, 2323, 2324, 2325, 2326, 2327, 2328, 2329, 2330, 2331, 2332, 2333, 2334, 2335, 2336, 2337, 2338, 2339, 2340, 2341, 2342, 2343, 2344, 2345, 2346, 2347, 2348, 2349, 2350, 2351, 2352, 2353, 2354, 2355, 2356, 2357, 2358, 2359, 2360, 2361, 2362, 2363, 2364, 2365, 2366, 2367, 2368, 2369, 2370, 2371, 2372, 2373, 2374, 2375, 2376, 2377, 2378, 2379, 2380, 2381, 2382, 2383, 2384, 2385, 2386, 2387, 2388, 2389, 2390, 2391, 2392, 2393, 2394, 2395, 2396, 2397, 2398, 2399, 2400, 2401, 2402, 2403, 2404, 2405, 2406, 2407, 2408, 2409, 2410, 2411, 2412, 2413, 2414, 2415, 2416, 2417, 2418, 2419, 2420, 2421, 2422, 2423, 2424, 2425, 2426, 2427, 2428, 2429, 2430, 2431, 2432, 2433, 2434, 2435, 2436, 2437, 2438, 2439, 2440, 2441, 2442, 2443, 2444, 2445, 2446, 2447, 2448, 2449, 2450, 2451, 2452, 2453, 2454, 2455, 2456, 2457, 2458, 2459, 2460, 2461, 2462, 2463, 2464, 2465, 2466, 2467, 2468, 2469, 2470, 2471, 2472, 2473, 2474, 2475, 2476, 2477, 2478, 2479, 2480, 2481, 2482, 2483, 2484, 2485, 2486, 2487, 2488, 2489, 2490, 2491, 2492, 2493, 2494, 2495, 2496, 2497, 2498, 2499, 2500, 2501, 2502, 2503, 2504, 2505, 2506, 2507, 2508, 2509, 2510, 2511, 2512, 2513, 2514, 2515, 2516, 2517, 2518, 2519, 2520, 2521, 2522, 2523, 2524, 2525, 2526, 2527, 2528, 2529, 2530, 2531, 2532, 2533, 2534, 2535, 2536, 2537, 2538, 2539, 2540, 2541, 2542, 2543, 2544, 2545, 2546, 2547, 2548, 2549, 2550, 2551, 2552, 2553, 2554, 2555, 2556, 2557, 2558, 2559, 2560, 2561, 2562, 2563, 2564, 2565, 2566, 2567, 2568, 2569, 2570, 2571, 2572, 2573, 2574, 2575, 2576, 2577, 2578, 2579, 2580, 2581, 2582, 2583, 2584, 2585, 2586, 2587, 2588, 2589, 2590, 2591, 2592, 2593, 2594, 2595, 2596, 2597, 2598, 2599, 2600, 2601, 2602, 2603, 2604, 2605, 2606, 2607, 2608, 2609, 2610, 2611, 2612, 2613, 2614, 2615, 2616, 2617, 2618, 2619, 2620, 2621, 2622, 2623, 2624, 2625, 2626, 2627, 2628, 2629, 2630, 2631, 2632, 2633, 2634, 2635, 2636, 2637, 2638, 2639, 2640, 2641, 2642, 2643, 2644, 2645, 2646, 2647, 2648, 2649, 2650, 2651, 2652, 2653, 2654, 2655, 2656, 2657, 2658, 2659, 2660, 2661, 2662, 2663, 2664, 2665, 2666, 2667, 2668, 2669, 2670, 2671, 2672, 2673, 2674, 2675, 2676, 2677, 2678, 2679, 2680, 2681, 2682, 2683, 2684, 2685, 2686, 2687, 2688, 2689, 2690, 2691, 2692, 2693, 2694, 2695, 2696, 2697, 2698, 2699, 2700, 2701, 2702, 2703, 2704, 2705, 2706, 2707, 2708, 2709, 2710, 2711, 2712, 2713, 2714, 2715, 2716, 2717, 2718, 2719, 2720, 2721, 2722, 2723, 2724, 2725, 2726, 2727, 2728, 2729, 2730, 2731, 2732, 2733, 2734, 2735, 2736, 2737, 2738, 2739, 2740, 2741, 2742, 2743, 2744, 2745, 2746, 2747, 2748, 2749, 2750, 2751, 2752, 2753, 2754, 2755, 2756, 2757, 2758, 2759, 2760, 2761, 2762, 2763, 2764, 2765, 2766, 2767, 2768, 2769, 2770, 2771, 2772, 2773, 2774, 2775, 2776, 2777, 2778, 2779, 2780, 2781, 2782, 2783, 2784, 2785, 2786, 2787, 2788, 2789, 2790, 2791, 2792, 2793, 2794, 2795, 2796, 2797, 2798, 2799, 2800, 2801, 2802, 2803, 2804, 2805, 2806, 2807, 2808, 2809, 2810, 2811, 2812, 2813, 2814, 2815, 2816, 2817, 2818, 2819, 2820, 2821, 2822, 2823, 2824, 2825, 2826, 2827, 2828, 2829, 2830, 2831, 2832, 2833, 2834, 2835, 2836, 2837, 2838, 2839, 2840, 2841, 2842, 2843, 2844, 2845, 2846, 2847, 2848, 2849, 2850, 2851, 2852, 2853, 2854, 2855, 2856, 2857, 2858, 2859, 2860, 2861, 2862, 2863, 2864, 2865, 2866, 2867, 2868, 2869, 2870, 2871, 2872, 2873, 2874, 2875, 2876, 2877, 2878, 2879, 2880, 2881, 2882, 2883, 2884, 2885, 2886, 2887, 2888, 2889, 2890, 2891, 2892, 2893, 2894, 2895, 2896, 2897, 2898, 2899, 2900, 2901, 2902, 2903, 2904, 2905, 2906, 2907, 2908, 2909, 2910, 2911, 2912, 2913, 2914, 2915, 2916, 2917, 2918, 2919, 2920, 2921, 2922, 2923, 2924, 2925, 2926, 2927, 2928, 2929, 2930, 2931, 2932, 2933, 2934, 2935, 2936, 2937, 2938, 2939, 2940, 2941, 2942, 2943, 2944, 2945, 2946, 2947, 2948, 2949, 2950, 2951, 2952, 2953, 2954, 2955, 2956, 2957, 2958, 2959, 2960, 2961, 2962, 2963, 2964, 2965, 2966, 2967, 2968, 2969, 2970, 2971, 2972, 2973, 2974, 2975, 2976, 2977, 2978, 2979, 2980, 2981, 2982, 2983, 2984, 2985, 2986, 2987, 2988, 2989, 2990, 2991, 2992, 2993, 2994, 2995, 2996, 2997, 2998, 2999, 3000, 3001, 3002, 3003, 3004, 3005, 3006, 3007, 3008, 3009, 3010, 3011, 3012, 3013, 3014, 3015, 3016, 3017, 3018, 3019, 3020, 3021, 3022, 3023, 3024, 3025, 3026, 3027, 3028, 3029, 3030, 3031, 3032, 3033, 3034, 3035, 3036, 3037, 3038, 3039, 3040, 3041, 3042, 3043, 3044, 3045, 3046, 3047, 3048, 3049, 3050, 3051, 3052, 3053, 3054, 3055, 3056, 3057, 3058, 3059, 3060, 3061, 3062, 3063, 3064, 3065, 3066, 3067, 3068, 3069, 3070, 3071, 3072, 3073, 3074, 3075, 3076, 3077, 3078, 3079, 3080, 3081, 3082, 3083, 3084, 3085, 3086, 3087, 3088, 3089, 3090, 3091, 3092, 3093, 3094, 3095, 3096, 3097, 3098, 3099, 3100, 3101, 3102, 3103, 3104, 3105, 3106, 3107, 3108, 3109, 3110, 3111, 3112, 3113, 3114, 3115, 3116, 3117, 3118, 3119, 3120, 3121, 3122, 3123, 3124, 3125, 3126, 3127, 3128, 3129, 3130, 3131, 3132, 3133, 3134, 3135, 3136, 3137, 3138, 3139, 3140, 3141, 3142, 3143, 3144, 3145, 3146, 3147, 3148, 3149, 3150, 3151, 3152, 3153, 3154, 3155, 3156, 3157, 3158, 3159, 3160, 3161, 3162, 3163, 3164, 3165, 3166, 3167, 3168, 3169, 3170, 3171, 3172, 3173, 3174, 3175, 3176, 3177, 3178, 3179, 3180, 3181, 3182, 3183, 3184, 3185, 3186, 3187, 3188, 3189, 3190, 3191, 3192, 3193, 3194, 3195, 3196, 3197, 3198, 3199, 3200, 3201, 3202, 3203, 3204, 3205, 3206, 3207, 3208, 3209, 3210, 3211, 3212, 3213, 3214, 3215, 3216, 3217, 3218, 3219, 3220, 3221, 3222, 3223, 3224, 3225, 3226, 3227, 3228, 3229, 3230, 3231, 3232, 3233, 3234, 3235, 3236, 3237, 3238, 3239, 3240, 3241, 3242, 3243, 3244, 3245, 3246, 3247, 3248, 3249, 3250, 3251, 3252, 3253, 3254, 3255, 3256, 3257, 3258, 3259, 3260, 3261, 3262, 3263, 3264, 3265, 3266, 3267, 3268, 3269, 3270, 3271, 3272, 3273, 3274, 3275, 3276, 3277, 3278, 3279, 3280, 3281, 3282, 3283, 3284, 3285, 3286, 3287, 3288, 3289, 3290, 3291, 3292, 3293, 3294, 3295, 3296, 3297, 3298, 3299, 3300, 3301, 3302, 3303, 3304, 3305, 3306, 3307, 3308, 3309, 3310, 3311, 3312, 3313, 3314, 3315, 3316, 3317, 3318, 3319, 3320, 3321, 3322, 3323, 3324, 3325, 3326, 3327, 3328, 3329, 3330, 3331, 3332, 3333, 3334, 3335, 3336, 3337, 3338, 3339, 3340, 3341, 3342, 3343, 3344, 3345, 3346, 3347, 3348, 3349, 3350, 3351, 3352, 3353, 3354, 3355, 3356, 3357, 3358, 3359, 3360, 3361, 3362, 3363, 3364, 3365, 3366, 3367, 3368, 3369, 3370, 3371, 3372, 3373, 3374, 3375, 3376, 3377, 3378, 3379, 3380, 3381, 3382, 3383, 3384, 3385, 3386, 3387, 3388, 3389, 3390, 3391, 3392, 3393, 3394, 3395, 3396, 3397, 3398, 3399, 3400, 3401, 3402, 3403, 3404, 3405, 3406, 3407, 3408, 3409, 3410, 3411, 3412, 3413, 3414, 3415, 3416, 3417, 3418, 3419, 3420, 3421, 3422, 3423, 3424, 3425, 3426, 3427, 3428, 3429, 3430, 3431, 3432, 3433, 3434, 3435, 3436, 3437, 3438, 3439, 3440, 3441, 3442, 3443, 3444, 3445, 3446, 3447, 3448, 3449, 3450, 3451, 3452, 3453, 3454, 3455, 3456, 3457, 3458, 3459, 3460, 3461, 3462, 3463, 3464, 3465, 3466, 3467, 3468, 3469, 3470, 3471, 3472, 3473, 3474, 3475, 3476, 3477, 3478, 3479, 3480, 3481, 3482, 3483, 3484, 3485, 3486, 3487, 3488, 3489, 3490, 3491, 3492, 3493, 3494, 3495, 3496, 3497, 3498, 3499, 3500, 3501, 3502, 3503, 3504, 3505, 3506, 3507, 3508, 3509, 3510, 3511, 3512, 3513, 3514, 3515, 3516, 3517, 3518, 3519, 3520, 3521, 3522, 3523, 3524, 3525, 3526, 3527, 3528, 3529, 3530, 3531, 3532, 3533, 3534, 3535, 3536, 3537, 3538, 3539, 3540, 3541, 3542, 3543, 3544, 3545, 3546, 3547, 3548, 3549, 3550, 3551, 3552, 3553, 3554, 3555, 3556, 3557, 3558, 3559, 3560, 3561, 3562, 3563, 3564, 3565, 3566, 3567, 3568, 3569, 3570, 3571, 3572, 3573, 3574, 3575, 3576, 3577, 3578, 3579, 3580, 3581, 3582, 3583, 3584, 3585, 3586, 3587, 3588, 3589, 3590, 3591, 3592, 3593, 3594, 3595, 3596, 3597, 3598, 3599, 3600, 3601, 3602, 3603, 3604, 3605, 3606, 3607, 3608, 3609, 3610, 3611, 3612, 3613, 3614, 3615, 3616, 3617, 3618, 3619, 3620, 3621, 3622, 3623, 3624, 3625, 3626, 3627, 3628, 3629, 3630, 3631, 3632, 3633, 3634, 3635, 3636, 3637, 3638, 3639, 3640, 3641, 3642, 3643, 3644, 3645, 3646, 3647, 3648, 3649, 3650, 3651, 3652, 3653, 3654, 3655, 3656, 3657, 3658, 3659, 3660, 3661, 3662, 3663, 3664, 3665, 3666, 3667, 3668, 3669, 3670, 3671, 3672, 3673, 3674, 3675, 3676, 3677, 3678, 3679, 3680, 3681, 3682, 3683, 3684, 3685, 3686, 3687, 3688, 3689, 3690, 3691, 3692, 3693, 3694, 3695, 3696, 3697, 3698, 3699, 3700, 3701, 3702, 3703, 3704, 3705, 3706, 3707, 3708, 3709, 3710, 3711, 3712, 3713, 3714, 3715, 3716, 3717, 3718, 3719, 3720, 3721, 3722, 3723, 3724, 3725, 3726, 3727, 3728, 3729, 3730, 3731, 3732, 3733, 3734, 3735, 3736, 3737, 3738, 3739, 3740, 3741, 3742, 3743, 3744, 3745, 3746, 3747, 3748, 3749, 3750, 3751, 3752, 3753, 3754, 3755, 3756, 3757, 3758, 3759, 3760, 3761, 3762, 3763, 3764, 3765, 3766, 3767, 3768, 3769, 3770, 3771, 3772, 3773, 3774, 3775, 3776, 3777, 3778, 3779, 3780, 3781, 3782, 3783, 3784, 3785, 3786, 3787, 3788, 3789, 3790, 3791, 3792, 3793, 3794, 3795, 3796, 3797, 3798, 3799, 3800, 3801, 3802, 3803, 3804, 3805, 3806, 3807, 3808, 3809, 3810, 3811, 3812, 3813, 3814, 3815, 3816, 3817, 3818, 3819, 3820, 3821, 3822, 3823, 3824, 3825, 3826, 3827, 3828, 3829, 3830, 3831, 3832, 3833, 3834, 3835, 3836, 3837, 3838, 3839, 3840, 3841, 3842, 3843, 3844, 3845, 3846, 3847, 3848, 3849, 3850, and complained of as 'lending the authority of their example to the abuse of cross-examination to credit which was quickly followed by barristers of inferior positions, among whom the practice was spreading of assailing witnesses with what was not unfairly called a system of innuendoes, suggestions and bullying from which sensitive persons recoil.' And Mr Charles Gill, one of the many imitators of Russell's domineering style was criticised as 'bettering the instructions of his elders.'

"The complaint against Russell was that by his practices as displayed in the O'Brien case—robbery of jewellers—not only may a man's, or a woman's whole past be laid bare to malignant comment and public curiosity, but there is no increase afforded by the Courts of showing how the facts really stood or of producing evidence to repel the damaging charges.

"Lord Bramwell in an article published originally in Nineteenth Century of February, 1892 and republished in legal periodicals all over the world

...les Russell and his imitators Lord
...perience of forty seven years' practice
...aintenance with the legal profession

...however much repented of, is not the ...consequent loss of character in addition which ...never called to the witness stand' 'Women and whose husband die of poison, must not complain at having the veil that ordinarily screens a woman's life from public inquiry rudely torn aside' 'It is well for the sake of truth that there should be a wholesome dread of cross-examination' 'It should be understood to be no trivial matter, but rather looked upon as a trying ordeal' 'None but the sore feel the probe' such were some of the arguments of the various upholders of broad license in examinations to credit

'Lord Chief Justice Cockburn took the opposite view of the question 'I put ques
when they

all ra fully trem
box

Brodie, shiver as he entered the witness box I unite just as necessary for the adminis entitled to be treated with the ivate lives ought to be held as the Judges or the jurymen I o allow no question to be put to a witness, unless such as are clearly pertinent to the issue before the Court except wh
and that grounds"

147. If any such question relates to a matter relevant to

When witness to be the suit or proceeding, the provisions of compelled to answer section 132 shall apply thereto.

...such" it is presumed refers to the last the word "any", in the earlier part can be asked in cross examination of a twofold character, it may be directly relevant in its bearing on, elucidating, or disproving, the very merits of the points in issue. In such a case, the witness is not protected from answering, notwithstanding the answer may criminate him For section 132 is made applicable to this case. There is another kind of relevancy which is collateral to the issue. Such is the character of the witness, which is always relevant, because if he is dishonest, no faith can be put in the story he utters. Where questions are put to a witness, not for the purpose of proving or disproving the point in issue, but exclusively and merely to show what is the character of the witness, the Court is to decide whether the question is to be answered or not. This appears to differ from section 32 of Act II of 1855 which drew no distinction between the several kinds of relevancy. Under that Act a witness was bound to answer every criminating question, while the proviso threw a protection over him from all criminal consequences, other than those attaching to perjury. Nort Li 329

148. If any such question relates to a matter not relevant

Court to decide when question shall be asked and when witness compelled to answer to the suit or proceeding, except in so far as it affects the credit of the witness by injuring his character, the Court shall decide whether or not the witness shall be compelled to answer it, and may, if it thinks fit, warn the witness that he is not obliged to answer it. In exercising its discretion, the Court shall have regard to the following considerations:—

- (1) such questions are proper if they are of such a nature that the truth of the imputation conveyed by them would seriously affect the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies :
- (2) such questions are improper if the imputation which they convey relates to matters so remote in time, or of such a character, that the truth of the imputation would not affect, or would affect in a slight degree, the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies .
- (3) such questions are improper if there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation made against the witness's character and the importance of his evidence :
- (4) the Court may, if it sees fit, draw, from the witness's refusal to answer, the inference that the answer if given would be unfavourable.

Scope of the section "Such questions" mean the questions referred to asking of such questions that the answer to them might tend to criminate the witness, or expose him to penalty or forfeiture. It is necessary however to make careful

for the merely her th
to the want-
and
to
to us
the
th

the view of testing or injuring the witness's character. When a question is asked merely for this purpose the Court is to decide whether the witness is to be compelled or not to answer it. In deciding whether such a question is proper or not the Court is to consider the effect of the answer on the witness's character.

evidence given. If the evidence is very unimportant, and the imputation on the witness's character very serious, the question ought not to be asked. A witness, for instance, who proves the posting of a letter or the entry of some important item, ought not to be asked questions, the answers to which might blast his reputation. With a view to such considerations as these, it is further provided that the Court may infer from the witness's refusal to answer that the answer, if given, would be unfavourable to him, but that it is not bound to do so." Cum Fr pp 65-66

In Queen v Gopal Day, 3 M 271 (278), Turner C J said "Irrelevant questions should not be allowed, and it may be implied from the limitation in this section (s 118) that a witness should be excused from answering which are irrelevant. To under-connection with the subsequent embrace the whole range of a witness. By section 133 it is enacted that a witness must be examined and cross-examined as to relevant fact

be he cha
If
which I understand no more than was meant by relevant to a matter in issue, the provisions of section 132 are by section 117 declared applicable to it. If it matter in is injuring hi Court will c whether or or not

1

1

Will

an oth

aut

has

to

who ans

in v

cou

with

re

rele

rest

of the

the

to give

a matter which the witness is bound to answer an irrelevant question. On the constraint put upon the witness by the authority bound witness give an expressed isted by quainted rest of the Act impel me to the conclusion that the answers to which a witness has objected or has been constrained by the Court to give. I am led to the same conclusion by a consideration of the alteration that was called for in the English law of Evidence, which the Indian Legislature appear to have had in view. Except where otherwise provided by special law, a witness was bound to give evidence, and if he objected on this ground, the Court considered the objection well founded. It excused him from answering it, on the other hand if the Court improperly refused to excuse the witness, and compelled him to answer, his answer could not be used against him to support a criminal charge, except on a charge of having given false evidence by his answer."

In the same case Muthusami Ayyar J at p 285 and "Section, 149 which confers upon a witness the privilege that is material only in so far as it injures his credit, expressly gives power to the Court not to criminate himself until it is decided that the question must be answered.

Clause (2)—So remote. "On analysing the nature of the argument from a witness's character we find it to be really this. The moral qualities of the person who is now speaking, the probability of his truthfulness, his probability of being sincere or the reverse."

Obviously, our argument, because it believes in the present influence of a witness's disposition upon his testimony, expects and requires us to exhibit to the Court a character at the precise moment directly. We may have to go back only an hour or a day or a week, but we are at least going back some space of time when we call for either personal knowledge (of another witness) or reputation, which cannot possibly carry the proof down to the precise moment of utterance, and, besides this, the character of a former period, more or less distant, always enters into every estimate (reputed or individual) of character even though it may be expressly predicated as of the present moment. Nevertheless there is nothing improper, in the resorting in part or entirely, to the character of a prior time. We are simply adding another step to the argument, for while first using present character to throw light on the probability of shaking the truth, we then have this present character to prove in its turn and we argue from prior character to the probability of its persistence at the time of utterance. The second step of the argument is an

149. No such question as is referred to in section 148

Question not to be asked without reasonable grounds. ought to be asked, unless the person asking it has reasonable grounds for thinking that the imputation which it conveys is well-founded.

Illustrations

(a) A barrister is instructed by an attorney or vakil that an important witness is a dakait. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dakait.

(b) A pleader is informed by a person in Court that an important witness is a dakait, the informant, on being questioned by the pleader, gives satisfactory reasons for his statement. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dakait.

pleader, vakil or attorney of the class referred to in s 149 and gives the Court the names of such Courts as of course in that case a question was asked without Court, but it limits instances mentioned in the sense of being protected from disclosure to the opponent There is no privilege as against the Court The Court's disciplinary power over advocates in relation to g reflecting on the parties as well a charge against is made the charge privileged only instructions; they have a responsibility in the matter and are not justified in making charges of fraud and crime unless they are personally satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for putting them forward Donald Weston v Peary Mohan, 18 C. W. N. 185-40 C 893

"The bill as originally drawn up provided, in substance, that no person should be asked a question which reflected on his character as to matters irrelevant to the case before the Court, without instructions; and if the Court considered the question improper, it might require the production of the instructions; and the giving of such instructions should be an act of defamation, subject, of course, to the various rules about defamation laid down in the Penal Code. To ask such a question in the person asked made to the proposal we first place, that the difficulty was practically insuperable; country were already sufficient; and in the third place—and perhaps this was the most important argument of under so many kind, that be open to amongst the rest, that the sections proposed have accordingly been substituted for

of Sir to 152 were substituted for the old ones as occasions been a grave inconvenience is concerned speak for sound by all honourable act without a few remarks whether she was made pregnant by a certain person The question was objected to by the witness me of rty of estion t as a witness, the Court will have to consider the provisions of s 116 and ss 118 to 120 of the Evidence Act. Subala Devi v Intra Kumar, 1923 Cal 315; see also Panda v Abdul, 65 Ind Cas 693-5 N. I. J 138

In recent and scandalous questions may be put to shake the credit of a witness or as relating to facts in issue; or to determine whether or not a fact in issue existed. If they are put merely to shake the credit of a witness the Court has complete dominion over them and may forbid such questions, even though they may have some bearing on the question before the Court. But if they relate to facts in issue or to matters necessary to be known in order to determine whether or not the facts in issue existed, the Court has no jurisdiction to forbid such questions, though they may be indecent or scandalous. Advocates have ample discretion in the conduct of cases of which they are in charge and the Court cannot better their discretion by insisting that their case should be put to this witness or that. Mahomed v Emperor, 62 Ind. Cas 54-20 Cr L J 566. When a question in cross-examination reflects not on the witness but on the third party, s 150 of the Evidence Act, which must be referred back to s 146 can have no application. Pearry Mohan v Donald Watson, 9 Ind Cas 509. There is nothing in the provisions of the Evidence Act to prevent the prosecution of a person for defamation, if he puts defamatory questions and answers. Weir 819

153. When a witness has been asked and has answered any question which is relevant to the inquiry only in so far as it tends to shake his credit by injuring his character, no evidence shall be given to contradict him; but, if he answers falsely, he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence.

Exception 1—If a witness is asked whether he has been previously convicted of any crime and denies it, evidence may be given of his previous conviction.

Exception, 2.—If a witness is asked any question tending to impeach his impartiality and answers it by denying the facts suggested, he may be contradicted.

Illustrations

(a) A claim against an underwriter is resisted on the ground of fraud. The claimant is asked whether, in a former transaction, he had not made a fraudulent claim. He denies it. Evidence is allowed to show that he did make such a claim.

was not dismissed from a situation for dishonesty

A is asked whether he missed work that day at Calcutta. He denies it.

his question in Lahore. In each of these cases the witness might, if his denial was false, be charged with perjury.

family

He denies it. He may be contradicted on the ground that the question tends to impeach his impartiality.

Principle. to discredit a witness introduce matter that, if controversy about the matter it would be occupied but the merits of the witness, and thus Cun Exp 66 In Attorney General
B said. When the question is not relevant, strictly speaking to the issue, but tending to contradict the witness.

would follow from a continual course of those sorts of cross examinations which

!

of this nature and the time which it is practicable to bestow upon them. If we lived for a thousand years, instead of about sixty or seventy, and every case were of sufficient importance, it might be possible and perhaps proper to throw a light on matters in which every possible question might be suggested, for the purpose of seeing portion of it was no statements made to be impossible. tend to divert the attention of the jury from the real enquiry before them, and the evidence trial of the issue between the real parties to the cause, and such illegal testimony may make of clear and easy proof. If a witness is asked whether he has been previously convicted and denies it, the previous conviction may be proved; and if he is this general rule excluding evidence to contradict a witness can be considered compared with necessary if indefinitely collateral and to prove that he is Ev 2nd

Id 326

Scope of the section. Where a fact which has a direct bearing on the issue is denied by a witness, it may, of course, be proved alibunde. See illustration. the answer. The matter cannot be carried further at the trial, except in the two cases provided by this section. The only redress which a party has, is to charge the witness with perjury, and try him for it. To this rule there are however two exceptions. Nort Et p 332. So the right to cross examine to credit is subject to this rule, that with two exceptions, the answers of the witness as to matters not relevant to the issue are conclusive, in this sense that they cannot be contradicted by evidence in chief on the other side. Baker v. Baker, 32 L. J. P. D. & A. 145. However untrue they may be, they cannot be treated as if their truth or falsity were an issue in the cause. Wills v. Wills, 2nd P. D. 325. The rejection of the

this evil,
hence that Ex R 93

Company,

13 B 297, forms no real exception to the above rule. There an action was brought by a ship owner against underwriters on a policy of insurance, and the plaintiff's claim to recover was for a total loss rested on the abandonment of the vessel by the captain. The captain was called as a witness by the plaintiff, and, on cross-examination, he admitted that he had been an habitual drunkard, and that he had established that fact, and was tending to show that judgment in reference to the abandonment, and that consequently, the judgment actually exercised by him was not entitled to any respect from the jury. Taylor v. Taylor, 1439. Sections 153 and 155 of the Evidence Act must be strictly construed and narrowly interpreted if the cases governed by the Act are to be spared. Bhogal v. Bhogal, 593-103 Ind. does not go 91, on which it is based.

Evidence to contradict relevant facts. Where witnesses have been examined in a particular place, and have given evidence in proof of a fact, it is not to be contradicted by them. It is not to im eviler

the d ted a questi
note
11 B H
one upo
the rule
ance to Without
course
of At which may assist in determining the respective value of conflicting testimony. And where the trial is by a Judge and not by a jury, there is probably less reason for excluding such evidence. Greenleaf on Evidence is incapable of affording any assistance in this matter. It is not

Exception I. At the common law a witness might be cross examined as to whether he had been convicted of any felony or misdemeanour, but if he denied it he could not be contradicted, unless the commission of the offence was relevant to the issue. This state of law was altered as to civil causes by section 25 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. C. 125), and afterwards as to both civil and criminal causes by the statute 28 Vict. C. 18, of which section 6 enacts as follows:—"A witness may be questioned as to whether he has been convicted of any felony or misdemeanour, and, upon being so questioned, if he either denies or does not admit the fact or refuses to answer, it shall be lawful for the cross-examining party to prove such conviction; and a certificate containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction for such offence, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the Court or other officer having the custody of the records of the Court where the offender was convicted or by the Deputy of such clerk or officer (for which certificate a fee of five shillings and no more shall be demanded or taken) shall, upon proof of the identity of the person, be sufficient evidence of the said conviction without proof of the signature or the same. Although

t considered necessarily to admit evidence of examine the witness to his credit with regard to it. Wells v. Wells, 13 L. J. C. P. 696; Wells 2nd Ed 341. Similarly in R. v. Watson, 2 Stark 169, Lord Ellenborough observed: "For the purpose of ascertaining the credit due to witnesses, the Courts indulge free cross-examination; but when a crime is imputed to a witness, the Court knows the case, that a witness is guilty of a crime, and that a witness is not credible."

of auxiliary policy: (1) the reason of confusion of issues and (2) the reason of unfair surprise. Wigmore § 979 S. 1

But when the extrinsic testimony is in the shape of a record of a judgment perate (n) There is no record of acts of misconduct so the judgment cannot be re-opened and no new issues (other than the occasional ones occurring in the process of authentication of the record) are raised thereby, (b) there is no danger of unfair surprise—not, however, because (as is sometimes said) the witness well knows whether he was ever convicted, this assumes the very thing in the contrary. The judgment is not used by the Court. It is a record of a judgment of conviction may be made not because an exception is carved out of the rule, but because the reason of the rule does not apply. Wigmore § 980

A finger print expert was called as a witness who compared certain finger prints of the accused taken in Court with some other finger prints on a paper which contained a record of certain convictions which purported to be the convictions of the accused and pronounced them to be similar. Held that the previous convictions were not properly proved. Ramdas v King Emperor, 21 C W N 469=39 Ind Cas 302

Whether subsequent pardon affects the admissibility of such evidence. A pardon does not remove the admissibility of the original judgment for the purposes of impeachment, for (unless otherwise expressly declared therein) a pardon does not imply a finding of innocence of the person convicted. Mr Finington in arguing in Crosby's Trial 12 How St Tr 1296, said 'Though the offence was taken away by the pardon yet the credit of the party must be diminished thereby, and no consequences of a crime (though it makes a man a new creature, as long as a malicious spirit still remains' "the ground of innocence or to does not change."

conviction of an infamous general character of a person as a witness must be bad is restored by the executive. Doe J in Curtis v Cochran, 50 N H 242, Wigmore § 980

Exception 2 This exception refers to matter which is easily susceptible of proof and strikes at the very root of the witness's trustworthiness. Curtis Ev 383

The legislative Hutchcock 1
always been answer of prove in eye
be allowed
him

I think the expression 'as to subject of inquiry' is far too vague and loose to be the foundation of any judicial decision. And I may say I am not at all prepared to adopt the proposition in the case that a witness may be contradicted as to his being in any way connected with the with the issue as a matter capable must be so far connected with it as to be a matter which if answered in a particular way would contradict a part of the evidence observed as contradicted before the jury at the trial of the witness wards one party or the other. It is certainly allowable to ask a witness in what manner he stands affected towards the opposite party in the cause, and whether he does not stand in such a relation to that person as is likely to affect him and prevent him from . . . whether he has not used expressions . . . d on some one or that he would . . . the cause in one way or the other . . . dence as to what he said,—not with . . . ie, but to show what in the state of . . . may exercise their opinion as to how . . . here you may show the condition of . . . ie parties, are not to be confounded with other cases where it is proposed to contradict a witness on some matter unconnected with the question at issue." In the same case Alderson B said: "The question is this, can you ask a witness as to what . . . of any . . . e at . . . shed . . . ties, . . . ment . . . be . . . tra- . . . ther . . . the . . . ie is . . . that . . . you can with propriety permit a witness to be examined first and contradicted afterwards on a point which is merely and purely collateral." Wigmore § 1020

Particular circumstances and expressions indicating bias; they are therefore also provable in r. G. 49; Wigmore § 1005. In Thomas v "If the question had been whether the . . . that would a charge, whether the . . . e her the . . . why as . . . and had . . . denied that."

A party may call evidence to show that a witness on the other side has . . . motive, . . . ie bias . . . on the . . . called . . . hers to . . . he has . . . epted; . . . rible is . . . offer." . . . less to . . . within . . . 17 Ho . . . id been . . . to him . . . that, as . . . e might . . . Typet, 2

It is allowable to ask a witness in what manner he stands affected towards the opposite party to that per-unprejudiced would be disposed of the cause in one way or the other; and if he denies it, evidence may be given as to what he said not with the view of having a direct effect, but to show what is the state of mind of that witness, in order that the jury may exercise their opinion as to how far he is to be believed. All Gen v. Hitchcock, 1 Ex 93. In an action on a promissory note (in which the defence appears to have been that the note was forged), the female servant of the plaintiff, who was one of the attesting witnesses to the note, was asked on cross examination whether she did not constantly sleep in the same bed with the plaintiff, which she denied. Coleridge J held that a witness might be called by the defendant to contradict her, as the question was whether the witness had contracted such a relation as to be likely to conspire with the plaintiff and been seduced by him, and that the witness was a prostitute, that would have been a collateral fact which could not have been contradicted. Thomas Collier 15 Q B 883, Russ Cr 2319.

154. The Court may, in its discretion, permit the person who calls a witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party.

Question by party to his own witness

Principle The examination of an adverse party sometimes becomes necessary during the examination of a witness, whether or not it necessarily tends to establish a case in favour of the party calling him, and it is not necessary to put questions to him at variance with his statement, when called. A witness may be asked questions which tend to establish a case in favour of the party calling him, and it is not necessary to put questions to him at variance with his statement, when called. A witness may be asked questions which tend to establish a case in favour of the party calling him, and it is not necessary to put questions to him at variance with his statement, when called.

where he seems to have forgotten some material point, it may be supplied in his mind in the form of a leading question. Mackenzie's Ev § 250.

Scope of the section A party is his own witness as correct. It is very clear that a party may prove the truth of material facts, though the effect of such testimony is to directly contradict his own witness, and this, not only when it appears that the witness was innocently mistaken, but even when the witness is shown to have been mistaken. This common law rule has been recognized and is now taken by surprise.

has been previously called by the party, and it is not necessary to put questions to him at variance with his statement, when called. A witness may be asked questions which tend to establish a case in favour of the party calling him, and it is not necessary to put questions to him at variance with his statement, when called.

hand it was possible that the party must be the general rule, that a witness Ph & Am Ev would tend to multiply

S.

of the purpose of its being reserved, and afterwards used to contradict him; and that the jury might regard such a statement as substantive evidence in the cause. Moreover, the use of oaths and other sanctions of truth is to extract facts which parties might be willing to conceal; and the allowing a witness to be thus contradicted holds out an inducement to him to maintain by perjury in Court any false and hostile statements he may have made out of it. Best

Ex. § 615 The following reasoning was put forward on the other side: "It may be argued, the evidence is not open to the objection that the party would thus discredit his own witness by general testimony, that although a party who calls a person of bad character as witness, knowing him to be such, ought not to be allowed to defeat his testimony because it turns out unfavourable to him, by direct proof of general bad character, yet it is only just that he should be permitted to show, if he can, that the evidence has taken him by surprise, and is contrary to the examination of the witness, preparatory to his own statement against the contrivance of himself to an opponent in the interest of that the rule with it ought to be the other, and that the substantive of collusion, be further r the bringing truth, in crim attained by estimating its value more especially, if attended with the

In this state was originally applicable only to Civil Courts but has since been extended (28 & 29 Vict. C 18, ss 1-3) to all Courts of judicature as well criminal as all others, and to all persons having by law or by consent of parties authority to hear, receive, and examine evidence, and which enacts that "A party producing a witness shall not be allowed to impeach his character, but he may, in case the witness prove adverse, contradict him by other evidence that he made at other times testimony of the mention such statements sense of the not merely a party Gre

Adverse witness

appears to be contrary to 261, Taylor 160 Hillman where unfav

Judge shall consider him hostile and (2) that the Judge shall also give leave, which he need not do even though the witness is hostile; Cockburn C J not altogether assenting. In Coles v Coles, L R 1 P & D 70, Sir J P. Wilde said An adverse witness is one who does not give in evidence what the party calling him in which he to the fact's and instructed "adverse" as merely "different" v Wilson, 4 F. & F. 301; Paulner v Brine, 1 F. and F. 254; Martin v. Ins Co 1 F. & F. 505; Anstell v Alexander, 16 L. T. R. N. S. 830, R. 188 In Rice v Howard, L. J. "adverse" as equivalent to 860 (869), Mr Justice Mukerjee the opinion of the Judge, and not merely when his testi Wilde J remarked in Coles one who from the manner in desirous of telling the truth; and secondly, as Lara Campbell v in Paulkner v Brine, 1 F. & F. 254, when a witness is treated as hostile and cross examined by the party calling him, this must be done to discredit the witness altogether and not merely to get rid of part of his testimony; see also Grenough v. Leles, 5 C. B. 786; Reede v. King, 30 L. T. 290; R. v Smith, 11 Cr App R 86, 106 A witness who is gained over by the other party is a hostile witness Parnesuar v Emperor, 94 Ind Crs 705-706 19-44 Ind Cas 33 in manner in which he is willing to go back desirous of telling the truth to the Court Panchanon v. Emperor, A. L. R. 1930 Cal. 276-74 C W 526-51 C. L. J 203 holding a fair account, are also very proper circumstances to be taken into account in forming his decision. A son will not be very forward in stating he has been the only witness; a servant master, be very ready to acknowledge the

Appleton C J said: "If the witness is interest, or withheld to elicit the truth ding questions are r interested by the r & Moo 126, R. v.

Chapman, 8 C. & P. 559; R. v. Bull, 1 C. & P. 715; Ohlson v. Terreno, 1 R. 13 Ch 129; see also Alexander v. Gibson, 2 Campb 556; Bradley v. Ricardo, 8 Bing 57; Friedlander v. London Assurance Co, 4 B & Ad 193. This rule is applicable in cases of witnesses unwilling for any other reason to tell all they may know Parkin v. Moon, 7 C. & P. 109; R. v. Murphy, 8 C. & P. 306; Wigmore § 774; R. v. Ball, 8 C. & P. 745. Putting leading questions to one's own witness with the permission of the Court under ss 151 and 143 of the Evidence Act does not amount to declaring the witness as hostile and cross-examining him so as upon the evidence of the Ind. Rul. (1930) Cal desire to add that in many cases together do not give own witnesses even with that they may, with cross-examine him. The wording of s. 151 shows that the Legislature did not intend to distinguish the law in this country from the law which obtains in England."

Impeachment
Court did not
2 Stra. 100
8 How St.
Trial, Lord
reasons are
is bound to Lord Ellenborough L. C. J. in Alexander v. Gibson 2 Campb 556. "If a witness is called on the part of the plaintiff, who swears what is palpably false, it would be extremely hard if the plaintiff's case should for that reason be sacrificed, but I know of no rule of law by which the truth is on such an occasion to be shut out and justice is to be perverted." Similarly in Bradley v. Ricardo, 8 Bing 58, Tindal C. J. said "The object of all the laws of evidence is to bring the whole truth of his own
witness
of belief having afterwards to impeach their general reputation for truth. Wigmore § 808
Due answer to the question is that the supposed guarantee ought not to be discovered the witness's Another and more satisfactory not to be subserved by having the parties with guarantees and vouchings, and that it is the business of a Court of Justice, whatever Wigmore § 808
trials, neither party does know, and much less does he guarantee the character and trustworthiness of the witness called by him. Chief Justice May, in 11 Amer. 1, it is to be in such order—at least those called are under such persons as happen to have been cognizant of the facts, and all the cases as the parties have selected at their pleasure. In point of fact it is substantially true that parties call particular persons as witnesses simply because they are of legal to and can call no others. If a lawsuit was a manufacture, and the party bringing it could select his materials—facts and witnesses—, there might be some propriety in these materials but as both character is out of the quest he can get to make out

r 19 L J Q B

493 So the Indian Legislature wisely departed from the rule of English law and under this section, a person who calls a witness may with the permission of the Court ask him questions to show his general bad character. Cum Er
384

Prior self contradiction—Party's own witness. Prior self contradiction neutralizes the statement on the stand, by showing that the witness can not be correct in both statements and is as likely to be wrong in the latter as in the former, and further more, that his certain error in this one respect indicates a possibility of error upon other points. But what is not to be necessarily implied from this error is any reflection upon the witness's character nor indeed upon any specific testimonial quality. The implication is merely that in some respect his testimonial capacity is capable of error memory, perhaps through bias or disposition, but not definitely in any one rule forbidding the impeachment of one's own witness does not extend its prohibition to this sort of evidence is of adic

tion as a legitimate reason for such apprehension on the part of the witness. Wignmore § 902, see also Parmeshwar v Emperor, 91 Ind Cas 705=A I R 1926 Pat 316

Calling the other party as a witness. If there is any situation in which the first party is the best person to be called, the party is the best person to be called.

§ 916 But it is not only the defendant at the very outset of the case, to be put in the witness box nominally as plaintiff's of the plaintiff before tell his own story. Max where a plaintiff was cross examine him. Any refusal on the part of Court to allow such cross examination would cause miscarriage of justice. Radhajeetun v Taramonee 12 M I A 380 (393). This case was explained and distinguished by Mookerjee J in Lucharam v Radhacharan 31 C L J 107. His Lordship observed, "In support of this position he placed Committee in Radhajeetun v Taramonee 11 W R P C 31. That decision. There the witnesses summoned for the plaintiff (except one) did not appear. The plaintiff thereupon filed a petition praying that the case might proceed on the basis of the deposition of the plaintiff. The court whether the defendant submitted asked leave to ask further questions to the plaintiff and dismissed the case went up to the Judicial Committee, their Lordships fully concurred in the propriety of that S. 1 censure. The calls the defer

 of right; in a witness called by the Court. If the contention of the appellants were to prevent, it would in emphatic terms I Lal v Chum Lal

... would appear from the judge's report of the artifices of a weak and somewhat cause his opponent to be summoned person who calls a witness to put any question to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party. The rule recognized in Clarke v Saffery, R & M 126 and Boston v Carter, R & M 127, namely, that when the witness stands in a situation which naturally makes him adverse to the party who desires his testimony, as for example, when a defendant is called as the plaintiff's witness, the party calling the witness is entitled to cross-examine him, cannot be held applicable in this country in view of the provisions of section 154 of the Indian Evidence Act. Indeed, even in England, it has been ruled in later cases that the situation in which a witness stands towards either party does not give the party calling the witness a right to cross-examine him unless the witness's evidence be of such a nature as to make it appear that the witness is unwilling to tell the truth; Parkin v Moon, 7 C & P 408, R v Ball, 8 C & P 745, and it now appears to be settled law in England that a party when called by his opponent cannot as of right be treated as hostile, the matter being solely in the discretion of the Court. Price v Manning, 43 Ch D 873.

 ed as one who
 he is not desirous
 P & D 70, G
 47 C 1043-32 C
 Cas 814

Necessary witness
 must be called Hence it is conceded
 ment of the Will Mos & Rob 501
 C J said I
 and consequently the event of one
 as for instance by
 See also Jones v Jones, 21 F L R 855; Pratt
 13. But in Surendra v Raner Doe 21 C Mookerjee said: "We regret that the cross-examination were at Not only were the proceedings to shake the credit of a witness in violation of the provision leading questions were put in provisions of the law. It is pounder was obliged under section 163 of the Act attesting witness to the Will, such witness

... must one of the attesting witnesses ase of a Will (Vide s 68) perishment by the propo
 , Bouman v Bouman, 2
 C S 745 747, Cockburn who claims under a Will,
 tnesses to it, cannot, in

should be treated as a witness called by the Court and liable to be cross-examined, as a matter of right, by this contention cannot be upheld under which provides that the Court may, in its calls a witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party. There is in this respect, no distinction on principle between an attesting witness whom a party is obliged to call and any other witness whom he may cite of his own choice, but the Court may, in the exercise of its discretion, be more easily persuaded in the former case than in the latter. In view of the provision of the Indian Evidence Act, it is thus plain that there is no room for the application, in this country, of the view taken in the case of Bouman v Bouman, 2 Ma & Rob 501, Jackson v. Thomason, 1 B & S 717, and Cole v Coles, L R 1 P. & M. 70, 71, that a necessary witness, that is, one whom a party is compelled to call, is not to be cross-examined by the adverse party. The Court in Jones v Jones, 42 Ch. D (1909) P 101, expressed no doubt that a witness called by a party is liable to be cross-examined by the adverse party. In Jones v Jones, 42 Ch. D (1909) P 101, the Court said: "two important points must be borne in mind, first, that a witness is considered adverse when calling him words, as 'I' from the man of telling the v Brine sup party calling merely to get rid of part of his testimony."

The Court may exercise its discretion as to whether or not it will allow cross-examination of a witness called by the prosecution. In Surendra v Ranees Dass, 24 C W. N. 869 It is not open to the prosecution in a criminal trial to cross-examine a witness called by the Emperor.

1 Pat 758-4 Pat L T 232=24 Cr. L J. 69=71 Ind Cas 117=1923 F. 62, and the proper course in such a case is to give permission to the prosecution to ask the witness a leading question and then to read out evidence before the Court of truth.

S.

The accused are entitled in cross examination to elicit facts in support of their defence from the prosecution witnesses, though the facts thus elicited had no relation to the facts to which the witnesses had testified in the examination-in-chief. In course of cross examination of this character, the defence are entitled in view of the generality of the provision of section 113, Evidence Act, to ask leading questions and the Court might, in its discretion under section 154 permit the accused to do so even though he had been previously examined by the defence and his decision by the judge.

these questions to be put by the prosecution was to deprive the accused of the benefit which might accrue to him from any statement which the witness might have made in favour of the accused and which the defence could have relied on if the witness had not been allowed to be cross examined by the prosecution. For the -

examined by the Court before which the matter comes up for consideration. Per Moores J in Khayraddin v Emperor, 42 C L J 501. So if a counsel is given permission to cross examine his own witness it must be done to discredit his own witness altogether, and not merely to get rid of part of his testimony, because if that which is suggested is true, the witness is not to be discredited. Therefore, his whole testimony must be discredited. See also Akbul Khan v King Emperor, 3 C L J 1013. But in v. Jehangir Cama, A I R 1927 Bom 501—29 Bom L R 996—106 Ind Cas 106, the Court observed: 'As to the legal consequence, the prosecution sought to discredit the statements of witnesses they considered hostile only on certain points. It is contended for the defence that the legal result was to discredit the evidence in toto of those witnesses including those portions on which the prosecution wished to rely. This view is founded on the dictum of Lord Campbell C J in Faulkner v Brive, 1 F & F 251, accepted by the Calcutta High Court in cases such as Khayraddin v Emperor, A I R 1926 Cal 139—53 C 372. But as was pointed out in the lower Courts, the view of Lord Campbell is not accepted even in England. Bradley v Ricardo, 8 Bing 57, Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol XIII, p 600. It does not find support in any provision of the Indian Evidence Act or other enactment in India. With all respect, therefore, I am unable to say that the total discarding of the evidence of such witnesses can be formulated as a necessary legal result, amounting in fact to Falsus in Uno, Falsus in omnibus. If it cannot be formulated, then the result must be the same as in other cases, and it must be a matter for the Court on the particular facts in each case to credit or to discredit the different portions of the evidence of each witness in other cases. The view taken by the Bombay Court appears to be consonant with law - but a less logical reason. Nevertheless we should bear in mind the obse for counsel as to the degree of credit to maxim 'Falsus in Uno Falsus in omnibus' point will bility, but the matir

it merely c

it merely (told, and in the others it is absolutely false as a maxim of life, and secondly in point of utility, because it merely tells the jury what they may do in any event not what they must do or must not do and therefore it is a superfluous form of words. Higmore § 1008. Commenting on the decision of Cunningham and Lot Williams JJ in Malibul Khan v Emperor, supra, Sir Courtne J Terrell CJ said. The theory so stated is fallacious. A party is allowed to cross examine his own witness who displays hostility and not necessarily because he displays untruthfulness. The theory has gained currency owing perhaps to the common belief that the sole object of cross examination is to discredit the witness whereas its main purpose is to obtain admissions and it would be ridiculous to assert that a party by cross examining a witness is thereby prevented from relying on admission and to hold that the fact that the witness is being cross examined implies an admission by the cross examiner that all the witness's statements are falsehoods. The correct view was in my opinion expressed in Jehangir v Emperor 106 Ind Cas 100=29 Bom LR 996=AIR 1927 Bom 501. Moreover the opinion of Lord Campbell has never been followed in England and English law upon which the Indian Evidence Act is founded was clearly stated by Tindal CJ in Bradley v Ricardo, 8 Bing 57=1 LJ C P 30. Shorai Sao v Emperor AIR 1939 Pat 250 11 PLT 148. But Panchanon set at rest by the la Hum v Sircar v

11 (F B) In that was discussed the 1st result of the 1st Bench case is as hostile need not be rejected, (ii) such it is in favour of the party calling rejected so far as it is in favour of the opposite party. See also Annamatha Juru 1st mal v Official Assignee A I R 1933 Mad 137-56 Mad 7-64 M L J 1933

155 The credit of a witness may be impeached in the following ways by the adverse party, or, with the consent of the Court, by the party who calls him —

- (1) by the evidence of persons who testify that they from their knowledge of the witness, believe him to be unworthy of credit,
- (2) by proof that the witness has been bribed, or has accepted * the offer of a bribe or has received any other corrupt inducement to give his evidence,
- (3) by proof of former statements inconsistent with any part of his evidence which is liable to be contradicted.

*The word accepted in s 155 para (2) was substituted for the original word 'had' by the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act (18 of 1872) s 11

(4) when a man is prosecuted for rape or an attempt to ravish, it may be shown that the prosecutrix was of generally immoral character. S. 1

Explanation—A witness declaring another witness to be unworthy of credit may not, upon his examination-in-chief, give reasons for his belief, but he may be asked his reasons in cross-examination, and the answers which he gives cannot be contradicted, though, if they are false, he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence.

Illustrations

(a) A sues B for the price of goods sold and delivered to B. C says that A delivered the goods to B.

Evidence is offered to show that, on a previous occasion, he said that he had not delivered the goods to B.

(b) A sues B for the price of goods sold and delivered to B. C says that A delivered the goods to B. Evidence is offered to show that, on a previous occasion, C said that the goods were not given by A or in his presence.

The evidence is admissible.

Scope of the section—Besides being asked questions tending to discredit, a witness may be discredited by the evidence of other persons to the effect that (1), they, from their knowledge of the witness, believe him to be unworthy of credit, (2) that the witness has been bribed or has accepted the offer of a bribe, (3) that he has on former occasions made statements inconsistent with his present evidence, and which the prosecutrix is a witness and, with the consent of the court, may be asked his reasons for his belief.

Any of the above facts may be proved by the evidence of any person who is a witness and, with the consent of the court, may be asked his reasons for his belief. Here, again, precautions are taken to prevent any controversy by the following rule: Where a witness states that he believes another to be unworthy of credit, he must be asked his reasons for his belief. If he does not give his reasons, they will not be taken into account.

It is clear that but for some such rule, there might be a pitched battle fought over the character of every witness, and that suits would be simply interminable. Cum Li 67 Cross examination is by no means the only method of impeaching the credit of a witness. What he states as fact may always be disproved by other independent witnesses. Generally speaking a party cannot discredit his own witness. If a witness is shown to be unworthy of credit, and though the story he tells may be true, that affords no just ground for saying that the witness is not worthy of credit. The party who calls him, is evidently the best qualified to judge of his credit.

to impeach the credit of a witness. There are three ways of doing so: (1) By giving evidence of his general bad character for veracity, (2) By giving evidence of his general bad character for veracity, (3) By giving evidence of his general bad character for veracity. The evidence of persons who depose that he is in their judgment unworthy of belief, even though he may be a witness of fact, is not admissible for the purpose of impeaching his credit. The evidence of persons who depose that he is in their judgment unworthy of belief, even though he may be a witness of fact, is not admissible for the purpose of impeaching his credit.

On occasions made statements inconsistent with the evidence in the proceedings, or other circumstances showing

5. that he does not stand indifferent between the contending parties. Thus it may be proved that a witness has been bribed to give his evidence or has offered bribes to others to give evidence for the party whom he favours or that he has used expressions of animosity and revenge towards the party whom he favours. Best = 644 The Indian Evidence Act first two instances in toto and has taken possible to prove that a witness is a Case, 7 How St Tr 446, All Gen is also taken from the English of rape and when the prosecutrix is examined

Under the provisions of section 153 of the Evidence Act the credit of a witness may be impeached by proof of part of the statement which is irretrievably false. Maung A I R 1927 Rang 247=6 I 1927 Rang 247 This section does not allow evidence of witness's general bad character to be brought in. Maung San v Emperor, Ind Rul (1930) Rang 91

Clause (1) This clause is chiefly based on Queen v Brown, L R 1 C O R 70-36 L J M C 59 At the close of the case for the prosecution the counsel after having called several witnesses to character, proposed to call witnesses to prove that they would not believe the Court decided on refusing

the Court for the opinion of the Court consisting of Kell, C B, Martin B, and Byles Keating and Shee JJ declining to hear any further argument on the subject observed that all the text writers were agreed that the evidence could be given, and that the practice was so ancient, and hitherto without doubt the authority of the legislature bears it out as an opponent's witness unworthy of belief. R v Watson 1 Stark 159. "I propose questions being 'Have you the means of knowing what the general character of his witness was?' and 'From such Watson - Stark 189 "arrows proposed questions being 'Have you the means of knowing what the general character of his witness was?' and 'From such of knowing what the general character of his witness was?' and 'From such I believe him on his oath?' Marston v Brown L R 1 C O R 10

e put in that way, as it would out the means of knowing the that degree of credit was due to the assertion, and the means that witness then called had of informing himself e the question may be shortened thus ss would you believe him on his oath?' St Tr 223 counsel asked "Is he a oath or not? Witness 'I must tell istakes about his own wife that by God, I would not take his word for a half penny" So the law is that 'you may ask

would not take his word for a half penny" So the law is that "you may ask

When
ou believe
Tr 842
126 In
is objected to
's, but specific
* not admis
bbott J ony of ne case

Bayley J said: "The witness... his oath" See also R v Hemp, 5 C & Cox Cr 48; R v Du enquire whether they character, and whether onb' Phillips' Evidence 1st Ed 109. Commenting on this passage Prof. Wigmore says: "We are now in a position to understand the language of the e, for instance, in the sense of particular acts

...they employed the term 'general character', any meaning of 'reputation', as distinguished from personal knowledge, was far from their minds, and would have been... L & C 520, as character, and both testimony of others cannot be

...to dep... general opinion oath" Vide 1st Law Vol I, at witnesses who w oath" So the is to be given The same law explanation, which enjoins that in cross-examination he may be asked his reasons for his belief

Estimate of a witness in another case. Evidence of a particular estimate formed by... of a witness matter of L R 2 a witness before it and not on what another Court thought of the witness in another case, and therefore the opinion of Court in another case as to the witness cannot be put in to impeach his credit Chandreshwar Prosad v Bishevar Prosad, A 1 R 1927 Pat 61-101 Ind Cas, 239-5 P 777

Re establishment of credit. "Where the general reputation of a witness has been thus impeached the party calling him may re-establish his credit, by cross examining the witnesses (vide Explanation), who have spoken against him as to the means of... sink, 4 Esp testimony they calling other Murphy 19 Ho tion of the impeach to impeach A, and end of this process, in a mass of testimony amounting to not much more than mutual verification Three courses are open to pursue first, to exclude absolutely the impeachment of the character of an impeaching witness, secondly, to admit the impeachment of an impeaching witness, but no more, thirdly, to admit it only to such an extent as the discretion of the trial Court deems best The preferable rule is the third" Wigmore § 895

Foundation for discrediting a witness By the English law it is necessary, before giving evidence for the purpose of discrediting a witness, to lay n particular instance speaks falsely, and although it is (thus) not altogether ima general public convenience, for great continual course of those sorts of cross-ere of a witness being called for the reasons of auxiliary policy, inconsistent be shown. This section lays down the Kurzem, 17 C 311, Wilson J said "I am the Evidence Act the words, 'which is mean 'which is relevant to the issue.' Now the question is what matters are not relevant. The only test in vogue that has of application—

 "Could the facts,
 e been shown in evidence for any purpose independently of the self-contradiction?" In that case Follock C B said "My view has always been that the test whether the matter is collateral or not is this. If the answer of a witness is a matter which you would be allowed on your part to prove in evidence, if it have such a connection with the issue that you would be allowed to give in evidence, then it is a matter on which you can contradict him." In the same case Alderson B said, "The question is this, can you ask a witness as to what he is supposed to have said on a previous occasion? You may ask him any fact material to the issue, and if he denies it you may prove that fact, as you are at liberty to prove any fact material to the issue."

Th. 1. A is enough to per witnesses
 made writing it is undesirable to permit the putting of such questions. In such a case the written and right thing to prove the provisions of s 145, Eviden will have to be borne in mind. A copy of the statement made before the police cannot be used as against the witness till he has been confronted with it. The right procedure then when a witness look cop
 All

is admissible under this section and may be relied on by the defence to impeach the informant's credit. Aximuddi v Emperor, 44 C L J 253—A I R 1927
 Cal 17

Statements made by third parties to the police in the course of their investigation are admissible to impeach the credit under s 155 of the Evidence Act provided the person who made the statement is called as a witness. Aximuddi v Emperor, 44 C L J Statements made before a police officer and reduced to contradict a witness, the Evidence Act had been complied with in the matter of putting specific put of it which were to be relied upon to the witness in cross examination. Thomas v Kedar Nath, 30 C W N 835—91 Ind C 15 801—A I R 1925 Cal 1017, see also Ram Charitar v Emperor, 8 Pat L J 568 4 Pat L W 325—45 Ind Cas
 272—19 Cr L J 512

A statement made by a witness before a Coroner under the Coroner's Act is admissible in evidence at the trial of the accused. Emperor v Ragho 22 Bom L R 775—97 Ind Cas 37—27 Cr L J 1061—A I R 1920 B 404, In re Bayana, 2 Weir 831. When the persons who made certain statements are called as witness, then those statements become admissible, not as substantive evidence in the case, but merely as evidence to corroborate or contradict their statements in Court. Nagina v Emperor, 19 A L J 447, see also, Malaya Goudan, In re, 14 L W 612—(1921) M W N 873

The statement of in a radical proceeding cannot be used in any subse down in section 33
 be used either to s 157 of the Act

It is not illegal to examine a police officer for the purpose of impeaching the credit of a witness who gives evidence in favour of an accused at his trial, to the police officer different from and not statement at the trial Emperor v. Jogendra.

used under s 155 (3) o

in the case Emperor v

16 C W N 431 = 13 Cr i

11 B 657 In a police investigation where the statement is not reduced to writing, the officer may be examined to impeach the credit of a witness who made such statement.

11 B H C 120 The re

investigation is not adm

may be proved either witness in Court Baba

Section 155 only lays down that the credit of a witness may be impeached inter alia by proof of former statements inconsistent with any part of his evidence which is liable to be contradicted in which the former statement is to be statement in writing when it is sought to dictate a witness as provided in s 155

s. 145 and is not independent of it Gopichand v Emperor, A I R 1930 Lah

491, see also Mahla v Emperor, A I R 1931 Lah. 38 = 32 P L R 239

When

about 21 l

and obstruct

to the de

Emperor

Section

ment of a

except in

Emperor v

1061 = 5 Bur L J 30 (1 B)

Previous depositions of witnesses examined for the prosecution in a criminal trial can not be used to contradict what the witnesses state in their cross examination in the present trial Jamal v Emperor, 86 Ind Cas 153 = 26 Cr L J 713 = A. I R 1925 Pat 381.

A recital as to the fact that a witness is not by itself admissible in evidence or cannot be found

If he is examined as a witness same Prohla v Bar

to have strangled a person that the eye witness at the spot immediately after the offence was helped to strangle the deceased, their

(3) to impeach the credit of the eye witness

= A I R 1931 Lah. 189 = 32 = Cr L J

in

Preliminary warning To obviate the objection of unfair surprise, a question of proof of a warning to any party to a trial who is called upon to give evidence or words every

on or es of might

offering such explanatory

So that if evidence of this sort could be adduced on the sudden and by surprise, without any previous intimation to the witness or to the party producing him, great injustice might be done. . . and one of the great objects of the course of proceeding established in our Courts is the prevention of surprise, as far as practicable, upon any person who may appear therein" Wigmore § 1025. If the previous deposition was intended to contradict the witness at the trial, it was contrary to principle to admit the evidence in the manner adopted without first drawing the attention of the witness to every point upon which it was to be used to contradict him. If the statement was intended to corroborate the witness as a whole it could not have been put in cross-examination Emperor v Lalchuman Totram 17 Bom L R 590-31 Ind Cas 351-16 Cr L J 751. If a Magistrate finds that a witness is rec-- different from statement attr be given an opportunity of explaining why the contradiction has occurred. If he denies having made such a statement then the statement must be duly proved before it can be used to imp made in the committing Magistrate's C of that Court and brought on the proof because the deposition proves itself. Not so a statement attributed to a witness on police papers Nga Pyn v Emperor, 18 Cr L J 811-41 Ind. Cas 663-10 Bur L T. 259. Under this section, a witness cannot be contradicted by his previous statement if his attention has not been drawn to it as required by s 145 of the said Act Mt Ann Begam v Mt Begam, 9 P W R. 1914-127 P L R 1914-22 Ind Cas 831

Proviso (4) One of the relevant uses is that of the character of a rape-complainant for chastity. The non-consent of the complainant is here a material element; and the character of the woman as to chastity is of considerable probative value in judging of the likelihood of that consent. Wigmore § 62. In R v Ryan, 2 Cox Cr 115, Platt B said "It is important to consider whether a young person in such a state of incapacity was likely to consent to the embraces of this man, because if her habits, however irresponsible she might be, were loose and indecent, there might be a probability of consent being given and a } party" Gener woman be not cross examinat (R v Clarke) counsel for the defence cannot go further, and prove specific immoral acts with the prisoner, unless he has first given the prosecutrix an opportunity of denying or explaining them R v Cockcroft, 11 Cox 410, R v Martin, 6 C & P 562, R v Robins, 2 M & Rob 51. It further appears to be the law, that although the prosecutrix may be cross-examined as to particular acts of immorality with other men, she may decline to answer such questions, and if she answers th her R v Cockcroft, Taylor § 363. It character or trait for § 62. The reason in People v Jackson virtue, would ri from a that it Besides, if proof of particular instances should be admissible, reasons would be allowable, and thus there might be one or more collateral issues to I E. A.-181 occupy the time and divert the attention of the jury. Such would be the evils if the prosecution could require previous and timely notice of the particulars of the intended attack upon the conduct of the complainant but as no such notice can be enacted, there would be no means of meeting the evidence of the dissolute companions of the accused however mistaken or corrupt it might be.

the general ed in th is 439=9 mined as to as to her having had connection with the prisoner previously to the alleged rape (R v Martin) 11 that she 3rd Ed 9 to such e she had the general reputation of giving about and committing immoral acts with a number of men. It is not enough to show that she ran away with a man once or twice or that she had on specific occasions done something immoral. Walsh v Lymmer, 36 C W N 356=A 1 R 1932 Cal 523

Explanation. In the examination in chief a witness cannot be asked the reasons for his belief that another witness is unworthy of credit. Such questions can only be asked in the cross examination. But it is very dangerous in for believing a witness to be led to state any unfavourable

Impeaching credit of one's own witnesses. A party is not obliged to receive as unimpeached truth every thing which a witness called by him may swear to. If his witness has been false or mistaken in his testimony he may prove the truth by others. Brown v Bellous 4 Pick 187, 191 (Am). Accord- ing to English law 'a party i discredit his own witness for tha if he spoke against him and

than to ask a jury to find truth upon the testimony of a witness notorious for not speaking the truth, all the while concealing from them the fact that he is or may be a false witness, and how can it be of importance to the main purpose of the trial how or by whom the fact that the witness is not to be relied upon is made known? If he betrays the party who calls him and falsifies in every statement which he makes the opposite party will of course accept the treason say nothing of impeachment and leave the jury no alternative but to find an unjust verdict upon evidence which both the parties know to be rank perjury. Certainly a rule which may produce such a result ought to be at once discarded unless it can be shown to be of some special use in the general purposes of legal controversy. That a Court of justice should permit such a miscarriage on the merits because it sees or fancies it sees a shadow of unfairness in one of the parties in a matter collateral to the suit and in no way touching the justice of the case is a reproach which ought to be done away with. No body can profit by the rule but the witness and the antagonist of the party who calls

S.
S.

156. When a witness whom it is intended to corroborate gives evidence of any relevant fact, he may be questioned as to any other circumstances which he observed at or near to the time or place at which such relevant fact occurred, if the Court is of opinion that such circumstances, if proved, would corroborate the testimony of the witness as to the relevant fact which he testifies

Illustration

A, an accomplice, gives an account of a robbery in which he took part. He described various incidents unconnected with the robbery which occurred on his way to and from the place where it was committed.

Independent evidence of these facts may be given in order to corroborate his evidence as to the robbery itself.

Scope of the section. This section provides for the admission of evidence given for the purpose, not of proving a relevant fact but of testing the witness's truthfulness. There is often no better way of doing this than by ascertaining the accuracy of his evidence as to surrounding circumstances, though there is no direct connection between the facts of the case as to corroboration may examination

prepare the ground

stances
makes it
of cert
have i ll an has be which mater
want to borated
mony that must howe corroborate
and not on party to g
party. Mo

Corroborate point calculated to produce the same results as facts already given in evidence. This distinction although or whether it is the same fact.

157. In order to corroborate the testimony of a witness, any former statement made by such witness relating to the same fact, at or about the time when the fact took place, or before any authority legally competent to investigate the fact may be proved.

English law
ness a testimony on although otherwise
date of the fact to be proved

7. But facts which are not more than the reverse are inadmissible by cross examination or otherwise in certain cases no verdict can be obtained without the production of such evidence. The corroborative facts and evidence must, however, be proved otherwise than by the testimony of the witness to be corroborated. Formerly the fact that a witness had made a previous statement similar to his testimony in Court could not be used to impeach his testimony. The rule has changed. It is now a direct examination to establish his credit, when impeached by proof of a previous contradictory statement (Phipson v 140). When the witness has merely testified on direct examination, without any impeachment, proof of consistent statements is unnecessary and valueless. The witness is not helped by it, for, even if it be an improbable or untrustworthy story, it is not made more probable or more trustworthy by a number of repetitions of it. Such evidence would be both irrelevant and cumbersome to the trial, and is rejected in all Courts. Wigmore § 1124

any statement made by a witness before he is sworn, or under oath, and in the absence of any other evidence, is not admissible for as can scarcely be satisfactory to any mind to say that, if a witness testifies to a statement to day under oath, it strengthens the statement to prove that he said the same thing yesterday when not under oath. . . . The idea that the mere repetition of a story gives it any force or proves its truth is contrary to common observation and experience that a falsehood may be repeated as often as the truth. Indeed it has never been supposed by any writer or Judge that the repetition had any force as substantive evidence to prove the facts, but only to remove an imputation upon the witness. If he stood before the Court unimpeached, it was unnecessary and mischievous to encumber the Court and oppress the defendant with his garrulousness out of Court and when not on oath." Wigmore § 1124.

Whether this section violates the Hearsay Rule. "Though Hearsay may not be allowed as direct evidence, yet it may be in corroboration of a witness's testimony to show that he affirmed the same thing before on other occasions and that the witness is still consistent with himself." Gilbert Evidence, 68, 150. In this instance the utterance is used otherwise than as an assertion to be credited, and therefore the Hearsay rule is not applicable. Wigmore § 1792

Scope of the section. The section relates to the evidence corroborated by previous statements made by the witness only in connection with the facts about the condition of the witness, and the condition is, made to suit the circumstances of the case. As independent evidence is not admissible, if they accompany the fact of a man having on a previous occasion made the same a chance of its truthfulness; and Judges a corroborative evidence, Cun v 157. In Namabhai Haridas J said. "Section 157 that any former statements made by a witness at or about the time when the issue in issue took place, or before any witness borate his testimony; and according to Mergia's statements, made on different occasions, shortly after the murder suffices. It can scarcely be said advised by Judges to require the ev

From the position in which he stands it is considered unsafe to act upon his evidence alone Hence the rule requiring confirmation of it as to the prisoner's guilt by some independent reliable evidence But his statement, whether made at the trial or before the trial, and in whatever shape it comes before the Court is still only the statement of an accomplice, and does not at all improve in value by repetition The force of any corroboration by means of previous consistent statements must evidently depend upon it " " " " " " who is consistent deserves to be believed If true, what becomes of the virtue of previous persistently adhere to falsehood once uttered, there is a motive for it, and should the value of such a story ever come to be rated higher than that of now designing and unscrupulous persons to proceed by false accusations people at different times and

This section provides an exception to the general rule of excluding hearsay if it is cast in proximity to the statement.

Act 343 Mathura v Emperor, 10 Pat L T 117-8 Pat 625-A I R 1929 Pat
A statement by the father in the vaccination register made three years after the birth of the child does not satisfy the terms of s 157 of the Evidence Act and the same cannot be relied upon to prove the paternity of the child. R-
dated 1910 b
sole. It also and asked my me my one ninth share of our ancestral property, but they refused to give my share. It was contended that the said shares were not admissible as evidence
share of it
though it
it was not 1900 but given by 56 I A
N 1006

Sections 157 to 167 of the Criminal Procedure Code, which entitle the Police Officer in charge of a Police Station to investigate the facts and circumstances of a case, and to arrest the accused, and to send him to the Magistrate for trial, are not in conflict with the provisions of the Evidence Act, which require the Magistrate to satisfy himself that the evidence is reliable, and that the accused is guilty, before he can convict him. The provisions of the Evidence Act are not in conflict with the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, which require the Magistrate to satisfy himself that the evidence is reliable, and that the accused is guilty, before he can convict him. The provisions of the Evidence Act are not in conflict with the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, which require the Magistrate to satisfy himself that the evidence is reliable, and that the accused is guilty, before he can convict him.

to contradict or corroborate him. Ponnusami v Kalyan, A I R 1930 Mad 770. Previous statements of witnesses are only ordinarily admissible to corroborate or contradict the witness who have made statements at the trial. As to corroborating a witness it is unnecessary for the prosecution to corroborate their witnesses by previous statements until the statement made at the trial has been in one way or another, challenged. Abdul Jalil v Emperor, A I R 1930 All 100. The same on statements which the aconite was administered. Held that her statements were admissible in evidence. Emperor v Amode Ali, 58 C 1228=35 C W N 573=A I R 1931 Cal 757.

Absence of substantive evidence. In the absence of substantive evidence first information report and other reports by witness cannot be used as corroborative evidence consequently, where a prosecution witness has gone back on the original complaint made to the police the previous statement cannot be used as corroborative evidence. Emperor v Nga Hlaing, 4 R 481=A I R 1978 Rang 295. Earlier statements cannot be let in under section 157 of the Indian Evidence Act if there is present evidence in the trial which may be corroborative. Emperor v Udlin v Laintant's substantive evidence. Girimalla v ..

Time for giving corroborative evidence. Before corroborative evidence is admissible, the evidence sought to be corroborated must have been given. Nistarine v Rai Nundo, 5 C W N XVI. It is doubtful whether s 136 gives the Court power to admit evidence given by a witness to be given under s 5 L B T. Evidence given under s 136 is not admissible under s 136 and only he is ex ments of the corroborating witness given by s 136 of the Evidence Act. =5 Cr L J 411.

Test identification. Any Magistrate is competent to hold a test identification and can prove the statements made before him under s 157 of the Evidence Act even though he is not empowered to deal with the matter under enquiry. Also s 164 Criminal Procedure Code, covers the case where a records a statement made to 109 Ind Cns 225=29 Cr L J. Fiction in the jail cannot be in the trial. Such identification made by certain persons whom they recognize as having been concerned in a particular crime. The statements proceedings, then case but When obviously it is not a witness held by the police in the course of the investigation may be proved by oral evidence though the written record of the statement is not admissible. Emperor v Wahnuddin, A I R 1930 Bom 158=32 Bom L R 327.

against the accused prosecution case 17, Chogalkar v 179 Section first information received to be recorded and not a statement made by a witness during investigation after the Sub-Inspector has actually arrived on the scene and himself seen what has happened. Technically speaking, it may be conceded that a first information report taken down by a police officer amounts to an entry in an official record, but it is not a statement made by a witness during investigation.

is admissible statement in

as a previous and for no ot 638, see al
Cr L J 642
R 1927 Cal
632-58 M I
99-187 Ind

information report although a document of substantive evidence, and can be used only to identify the author of it

Rul (1930) Mad

C W N 1213-11

L J 253-A 1

A I R 1930 Mad

I R 1932 Oudh

Statement - 162

State can person
41 C police statement
only if statement
by a w
of a statements 1925 Lda 483
the course of section 157 of th at the trial altho admits
6 Pat
statements
except 325-8

to the police in admissible under those witnesses statements are rendered in lure Baladeo v Emperor,
-22 Cr L J 433 Statement used to corroborate them
v Emperor, 4 Pat L W.
312

Whether this section is affected by s 162 Section 157 of the Evidence Act is affected by s 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code so far as statements to the Police taken under s 161 whether oral or recorded are concerned Emperor
v Ngu Tha Din, 4 Rang 72-96 Ind Cas 145-27 Cr L J 881-5 Bur L J 90-A 1 R 1926 Rang 116 (F B) The main object of the legislature in enacting this section was to prohibit the use of the statements of prosecution witnesses as evidence. Emperor v. Jagan Dhanu, 5 I R 1926 Pat
is controlled Procedure Code Not only police taken under s 161 statement by c evidence Ru
Lah 399 Th
power under clearly control
Gun Pillai, 2
L J 351, Rus
Section
of the writing

7. gating Police officer; that section, so far as oral statements of the witnesses conflict with s 157, Evidence Act, and those oral statements by calling him as a witness in order
Bhulai v K E, 13 C W N 197
n v King Emperor, 7 A L J 468
so Emperor v Hanmasuddi, 16 Bom Hyblai 22 B 596, Bhulai v King
Imperor, 13 C L J 117

Deposit
 the Criminal committing Sessions Col.

The effect of section 258 of a witness before the deposition in the s 157 of the Evidence Act and statements made by the witness before an investigating officer are admissible for the purpose of corroborating such 'testimony'. It is in the discretion of the Sessions Judge to believe and act upon the statements before the committing Magistrate in preference to contradictory statements made before himself on the ground that the former are corroborated by statements made before the investigating officer. Velliah Kane, In re, 45 M 766=13 M 1009=16 L W 239=31 M L T 175 (H C)

Where
 witnesses
 ought to be the oral Court may sion in the abuddin v
 Indian Evidence Act which prohibits such a course. Nasar Chandra, 44 C L J 582=99 Ind C 907=A I R 1927 Cal 230. The in a civil suit permitted an officer in charge of the Record of Right and to produce the statements notwithstanding statements, as they were exa
 sion of s 157
 209. A petition put in by a client for adjournment on the ground that the pleader could not appear on account of hartal is admissible in evidence in proceedings under the Legal Practitioner's Act, under s 157 of the Evidence Act in corroboration of his statement
 were true to
 N. 589=33 C

Ali Hakim v
 put in by a client for adjournment on the ground that the pleader could not appear on account of hartal is admissible in evidence in proceedings under the Legal Practitioner's Act, under s 157 of the Evidence Act in corroboration of
 his statement
 were true to
 N. 589=33 C

made the entries at the request of admissible in evidence under s 157 or s 159 of the Evidence Act or possibly under both sections. Lama Koer v Gobordhan, 1919 Pat 352=2 Pat L J 42 Roller v Abhay Ram, 12 A L J 945=24 Ind Cas 640

to live his statement the Evidence
 to corroborate
Emperor v

mortgage, and action is only
 rden of proof
 t instance. If f the revenue
 not admissible
 he headman or
 as a witness
 in evidence to prove surveyor, who maintains the register. But if such officer and gives evidence of the terms of the report from his own memory, then such

Pytpang is admissible in order to corroborate his testimony under s. 157. Shwe S. Pan v Maung Po 3 L R R 250

A statement made by a witness to a chief constable can only be used under s 157 if the witness is a police officer or a constable of the first witness at the trial. Such a statement can only be used if it is a statement which has no legal basis for a conviction. () 503

Previous statements might be used to corroborate or contradict statements made at the trial; not to corroborate statements made prior to trial. Emperor, v Allar Badu, 12 Bom L R 663-7 Ind Cas 933-11 Cr L J 512-34 B 509

A police inspector is an officer "legally competent to investigate the fact" him by the
 it v Emperor

... and the witness wrote another letter to which he got a reply containing a statement of what that person had said to such person, held that the reply was the evidence of the witness. Held if he was alive, may be admissible. Fact that a statement was made by a third person to the witness is admissible, but evidence of the terms of the statement.

trial is admissible under
N 1896, 257

A statement to contradict a

But when the witness had previously (at the agreement and partly in direct material na, 2 Weir 821

Under the general provision of law, any body who has seen a place may be dep to inquiry may give his to idence Act in order
da. 12 Cr L J 480

12th Ind Cas 83

It is doubtful whether a statement as to an event, made three days after its occurrence, is admissible under s 157 of the Evidence Act, to corroborate the witness.

witnesses during a police investigation t evidence But such statements may be ate the testimony of the same witness the testimony of a raped girl that she

12. On this date

of
th

2. Ambika Charan This section clearly evidence for e Ambika Charan

91. A letter written by the defendant on 11th March 1957, in which he stated that he had received a sum of money from the plaintiff, was produced in evidence. The letter was written on the letterhead of the defendant's firm, and was signed by him. The letter was dated 11th March 1957, and was addressed to the plaintiff. The letter stated that the defendant had received a sum of money from the plaintiff, and that he was enclosing a receipt for the same. The letter was produced in evidence to show that the defendant had received the money from the plaintiff, and that he was enclosing a receipt for the same.

Dom L R 818-28 L W 270-A I H 1928 P C 51-54 M L J 176 (P C) Oral statements by witnesses in Police investigation which do not corroborate their evidence at the trial are inadmissible People v Sullivan & Imperor, 35 M

A I R 1925 M 579-48 M L J 195 A statement made to a Police officer, that the partial statement was made The previous borness of his evidence. It must be corroborate as regards every material particular and the identity of the accused must be proved by reliable independent testimony. Peg v Malapa 11 B L C A C 196. Although the mere repetition of a statement without contradiction of material discrepancy is under section 157 Evidence Act some corroboration of the truthfulness of that statement that section does not justify the use against accused persons of a previous statement by an approver relevant to contradict his retraction. Pallua v Emperor, 3 P R 1904 Cr. Where an entry in the vaccination register which includes a statement by a woman that a person bearing the name of the alleged father of her illegitimate child was the father of the illegitimate child is made three years after its birth the entry does not satisfy the terms of s 157 and is not admissible in evidence. A. Nagappa v Kullammah, A I R 1930 Mad 194-1929 M W N 696.

158 Whenever any statement relevant under section

What matters may be proved in connection with proved statement relevant under section 32 or 33

32 or 33, is proved, all matters may be proved either in order to contradict or to corroborate it, or in order to impeach or confirm the credit of the person by whom it was made, which might have been proved

if that person had been called as a witness and had denied upon cross-examination the truth of the matters suggested

Scope of the section. The statements admissible under sections 32 and 33 are exceptional cases and the evidence is only admitted from the improbability or great inconvenience of producing the authors of the statements. It is only just therefore that all the same safeguards for veracity should be provided as if the authors of the statements were themselves before the Court, and subjected to oath and cross examination.

A person whose statement has been admitted in evidence in one category is a witness actually by his statement by a previous statement which has been admitted in evidence in another category. Imperial A I R 1926 L N witness is entitled to credit or before it and not on what was said because there are no of the witness in Bishiswar 5 Pat

used as evidence under the provisions of ss 32 and 33 then any other statement made in another case to the credibility of the witness is not Chandres car previously made is used in Court and was cross-examined being asked had denied the Imperial A I R 1930 L N 403

159 A witness may, while under examination, refresh

his memory by referring to any writing made by himself at the time of the transaction concerning which he is questioned, or so soon afterwards that the Court considers it likely that the transaction was at that time fresh in his memory

The witness may also refer to any such writing made by any other person and read by the witness within the time allowed if when he read it he believed it to be correct

Whenever a witness may refresh his memory by reference to any document, he may, with the permission of the Court refer to a copy of such document.

When a witness may refresh his memory by reference to a copy of document of the Court refer to a copy of such document.

Provided the Court be satisfied that there is sufficient reason S.
for the non-production of the original

An expert may refresh his memory by reference to professional treatises.

Principles When a witness's statement is offered as the basis of an evidential inference to the truth of his statement it is plain that at least three distinct elements are present, or put in another way there are three pre-conditions, in the absence of any one of which we cannot conceive of testimony. First, the witness must know something; to this element may be given the generic term Observation. Secondly, the witness must have a recollection of the impression he may be termed Recollection. Thirdly, to the tribunal, that is, the court must be shown the element of Communication or (Narration).

It is in turn represented in many approachable by others. The general canon applicable to Recollection is simple, the Recollection should (as far as can be expected) correspond to and represent the impressions originally gained by observation or knowledge. Various situations are conceivable, in which this essential quality of Recollection may be lacking and various detailed requirements with reference to curing or avoiding these possible deficiencies are also conceivable. Higmore § 725. The cardinal principle of Narration is this, that it must correspond to the Recollection, the story told by the witness, whether orally or in writing, must represent his knowledge and recollection. Higmore § 734.

It is to-day generally understood that there are two sorts of recollection which are properly available for a witness,—past recollection and present recollection. In the latter and usual sort, the witness has either a sufficiently clear recollection, or can summon it and make it distinct and actual if he can stimulate and refresh it, and the chief question is as to the propriety of certain means of stimulating it,—in particular, of using written or printed notes, memoranda, or other things as representing it. In the former sort, the witness is totally lacking in present recollection, so that he cannot use it as sufficiently

This use of a past recollection depends of course on certain conditions, and it is through the stimulation of the memory that it is brought to the other that Section 159 deals

Recollection. The reason of the rule has been said to be that a witness should not suffer from a mistake, and may explain an inconsistency. Per Moulton J in Smith J in Holiday v Holgate, 17 L. J. 18

Present Recollection whether there should be any fixed rules of limitation. Here the witness is present, but he is unable to give it is under the circumstances improper to determine by fixed rules what things he may have not a potency to stimulate recollection. It can only act on the circumstances of each case, and the desired and only way for a witness of stimulating his truth he may refer to the paper may in fact, 2 Law Cr C 10, not be that the paper was not written by the witness himself is no objection. Lee, supra; Laues v Reed, supra, Smith v Morgan 2 M & R 17, R v Watson, 3 C & K 111, R v Williams, 6 Cox Cr 313, and it is therefore incorrect (confusing this with the Past recollection) to require that the paper be one written by the witness or under his direction or known to him to be

9. correct Nevertheless, papers prepared by others may under the circumstances of the case, be so suspicious or questionable as to make their use improper (Noel's Motion, 3 T R 752, Alcock v Ins Co, 13 Q B D 292, 305 Lager v Wagstaff, 11 B & W 463) (3) Further more it is not an objection that the paper is a copy, and not an original, provided it does in fact serve to revive the recollection Turner v Taylor, 3 T R 754, Doe v Perkins 3 T R 749 Anon, 1 Lew Cr 101, R v Williams, 6 Cox Cr 343 (4) Again, it is equally immaterial that the paper was not made at or about the time of the event for it is not used as a record of past memory, and its power to stimulate and revive the memory by the allusions which it contains must be precisely the same whether it was made at the time or not This is the necessary result of the principle involved and is maintained by a number of Courts (Bank v Torn, 14 S C 444, Tolson v Logg Drilling Co, 41 Wis 602), but many, misled by the limitation applicable to a record of past recollection require that the paper should be one contemporaneous with the event (Stenkeller v Newton, 1 C & 313 Whitfield v Aland, 2 C & K 1015) (5) Upon the erroneous view just referred to, it has recently been declared that, on being surprised by the testimony of one's own witness one may not refer to former testimony or a deposition by the same witness and endeavour to stimulate the memory to a correction, basing this result chiefly on the supposed principle that the reference for refreshing must always be to a contemporary writing That this supposed principle as applied to refreshing by deposition or former testimony is wholly unsound may be understood by noting the numerous decisions which have allowed (R v Watson 3 C & K Smith v Morgan, 2 Moo & R R 257), principle, there is no reason why refreshment by the counsel's oral reference to or reading from the deposition etc., as by the witness's own perusal of it and the precedents abundantly sustain this practice (R v Edwards 8 C & P 26 (31), R v Burnett 4 Cox Cr 269 R v Ford, 5 Cox Cr 184; R v Williams 8 Cox Cr 313, R v Quan 2 F & F 818) (6) As a matter of fairness and to prevent imposition the paper must be produced in Court, on demand, for inspection and cross examination by the opponent (Hardy's Trial 24 How St Tr 874, R v Ramsden, 2 C & P 603 Lord v Colum 2 Drewr 205) (7) But since in Lord Ellenborough's words 'it is not the memorandum that is the evidence, but the recollection of the witness,' (Henry v Lee 2 Chitty 124), the party whose witness uses it has no right to have it read to or handed to the jury (Gregory Tatner, 6 C & P 281), it is only the opponent who may do this in case he wishes to cast doubt on the reality of the refreshment of memory" Greenl Ev § 439 (c)

Scope of the section It is a well settled and undisputed principle of the law of evidence, that a witness, under certain legal restrictions, may refer to written or printed memoranda documents, papers or letters for the purpose of refreshing his recollection and memory with regard to any matter in dispute.

The rule requires that a witness should refresh his memory within his own knowledge and recollection, and that the rule is not violated by permitting him to refresh his memory in the manner above described.

It is not the memorandum that is the evidence, but the recollection of the witness. On the one hand, if you allow him time to consult notes, you partly lose the advantage of that lively and quick examination of the evidence.

of Judicial assistance is testimony, it is universal.

sally agreed equal, and that or writings in few witnesses and sums, as papers and writings which they knew to be correct at the time they were made. Burr Jones § 874 Mr Justice Strong in the United States Supreme Court said "How far papers, not evidence per se, but proved to have been true statements of facts at the time they were made, are admissible in connection with the testimony of a witness who made them has been a frequent subject of inquiry, and it has many times been decided that they are to be received. And why they should not be? Quantities and values are retained in the memory with great difficulty. If at the time when an entry of aggregate quantity or value was made, and the witness knew it was correct, it is hard to see why it is not at least as reliable as in the memory of the witness. Insurance Co v Wicks, 14 Wall (S U S) 375. A witness, who has the means in his power can lawfully be required to look at such papers, to enable him to ascertain a fact with more precision to verify a date or to give more exact testimony than he otherwise could as to times, numbers quantities and the like. Burr Jones s 874. "Although in general" says Mr Starkie "leading questions are not to be put to a witness yet where his memory has failed, he may, even during examination, read or if necessary, hear the contents of a document read for the purpose of reviving his former recollection. And if by that means he obtains a recollection of the facts themselves as distinct from the memorandum, his statement is admissible in evidence. A witness is, of course, competent to testify as to his actual present recollection of a fact, although in the interval his memory may have failed, and although such defect, and the means of restoration, may be the subject of comment in cases to which any suspicion is attached." Starkie on Evidence p 209. "Generally speaking an instrument used for the purpose of refreshing memory, ought to be in the handwriting of the person using it, and as nearly as possible contemporaneous with the fact which it records, at the same time, neither of these conditions is absolutely indispensable. A witness may refresh his memory from a document made, he has seen correct -" made up by him by it if he could swear that he examined it shortly after the time of the entry and that it was correct and that by looking at the entry he remembered that the circumstance it narrated had taken place are kept by time after memorandum that the weight to be attached. A man may state at which he was a report of the proceeding memory, and he has C 189. A Judge will attach much more weight to the evidence made by his own hand than to that of a memorandum made by a third party some time after it was made requires the production of the best evidence, the memorandum itself must be produced not a copy of it, unless, indeed, the Court is satisfied that the non production of the original has been sufficiently accounted for. It frequently happens that a witness makes an extract from his books, which would be themselves good sources for refreshing his memory, while the extract as a mere copy of such books is not receivable. Starkie on Evidence cited in Nort L v 338 339. A witness who being asked in reference to any particular transaction, if he had made any entry in a register or book at or about the time when an occurrence took place such as the posting of a letter of which an entry was made might refer to such entry or memorandum to refresh his memory, but beyond that he cannot go. Queen Emrys v Sayad Suff d l 20 s 11 Cr C 344

by his look 107-4 Cr L J 247. A most regularly kept book of facts contemporaneously made may be used for contradicting or corroborating a witness or refreshing his memory and the like under s 141 157 and 159 of the Act, but such user does not make the document itself evidence of his memory consequence of it to have a -10 C W N ining records

9 Mulundaram v Dnyanam, 10 N L R 11-23 Ind Cas 893, see also Nuna Korr v Gobordhan 3 P L J 42=37 Ind Cas 421 A certificate of age of a private patient is not relevant as a public record under s 35 of the Evidence Act but could only be used for the purpose of refreshing the memory when he is examined as a witness. as regards 72 Ind Cas 112 A reference can be made to the date of 985 1923 C1 over to him for the purpose of exciting his recollections Jaylor § 1410 If the witness cannot read and write, the proper practice is, not to read the memorandum to him in the presence of the jury, but to allow him to retire with counsel on each side and to have the memorandum read in his presence without comment. Commonwealth v Fox 7 Gray (Mass) 595, Burr Jones § 880

The dying statement of a deceased person must be taken in the presence of the accused, if not so taken, the writing cannot be admitted to prove the statement made. The statement may be proved in the ordinary way by a person who heard it and the writing may be used for the purpose of refreshing the witness's memory. Empress v Samiuddin, 8 C 211 A medical expert can refer to his report to refresh his memory. Rogham v Empress, 9 C 355 (461) = 11 C L R 569, see also 2 W R Cr Let 14, 6 W R Cr Let 3, R v Jadab Das, 4 C W N 129 When a dead body is sent to the Civil Surgeon in order to the making of a post mortem examination, a printed form is sent therewith which the Civil Surgeon fills up on examining the body. This report is not itself legal evidence. Surgeon, who refreshes his memory.

Field Ev 7th Ed 531-532 the head constable cannot section 162 (1) of the Criminal Procedure Act be used by the Sub Inspector as a witness to what was said by the accused. A statement by a witness can be used in evidence to refresh his memory. Keyarsook v Gorbad, A I R 1930 Nag 441 see also Mukundram v Dayaram, 10 N L R 41=23 Ind Cas 893

Scope of sections 159 and 160 distinguished. If it is merely a question of a man refreshing his memory the document itself is not tendered in evidence and the witness merely gives evidence in the ordinary way after reading what has been written. To such a case s 159 applies. But where the witness says in so many words that he does not recollect the facts recorded by him in the statement but it is said that they were correctly recorded, then section 160 applies and the document itself may be tendered in evidence. In either case the fact may also be used by law to refresh the memory of a witness where such statement. 348=1931 Jan Nath v

Any writing. This section entitles a witness to refresh his memory by any writing. So he is permitted to refresh and assist his memory by the use of a written instrument, memorandum or entry in a book. So a ledger, a log book, a workman's time book, previous deposition, letter, bill of articles furnished etc can be seen by a witness to refresh his memory. Taylor Ev § 1406-1410 The principal or out-foil of the revenue register of mutkhar may also be used for refreshing the memory of a witness. Shue Pan v Mui 3 L B R 250, see also MaDun v Lee O, 5 L B R 40=2 Ind Cas 531 For purposes of section 159, Indian Evidence Act, 1872, it is not requisite that the writing used to refresh the memory of a witness should have been admitted in evidence. Accordingly a document not produced in Court within the proper time and in consequence rejected as evidence under the provisions of Order XIII r 2, C P C may nevertheless be referred to by the party producing it or his witness to refresh his memory of the document and is otherwise within the purview of s 159 of the Evidence Act. The weight of evidence, the objection to the document upon the ground that it is not having been produced at the proper time renders its authenticity the subject of suspicion and all other grounds upon which a document can be successfully impeached still remain open, but refusal to permit a man to refresh his memory by proper relevant contemporaneous document might lead to a grave injustice. Juan Lal v Nilmont, 55 I. A 107 = 7 Pat 305 = 30 Bom. L. R 305 = 107 Ind C 13 337 = 17 C. L. J 302 = 32 C. W. N 565 = A I R 1928 P C 80 = 26 A. L. J 121 The word "writing" used in this section also includes printed matter. Ram Chandra v Emperor, A I R 1930 Lah. 371

Made by himself The writing may have been made either by the witness himself, or by others, provided in the latter case, that it was read by him when the facts were fresh in his memory, and he knew the statement to be correct. Phip P v 451 The witness must be able now to assert that the record accurately represents his knowledge and recollection at the time. The usual phrase requires the witness to affirm this. Wigmore § 747 A witness may refresh his memory by looking at his papers when it was prepared. Laya, 10 C 248, Aeraman v Bejoy, 7 C 407, 403

At the time of the transaction The document must have been written either at the time of the transaction or afterwards that these facts were fresh in the witness's mind. 2 Camp 112, Whitefield v C L R 213 But so far as is concerned the fact that the paper was not drawn up about the time of the events should not be a fault. The recollection may be equally refreshed by a recent note or by some contemporaneous record. It might, in fact, be argued that there was less danger of reliance upon the record itself and more probability of actual refreshment where the paper was one confessedly having no value as a contemporaneous record of past recollection. There is adequate authority for the result thus required by principle. Yet the greater number of decisions, and most of the obiter dicta, announce as a requirement that the memorandum used must have been made contemporaneously or nearly so with the events, 'at or near the time' with the same varying phrases used in the rule for Past Recollection. Wigmore § 761 The framers of the Indian Evidence Act, in this respect also, following the English rule did not make any discrimination between Present Recollection (s 159) and Past Recollection. So now the rule is that a witness may make use of notes taken at the time the fact happened. Kinlock's Case, 25 How St 1r 937. Where the witness goes back to a past recollection which can less easily be tested by cross examination, he may properly be asked for something more positive, — something of a quality satisfactory in itself and not merely the best available. This quality the law has attempted to define, and even to test by an arbitrary rule. There is found first, a general principle that the recollection, when recorded, should have been fairly fresh, — each instance being dealt with on its own circumstances, and, secondly, there is, more commonly, an arbitrary list defining the recollection as are recorded at or near the time of the events. Wigmore § 745 In England it is not essential that it is enough if it has been read at the time when the facts were fresh in the witness's mind.

At the time of the transaction The document must have been written either at the time of the transaction or afterwards that these facts were fresh in the witness's mind. 2 Camp 112, Whitefield v C L R 213 But so far as is concerned the fact that the paper was not drawn up about the time of the events should not be a fault. The recollection may be equally refreshed by a recent note or by some contemporaneous record. It might, in fact, be argued that there was less danger of reliance upon the record itself and more probability of actual refreshment where the paper was one confessedly having no value as a contemporaneous record of past recollection. There is adequate authority for the result thus required by principle. Yet the greater number of decisions, and most of the obiter dicta, announce as a requirement that the memorandum used must have been made contemporaneously or nearly so with the events, 'at or near the time' with the same varying phrases used in the rule for Past Recollection. Wigmore § 761 The framers of the Indian Evidence Act, in this respect also, following the English rule did not make any discrimination between Present Recollection (s 159) and Past Recollection. So now the rule is that a witness may make use of notes taken at the time the fact happened. Kinlock's Case, 25 How St 1r 937. Where the witness goes back to a past recollection which can less easily be tested by cross examination, he may properly be asked for something more positive, — something of a quality satisfactory in itself and not merely the best available. This quality the law has attempted to define, and even to test by an arbitrary rule. There is found first, a general principle that the recollection, when recorded, should have been fairly fresh, — each instance being dealt with on its own circumstances, and, secondly, there is, more commonly, an arbitrary list defining the recollection as are recorded at or near the time of the events. Wigmore § 745 In England it is not essential that it is enough if it has been read at the time when the facts were fresh in the witness's mind.

Writings made by any other person But this testimonial guarantee of immaterial whether the witness or printed the record It may it from the moment when the

witness saw it and passed judgment upon its correctness, it became for him a correct record As the mere fact of his writing it would count for nothing in itself so the mere fact of his not having been the writer is immaterial Wigmore § 748 If the witness saw the writing soon after it was made, and the entry corresponded with what he had himself then observed, that was tantamount to an entry made by himself Digby v Steelman 1 Esp 328, see also Jacob v Lindsay 460, 1 East Burton v Plumer, 2 A & E 341, Foyman v McGear 1 C & K 390, R v Philpots 5 Cox Cr 329, Anderson v Wallis, 3 C & K 54, R v Langton, L R 2 Q B D 296 In Burrough v Martin 2 Camp 112 Lord Ellenborough said 'If a witness looked at the log book from time to time, while the occurrences mentioned were recent, and fresh in his memory, it is as good as if he had written the whole with his hand' Similarly in Lord Talbot v Cusack, 17 Ir C L R 213 O'Brien J said '(The use of memoranda made by the witness himself) has been extended to the case of entries which, though not in the witness's hand writing, were either made in his presence and read by him at the time of the transaction, or were read and examined by him shortly afterwards when the facts were fresh in his recollection and when he was enabled to ascertain that the facts stated in the entry were true' Wigmore § 748 When a witness wants to refresh his memory under this section, he is to do so by referring in Court to the document which he had read at or near the time of the transaction and it is the fact that he had known it to be correct when he read it that is the justification for his doing so It is quite immaterial that a document to which the witness refers in Court was not printed by the witness himself or in his presence It is essential only that he should have read it at or soon after the transaction to which it relates Ram Chandra v Emperor, A I R 1930 Lah 371

not be admissible in evidence Fomlin 5 A & E 856) or or an unstamped document refer to, and user for this Jek v Roy, 13 Q B D 297

Copies of documents Whether the witness can refresh his memory by referring to a mere copy of his original memorandum is a question of some difficulty and doubt in England Taylor § 1403 That the paper is a copy, not an original, is no essential fault The only question is whether in fact it is genuine copy or not Duchess
Tr N S
Cr C
Horne v
Taylor, 3 L R 751,
Prins 20 How St ep 63, Anon 1 Lew
mer, 2 A & E 311,
re is no necessity of accounting for the original in any way in the case of Present Recollection Wigmore § 760 But as neither the English law nor the Indian Evidence Act makes any distinction between Present Recollection (s 159) and Past Recollection, use cannot be made of copies of a document unless the Court be satisfied that there is sufficient reason for the non production of the original Mr Starkie lays down the rule as follows In accordance with the rule which requires the production of the best evidence the memorandum itself must be produced admitted under section 160 as a record of Past Recollection a great stringency should be observed in allowing the witness to use it 'It remains to make sure' says Prof Wigmore, 'that the record which the witness now puts forward as a record of his prior knowledge is in fact the genuine embodiment of his past recollection While the witness's guarantee of its correctness may be on of his guaranteed paper, but also as insuring the on his veracity, as affording a means of testing him, and as the best proof of what was really recorded. In short, the original record itself must be used in testifying, if it is procurable. This rule is almost universally recognized, and of course, if the original is lost or otherwise unavailable, a copy may then be used. Tanner v Taylor, 3 T R 751; Doc v Parling, 3 T R 751, Jones v Stroud, 2 C & P 196; R v Harvey 11 Cox 516, R v St Martins 2 A & E 210, Horne v Maclean, 6 Cl & F 628, Popham v Mc Gregor, 1 C & K 320, Lord Talbot v Cusack, 17 Ir C L R 213. It is true that the use of a copy lacks certain advantage, but this defect is no greater than in the ordinary instance of a contract or a deed which cannot be produced, nor is the importance of using the original here any greater." Higmore § 719. This rule was allowed to be proved by a clerk who refreshed his memory from a ledger, copied under his supervision from a waste book kept by himself. Burton v Plummer, 2 A & E 311. A surveyor has been allowed to refer to a printed copy of a written report made by him to his employers which latter was substantially but not literally transcribed from rough notes taken by him at the time. Horne v Mackenzie 6 C & F 528, contra, Murray v Mason, 18 Ir 1 L R 8, Phipps 15. The question whether secondary evidence was in any given case rightly admitted in one which is proper to be decided by the Judge of the first instance and is treated as depending very much on his discretion. His conclusion should not be overruled except, in a very clear case of miscarriage. Angawa v Ramappa, 5 Bom L R 703-28 B 91. Where the plaints in suits upon bonds by the same plaintiff having been destroyed by fire, while under the Court's custody, were re-instituted upon duplicate copies containing particulars of the lost bonds, might not be secondary evidence of the content of the bonds, was a document that might be used for refreshing a witness's memory under s 159 of the Evidence Act. Faruch Nath v Jeamat Nayya 5 C 853. A copy of the statement of injuries recorded in the register of medico-legal cases may be used by the medical witness for the purpose of refreshing his memory but it cannot be treated as evidence. Mahomed v Emperor, A I R 1926 Lib 51.

Expert. In all cases where skilled witnesses are called to pronounce their opinions on some scientific question they may refresh their memory by referring to professional treatises, tables, calculations lists of prices and the like. For instance, an actuary might refer to the "Carlisle table" when called upon to refresh his memory. So, a reason recall he should not be asked, after such a reference whether his memory is not thereby confirmed Taylor § 143. Ss 159 to 161 permit a limited use being made his memory. Emperor, Statement reduced to writing by police officer. A statement reduced to writing by a police officer under s 162 Criminal Procedure Code cannot have the effect of a deposition, but though it is not evidence the police officer to whom it was made, may use it to refresh his memory under s 159 of the Evidence Act, and may be cross-examined upon it by the counsel against whose case the testimony aided by it has been given. Queen Empress v Satiram 11 B 657, see also Reg v Uttamchand 11 B H C R 120, Crown v Bullock 4 S L R 38 Cr-7 Ind Cas 38-11 Cr L J 493 R v Imrah, 11 B 659, Rophum v R 9 C 155. Documents wherein statements of persons examined by police officer are reduced to writing and are then used under s 119 of the Criminal Procedure Code giving being.

9 C 455=11 C L R 569, R v Stuart, 31 C 1050 A witness is not entitled to insist upon a police officer refreshing his memory, during his examination in Court, by referring to certain notes prepared by such officer under s 119 of the Code In the matter of the petition of Kali Churn Churnari, 8 C 151=10 C L R 51

Confession A Magistrate who took down a confession, may while being examined as a witness, be allowed under s 159 or s 160 Evidence Act to refresh his memory by referring to his record of that confession Emperor v Chaitu Gahera 16 C P L R 122

Special diaries A criminal Court may permit the Police officer, who made the special diary, to look at it for the purpose of contradicting such police officer Where the Police officer does look at an entry in the diary for the purpose of contradicting such diary and to refresh his memory, it cannot be used to enable any witness other than the Police officer who made it to refresh his memory by looking at it, and it cannot be used to contradict any witness other than such Police officer It is the Court which is entitled to use the special diaries for the purpose of seeking for sources and times of enquiry, and for the names of persons who may be in a position to give material evidence Neither the accused nor his agent is entitled to see the special diary for any purpose unless it has been used by the Police officer who made it to refresh his memory for the purpose of contradicting any witness other than himself or any accused person or his agent part of it His right is limited to that of inspection in certain cases Queen Empress v Mannu, 19 A 590 (F B)=A W N 1897, 14

Arbitration proceeding A witness who was present at an arbitration, and had compared the draft and fair copy minutes made by the clerk and had found the latter to be correct, was allowed to refresh his memory as to what occurred at the arbitration, by reference to the fair copy minutes made by arbitrator's clerk Nistarnnee Dasee v Nundo Lal Bose, 5 C W N xvi

Police diary If, upon the question being asked of a witness there is a lapse of memory on his part and that failure of memory can be remedied by reference to any memorandum or other document made by the witness at the time, and the Court invites the witness to refer to the writing the witness is under an obligation to do so His duty to lay the whole truth before the Court Harkiss v Emperor, 19 A L J 76

160 A witness may also testify to facts mentioned in

Testimony to facts any such document as is mentioned in section 159, although he has no specific recollection of the facts themselves, if he is sure that the facts were correctly recorded in the document mentioned in section 159

Illustration

A book keeper may testify to facts recorded by him in books regularly kept in the course of business, if he knows that the books were correctly kept although he has forgotten the particular transactions entered record in Jacob v

L R 2

that the witness may be able to do either by virtue of his general custom in making such records, or (as in the common case of an attesting witness) by his assurance that he would not have made Pearson v Wrightman, 1 Mills Co 15; R v.

 St Marten 2 A & I 213 a copy (Doe v Parltins, 3 T R Popnam v Mc Gregor, 1 C & K 320, Lord Fulbot v Cusack, 17 Ir C L R 213); nevertheless, a copy may be used if the original is lost or otherwise unavailable. Since the process of making a copy of it is a distinct thing from the process of making same, except that the salesman, workman, etc, instead of handing to the bookkeeper, clerk, etc, a written statement of the transaction, makes an oral statement which is transcribed, and in effect represents the first person's recollection as orally reported by him. The joint testimony of the two ought to be receivable on principle; and such is the result generally reached by the Courts, though it has been made in the regular course of when a written record brings to the mind any recollection

tion
 partic
 knows to be genuine, the witness may looking at the record Abdul Salim v Fm at the expense
 C

sio
 wil
 rel
 W
 us
 Be
 those parts only which refer to the subject matter of the case (see also 20 W R 720, though in Belts v Belts, 33 F. L R 200, Low J allowed a examination thereon Phip Ed d to by witness does not make (Gregory v Tavernor, 6 C & 41) though it is otherwise with cross examination upon independent parts Gregory v Tavernor, 6 C & P 280, Phip Ed 450. In a suit for damages for negligence in supervising a building, an Engineer's Report is admis Engineer makes the contents of refresh his memory Nagendran Cas 200-A I R. 1926 Cal 988.

Difference between section 159 and section 160 Under section 159 of the Indian Evidence Act, it is not necessary that the witness must be sure, that what was reduced to writing by him is a correct record. It is enough if, on reading it, the true facts are recalled to his memory. But if he does not actually recollect himself what the appellant said, if the words are not called to his memory, then the notes may be admitted under s 160 of the Evidence Act, if he is sure that the facts are co of those words not been correctly recorded, but of the Evidence are recorded, then the notes J 456=32 M
 Act. In re Mylapore Krishnaswami, 60 M L J 401-A I R 331=2 Ind Cas 33, see also Krishnappa v Emperor, 60 M L J 172
 1931 Mad 430, Jagannath v Emperor, 32 Cr L J 172

161. Any writing referred to under the provisions of the Right of adverse party two last preceding sections must be produced as to writing used to and shown to the adverse party if he requires refresh memory it. such party may, if he pleases, cross-examine the witness thereupon.

examine the witness thereupon. the use of the
 : an opportunity to : be Even where original
 verify

a copy is permitted, there is still a need in fairness or fairness for the opponent, to see the document, in order to prepare, to test the witness upon its contents. Thus it is a necessary implication that the document used, whether an original or a copy, when produced in Court, shall be shown to the opponent on his request to inspect and to use in cross examination. In R v St Martins, 2 A & E 210, Patteson J. said "If he could not recollect the facts independently of the writing, the original writing ought to have been in Court in order that the other party might cross examine, not that such writing is to be made evidence itself, but that the other party is to have the benefit of the witness refreshing his memory in every part." "If the witness cannot be compelled to produce it, he might use documents made for him by the party calling him of the accuracy of which he knows nothing." The right of a party to protection against the introduction against him of false, forged, or manufactured evidence which he is not permitted to inspect, must not be invaded in his breadth. Mullin J. Gibbels v Sterbery, 66 Brib 201.

Scope of the section. In all cases where documents are used for the purpose of refreshing the memory of a witness, it is usual and reasonable—and if the witness has no independent recollection of the fact, it is necessary,—that they should be produced at the trial and that the opposite counsel should have an opportunity of inspecting them, in order that in cross or re examination he may have the benefit of the witness's refreshing his memory by every part. Neither is the adverse party, bound to put the document in, as part of his evidence, merely because he has looked at it, or examined the witness respecting such entries as have been previously referred to, but if he goes further than this, and asks questions as to other thereby makes it his own evidence the opposite party is permitted to his oral testimony with the ok at the writing to see what of improper document, but it is doubtful whether he is entitled, except for this particular purpose, to question the witness as to or the same writing

In re Jhubboo Mahtan
Records Register IX
inter foil of Land
tion to which it refers to the report. It does - - - - -
ing the report
But
oral report
he is
in that way,
the e on 3 of the Evidence Act and should be placed on the record. Ans Dun v Lee O, 5 L B R 40-2 Ind Cas 535

The question sometimes arises whether memoranda, used to refresh the memory, are under discussion. Of course, the memoranda used with such writings as discussed, are competent as evidence, when the witness, after examining the memorandum finds his memory so refreshed that he can testify from recollection, independently of the memorandum, there is no reason or necessity for the introduction of the paper or writing itself, and it is not admissible. In such case the jury have no knowledge of the contents of the paper, unless opposing counsel calls for such contents for cross examination. Of course, the cross-examiner has the right to inspect and use the document in order that he may test the candour and credibility of the witness.

the use of ed to in his
was inniable
remem-
y been morant

dum, cannot testify to an existing knowledge of the fact, independently of the memorandum, but can testify that, at or about the time the writing was made, he knew of its contents and of its truth or accuracy. In such cases, both the testimony of the witness and the contents of the memorandum are held admissible. "The two are the equivalent of a present positive statement of the witness, affirming the truth of the contents of the memorandum." Hancock v. Kelly, 81 Al. 386. There are many every-day transactions in commercial ment, and when their original entries and memoranda have been duly authenticated, and there is danger in allowing them to be 2 Hill (N. Y.) 531. But er recollects

the facts
parry, and is
Burr Jones

No oral statements of witnesses should be recorded in the "special" diary kept by a police officer under s 172 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Whether incorporated or - by the police produced, but accused may at the t
to refer to them, and th furnish him with cop
credit of the witness

being allowable only with regard to the kept under section 172 Criminal Proce his memories. Dadan Gazi v. Emperor, 33 C 1023-10 C W N 830-4 Cr

L J 79

162. A witness summoned to produce a document shall, if it is in his possession or power, bring it to Court, notwithstanding any objection which there may be to its production or to its admissibility. The validity of any such objection shall be decided on by the Court.

The Court, if it sees fit, may inspect the document, unless it refers to matters of State, or take other evidence to enable it to determine on its admissibility.

If for such a purpose it is necessary to cause any document to be translated, the Court may, if it thinks fit, direct the translator to keep the contents secret, unless the document is to be given in evidence, and, if the interpreter disobeys such direction, he shall be held to have committed an offence under section 166 of the Indian Penal Code.

Scope of the section. If the person is required to produce a document, he is served with a subpoena duces tecum. A subpoena duces tecum ought to specify the documents required, and the Court will not enforce a subpoena which is too general, but if a person served with a subpoena duces tecum is required to produce documents required with him, he must produce them. Re Gamma Silver Mining Co. Ltd. [1908] 2 K. B. 333. A witness who is merely called to produce a document and in that case he cannot be cross examined Wood Cock 197 But he may be asked what does he answer the question without being not the whole of the documents Pouell Lb 653; see also Pickering v Noyes, 1 Ha 299 If he does not attend the writing on any of will not be admissible, Griffith v Ricketts, 7 Ha 299 and refuses to produce evidence it is not called by books they having been removed from him since the R v Stuart, 2 T L R 141; Pouell 654 Stuart all he deemed to have produced instead Order XVI, rule 6

An order cannot be made for the parties to the action [Starker v Reynolds, (1899) 22 Q B D 262] although such persons may be ordered to attend and produce them before the Court or Judge or examiner Re Smith, Williams v Frere, (1891) 1 Ch 323 Section 123 makes the production of evidence as to unpublished official records of affairs of State in custody of whom with him to Court to there is no necessity on the grounds The Head of the fit Vide s 123 even inspecting

he must produce person But to justify relating to the questions in issue any is not enforceable Lee v Angus, L Mining Co, L R 10 Ch 191, Burchard (247) The subpoena should not be oppressive This subpoena is incidental to the power of Courts and necessary to the Loans 9 East 473 It is a writ of compulsory

He has no ban whether with him the 1 273, For they should on, 3 Burr could be with

1687 Thus, the Court that they will deprive the witness object him to a penalty or a criminal charge 352, Whitaker v Wood, 2 Tan 115, or of a confidential communication to an Opeland v Watts, 1 Stark 95 Illustrations, 37 Ch D 1, vide ss 126 127 of whether his excuse for not producing the same is valid or reasonable Bull v Loveland, 10 Pick (Mass) 9, Burr Jones § 861

In a case where an attorney claimed the protection of his lien, the Court said 'The exception to the general rule of production seems to me a reasonable one That an attorney's lien on his client's papers should not be permutal the papers by a subpoena duces tecum. The value of the lien often lessens when summoned by him to produce papers from use as evidence and by a subpoena duces tecum to seems to be unjust. Davis v seems to me unjust. Davis v

Lewis, 30 Fed 791, see also Hope v Lillie, 7 De G M & L 331, In re
Cameron's Coolbrook, etc R Co, 2 Nev 1, Brassington v Brassington, 1 Sum & S 455, Kemp v King 2 Moody & R 437. So a Court will punish the witness for his failure or refusal to produce documents if properly subpoenaed in case he has no excuse for such failure or refusal. Rule 17 of the Indian Penal Code, R v Dyer, (1908) 2 K B 333. A subpoena duces tecum is only to be employed to secure the production of books and papers that are to be introduced in evidence in the trial of an action, it is not to be used to secure papers to refresh the memory of a witness. It cannot be used for the production of them. Burr Jones § 501.

The fact that the documents are in the possession of a corporation does not prevent their production. A private individual would be able to produce them. Ambassador and consuls, their official papers Burr Jones § 802

Where the witness declines to produce an instrument on the ground of professional confidence, the Judge should not inspect it to see whether it was one which he ought to withhold (Doc d Carter v James, 2 M & Rob 47, Volant v Soyer, 13 C B 231=23 L J C P 83), and it seems that the mere assertion on oath by the solicitor that it is a title deed or other privileged document

It seems to be sufficient if one only of several interested parties objects. Per Maule J in Newton v Chaplin 19 L J C P 374, Kearley v Phillips, 10 Q B D 465. When the production is excused, secondary evidence is admissible. Marston v Downes 1 Ad & E 81, Doe d Gilbert v Ross, 7 M & W 102, Roscoe N P 158.

he production of
and once the
d on if the party
5 Ind Cas 393

Statements made before the Income Tax Collector do not relate to affairs of state and so are not governed by s 123 of the Evidence Act. The Income Tax Collector, summoned to produce, is bound to produce the books in his possession, in spite of the rules made under s 38 of the Income Tax Act forbidding disclosure. Under s 162 of the Evidence Act, a witness should not decline to bring documents into Court on the ground of privilege. Under the same section, the Court has power to inspect the documents for the purposes of deciding objections regarding production. The rules regarding non disclosure of information, do not apply to the production of documents.

4 M L 1 317 317=32 M 6-13 1 2 3 00
The privilege is claimed is entirely his section and its refusal to inspect Aigaraja v Lythianatha (1911)

Principle The production of papers upon notice, does not make them evidence in the cause, unless the party calling for them inspects them so as to become acquainted with their contents, in which case he is obliged to use them as his evidence (Calvert v Fowler, 7 C & B 386; Wharam v Routledge 5 Esp 235 per Lord Ellenborough) at least if they be in any way material to the issue Wilson v Bouie 1 C & P 10, Sayer v Kitchen 1 Esp 210 Taylor § 1817. The reason for this rule is that it would give an unconnotice to produce a paper in evidence must be supposed to know its contents. If he does not he ought not to be permitted to speculate through the forms of law and obtain from his adversary the inspection of any paper or document he may choose to demand. Such a privilege could be liable to abuse. Laddiffe J in Laurence v Van Horne 1 Cinnis 276, 285, Wigmore § 2125.

Scope of the section The mere calling for the documents from the opposite party is not enough to make them evidence. But when the party calling for the document inspects them he is bound to give it as evidence if the party producing it requires him to do so. Burr Jones § 226. If the party giving the notice declines to use the papers when produced, this though material of observation will not make them evidence for the adverse party. Sayer v Kitchen 1 Esp 210. But it is otherwise if the papers are used or inspected by the party calling for them, and are material to the issues. Wilson v Bouie 1 C & P 10, Calvert v Fowler 7 C & P 386, Wharam v Routledge 5 Esp 235, Roscoe v P & L 13. Inspection by a party includes inspection by an agent as well as personally. Norey v Keep (1909) 1 Ch 557, 560. This section is intended to prevent the somewhat indignant squabbling which frequently takes place in England as to whether a document which the other party has received notice to produce, should be put in. Mark Ev p 113. In Calvert v Fowler 7 C & P 386 the documents called for were books of account. In that case the plaintiff called for them and the paper was read upon the stand. You make it evidence for the other side, if he think fit to use it. In Wilson v Bouie 1 Carr p 10 the paper produced was a receipt which was not material to the case and Park J said 'If the plaintiff's counsel call for a paper and look at it, he must read it in evidence if it is at all material to the case, if it does not bear on the case he need not read it. This paper is of the latter special provisions of this section must be deemed to be conclusive evidence against the party who has inspected the documents. There is certainly nothing in the language of the section itself to justify such a conclusion. All that happens is that the documents which the other party has produced become evidence in the case for what they are worth. Ram Dhan v Ram Dajal 23 O C 156-57 Ind Cas 973. In a pending trial the defendant produced certain account books and gave me the document. However did the document rebutting evidence if any, held that the procedure of the lower Court was not justified by s 163 of the Evidence Act. Section 163 does not render the proof of the document to be executed unnecessary or alter the normal incidence of that burden. It is doubtful whether section 163 of the Evidence Act is applicable to accounts produced under the procedure for discovery or only to accounts produced after the trial has begun Raj Gopala v Ramanuja, 1923 M W N 292=72 Ind Cis 459=1923 Mad 607=18 L W 165 Application of this section is not restricted to civil proceedings only. It is applicable

Where departmental statements are produced, inspected and used for cross-examination of several witnesses the Crown is entitled to have the whole of the statement as evidence. Departmental enquiry by a Magistrate in his executive capacity is not judicial enquiry and such statements the applied to such statement. I R 1930 Cal 370

164 When a party refuses to produce a document which he has had notice to produce, he cannot afterward use the document as evidence without the consent of the other party or the order of the Court

Illustration

A sues B on an agreement and gives B notice to produce it. At the trial A calls for the document and B refuses to produce it. A gives secondary evidence of its contents. B seeks to produce the document itself to contradict the secondary evidence given by A, or in order to show that the agreement is not stamped. He cannot do so.

Principle Where an opponent in possession refuses to produce on demand, he is afterwards forbidden to produce the document in order to contradict the other party's copy or evidence of its contents. This is in one sense a proper penalty for unfair tactics, but the original refusal may also be regarded as a judicial admission in advance, of the correct extent of the document. Wigmore § 1210. In Doe v Coe B said "You must either produce a document or see also Lewis v Harilev, 7 C & P 405, Doe

Scope The section applies to a document in his possession refused to produce at liberty Hodgson, to the intent that his refusal to comply with the effect of letting in secondary evidence, such notice is given. Hills v 3rd E 361. If he once insure the production of the document. Hills v 3rd E 361. He is not entitled to refuse, but he is about to have without the evidence B 413, 439, Jackson v he is permitted to put the document into the hands of the jury for the purpose of cross-examination. Allen, 3 St 527 528, or to produce and prove on, 12 A & E 135. He is not entitled to be called (Jackson v Allen, 131); or to refresh the memory of a witness (Wille C J M S), or it seems for any purpose (Callins v Gordon, 3 F & 47, Byles J). He is, in effect bound, by any legal and satisfactory evidence produced on the other side. Ruscoe v 219, Port E 252. This is for instruction. What he is to produce to produce his opponent's future of the

to produce the document and use it as evidence. Callins v Gordon, 3 F & 47, Byles J. He is, in effect bound, by any legal and satisfactory evidence produced on the other side. Ruscoe v 219, Port E 252. This is for instruction. What he is to produce to produce his opponent's future of the accused to produce certain documents &c does not deprive him of the right to defence or to put them to the complainant Kapur v Emperor, 36 C. W. N. 1127 "I am by no means convinced that it applies to criminal proceedings"—Per Pankridge J in Ibid

165. The Judge may, in order to discover or to obtain proper proof of relevant facts, ask any question he pleases, in any form, at any time, of any witness, or of the parties about any fact relevant or irrelevant; and may order the production of any document or thing; and neither the parties nor their agents shall be entitled to make any objection to any such question or order, nor, without the leave of the Court, to cross-examine any witness upon any answer given in reply to any such question:

Provided that the judgment must be based upon facts declared by this Act to be relevant, and duly proved:

Provided also that this section shall not authorize any Judge to compel any witness to answer any question, or to produce any document which such witness would be entitled to refuse to answer or produce under sections 121 to 131, both inclusive, if the question were asked or the document were called for by the adverse party; nor shall the Judge ask any question which it would be improper for any other person to ask under section 148 or 149; nor shall he dispense with primary evidence of any document, except in the cases hereinbefore excepted.

Principle "Section 165 is intended to arm the Judge with the most extensive power possible for the purpose of getting at the truth. The effect of this section, is that in order to get to the bottom of the matter before it the Court will be able to look at and enquire into every fact whatever" Steph Intro, L. Act p 102 "We know of no limit" says Lumkin J in Epps v State, 19 Gr 118 (Am) "to the right which belongs to the Court of interrogating witnesses, either in civil or criminal cases, especially the latter. The life or death of a man may be tolerated for a ... which ought to have been brought out. It is not only Judge to call the attention of the witness to the prosecution, his aim being neither to punish the innocent or screen the guilty, but to administer the law correctly."

English rule The sporting theory of the common law in which litigation was a game of skill to be conducted according to the specific rules and to be tended to place the me, whose duty it was les of the game hid the Judge's functions rds there has never of the proceedings and the judicial function, ver and duty to put ceivable to elicit the truth more fully. This just exercise of his function was never doubted at common law; the Judge could even call a new witness of his own motion and could seek evidence to inform himself judicially; much more could he ask additional questions of a witness already called but imperfectly examined. Fortunately, in spite of the strong but subtle tendency to force the purely judicial function into the back ground, the tradition of the common law has never been lost; the right of the Judge to interrogate as he thinks best has always been pre-erred in theory. Wigmore § 781. So under the English law a Judge has always a discretionary power, with which the Court above is very unwilling to interfere (Middleton v Barred, 1 Ex R 213 Per Parke B), of recalling witnesses at any stage of the trial, and of putting such legal questions to them as the exigencies of justice require. R v Watson, 6 C & P 653. Taylor § 1477. So a judge may put all such questions to a witness as the interests of justice require (R v Remnant, R. & R 836; R v Watson, 6 C & P 653, R v Jameson, T. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000).

Scope of the Section. It seems to be the general rule, well supported by the questions to w order that the t at a trial is no or officer charge maintain truth of rules of pract question the my Per Dick y v State so I lly neces- sary the facts and circumstances of the case on trial as possible, in order that he may instruct the jury, and correctly, to the extent his duty demands, shape the determination of the litig and doubtless it resi- ding Judge the not exigencies may warrant in exercise of the right here in capable of very precise statement, but it may be said that the right here in question is one which should be very sparingly exercised, and, generally, counsel for the parties should be relied on and allowed to manage and bring out their be such as to the one or the other party to the cause.

As regards the inch James Fitzjames Stephen in of English Barristers to which they practice I would appeal to every one who has any subject, whether the observations referred to are not strictly true, and whether the main provision founded upon them—the provision which empowers the Court to ask what question it pleases—is not essential to the administration of justice here. In saying that the Bench and the Bar in England are fully nothing India in ly neces- sers, but ind in s which ing that section

165, which has been "so much objected to has been framed" Speech of the Hon'ble Fitzjames Stephen on the 12th March 1872, in submitting the Report of the

ask
 elicit all the facts he may have some well dexterously avoids, or a defendant may answer given and allow it to pass uncriticized; in any such case it is highly be armed with full power enabling him to get subject to conditions to be immediately about any matter relating document or thing

however, is very clearly based on relevant facts, and those relevant refuse to answer or produce at the instance of the opposite party Judge ask any of the questions as to credit which would be improper if asked by the adverse party, nor can he dispense with primary evidence of a document unless the facts of the case show that secondary evidence is admissible. A Judge, accordingly, cannot, by the exercise of the powers conferred by this section, impart into the evidence the character of relevant under the Act, nor can he in any mode of proof, or ask questions to credit, if asked by the parties. Thus restricted of obvious utility in a country like India, as no advocate is employed, but the Judge has to make out the truth as best he can from the false accounts of ignorant, excited in any form at any stage of the cause, and to a certain extent even all This, however, does not mean that he can for if such be left to the jury, a new

from the section, "to secure indictive fixed by technicality, to secure indictive fixing the amount of punishment" of the Court to propound pertinent and properly framed questions to a witness. The exercise of the power, if the questions propounded by the Court are directed to crucial points of the case is of the one or the other of, the
 of great embarrassment if leading and suggestive in form or improper for any cause. It is believed the instances are rare and the conditions exceptional in a high degree which will justify the presiding Judge the oral examination of a witness and the

able
 the high effect
 his leading easily
 into,
 the Judge will at once fact he

Of course, the examination by the Judge must be done in a reasonable and impartial way, so as not to indicate his opinion of the facts, and thereby prejudice the rights of the parties. His questions should be propounded, not proceed ;

manage as
the trial

ment it is necessary to elicit the truth, he may interpose with questions to the witness, either in direct or cross examination and he may put leading questions or suggest the form of a question, and it has even been held that a Judge may call a witness and examine him and permit or refuse either side to cross-examine such witness. Coulson v Disborough, (1894) 2 Q B 316. It is obvious that these privileges of the Court should be so exercised as not to prejudice the rights of the parties, or to unduly interfere with the presumption of the cause of action or defence. The discretion of the trial Court will not be interfered with except in a clear case of abuse. While the Judge may, of course, state the grounds of his rulings in receiving or rejecting testimony, comment upon the weight of the evidence at the time of its production should be avoided as an invasion upon the province of the jury. The Court may often with great propriety ask questions of a witness on the stand for the purpose of bringing out the facts of the case but should never indulge in remarks to witnesses or in comments upon their testimony, which may either magnify or diminish its effect upon the jury as to credibility or value. While the Judge may so interpose questions, his comments, if any should be so guarded as not to prejudice the parties, even though not directed against them. For example, when the Judge said "I don't think going over the same ground so much does any good. I suppose that the jury knows more about forest fires than any of the witnesses that are testifying or any of the attorneys in the case," the Court held the remark

of forest fire
the witness
an improper Beene 16 A disregard ;

Jones § 815

judgment must be based upon facts proved Shah J in Ismail v Emp

16 Cr L J 83=2 Bom Cr C 252

Indian Penal Code, the Sessions

Indian Evidence Act, ing the years of his life previous to the
in a lunatic asylum, record medical of the opinion formed as to his particular or, Rat. Un Cr C 279

The provisions contained in this section and in Order XIII, r 10 of the Civil Procedure Code are intended to arm the Court with a power of initiative in getting at the truth. The essential duty of the judicial officer is not to decide what is possible, but to ascertain the truth. The act of sending a witness to the Court is not a mere formality. The Court has been empowered to put to a witness any question at any time and in any form. Pratap v Emperor, Inl Rul 1930 Nag 273.

Under this section a Magistrate is entitled to put to a witness any question at any time and in any form. Pratap v Emperor, Inl Rul 1930 Nag 273.

5. Construction of the Section This section is capable of two widely different interpretations (a) It may mean that the Judge may introduce into the case without any restrictions except those stated in the second proviso any irregular evidence he pleases that he might for example ask a witness what some respectable persons had told him about the matter in dispute evidence which though properly speaking is inadmissible, might be quite trustworthy. But then what is the meaning of the first proviso? How is the Judge to make use of the irregular evidence at all if he is not allowed to base his judgment upon it at least to some extent? Even if he uses it only to corroborate other evidence he still bases his judgment partly upon it (b) The other possible construction of the section is that it only empowers the Judge to ask irregular questions in order to discover or obtain proper, that is, regularly admissible evidence. For example in a case of murder when the weapon had not been found, a witness might state in answer to the Judge that he had heard that the accused had secreted it in a certain ditch. The statement being hearsay would be inadmissible but the Judge by means of it, might be able to direct an enquiry which would lead to the weapon being found. Upon the second of these two constructions of the section the first proviso would prevent less difficulty. But then it is not easy to see why the last clause of the second proviso was inserted. This clause would be quite intelligible if the section were intended as a general relaxation of the rules of evidence, but why should not a Judge who was merely hunting up evidence look to a copy in order to see whether it was worth while to endeavour to procure the original. It may further be observed that if that clause on the other hand refers to the evidence to be accepted in the case itself it appears to be mere surplusage as the first proviso has already declared that the facts must 'be duly proved' i.e. where the fact is contained in a document primary evidence of that document must as a general rule be given. In the first view it would modify the rules of evidence to a very considerable extent. In the second view the section would tell little if anything, to the already existing law. Marlby Ev pp 111115 asking irrelevant questions to a proof of relevant facts, but if he asks being taken against him he is not bound to answer him and cannot be punished under s 179 I P Code. In re Lalshman Cr Rg 14 10 1885

Ask any question The ordinary practice in a properly constituted Court is that where a witness for the prosecution is not called on the part of the Crown he is placed in the witness box in order that the defence may have an opportunity of cross examining it necessary to call one of these witnesses which he thought material for allowed an opportunity of putting any question that he thought necessary cross examination. Per Jackson J in Empress v Girish Chandra, 5 C 614 Under s 160 of the Evidence Act a Judge has power to ask any question he pleases about irrelevant facts if he does so in order to discover or obtain proof of relevant facts. Queen Empress v Hari Lalshman 10 B 185, see also R v Afrit 2 I R 603 'It is not the province of the Court to examine the witness unless the pleaders on either side have omitted to put some material question or questions, and the Court should as a general rule, leave the witness to the pleaders to be dealt with as laid down in s 138 of the Act. The Judge's power to put questions under s 160 is certainly not intended to be used in the manner in the present case. Per Garth C J in to the Court in

section 162
L J 528 = A
165 cannot be
Maung Han Gya
219 = A 1 R 19
= A 1 R 1931

42 C
section
Code
L J 109
or the purpose of eliciting what the law expressly and deliberately forbids being admitted. For instance it should not be used for proving a confession made to the police which is shut out by s 25 of the Evidence Act or a confession made while in police custody except as mentioned in s 27. Pillai v Emperor, A I R 1932 Mad 625. The Court's decision must rest not upon suspicion but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony. Luchini v Radha, 34 C L J 107; Bhagwan v Shamsher, 33 P L R 1918=44 Ind Cas 433.

It is established that with a view to clear up obscure the bounds of the provisions of counsel engaged in the same justice. Surendra Krishna, 13 C L J 34=9 Ind Cas 811.

A Judge is justified in using his knowledge about the character of the parties in a suit to come to a decision upon the credit to be attached to their evidence on the case set up by them. San Hla v Mi Khorou 9 L B R 160=45 Ind Cas 724=12 Bur L R 98.

Cross examination on answers given to the Court. In Sukharam v Muni, 11 B H C R 569 at p 510. West J said: "When the counsel for the prisoner has examined or declined to cross-examine a witness, and the Court afterwards, of the permission of examination of him in hand, he is put under special procedure as the Judge is empowered to ask any question he pleases, in any form also (s 162, Indian Evidence Act), and he is the under the special protection of the Court, partly to cross-examine him, but it cannot be asked for as a matter of right to the witness for any effect, out an answer—upon every answer given to the Court—under his control." In Coulson v Disborough, (1894) 2 Q B 316, Lord Esher M R said: "If what the witness has said in answer to the questions put to him by the Judge is adverse to either of the parties, the Judge would no doubt allow, and he ought to allow, the party's counsel to cross-examine the witness upon his answer." A general fishing cross-examination ought not to be permitted.

This view was approved by Farwell L J in re, Enoch and Zaretsky, 79 L J K B 263=(1910) 1 K B 327 C A. The words "any witness" in this section include a Court witness. It is doubtful how far the right to cross-examine such a witness is an absolute right or requires the leave of the Court. Malund Singh v Ali Ghafurunnissa, 9 O & A L R 312=74 Ind Cas 108. The Court should not examine a witness without notice to the parties or their pleaders, and to cross-examine him or to rebut his statement does justify such procedure. When a witness, it acts with material irregularity in the meaning of s 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. Pearlat v Pearson, 1940 1 K B 407.

It follows that a Judge's questions may be leading in form. "Folly my lords," said Lord Ellenborough C J "has said that, in examining the witness, almost too object- reasons in I have leading

however, may put what questions he pleases, and it is

Construction of the Section This section is capable of two widely different interpretations (a) It may mean that the Judge may introduce into the case without any restrictions except those stated in the second proviso any irregular evidence he pleases, that he might for example ask a witness what some respectable persons had told him about the matter in dispute evidence which though properly speaking is inadmissible, might be quite trustworthy. But then what is the meaning of the first proviso? How is the Judge to make use of the irregular evidence at all if he is not allowed to base his judgment upon it at least to some extent? Even if he uses it only to corroborate other evidence he still bases his judgment partly upon it (b) The other possible construction of the section is that it only empowers the Judge to ask irregular questions in order to discover or obtain proper, that is, regularly admissible evidence. For example in a case of murder when the weapon had not been found, a witness might state in answer to the Judge that he had heard that the accused had secreted it in a certain ditch. The statement being hearsay would be inadmissible but the Judge by means of it, might be able to direct an enquiry which would lead to the weapon being found. Upon the second of these two constructions of the section the first proviso would prevent less difficulty. But then it is not easy to see why the last clause of the second proviso was inserted. This clause would be quite intelligible if the section were intended as a general relaxation of the rules of evidence but why should not a Judge who was merely hunting up evidence look to a copy in order to see whether it was worth while to endeavour to procure the original. It may further be observed that if that clause on the other hand refers to the evidence to be accepted in the case itself it appears to be mere surplusage as the first proviso has already declared that the facts must 'be duly proved' & where the fact is contained in a document primary evidence of that document must as a general rule be given. In the first view it would modify the rules of evidence to a very considerable extent. In the second view, the section would add little if anything to the already existing law. Mirbaj Ev pp 111-112. Under this section a Judge has the power of asking irrelevant questions to a witness, if he does so in order to obtain proof of relevant facts, but if he asks questions with a view to criminal proceedings being taken against him he is not bound to answer him and cannot be punished under s 179 I P Code. In re Lal Shiman Cr Rg 14 10 1885.

The ordinary practice in a properly constituted Court of the prosecution is not called on the part of the defence to have an opportunity of putting any question that he thought necessary in cross examination. Per Jackson J in Empress v Gurish Chandra, 5 C 614. Under s 115 of the Evidence Act a Judge has power to ask any question in order to discover or obtain proof.

or questions, and the C with regard order to 165 cannot be

Maung Hui Gya
219-A I R 18
-A I R 1931

10 B 185, see also R v
Court to examine the witness at some material question to leave the witness to the Judge's power
in the manner
with C J in but questions
heer in the police
power
the law
V. Emperor 43 C
provision of section
and Procedure Code
019-23 Cr L J
N 317-53 C. 109
not be used for the purpose of eliciting what the law expressly and deliberately forbids being admitted. For instance it should not be used for proving a confession made to the police which is shut out by s 25 of the Evidence Act or a confession made while in police custody except as mentioned in s 27. Pullama v Emperor A I R 1932 Mad 625. The Court's decision must rest not upon suspicion but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony. Luchman v Nadha, 34 C L J 107, Bhagwan v Shamsher, 33 P L R 1918=14 Ind Crs 433. A Court of appeal cannot set things right on appeal unless it is established that the intervention with questions of a trial Judge, with a view to clear up obscurities and generally to elicit the truth, exceeded the bounds of the provisions of s 165 and so impeded the legitimate work of counsel engaged in the same.

Krishna

Crs 811

is parties

evidence

the case set up by them. San Hla v Mt Khorou 9 L B R 160=45 Ind Crs 734=11 Bur L T 93

Cross examination on answers given to the Court. In Sulharam v Mundji, 11 B H C R 569 up 510, West J said. When the counsel for the prisoner has examined or declined to cross examine a witness, and the Court afterwards of its own motion the permission of the Court, the examination of a witness by him in hand he is put under special pressure as the Judge is empowered to ask any question he pleases in any form about any fact relevant or irrelevant (s 160 Indian Evidence Act), and he is therefore at the same time placed under the special protection of the Court which may at its discretion allow a party to cross examine him but this cannot be asked for as a matter of right.

This principle the witness is any question effect of all but out an incorrect answers—upon every answer given to the Court—and is subject to Court's control. In Coulson v Disborough (1894) 2 Q B 316 Lord Esher M R said. If what the witness has said in answer to the questions put to him by the Judge is adverse to either of the parties the Judge would no doubt allow, and he is right to allow the party's counsel to cross examine the witness upon his answer.

A general fishing cross examination ought not to be permitted. This a return was approved by Farrall L J in In re Fnoch and Zaretsky 79 L J K B 263=(1910) 1 K B 327 C A. The words any witness in this section include a Court witness. It is doubtful how far the right to cross examine such a witness is an absolute right or requires the leave of the Court.

Mahend Singh v Mt Ghafurunnissa, 9 O & A L R 542=74 Ind Crs 108. The Court should not examine a witness without notice to the parties or their pleaders, and without affording them an opportunity to cross examine him or to rebut his statements.

Section 160 of the Evidence Act does justify such procedure. When a Court examines a witness without notice to the pleaders and bases its decision upon the evidence of the witness it acts with material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction within the meaning of s 110 of the Civil Procedure Code. Pearilal v Pearilal, 22 Ind Crs 407.

It follows that a Judge's questions may be leading in form. Folly and that in examining the witness is ridiculous. It is almost too leading the fact can it be objected to persons in leading questions? I have the situation always understood that the meaning of a leading question was produces a witness interrogatories a favour the party however, may purpose, because then the rule is changed; for there is no danger that the witness will be too complying. But even in a case where evidence is brought forward to support a particular fact, if the witness is obviously adverse to the not prevail, and the most leading that the Judge on the bench may not please can only originate in the age" 25 Hansard Part Deb

207

Proviso (1) Having regard to the strength of evidence of this section judgment based

41 M 731=34 N

609=56 Ind Cr

Court must be based upon facts declared by the Act to be relevant and duly proved, and it would be intolerable that the Court should decide rights upon suspicions unsupported by testimony" Per Jenkins C J in Sreemutty Mohan Bibi v Sarai Chand 2 C W N 17 (27); see also Ismael v Emperor, 26 Ind Cr 995=16 Bom L R 931, Luchiram v Rathi, 31 C L J 107; Bhiquan v Shamser, 33 P L R 1918=44 Ind Cr 133; Queen v Pitamber, 7 W R Cr 25, Emperor v Jalub Das, 27 C 295=4 C W. N 129 Court ought not to comment adversely on witness's conduct relying on matters which are not evidence. Amar Nath v Emperor, 85 Ind Cr 144=26 Cr. L J 463=A I R 1925 Lrh 167. It is the duty of the Judge to record a Baldeo v Sheoraj, 56 Ind Cr 807

Proviso (2) Where the question is asked with a view to criminal proceedings being taken against the witness, the witness is not legally bound to answer it, and he cannot be punished under s 179 I P Code, for refusing to answer. Queen Empress v Hari Lalshman, 10 B 185. A witness should not be coerced to answer a question. Queen Empress v Ishri, 8 A 672 (675)

166. In cases tried by jury or with assessors, the jury or assessors may put any questions to the witnesses, through or by leave of the Judge, which the Judge himself might put and which he considers proper.

Scope The privilege to examine witnesses has long been extended to jurors, when exercised to draw out or clear up some uncertain point. Schaefer v St Louis, 128 Mo 64, Burr Jones § 815. R v Lalluman, (1906) 2 Q B 167 questions through the mal, 24 M 523. It is viewing the spot in controversy, since the knowledge derived by these means is far more satisfactory than any obtainable by the mere examination of maps or places which are often also, have been prepared with an express view to the purpose. In the matter of petition of Lalji, 19 Procedure Code. But the jurors and assessors can only view the scene of the alleged offence, and cannot examine any witnesses on the spot, because by sub section (2) of s 203 the officer conducting the jurors or assessors to the spot cannot suffer any other person to speak to them. Queen v Chatterdhoree, 5 W. R 59

CHAPTER XI.

OF IMPROPER ADMISSION AND REJECTION OF EVIDENCE

167. The improper admission or rejection of evidence shall

No new trial for improper admission or rejection of evidence. not be ground of itself for a new trial or reversal of any decision in any case, if it shall appear to the Court before which such

the ground that some evidence had been improperly received, when other evidence had been properly admitted that was of itself sufficient to support the conviction the Judges seemed to think must depend on the nature of the case and the weight of the evidence. If the case were clearly made out by proper evidence, in such a way as to satisfy the mind of any reasonable man, a conviction ought not to be set aside. But if the evidence had been given which ought not to have been received, and the improper evidence without such improper evidence would not clearly make out the case, such was the rule in the King's Bench.

R 133 R v Teal, 11 East 311, R v Hul v Wynne, 2 B & Ald 554 559. Mansfield C J in Hartford v Wilson, 1 Taunt 101, said that case the learned Chief Justice, said

"Neither will the Court set aside a verdict on account of the admission of evidence which ought not to have been received, provided there be sufficient evidence without it to authorize the finding of the jury." This rule was also explained approved in Doe v Tyler, 6 Bing 561. Such was equally the practice in Chancery, when issues had been sent to a jury in a Common Law Court. Wigmore § 21. In Pemberton v Pemberton, 11 Ves 50, 52, Lord Eldon L said "If upon the whole record he is satisfied that justice has been done, though he may think, that some evidence was improperly rejected at law, he is at liberty to refuse a new trial." Similarly in Lorton v Kingston, 5 Cl & F 263, 310 Lord Cottenham, L C said "The true consideration always is whether on the whole there appears to be such a case as enables the Judge in equity, to set aside the verdict. In that decade of 1830. In that decade 1835) 1 C M & R 919, announced signified that an error of ruling against a party was right to a new trial created per se for the error. Langfield 16 M & W 497, 515. The new Wigmore § 21, see also Doe v Langfield 16 M & W 497, 515. The new Exchequer rule was speedily accepted in the other Courts. (See Rutledge v Fair 4 A & E 53, Wright v Tatham 7 A & E 313, 330), and for something more than a generation it remained the law of England until it was reformed away, for civil causes in 1875. Wigmore § 21. In R v Gibson, L R 18 Q B D 537, 540, Lord Coleridge C J said "Until the passing of the Judicature Acts, the rule was that if any bit of evidence not legally admissible, which might have affected the verdict, had gone to the jury, the party against whom it was given was entitled to a new trial. See also Campbell v Looper, 34 L J Ex 58.

Now the civil cases in England are governed by the Judicature Act, 1883 and Rules of the Supreme Court, Rule 6 of Order 39 of the same Acts as follows: "A new trial shall not be granted on the ground of misdirection or Unless in the opinion of the Judge, the evidence is wrong or miscarriage of justice, or some legitimate effect is not obtained for when the evidence is admissible in the trial. And the same rule applies to other evidence which has occurred in the trial.

to sustain the verdict must stand. For example MacLarn & Son v Tydfil Urban Council, (1899) 1 Q B 411. In England the rule 6, is not applicable to the Divorce Court. Allen v Allen (1894) P 255. "I doubt the possibility of formulating a rule which would prevent the attempt (1896) A C 44 (W, 2) illegal agreement. See Hartley v Hartley (1892) 2 Q B 501. See also Allen v Allen (1894) P 255. "I doubt the possibility of formulating a rule which would prevent the attempt (1896) A C 44 (W, 2) refusal" Wignmore § 21 This section affirms a reasonable principle often before laid down authoritatively by the Privy Council. If, after setting aside what has been improperly rejected or omitted, the residue of the evidence is sufficient to support the finding of the original Court, no Appellate Court should set it aside. Thus, in Ranee Surnamoyee v Maharaja Sulties Chunder Roy Bahadur, 10 M I A. 125, the Court, by false evidence, the Court

"Ioharajah Juggut v Bhupo Tarnee, 14 W 6 B L R P C 495 In Mohar Singh v Ghuriba, 6 B L R P C 495, the Court said: "It seems to their Lordships trial, it is shown that evidence improper to be admitted has been admitted before the jury. The Court in those cases are not Judges of fact, and are unable to say evidence that ought not to have ought not to have been admitted, to support the decrees. Their Lordships, that the Court of first instance, in the case before them, had seen as it has been in is always to be See also United R

7 M I A 128; Nort 343

In cases of doubt, the Judge should decide in favour of admissibility of the evidence under consideration rather than of inadmissibility. Collector of Gorakhpur v Palakdhari, 12 A 1 (F B)

This section is equally applicable to civil and criminal cases. The section applies to criminal as well as to civil cases whether or not the trial has been had before a jury. Imperatrix v Pitamber, 2 B 61; Queen v Hurriabola Chunder, 1 C 207=25 W R Cr 36; Reg v Navroji, 9 B H C R 358. The words "in any case" in s 167, Evidence Act, are wide and include criminal trials by jury. Queen Empress v Ramchandria, 19 B 719

If it should appear to the Court that the evidence is such that the Court before Court Impe and are, the Letters Patent, and sentence as contra per Bayley the High Court such judgment Straight C J nals by jury is Effect of improper admission and rejection of Evidence in civil cases. The improper admission of the ipso facto ground for a new trial, decision independently of the e. Narain, 20 W. R 381. In civil principle as regards the working as criminal cases the Court is not a judge of facts. The jurors are judges of facts, and as such some difficulty may be felt by the Appellate Court to decide the effect of evidence improperly admitted in the minds of the jurors. So in India in civil cases, "it is the duty of their Lordships who are Judges of the fact to consider whether throwing aside the evidence which ought not to have been admitted there still remains sufficient evidence to support the decree ■ Mohar Singh v Ghumda, G B L R 195 P C - 16 W R 8 P C So under this section th --- rev self for a rev evic tly of the

A decision,
adm wrongly
the) support
Committee will not determine an appeal against a decree upon the mere fact that Judicial some evidence has been improperly admitted by the Court below It is the rule of that suit there is Co which the Ba : see also Dausadham) 1, Lala

Banshidhori v The Government of Bengal, 9 B L R 374-14 M I A 86 P C ; Bommaran-e v Rangaswami, 6 M I A 232, Maharaja Jagadindra v Bhaba Tarinee, 5 B L R 497 ;
 In 1877, Abdul 20 W R 458

Lordships of the Privy Council have not strongly contended that the proper order to be made on this appeal is one remanding the case for retrial. We have rather insisted that on in his f desire to right in events f

to prove if he h judgmen were irregular, it is not for him to complain of an irregularity committed at his instance or with his consent. And the suspicion however probable, of the Judge, that a party who had been a witness in a case, was a witness in an a second and full trial." The decision legal testimony and Byoy Singh, 25 C. V.

Objection in second appeal	An erroneous omission to object to inadmis-
----------------------------	---

Ind Cis 731-A I R 10-5 C
C, Jagadis v Harihar, 40 C 107

based on unproved and consequently is vitiated thereby and must be set aside; where an appellate Court has relied for its decision upon a document which is inadmissible in evidence a Court of second appeal will be justified in remanding the case for decision to the appellate Court with a direction to exclude that document from its consideration. Hem Raj v Nihal Singh, 7 Lah J 35-36, D.L.R. 22, 61, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, round for a new union. But there is the High Court

the proper procedure for the High Court of W & A 32 or their based on second support the findings arrived at, s 167 is not a bar to such a case being remanded Mussamat Sumitra v Ram Kuer Choubey 5 P L J 410=37 Ind Cas 561

Where the lower Court has the High Court will not in the case is sufficient to support the findings arrived at, s 167 is not a bar to such a case being remanded Mussamat Sumitra v Ram Kuer Choubey 5 P L J 410=37 Ind Cas 561

On second appeal the High Court has generally speaking no right to look at the evidence to decide whether the remaining evidence in a case other than that which has been improperly admitted is sufficient to warrant the finding of the lower Court. The only cases which can be with propriety disposed of under such circumstances without a re-examination of the evidence admitted the lower Court upon other grounds. Hoomesh Ch

An objection as regards the modes of proving a document should be taken at the time when the document is tendered Madhab v Gaganendra, 9 C W N 11

When a subordinate Court has refused in the erroneous exercise of its discretion to receive documentary evidence which might have been accepted, the High Court has power to interfere in second appeal Talewar v Bagawan Das, 8 C L J 117=12 C W N 312

the (Ram) document in 1 appeal 2nd v The Secretary of State 11 C L J 678=34 C 1039 P C =9 Bom L R 1192, Albar v Bheya Lal 6 C 666

words include of new India held old the crimis India held old the trials India held old the Wher India held old the to be annuls ind, it is open to the High Court in appeal either to set aside the verdict upon the remaining evidence on the record, or to quash the verdict and order a new trial Queen Empress v Ram Chandra 19 B 749 Where no objection was raised to the reception of improper evidence in the lower Court

According to the court should 90 Though evidence is less it was the Criminal discretion to be taken by the party or not Reg v Dayanand 11 B H C 44 Improper admission of evidence of character of the accused goes to the very root of the administration of criminal justice and w Magistrate's consideration of be set aside Phelan Singh Pat L T 171=A I R 49=12 justify the conviction indep the lower Court should be as

When a case has been set aside on the ground of n retried by a jury, and as a matter of procedure and in justice to the accused the course should be adopted Acting on this principle the Court declined to exercise its powers under section 167 of the Evidence Act and sent back the case for retrial Sheikh Hajur v King Emperor, 11 C W N 593=11 Cr L J 301=5 Ind Cas 315

At the trial of a party of Hindus for rioting, the Magistrate, instead of examining the examination in previous trial the same riot examined by instead of the or held at a Hind is in then cross-examined on the prisoners' behalf The accused were convicted Hell, that although the procedure adopted by the Magistrate was irregular the irregularity was cured by the failure of justice matter elicited in cross examination Jucen Empress v Nand Ram, 9 A 609 783=32 B 111 F B Dattar 1 2 1 "Then again under s 167 of the Evidence Act all that we adjudicated upon We are not a Court of appeal in the ordinary sense of the term I do not think it is open to us under the present circumstances to go behind the record of the case, scrutinize every piece of evidence and enter upon an elaborate investigation as to whether each particular piece of evidence recorded by the learned Judge and to which the accused's counsel now takes exception was or was not intended to be followed in s 167 of the Evidence

Where inadmissible evidence has been received the Court is to consider whether the reception of inadmissible evidence influenced the minds of the jury so seriously as to lead them to a conclusion which might have been different but for its reception and whether it has in fact occasioned a failure of justice Harendia v Emperor, 84 Ind Crs 451=26 Cr L J 307 Under section 165 of the Evidence Act the improper admission of evidence is not ground of appeal if it is shown that there is other evidence to support relied upon by the Court below, there was ample regular evidence in the High Court in revision the p will interfere Adhibat v Emperor, 2 Pat J 374 Where a trial Court convicts an accused on the evidence part of which has been wrongly admitted and the Sessions Court excluding the wrongly admitted evidence upholds the conviction on the substantially different body of inadmissible evidence, and should

SCHEDULE

ENACTMENTS REPEALED.

(See section 2)

Number and year	Title	Extent of repeal
State 26 Geo III Chap, 57 *	For the further regulation of the trial of persons accused of certain offences committed in the East Indies, for repealing so much of an Act, made in the twenty fourth year of the reign of his present Majesty intitled (An Act for the better regulation and management of the affairs of the East India Company, and of the British possessions in India, and for establishing a Court of Judicature for the more speedy and effectual trial of persons accused of offences committed in the East Indies)," as requires the servants of the East India Company to deliver inventories of their estates and effects for rendering the laws more effectual against persons unlawfully resorting to the East Indies, and for the more easy proof in certain cases of deeds and writings executed in Great Britain or India	Section 38 so far as it relates to Courts of Justice in the East Indies
Stat 14 & 15 Vict, Chap 90 †	To amend the Law of Evidence	Section 11 and so much of section 19 as relates to British India ‡
§ •	• • •

* The East India Company Act 1783

† Short title The Evidence Act 1851—see the Short Titles Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict., c 141)

‡ Certain entries after this repealed by Act IV of 1927 have been omitted

§ The entry relating to ss 7 and 8 of the General Clauses Act 1869 (1 of 1869), was repealed by the General Clauses Act, 1897 (10 of 1897)

APPENDIX A.

FIFTH REPORT OF HER MAJESTY'S COMMISSIONERS TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

We, your Majes- . . . of substantive law for India, . . . of law which upon the subject Within force, modified by certain in the most important

It extends the range of nt, of foreign system of competency to testify by reason of interest or relationship, renders parties to suits liable to be called as w- competent witnesses for or against each lying declarations admissible though may be cross examined by the party who called them, and that they shall not be excused from answering questions because they may thereby criminate them selves D - niary interest of the persons who made course of business, both of which kir its only in cases of death, are under this Act admissible in the person who made the declaration or the entry has become incapable of giving evidence or if his testimony cannot be procured

The Act also gives to k ments the character
makes entries in such k

it extends the class pedigree, and provides in effect that mistake committed in the reception of reception of evidence shall not lead to a new trial or to the reversal of a decision unless a substantial failure of justice has been caused thereby The Act, however, bears reference in many places to the existing law, and it appears to have been a body of rules, but as supplementary to,

and also of the customary law of evidence in India where the English law is not administered

The customary law has not assumed any definite form, the Mahomedan law since the enactr
have any validity in th

Courts have in fact of 1855 They are not required to follow it where they regard it as the most equitable they are not debarred from following it where they regard it as the most

In laying down uniform rules for the guidance of the Indian Judges in general, as well in the Courts law of evidence has hitherto p-advisable to adopt a system so arranged as to be country . . .

legal
be un
which preser safely various

nounced inadmissible, a dispassionately consider excluded On the other at that which is shut out for or against each other absolutely

as dangerous
r testimony
be asked a question on the trial of her husband unless the trial be for an offence committed against herself. In matrimonial cases the inconsistencies of the law as to evidence cause frequent embarrass of judicial investigation is attended with peculiar difficulties, and where it is the duty of the Judge in all civil and in some criminal cases to decide without a jury, there is a great danger of miscarriage from the jury being unduly influenced by the to afford every facility falsehood or error may be exclusion of falsehood, the channels by which truth is admitted. It is of course, impossible to admit all evidence that may be offered, for this would lead to excessive waste of time expressly excluded by a few cases where the law evidence, the Court shall

the early stage of a trial to show the exact bearing of each piece of evidence upon the issues. It is by no means our desire that our rules should be understood as imposing upon the Judges the use of excessive strictness in excluding evidence of which the applicability cannot be fully shown at the moment when the evidence is tendered. We have, however, inserted provisions intended to guard limit the rules which evidence whole of the registration of assurances or of the Code of Criminal Procedure which recognise certain things as prima facie evidence that is to say, as conclusive unless met by counter evidence, yet we do not by our own rules attach this character to evidence of any class nor except where the testimony of a witness has been attacked,—do we receive evidence. We have provided for a single witness even in cases of perjury, or of evidence alone

An attempt to define all the cases in which and the purposes for which particular evidence may be received would in our opinion impede instead of aid the investigation of truth. We hope that the course which we have adopted will render it easier for those who are often committed in practice where a strict of supposing that whatever evidence is admitted to the Court

The exclusion of even of relevant evidence may be desirable, when the evidence is such that proof to it, when it is such as can be forgery, or when it is such without injury to interests investigation of truth

Although we have laid it down generally that all relevant evidence shall be admissible, we have thought it necessary to make certain exceptions from this rule. These exceptions relate chiefly to that kind of evidence which is described in the English law books under the title 'hearsay'. We have however, abstained from making use of the word 'hearsay' from the uncertainty and vagueness of its meaning as to what one sense of statements by a witness of what he has heard another person say may be, in (as in cases of slander) the very matter in issue, or in other cases may be part of the circumstances which it is essential to ascertain. On the other hand 'hearsay' may be defined to be that which a witness does not say as of his own knowledge, but says what another has said or signified to him. This is probably a more strict and accurate definition of the word "hearsay" as used in the English law than is known in that law as hearsay. We have thought that it would be of more practical use to exclude the word altogether. We define the word "hearsay", evidence of that class of evidence in the cases in which we think it ought to be excluded, and for the admission of it in the cases in which we think it ought to be admitted. We have accordingly gone through the various classes of evidence in which arises the question of admissibility or exclusion what is called in the English law "hearsay" and have endeavored to make such class. Most of the rules for the admission of evidence are recognized by the English law, others of 1855, above referred to, or are intended to relax the English rule still further than was done by that enactment.

We have also made that which has been spoken, in person, or whose presence is kept in the ordinary course of business. We have also made admissible written acknowledgments of the receipts of money, goods, securities, or property of any kind, and documents used in commerce. Declarations which under the English law are only admitted because they have been made against interest will, by the effect of our rules, be excluded, unless they have been made in the ordinary course of business. The test of pecuniary interest is exceedingly difficult of application, and appears to us to be of little value as a test of truth. We have admitted statements as to matters of reputation and of pedigree whose presence cannot be at the person who made the statement. We have discarded the statement shall have

The indulgence afforded to witnesses by the existing law in permitting them to refer to contemporaneous memoranda appears to us to be carried too far when copies of such memoranda are allowed to be used for the purpose, and our rules do not permit the use of copies.

Another clause of exclusion applies to documentary evidence unless some degree of caution were observed with regard to the authentication of writings, great facilities would be afforded for the fabrication of documents. We have, therefore, laid down rules for the evidence to be required of the proper execution of documents, and, retaining the distinction between primary and secondary evidence, have not let against the admission of the latter where the evidence is not with the evidence is not with a view to the production of the original document.

asked merely to produce their own evidence.

19 of Act title deeds—a provision becomes every day less from the production to the cause. We have on the subject evidence.

To those judgments which are admitted by the laws of all other countries as conclusive evidence not only between the parties but as against strangers, we have affixed the same character in India, in all other cases we have provided

As regards strangers, we have provided evidence that such a judgment was pro-

We have left to draw of presumptions universally accepted of evidence the draft now submitted certainly border closely on Procedure. However, we have not found a place in either of the Codes of Procedure. We have therefore inserted them (with some modifications) as it appears to us that the law of evidence ought not to be left to be gleaned from many different enactments but that so much of it as it not to be found in the Codes of Procedure should be, as far as possible comprised in the rules of law now submitted by us and that the enactments which will thus be rendered unnecessary should be repealed.

as for the form, which does not

EVIDENCE

MEANING OF WORDS

1 In the following rules the word 'Court' shall be taken to comprise all Courts of justice, civil or criminal, and all persons having by law or consent of parties authority to take evidence, and the word 'cause' shall be taken to comprise all judicial proceedings civil or criminal

Admissibility

it is not meant that it if any, which the deci admissible, unless it is excluded by the rules contained in this chapter

3 No statement by a witness of anything, or founded upon anything spoken or written, or otherwise intimated by another person, and no statement contained in any document is admissible in evidence, except in the cases specified in the rules hereafter contained

Illustrations

87W evidence that D told him that he permissible inadmissible evidence that D, a deaf and dumb he saw B rob C. The evidence is

(c) A gives evidence that B robbed C. Being asked how he knows it he says that he knows it only because E told him so. The evidence which has been admitted must be struck out.

(d) A says that B was alive on the 1st January 1860. It appears that A does not speak to this fact of his own knowledge, but that he learnt it from a letter written to him by C, or from a newspaper or from a printed book or a picture. In each of these cases A's statement is not admissible as evidence that

Being asked how B whose handwriting alive on that day

Illustration

(2) Where the fact that a person by or to whom the thing was spoken, written, stated or otherwise intimated was acquainted with such thing is a question in issue

Illustration

A writes to B "I have just heard that C has failed". The letter is received by B. The letter is not admissible as evidence that C had failed, but when it is proved that C had then failed, the letter is a substantial evidence that the failure had then occurred. b the letter was written.

erwise intimated tends to

(a) A says on a trial of C for robbing D's house that he heard B say to C "Da house has been robbed," and that thereupon C fled. This evidence is admissible.

(b) On a trial of B for robbing C's house it is proved that B fled immediately after the robbery. A witness is produced who says that he heard A tell B before B fled that a warrant had been issued for his arrest under a decree of Civil Court. This is a defense.

ill him. It is alleged of what A said at the

g him to be apprehended immediately after, in n committed in Be
admissible
C told B that he saw A running away immediately after, in
(a) A on you (n
that
of w) 1000 rupees which but it is evidence
produce evidence

(4) Where the thing was spoken written or stated or otherwise intimated by a party to the suit, or some one whom he represents in interest and it is sought to be used against him

Illustration* 1

(a) A t Evidence that

100 bales of direct

But

Crim

in e betwe
the p giving perso

the same subject on
in cret and wher
become incapable of proved that if a b

(7) Where the thing spoken, written, stated or otherwise intimated was spoken, written, stated or otherwise intimated in the ordinary course of business by a person who has died or become incapable of giving evidence, or whose presence cannot be procured

Illustrations.

(a) A, the shipping agent of the firm of B and Co states in a letter to B and Co, that he has just seen a certain ship of theirs sail from the port of Calcutta. The letter is admissible as evidence of the sailing of the ship.

(b) A an attorney, prepares the draft of an intended deed to which B was to be a party, and endorses upon it a memorandum that a copy had been sent to another attorney on a certain day. The draft contains a statement that B was in insolvent circumstances. The draft and endorsement are admissible as evidence.

(c) A writes a letter to B, in which he mentions the state of the silk market, and in the same letter he mentions the state of the cotton market. The letter is admissible as evidence of the order given to him but not of the state of the silk market.

(8) Where the thing intimated consists in entries in books kept in the ordinary course of business, or consists in written acknowledgments of the receipt of money goods, securities of property of any kind, or in any document used in commerce

Illustrations

(a) Entries made by a clerk of a firm in the books of the firm to the effect that the firm has received a consignment of cotton from A and has purchased 50 chests of indigo from B. These are admissible in evidence against all the partners in the firm.

(b) A one of two partners makes an entry in the partnership books that he has lent his partner B £ 100. The entry is not admissible in evidence against B that A had lent him the £ 100.

(c) A clerk whose business it is to make entries in the books of the firm of all monies paid by him makes an entry in the books that he had paid away £ 100 for the firm. The entry is admissible in evidence that he had so paid away the money.

(d) The firm of A and Co, keeps a book in which the despatch and receipt of letters is entered. An entry in this book of the despatch of a letter by B and Co, is admissible in evidence against B and Co, by A and Co, to B and Co.

(e) A and Co are, according to the terms of a contract, to despatch a letter and afterwards despatched it. A and Co, on a certain day to B and Co, tenders in evidence an entry in their letter book purporting to be a copy of a letter addressed by them on that day to B and Co, and an entry of the fact that such letter was despatched. The entries are admissible.

(f) A guarantees the payment by C of a sum of money due from him to B. A pays the amount to B and sues C for repayment. A tenders in evidence a receipt given to himself by B for the amount due. The receipt is admissible in evidence.

(g) A sues B for the proceeds of a cargo of cotton consigned by A to B and sold through a broker. The account sales rendered by the broker are admissible in evidence.

(h) A a wharfinger, gives to B an acknowledgment that 100 tons of copper have been deposited at A's wharf. This acknowledgment is admissible in evidence of the fact that the deposit has been made.

(i) A effects a policy on his ship against all risks. The ship goes to sea and sustains injury. A institutes a suit to recover damages from the underwriters. The log book of the ship is admissible in evidence.

(9) Where the thing spoken, written, stated or otherwise intimated relates to the usages or tenets of any body of men, the constitution or government of any religious or charitable foundation, or the meaning of any technical or conventional words or terms or of any words or terms used in particular districts, or to any matter of public or general interest, and was spoken, written, stated, or otherwise intimated by a person who has since died or become incapable of giving evidence, or whose presence cannot be procured

Illustrations.

(a) A, in order to show the religious tenets of a certain sect, tenders in evidence a manuscript treatise, proved to have been written by a deceased member of the sect. The treatise is admissible.

(b) It is a disputed fact in a suit whether a certain spot is or is not a public landing place. Statements made on the subject by A and B now deceased intimated has spoken written,

stated or otherwise intimated by a person who has since died or become incapable of giving evidence, or whose presence cannot be procured, provided that such person was a member of the family or had otherwise special means of knowledge

Illustrations

(a) It is a disputed fact in a suit whether A is the son of B. A statement made on the subject by C, who was a nurse in B's family about the time of A's birth, is admissible in evidence.

(b) A alleging that he is the son of B, deceased, produces the following documents in which he is mentioned as the son of B.

- 1 An entry made by B in a memorandum book stating A's birth
- 2 Letters which passed between two of B's brothers since deceased
- 3 A deed executed by B

A also produced witnesses who state that B told them that A was his son. The contents of the documents and the testimony of the witnesses are admissible in evidence.

(1) A recital after the Gov to be of Briti
by
or n of ting
ship

(1c) Where the thing intimated is and there has been a public meeting or public proceeding and such intimation is contained in a report thereof published in any newspaper or journal.

Explanation Such report is not admissible in evidence of any fact reported to have occurred or of any statement reported to have been made at the meeting or proceeding.

EVIDENCE OF LAW OF FOREIGN COUNTRY

(13) Where the thing intimated purports to be the law of a foreign country printed or in re
to be entry,

MAPS

5 Maps made under the authority of Government shall be admissible

RES JUDICATA

6 provided
7 husband
parties
8 the ship
- have effect as
- never were
in proof that the ch
- in proof that

9 The judgment of a Court of competent jurisdiction upon a matter directly in issue is admissible as evidence between the same parties, and those who represent them in interest upon the same matter, directly in issue in another cause, but not between any other parties, except as provided for in the next following section of the chapter

Illustrations

(a) A sues B for a horse, alleging that it was stolen from himself and that B brought it, knowing it to be stolen. Judgment is given in B's favour. B afterwards loses the horse, A finds it and B sues A for it. A in defence makes the same allegations as in the former suit. The judgment pronounced in the former suit is admissible as evidence in B's favour.

(b) A sues B for rent in the Court of the Collector, which has cognizance of such suits.

B retains the rent to prove the genuineness of A's suit. After the mortgagee

such judgment was pronounced between the parties, but is not admissible as evidence against any person other than the parties thereto and those who represent them in interest, evidence of any other fact thereby appearing.

Illustrations

(a) A sues B for compensation for injury sustained through the negligence of C, who is B's agent. A obtains judgment. In a suit brought by B against C for compensation for loss sustained by B through C's negligence the amount which A has been adjudged to pay is admissible as evidence in C's favour. In a subsequent suit B yields up to C certain lands prior suit, whereby B was directed to yield up possession to C as owner, is admissible in evidence.

(c) A is tried on the charge of having forged a deed of gift from B. He is acquitted. Afterwards C alleging the deed to be forged institutes a suit against A for certain lands of which B was the owner. The judgment pronounced in the session under it. The record of A's acquittal is admissible in evidence.

(d) A one of the brothers, B and C, who are co-owners of an estate, dies and his share is sold to D. D a portion of the land

E, claiming to be the adopted son and heir of A, sues for A's share of the land sold to D. E afterwards claiming as heir

of A sues
and

the land
to

in one of them for compensation were sustained. B sues the owners of the goods. The judgment is not admissible in evidence.

whom A alleges to be B's son at C is B's son and decrees payment by B of A's claims.

B dies, C alleging that he is B's son, sues the executor of D for a legacy of A 10000 rupees, D having by his will bequeathed that sum to every child of B. The judgment is not admissible in evidence that C is a son of B.

PROOF OF WRITINGS WHICH CONSTITUTE PRIMARY EVIDENCE

Apl

11 A writing which is not required by law to be attested, but which is alleged to have been written wholly or in part by a person, may be proved by the signature attached thereto, or so much of the same writing as is sought to be proved to be in the handwriting of the person by whom it is alleged to have been written or signed.

12 A written instrument which is required by law to be attested shall not (except in the cases provided for by section 20 of this chapter), be received as evidence unless the following rules are complied with —

(1) That execution of such instrument shall be proved by one attesting witness at the least, if there be an attesting witness alive and subject to the process of the Court by which the cause is tried and capable of bearing testimony.

(2) If no attesting witness is alive and subject to such process as aforesaid, is alleged to have done so any signal fraction of t

14 of and is produced from the proper custody, it shall be admissible in evidence without proof of its execution or attestation

PROOF OF THE CONTENTS OF DOCUMENTS BY SECONDARY EVIDENCE

15 Evidence of the contents or purport of any written or printed document or of letters figures, or other mark not produced to the Court shall not be admissible except as provided by the rules next following —

(1) A copy of or extract from any proclamation, order or regulation issued by Her Majesty or by the Privy Council or any department of Her Majesty's Government to be printed under the authority of possession or to be certified to be true

(2) A copy of a record of any Court or of an entry in any public book or register which is proved to be a correct copy, or which purports to be under the seal of such Court or to be certified by the proper officer, shall be admissible as evidence of the existence and the contents of any such record or entry.

(3)
to have being or able character

(4) Evidence of the contents of a lost or when the person in whose custody the Court by which the cause is tried or is a document, or refuse, after due notice, to produce it, or when it is otherwise satisfactorily accounted for

EVIDENCE OF TERMS OF CONTRACT

16 Where a contract or grant or other disposition of property is in writing no evidence of the terms of such contract, grant, or disposition shall be received except the writing itself, or such evidence of its contents as may be admissible under the provisions of the last preceding section

Explanation The statement of a fact in any such document does not preclude the admission of oral evidence relating to the same fact, and where a suit is instituted for the purpose of setting aside or varying a document on the ground of a mistake in the writing thereof evidence may be received for the purpose of proving such mistake

PAPERS OF WHICH PROOF IS NOT REQUIRED

17 No proof shall be required of any paper purporting to be the order or possession of the British Crown, nor of any paper purporting to be a news paper or journal, or a copy of a private Act of Parliament printed by the King's printer.

18 No proof shall be required of any paper purporting to be a certificate certified by law made evidence of any particular fact, and to have been substantially in the form and purports to be executed in the manner directed by the law in that behalf.

19 No proof shall be required of the official position of any person certifying to the truth of any such paper as is mentioned in the last preceding rule, and to have been executed by a Court Judge, Magistrate, or the Majesty or of the Court.

20 An impression of any document made by a copying machine, or a representation of anything made by means of photography or of any other process which affords a reasonable assurance of correctness shall be admissible in evidence, wherever under these rules the production of the original may be dispensed with.

PERSONS WHO MAY TESTIFY

21 Those persons only shall be incompetent to testify who from tender years or for unsoundness of mind or from any other cause appear to the Judge to be incapable of understanding the questions addressed to them.

PRIVILEGE

22 A witness is not at liberty to disclose a communication—

(1) Where the communication is made to or by a person in a confidential relationship to the witness, and the witness has not been apprised of the confidential nature of the communication.

(2) Where the communication is made to or by a person in a confidential relationship to the witness, and the witness has not been apprised of the confidential nature of the communication.

(3) Where the communication is made to or by a person in a confidential relationship to the witness, and the witness has not been apprised of the confidential nature of the communication.

(4) Where the communication is made to or by a person in a confidential relationship to the witness, and the witness has not been apprised of the confidential nature of the communication.

(5) Where the communication is made to or by a person in a confidential relationship to the witness, and the witness has not been apprised of the confidential nature of the communication.

(6) Where the communication is made to or by a person in a confidential relationship to the witness, and the witness has not been apprised of the confidential nature of the communication.

(7) Where the communication is made to or by a person in a confidential relationship to the witness, and the witness has not been apprised of the confidential nature of the communication.

(8) Where the communication is made to or by a person in a confidential relationship to the witness, and the witness has not been apprised of the confidential nature of the communication.

(9) Where the communication is made to or by a person in a confidential relationship to the witness, and the witness has not been apprised of the confidential nature of the communication.

(10) Where the communication is made to or by a person in a confidential relationship to the witness, and the witness has not been apprised of the confidential nature of the communication.

(4) Where the disclosure demanded of the witness consisted in the production of documents belonging to another person who would not be bound to produce them if in his possession and who has not consented to their production.

24 A witness is not compellable to disclose to the Court any confidential communication which may have taken place between him and his legal professional adviser.

25 No communication made in furtherance of criminal purpose is protected from disclosure.

39 The foregoing Rules are to take effect subject to the provisions of the law for the time being in force regarding the registration of any document.

(Sd) ROMILLY (r s)
(Sd) EDWARD RYAN (r s)
(Sd) ROBERT LOWE (r s)
(Sd) ROBERT LUSH (L s)
(Sd) JOHN M MACLEOD (r s)
(Sd.) W. M JAMES (L s)

Date this 3rd day of August 1864

The Council met at Simla on Wednesday, the 23rd October, 1868

P1 EVENT

The Hon ble G N Taylor
The Hon ble H S Maine
The Hon ble John Strachey

The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, K C S I
The Hon'ble Col H W Norman, C D
The Hon'ble F R Cockerell

The Hon'ble Sir George Couper Bar C B

EVIDENCE BILL

[illegible]

The Hon'ble Mr. Mahto then introduced the Bill.

(5d) WHIRLLY SLOKS

Asst Secy to the Govt of India

Home Department (Legislature)

SIMILAR

The 25th October, 1868

ABSTRACT of Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the Provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vict. Cap 67

The Council met at Government House on Friday, the 4th December, 1868

PRESENT

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, presiding

The Hon'ble G Noble Taylor	The Hon'ble Sir George Couper, Bart c n.
The Hon'ble H Summer Maine.	The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Durg Bhoj
The Hon'ble John Strachey	Singh Bahadur, K C S I of
The Hon'ble Colonel H W. Norman	Balrampur
	The Hon'ble Gordon E Forbes
The Hon'ble F R Cockerell	The Hon'ble D Cowie.

The Hon'ble M J Shaw Stewart

The Hon'ble Shaw Stewart took the oath of allegiance, and the oath that he would faithfully discharge the duties of his office

EVIDENCE BILL

The Hon'ble Mr. law of Evidence be referred to a Select Committee, what was affirmed was the principle of the measure or the expediency of legislation within the general principles of the measure. This being understood, Mr Maine did not suppose that the council would ever seriously think of refusing to refer to a Select Committee a Bill prepared by the Indian Law Commissioners and therefore he should say very little in commending it to the council. The consideration of the measure was essentially a consideration of its detail and to that detail the Select Committee would doubtless give the most careful attention not, as Mr Maine hoped, for the purpose of way restriction or extension with regard to the special circumstances and facts of this country.

India where English law was not administered. "This customary law has not assumed any definite form, the Mahomedan Law, since the enactment of the new Code of Criminal Procedure has ceased to have any validity in the country Courts even in fact no fixed rules of evidence

"Has not assumed any definite form, the Mahomedan Law, since the enactment of the new Code of Criminal Procedure has ceased to have any validity in the country Courts even in fact no fixed rules of evidence

ould seem modified at ten or in force h, and the habit and No doubt English Courts could appeal to members of Council who had more experience in the Mofussil than he had, his honourable friends, Sir George Couper and Mr Cockerell, whether the Judges of those Courts did not, as a matter of fact, believe that it was their duty to administer the English law of evidence as modified by the Evidence Acts. In particular, Mr. Maine would venture to state his impression that the fault of substance before a Maine Court was not that the Court was not in accordance with the English law, but that it was not in accordance with the Maine law.

the E
must
the

without fixed rules to go capricious administration of equal, or perhaps even a greater, be enforced as practically to leave the Court without the material for a decision. Mr. Maine would venture to state his impression that the fault of substance ordinarily committed in evidence, than in averting and in conjecturing the deration of what the circumstances. Another Judges were thus placed were excellent text books consisted more in refreshing knowledge which had been gained by forensic experience than in teaching knowledge. The commissioners would appear to be right in supposing that what was wanted for the greatest part of India was a liberalized version of the English law of evidence, enacted with authority and thus excluding caprice and superseding the use of text books by compactness and precision.

Another law, might be ascertained by the processes in use among men of science. There were certain continental systems of evidence which did make a pretension to include a process of the kind. And perhaps some such theory did pervade the rules of the English law with regard to presumptions which he was happy to see the Commissioners had discarded. But the English law of evidence as a whole made no claim to be such a system. It was justly regarded by English lawyers as a method of judicial administration,—the separation of fact, of the Judge from the Jury. It consisted mainly of rules of exclusion, that is, of rules for keeping certain kinds of evidence out of sight of the Judge of fact. Such a system, Mr. Maine apprehended could only be justified on two grounds. First of all, some evidence must be excluded. If all evidence were admitted, even if all relevant evidence were admitted, if everything were let in which tended to throw light on the matter, their furthest bearing on it. It being then, assumed that, in judicial enquiry, some sorts of evidence must necessarily be shut out, the English law excluded those descriptions of evidence which were found practical judgment the case not at a Maine Court to a mo reject as absolutely inadmissible. But taking men, as you found them, and taking the average of judicial ability, it was really true that some kind of mind far deeper than was consistent with the English law had claim was own for distinguishing those kinds of would be presumptuous in Mr Maine to praise the Commissioners' proposals, but he ventured to say that, in his humble opinion, they had wisely availed themselves of the results of English experience but had wisely modified those results upon two considerations, which

a great degree by our social
: and much of it is admitted different forms of property

in a country like India where the task of judicial investigation is attended with peculiar difficulties, and where it is the duty of the Judge in all civil and in some criminal cases to decide without a jury, there is greater danger of miscarriage from the mind of the Court being uninformed than from its being unduly influenced by the information laid before it."

Mr Maine had said that he would not comment on the details of the measure, but there was one point of detail which it was necessary to notice,

the omission in the Bill
Bill now in hands of Mr Governor General before last, it would control the present measure. But another reason must probably

Stamp
of the passed
to be t, on y in ients amp
nded
ed a
rest

Now from the Commissioners' point of view, which was the purely judicial interference from those papers. If effect were given to the Commissioners' suggestion either there would be an enormous evasion of the law, or that evasion would be prevented by recourse to the Criminal Courts for the enforcement of penalties to an extent which would itself be a greater evil than the sacrifice of any branch of revenue. Under these circumstances, the point has been considered by the Executive Government and Mr Maine had to state that, having regard to the fact that the stamp duties on commercial instruments were easily levied, and did not press hardly on the people, the Government was not prepared to give up that portion of the public receipts.

Cockerell, the Hon'ble Sir George Couper, and the Hon'ble Messrs Gordon Forbes, Shaw Stewart and the Mover

The council adjourned till the 11th December, 1868.

CALCUTTA,

The 11th December, 1868.

WHITLEY STOKES

Asst. Secy to the Govt of India.
Home Department (Legislative)

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor-General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament, 21 & 25 Vict Cap 67.

The council met at Simla on Tuesday, the 6th September, 1870

PRESIDENT

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India,
K P G C S I Presiding

His Excellency the Commander in Chief G C B G. C. S I

The Hon'ble John Strachey

The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple

The Hon'ble J Fitzjames Stephen, Q C

The Hon'ble B H Ellis

Major General the Hon'ble H W Norman, C B

The Hon'ble F R Cockerell,

His Highness the Hon'ble Surajit Rajpal Hindustan Raja Rajendra
Sri Maharaja Dhuraj Siva Ram Singh Bahadur of Jaypur G C S I

EVIDENCE BILL

the Hon'ble Mr Strachey be added and amend the Law of Evidence an opportunity of saying a few words
The Evidence Act was drafted two years ago. It of the members had in the Gazette taken to it by for general information. Objections of great weight were many of the most distinguished lawyers in India, and no doubt, the subject was one which required the most careful handling. It was impossible to exaggerate the practical importance of the Bill, as it would regulate the most important part of the procedure of every Court of Justice throughout the Empire. Such a measure would of course require most careful consideration
in wh
us
T
of
th
q
J de ri
ir
upon the
be ac
state
law
consequence was that the subject caused much trouble. As a proof of this he (the mover) might observe that in Messrs Cowell and Woodman's Indian Digest, which contained notes of cases decided in about eight years, the title 'Evidence' filled no less than twenty-three royal octavo pages in five hundred
which the
which in continue

The motion was put and agreed to

The Council then adjourned to the 20th September, 1870

WILLIAM STOKES

Secretary to the Council of the Governor-General
for making Laws and Regulations

SIMLA,

The 6th September, 1870

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vict Cap 67.

The Council met at Government House on Friday, the 18th November, 1870

PRESENT.

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, A P G, C S I, presiding
The Hon'ble John Strachey.	Major General, the Hon'ble H W
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple	Norman, C B
The Hon'ble J Fitzjames Stephen, Q C	The Hon'ble D Cowie
The Hon'ble B H Ellis	The Hon'ble Francis Stewart Chapman
	The Hon'ble F R Cockerell

EVIDENCE AND INSOLVENCY BILLS

The Hon'ble Mr Inglis be added to the

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 9th December, 1870

WHITLEY STOKES,

Secretary to the Government of India

CALCUTTA,

The 2nd December, 1870

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India, assembled for the purposes of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vict Cap 67.

The Council met at Government House on Friday, the 9th December, 1870

PRESENT

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India,
A P G, C S I, presiding.

The Hon'ble John Strachey	The Hon'ble Francis Stewart
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple,	Chapman
The Hon'ble J Fitzjames Stephen,
The Hon'ble B H Ellis
Major Genl the Hon'ble W H
Norman, C B

SUNDRY BILLS

The Hon'ble Mr Robinson be added

For the Limitation of Suits

The motion was put and agreed to

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 16th December, 1870

WHITLEY STOKES,
Secretary to the Govt of India

CALCUTTA,

The 9th December, 1870

APPENDIX B.

DRAFT REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE

The Gazette of India, July 1, 1871, Part V, p 273

The following Draft Report of a Select Committee together with the Bill as settled by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of

India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 31st March, 1871 —

From Officiating Under Secretary, Home Department, No 423, dated 23rd October 1868, and enclosures.

From Assistant Secretary, Foreign Department, No 333, dated 12th December 1868, and enclosures

Remarks by the Hon'ble the Chief Justice of Bombay (no date)

Remarks by Hon'ble Justice Phear, dated 8th December, 1868

From Secretary to Chief Commissioner British Burma, No 525-1, dated 1st December 1868

From Assistant Secretary to Government of Bengal Legislative Department, No 37, dated 9th January 1869, and enclosure

From Deputy Judge Advocate General of the Army, dated 26th January, 1869, and enclosures

From Officiating under Secretary Home Department, No. 258 dated 17th February, 1869, forwarding memorial from Muk-tars and Revenue Agents, Howrah, dated 4th February 1869

From Secretary to Indian Law Commissioners, dated 6th February, 1869.

From Chief Secretary to Government Fort St George, No 120, dated 18th March 1869, and enclosures

From Secretary to Government of Bombay, No 2971, dated 7th September 1869, and enclosures

From Secretary to Government of Bombay, No 3188 dated 24th September 1869, and enclosures

Fifth Report of Her Majesty's Law Commissioners on the Bill

From Officiating Inspector-General of Police, Punjab, No 2657, dated the 28th September, 1870

From Secretary to Government of India Home Department, No 1892, dated 18th October 1870 forwarding letter from Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No 61, dated 15th August 1870, and enclosures

We the members of the Select Committee to which the Evidence Bill has been referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin

After a very careful consideration of the draft prepared by the Indian Law Commissioners we have arrived at the conclusion that it is not suited to the wants of this country

We have recorded in a separate report the grounds on which this conclusion is based. They are in a few words that the Commissioners' draft is not sufficiently elementary for the officers for whose use it is designed, and that it assumes an acquaintance on their part with the law of England, which can scarcely be expected from them. Our draft, however, though arranged on a different principle from theirs, embodies most of its provisions. In general, it has been our object to reproduce the English Law of Evidence with certain modifications most of which have been suggested by the Commissioners though with some this is not the case

The English Law of Evidence appears to us to be totally destitute of arrangement. This arises partly from the circumstance that its leading terms are continually used in different sense, and partly from the circumstance that the Law of Evidence was formed by degrees out of various elements, and in particular out of the English system of pleading and the habitual practice of the Courts of Common Law. For instance, the rule that evidence must be confined to point in issue is founded on the system of pleading. The rule that hearsay is no evidence is part of the practice of the Courts but the two sets of rules run into each other in such an irregular way as to produce between them a result which no one can possibly understand systematically unless he is both acquainted with the principles of a system of pleading which is being rapidly abolished, and with the everyday practice of the Common Law of Courts, which can be acquired and understood only by those who habitually take part in it. This knowledge, moreover, must be qualified by study of text books which are seldom systematically arranged

3. Many other circumstances, to which we need not refer, have contributed largely to the general results, but we may illustrate the extreme intricacy of the law, and the total absence of anything like system which pervades every part of it, by a single instance. In Mr Pitt Jaylor's work on evidence it is stated that "ancient documents" when tendered in support of ancient possession, form the third exception to the rule which excludes hearsay. The question is whether A is entitled to a fishery. He produces a royal grant of the fishery to his ancestor. This fact the law describes as a peculiar kind of hearsay, admissible by special exception. Surely this is using language in a most un instructive manner.

This being the case, we have discarded altogether the phraseology in which the English text writers usually express themselves, and have attempted first to ascertain, and then to arrange in their natural order, the principles which underlie the numerous cases and fragmentary rules which they have collected together. The result is as follows:—

Every judicial proceeding is for some right or liability. If the liability to punishment of one party, and the liability of the other, to some form of relief the object is to ascertain some right of property or of status, or to give examples. Of facts which cannot be perceived by the sense, intention, which can, and those which cannot be perceived by the senses, it is superfluous to give examples. Of facts which cannot be perceived by the sense, intention, or by the senses, it is superfluous to give examples. But each class of facts is to be taken into the name of fact, and it is the intervention of the time, he had a certain time, he can testify that, at a certain time and place, he saw a particular person. He has, in each case, a present recollection of a past direct perception. Moreover it is equally necessary to ascertain facts of each class in judicial proceedings, and they must in each case be taken into account.

ways of fact, and those which cannot be perceived by the senses, it is superfluous to give examples. Of facts which cannot be perceived by the sense, intention, or by the senses, it is superfluous to give examples. But each class of facts is to be taken into the name of fact, and it is the intervention of the time, he had a certain time, he can testify that, at a certain time and place, he saw a particular person. He has, in each case, a present recollection of a past direct perception. Moreover it is equally necessary to ascertain facts of each class in judicial proceedings, and they must in each case be taken into account.

ways of fact, and those which cannot be perceived by the senses, it is superfluous to give examples. Of facts which cannot be perceived by the sense, intention, or by the senses, it is superfluous to give examples. But each class of facts is to be taken into the name of fact, and it is the intervention of the time, he had a certain time, he can testify that, at a certain time and place, he saw a particular person. He has, in each case, a present recollection of a past direct perception. Moreover it is equally necessary to ascertain facts of each class in judicial proceedings, and they must in each case be taken into account.

ways of fact, and those which cannot be perceived by the senses, it is superfluous to give examples. Of facts which cannot be perceived by the sense, intention, or by the senses, it is superfluous to give examples. But each class of facts is to be taken into the name of fact, and it is the intervention of the time, he had a certain time, he can testify that, at a certain time and place, he saw a particular person. He has, in each case, a present recollection of a past direct perception. Moreover it is equally necessary to ascertain facts of each class in judicial proceedings, and they must in each case be taken into account.

ways of fact, and those which cannot be perceived by the senses, it is superfluous to give examples. Of facts which cannot be perceived by the sense, intention, or by the senses, it is superfluous to give examples. But each class of facts is to be taken into the name of fact, and it is the intervention of the time, he had a certain time, he can testify that, at a certain time and place, he saw a particular person. He has, in each case, a present recollection of a past direct perception. Moreover it is equally necessary to ascertain facts of each class in judicial proceedings, and they must in each case be taken into account.

ways of fact, and those which cannot be perceived by the senses, it is superfluous to give examples. Of facts which cannot be perceived by the sense, intention, or by the senses, it is superfluous to give examples. But each class of facts is to be taken into the name of fact, and it is the intervention of the time, he had a certain time, he can testify that, at a certain time and place, he saw a particular person. He has, in each case, a present recollection of a past direct perception. Moreover it is equally necessary to ascertain facts of each class in judicial proceedings, and they must in each case be taken into account.

the production of the original when the writing of the letter is a crime, there can be no reason why it should be satisfied with a copy when the writing of the letter is a motive for a crime. In short, the way in which a fact should be proved depends on the nature of the fact, and not on the relation of the fact to the proceedings.

Court is convinced of a fact is evidence. It is or circumstantial. We have not adopted establishes a fact in issue whereas a collateral fact, evidence is classified not with reference to the use to which it is put but with reference to its component elements. We have shown that the mode in which a fact must be proved depends on its nature and not on the use to be made of it. Evidence, therefore, should be defined, not with reference to the use to which it is put, but with reference to its own nature.

Direct evidence is a statement of fact. Circumstantial evidence is something which tends to prove a fact. In the first, it means testimony.

In the second, it means a fact which is to serve as the foundation for an inference. It would indeed be quite correct, if this view is taken to say 'circumstantial evidence must be proved by direct evidence'. This would be a most clumsy mode of expression, but it shows the ambiguity of the word 'evidence' which means either

- (1) Words spoken or things produced in order to convince the Court of the existence of facts, or
- (2) facts of which the Court is so convinced and which suggest some inference as to other facts.

We use the word 'evidence' in the first of these senses only, and so used it may be reduced to three heads—(1) oral evidence, (2) documentary evidence, (3) material evidence.

Finally the evidence by which facts are to be proved must be brought to the notice of the Court and submitted to its judgment and the Court must form its mind.

to us to supply the ground work for the subject as follows—

1. Preliminary

to their nature by oral documentary or

2. The production of evidence

V Procedure

We have accordingly distributed the subject under these heads, in the manner which we now proceed to describe somewhat more fully.

1—PRELIMINARY

Under this head we have defined 'fact', 'facts in issue', 'collateral facts', 'documents', 'necessary inferences' and 'presumptions'.

Of oral evidence, we have defined it, and of documentary evidence, we have defined it, and of material evidence, we have defined it. We may now proceed to the principles already stated. We may now proceed to the principles already stated.

It will make perfectly clear several matters over which the ambiguity of the words as used in English law has thrown much confusion. The subject of circumstantial evidence will be distributed into its elements and I will be dealt with thus. The facts are—that he had a motive, he was in possession of the property, he wrote a letter indicating his guilt. I have found that all these are relevant facts, either as motive, incident of facts in issue, effects of facts in issue or conduct influenced by facts in issue. On turning to Chapter III it will be seen that the statements displaying the possession of the property by the production of the property in Court, and by the direct oral evidence of some one who had seen it in the letter itself or seen used place in our draft, and we hope in connection with it. Chapter corresponds on the whole (though with some modifications) with the English law in

facts Chapt
cases be direct on whatever relevant to the issue
must be established by a

So our definition does away with a confusion which arises out of the double meaning of the word evidence in the phrases "primary and secondary evidence". Primary evidence sometimes means a relevant fact, and at other times it means a copy or reproduction of a document by a copyist or by a photograph, or as spoken or written words.

to objection on the ground of obscurity or ambiguity but the word 'evidence' in it means not what we understood by evidence but a fact established by evidence from which a particular inference necessarily follows. Our phrase, therefore, harmonises with the rest of our draft whereas 'conclusive evidence' would not.

The definitions of proof proved and 'moral certainty' require some comment. The definition of proof is subordinate to that of 'proved' which is that a fact is said to be proved in two cases that is to say, when the Court after hearing the evidence respecting it—

- (2) thinks its existence so probable that a reasonable man ought under the circumstances of the particular case to act upon the supposition that it exists

This degree of probability we describe as 'moral certainty', and we prove that no fact shall be regarded as morally certain unless the evidence is such pletely answered, for at bottom it is a question not of science but of prudence and our definition of the word 'proved' is meant to make this plain. We have however attached to it the negative condition that a reasonable man ought to be convinced of other which must have been committed either by him or by B unless a case exist which make it improbable that the offence was committed by B. We have not attempted to carry the matter further. We believe that in all countries and in this country more than in any other it is absolutely necessary to leave to judges a wide discretion as to the risk of error which they choose to incur in coming to a decision, and that this is a matter of prudence and practice as to which rules ought to be laid down, rather with a view of guiding, than with a view of fettering discretion.

The last provision, in the preliminary part, to which we would call attention, defines in very general terms the duty of the Court in deciding questions of fact. Its generality appeared to us to render the preliminary rather than the concluding chapter, the proper place for it. This section declares that the duty of the Court is to determine question of fact by drawing inferences—

- (1) from the evidence given to the facts alleged to exist,
- (2) from facts proved to facts not proved,
- (3) from the absence of evidence which might have been given,
- (4) from the ad- and generally from the duty of the Court. One of the many fallacies which owe their origin to the way in which it is used in the inference, whereas whatever is useful which the witness alleges to exist, do or did actually exist, is very often the most difficult to draw. The truth is, that to infer in one or other of the different shapes which we have stated is the great duty of the Judge in every case whatever and we have thought it desirable to point this out in the plainest and broadest way.

We have added two qualifications only to this general rule (1) that when the law declares an inference to be necessary the Court shall draw it, and shall not allow its truth to be contradicted, (2) that when the law directs the Court to presume a fact it shall infer its existence till the contrary appears. We have treated in detail of necessary inference and presumptions in other parts of the Bill.

II THE RELEVANCY OF FACTS

We have already pointed out the place which in our opinion belongs to this subject in the law of evidence. The question what facts you may prove obviously lies at the root of the whole matter and unless a plain and full answer is given to the question it is impossible to state the law systematically. The answer to the question is we think to be found in several of the wide exceptions which are made by English text writers to the wide exclusive rules—that evidence must be confined to the point in issue that hearsay is no evidence and that the best evidence must be given, though other parts of the same exceptions are to be found in different branches of the law. We think however that by a comparison and collection of these exceptions we have succeeded in forming a collection of positive rules as to the relevancy of facts to the issue which will be of great use to every man who has to have before him

- (2) facts in issue
- (a) all collateral facts which
- (b) form part of the same transaction,
- (c) are the immediate occasion cause or effect of fact in issue,
- (d) show motive, preparation or conduct affected by a fact in issue
- (e) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (f) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (g) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (h) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (i) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (j) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (k) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (l) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (m) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (n) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (o) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (p) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (q) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (r) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (s) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (t) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (u) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (v) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (w) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (x) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (y) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue
- (z) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain a fact in issue

- (i) show the existence of a relevant state of mind and body ,
 (j) show the existence of a series of which a relevant fact forms a part or
 (k) show (in certain cases) the existence of a given course of business

The remainder of the chapter throws into a positive shape what in English law forms the exceptions of the rule, excluding the various matters described as hearsay. They relate to—

- the conduct of the parties on previous occasions ,
 the statement of the parties on previous occasions ,
 previous judgments ,
 statements of third persons ,
 opinions of third persons

1 In reference to the conduct of the parties on previous occasions we embody in three sections the existing law of England as to evidence of character, with some modifications. We include, under the word character both reputation and disposition, and we permit evidence to be given of previous convictions against a prisoner for the purpose of prejudicing him. We do not see why he should not be prejudiced by such evidence, if it is true.

2 Under the head of the statement of the parties on other occasions we deal with the question of admissions, as to which we have not materially altered the existing law.

We have not thought it necessary to transfer from their present position

3 Previous judgments appear to follow naturally upon previous statements. Under this head we deal with the question of res judicata.

We have not attempted to deal with the question of the bar of suits by previous judgments between the same parties. This is a question of procedure rather than of evidence and will be properly dealt with whenever the Code of Civil and Criminal Procedure are re-enacted. We have on the other hand dealt is substantial accordance with the principles of the law of England with the question of the relevancy of judgment between strangers. For the sake of simplicity and in order to avoid the difficulty of defining or enumerating judgments in

in Kunya

4 alteration in the persons about
 or if they refer

then appears to the Court to have special means of knowledge. We have given several illustrations of this the strongest of which is suggested by Mr Pitt Taylor. A Captain about to sail on a voyage carefully examines the ship, declares his belief that she is seaworthy, and embarks on her with his family and property uninsured. Statements of this sort are surely most unlikely to be false. Evidence of such statements will be admissible under this section whether the person who makes them is living or dead, producible or not. Some of them would probably be admissible under the English rule which admits statements explanatory of conduct, but as the conduct explained must be relevant and as no clear definition of relevancy is given by the law of England it is very difficult to say how far his rule extends.

The next exception refers to statements made by a person who is dead or cannot be found or produced without unreasonable delay or expense. We

cause of the person's express an opinion
 of any relationship
 when they are made restrictions placed

by the law of England on the admission of dying declarations and statements about relationship, and as to the necessity that statements should be opposed to the pecuniary interest of the party making them, on the ground that they

statements in public or official previous judicial proceedings

■ The cases in which the opinion of third persons are relevant are dealt with in sections forty four to fifty

They declare to be relevant, the opinions of experts, opinion as to handwriting, opinion as to usages, and opinions as to relationship and the grounds of such opinions

This completes that part of the Bill which relates to the relevancy of minor importance, which modifies the law of England, part of the law which in the exceptions and the rules at the best evidence must in these rules include other matters which we treat of under other heads

III—PROOF.

The second Chapter having decided what facts are relevant we proceed to show how a relevant fact is to be proved

In the first place, the fact to be proved may be one of so much notoriety that the Courts will take judicial notice of it, or it may be admitted by the parties. In either of these cases no evidence of its existence need be given Chapter III which relates to judicial notice, disposes of this subject. It is taken in part from Act II of 1855, in part from the commissioners' draft bill and in part from the law of England

If evidence has to be given of any fact that evidence must be either oral, documentary, or material, and we proceed in the following chapters to deal with the peculiarities of each of these three kinds of evidence. There is however, one topic which applies to all of them, of which we treat in Chapter IV. This is the distinction between primary and secondary evidence. As we have already shown, recognizing the obvious document is to secondary evidence document or to secondary evidence script-

We next I proof by the various kinds of evidence successively, namely oral, documentary and material. With regard to oral evidence, we provide, that it must in all cases whatever, whether it is primary or secondary, and whether the fact to be proved is a fact in issue or collateral, be direct. That is to say, if the fact to be proved is one that could be seen, it must be proved by some one who says he saw it. If it could be heard by some one who says he heard it and so with the other senses. We also provide that, if the fact to be proved is the opinion of a living and producible person, or the grounds on which such opinion is held, it must be proved by the person who holds that opinion on those grounds

We have, however, provided that if the fact to be proved is the opinion of an expert who cannot be called (which is the case in the majority of cases in this country) and if such opinion has been expressed in any published treatise, it may be proved provisions of relevancy contained in a whole doctrine of hearsay in a

(1) the sayings and doings of third persons are, as a rule, irrelevant, so that no proof of them can be admitted,

(2) in some excepted cases they are relevant;

(3) every act done or words spoken which is relevant on any ground, must (if proved by oral evidence) be proved by some one who saw it with his own eyes or heard it with his own ears

With regard to the Chapters which relate to the proof of facts by documentary evidence, and in cases in which secondary evidence may be admitted, we have followed, with few alterations the existing law. We may observe that Chapter VII contains most of the presumptions which we have thought it right to introduce into the Bill. There are presumptions which in almost every

... of certified copies, gazettes, books copies of depositions, etc

... evidence
... this
upon

it are, so

contract ... placed the law of England and

On
to writing, ...
the Commissioners' draft

IV THE PRODUCTION OF PROOF.

From the question of proof of facts, we pass to the question of the manner in which the proof is to be produced, and this we treat under the following heads —

The burden of proof (Chapter X)

Witness (Chapter XI)

... (Chapter XII)

XIII)

... we lay down the broad rules—the general burden of proof is on the party who, if no evidence at all were given, would fail, and that the burden of proving any particular fact is on the party who affirms it. These are the well established English rules, and appear to us reasonable in themselves. We have not followed the precedent of the New York Code in laying down a long list of presumptions, agreeing with the Indian Law Commissioners in the opinion that it is better not to fetter the discretion of the Judges. We have, ... such presumptions to a place in the code, as, ... the Judges might feel embarrassed. These ... from seven years' disappearance, and the presumption of partnership from the ... of acting as partners.

We may observe that which the laws of say arbitrary, provisions to common catastrophe of proof. The person

... of a matter in somewhat is in a burden to this inference rules of

... of witnesses, we have been careful ... practice of the Courts, which ... Procedure, is of necessity we have put into propositions on and cross examination of

in the very
the
witnesses

We have also considered it necessary, having regard to the peculiar ... of this country, to put into the hands of the Judge an amount of evidence which if it exists by law, is at in England. We expressly empower him to relevant or irrelevant, at any period of the ... if he thinks upon

... into the truth of the matter before him. The object of these provisions is to define simply and clearly the duties and the position of the Judges and those who practice before them. The English system under which the Bench and the Bar act together and play their respective parts independently, and the professional organization on which it rests, have no doubt great advantages; but in this country such a system does not as yet exist, and will not for a very long time. In most cases, generally speaking, the great ... and when a lawyer training as English

whose technical knowledge tremendously intricate system of power over the Judges unlike we have thought it necessary them to act efficiently and

lic interest

may refer to some provisions which wo of the power of cross examination

we believe the existence of that power to be essential to the administration of justice, and we believe it to be liable to great abuses. The need for the power and danger of its abuse are proved by England's experience, but in this country—are t here t

prove have according to the power of exposure as a means of gratifying malice. We

Such questions may relate either to matters relevant to the case, or to matters not relevant to the case. If they relate to matters relevant to the case, we think that the witness ought to be compellable to answer, but that his answer should not afterwards be used against him.

If they relate to matters not relevant to the case, except in so far as they affect the credit of the witness we think that the witness ought not to be compelled to answer. His refusal to do so would, in most cases, serve the purpose of discrediting him, as well as an express admission that the imputation conveyed by the question was true.

In order to protect witness against needless questions of this kind, we enact that any advocate who asks such questions without written instructions produced shall be guilty of a contempt of any such question, if asked by a party to the question of the written instructions are to publication of " " affected, and lions, or as fall

the India Penal Code, merely because they were made in the manner stated. Upon a trial for defamation it would of course be open to the person accused to show, either that the imputation was true or that it was for the public good that imputation should be made (Ex I, section 499, I P C), or that it was made in good faith for the protection of the interest of the person making it or of any other person (Ex 9). This is the only method which occurs to us of providing at once for the interests of a bona fide questioner and an innocent witness.

In the same spirit, we have empowered the Court, in general terms, to forbid indecent and scandalous inquiries unless they relate to facts in issue as defined above, or to matters absolutely necessary to be known in order to determine whether the facts in issue existed, and also to forbid questions intended to insult or annoy.

We prefer this general power to the sections drawn by the Commissioners, which forbid questions to marry inquiring whether that person her by the law to which he or she occurrence of sexual of Christians, where of bodily incapacity possible to imagine show that a married person was living with some one who was not her husband or his wife. A woman brings a false accusation against her servant. The motive is revenge for the discovery by the servant of an intrigue by the mistress. A married man comes to prove an able on behalf of his mistress. A woman sues a married man on a bond. He pleads that consideration was adultery. In all three cases, and so in many others which might be suggested, it appears to us that it would be absolutely necessary to admit such evidence as is referred to. As to questions relating to sexual intercourse between husband and wife, we think it better to forbid indecent and scandalous inquiries in

3. general terms, than to lay down a positive rule which in possible cases may produce hardship

Finally, we recommend that the Draft Bill, together with the report should be circulated for the opinion of the Local Governments.

J F STEPHEN
J STRACHEY
F S CHAPMAN
F R COCKFRELL
J F D INGLIS
W ROBINSON

The 31st March, 1871

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament 24 & 25 Vict Cap 67.

The Council met at Government House on Friday, the 31st March, 1871

PRESENT

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, K. P. G. V. S. I. Presiding
His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, G. C. R., C. S. I.

The Hon'ble John Strachey	Colonel the Hon'ble R. Strachey, C. S.
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple	The Hon'ble F. S. Chapman
The Hon'ble J. Fitzjames Stephen, Q. C.	The Hon'ble J. R. Bullen Smith
The Hon'ble B. H. Ellis	The Hon'ble F. R. Cockrell
Major General The Hon'ble H. W. Norman, C. B.	The Hon'ble J. F. D. Inglis
	The Hon'ble W. Robinson, C. S.

INDIAN EVIDENCE BILL

The Hon'ble Mr Stephen in presenting the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to define and amend the Law of Evidence said—

"My Lord,—I feel that I owe an apology to Your Lordship and the Council for requesting their attention to a second speech upon a purely legal subject after the one which I delivered a week ago, upon the Limitation Act. On this occasion, however, I have to explain the position of a measure perhaps as important as any that has been introduced by the Indian Legislature in its history. It affects the daily administration of both Civil and Criminal Justice in the whole country. Moreover, the subject itself is one of deep and wide general interest for a law of Evidence properly constructed would be nothing less than an answer to the problem, however, important."

general way to your I

"I will state, present time So far"

the Bill which is to be introduced in the secured down to the Commission"

draw a draft Evidence Act which was sent out to this country and introduced and referred to a Select Committee by my friend and predecessor Mr. Maine. The Bill was circulated for opinion in the Local Governments and was pronounced by every legal authority to which it was submitted to be unsuitable to the wants of this country. In this view the committee were of persons which I need not state in detail on the present occasion as they are fully stated in the report which I present to-day. I may observe, however, that the principal reasons were, that the bill was not sufficiently clear, that it was in several respects incomplete, and that if it became law it would not supersede the necessity under which judicial officers in this country are at present placed of requiring themselves by means of English Law books with the English Law upon this subject.

The Commissioners' Draft, in fact, would hardly be intelligible to a person who did not enter upon the study of it with a considerable knowledge of the English Law. Under these circumstances a new draft was framed which we now propose to print and circulate, and on which I hope to receive the opinions of the Local Governments and High Courts, in the course of the summer, say, by next September, so that their criticisms may be deliberately weighed, and the measure may be finally disposed of by this time next year.

The report of the committee explains very fully the scheme of the Bill, and enters fully into the details of the proposed changes. I will not now enter upon a detailed discussion of the Bill, but I will confine myself to saying that I trust that those who will have to criticise the Bill will begin by studying the report, which has been drawn up with great care, and which, as well as the Bill itself, forms a connected and systematic whole.

The general object kept in view in framing the Bill has been to produce something from which a student might derive a clear, comprehensive, and distinct knowledge of the subject, without unneccessary labour, but not of course, without that degree of careful and sustained attention which is necessary in order to master any important and intricate matter. It is by this standard that the committee in general, and I in particular, as the member in charge of the Bill, desire that it may be tried.

With this reference to the Bill and the report of the committee, I proceed to discuss the general questions connected with the subject, and to mention a few of the leading features of the measure.

I suppose that the necessity which exists for the law upon the subject is certainly is. To some extent—it is far from being clear to what extent—and in some parts of the country—the English Law of Evidence appears to be in force in British India.

It is a very good system, but it is a very bad system in which a vast body of half-understood law, totally destitute of arrangement and of uncertain authority maintains a dead alive existence, is a state of things which it is by no means easy to praise.

Legislation being thus necessary, in what direction is legislation to proceed? A gentleman, for whose opinion I am much indebted to me the other day, has expressed his views upon all subjects connected with Indian Law and Legislation, I in consequence, said to me the other day, Bill would be very short one.

rules of evidence are hereby abolished. I venture to say that a system of evidence expressed is really held by a large number of persons who would not avow it so plainly. There is, in short, in the lay world, including in the expression the majority of Indian Civilians an impression that rules of evidence are technicalities invented by lawyers principally, for what Bentham called fee

Ap
 tical effect of these rules? I may perhaps be permitted to answer this by referring to a book which I published in 1851 on the Criminal Laws of England, and which contains, amongst other things, an analysis of several celebrated trials, English and French. One object of that analysis was to contrast the effect of the presence and absence of rules of evidence, and I think that any one who would take the trouble to compare those trials to their carefully, would agree with me in the conclusion, that the practical effect of the English rules of evidence in those cases, was to shorten the proceedings enormously and at the same time to consolidate and strengthen them. Keeping out nothing that a reasonable person would have wished to have before him as material for his judgment. The French system, on the other hand, which dispenses with all rules of evidence, got, at least in those cases, no other result from the want of them than floods of irrelevant gossip and collateral questions enough to confuse and bewilder the strongest hearer. Again, compare the proceedings of an ordinary Court of Criminal Justice with the proceedings of a Court of Criminal Justice in France. Evidence are far less strictly enforced, and the Criminal Court never gets very far from the wanders into questions far remote from the issues in the case. In some cases, the Court finds the offence. In a case affirmed, as letters of the nature, to he does not, an incalculable waste of time and energy, and a great weakening of the authority of his Court, is sure to follow. Active and zealous Advocates, who have no rules of evidence to restrain their zeal, would have it in their power to pervert the administration of justice to the basest purposes, and to inflict immense injury on every class connected with it, directly or remotely, that might be seen to scandals lost sight of, be excused for this Apperils int of perjury exceed in any country. In certain parts of the country, it was a point of honour for the friends of to swear f such case into which imputation and fema the popul evidence kept matters to a point appeared to me to till the very last rag of character had been man, and child, whose name was in any he French Courts display this evil, in an aggravated from. In the work to which I have already referred, will be found an account of the trial of a monk named Lecote for murder. If disposed of on the ground that it could hardly have taken more than an irrelevant explanation

"It is not however within reasonable limit pre eminent importance the discharge of his duty truth that even legislative evidence No doubt, it is of evidence shall have the and Judges to act upon the system would grow up of all conceivable shapes of getting rid of the law of trial of justice by lawyers, and returning to the system of mere personal discretion

"It may be that some persons would like this policy, but I suppose it is one which I need not discuss.

So far, I have considered the rules of evidence merely as they conduce to the important practical objects of keeping proceedings to the point, and of protecting and supporting the Judges I must now say a few words on their value, as furnishing the Judge with solid tests of truth I fully admit that their value in

they are infallibly seen by the Courts in degrees, and, but I think have a real, There are two things, all, and on admitted that those problems are by far the most important of any, which a Judge has to constantly present to the rules of evidence that persons who are absolutely ignorant of these rules, may give a much better answer to each of these questions, than men to whom every rule of evidence is perfectly familiar I think, that a more or less distinct perception of this, coupled with impatience of the exaggerated pretensions which have sometimes been made on behalf of the rules of evidence, are the principal reasons for the distrust and dislike, with which they are regarded I think, is merely a particular instance which leads people to depreciate the value of the rules of evidence, and the opposition between them and the common sense of mankind depend upon nature.

nor will the best glasses make him see, and in just the same way, the best rules of evidence will not supply the place of natural sagacity, or of a taste for, and training in logic, but it no more follows that rules of evidence are useless as guides to truth than that shoes or glasses are useless as assistances to the feet and to the eyes The real use of rules of evidence in ascertaining the truth, consists in the fact that they supply tests warranted by very long and varied experience, as to two great facts, the relevancy of facts to the question to be decided by the Court, and the sort of evidence by which particular facts ought to be proved They may in the broadest and most popular form be stated thus:—"If you want to arrive at the truth as to any matter of fact of serious importance, observe the following maxims:—"First, if your belief in the principal fact which you wish to ascertain is to be, after all, an inference from the other facts, let those facts, at all events, be closely connected with the principal fact in some one of certain specific modes Secondly, never believe in any fact whatever, whether it is the fact which you principally wish to determine, or whether it is a fact from which you propose to infer the existence of the principal fact, until you have before you the best evidence that is to be had, that is to say, if the fact is a thing done have before you some one who saw it done with his own eyes; if it was a thing said have before you some one who heard it said with his own ears; if it was a written paper, have the paper before you and read it for yourself.

"This exception—qualifications and explanations apart—is the true essence of the rules of evidence, and I think that no one will deny either that these rules are in themselves eminently wise, or that they are by no means so obvious and self-evident that the mere unassisted natural sagacity of judicial officers of every grade can be trusted to grasp their full meaning, and to apply them to the practical questions which arise in the administration of justice, with no assistance from any expert law. I do not wish to exaggerate, but I must add that I attach considerable moral and speculative value to these rules. If they are firmly grasped by Courts of Justice, and rigidly insisted upon in all practical matters which come before the Courts, they will gradually work their way amongst the people at large, and furnish them with tests by which to distinguish between credulity and rational belief, upon a great variety of matters which will be of vast importance. I ought to add that the good which they are calculated to effect, can be obtained only by erecting them into laws and rigorously enforcing them. When this is done I feel confident that experience will be continually adding to the proper proof of their value.

So far, I have tried to prove the proposition that the English rules of evidence are of real solid value and that they are not a mere collection of arbitrary subtleties which shackle, instead of guiding natural sagacity. I pass now to the next proposition, which is that these rules are expressed in a form so confused, intricate, and lengthy, that it is hardly possible for any one to learn their true meaning otherwise than by practice, an inconvenience which may be altogether avoided by a careful and systematic distribution. For the proof of this proposition, if indeed it is disputed I can only refer in general to the English text books on the subject. They form a mass of confusion which no one can understand until, by the aid of long practice he learns the intention of the different rules of which they heap together innumerable and often incoherent illustrations. I am familiar with the innumerable, and in many cases, like all other hand books, and are mere collections of purposes, and are more collections of generally relating to some very minute points they should be arranged rather with reference to vague catch words, with which the ears of lawyers are familiar, than with reference to theoretical principles which it has never been worth any lawyer's while to investigate.

"The condition of the law of evidence, as well as the condition of many other branches of the law of England, affords continual illustrations of the extraordinary intricacy and difficulty which arises from the combination of the very greatest practical sagacity with an absence of sound theory, or what is still worse, with the presence of unsound theory. No one who has not seen it could possibly imagine how obscure the meaning of a clever man may become when he is forced to squeeze it into the terms of a theory which does not fit it, and is not true. I will give one or two illustrations of my meaning. The expression 'he hears' in the English Court more is true, from which the obacure to the last degree. The objections to 'evidence' are words of the most uncertain kind, each of which may mean several different things. Thus 'hearsay' may mean what you have heard.

hear
ima
a p
may orge alm

"The word 'evidence' is also exceedingly ambiguous. It may mean that which a witness says in Court. It may mean, the fact to which he testifies, regarded as a ground work for further inference. Notwithstanding this, the phrase 'hearsay is no evidence,' being emphatic and easy to recollect stuck in the ears and in the minds of lawyers, and has been taken by many text-writers as the principle on which their statement of the most important branch of the law should be arranged. They accordingly took to describing as hearsay, every fact of which evidence was by law excluded, in short, they turned 'hearsay is no evidence' into, 'that which is not evidence is hearsay.' By describing evidence was an exception to follow me, a piece of other C bought E conveyed the land to D and D conveyed it to C. Now, as D and E are not parties to the suit between A and B, and as A cannot of his own knowledge, know anything of the transaction between them, English text writers call the deeds between D and E 'hearsay' and according to Mr Pitt Taylor, the rule which permits such deeds to be given in evidence is the third exception to the rule which excludes hearsay. One of the Judges, if I am not mistaken, called such evidence 'written hearsay', and so indifferent are English lawyers in general, to the abuse of language for the sake of momentary convenience, that it probably never struck him, that this was a contradiction in terms. I think however, that it is hard to expect people to understand, bear in mind, and follow out in language in such a peculiar manner, To talk of hearing a document, is

"I now turn to the ambiguity of the word 'evidence', to which I have already referred. As I have said, and as I cannot mean a fact which suggests an inference. For of stolen goods is evidence of the inference of theft. At means what a witness actually says in Court or that which he produces in an instance we say 'the evidence which he gave was true'. I might occupy, I will not say the attention, but the time, of Your Lordship and the Council for hours, if I were to attempt to describe the amount of confusion and obscurity which the neglect of this simple and obvious distinction has thrown over the whole subject. I will content myself with observing that it produces the effect of giving a double meaning to every expression into which the word 'evidence' is introduced. Circumstantial evidence, 'hearsay evidence,' 'direct evidence,' 'primary evidence,' 'best evidence,' have each two sets of meanings, and the result is, that it is almost impossible to arrive at a clear and comprehensive knowledge of the whole subject, or to see how its various parts are related to each other without an amount of study, thought, and practical acquaintance with the actual working of the rules of evidence, which few people are in a position to bestow upon the subject.

"I may appear to be detuning the Council unduly upon merely verbal questions but I think that it is a common fault to under-rate the importance of accurate language particularly in regard to the fundamental terms of any particular branch of knowledge. In regard to law, I have not the least doubt that a very large proportion of the intricacy and difficulty which attach to it is due to the fact, that proper pains have never been bestowed on the definition of its fundamental terms. What could be made of Euclid, if we were not quite sure of our meaning when we spoke of a point, a line, a circle, parallel, and perpendicular? Such a defect would render geometry impossible, and the defect which I am alluding to in law, is not less fatal. It is a defect which measures believe as was strictly say, and in many cases attractive for its own sake; that its bulk might be diminished to a degree of which people in general have hardly any conception; that the expense of its administration, might be greatly diminished and that comparative certainty might do away with a very large amount of needless and harassing litigation

"I shall now proceed to describe shortly, the principles on which the draft Bill of the committee has been framed. In the first place we thought it necessary to fix the sense in which the fundamental terms of the subject should be understood and for that purpose we define, 'fact', 'evidence', 'proof', 'proved' and some other words as to which I will content myself with a reference to the report. It seems to us that the remainder of the subject would fall under the following general heads —

- 1 The relevancy of fact to the issues to be proved
- 2 The proof of facts, according to their nature by oral, documentary, or material evidence
- 3 The production of evidence in Court
- 4 The duties of the Court, and the effect of mistaken admission or rejection of evidence

"These heads would we think be found to embrace and to arrange in their natural order all the subjects treated of by English text writers and Judges, under the general head of the Law of Evidence. I will say a few words on their relation to each other, and on each of them in turn

"The main feature of the Bill consists in the distinction drawn by it between the relevancy of facts and the mode of proving relevant facts. The neglect of this distinction by English text writers, no doubt, arises from the ambiguity in the word 'evidence' to which I have already referred and is the main cause of the extreme difficulty of understanding the English Law of Evidence systematically. I will shortly illustrate my meaning. A says 'Z committed murder'. First of all this is a fact—something which could be directly perceived by the sense of hearing and distinctly remembered afterwards. Now, whether this fact is or is not relevant in a particular case, depends upon a variety of circumstances. If the question is whether A was guilty of defaming Z by accusing him of murder? Or where Z had a motive for assaulting A because A said that he had committed murder or if Z is accused of murder and because A said that he had committed murder or if Z is accused of murder and the object is to show that, when A charged him with it he behaved as if he were guilty and in many other instances which might be put, the fact that A spoke those words is clearly relevant. But if the question is whether Z actually did commit murder the fact that A thought so or said so, generally speaking is not relevant. Supposing, however that the fact is relevant on some one of the grounds just mentioned or on any other ground whatever be the ground on which the words are relevant to the matter under inquiry, it is obvious that the words themselves ought to be satisfactorily proved, and the rule of English law—and we think it is a wise rule—is that they must be proved by the assertion of some witness, that he heard them said with his own ears. English text writers throw together with these two classes of rules under the head of Hearsay. They lay down the general rule that hearsay is no evidence, and that facts called hearsay are to be treated as necessary to look whether, in a particular case, it can be proved. One can find that it can be proved by this expression. Again you are told by which it is means not that the fact is improper. One can propose to prove the fact is improper. The English Law of Evidence is thrown into that the most important part of the English Law of Evidence is thrown into the most intricate and inconvenient of all possible forms that of a very wide negative, of most uncertain meaning qualified by a long string of exceedingly intricate exceptions.

"No one who has not gone through the process of learning the law by mere rule of difficulty up to almost any English text-writers, conscious of needless obscurity and of which he becomes gradually to almost any English text-writers, you tell me at enormous length, what is not evidence, but you nowhere tell

"The word 'evidence' is also exceedingly ambiguous. It may mean that which a witness says in Court. It may mean, the fact to which he testifies regarded as a ground work for further inference. Notwithstanding this, the phrase 'hearsay is no evidence,' being emphatic and easy to recollect, stuck in the ears and in the minds of lawyers, and has been taken by many text writers as the principle on which their statement of the most important branch of the law should be arranged. They accordingly took to describing as hearsay, every fact of which evidence was by law excluded, in short, they turned 'hearsay is no evidence' into 'that which is not evidence is hearsay.' They did not however, do this expressly. They did it by describing as exceptions to the rule excluding hearsay, all cases in which evidence was admitted of anything, which would have been excluded, but for such exceptions. This is so intricate a state—and he produces the deeds by which E conveyed the land to D and D conveyed it to C. Now as D and E are not parties to the suit between A and B, and as A cannot of his own knowledge, know anything of the transaction between them, English text writers call the deeds between D and E 'hearsay' and according to Mr Pitt Taylor, the rule which permits such deeds to be given in evidence is the third exception to the rule which excludes hearsay. One of the Judges, if I am not mistaken, called such evidence 'written hearsay', and so indifferent are English lawyers in general, to the abuse of language for the sake of momentary convenience, that it probably never struck him, that this was a contradiction in terms. I think, however that it is hard to expect people to understand, bear in mind, and follow out in language in such a peculiar manner, 'To talk of hearing a document, is

'I now turn to the ambiguity of the word 'evidence', to which I have already referred. As I have just said, 'evidence' sometimes means a fact which suggests an inference. For instance, it is common to say,—Recent possession of stolen goods is evidence of theft, that is, the fact of such possession suggests the inference of theft. At other times and I think more frequently, 'evidence' means what a witness actually says in Court, or that which he produces. For instance we say 'the evidence which he gave was true.' I might occupy I will not say the attention, but the time, of Your Lordship and the Council for hours if I were to attempt to describe the amount of confusion and obscurity which the neglect of this simple and obvious distinction has thrown over the whole subject. I will content myself with observing that it produces the effect of giving a double meaning to every expression into which the word 'evidence' is introduced. Circumstantial evidence, 'hearsay evidence,' 'direct evidence,' 'primary evidence' 'best evidence,' have each two sets of meanings, and the result is, that it is almost impossible to arrive at a clear and comprehensive knowledge of the whole subject or to see how its various parts are related to each other without an amount of study, thought, and practical acquaintance with the actual working of the rules of evidence, which few people are in a position to bestow upon the subject.

"I may appear to be detaining the Council unduly upon merely verbal questions but I think that it is a common fault to under rate the importance of accurate language particularly in regard to the fundamental terms of any particular branch of knowledge. In regard to law I have not the least doubt that a very large proportion of the intricacy and difficulty which attach to it, is due to the fact, that proper pains have never been bestowed on the definition of its fundamental terms. What could be made of Euclid, if we were not quite sure of our meaning when we spoke of a point, a line, a circle, parallel, and perpendicular? Such a defect would render geometry impossible, and the defect very, and in many cases attractive for its own sake, that its bulk might be diminished to a degree of which people in general have hardly any conception; that the expense of its administration, might be greatly diminished and that comparative certainty might do away with a very large amount of needless and harassing litigation.

"I shall now proceed to describe shortly, the principles on which the draft Bill of the committee has been framed. In the first place we thought it necessary to fix the sense of the law, and for that purpose we have inserted in the first section the following general principle —

- 1 The relevancy of fact to the issues to be proved.
- 2 The proof of facts, according to their nature by oral, documentary, or material evidence
- 3 The production of evidence in Court
- 4 The duties of the Court, and the effect of mistaken admission or rejection of evidence

The e heels would we think be found to embrace and to arrange in their natural order all the subjects treated of by English text writers and Judges, under the general head of the law of evidence. I will say a few words on their relation to each other, and on each of them in turn.

The main feature of the Bill consists in the distinction drawn by it between the relevancy of facts and the mode of proving relevant facts. The neglect of this distinction by English text writers, no doubt, arises from the ambiguity in the word 'evidence' to which I have already referred and is the main cause of the extreme difficulty of understanding the English Law of Evidence systematically. I will shortly illustrate my meaning. A says 'Z committed murder'. First of all this is a fact—something which could be directly perceived by the sense of hearing and distinctly remembered afterwards. Now, whether this fact is or is not relevant in a particular case, depends upon a variety of circumstances. If the question is whether A was guilty of defaming Z by accusing him of murder? Or where Z had a motive for assaulting A because A said that he had committed murder or if Z is accused of murder, and the object is to show that, when A charged him with it, he behaved as if he were guilty, and in many other instances which might be put, the fact that A spoke those words is clearly relevant. But if the question is, whether Z actually did commit murder the fact that A thought so or said so, generally speaking is not relevant. Supposing, however that the fact is relevant on some one of the grounds just mentioned or on any other ground, whatever be the ground on which the words are relevant to the matter under inquiry, it is obvious that the words themselves ought to be satisfactorily proved, and the rule of English law—and we think it is a wise rule—is that they must be proved under the own eyes of the jury. It is not necessary to find that it can be proved by any other means. Again, you are told, means not that the fact proposed to prove the fact is improper. One of the most important parts of the English Law of Evidence is thrown into the most intricate and inconvenient of all possible forms that of a very wide negative, of most uncertain meaning qualified by a long string of exceedingly intricate exceptions.

"No one who has not gone through the process of learning the law by merediffici- degree of needless obscurity and conse- co of which he becomes gradually
'you' is to almost any English text-writers, evilency but you no where tell me what is evidence, except indeed in large compilations, which point out what has to be proved upon particular issues, and which it is impossible to read or remember, as it is to read or remember any other mere works of reference".

"I hope that we have been able to avoid this, and that the second chapter of the Bill will be found to state specifically, and in a positive form, what sorts of facts are relevant with the facts in issue to afford grounds for non-existence. I will not weary the referring to the fully illustrate them by reference to a passage from a trial in Scotland, which will relieve the dullness of which I refer is a short summary, by Mr. . . . believes that Mary, Queen of Scots, murdered her husband

"As Mr Froude was not a lawyer he certainly wrote, what I am about to read, without reference to the rules of evidence. I think the fact that he did, in fact, unconsciously observe them, illustrate very strongly the truth of my assertion, that they are nothing more than the result of experience and practical sagacity, thrown into a categorical shape. I need hardly say that I use the passage merely as an illustration, and without any notion of adopting Mr Froude's opinions or asserting the truth of his facts. I am concerned merely with their relevance.

"She (Mary) was known to have been weary of her husband, and anxious to get rid of him.

"(By our draft, facts which show motive are relevant)

'The difficulty and the means of disposing of him had been discussed in her presence, and she had herself suggested to Sir James Balfour to kill him

"(Facts which show preparation for a fact in issue, are relevant)"

"She brought him to the house where he was destroyed, she was with him two hours before his death

"(Facts so connected with the facts in issue as to form part of the same transaction, are relevant).

"And afterwards threw every difficulty in the way of any examination into the circumstances of his end"

"(Subsequent conduct, influenced by any fact in issue, is relevant)"

"The Earl of Bothwell was publicly accused of the murder

(Facts necessary to be known in order to introduce relevant facts, are relevant)

'She kept him close at her side; she would not allow him to be arrested; she went openly to Seton with him, before her widowhood was a fortnight old; he assented to his trial. Edinburgh was occupied by himself at the Tolbooth surrounded by the to the ground, because the Crown did not had been prevented from appearing"

"(Subsequent conduct influenced by any fact in issue is relevant)"

"A few weeks later, she married Bothwell, though he had a wife already, and when her subjects rose in arms against her and took her prisoner, she refused to allow herself to be divorced from him"

"(Subsequent conduct Motive)"

... letters which the Queen read, and to which she was present

'Finally Mr Froude observes 'In her own correspondence, though she denies the crime, there is nowhere the clear ring of innocence which makes its weight felt even when the evidence is weak which supports the words.'

The letters would be evidence under the section relating to admissions and Mr Froude's remark is in the nature of a criticism on them by a prosecuting counsel

"In English text books, so far as my of the same sort, are nowhere presented in come in for the most part, as exceptions to the points in issue. In fact they can be learned only by the practice of the Courts though they are as natural and lax as any rules need be, if they are properly stated

"From the rules which state what facts may be proved we pass to those which prescribe the manner in which a relevant fact must be proved. Passing over technical matters—such as the law relating to judicial notice, questions relating to public documents and the like—these rules may be said to be three in number, though, of course, numerous introductory rules are required to adopt for practice. They are these

'1 If a fact is proved by oral evidence, the oral evidence must be direct, that is to say, things seen must be deposed to by some one who says he saw them with his own eyes, things heard by some one who says he heard them with his own ears

'2 Original documents must be produced or accounted for, before any other evidence can be given of their contents

'3 When a contract has been reduced to writing it must not be varied by oral evidence

"These rules as I have said are subject to certain exceptions and require certain practical adjustments, but I do not think that any one who has had practical experience of the working of Courts of Justice will deny their substantial soundness or indeed the absolute practical necessity for enforcing them

Passing over certain matters which are explained at length in the Bill and report, I come to two points to which the committee attach the greatest importance as having peculiar reference to the administration of justice in India. The first of these rules refers to the part taken by the Judge in the examination of witnesses, the second to the effect of the improper admission or rejection of evidence upon the proceedings in case of appeal

"That part of which witnesses a Bar co operating duty than that of deciding questions which may arise between them. I hardly say that the state of things does not exist in India and that it would be a great mistake to legislate as if it did. In a great number of cases—probably the vast numerical majority—the Judge has to conduct the whole trial himself. In all cases he than he does it as he can, something re enquiry need accordingly questions upon any facts, of any witnesses at any stage of the proceedings respectively of the rules of evidence binding on the parties and their agents and we have Judges espe before him, not think th at the truth the light of suited to India and apathy in England

"With respect to the question of appeals, we have drawn a series of provisions, the object of which is to prevent mere mistakes in procedure from destroying the value of work properly done, as far as it goes. We have gone through the various cases in which, as appears to us, the question of the improper admission or rejection or omission of evidence can arise; and have provided that, whenever any Appellate Court discovers the occurrence of any mistake, it shall not reverse the decision of the inferior Court, but shall either strike out what is redundant, or supply what is defective, as the case may be and give judgment accordingly.

I have addressed Your Lordship and the Council at great length, but not I think at greater length than the importance of the matter requires. I have only to add, that I propose to proceed with the Bill when the Government returns to Calcutta, and that I hope before that time, to receive the criticisms of the Local Governments upon the measure.

The council adjourned to Thursday, the 6th April, 1871

CALCUTTA,

The 31st March 1871

WHITELEY STOKES

Secy to the Govt of India

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament 24 & 25 Vict Cap 67.

PRESENT

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India L R C M S I presiding

q c | The Hon'ble J F D English
The Hon'ble W Robinson c s r
The Hon'ble F S Chapman
The Hon'ble R Stewart

The Hon'ble J R Bullen Smith

SUNDRY BILLS

The Hon'ble Mr Stephen also moves that the Hon'ble Messrs Chapman Stewart and Bullen Smith, be added to Select Committees on the following Bills —

The next Bill, to which Mr Stephen had to refer, was the Evidence Bill. He need not say anything more about it than that it was under the consideration of the Committee. He however wished to make one or two remarks. In the first place, although the Bill had been sent for the opinion of the Local Governments some time in June last with a request that their opinion on the subject might be forwarded in the course of the autumn, many of the Local Governments had not yet sent in any opinions whatever on the subject. If they might beget from t wish to n of some ill, ver nfound led President

any other of Mr ist the Council
any wish to il been and attention in a perfectly fair and friendly spirit, without the slightest notion of making any attack upon the independence or position generally of the honourable profession in question.

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 15th December, 1871,

CALCUTTA,

The 8th December, 1871

H S CUNNINGHAM,

Offy Secretary to the Council of the Governor General for making
Laws and Regulations

SECOND REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE

Vide the Gazette of India, February 17th, 1872, Part V p. 91

The following: - - - - - It has settled by them was prece - - - - - and for the purpose of making L - - - - -

Petition from certain Barristers and Advocates of Bombay, dated the 8th August, 1871.

From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner of Coorg

No. 4, dated 4th October

1571, and enclosures

From certain pleadings of the High Court, Bombay, dated 4th October, 1971

From officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner of Cong.

No $\frac{409}{6}$, dated 9th October

1573, and enclosures

From the Chief Secretary to Government of Fort Saint George No 106, dated 21st
November 1871, and enclosures

From F J Ferguson Esq, Barrister High Court, Calcutta, dated 8th December, 1871 forwarding memorial from Pas-teters and Advocates High Court, Calcutta

From Secretary to Chief Commissioner, Central Pro 2640

Prices, No $\frac{2640}{220}$, dated 6th

December 1871 and enclosures
From Officiating Secretary
to Government of Bengal No 6326 I dated 13th Decem ber, 1871, and enclosures

Memorial from certain mem bers of the Madras Bar, dated 16th December, 1871

6 We have redrawn chapter VI, as to the exclusion of oral by documentary evidence so as to make the sections more distinct and complete. We believe that they now represent the English law on the subject, freed from certain refinements which would not be suitable for this country.

it de We have reconsi- follows —

Some presumptions have the effect of laying the burden of proof on particular persons, in particular cases. These we have dealt with in sections 103 to 111 of the new Bill. . . . that the existence of one

A conclusive presumption is a direction by law that the existence of one fact shall in all cases be inferred from proof of another. This we have provided for in sections 112 and 113.

We have substituted the term "conclusive proof" in these instances for that of "necessary inference," which was employed for the same purpose in the first draft of the Bill.

We the undersigned, the members of the select committee of the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations, to which the Indian Evidence Bill was referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin

I We have made some alterations in the arrangement of the Bill

2 We have omitted the definitions of 'proof' and 'moral certainty' and the sections relating to inferences to be drawn by the Court as being suitable rather for a treatise than an Act

3 We have omitted the provisions relating to material evidence, and have given a new and simpler definition of the difference between primary and secondary evidence

1 We have provided that the Act shall apply to all judicial proceedings but not to affidavits presented to any Court or officer, nor to proceedings in arbitration

5 As to the effect of an admission by one of several persons jointly tried for an offence, we have omitted sections 120 and 121 of the original Bill. Instead of these we have provided on the time, of the admission, besides himself, it may be taken into consideration by the Court against all the persons whom it affects.

er VI, as to the exclusion of oral by document-the sections more distinct and complete. We the English law on the subject, freed from the English law for this country not be suitable for this country

- 1 - on the ground that We have reconsti-
follows -

the effect of laying the burden of proof on parties.
These we have dealt with in sections 103 to 105.
... that the existence of one

a direction by law that the existence of one from proof of another This we have provided in "conclusive proof" in these instances for that h was employed for the same purpose in the first

through the various cases in which, as appears to us, the question of the improper admission or rejection or omission of evidence can arise; and have provided that, whenever any Appellate Court discovers the occurrence of any mistake, it shall not reverse the decision of the inferior Court, but shall either strike out what is redundant, or supply what is defective, as the case may be, and give judgment accordingly

I have addressed Your Lordship and the Council at great length, but not, I think at greater length than the importance of the matter requires. I have only to add, that I propose to proceed with the Bill when the Government returns to Calcutta, and that I hope before that time, to receive the criticisms of the Local Governments upon the measure.

The council adjourned to Thursday, the 6th April, 1871.

CALCUTTA,

The 31st March, 1871.

WHITELEY STOKES

Secy. to the Govt of India

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vict Cap 67.

PRESENT

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India and present

The Hon'ble John Strachey.

The Hon'ble J Fitzjames Stephen, Q C

The Hon'ble B H Ellis

The Hon'ble F R Cockerell

The Hon'ble J. F D English

The Hon'ble W Robinson, C S I

The Hon'ble F. S Chapman

The Hon'ble R Stewart

The Hon'ble J R Bullen Smith

SUNDRY BILLS

The Hon'ble Mr Stephen also moves that the Hon'ble Messrs Chapman Stewart and Bullen Smith, be added to Select Committees on the following Bills —

The next Bill, to which Mr Stephen had to refer, was the Evidence Bill. He need not say anything more about it than that it was under the consideration of the Committee. He however wished to make one or two remarks. In the first place, although the Bill had been sent for the opinion of the Local Governments some time in June last, with a request that their opinion on the subject might be forwarded in the course of the autumn, many of the Local Governments had not yet sent in any opinions whatever on the subject. He earnestly hoped that these opinions might be received in order that they might be fully considered. Some memorial had been received on the subject from individuals, specially from certain members of the Bar. He did not wish to discuss them. But he wished to say that he thought that the opinion of some persons, that the Council in General, and Mr Stephen in particular, were unfounded, look

of Mr Civil
-h n
and in a
any 1107 make an attack upon the members of the Bar. Everything that

in question

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 15th December, 1871,

CALCUTTA,

The 8th December, 1871

H S CUNNINGHAM,

Offg. Secretary to the Council of the Governor General for making
Laws and Regulations

SECOND REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE

Ap

Vide the Gazette of India, February 17th, 1872, Part V p 91

The following Report of a Select Committee together with the Bill as settled by them was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 30th January, 1872 —

Petition from certain Barristers and Advocates of Bombay, dated the 8th August, 1871.

From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner of Coorg

3-C
No —, dated 4th October

1871, and enclosures

From certain pleaders of the High Court Bombay, dated 4th October, 1871

From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner of Coorg.

403
No —, dated 9th October

1871, and enclosures

From the Chief Secretary to Government of Fort Saint George No 108 dated 21st November 1871, and enclosures

From F J Ferguson Esq Barrister High Court Calcutta dated 8th December, 1871 forwarding memorial from Barristers and Advocates High Court, Calcutta

From Secretary to Chief Commissioner, Central Pro

2840 vinces, No —, dated 6th

290
December 1871 and enclosures

From Officiating Secretary to Government of Bengal No 6326 J dated 13th December, 1871, and enclosures

Memorial from certain members of the Madras Bar, dated 16th December, 1871

6 We have redrawn chapter VI, as to the exclusion of oral by documentary evidence, so as to make the sections more distinct and complete. We believe that they now represent the English law on the subject, freed from certain refinements which would not be suitable for this country

7 Ex — on the ground that it did not — We have reconsidered this — follows —

Some presumptions have the effect of laying the burden of proof on particular persons, in particular cases. These we have dealt with in sections 103 to 111 of the new Bill

A conclusive presumption is a direction by law that the existence of one fact shall in all cases be inferred from proof of another. This we have provided for in sections 112 and 113

We have substituted the term "conclusive proof" in these instances for that of "necessary inference," which was employed for the same purpose in the first draft of the Bill

We the undersigned, the members of the select committee of the Council of the Governor General of India, for the purpose of making the Indian Bill and the papers noted in the margin

1 We have made some alterations in the arrangement of the Bill

2 We have omitted the definitions of "proof" and "moral certainty" and the sections relating to inferences to be drawn by the Court as being suitable rather for a treatise than an Act

3 We have omitted the provisions relating to material evidence, and have given a new and simpler definition of the difference between primary and secondary evidence

4 We have provided that the Act shall not to officer,

5 As to the effect of an admission by one of several persons jointly tried for an offence, we have omitted sections 120 and 121 of the old Act

whom it affects

on the ground that — We have reconsidered this — follows — the burden of proof on particular persons, in particular cases. These we have dealt with in sections 103 to 111 of the new Bill

A conclusive presumption is a direction by law that the existence of one fact shall in all cases be inferred from proof of another. This we have provided for in sections 112 and 113

We have substituted the term "conclusive proof" in these instances for that of "necessary inference," which was employed for the same purpose in the first draft of the Bill

Other presumptions are in substance mere maxims by which the Court oug' Theoretically they are regarded in say, as artificial rules which the be drawn from facts Practically, however so many exceptions are made that the difference between a presumption of law and a presumption of fact is hardly traceable The distinction appears to us altogether unsuitable for this country and likely to produce great inconvenience if it were introduced We have accordingly, by section 114 put all such presumptions in the position of mere presumptions of fact with which the Court can deal at its discretion

We have provided in the Chapter on the Burden of Proof that a Notification in the Gazette that a territory has been ceded to a Native State shall be conclusive proof of a valid cession at the date mentioned in the notification The object of this section is to set at rest questions which as we are informed have arisen on this subject

The subject of presumptions as to documents is a very special matter and appears to us to belong to the subject of documentary evidence under which head we have placed it in chapter V

Lastly many subjects are treated by English writers under the head of presumptions which appear to us to belong rather to different branches of the substantial law, e g the presumption that every one knows the law, is in reality a branch of substantive criminal law We have omitted such presumptions as these from the law of evidence, because they do not belong to the subject and because many of them are fictitious

8 The chapter on oaths has been omitted as they form the subject of a separate Bill now under discussion

9 We also recommend the omission of sections 141 to 145 of the old draft, as to questions to credit asked by barristers or pleaders and the substitution of provisions showing the principles by which the asking of such questions, should be regulated, and empowering the Court if any such question is improperly asked to report the circumstance to the authority to which the person asking it is subject

10 We have amended the words to ask questions The section as or authorize him to found his judgment rumours The intention of the section of inquiry for the discovery of relever makes this clear

11 We have omitted the chapter as to the duties of Judges, and Juries which will, we think be We have also omitted substituted for them
 in which the improper
 new trial or a reversal of a decision

Y. L. & C. POWER

and have the cases and for a

12 Subject to these amendments we recommend that the Bill be passed the Gazette, and 1st from the date of

J F STEPHEN
 J STRACHEY
 J F D INGLIS
 W ROBINSON
 I S CHAPMAN
 H STEWART
 J R BULLFN SMITH
 F R COCKERELL

(1) Where the fact that a thing was spoken, stated or otherwise intimated is a question in issue

Illustration.

A says that he has been told by B that he saw C pick D's pocket. This is admissible in an action against B for slandering C.

(2) Where the fact that a person by or to whom the thing was spoken, written, stated or otherwise intimated was acquainted with such thing is a question in issue.

Illustration.

A writes to B "I have just heard that C has failed." The letter is received by B. The letter is not admissible as evidence that C had failed, but when it is proved that C had then failed, the letter is admissible as evidence that the failure was known to A at the place and time at which the letter was written and also that B was apprised of it.

(3) Where the thing spoken, written, stated or otherwise intimated tends to explain any act or conduct which is a question in issue.

Illustration.

(a) A says on a trial of C for robbing D's house that he heard B say to C "D's house has been robbed," and that thereupon C fled. This evidence is admissible.

(b) On a trial of B for robbing C's house it is proved that B fled immediately after the robbery. A witness is produced who says that he heard A tell B before B fled that a warrant had been issued for his arrest under a decree of Civil Court.

(c) A says on a trial of B for murdering C that he saw B with intent to kill him. It is alleged that B fled immediately after the murder. Evidence of what A said at the time is admissible.

(d) A sues B for compensation for maliciously causing him to be apprehended on a charge of theft. Evidence that a theft had been committed in B's house, and that C told B that he saw A running away immediately after, is admissible.

(e) A says that he has heard B say to C "Pay me the 1,000 rupees which you owe me." This is no evidence that C owed B 1,000 rupees, but it is evidence that B claimed 1,000 rupees, and it is admissible in order to introduce evidence of what C said or did with respect to the claim.

(f) A is charged with sedition, and is proved to have combined with B for seditious purposes. Evidence of words spoken by B, while taking part in a riot in furtherance of those purposes, is admissible against A.

(4) Where the thing was spoken, written or stated or otherwise intimated by a party to the suit, or some one whom he represents in interest, and it is sought to be used against him.

Illustration.

(a) A brings a suit against B to establish a right of way across B's field. Evidence that C from whom B derives his title to the land, had, while owner, admitted A's right of way is admissible.

(b) A writes to B "I have just heard that C will ship for him 100 bales of cotton in the direction from C to B." Evidence of what A said is admissible.

(c) In a suit between B and C, strangers to A, it is stated that A had become insolvent. This deed is admissible in evidence to show that A had become insolvent, but it is not admissible against A for that purpose.

(5) In the cases provided for by ss 368, 369, 370 and 371 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

(6) Where the evidence tendered consists in a statement which was received in evidence in a former judicial proceeding relating to the same subject and between the same parties, or those whom they represent in interest, and where the person who made such statement has since died or become incapable of giving evidence, or where his presence cannot be procured, provided that if such person were present his evidence would be admissible.

have affixed the same character in India, in all other cases we have provided that the judgment of a Court of competent jurisdiction upon a matter directly in issue shall be admissible as evidence between the same parties upon the same matter directly in issue in another cause, but that it shall not be conclusive.

of presumption, which are in our universally applicable. It may perhaps be made a question how far the subject of evidence falls under the head of substantive law and some of the sections of the draft now submitted certainly border closely on Procedure. Those sections, however, have not found a place in either of the Codes of Procedure. We have therefore inserted them (with some modifications), as it appears to us that the law of evidence ought not to be left to be gleaned from many different enactments but that so much of it as it not to be found in the Codes of Procedure should be, as far as possible comprised in the rules of law now submitted by us and that the enactments which will thus be rendered unnecessary should be repealed.

We recommend the repeal of so much of Acts II of 1855 and XIX of 1853 as remains unrepealed, except section 26 of the latter enactment, which does not form part of the law of evidence.

EVIDENCE.

MEANING OF WORDS

1 In the following rules the word "Court" shall be taken to comprise all Courts of justice, civil or criminal, and all persons having by law or consent of parties authority to take evidence; and the word "cause" shall be taken to comprise all judicial proceedings, civil or criminal.

Admissibility

2 Whenever any evidence is said to be admissible it is not meant that it is only that the weight, if any, which the decision is to be allowed to it, upon any question in issue in a cause, the material to the decision of the cause, is admissible, unless it is excluded by the rules contained in this chapter.

3 No statement by a witness of anything, or founded upon anything spoken or written, or otherwise intimated by another person, and no statement contained in any document, is admissible in evidence, except in the cases specified in the rules hereafter contained.

Illustrations

(a) B says that D told him that he had robbed C. The evidence is admissible, unless it is excluded by the rules contained in this chapter.

(b) A gives evidence that B robbed C. Being asked how he knows it he says that he knows it only because C told him so. The evidence which has been admitted must be struck out.

(c) A says that B was alive on the 1st January 1860. It appears that A does not speak to this fact of his own knowledge; but that he learnt it from a letter written to him by C, or from a newspaper or from a printed book, or a picture. In each of these cases A's statement is not admissible as evidence that B was alive on that day.

1860. Being asked how he knows it he says that he knows it only because C told him so. The evidence which has been admitted must be struck out.

of any religious or charitable foundation, or the meaning of any technical or conventional words or terms or of any words or terms used in particular districts, or to any matter of public or general interest, and was spoken, written, stated, or otherwise intimated by a person who has since died or become incapable of giving evidence, or whose presence cannot be procured

Illustrations.

(a) A, in order to show the religious tenets of a certain sect, tenders in evidence a manuscript treatise, proved to have been written by a deceased member of the sect. The treatise is admissible.

(b) It is a disputed fact in a suit whether a certain spot is or is not a public landing place. Statements made on the subject by A and B, now deceased, otherwise intimated by a person who has since died or become incapable of giving evidence or whose presence cannot be procured, provided that such person was a member of the family or had otherwise special means of knowledge.

Illustrations

(a) It is a disputed fact in a suit whether A is the son of B. A statement made on the subject by C, who was a nurse in B's family about the time of A's birth, is admissible in evidence.

(b) A alleging that he is the son of B deceased, produces the following book stating A's birth brothers since deceased

A deed executed by B

A also produced witnesses who state that B told them that A was his son. The contents of the documents and the testimony of the witnesses are admissible in evidence.

(1) Where the following recital contained in a after the passing of the Government appears to be the of British

(1) there has been a public meeting or published in any newspaper or journal

Explanation. Such report is not admissible in evidence of any fact reported to have occurred or of any statement reported to have been made at the meeting or proceeding.

EVIDENCE OF LAW OF FOREIGN COUNTRY

(13) Where the thing intimated purports to be the law of a foreign country, and appears to be contained in books or documents purporting to be printed on published under the authority of the Government of that country, or in reports of decisions of the Courts of such country

MAPS

5 Maps made under the authority of Government shall be admissible

RES JUDICATA

6 A ... shall have effect provided the parties never were dissolved is proof that the were such a of war is proof that

9 The judgment of a Court of competent jurisdiction upon a matter directly in issue is admissible as evidence between the same parties, and those who represent them in interest upon the same matter, directly in issue in another cause, but not between any other parties, except as provided for in the next following section of the chapter

Illustrations

(a) A sues B for a horse, alleging that it was stolen from himself and that B brought it, knowing it to be stolen. Judgment is given in B's favour. B afterwards loses the horse. A sues B for it. A in defence makes the same allegations as in the former suit. The judgment pronounced in the former suit is admissible as evidence in B's favour.

(b) A sues B for rent in the Court of the Collector, which has cognizance of such suits. B sets up in defence a mortgage under which he is entitled to retain the rent in satisfaction of the interest of his mortgage. A disputes the genuineness of the mortgage, but the Court pronounces it genuine and dismisses A's suit. Afterwards B sues A in the Zillah Court to recover the amount due to him upon the mortgage. A disputes the genuineness of the mortgage. The judgment of the Collector is admissible in evidence.

10 A decree of a Court of competent jurisdiction is admissible as evidence that such judgment was pronounced between the parties, but is not, as against any person other than the parties thereto and those who represent them in interest, evidence of any other fact thereby appearing.

Illustrations

(a) A sues B for compensation for injury sustained through the negligence of C who is B's agent. A obtains judgment. In a suit brought by B against C for compensation for loss sustained by B through C's negligence the judgment is admissible as evidence of the amount which A has been adjudged to pay, but not as evidence of B's negligence.

(b) A sues B for compensation, because B yielded up to C certain lands which B held as guardian of A who was then a minor. A decrees passed in a prior suit whereby B was directed to yield up possession to C as owner is admissible in evidence.

(c) A is tried on the charge of having forged a deed of gift from B. He is acquitted. Afterwards C alleging the deed to be forged institutes a suit against A for certain lands, of which A has obtained possession under it. The record of A's acquittal is not admissible in evidence.

(d) A one of the three Hindu brothers, undivided in estate, dies and his brothers, B and C alleging that they are his heirs sell to D a portion of the land which they possessed jointly with A.

E, claiming as the adopted son and heir of A, sues for A's share of the land sold to D and obtains a decree in his favour. He afterwards claiming as such adopted son of A, sues B and C for A's share of the land which remains in their possession. The decree in the former suit is not admissible in evidence.

(e) A alleging that he is the only brother and the heir of B deceased, sues C for possession of B's land. The Court declares A's title established and decrees that C shall yield up the land to him.

Afterwards B claims to be the son and heir of B, and sues A for possession of the lands. The decree in the former suit is admissible in evidence that A had obtained such a decree but not admissible as evidence that he was entitled to the land as the only brother and heir of B.

(f) Two ships come into collision whereby A, a passenger in one of them is injured and B's goods are destroyed. A obtains a decree for compensation from the owners of the other ship on the ground that the injuries were sustained by him through the negligence of their captain. B sues the owners of the same ship for compensation for the loss of his goods. The judgment is not admissible in B's suit as evidence of the captain's negligence.

(g) A sues B for maintenance of C a minor, whom A alleges to be B's son. B denies that C is his son. The Court decides that C is B's son and decrees payment by B of A's claims.

B dies, C alleging that he is B's son, sues the executor of B for a legacy of A 10,000 rupees, D having by his will bequeathed that sum to every child of B. The judgment is not admissible in evidence that C is a son of B.

PROOF OF WRITINGS WHICH CONSTITUTE PRIMARY EVIDENCE.

Ap

11 A writing which is required by law to be attested, but which is to have been written wholly in the cases provided for by the cases provided for by given as evidence, unless the signature attached thereto, or so much of the same writing as is sought to verify, be proved to be in the handwriting of the person by whom it is alleged to have been written or signed.

12 A written instrument which is required by law to be attested shall not (except in the cases provided for by section 20 of this chapter), be received as evidence unless the following rules are complied with —

(1) That execution of such instrument shall be proved by one attesting witness at the least, if there be an attesting witness alive and subject to the process of the Court by which the cause is tried and capable of bearing testimony.

(2) If no attesting witness is alive and subject to such process as aforesaid

is alleged to have done so

13 In order to ascertain, whether a signature writing or seal is genuine any signature or seal is genuine

14 If a writing is produced from the proper custody, it shall be admissible in evidence without proof of its execution or attestation

PROOF OF THE CONTENTS OF DOCUMENTS BY SECONDARY EVIDENCE

15 Evidence of the contents or purport of any written or printed document

16 A copy of a record of any Court or of an entry in any public book or register, which is proved to be a correct copy, or which purports to be under the authority of the proper officer, shall be admissible as such record or entry

(2) A copy of a record of any Court or of an entry in any public book or register, which is proved to be a correct copy, or which purports to be under the authority of the proper officer, shall be admissible as such record or entry

17 Evidence of the contents of a written or printed document shall be admissible, when it has been proved that the document had been destroyed or lost, or when the person in whose custody the document was, after due notice, to the Court by which the cause is tried or is to be tried, or refuses, after due notice, to produce the document, or otherwise satisfactorily accounted for

EVIDENCE OF TERMS OF CONTRACT

18 A contract shall be received in evidence if it is in writing and is proved to be a correct copy, or which purports to be under the authority of the proper officer, shall be admissible as such record or entry

19 The provisions of the last preceding section.

9 The judgment of a Court of competent jurisdiction upon a matter directly in issue is admissible as evidence between the same parties, and those who represent them in interest upon the same matter, directly in issue in another cause; but not between any other parties, except as provided for in the next following section of the chapter.

Illustrations.

(a) A sues B for a horse, alleging that it was stolen from himself and that B brought it, knowing it to be stolen. Judgment is given in B's favour for it. A in defence judgment pronounced of such suits. B sets up in defence a mortgage under which he is entitled to retain the rent in satisfaction of the interest of his mortgage. A disputes the genuineness of the mortgage, but the Court pronounces it genuine and dismisses A's suit. Afterwards B sues A in the Zillah Court to recover the amount due the mortgage. The

that such judgment was pronounced between the parties, but is not, as against any person other than the parties thereto and those who represent them in interest, evidence of any other fact thereby appearing

Illustrations

(a) A sues B for compensation for injury sustained through the negligence of C, who is B's agent. A obtains judgment. In a suit brought by B against C for compensation for loss sustained by B through C's negligence, the amount which A has been adjudged use B yielded up to C certain lands in minor. A decree passed in a old up possession to C as owner, is admissible in evidence

(a) A sues B on the account against record. from B. He institutes a suit under it. The brother which dies and his ion of the land land share of the ds claiming as hich remains e in evidence eceived, suc established and or possession e that A had entitled to one of them, for compensation were sustained owners of the lgment is not nor, whom A alleges to be B's son that C is B's son and decrees for a legacy every child

PROOF OF WRITINGS WHICH CONSTITUTE PRIMARY EVIDENCE

11 A writing which is not required by law to be attested, but which is alleged to have been signed by a specified person or to have been written wholly or in part by a specified person, shall not, except in the cases provided for by sections 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, be produced as evidence unless the signature of the person by whom it is alleged to have been written or signed is proved to the satisfaction of the Court by the testimony of one or more persons who are alive and subject to the cross-examination, and capable of bearing

12 A writing which is required by law to be attested shall not be received in evidence unless it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court by the testimony of one or more persons who are alive and subject to the cross-examination, and capable of bearing

13 In order to ascertain, whether a signature writing or seal is genuine or not, it is necessary to produce evidence to the satisfaction of the Court that the person who executed the instrument was the same person who is alleged to have done so.

14 In order to ascertain, whether a signature writing or seal is genuine or not, it is necessary to produce evidence to the satisfaction of the Court that the person who executed the instrument was the same person who is alleged to have done so.

15 Evidence of the contents or purport of any written or printed document, or of letters, figures or other mark not produced to the Court shall not be admissible, except as provided by the rules next following —

PROOF OF THE CONTENTS OF DOCUMENTS BY SECONDARY EVIDENCE

(1) A copy of, or extract from any proclamation, order, or regulation issued by Her Majesty or by the Privy Council or any department of Her Majesty, or any other Gazette or paper provided that such copy purports to be printed by the Government printer or to be printed under the authority of the Legislature of any British Colony or possession or to be certified to be true by the proper officer.

(2) A copy of a record of any Court or of an entry in any public book or register, which is proved to be a correct copy or which purports to be under the seal of such Court or to be certified by the proper officer shall be admissible as evidence of the existence of the record or entry.

(3) A copy of a record of any Court or of an entry in any public book or register, which is proved to be a correct copy or which purports to be under the seal of such Court or to be certified by the proper officer shall be admissible as evidence of the existence of the record or entry.

(4) Evidence of the contents or purport of any written or printed document, or of letters, figures or other mark not produced to the Court shall not be admissible, except as provided by the rules next following —

EVIDENCE OF TERMS OF CONTRACT

If a contract is in writing it shall be received
as evidence

Explanation The statement of a fact in any such document does not preclude the admission of oral evidence relating to the same fact, and where a suit is instituted for the purpose of setting aside or varying a document on the ground of a mistake in the writing thereof evidence may be received for the purpose of proving such mistake

PAPERS OF WHICH PROOF IS NOT REQUIRED

17 No proof shall be required of to be the London Gazette or the Gazette any Presidency or Lieutenant Governor or possession of the British Crown, nor of any paper purporting to be a news paper or journal, or a copy of a private Act of Parliament printed by the King's printer.

18 No proof shall be required of any paper purporting to be a certificate, certified dence of any particular form and purports to be behalf
law made evi
stantially in the
the law in that

19 No proof shall be required of the official position of any person certififying to the truth of any such paper as is mentioned in the last preceding rule exec Mag

the

21 An impression of any document made by a copying machine, or a representation of anything made by means of photography or of any other process which affords a reasonable assurance of correctness shall be admissible in evidence, wherever under these rules the production of the original may be dispensed with

PERSONS WHO MAY TESTIFY

22 Those persons only shall be incompetent to testify who from tender years or for unsoundness of mind or from any other cause appear to the Judge to be incapable of understanding the questions addressed to them

PRIVILEGE

23 A witness is not at liberty to disclose a communication—

(1) When such communication relates to affairs of State and its disclosure ried couple to the in dispute in a n who made it

est, has not been obtained for such disclosure

(3) Where the witness is a barrister, attorney, or vakil, or an interpreter or intermediate agent between the client and his legal adviser, and the communication was made by the client or principal to the witness in the course of his professional employment or consists of any advice given or conveyed by the witness to the client or principal, or of the contents of any document which the witness has acquired from the client or principal to the disclosure of such communication

(4) Where the disclosure demanded of the witness consisted in the production of documents belonging to another person who would not be bound to produce them if in his possession and who has not consented to their production

24 A witness is not compellable to disclose to the Court any confidential communication which may have taken place between him and his legal professional adviser

25 No communication made in furtherance of criminal purpose is protected from disclosure.

26 A witness summoned to produce a document shall, if the same be in his custody possession of power be bound to bring it into Court, notwithstanding any objection to the right of the party calling for it to compel its production or to its being real, or being put in as evidence or to the disclosure of its contents

The validity of any such objection made by the person bringing the document shall be determined by the Court and for the better determination thereof it shall be lawful for the Court to receive any admissible evidence which such person may give respecting it and it shall also be lawful for the Court unless the document relates to affairs of State, to inspect it and, if necessary to employ any person to interpret it under the obligation of an oath, and not to disclose its contents except to the Court, unless the Court shall decide that the document is to be given in evidence

27 No question shall be put to a married person which substantially amounts to -- the knowledge of the fact inquired after is necessary to the determination of some question between the husband and wife according to the law to which they are subject

EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

29 The party at whose instance a witness is examined may, with the permission of the Court, cross examine such witness to test his veracity, in the same manner as if the witness had not been called at his instance, and may be allowed to show that the witness has varied from a previous statement made by him

30 In order to repel an attack on the testimony of a witness, any former statement made by such witness when the fact took place the fact shall be admissible in evidence that it was made at the time and place at which it shall be stated in

31 It shall not be lawful to ask a witness, in order to test his credit, any question the answer to which might criminate or might tend directly or indirectly to criminate him or might expose or tend, directly or indirectly to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture of any kind But a witness shall not be excused from answering any question relevant to the matter in issue in any cause upon the ground that the answer to such question would or might criminate or tend to criminate him, or that it would or might expose, or tend to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture Provided that no answer which a witness shall be compelled to give shall, except for the purpose of punishing him for wilfully giving false evidence in such cause, be used as evidence against him in any criminal proceeding

32 No evidence is admissible to contradict the answers of a party or a witness as to matters affecting his character, but not otherwise bearing upon any question in issue in the cause Evidence of statements or conduct of a witness inconsistent with his evidence as to a question directly in issue in a cause is not excluded by this rule

Illustrations

(a) A claim against an underwriter is resisted on the ground of fraud The party claimant is asked whether in a former transaction he had not made a fraudulent claim He denies it Evidence is not admissible to show that he had made such fraudulent claim

(b) In a suit by A against B, a witness for A is asked whether he had not been dismissed from B's service for misconduct He denies it Evidence is tendered to contradict the witness's statement as to such dismissal The evidence is not admissible

26 A witness summoned to produce a document shall, if the same be in his custody possession or power, be bound to bring it into Court, notwithstanding any objection to the right of the party calling for it to compel its production or to its being read, or being put in as evidence or to the disclosure of its contents

The validity of any such objection made by the person bringing the document shall be determined by the Court and for the better determination thereof it shall be lawful for the Court to examine any admissible evidence which such

any person to interpret it under the obligation of an oath, and not to disclose its contents except to the Court, unless the Court shall decide that the document is to be given in evidence

27 No question shall be put to a married person which substantially amounts to imputing adultery to him or her

28 a husband or wife, when the knowledge of the fact inquired after is necessary to the determination of some question between the husband and wife according to the law to which they are subject

EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

29 The party at whose instance a witness is examined, may, with the permission of the Court, cross examine such witness to test his veracity, in the same manner as if the witness had not been called at his instance, and may be allowed to show that the witness has varied from a previous statement made by him

30 In order to repel an attack on the testimony of a witness, any former statement made by a witness when the fact took place shall be admissible in evidence dence that such deposition or statement was made, and that it was made at the time and place, and under the circumstances, if any, which shall be stated in the certificate or on the face of the deposition or statement

31 It shall not be lawful to ask a witness, in order to test his credit, any question the answer to which might criminate, or might tend directly or indirectly, to criminate him, or might expose or tend, directly or indirectly to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture of any kind. But a witness shall not be excused from answering any question relevant to the matter in issue in any cause upon the ground that the answer to such question would or might criminate, or tend to criminate him, or that it would or might expose, or tend to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture. Provided that no answer which a witness shall be compelled to give shall, except for the purpose of punishing him for wilfully giving false evidence in such cause, be used as evidence against him in any other cause

32 A witness who answers a question which is inconsistent with his previous statement, shall not be excluded by this rule of a party or a bearing upon any duct of a witness

in a cause

Illustrations.

(a) A claim against an underwriter is resisted on the ground of fraud. The party claimant is asked whether in a former transaction he had not made a fraudulent claim. He denies it. Evidence is not admissible to show that he had made such fraudulent claim.

(b) In a suit by A against B, a witness for A is asked whether he had not been dismissed from B's service for misconduct. He denies it. Evidence is not admissible to contradict the witness's statement as to such dismissal. The evidence is not admissible.

(c) In an action against A for goods sold to him by B, a witness for B deposes that he saw the goods sold and delivered. He is asked whether he has given a different account of the transaction. He denies it. Evidence is tendered to show that he had given such different account. This evidence is admissible. He is asked whether he dealt with B as the owner of the goods. He denies it. Evidence is tendered to show that he had so dealt with B. He is asked whether he had not given a false account of another transaction not in issue in the cause. He denies it. Evidence is tendered to show that he had given such false account. This evidence is not admissible.

(d) The witness is asked whether he had not received money or a promise of some favour from B to induce him to give his evidence. He denies it. Evidence is tendered to show that he had received such money or promise. This evidence is admissible.

33 A witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in the cause with respect to the subject matter of the case, but if it is intended to contradict such witness, before such contradicting proof can be given, he must be called to more parts of the writing which are to be used for the purpose of so contradicting him. The Court may, however, at any time during the trial, require the production of the writing for its inspection, and may thereupon make such use of it for the purpose of the trial as may seem fit.

34 A witness may while under examination refer to any writing made by himself at the time of the transaction concerning which he is questioned or so soon afterwards that it may be reasonably presumed that the transaction was fresh in his memory, and he may for the like purpose refer to a writing made by any other person and read at the time of such transaction, or so soon afterwards that it may be reasonably presumed that the transaction was fresh in his memory. Such evidence may be given by the adverse witness upon it.

NUMBER OF WITNESSES

35 A Court if satisfied by the evidence given may in any case act on such evidence although there may be only the testimony of one witness. This rule is not rendered inapplicable by the circumstance that the testimony is given in a trial for giving false evidence, or for any other offence against the law.

TAKEN

(1) The law in any part of British India.

(2) All public Acts of the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and all local and personal Acts directed by Parliament to be judicially noticed;

(3) The names, titles and functions of the persons filling for the time being any police office in any part of India.

(4) All divisions of time, the geographical divisions of the world, the territories under the dominion of the British Crown, the commencement, continuation, and termination of hostilities between the British Crown and any other state and the existence, title and national flag of every sovereign or state.

of its own members, or assistants and of all Advocate is authorized by law to act before it

SOURCES OF INFORMATION TO WHICH COURTS MAY REFER

36 A Court may, in order to inform itself in respect of any of the matters mentioned in sections 34 and 37 of these Rules and also on matters of Public History, Literature, Science, or Art refer, for the purposes of evidence, to such consideration.

(Sd) ROMILLY (L. S.)
 (Sd.) EDWARD RYAN (I. S.)
 (Sd) ROBERT LOWE (L. S.)
 (Sd) ROBERT LUSH (L. S.)
 (Sd) JOHN M. MACLEOD (I. S.)
 (Sd.) W. M. JAMES (L. S.)

Date 1 this 3rd day of August 1864

ABSTRACTS of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament, 21 & 23 Vict. Cap. 67

The Council met at Simla on Wednesday, the 23rd October, 1863

PRESIDENT

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, presiding,
 His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, G. C. S. I., K. C. B.

The Hon'ble G. N. Taylor
 The Hon'ble H. S. Maine.
 The Hon'ble John Strachey

The Hon'ble Sir George Couper, Bart, C. B.

EVIDENCE BILL

The Hon'ble Mr. Maine moved for leave to introduce a Bill to define and amend the Law of Evidence. He said it would probably be sufficient to state that the Bill was no subject in which the Commission had received any suggestion. He said that the Commission had fully stated in the report which had been circulated to Hon'ble Members, the reasons for all the changes which the Bill proposed to introduce. If he got leave to introduce the Bill, he proposed to ask His Excellency the President to suspend the rules for the conduct of business, and on their suspension, to introduce the Bill with a view to its publication in the Gazette. There was no use in now dilating to any length on the technical subjects comprised in the Bill.

The motion was put and agreed to.
 The Hon'ble Mr. Maine then asked the President to suspend the Rules for the Conduct of Business.
 The President declared the Rules suspended.
 The Hon'ble Mr. Maine then introduced the Bill.

(Sd) WHITLEY STOKES,

Asst Secy to the Govt of India,
 Home Department (Legislative)

SIMLA,
 The 23rd October, 1864

ABSTRACT of Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the Provisions of the Act of Parliament, 21 & 23 Vict Cap 67.

The Council met at Government House on Friday, the 4th December, 1863

PRESENT

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, presiding

The Hon'ble G Noble Taylor
The Hon'ble H Summer Maine.
The Hon'ble John Strachey
The Hon'ble Colonel H W. Norman					Bahrampur
	c n.
The Hon'ble F R Cockerell				The Hon'ble Gordon E Forbes
				The Hon'ble D Cowie
				The Hon'ble M J Shaw Stewart.

The Hon'ble Shaw Stewart took the oath of allegiance and the oath that he would faithfully

those Courts did not, as a matter of fact, believe that it was their duty to administer the English law of evidence as modified by the Evidence Acts. In the course of the argument, it was argued by a barrister that when a case was argued by a barrister, the evidence was pressed on the Court, and the Court was to decide whether to accept or reject evidence.

It appeared to Mr. Maine, by less in admitting evidence which under strict rules of evidence, like a case, should be an exception to the substance of the evidence, than in averting the mind from the admission of evidence, and in conjecturing the derivation of what the evidence was. Another objection lay in the necessity which the Missouri Judges were thus placed under of depending upon English text-books. They were excellent text books of the English law of evidence, but their usefulness consisted more in refreshing knowledge which had been gained by forensic experience than in teaching knowledge. The commissioners would appear to be right in supposing that what was wanted for the greatest part of India was a liberalized version of the English law of evidence, enacted with authority and thus excluding caprice and superseding the use of text books by compactness and precision.

the law of evidence is a whole regarded by English lawyers as never come into existence administration, the separation of the Judge from the Jury. It consisted mainly of rules of exclusion, that is, of rules for keeping certain kinds of evidence out of sight of the Judge of fact. Such a system, Mr. Maine apprehended could be justified on two grounds. First of all, some evidence was so irrelevant that it was not worth the trouble of bringing it before the Court. Secondly, some evidence was so irrelevant that it was not worth the trouble of bringing it before the Court.

the law of evidence is a whole regarded by English lawyers as never come into existence administration, the separation of the Judge from the Jury. It consisted mainly of rules of exclusion, that is, of rules for keeping certain kinds of evidence out of sight of the Judge of fact. Such a system, Mr. Maine apprehended could be justified on two grounds. First of all, some evidence was so irrelevant that it was not worth the trouble of bringing it before the Court. Secondly, some evidence was so irrelevant that it was not worth the trouble of bringing it before the Court.

reject as absolutely inadmissible. But taking men, as you found them and taking the average of judicial ability, it was really true that some kind of evidence did produce an impression on the mind far deeper than was consistent with their real weight. The good sense to which the English law laid claim was evidenced by the tests which it laid down for distinguishing those kinds of evidence from those which remained. It would be presumptuous in Mr Maine to praise the Commissioners' proposals, but he ventured to say that in his humble opinion, they had wisely availed themselves of the results of English experience but had wisely modified those results upon two considerations, which they stated as follows —

'The English practice has been moulded in a great degree by our social and legal institutions and our forms of procedure; and much of it is inimitable.'

in some criminal cases to decide without a jury, there is greater danger of miscarriage from the mind of the Court being uninformed than from its being unduly influenced by the information laid before it."

Mr Maine had said that he would not comment on the details of the measure, but there was one point of detail which it was necessary to notice.

But another reason must probably have appeared to be Third Report on

stamp duty in legal instruments

penalty in case of infringement would be more conducive to the public interest. For the present we have thought it our best course to frame our rules irrespective of the stamp law.

Now from the judicial point of view, there is the course proposed. But when we consider the course proposed, we find that Mr Cockerell had had a vast mass of papers before him relating to the operation of the Stamp law. Mr Maine appealed to him whether the following was not a fair inference from those papers: If effect were given to the Commissioners' suggestion, the Government would alter the law on stamp duty.

Executive Government and Mr Maine had to state that that was the fact that the stamp duties on commercial instruments were easily levied, and did not press hardly on the people, the Government was not prepared to give up that portion of the public receipts.

—The Hon ble Mr
Hon ble Messrs Gordon

CALCUTTA,
The 4th December, 1868

WHITLEY STOKES
Asst Secy to the Govt of India
Home Department (Legislative)

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament, 21 & 25 Vict Cap 67

The council met at Simla on Tuesday, the 6th September, 1870

PRESENT

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India,
K P G C S I Presiding

His Excellency the Commander in Chief G C B G C S I

The Hon'ble John Strachey

The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple

K C S I

The Hon'ble J Fitzjames Stephen, Q C

The Hon'ble B H Ellis

Major General the Hon'ble H W Norman, C B

The Hon'ble P R Cockerell

His Highness the Hon'ble Surajmal Rajpal Hialistan Raja Rayandra Sri Maharaja Dhury Sri Ram Singh Bahadur of Jajpur G C S I

EVIDENCE BILL

The Hon'ble Mr Strachey has had the opportunity of saying a few words on a measure of the very highest importance. The Evidence Act was drafted by the Indian Law Commissioners, and sent out to this country two years ago. It was introduced by Mr Maine, referred to a Committee several of the members of which had now ceased to belong to the Council and published in the Gazette for general information. Objections of great weight had been taken to it by many of the most distinguished lawyers in India and no doubt, the subject was one which required the most careful handling. It was impossible to exaggerate the practical importance of the Bill as it would regulate the most important part of the procedure of every Court of Justice throughout the Empire. Such a measure would of course require most careful consideration.

state of great uncertainty. No one knew of Evidence did, and how far the consequence was that the subject of proof of this he (the mover) mentioned Woodman's Indian Digest, which contained notes of cases decided in about eight years the title Evidence filled no less than twenty three royal octavo pages in the Digest. There was the state of things for which a remedy. It was one which ought not to be permitted to continue.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council then adjourned to the 20th September, 1870

WHITLEY STOKES

Secretary to the Council of the Governor General
for making Laws and Regulations

SIMLA,

The 6th September, 1870

L E A -191

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament, 21 & 25 Vict Cap 67

The Council met at Government House on Friday, the 18th November, 1870

PRESENT

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, K I O, C S I, presiding
The Hon'ble John Strachey	Major General, the Hon'ble H W
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple	Norman, C B
The Hon'ble J Fitzjames Stephen, Q C	The Hon'ble D Cowie
The Hon'ble B H Ellis	The Hon'ble Francis Stewart Chapman
	The Hon'ble F R Cockerell

EVIDENCE AND INSOLVENCY BILLS

The Hon'ble Mr Stephen moved that the Hon'ble Mr Inglis be added to the Select Committee.

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 9th December, 1870

WHITLEY STOKES,

Secretary to the Government of India

CALCUTTA,

The 2nd December, 1870

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India, assembled for the purposes of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament, 24 & 25 Vict Cap 67

The Council met at Government House on Friday, the 9th December, 1870

PRESENT

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, K P O, C S I, presiding

The Hon'ble John Strachey	The Hon'ble Francis Stewart
The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, K C S I	Chapman
The Hon'ble J Fitzjames Stephen, Q C
The Hon'ble B H Ellis
Major Genl the Hon'ble W H Norman, C B

SUNDRY BILLS

The Hon'ble Mr Robinson be added

The motion was put and agreed to

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 16th December, 1870

WHITLEY STOKES
Secretary to the Govt of India

CALCUTTA,

The 9th December, 1870

APPENDIX B

DRAFT REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE

The Gazette of India, July 1, 1871, Part V, p 273

The following Draft Report of a Select Committee together with the Bill as settled by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of

India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 31st March, 1871—

From Officiating Under Secretary, Home Department, No 423, dated 23rd October 1869, and enclosures

From Assistant Secretary, Foreign Department, No 337, dated 12th December 1869, and enclosures

Remarks by the Hon'ble the Chief Justice of Bombay (no date)

Remarks by Hon'ble Justice Phear, dated 8th December, 1869

From Secretary to Chief Commissioner British Burma, No 525—1, dated 1st December 1868

From Assistant Secretary to Government of Bengal Legislative Department, No 37, dated 9th January 1869, and enclosure

From Deputy Judge Advocate General of the Army dated 26th January, 1869, and enclosures

From Officiating under Secretary Home Department, No 258 dated 17th February 1869, forwarding memorial from Mukats and Revenue Agents, Howrah, dated 4th February 1869

From Secretary to Indian Law Commissioners, dated 6th February, 1869

From Chief Secretary to Government Fort St George, No 120 dated 18th March 1869 and enclosures

From Secretary to Government of Bombay No 2971 dated 7th September 1869 and enclosures

From Secretary to Government of Bombay, No 3188 dated 24th September 1869 and enclosures

Fifth Report of Her Majesty's Law Commissioners on the Bill

From Officiating Inspector General of Police Punjab No 2637 dated the 28th September, 1870

From Secretary to Government of India Home Department, No 1892, dated 18th October 1870 forwarding letter from Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No 61, dated 10th August 1870, and enclosures

We the members of the Select Committee to which the Evidence Bill has been referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin

After a very careful consideration of the draft prepared by the Indian Law Commissioners we have arrived at the conclusion that it is not suited to the wants of this country

We have recorded in a separate report the grounds on which this conclusion is based. They are in a few words that the Commissioners' draft is not sufficiently elementary for the officers for whose use it is designed, and that it assumes an acquaintance on their part with the law of England, which can scarcely be expected from them. Our draft, however, though arranged on a different principle from theirs, embodies most of its provisions. In general it has been our object to reproduce the English Law of Evidence with certain modifications most of which have been suggested by the Commissioners though with some this is not the case

The English Law of Evidence appears to us to be totally destitute of arrangement particular out of the usual practice of the pleading and the habitual practice of the Courts of Common Law. For instance, the rule that evidence must be confined to point in issue is founded on the system of pleading. The rule that hearsay is no evidence is part of the practice of the Courts but the two sets of rules run into each other in such an irregular way as to produce between them a result which no one can possibly understand systematically unless he is both acquainted with the principles of a system of pleading which is being rapidly abolished, and with the everyday practice of the Common Laws of Courts, which can be acquired and understood only by those who habitually take part in it. This knowledge moreover, must be qualified by study of text books which are seldom systematically arranged.

Many other circumstances, to which we need not refer, have contributed largely to the general results, but we may state that "ancient documents" when tendered in support of ancient possession, form the third exception to the rule which excludes hearsay. The question is whether A is entitled to a fishery. He produces a royal grant of the fishery to his ancestor. This fact the law describes as a peculiar kind of hearsay admissible by special exception. Surely this is using language in a most uninstructional manner.

This being the case, we have discarded altogether the phraseology in which the English text writers usually express themselves, and have attempted first to ascertain, and then to arrange in their natural order the principles which underlie the numerous cases and fragmentary rules which they have collected together. The result is as follows—

Every judicial proceeding whatever has some right or liability. If the proceeding is for the punishment of the person, the object is to ascertain some right of property or of status, or the right to some form of relief.

Some facts are upon and arise out of facts, and some are not. Those which cannot be perceived by the senses, it is superfluous to give.

Some facts are fraud, good or bad, of facts.

Some facts are such that they can be directly perceived by the senses. A man can testify to the fact that, at a certain time, he saw a certain person. On the same grounds as that on which he can testify that at a certain time and place, he saw a particular man. He has, in each case, a present recollection of a past direct perception. Moreover it is equally necessary to ascertain facts of each class in judicial proceedings, and they must in each case be proved in one of two different ways.

Some facts are such that they can be proved by themselves, and some by inference from other facts. For example, if it is proved that A is the eldest son of B, there arises of necessity the inference that A is by the law of England the heir-at-law of B, and that he has such rights as that status involves. From the fact that A caused the death of B under certain circumstances and with a certain intent, there arises of necessity the inference that A is guilty of murder by the law for murder. In all cases, the facts in issue unless they are proved by themselves, must be proved by inference from other facts.

Some facts are such that they can be proved by themselves, and some by inference from other facts. For example, if it is proved that A is the eldest son of B, there arises of necessity the inference that A is by the law of England the heir-at-law of B, and that he has such rights as that status involves. From the fact that A caused the death of B under certain circumstances and with a certain intent, there arises of necessity the inference that A is guilty of murder by the law for murder. In all cases, the facts in issue unless they are proved by themselves, must be proved by inference from other facts.

Some facts are such that they can be proved by themselves, and some by inference from other facts. For example, if it is proved that A is the eldest son of B, there arises of necessity the inference that A is by the law of England the heir-at-law of B, and that he has such rights as that status involves. From the fact that A caused the death of B under certain circumstances and with a certain intent, there arises of necessity the inference that A is guilty of murder by the law for murder. In all cases, the facts in issue unless they are proved by themselves, must be proved by inference from other facts.

Some facts are such that they can be proved by themselves, and some by inference from other facts. For example, if it is proved that A is the eldest son of B, there arises of necessity the inference that A is by the law of England the heir-at-law of B, and that he has such rights as that status involves. From the fact that A caused the death of B under certain circumstances and with a certain intent, there arises of necessity the inference that A is guilty of murder by the law for murder. In all cases, the facts in issue unless they are proved by themselves, must be proved by inference from other facts.

Some facts are such that they can be proved by themselves, and some by inference from other facts. For example, if it is proved that A is the eldest son of B, there arises of necessity the inference that A is by the law of England the heir-at-law of B, and that he has such rights as that status involves. From the fact that A caused the death of B under certain circumstances and with a certain intent, there arises of necessity the inference that A is guilty of murder by the law for murder. In all cases, the facts in issue unless they are proved by themselves, must be proved by inference from other facts.

the production of the original when the writing of the letter is a crime, there can be no reason why it should be satisfied with a copy when the writing of the letter is a motive for a crime. In short, the way in which a fact should be proved depends on the nature of the fact, and not on the relation of the fact to the proceedings.

The instrument by which the Court is convinced of a fact is evidence. It is often classified as being either direct or circumstantial. We have not adopted this classification.

If a fact is established by direct evidence, evidence is classified, not as being direct or circumstantial, but as being used for writing or for proof.

but as being used for writing or for proof which a fact must be proved depends on the nature of it. Evidence, therefore, should be defined, not with reference to the nature of the fact which it is to prove, but as being used for writing or for proof.

the phrase is thus used, the word clumsy mode of expression, which means either

(1) Words spoken or things produced in order to convince the Court of the existence of facts, or

(2) facts of which the Court is so convinced and which suggest some inference as to other facts.

We use the word 'evidence' in the first of these senses only and so used it may be reduced to three heads—(1) oral evidence, (2) documentary evidence; (3) material evidence.

Finally the evidence by which facts are to be proved must be brought to the notice of the Court and submitted to its judgment and the Court must form its own opinion.

to us to supply the ground work for a subject as follows —

issue

to their nature by oral, documentary or

The production of evidence

V Procedure

We have accordingly distributed the subject under these heads, in the manner which we now proceed to describe somewhat more fully.

1—PRELIMINARY

Under this head we have defined "fact" "facts in issue", "collateral facts", "document" "evidence" "proof" and "proved", "necessary inference" and "presume". We have also laid down in general terms the duty of the Court. Of our definitions of "fact" "facts in issue" "collateral facts", and "evidence", we need say no more than that they are framed in accordance with the principles already stated. We may however, shortly illustrate the effect of the definition of evidence.

It will make perfect sense the words as used in English of circumstantial evidence with thus. The question he had a motive displayed by statement of his feet, that he was a crime shows foot marks which correspond with it and that he wrote a letter indicating his guilt. On turning to Chapter II, it will be found that all these are relevant facts, either as motive, incident of facts in issue, effects

3. Many other circumstances to which we need not refer, have contributed largely to the general results but we may illustrate the extreme intricacy of the law and the total absence of anything like a system which pervades every part of it by a single instance. In Mr Pitt Taylor's work on evidence it is stated that ancient documents when tendered in support of ancient possession form the third exception to the rule which excludes hearsay. The question is whether A is entitled to a fishery. He produces a royal grant of the fishery to his ancestor. This fact the law describes as a peculiar kind of hearsay, inadmissible by special exception. Surely this is using language in a most unconstructive manner.

This being the case, we have discarded altogether the phraseology in which the English text writers usually express themselves and have attempted first to ascertain, and then to arrange in their natural order the principles which underlie the numerous cases and fragmentary rules which they have collected together.

Every
some right
the liability
the object is to ascertain some right of property or of status or the right of certaining of
to ascertain ling is civil or the right of some form of relief

upon and arise out of facts and and those which cannot be perceived ved by the senses it is superfluous be perceived by the sense intention fraud good faith and knowledge may be given as examples. But each class of facts has in common one element which entitles them to the name of facts—they can be directly perceived either with or without the intervention of the senses. A man can testify to the fact that at a certain time he had a certain intention on the same grounds as that on which he can testify that at a certain time and place, he saw a particular man. He has in each case, present recollection of a past direct perception. Moreover it is equally necessary to ascertain facts of each class in judicial proceedings, and they must in most cases be ascertained in precisely the same way.

Facts may be related to rights and liabilities in one of two different ways.
1. They may by themselves or in connection with other facts constitute such a state of things that the existence of the disputed right or liability would be a legal inference from them. From the fact that A is the eldest son of B, there arises of necessity the inference that A is by the law of England the heir at law of B, and that he has such rights as that status involves. From the fact that A caused the death of B under certain circumstances and with a certain intention or knowledge there arises of necessity the inference that A murdered B and is liable to the punishment provided by the law for murder.

Facts thus related to a proceeding may be called facts in issue unless indeed their existence is undisputed.

2. Facts which are not themselves in issue in the sense above explained may affect the probability of the existence of facts in issue and these may be called collateral facts.

It appears to us that these two classes comprised all the facts with which it can in any event be necessary for Courts of justice to concern themselves so that this classification exhausts all facts considered in their relation to the proceeding in which they are to be proved.

This introduces the question of proof. It is obvious that whether an alleged fact is a fact in issue, or a collateral fact the Court can draw no inference from its existence till it believes it to exist, and it is also obvious that the belief of the Court in the existence of a given fact ought to proceed upon grounds altogether independent of the relation of the fact to the object and nature of the proceedings in which its existence is to be determined. The question is whether A wrote a letter. The letter may have contained the terms of a contract. It may have been a libel. It may have constituted the motive for the commission of a crime by B. It may supply proof of an alibi in favour of A. It may be an admission or a confession of a crime, but whatever may be the relation of the fact to the proceeding if a Court cannot act upon it unless it believes that A did write the letter and that belief must obviously be produced, in each of the cases mentioned by the same or similar means. If for instance, the Court required

the production of the original when the writing of the letter is a crime there can be no reason why it should be satisfied with a copy when the writing of the letter is a motive for a crime. In short, the way in which a fact should be proved depends on the nature of the fact, and not on the relation of the fact to the proceedings.

The instrument by which the Court is convinced of a fact is evidence. It is often classified as being either direct or circumstantial. We have not adopted this classification.

It is in issue whereas it is classified not use to which it is put, as if paper were to be defined not by reference to its component elements but as being used for writing or for printing. We have shown that the mode in which a fact must be proved depends on its nature and not on the use to be made of it. Evidence, therefore, should be defined not with reference to the use to which it is put, but to its own nature.

Evidence is a statement of fact, or something from which facts in issue are to be inferred. If the phrase is thus used the word evidence, in the two phrases (direct 'evidence' and circumstantial evidence opposed to each other) has two different meanings. In the first, it means testimony as to the facts in issue, and in the second, it means a statement of fact from which facts in issue are to be inferred.

The word evidence is a most clumsy mode of expression, but it shows the ambiguity of the word 'evidence' which means either

(1) Words spoken or things produced in order to convince the Court of the existence of facts, or

(2) facts of which the Court is so convinced and which suggest some inference as to other facts.

We use the word 'evidence' in the first of these senses only and so used it may be reduced to three heads—(1) oral evidence, (2) documentary evidence, (3) material evidence.

Finally the evidence by which facts are to be proved must be brought to the notice of the Court and submitted to its judgment and the Court must form its judgment respecting them.

These general considerations appear to us to supply the ground work for a systematic and complete distribution of the subject as follows—

- I Preliminary
- II The relevancy of facts to the issue
- III The proof of facts according to their nature by oral documentary or material evidence
- IV The production of evidence
- V Procedure

We have accordingly distributed the subject under these heads in the manner which we now proceed to describe somewhat more fully.

1—PRELIMINARY

Under a document 'pre-emptive' of the principle of the definition of evidence. It will make perfect sense as used in English of circumstantial evidence with this. The question is whether a motive disclosed by statement of his own that he was in possession and that he wrote a letter it will be found that facts in issue, effects collateral facts' inference' and of the Court 'oral facts' and accordance with state the effect of facts in issue, or conduct influenced by facts in issue. On turning to Chapter III, it will be seen how each of these facts must be proved, namely, the statements displaying motive by the direct oral evidence of some one who says he heard them; the foot marks, by the direct oral evidence of some one who says he saw them, the possession of the property by the production of the property in Court, and by the direct oral evidence of some one who had seen it in the prisoner's possession and the letter, by the production of the letter itself, or secondary evidence of it, if the case allows secondary evidence.

So the phrase "hearsay" evidence, which, as the commissioners observe is used by English writers in so vague and unsatisfactory a manner, finds no place in our draft, and in connection with it corresponds on the w law in what cases the facts shall and in what cases they shall not be themselves relevant, and Chapter V on proof by oral evidence, provides that oral evidence, shall in all cases be direct, on whatever ground the fact which it is to establish may be relevant to the issue, that is to say, if the fact is one which could be seen, it must be established by a witness who says he saw it, if it could be heard by a witness who says he heard it.

the other provisions

So our definition does away with a confusion which arises out of the double meaning of the word evidence in the phrases "primary" and "secondary" evidence. "Primary evidence" sometimes means a relevant fact, and at other times the proof of a document by its production as opposed to proof by a copy. In our draft "primary", and "secondary" are distinctly defined, and confined to evidence in each case means words spoken or written in the Court.

for the words "conclusive evidence" the phrase "necessary inference". The phrase "conclusive evidence" is not open to objection on the ground of obscurity or ambiguity, but the word "evidence" in it means not what we understood by evidence, but a fact established by evidence from which a particular inference necessarily follows. Our phrase therefore, harmonises with the rest of our draft whereas "conclusive evidence" would not.

and "moral certainty" require some coordinate to that of "proved" which is that is to say, when the Court after the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it exists.

This degree of probability we describe as "moral certainty", and we provide that such a degree of probability is usually employed by English judges in leaving questions of fact to the jury.

state, without a prolonged abstract discussion, which would be out of place in illustrations in offence circumstances. We have in this country more than in any other it is absolutely necessary to leave to judges a wide discretion as to the risk of error which they choose to incur in coming to a decision, and that this is a matter of prudence and practice, as to which rules ought to be laid down, rather with a view of guiding, than with a view of fettering discretion.

The last provision, in the preliminary part, to which we would call attention, defines in very general terms the duty of the Court in deciding questions of fact. Its generality appeared to us to render the preliminary rather than the concluding chapter, the proper place for it. This section declares that the duty of the Court is to determine question of fact by drawing inferences—

- (1) from the evidence given to the facts alleged to exist,
- (2) from facts proved to facts not proved,
- (3) from the absence of evidence which might have been given,
- (4) from the admissions and conduct of the parties, and generally from the circumstances.

It is to be observed that the subject-matter of the inference is not the fact itself, but the inference which it is used, in the for inference, whereas inference whatever is useful inference that the facts is very often the most or other of the different cases which we have stated is the great duty of the Judge in every case whatever, and we have thought it desirable to point this out in the plainest and broadest way.

We have added two qualifications only to this general rule (1) that, when the law declares an inference to be necessary, the Court shall draw it, and shall not allow its truth to be contradicted, (2) that, when the law directs the Court to presume a fact, it shall infer its existence till the contrary appears. We have treated in detail of necessary inference and presumptions in other parts of the Bill.

II THE RELEVANCY OF FACTS

We have already pointed out the place which in our opinion, belongs to this subject in the law of evidence. The question, what facts you may prove obviously lies at the answer is given to the question. The answer to the question is that exceptions which are made by English text which to the law of evidence is no evidence and that the exceptions are to be made by a comparison of the facts with the facts. We have formed a collection of positive rules as to the relevancy of facts to the issue, which will admit every fact which a rational man could wish to have before him in investigating any question of fact.

These rules declare to be relevant—

- (1) all facts in issue,
- (2) all collateral facts, which
 - (a) form part of the same transaction,
 - (b) are the immediate occasion, cause or effect of fact in issue,
 - (c) show motive, preparation, or conduct affected by a fact in issue,
 - (d) are necessary to be known in order to introduce or explain relevant facts;
 - (e) are necessary to the establishment of a common design,
 - (f) are necessary to the establishment of a common design, or inconsistent with it, the other side, or render according to the definition of
- (g) affect the amount of damages in cases where damages are claimed,
- (h) show the origin or existence of a disputed right or custom,

- The remainder of the chapter throws into a positive shape what in English law forms the exceptions of the rule, excluding the various matters described as hearsay. They relate to—the conduct of the parties on previous occasions ,

the statement of the parties on previous occasions ,
previous judgments ,
statements of third persons ,
opinions of third persons

1 In reference to the conduct of the parties on previous occasions we embody in three sections the existing law of England as to evidence of character, with some modifications. We include, under the word 'character, both reputation and disposition, and we permit evidence to be given of previous convictions against a prisoner for the purpose of prejudicing him. We do not see why he should not be prejudiced by such evidence, if it is true.

2 Under the head of the statement of the parties on other occasions we deal with the question of admissions, as to which we have not materially altered the existing law.

3 Previous judgments appear to follow naturally upon previous state
Under this head we deal with the question of res judicata

We have not attempted to deal with the question of the bar of suits by previous judgment, rather than the question of procedure, never the Code of Civil and other kind dealt with, is substantial accordance with the principles of the law of England with the question of the relevancy of judgment between strangers. For the sake of simplicity, and in order to avoid the difficulty of defining or enumerating judgments in Kunya, the law of Sir Barnes Peacock.

4 alteration
persons n or if they have made one considerable truth making of knowledge We have given which is suggested by Mr Pitt o carefully examines the ship family and likely to be his section

not Some high a limits

statements explanatory of conduct, but as the conduct explained must be relevant and as no clear definition of relevancy is given by the law of England it is very difficult to say how far his rule extends.

The next exception refers to statements made by a person who is dead or cannot be found or produced without unreasonable delay or expense. We declare such statements to be relevant if they relate to the cause of the person's death or are made in the ordinary course of business or express an opinion as to the existence of the public right, or state the existence of any relationship as to which the party had special means of knowledge, or when they are made

...the party has special sitting or advantage, ... We have omitted the restrictions placed statements
be opposed id that they
at best to

statements in public or official previous judicial proceedings³

5 The cases in which the opinion of third persons are relevant are dealt with in sections forty four to fifty

They declare to be relevant the opinions of experts, opinion as to handwriting, opinion as to usage, and opinions as to relationship and the grounds of such opinions

This completes that part of the Bill which relates to the relevancy of facts. In the particulars stated and in some others of minor importance, which for the sake of brevity we have not noticed it modifies the law of England, but we believe that substantially, it represents that part of the law which is contained in (amongst others) the rules, together with the exceptions of the rules that evidence must be confined to points in issue, that the best evidence must be given, and that hearsay is no evidence, though these rules include other matters which we treat of under other heads

III—PROOF

The second Chapter having decided what facts are relevant we proceed to show how a relevant fact is to be proved

In the first place, the fact to be proved may be one of so much notoriety that the Courts will take judicial notice of it or it may be admitted by the parties. In either of these cases no evidence of its existence need be given. Chapter III which relates to judicial notice, disposes of this subject. It is taken in part from Act II of 1835, in part from the commissioners draft bill and in part from the law of England

If evidence has to be given of any fact that evidence must be either oral documentary, or material, and we proceed in the following chapters to deal with the peculiarities of each of these three kinds of evidence. There is however, one topic which applies to all of them of which we treat in Chapter IV. This is the distinction between primary and secondary evidence. As we have already shown that the law is not a legal way of recognizing the object of a document is and secondary evidence is the document or its copy

We next proceed to deal with the various kinds of evidence successively namely oral documentary and material. With regard to oral evidence, we provide, that it must in all cases whatever, whether it is primary or secondary and whether the fact to be proved is a fact in issue or collateral be direct. That is to say, if the fact to be proved is one that could be seen it must be proved by some one who says he saw it. If it could be heard by some one who says he heard it and so with the other senses. We also provide that if the fact to be proved is the opinion of a living and producible person, or the grounds on which such opinion is held it must be proved by the person who holds that opinion on those grounds

We have however, provided that if the fact to be proved is the opinion of an expert who cannot be called (which is the case in the majority of cases in this country) and if such opinion has been expressed in any published treatise it may be proved by the production of the treatise

This provision taken in connection with the provisions of relevancy contained, in Chapter II will we hope set the whole doctrine of hearsay in a perfectly plain light, for their joint effect is this—

- (1) the sayings and doings of third persons are, as a rule irrelevant, so that no proof of them can be admitted,
- (2) in some excepted cases they are relevant,
- (3) every act done or words spoken which is relevant on any ground must (if proved by oral evidence) be proved by some one who saw it with his own eyes or

of facts by document may be admitted, we may observe that we thought it right to do in almost every

any
have Chap
to it

3.

On writing the Commissioners' draft

IV THE PRODUCTION OF PROOF.

From the question of proof of facts, we pass to the question of the manner in which the proof is to be produced, and this we treat under the following heads —

$m = 1$ is of rank (Chapter X)

we lay down the broad rules—that the general burden of proof is on the party who, if no evidence at all were given, would fail, and that the burden of proving any particular fact is on the party who affirms it. It is a rule, and appears to be a precedent of the New York Code in laying down the rules, and agreeing with the Indian Law Commissioners in the opinion that it is better not to fetter the discretion of the Judges. We have, however, admitted one or two such presumptions. In the seven years' acting as partners.

as partners, . . . in an illustration, of a matter and we think somewhat several persons in
ule as to the burden
B must prove it. Thi

Legitimacy being a necessary inference we adopt one or two of the rules of

of witnesses, we have been careful e existing practice of the Courts, which e of Civil Procedure, is of necessity very loose and much guided by circumstances, but we have put into propositions the rules of English law as to the examination and cross examination of witnesses

We have also considered it necessary, having regard to the peculiar circumstances of this country, to put into the hands of the Judge an amount of discretion as to the admission of evidence which, if it exists by law, is at all events rarely or never exercised in England. We expressly empower him to ask any questions upon any facts, relevant or irrelevant, at any period of the trial, and to receive any answers which he thinks proper.

into the truth of the matter before them. They define simply and clearly the duties and the position of the Judges and those who practice before them. The English system under which the Bench and the Bar act together and play their respective parts independently, and the processes and organisation on which it rests, have no doubt great advantages, and will not for a very speaking, the great, and when advocates, and have to appear training as English

Judges, and are liable to be intimidated by advocates whose technical knowledge of law is greater than their own, and to whom the extremely intricate system of appeal which prevails in his country gives a power over the Judges unlike

Ap

In connection with this subject, we may refer to some provisions which we have inserted in order to prevent the abuse of the power of cross examination to credit. We believe the existence of that power to be essential to the administration of justice, and we believe it to be liable to great abuses. The need for the power and danger this country litigation are the great engines here than in England, prevent the use of the power of exposure as a means of gratifying malice. We have accordingly provided as follows:

Such questions may relate either to matters relevant to the case, or to matters not relevant to the case, except in so far as they affect the credit of the witness. His refusal to do so would in most cases, serve the purpose of discrediting him as well as an express admission that the imputation conveyed by the question was true.

If they relate to matters not relevant to the case, except in so far as they affect the credit of the witness, we think that the witness ought not to be compelled to answer. His refusal to do so would in most cases, serve the purpose of discrediting him as well as an express admission that the imputation conveyed by the question was true.

In order to protect witness against needless questions of this kind, we enact that any advocate who asks such questions without written instructions (which the Court may call upon him to produce, and may impound when produced) shall be liable to a fine not exceeding £100.

any such question shall be a question of publication of an imputation calculated to harm the reputation of the person mauer stated. Upon a trial for defamation it would of course be open to a person accused to show, either that the imputation was true or that it was for the public good that imputation should be made (Ex I, section 199, I P C), or that it was made in good faith for the protection of the interest of the person making it or of any other person (Ex 9). This is the only method which occurs to us of providing at once for the interests of a bona fide questioner and an innocent witness.

In the same spirit we have empowered the Court, in general terms, to forbid indecent and scandalous questions to married persons, to determine whether the facts in question are relevant to the case, or to matters a married person is entitled to be asked, or to matters a married person is entitled to be asked.

We prefer this general power to the sections drawn by the Commissioners, which forbid questions to married persons "which substantially amount to inquiring whether that person has had sexual intercourse forbidden to him or her by the law to which he is a subject" and "questions regarding the occurrence of Christian of bodily possibility to imagine him show that a married person or his wife. A woman whose motive is revenge for the discovery of adultery. A married man comes to prove adultery. In all cases it appears to us that as is referred to and wife, we think

B. general terms, than to lay down a positive rule which in possible cases might produce hardship

Finally was that of (Thomson XV) with the question of the improper admission at in regular appeals each Court successively hence it will have regard. As for special appeals

we provide that if evidence is said to be improperly admitted, the objection must be taken before

what its decisions

is improperly reject . . . to look into the fa is and deliver final judgment, or to remand the case

Finally, we recommend that the Draft Bill, together with the report, should be circulated for the opinion of the Local Governments.

J F STEPHEN
J STRACHEY
F S CHAPMAN
F R COCKFREIL
J. F D INGLIS
W ROBINSON

The 31st March, 1871

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament 24 & 25 Vict. Cap. 67

The Council met at Government House on Friday, the 31st March 1871

PRESENT

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, L. R. G. M. S. T. Presiding

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal

HIS EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF, C C N, C C S I

The Hon'ble John Strachey Colonel the Hon'ble R. Strachey, C^s

The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple The Hon'ble P S Chapman

Norman C B

INDIAN EVIDENCE BILL

The Honble Mr Stephen in presenting the Report of the Select Committee

Lordship and the Council on a purely legal subject imitation Act On this decision, however, I have to explain the position of a measure perhaps as important as any that has been passed of late years by the Indian Legislature in as much as, if it becomes law, it will affect the daily administration of both the Government of India and the Government of Madras. Moreover, the

Moreover, the general interest is less than in the problem of the power, imp-

the committee appended to their report, and which I am now to describe in a general way to your Lordship and the Council

"I will state, in the first place, the history of the measures down to the present time. So far back as the year 1868, the Indian Law Commissioners draft Evidence Act, which was sent out to this country on 11/1/1902 stated in the report

over that the principal that it was in several

that it was in several necessity under which judicial officers in this country are at present placed of acquainting themselves by means of English Law books with the English Law upon this subject hardly be intelligible to a considerable knowledge of draft was framed, which draft was framed, which opinions of the Local Governments and High Courts in the course of the summer, say, by next September, weighed, and the measure may be introduced. The report of the commission will be submitted to the Government.

The report of the com

the present occasion

Bill will begin by studying the report, which has been drawn up with great care, and which, as well as the Bill itself, forms a connected and systematic whole. The general object kept in view in framing the Bill has been to produce something from which a student might derive a clear, comprehensive, and distinct knowledge of the subject without unnecessary labour, but not of course, without that degree of careful and sustained attention which is necessary in order to master any important and intricate matter. It is by this standard that the committee in general and I in particular, as the member in charge of the Bill, desire that it may be tried.

to discuss the general questions connected with the subject and to mention a mitigate the necessity which

British India. It would be

British India. It would be the subject certainly is. To some extent—it is far from being clear to what extent—and in some parts of
 to be in force in British India continues to be so in practice. introduced.

introduce it so in practice, have been conscientious and an improvement of the existing legal system said for unaided mother wit and natural shrewdness, but a half and half system in which a vast body of half understood law, totally destitute of arrangement and of uncertain authority maintains a dead thing existence as a state of things which it is by no means easy to praise.

"Legislation being thus necessary, in what direction is Legislation to proceed? A gentleman, for whose opinion upon all subjects connected with Indian Law and Legislation, I, in con-respect, said to me the other day Bill would be very short one rules of evidence are hereby abo-vigorously expressed is really now it so plainly. There is, in sion the majority of Indian technicalities invented by law

3. general terms, than to lay down a positive rule which in possible cases might produce hardship

the question of the improper admission of regular appeals each Court successively will have regard. As for special appeals improperly admitted, the objection must be taken before the inferior Appellate Court, and the Court called upon to say what its decisions would be if the evidence objected to were rejected. If evidence is improperly rejected, we would permit the High Court either to look into the facts and deliver final judgment, or to remand the case.

Finally, we recommend that the Draft Bill, together with the report, should be circulated for the opinion of the Local Governments.

J F STEPHEN
J STRACHEY
F S CHAPMAN
F R COCKERELL
J F D INGLIS
W ROBINSON

The 31st March, 1871

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament 24 & 25 Vict Cap 67

The Council met at Government House on Friday, the 31st March, 1871

PRESIDENT.

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, R G V S, Presiding
His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, G C B, GCSI

The Hon'ble John Strachey, GCSI

The Hon'ble Sir Richard Temple, GCSI

The Hon'ble J Fitzjames Stephen, QC

The Hon'ble H H Ellis

Major General The Hon'ble H W Norman, CB

INDIAN EVIDENCE BILL

The Hon'ble Mr Stephen in presenting the Report of the Select Committee

ship and the Council purely legal subject of the Evidence Act. On this occasion, however, I have to explain the position of a measure perhaps as important as any that has been passed of late years by the Indian Legislature, in as much as, if it becomes law, it will affect the daily administration of both Civil and Criminal Procedure throughout the whole country. Moreover, the subject matter to which the Bill refers is one of deep and wide general interest for a law of Evidence properly constructed would be nothing less than an application of the practical experience acquired in Courts of Law, to the problem of enquiring into the truth as to controverted questions of fact, however imperfectly it may have been attained.

This is the object which has been kept in view in framing the Bill which the committee appended to their report, and which I am now to describe in a general way to your Lordship and the Council.

"I will state, in the first place, the history of the measures down to the present time. So far back as the year 1868, the Indian Law Commissioners herl effect of these rules? I may perhaps be permitted to answer this by referring to a book which I published in 1863 on the Criminal Laws of England, and which contains, amongst other things, an analysis of several celebrated trials, English and French. One object of that analysis was to contrast the effect of the presence and absence of rules of evidence; and I think that any one who would take the trouble to compare those trials together carefully, would agree with me in the conclusion, that the practical effect of the English rules of evidence is the floods of the strong Criminal

evidence are far less strictly enforced, and less clearly understood. An ordinary Criminal Court never gets very far from the point, but a Court must continually wander into questions far remote from those which it was assembled to try. Nothing less than

as it is itself
but it
which stated affirm letters
nature

he does not - - - - - ning of the authority - - - - - roccates, who have - - - - - power to pervert the administration of justice to the basest purposes, and to inflict immense injury on every class connected with it, directly or remotely, that might, or often would, in such hands, be made the excuse for tearing open old quarrels and - - - - -

long - - - - -
in a - - - - - referring against
and of country. In certain parts of the country, it was a point of honour for the friends of the putative father and of the mother respectively, to go to session to swear for him or her, as they used to say. No one who did not take part in such cases could imagine the strange ramifications of falsehood and contradiction, into which a hotly contested case of this kind would spread, or the number of imputations thrown on the honesty and chasity of the different witnesses, male and female. If it had not been for the rules of evidence the reputations of half the population of the village would have been torn in pieces. The rules of evidence kept matters to a point, and so minimized the evil, but the parties, the witnesses and the attorneys, all appeared to me to be one more anxious than another, to fight the matter stripped off the back of every man, way brought into the discussion.

aggravated from. In the work to which I have already referred, will be found an account of a - - - - - for murder. If disposed of under the - - - - - we taken more than a day or - - - - - for, I think, about three weeks, a - - - - - witness, in particular, was discovered, to have seduced a girl seven years before, and letters from her to him were read to throw light on his character. He naturally wished to give his own account of the transactions but was stopped on the ground that a line must be drawn some where, and that the Court chose to draw it between the point at which an irrelevant slur had been thrown on his character, and the point at which, had he been permitted to do so, he might have given an equally irrelevant explanation.

gathering purposes, and of no real value in the investigation of truth. I cannot admit that this impression is in any degree correct. I believe that rules of evidence are of very great value in all enquiries into matters of fact, and in it is practically impossible because the necessity for and in the fact In rude times

to matters of fact was regarded as so needless and unimportant, in its rude arbitrary substitutes for any sort of rational procedure were provided, in the shape of ordeals and judicial combats. When people began to obtain glimpses of the true methods of investigation they seem to have in our days fall within the scope of The delighted wonder which was apropos of the story of Suramsh and the wonders, at what a friend of mine used to call that very feeble cross examination of Daniel's about the trees, is a good instance of this. At a later period, arbitrary rules of evidence began to be formed. Such a fact must be proved by two eye-witnesses, such another by four, such another by seven. To say nothing of European systems in which such rules were in force the Hedaya is full of them. These rules were never introduced in their full force into E rather which grew up by degrees character. Part of it consisted of it be incompetent. Part was intimate special pleading, which was so conf facts upon which the parties differed. Parts were the result of the practice by far the Most of the which at experience

- (1)
- (2)
- (3)

first is that they but, when properly
to all who have to take part in the administration of justice

"The second is that I believe that no body of rules upon any important subject were ever expressed so loosely, in such an intricate manner, or at such intolerable length

It is necessary to prove the first of these propositions in order to justify the recommendations of the committee that the substance of the rules in question should be introduced in the form of express law into this country. It is necessary to prove the second proposition in order to justify the attempt made in the Bill to reduce the rules to order and system. For it then, as to the proposition that the rules in question are substantially sound and do far more they are not, understood and acted upon. As a preliminary remark, I ought to observe that the knowledge of these rules possessed by English lawyers, is derived far more from the daily practice in the Courts, than from theoretical study. Many English eminently sagacious

then is the prac

trial effect of these rules? I may perhaps be permitted to answer this by referring to a book which I published in 1863 on the Criminal Laws of England, and which contain English and I the presence would take the with me in dence in those time to consol able person The French si the want of them, than confuse and bewilder an ordinary Court of

in which the rules of evidence are far less strictly enforced, and less clearly understood. An ordinary Criminal Court never gets very far from the point, but a Court-martial continually wanders into questions far remote from those which it was assembled to try. Nothas it
well
but while
state affirmed, and made letters of the alphabet nature, to know how he does not, an incalculable waste of time and energy, and a great weakening of the authority of his Court, is sure to follow. Active and zealous Advocates, who have no rules of evidence to restrain their zeal, would have it in their power to pervert the administration of justice to the basest purposes, and to inflict immense injury on every class connected with it, directly or remotely, that might, or often would, in such hands, be made the excuse for tearing open old quarrels and reviving questions laid at rest and giving fresh animus to scandals.

longer
r
a country. In certain parts of the country, it was a point of honour for the friends of the putative father and of the mother respectively to go to session to swear for or against a man or woman. No one who did not take part in issues. I may be excused for illustration of this. Apperils lucis an amount of perjury d be difficult to exceed in any and female. If it

the population of the evidence kept matters to a point, and so much more anxious
the witnesses and the attorneys, all appeared to me to be one more anxious than another, to fight the matter out till the very last rag of character had been stripped off the back of every man, woman, and child, whose name was in any way brought into the discussion. The French Courts display this evil, in an aggravated form. In the work to which I have already referred will be found an account of the trial of a monk named Leotade for murder. If disposed of under the English rules of evidence, it could hardly have taken more than a day or two at the most. In the French Court, it lasted for, I think, about three weeks, and branched was discovered to I to him were read to I his own account of
must be drawn some
at which an irrelevant at which, had he been permitted to do
irrelevant explanation

"It is not however merely for the purpose of confining judicial proceedings within reasonable limits that rules of evidence are useful. They are also of pre eminent importance for the purpose of protecting and guiding the Judge in the discharge of his duty. There is a sense in which it may be said with perfect truth that even legislative power is unequal to the task of abolishing rules of discretion

"It may be that some persons would like this policy, but I suppose it is one which I need not discuss.

'So far I have considered the rules of evidence merely as they conduce to the important practical objects of keeping proceedings to the point and of protecting and supporting the Judges. I must now say a few words on their value, as furnishing the Judge with solid tests of truth. I fully admit that their value is not so great as it is sometimes represented, but I think they have a real value. There are two great problems on which the rules of evidence throw no light at all and on which they are not intended to throw any light, and it must be admitted that those problems are by far the most important of any, which a Judge has to solve. No rule of evidence that ever was framed, will assist a Judge in the very smallest degree in determining the master question of the whole subject—whether and how far, he ought to believe what the witnesses say? Again rules of evidence are not, and do not profess to be rules of logic. They throw no light at all on a further question of equal importance to the one just stated from the facts in which, after considering

In every judicial proceeding whatever

if it is true, what then—ought to be both that them and ch better

evidence

is perfectly familiar: I think that a more or less of this, coupled with impatience of the exaggerated pretensions which have sometimes been made on behalf of the rules of evidence, are the principal reasons for the distrust and dislike with which they are at times regarded. This dislike I think is merely a particular instance of the vulgar error, which in so many instances leads people to deprecate art in comparison with nature as if there were an opposition between the two, and as if art in all cases did not presuppose and depend upon nature. The best shoes in the world will not make a man walk, nor will the best glass make him see, and in just the same way, the best rules of evidence will not supply the place of natural sagacity, or of a taste for and training in logic, but it no guides to truth than that shoes no and to the eyes. The real use consists in the fact that they sug experience as to two great facts—the relevancy of facts to the question to be decided by the Court and the sort of evidence by which particular facts ought to be proved. They may in the broadest and most popular form be stated thus:—If you want to arrive at the truth as to any matter of fact of serious importance observe the following maxims—'First, if your belief in the principal fact which you wish to ascertain is to be, after all, an inference from the other facts let those facts at all events, be closely connected with the principal fact in some one of certain specific modes. Secondly, never believe

in any fact whatever, whether it is the fact which you principally wish to determine, or whether it is a fact from which you propose to infer the existence of the principal fact, until you have before you the best evidence that is to be had; that is to say, if the fact is a thing done, have before you some one who saw it done with his own eyes; if it was a thing said, have before you some one who heard it said with his own ears; if it was a written paper, have the paper before you and read it for yourself

"This exception—qualifications and explanations apart—is the true essence of the rules of evidence, and I think that no one will deny, either that these rules are in themselves eminently wise, or that they are by no means so obvious and self-evident that the mere unassisted natural sagacity of judicial officers of every grade can be trusted to grasp their full meaning, and to apply them to the practical questions which arise in the administration of justice, with no assistance from any express law. I do not wish to exaggerate, but I must add that I attach considerable moral and speculative value to these rules. If they are firmly grasped by Courts of Justice, and rigidly insisted upon in all practical matters which come before the Courts, they will gradually work their way amongst the people at large, and furnish them with tests by which to distinguish between credulity and rational belief, upon a great variety of matters which will be of vast importance. They are calculated to effect, and rigorously enforcing them, experience will be continually adding to the proper proof of their value.

So far, I have tried to prove the proposition that the English rules of evidence are of real solid value and that they are not a mere collection of arbitrary subtleties which shackle, instead of liberate, the mind. Now to the next proposition, which is so confused, intricate, and lengthy, that it is almost impossible to learn their true meaning otherwise than by a careful and systematic distribution of the rules. This may be altogether avoided by a careful and systematic distribution of the proof of this proposition, if indeed it is disputed, I can only refer in general to the English text books on the subject. They form a mass of confusion which no one can understand until he has read the whole of them. The intention of the different rules of which they consist is often incoherent illustrations. I am familiar with the industrious, and in many cases the illustrations. They, like all other hand books, are mere collections of purposes, and are mere collections of generally relating to some very minute point. They should be arranged, rather with reference to vague catch words, with which the ears of lawyers are familiar, than with reference to theoretical principles which it has never been worth any lawyer's while to investigate.

"The cc
other branche extraordinary
very greatest practical sagacity with an absence of soundness, still worse, with the presence of unsound theory No one who has not seen it could be so stupid as to suppose that the saying of a clever man may become when it which does not fit it.
and is of my meaning The expression 'hearsay is no evidence' early obtained considerable currency in the English Courts In a general way its meaning is clear enough, and, but what is more truthfully and y, and
I mean
I have scult to ore, in
'again,
his own
ma, we taken to mean that which a person "the word, and it is organs of perception, but this is not the natural sense of the meaning.
almost impossible in practice to divest a word of its natural meaning.

'The word "evidence" is also exceedingly ambiguous. It may mean that which a witness says in Court. It may mean the fact to which he testifies regarded as a ground work for further inference. Notwithstanding this the phrase 'hearsay is no evidence,' being emphatic and easy to recollect stuck in the ears and in the minds of lawyers and has been taken by many text writers as the principle on which their statement of the most important branch of the law should be arranged. They accordingly took to describing as hearsay, every fact of which evidence was by law excluded, in short they turned 'hearsay is no evidence' into 'that which is not evidence is hearsay.' They did not however, do this expressly. They did it by describing as exceptions to the rule excluding hearsay, all cases in which evidence was

and he
to C. Now as D and E are not parties to the suit between A and B, unless A can get of his own knowledge, know anything of the transaction, lawyers call the deeds between D and E 'hearsay,' and they say that the rule which permits such deeds to be proved is an exception to the rule which excludes hearsay. It is a mistaken, called such evidence written hearsay. Lawyers in general, to the abuse of language for the sake of momentary convenience, that it probably never struck him that this was a contradiction in terms. I think however that it is hard to expect people to understand bear a name and follow out in language in such a peculiar manner, to talk of hearing a document, is

I now turn to the ambiguity of the word 'evidence,' to which I have already referred. As I have just said, evidence sometimes means a fact which suggests an inference. For instance, it is a fact which suggests an inference of stolen goods is evidence of theft, that is, the the inference of theft. At other times and I means what a witness actually says in Court, or that which he produces for instance we say the evidence which he gave was true. I might occupy, I will not say the attention, but the time, of Your Lordship and the Council for hours if I were to attempt to describe the amount of confusion and obscurity which the neglect of this simple and obvious distinction has thrown over the whole subject. I will content myself with observing that it produces the effect of giving a double meaning to every expression into which the word 'evidence,' is introduced. Circumstantial evidence, hearsay evidence, direct evidence, 'primary evidence' but evidence, have each two sets of meanings, and the result is, that it is almost impossible to arrive at a clear and comprehensive knowledge of the whole subject or to see how its various parts are related to each other without an amount of study, thought and practical acquaintance with the actual working of the rules of evidence which few people are in a position to bestow upon the subject.

'I may appear to be detaining the Council unduly upon merely verbal questions but I think that it is a common fault to under rate the importance of accurate language particularly in regard to the fundamental terms of any particular branch of knowledge. In regard to law I have not the least doubt that a very large proportion of the intricacy and difficulty which attach to it is due to the fact, that proper pains have never been bestowed on the definition of its fundamental terms. What can we expect to be the result of the want of our meaning when we speak of evidence?'

mu mu mu iple I believe
e term 'law' was defined by the late Mr Austin, the study of law would become comparatively easy, and in many cases attractive for its own sake, that its bulk might be diminished to a degree of which people in general have hardly any conception, that the expense of its administration, might be greatly diminished and that comparative certainty might do away with a very large amount of needless and harassing litigation

"I shall now proceed to describe shortly the principles on which the first place we thought it terms of the subject should 'evidence', 'proof', 'proved' report. It seemed to us that the remainder of the subject would fall under the following general heads —

- 1 The relevancy of fact to the issues to be proved
- 2 The proof of facts, according to their nature by oral, documentary, or material evidence
- 3 The production of evidence in Court
- 4 The duties of the Court, and the effect of mistaken admission or rejection of evidence

"These heads would we think be found to embrace and to arrange in their natural order all the subjects treated of by English text writers and Judges, under the general head of the law of evidence. I will say a few words on their relation to each other, and on each of them in turn

"The main feature of the Bill consists in the distinction drawn by it between the relevancy of facts and the mode of proving relevant facts. The neglect of this distinction by English text writers, no doubt arises from the ambiguity in the word 'evidence' to which I have already referred and is the main cause of the extreme difficulty of understanding the English Law of Evidence systematically. I will shortly illustrate my meaning. A says Z committed murder. First of all this is a fact—something which could be directly perceived by the sense of hearing and distinctly remembered afterwards. Now, whether this fact is or is not relevant in a particular case depends upon a variety of circumstances. If the question is whether A was guilty of defaming Z by accusing him of murder? Or where Z had a motive for assaulting A because A said that he had committed murder or if Z is accused of murder and the object is to show that when A charged him with it he behaved as if he were guilty and in many other instances which might be put the fact that A spoke those words is clearly relevant. But if the question is whether Z actually did commit murder the fact that A thought so or said so generally speaking is not relevant. Supposing however that the fact is relevant on some one of the grounds just mentioned or on any other ground whatever be the ground on which the words are relevant to the matter under inquiry it is obvious that the words themselves ought to be satisfactorily proved and the rule of English law—and we think it is a wise rule—is that they must be proved in their own ears under the no evidence meaning by it that certain classes of facts called hearsay are to be treated as irrelevant to the determination of particular questions and it is necessary to look through a long list of exceptions to that rule in order to see whether, in a particular case a statement may or may not be proved. If you find that it can be proved the question is how can it be proved? and you propose to prove it by a witness who says that B told him that he heard A say so. Again you are told hearsay is no evidence, but this time this expression means not that the fact is irrelevant but that the testimony by which it is proposed to prove the fact is improper. One extreme inconvenience of this is that the most important part of the English Law of Evidence is thrown into the most intricate and inconvenient of all possible forms that of a very wide negative of most uncertain meaning qualified by a long string of exceedingly intricate exceptions.

"No one who has not gone through the process of learning the law by mere rule of thumb practice can imagine the degree of needless obscurity and difficulty upon this point, of the existence of which he becomes gradually conscious. It would be perfectly fair to say to almost any English text-writer 'You tell me at enormous length, what is not evidence, but you do not where tell me what is evidence, except indeed in large compilations, which point out what has to be proved upon particular issues, and which it is as impossible to read or remember, as it is to read or remember any other mere works of reference".

"I hope that we have been able to avoid this, and that the second chapter of the Bill will be found to state specifically, and in a positive form, what sorts of facts are relevant as being sufficiently connected with the facts in issue to afford grounds for an inference as to their existence or non existence. I will not weary the Council by specifying those rules, and I will content myself by referring to the Bill and to the report. But I may shortly illustrate them by reference to a passage from a modern historian, which will relieve the dullness of a very technical speech. The passage to which I refer is a short summary, by Mr Froude of the grounds on which he believes that Mary, Queen of Scots, murdered her husband.

"As Mr Froude was not a lawyer he certainly wrote, what I am about to read, without reference to the rules of evidence. I think the fact that he did, in fact, unconsciously observe them, illustrate very strongly the truth of my assertion, that they are nothing more than the result of experience and practical sagacity, thrown into a categorical shape. I need hardly say that I use the passage merely as an illustration and without any notion of adopting Mr Froude's opinions or asserting the truth of his facts. I am concerned merely with their relevance.

"She (Mary) was known to have been weary of her husband, and anxious to get rid of him.

"(By our draft, facts which show motive are relevant)

'The difficulty and the means of disposing of him had been discussed in her presence, and she had herself suggested to Sir James Balfour to kill him.

"(Facts which show preparation for a fact in issue, are relevant)"

"She brought him to the house where he was destroyed, she was with him two hours before his death.

"(Facts so connected with the facts in issue as to form part of the same transaction are relevant)

"And afterwards threw every difficulty in the way of any examination into the circumstances of his end."

"(Subsequent conduct, influenced by any fact in issue, is relevant)"

'The Earl of Bothwell was publicly accused of the murder.

'(Facts necessary to be known in order to introduce relevant facts, are relevant)

'She kept him close at her side, she would not allow him to be arrested, she went openly to Seton with him, before her widowhood was a fortnight old. When at last unwillingly, she consented to his trial. Edinburgh was occupied by his retainers. He presented himself at the Tolbooth surrounded by the Royal Guard, and the charge fell to the ground, because the Crown did not prosecute, and the Earl of Lennox had been prevented from appearing."

"(Subsequent conduct influenced by any fact in issue is relevant)"

"A few weeks later, she married Bothwell, though he had a wife already, and when her subjects rose in arms against her and took her prisoner, she refused to allow herself to be divorced from him."

'(Subsequent conduct \ Motive)"

which the Queen
I need not read
roduction, and to
to the subsequent

conduct meets the case of a person who destroys or conceals evidence."

'Finally Mr Froude observes. "In her own correspondence, though she denies the crime, there is nowhere the clear ring of innocence which makes its weight felt even when the evidence is weak which supports the words."

"The letters would be evidence under the section relating, to admissions, and Mr. Froude's remark is in the nature of a criticism on them by a prosecuting counsel).

"In English text books, so far as my experience goes, these rules and others of the same sort, are nowhere presented in a compact substantive form. They come in for the most part, as exceptions to the rule that evidence must be confined to the points in issue. In fact they can be learned only by the practice of the Courts though they are as natural and lax as any rules need be, if they are properly stated.

"From the rules which state what facts may be proved, we pass to those which prescribe technical rules of evidence. These rules are of a technical nature, and though, of course, numerous introductory rules are required to adopt for practice they are these:

"1. If a fact is proved by oral evidence, the oral evidence must be direct, that is to say, things seen must be deposed to by some one who says he saw them with his own eyes, things heard by some one who says he heard them with his own ears.

"2. Original documents must be produced or accounted for, before any other evidence can be given of their contents.

"3. When a contract has been reduced to writing it must not be varied by oral evidence.

"These rules, as I have said, are subject to certain exceptions, and require certain practical adjustments, but I do not think that any one who has had practical experience of the working of Courts of Justice will deny their substantial soundness, or indeed the absolute practical necessity for enforcing them.

"Passing over certain matters which are explained at length in the Bill and report, I come to two points to which the committee attach the greatest importance as having peculiar reference to the administration of justice in India. The first of these rules refers to the part taken by the Judge in the examination of witnesses; the second to the effect of the improper admission or rejection of evidence upon the proceedings in case of appeal.

"The first rule relates to the manner in which a well educated, educated man, who is not a prisoner, are at all times interested in arriving at the truth. I need not say that it is the duty of the Judge to put the question to the evidence put in to the matter. We do not interest in arriving at the truth, regarded mainly in the interest of the prisoner, are at all times interested in arriving at the truth.

"The second rule relates to the effect of the improper admission or rejection of evidence upon the proceedings in case of appeal. It is the duty of the Judge to put the question to the evidence put in to the matter. We do not interest in arriving at the truth, regarded mainly in the interest of the prisoner, are at all times interested in arriving at the truth.

and apathy in England

"With respect to the question of appeals, we have drawn a series of provisions, the object of which is to prevent mere mistakes in procedure from destroying the value of work properly done, as far as it goes. We have gone through the various cases in which, as appears to us, the question of the improper admission or rejection or omission of evidence can arise, and have provided that, whenever any Appellate Court discovers the occurrence of any mistake, it shall not reverse the decision of the inferior Court, but shall either strike out what is redundant, or supply what is defective, as the case may be and give judgment accordingly

I have addressed Your Lordship and the Council at great length, but not I think at greater length than the importance of the matter requires. I have only to add, that I propose to proceed with the Bill when the Government returns to Calcutta, and that I hope before that time, to receive the criticisms of the Local Governments upon the measure.

The council adjourned to Thursday, the 6th April, 1871

CALCUTTA,
The 31st March 1871

WHITELEY STOKES
Secy to the Govt of India

ABSTRACT of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament 24 & 25 Vict Cap 67

PRESENT

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India and presenting

The Hon'ble John Strachey		The Hon'ble J F D Inghish
The Hon'ble J Fitzjames Stephen QC		The Hon'ble W Robinson CSI
The Hon'ble B H Ellis		The Hon'ble F S Chapman
The Hon'ble F R Cockrell		The Hon'ble R Stewart

The Hon'ble J R Bullen Smith

SUNDRY BILLS

The Hon'ble Mr Stephen also moves that the Hon'ble Messrs Chapman Stewart and Bullen Smith, be added to Select Committees on the following Bills —

The next Bill, to which Mr Stephen had to refer, was the Evidence Bill. He need not say anything more about it than that it was under the consideration of the Committee. He however wished to make one or two remarks. In the first place, although the Bill had been sent for the opinion of the Local Governments some time in June last with a request that their opinion on the subject might be forwarded in the course of the autumn, many of the Local Governments had not yet sent in any opinions whatever on the subject. He earnestly hoped that these opinions might be received in order that they might be fully considered. Some memorial had been received on the subject from individuals, specially from certain members of the Bar. He did not wish to discuss them. But he wished to say that he thought that the opinion of some persons, that the Council in General and Mr Stephen in particular were perfectly unfounded

the President
of Mr Civil
wish to
had been said
ul attention in a
of making any attack upon the independence or position generally of the honourable profession in question

The Council adjourned to Friday the 15th December, 1871,

CALCUTTA
The 8th December, 1871

H S CUNNINGHAM,
Offg Secretary to the Council of the Governor General for making
Laws and Regulations

SECOND REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE

Vide the Gazette of India, February 17th 1872, Part V p 94

The following Bill was presented by them as proposed for the purpose of making L intituled

the

Petition from certain Barristers and Advocates of Bombay, dated the 8th August 1871

From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner of Coorg 3rd

No —, dated 4th October 4

1871, and enclosures

From certain pleaders of the High Court Bombay, dated 4th October 1871

From officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner of Coorg 400

No — dated 9th October 6

1871 and enclosures

From the Chief Secretary to Government of Fort Saint George No 166 dated 21st November 1871, and enclosures
From F J Ferguson Esq Barrister High Court Calcutta dated 8th December 1871 forwarding memorial from Barristers and Advocates High Court, Calcutta

From Secretary to Chief Commissioner Central Provinces No — dated 6th December 1871 and enclosures 299

From Officiating Secretary to Government of Bengal No 6326 J dated 13th December, 1871 and enclosures

Memorial from certain members of the Madras Bar, dated 16th December 1871

We the undersigned, the members of the — the Government of — purpose of which the have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin

1 We have made some alterations in the arrangement of the Bill

2 We have omitted the definitions of "proof" and "moral certainty" and the sections relating to inferences to be drawn by the Court as being suitable rather for a treatise than an Act

3 We have omitted the provisions relating to material evidence and have given a new and simpler definition of the difference between primary and secondary evidence

4 We — apply affidavit nor to proceedings in arbitration

5 As to the effect of an admission by one of several persons jointly tried for an time, and an admission is proved against one of them which affects others of the accused besides himself if may be taken into consideration by the Court against all the persons whom it affects

We — of oral by documents complete We reject, freed from 7 Exception was taken to the Bill in several quarters on the ground that it did not sufficiently dispose of the matter of presumptions. We have reconsidered this subject with attention and have provided for it as follows —

Some presumptions have the effect of laying the burden of proof on particular persons, in particular cases. These we have dealt with in sections 103 to 111 of the new Bill

— at the existence of one — This we have provided

We have substituted the term "conclusive proof" in these instances for that of "necessary inference," which was employed for the draft of the Bill.

3.

Other documents and evidence

re maxims by which the Court Theoretically they are regarded to say, as artificial rules which cally pres

ti gi li
w

is country and likely to produce have accordingly, by section mere presumptions of fact with

We have provided in the Chapter on the Burden of Proof that a Notification in the Gazette that a territory has been ceded to a Native State shall be conclusive proof of a valid cession at the date mentioned in the notification. The object of this section is to set at rest questions which, as we are informed, have arisen on this subject.

The subject of presumptions as to documents is a very special matter, and appears to us to belong to the subject of documentary evidence, under which head we have placed it in chapter V.

Lastly many subjects are treated by English writers under the head of presumptions which appear to us to belong rather to different branches of the law, is in reality presumptions as to the subject and

because many of them are fictitious

8. The chapter on oaths has been omitted, as they form the subject of a separate Bill now under discussion to 145 of the old draft, and the substitution of such questions, should question is improperly

asked, to report the circumstance to the authority to which the person asking it is subject

10. We have amended the wording of section 166 as to the Judge's power to ask questions. The section as originally drawn might have been taken to authorize him to found his judgment upon irrelevant matter, such as loose rumours. The intention of the section was to give him the fullest possible power of inquiry for the discovery of relevant matter. Section 164 as now drawn makes this clear.

11. We have omitted the chapter as to the duties of Judges, and Juries, which will, we think, be more properly placed in the Code of Criminal Procedure. We have also omitted the provisions as to appeal in the first draft, and have substituted for them section 57 of Act II of 1853 which provides for the cases in which the improper admission or rejection of evidence shall be ground for a new trial or a reversal of a decision.

12. We have omitted the chapter as to the duties of witnesses, but we also omit that this its publication be passed,

cite, and
be date of

J. F. STEPHEN.
J. STRACHEY.
J. F. D. INGLIS.
W. ROBINSON.
F. S. CHAPMAN.
R. STEWART.
J. R. BULLEN SMITH.
F. R. COCKERELL.

The 30th January, 1872.

Abstract of the Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India, assembled for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations under the provisions of the Act of Parliament, 21 & 25 Vict. Cap 67.

The Council met at Government House on Tuesday, the 12th March, 1872.

PRESENT.

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India, K. T., presiding.

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal.

His Excellency the Commander in Chief, G. C. B., G. C. S. I.

The Hon'ble J. F. D. Inglis.
The Hon'ble W. Robinson, G. C. S. I.
The Hon'ble F. S. Chapman.
The Hon'ble R. Stewart.
The Hon'ble J. R. Bullen Smith.

Maj Genl the Hon'ble H. W. Norman, C. B.

The Hon'ble F. R. Cockerell

The Hon'ble Mr. Stephen in moving that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to define and amend the Law of Evidence be taken into consideration, said "My Lord,—Just a year ago, in submitting the Report of the Committee to the Council, I explained at very considerable length the reasons which they proposed, and which is now I need not revert to what I then said. My best course I think will be to place in relation to the Bill since I last consideration of its various details, the Bill for opinion. Government. h ago, with a made in it; Council. The Committee has fully considered all the papers with which it was favoured, but with one or two exceptions, I cannot say that it has received any very considerable improvement.

prepared with the advice and assistance of the Government. We have received no public expression of opinion from the Courts, except the High Court of Bombay. The Local Governments, which is much needed, is intelligible to persons not to do so. I have informed me that they approve generally of the Bill. The Local Governments, which is much needed, is intelligible to persons not legally trained, and complete in essential respects. Upon this point, I would specially refer to the valuable papers already referred to, which have been received from Madras. It is impossible, in reading them, not to see that their authors do not like the Bill. They find every fault. I do not in the least more fully in the matter. I have pointed out the defects of the Bill.

last two highly competent, and have given the matter careful consideration.

form a complete Code, - English text writers
in the first place, to no Evidence 'arbitrarily c about as much truth, that the speech which I out of the dictionary I use, which is, or even pr extracts from some superfluous
one book
complete

This is before his time by Gilbert, Phillips, Starkie and others, and as analogous positions are seen in the Bill of the Bill

of the Bill
arranged
arranged
text-book
in Mr.
distinction between the relevancy of facts and the proof of facts or any, even the faintest perception of showed in the observations thrown over the whole subject define with precision the words 'fact' and 'evidence' As to the notion that bits of Taylor have been 'arbitrarily' put together in the Bill, I will only say that, at a proper time and place, I would undertake to assign the reason why every section stands where it does. Upon the question of completeness, however, I will make this remark I assert that every principle applicable to which is contained in the 1,598 royal contained in the 167 sections of this Bill; carefully compared, section by section, with the last edition of Mr Norton's work upon evidence, and that it disposes fully of every subject of which Mr Norton treats

"As to the specific instances of incompleteness which are alleged against the Bill two only are of any importance, and upon each of them I will say a few words.

The first is, that the Chapter on judgments is meagre. My answer is, that it may appear meagre to those who take their notions of the law of Evidence from works like Mr Taylor's, but that it contains every thing which properly belongs to the subject. Its utter absence of arrangement and classification on every subject is the great reproach of the law of England, and one of the strongest instances of it is to be found in the way in which provisions of an essentially different character are frequently comprised under the same head, I might give many illustrations of this;
but the law of evidence, I think, supplies more glaring illustrations than any other department of law. Many English writers have treated the subject in such a manner as to make it comprise the whole body of the law. Thus, for instance,
law and rules about
the sort of an action

such an action. It is obvious that the law of evidence thus comes to include nearly the whole of the substantive law, and it follows, I think that it is of great importance to draw the line distinctly between what properly belongs to the subject and what does not. It is for this reason that the sections about judgments are connected with judgments omitted from the Bill.
explain it in a few words.

"The second section of the Code of Civil Procedure enacts that —

"The civil Courts shall not take cognizance of any suit brought on a cause of action which shall have been heard and determined by a Court of competent jurisdiction in a former suit between the same parties, or between parties under whom they claim".

"The Code of Criminal Procedure enacts that a man shall not be tried if he has been convicted of these provisions, and to arise Mr Broughton's large pages, in very small print of notes of the cases which have been given on the second section of the Criminal Procedure; and it is because of the two Codes in question were

It is a matter of great importance, and to arise Mr Broughton's large pages, in very small print of notes of the cases which have been given on the second section of the Criminal Procedure; and it is because of the two Codes in question were

It is a matter of great importance, and to arise Mr Broughton's large pages, in very small print of notes of the cases which have been given on the second section of the Criminal Procedure; and it is because of the two Codes in question were

judgment on a right to sue as part of the cases, it may be necessary to give evidence of the existence of a previous judgment

The only questions connected with judgments, which do appear to me to form part of the Law of Evidence properly so called, are dealt with in sections 40—44 of the Bill. These sections provide for the cases in which the fact that a Court has decided as to a given matter of fact relevant to the issue may be proved for the purpose of showing that that fact exists. This, no doubt, is a branch of the Law of Evidence, and the provisions referred to dispose of it fully.

"As to the subject of presumptions, my answer to the critics of the Bill is partly to the same effect, though their criticisms were perhaps better founded. I must admit that the Bill as introduced dealt less fully with the subject than was thought desirable on further consideration and some additions to it have accordingly been introduced, though the general principle on which the matter was dealt with is maintained. The subject of presumptions is one of some importance, and a favourite enterprise on the part of critics which

as to the value and import of a presumption is a variety of ways were irrebuttable, presumptions fact evidence; so much of, a little less was way into English ate effect, and give

law where they p

assumptions subjects inclusive necessary in dished for expressing of ds in- nected, to criminal law to which it properly belongs

'I will not say that I could though I could
the remarks in says—

details of the subject answer specifically That Government

'In general terms the answer is this, large parts of Mr Taylor's chapter relate to topics which have nothing to do with the Law of Evidence Those (a few
is —1st shall be conclusive proof of another, for various obvious reasons—the inference of legitimacy from marriage in a good instance 2ndly—There are several cases in which Courts would be at a loss as to the course which they ought to take under certain circumstances without a distinct rule of guidance After what length ad?
ght
rest
len ster
to

this chapter, which deserves special notice Its substance was applied in the original draft of the Bill, but it has been inserted in order to put the matter beyond all possibility of doubt It is in the following words —

114 The Court may presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened regard being had to the common course of natural events, human conduct and public and private business in their relation to the facts of the particular case.

Illustrations

The Court may presume—

(a) that a man who is in possession of stolen goods soon after the theft in either the thief or has received the goods knowing them to be stolen unless he can account for his possession,

(b) that an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless he is corroborated in material particulars,

resided, was accepted or endorsed has been shown to be in existence in such things or states of things regularly performed

has been followed in particular

cases,
(g) that evidence which could be and is not produced would, if produced, be unfavourable to the person who withholds it,

(h) that if a man refuses to answer a question which he is not compelled to answer by law the answer would be unfavourable to him, obligation is in the hands of the

obligation is in the hands of the
and to such facts as the following in considering whether such maxims do or do not apply to the particular case before them

As to "marked rupee soon after it was specifically, but is continually character, is tried for

As to certain machinery causing a man in the arrangement
B, a person describes precisely what was done and admits and explains the common carelessness of A and himself

Universities The subject is one which reaches far beyond law; for the Law of Evidence is nothing unless it is founded upon a rational conception of the manner in which truth as to all matters of fact whatever ought to be investigated question of degree.

Judges in some degree, masters in the

His principle

relevant

of degree,

It may be to the issue

be occupied

and what were, metaphysical If it were allowed to argue the question whether any piece of evidence is, or is not admissible under such rules, the Lieutenant Governor would fear that

regarding relevancy

for the guidance

can, but that they

it, the Lieutenant Governor has no doubt that the rules in the draft are admirably suited to the purpose, and would be extremely useful It does not seem to him very clear in the draft whether or no counsels are to be entitled to take objection to any will be endless

"I cannot altogether agree

I do not feel that horror of then think, abundantly clear that vancy of evidence, and as to the propriety of proof, and I do not see how a law can be laid down at all upon which counsels are never to argue No one, I think, will seriously ass

tration of justice

but if they are to subjects. I must, however, observe that every precaution has been taken to prevent

to know

matter

the me

a new

in England in the great cause of the enormous intricacy and technicality of English law on this point. If, in the Tichborne case, one single question had been permitted after being objected to, and if the Court had afterwards been of opinion that it had been wrongly permitted, then, however trifling the matter might have been the party whose objection had been wrongly overruled would have been

first trial will

will it be useful principally as guides to the Judges and the parties, and, in particular,

rules

never, as it may, and taking a view, not merely of its practical, but more immediately and obviously practical, I would make the following observations —

I am quite aware that relevancy is, as His Honour

As to illustration (b)—A crime is committed by several persons. A, B and C are in the spot and kept apart from each other. D is a crime implicating D, and the accounts as to render previous concert highly

As to illustration (c)—A, the drawer of a bill of exchange, was a man of business. B, the acceptor, was a young and ignorant person, completely under A's influence.

As to illustration (d)—It is proved that a river ran in a certain course five years ago, but it is known that there have been floods since that time which might change its course.

As to illustration (e)—A judicial act the regularity of which is in question was proved.

shown disturbances

a letter was received. It is the post was interrupted by

As to illustration (g)—A man refuses to produce a document which would bear on a contract of small importance on which he is sued, but which might also injure the feelings and reputation of his family.

As to illustration (h)
compelled by law to answer unconnected with the matter

As to illustration (i)—A bond is in possession of the obligor but the circumstances of the case are such that he may have stolen it.

The effect of this provision coupled with the general repealing clause at the beginning of the Bill is to make it perfectly clear that Courts of Justice are to use their own common sense and experience in judging of the effect of particular facts and that they are to be subject to no technical rules whatever.

the most important character of the Bill is the indefinite position in and frequent failure of justice is not illegal because it proceeds on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, on the other hand, it seems to be also law that in cases tried by a jury the evidence of what in to the effect of bject, however to or to apply, but I am not quite sure whether of credit unless ough, according to a 1 events some of

the most important character of the Bill is the indefinite position in and frequent failure of justice is not illegal because it proceeds on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, on the other hand, it seems to be also law that in cases tried by a jury the evidence of what in to the effect of bject, however to or to apply, but I am not quite sure whether of credit unless ough, according to a 1 events some of

it may not be corroborated or although the evidence by which it is itself suspicious.

As I have already observed, I do not wish to trouble the Council with technicalities but I hope this explanation will show that this part of the Bill at all events, is not incomplete.

I may observe that many topics closely connected with the subject of the Bill are dealt with by express law. It would be a whole subject rests and the ld be used in practice. I think the present occasion I have in these subjects and I propose to entary upon, or introduction to some use to the Civil Servants who are preparing for their Indian career and to the law students in Indian

Universities The subject is one which reaches far beyond law; for the Law of Evidence is nothing unless it is founded upon a rational conception of the manner in which truth as to all matters of fact whatever ought to be investigated.

His Honour the Lieutenant it dissatisfied with the manner icy, which, as he says is a question of degree.

that the law, clearing up the protecting our Courts from the applicable to and rendering the Judges in some degree masters in their own Courts, will be highly beneficial.

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of evidence is, or is not admissible under such rules, the Lieutenant Governor

reg for can it, mir see take think, abundantly clear that counsel will be permitted to argue as to the relevancy of evidence, and as to the propriety of proof, and I do not see how a law can be laid down at all upon which counsels are never to argue. No one, I think, will seriously but if they are subjects. I prevent In the first place, if the Judge wishes which is under debate, he can cut the er section 105. In the second place, per evidence is not to be a ground for opposite is the rule and technicality of a single question had afterwards been of car trifling the matter

a new in Er Engl been opinion might I have t first tri will II usef

I am quite aware that relevancy is, as it is

and for that reason the Bill gives definitions of it so wide and various, that I think they will be assignable connections of relevancy are, under many conditions most facts which have any real connection with the matter to be proved would fulfil several of them. Take, for instance, this fact—A man is charged with theft, and it is proved that he was seen running away immediately after the theft with the stolen goods in his hand. This is (1) a fact so connected with the fact in issue as to form part of the same transaction, and is therefore relevant under section 6, (2) it is the effect of a fact in issue, and is therefore relevant under section 7, (3) it is the conduct of a party to the proceeding subsequent to a fact in issue, and is so relevant under section 8; (4) it is a fact which in itself renders a fact in issue highly probable, and is therefore relevant under section 11. This fact, therefore, is relevant under no less than four sections, each of which would admit a great number of facts which would not be admitted by the other sections. Indeed, the latitude of the definition of relevancy will be best appreciated by negating the conditions which the Act imposes. Suppose that you are able to assert of a fact that it is neither itself in issue, nor forms part of the same transaction, nor is its occasion, cause or effect, immediate or otherwise, that it shows no motive or preparation for it, that it is no part of the previous or subsequent conduct of any person connected with the matter in question, that it does not explain or introduce any fact which is so connected with the or establish of any relevant fact with other negatives can be affirmed I think we may say, without much risk of error, that the one fact has nothing to do with the other, and may be regarded as irrelevant.

1. I now come to a matter which has excited a good deal of discussion, though it relates to a subordinate and not very important part of the Bill—that which concerns the examination of witnesses by counsel. The Bill as originally drawn provided, in substance, that no person should be asked a question which reflected on his character, as to matters irrelevant to the case before the Court without written instructions, that if the Court considered the question improper, it might require the production of the instructions; and that the giving of such instruction should be an act of defamation, subject of course, to the various rules about defamation laid down in the Penal Code. To ask such questions without instructions was to be a contempt of Court in the person asking them but was not to be defamation.

and myself amongst the rest, that the sections proposed would be inexpedient, and others have accordingly been substituted for them which I think will in practice be found sufficient. The substituted sections are as follows—

Questions lawful in cross examination

146. When a witness is cross examined, he may, in addition to the questions hereinbefore referred to be asked any questions which tend—

(1) to test his veracity,

(2) to discover who he is and what is his position in life, or law produced

y most ome of ointed act ons
Bar
were e most justice
ses of ers of nttee

- (3) to shake his credit, by injuring his character, although the answer to such questions might tend directly or indirectly to criminate him or might expose or tend directly or indirectly to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture

When witness to be compelled to answer

147 If any such question relates to a matter relevant to the suit or proceeding, the provisions of section 132 shall apply thereto

148 If any such question relates to a matter not relevant to the suit or proceeding except in so far as it affects the credit of the witness by injuring his character the Court shall decide whether or not the witness shall be compelled to answer it, and may if it think fit warn the witness that he is not obliged to answer it. In exercising its discretion, the Court shall have regard to the following considerations—

- (1) such questions are proper if they are of such a nature that the truth of the imputation conveyed by them would seriously affect the opinion of the Court as to the creditability of the witness on the matter to which he testifies
- (2) such questions are improper if the imputation which they convey

- (3) such questions are improper if there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation made against the witness's character and the importance of his evidence
- (4) the Court may, if it sees fit, draw from the witness's refusal to answer, the inference that the answer if given would be unfavourable

Question not to be asked without reasonable grounds

149 No such question as is referred to in section 138 ought to be asked, unless the person asking it has reasonable grounds for thinking that the imputation which it conveys is well founded

Illustrations.

(a) A barrister is instructed by an attorney or valuer that an important witness is a dabbler. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dabbler

That an important witness the pleader, gives satisfactory ground for asking the witness whether he is a dabbler

whether

to him may

150 If the Court is of opinion that any such question may be asked by any person on reasonable grounds it may, if it sees fit, ask the question

Procedure of Court in case of question being asked without reasonable grounds

151 The Court may forbid any question which is indecent or scandalous, unless the answer may be necessary to be known in order to determine whether or not the facts in issue existed and for that reason the Bill gives definitions of it so wide and various, that I think they will be found to include every sort of fact which has any direct assignable connection with any matter in issue. The sections which define relevancy are, indeed enabling sections. Any fact which fulfils any one of the many conditions which they declare to constitute relevancy will be relevant and most facts which have any real connection with the matter to be proved would fulfil several of them. Take, for instance, this fact—A man is charged with theft, and it is proved that he was seen running away immediately after the theft with the stolen goods in his hand. This is (1) a fact so connected with a fact as to form part of the same transaction, and is therefore relevant under other sections. Indeed, the latitude of the definition of relevancy will be best appreciated by negating the conditions which the Act imposes. Suppose that you are able to assert of a fact that it is neither itself in issue, nor forms part of the same transaction, nor is its occasion, cause or effect, immediate or otherwise, that it shows no motive or preparation for it, that it is no part of the negatives can be affirmed I think we may say, without much risk of error, that the one fact has nothing to do with the other, and may be regarded as irrelevant.

it might require the production of the instructions; and that the giving of such instruction should be an act of defamation, subject of course, to the various rules about defamation laid down in the Penal Code. To ask such questions without instructions was to be a contempt of Court in the person asking them, but was not to be defamation.

the worst kind, that it is of the greatest importance that the characters of witnesses should be open to full inquiry. These reasons satisfied the committee, and myself amongst the rest, that the sections proposed would be inexpedient, and others have accordingly been substituted for them which I think will in practice be found sufficient. The substituted sections are as follows—

Questions lawful in cross examination 146 When a witness is cross examined, he may, in addition to the questions hereinbefore referred to be asked any questions which tend—

- (1) to test his veracity,
- (2) to discover who he is and what is his position in life, or

- (3) to shake his credit by injuring his character although the answer to such questions might tend directly or indirectly to criminate him or might expose or tend directly or indirectly to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture

When witness to be compelled to answer

147 If any such question relates to a matter relevant to the suit or proceeding, the provisions of section 132 shall apply thereto

Court to decide when question shall be asked and when witness compelled to answer

148 If any such question relates to a matter not relevant to the suit or proceeding except in so far as it affects the credit of the witness by injuring his character the Court shall decide whether or not the witness shall be compelled to answer it, and may if it think fit warn the witness that he is not obliged to answer it. In exercising its discretion, the Court shall have regard to the following considerations:—

- (1) such questions are proper if they are of such a nature that the truth of the imputation conveyed by them would seriously affect the opinion of the Court as to the creditability of the witness on the matter to which he testifies;
- (2) such questions are improper if the imputation which they convey relates to the witness's character for truthfulness on the matter to which he testifies;
- (3) such questions are improper if there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation made against the witness's character and the importance of his evidence;
- (4) the Court may, if it sees fit, draw from the witness's refusal to answer, the inference that the answer if given would be unfavourable.

Question not to be asked without reasonable grounds

149 ought has reason tion which it conveys is well founded

Illustrations

- (a) A barrister is instructed by an attorney or vakil that an important witness is a dakait. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dakait.
- (b) A pleader is informed by a person in Court that an important witness is a dakait, the informant, on being questioned by the pleader, gives satisfactory reasons for his statement. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dakait.
- (c) A witness of whom nothing whatever is known, is asked at random whether he is a dakait.

150

Procedure in case of question being asked without reasonable grounds

it was asked by any y, report the circum- other authority or attorney

Indecent and scandalous questions

or to matters necessary to be known in order to determine whether or not the facts in issue existed

I. E. A.—195

151. The Court may forbid any questions which it regards as indecent or scandalous although such questions or inquiries may have some bearing on the questions before the Court, unless they relate to facts in issue, or to matters necessary to be known in order to determine whether or not the facts in issue existed

152 The Court shall forbid any question which appears to it to be intended to insult or annoy, or which, although proper in itself, appears to the Court needlessly offensive in form

Questions intended to insult or annoy — — — — — lay down, in the most distinct manner, and witnesses with a view to shaking
 I trust that this explicit statement of the principles according to which such questions ought or ought not to be asked will be found sufficient to prevent the growth in this country, of that which in England has — — — — — that the sections so far as their — — — — — that they will be admitted to — — — — — the public I can

— remarks on the memorials which the sections th from the Bar in various parts of the country have made any further remarks on the Bill — — — — — I have removed the main objection which those parts of their memorials which — — — — — from the sections which have been giv — — — — —

part proper, though it contains — — — — — been omitted The memorial of the Bombay Barristers contains similar passages, expressed more fully and less temperately, and I shall accordingly confine myself to noticing such of their remarks as appear to me to deserve notice

— — — — — in general, that I have read in the news an only mean that I individually the Bar, indeed, the Bombay — — — — — (meaning profession ment they ds from the report of the Select Committee —

'The English system, under which the Bench and the Bar act together and play their respective parts independently and the professional organization on which it rests does not as yet exist in this country, and will not for a very long course of time be introduced'

'Before I made the remarks which this suggests let me ask your Lordship and the Council whether a charge that I, of all people wish for the extinction of the profession of Barristers at law in India, is not upon the face of it absurd? I am myself a Barrister of eighteen years' standing and a Queen's council of four years' standing I believe that there is no Barrister in British India of whom I should not be entitled to take precedence, professionally, if I chose to practising here, and so strong is my connection with my profession, that I am at this moment on the point of resigning one of the most respectable offices which a Barrister can hold for the purpose of returning to the ordinary routine of professional practice How is it possible to imagine

— — — — — power to good name ted as an have been appropriate remedy for a great and crying evil — — — — — which is likely to much impressed by my own observations in England and which extend in India as the habit of cross examination becomes more general and when the rights which a cross examining advocate has are explicitly defined The remedy, I will admit, was to some extent inappropriate, but for merely proposing it, for merely recognizing the existence of the evil against which it was directed I am charged with wishing to extinguish my own profession

— — — — — which I am fully stand how the memo- r they could never system, under which the Bench and the Bar act together and play their respective parts independently, and the professional organization on which it rests, does not as yet exist in this country and will not for a very long course of time be introduced.

"Yes," say the memorialists, it does exist, to wit in the Presidency towns. This is as much as if the water works of Calcutta were referred to, to contradict a statement that India is wholly supplied with drinking water. I make a statement about an Empire as large as Europe without Russia, and am told that it is incorrect, because there are three English Courts, and three knots of, perhaps, a dozen or so English Barristers, to be found at towns which are in the nature of English settlements. The reason why the statement complained of was not qualified by excepting these towns and Courts was simply that the exception was not important enough to be stated. It would, indeed, have been a matter of great indifference to me personally, whether the Bill extended to the High Courts sitting on the original side or not. It is a mistake to make exceptions without a necessity for them, but the question, what rules of evidence should apply in the Presidency towns is one of very little real importance. The great and vital importance of the matter lies in the effect which it will have on the administration of justice throughout the country at large. It is framed in order to meet the wants, and lighten the labours, of district officers, by giving them a short and clear view of a subject which has been converted into a sort of professional mystery: the knowledge of which was confined to a knot of persons specially initiated in it. Now, as regards the Mofussil, I repeat the expressions complained of. I assert that they are absolutely true and state a fact notorious to every one. I say that, throughout India generally nothing like the English system under which the Bench and Bar act together and play their respective parts independently, does now exist, or can for a length of time be expected to exist. Let me just recall for a moment the nature of that system. In the first place the Bench and the Bar in England form substantially one body. The Judges have all been Barristers, and the great prize to which the Barristers look forward is to become Judges.

"That is not the case in India nor anything like it. The great mass of Indian Judges are not, and never have been, lawyers at all, the great mass of Indian lawyers have no chance or expectation of becoming Judges, and many of them have no wish to do so. The organization of the profession differs from that in England. I do not think it necessary to refer to the position of an English Barrister who practises in the Mofussil, whether he is habitually resident in the Presidency town or not, in all practice in Sessions, in rules which do not, and can not apply to practice in the Mofussil in this country. He acts under the eyes of a public which takes great interest in his proceedings, and presents before Judges, and to the public, the results of this. It is impossible to discuss the merits of this system, but it is formed upon a principle of little importance, and is not adapted to the case of pleaders. It is referred to are the questions it pleases—is not that the Bench and the only, what I mean is that, in England cases are fully prepared for trial before they come into Court so that the Judge has nothing to do but to sit still and weigh the evidence produced before him. In India in an enormous mass of cases, this neither can nor is it absolutely necessary that the Judge should not only hear what is put

Courts or of any Sudder Court or of any Court of Judicature hereafter to be constituted in the said territories to or in which the powers of any of Her Majesty's Supreme Courts may be transferred or vested

VI Any such Courts and persons aforesaid shall take judicial notices of all divisions of time of the geographical divisions of the world, of the territories under the dominions of the British Crown of the common element continuation, and termination of hostilities between the British Crown, and any other state and also of the existence title and national flag of every sovereign or state recognised by the British Crown In all the above cases, such Court or person may resort for its aid to appropriate books or documents of reference

VII Any Government Gazette of any country, colony, or dependency under the dominion of the British Crown, may be proved by the bare productions thereof before any of the Courts or persons aforesaid

VIII All proclamations, Acts of state, whether Legislative or Executive, nominations, appointments, and other official communications of the Government appearing in any such Gazette, may be proved by the production of such Gazette, and shall be prima facie proof of any fact of a public nature which they were intended to notify

IX Any recital contained in any Act of the Governor General of India in council, constituted for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations, hereafter to be passed, of any fact of a public nature, shall be deemed, before all such Courts and persons, to be prima facie evidence of the truth of the fact recited

X The Gazette or Newspaper containing any advertisement purporting to be published by virtue of any public Statute, Act, Regulation, or Ordinance or of any Rule or order of a Court of Justice or of any Board or Office of Revenue, may be received by any such Courts or persons as aforesaid as prima facie evidence that such advertisement was published duly under the authority from which it purports to proceed

XI All Books, maps, or charts, as to be of authority

XII Books printed or published under the authority of the Government of a foreign country, and purporting to contain the Statutes, Code, or other written Law of such country, and also printed and published books or reports of decisions of the Courts of such country, and books proved to be commonly admitted in such Courts as evidence of the law of such country, shall be admissible before any such Courts or persons as aforesaid as evidence of the law of such foreign country

XIII All maps made under the authority of Government or of any public municipal body and not made for the purpose of any litigated question, shall prima facie be deemed to be correct, and shall be admitted in evidence without further proof

XIV The following persons only shall be incompetent to testify —

1 Children under seven years of age who appear incapable of receiving just impressions of the facts respecting which they are examined, or of relating them truly

XXIII. Every witness summoned to produce a document shall, if the Witness summoned to produce a document must bring it into Court of the contents thereof

Mole of determining objection to production evidence which the person producing the document may give respecting it, and it shall also be lawful for the Court except in the case of any document relating to the affairs

Documents relating to affairs of state

Court alone, and not to disclose the contents thereof except to the Court, unless the Court shall order the document to be given in evidence same be in his custody possession or power, be bound to bring it, or cause it to be brought into Court although there be a valid objection to the right of the party calling for it to compel its production, or to the reading or putting it in as evidence or to the disclosure The validity of any such objection made by the person producing the document shall be determined by the Court, and for the better determination thereof, it shall be lawful for the Court to receive any admissible evidence which the person producing the document may give respecting it, and it shall also be lawful for the Court except in the case of any document relating to the affairs of state to inspect the document, and if necessary to call to its assistance any person whom it may appoint to interpret the same Such person however shall be previously sworn truly to interpret the same to the Court alone, and not to disclose the contents thereof except to the Court, unless the Court shall order the document to be given in evidence

XXIV A Barrister, Attorney, or Vakeel shall not without the consent

Professional communications, client, nor shall he shall have privilege, he evidence the his privilege or Vakeel, of Barrister, A. privilege of upon exami

of his client, disclose any communication made by the client to him in the course of his professional employment, or of which he shall give evidence The privilege of a Barrister, Attorney, or Vakeel, shall be waived in any case in which the Court shall order that he shall be bound to give evidence

XXV Any person present in Court whether a party or not may be called

Person present in Court to give evidence, etc, though not summoned upon and compelled by the Court to give evidence and produce any document then and there in his possession or power document, and may be called in the order of the Court

XXVI Any person whether a party to the suit, or not, may be summoned

Person summoned to produce a document not bound to attend personally the same, to produce a document without being summoned to give evidence, and any person summoned merely to produce a document, shall be deemed to have complied with the summons if he cause such document to be produced instead of attending personally to produce

Rules of evidence in Supreme Courts on Ecclesiastical sides and Admiralty

XXVII The rules of evidence in Her Majesty's supreme Courts as to matters of Ecclesiastical or Admiralty (civil jurisdiction, shall be the same as they are on the Plea side of the Courts

XXVIII Except in Evidence of one witness sufficient proof Proviso

the testimony of one witness, shall be sufficient for the purpose of proving any fact before any such Court, and shall not affect any rule of practice of any Court that requires corroborative evidence in support of the testimony of an accomplice or of a single witness in the case of perjury

XXIX Where dying declarations are evidence, they shall be received,

Dying declarations when admissible

if it be proved that the deceased was, at the time of making the declaration and then thought himself to be, in danger of approaching death, though he entertained at the time of making it hope of recovery.

XXX. The party at whose instance a witness is examined may with the permission of such Court or person, cross-examine such witness to test his veracity, in the same manner as if he had not been called at his instance, and may be allowed to show that the witness has varied from his previous statement made by him.

XXXI. In order to corroborate the testimony of a witness, any former statement made by such witness relating to the same fact, at or about the time when the fact took place, or before any authority legally competent to investigate the fact, shall be admissible, and for that purpose a copy of any deposition or statement taken before any Court, Judge, Justice of the Peace, Magistrate, or person lawfully exercising the powers of a Magistrate or before a Commissioner or Superintendent for the suppression of Thuggee or Dacoity, in the discharge of his duty, shall, if certified by such Court, Judge or other officer above mentioned, under his hand or the official seal of the Court or under the hand or official Seal of such Judge, to be a true copy of such deposition or statement without further proof, be received as prima facie evidence that such deposition or statement was made, and that it was made at the time and place, and under the circumstances, if any, which shall be stated in the certificate or on the face of deposition or statement.

XXXII. A witness shall not be excused from answering any question relevant to the matter at issue in any suit, or in any Civil or Criminal proceeding, upon the ground that the answer to such question will criminate, or may tend, directly or indirectly, to incriminate any witness, or that it will expose, or tend to expose, the witness to a penalty or forfeiture of property.

Proviso. Nothing in this section shall be deemed to require a witness to answer any question the answer to which would tend to criminate him, if he is not satisfied that the answer is necessary in the interests of justice. Nothing in this section shall be deemed to require a witness to answer any question the answer to which would tend to incriminate any witness, or that it will expose, or tend to expose, the witness to a penalty or forfeiture of property, if he is not satisfied that the answer is necessary in the interests of justice.

XXXIII. A witness in any cause may be questioned as to whether he has been convicted of any felony or misdemeanour, and upon being so questioned, if he either denies the fact or refuses to answer, it shall be lawful for the opposite party to prove such conviction.

XXXIV. A witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in writing, or reduced into writing, relating to the subject matter of the cause, without such statements being shown to him, but if it is intended to contradict him by such statements, the attention must first be called to them, and he must be allowed to explain, amplify, or qualify them, or to show that they are true, or that they are not material, or that they are not relevant, or that they are not to be taken into consideration, and he must be allowed to make such statement as he may think fit for the purposes of the cross-examination.

Proviso.

the trial as he shall think fit.

Copy of a document made by a copying machine to be deemed correct.

XXXV. An impression of a document made by a copying machine shall be taken without further proof to be a correct copy.

XXXVI.

Admission of secondary evidence when the original document is not available.

When a document is not available, the court may, on application, admit secondary evidence of its contents, if the party offering it satisfies the court that the original is not available, and that the secondary evidence is a true and correct copy of the original.

When attested document may be proved as if unattested.

XXXVII An attested document may be proved as if unattested unless it be a document to the validity of which attestation is requisite

XXXVIII The admission prima facie proof of an attested document

a admission of a party to unattested instrument of its execution by himself shall be as against him sufficient prima facie proof of such execution of it, though it be an instrument which is required by law to be attested

XXXIX An entry made against interest, or in course of business when admissible in life time of person making it entry or statement which would be admissible in evidence after the death of the person who made it, on the ground of its having been made against the interest of the person making it, or on the ground of its having been made in the ordinary course of business, shall be admissible, though the person who made it be not dead, if he is incapable of giving evidence by reason of his illness at the time of the trial or hearing

XL Entry in course of business when admissible for purpose of identification

Any entry in any books proved to have been regularly kept in the course of business or in any public office, so far as such entry merely refers to and tends to identify by name, description, number, or otherwise, any bank-notes or other securities for the payment of money, or other property and the payer in or receiver of them, shall, in any case where such identification is necessary to be proved, be admissible in evidence for a limited purpose if it shall appear to have been made at or about the time of the transaction to which it relates, though the person who made it, or he on whose information it was made, is alive and capable of being produced as a witness

XLI Receipt when evidence against person other than the giver

Any receipt in writing, acknowledging the receipt of any money, valuable securities or goods, shall, on proof of the execution thereof, be admissible in evidence before such Court or person aforesaid, not only against the party giving it, but also against any person in whose favour such receipt would operate as a discharge, or to whom it would render the person giving it, liable for the money, security, or goods acknowledged to have been received

XLII Receipt of Agent

Whenever a receipt would be admissible under the preceding section agent or be evidence receipt

XLIII Books kept in the course of business or in a public office admissible as corroborative evidence

Books proved to have been regularly kept in the course of business or in any public office, shall be admissible as corroborative but not as independent proof of the facts stated therein

XLIV Document as evidence be proved

Document as evidence be proved

XLV Refreshing memory

Refreshment of memory made by time when the or at any time

LV. The 33rd section of Act No VI of 1851 which applies only to proof of accounts on the Equity side of the said Supreme Courts shall extend to and embrace all accounts directed to be taken on any side of the said Court

LVI. Whenever by any Statute or Act, Regulation or Ordinance now in force, or any Statute or Act to be hereafter in force, any certificate, certified copy, or other document, shall be receivable in evidence of any particular in any Court of Justice, the same if it is substantially in form and purports to be executed in the manner directed by the Statute, Act, Regulation, or Ordinance which makes it evidence shall be prima facie evidence, where it is rendered admissible without proof of any stamp, signature character, or authority, which it is directed to have, or from which it is directed to proceed.

LVII. The improper admission or rejection of evidence shall not be ground of itself for a new trial or reversal of any decision in any case in which such objection to the evidence only is taken. No new trial for rejection or improper reception of evidence or insufficient evidence to justify the decision, or otherwise, if received, it ought not to have varied the decision.

LVIII. Nothing in this Act contained shall be construed as to render inadmissible in any Court any evidence which but for the passing of the Act, would have been admissible in such Court.

APPENDIX D.

LIABILITY TO DAMAGES FOR REFUSING TO GIVE EVIDENCE

The following section appears alike in Act XIX of 1853 applying to Bengal, and in Act X of 1855 applying to Madras and Bombay.

Act XIX of 1853, Section 26.

26 Any person, whether a party to the suit or not, to whom a summons to attend and give evidence or produce a document, shall be personally delivered, and who shall, without lawful excuse, neglect or refuse to obey such summons, or who shall be proved to have absconded, or kept out of the way to avoid being produced, or who shall be proved to have given evidence at which he may sustain in consequence of such neglect, or refusal, or of such absconding, or keeping out of the way as aforesaid, to be recovered in a civil action

APPENDIX E.

AMENDING ACTS

Act XVIII of 1872

OBJECTS AND REASONS

"The primary object of this Bill is to continue certain rules which it is believed have been inadvertently repealed by the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

E. At the same time opportunity is taken to correct some clerical and other accidental errors to which attention has been drawn

"Section 32 clause (5) renders admissible certain statements as to the existence of relationship' As there are many relations other than those intended by the Act the Bill makes the clause precise by adding the words 'by blood marriage or adoption'

"In sections 41 and 45, some words which should have been repeated have been repeated. It is the same thing 92 to clear

"rules of the road' It must have been intended to include the rules of navigation. The Bill therefore adds the words 'on land or at sea'

"Section 66 contains rules as to notice to produce documents. It only mentions notice to the party in whose possession or power a document is. To refuse the Bill inserts the words

Wills under the Indian Succession Act may be proved by the probate. But other Wills are admitted to probate, and the same mode of proof is made applicable to all such, and doubtless was intended

"Of sections 107 and 108, the latter was clearly intended to be a qualification of the former. The language is altered to produce this effect

"Section 126 relates to professional communications and provides that when made "in furtherance of any criminal purpose they shall not be protected from disclosure. As every fraud though illegal is not 'criminal' the Bill inserts the word for the latter, thus the same principle for the offer of a witness may be impeached by proof that he has had the offer of a bribe. The Bill, for obvious reasons, for 'had' substitutes 'accepted'. In India still more than in England the mere offer of a bribe if unaccepted, should not prejudice the character of the person to whom it is made

"Act XV of 1852, section 12 provides that Her Majesty's Courts and Judges and all officers, Commissioners, Arbitrators etc., authorised to receive evidence with respect to proceedings, in such Courts may administer oaths to witnesses. The Evidence Act repeals this section and puts nothing in its place. (1872) or any power those C mers to examine 12"

12th August 1872

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE

"The Hon'ble Mr Hobhouse also presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. He said that in considering the Bill the committee had proceeded on the principle that under the circumstances it was no part of their duty to alter any part of the Act on the score of principle but only to effect such alterations as they believed the draftsman would have made if his attention had been called to them. The principal reason for passing the present Bill into law before the 1st September was this —

Act I of 1872 repealed in toto a prior Act, XV of 1852, and one of the sections of that Act was as follows —

XII All Her Majesty's Courts within the British territories under the Government of the East India Company, and every Judge and Justice of such Courts and every officer, Commissioner, Arbitrator or other person now or hereafter having by law or by consent of parties, authority to hear receive and examine evidence, with respect to or concerning any suit action, or other proceeding in any of such Courts, is hereby empowered to administer an oath to all such witnesses as are legally called before them respectively

Now, that was a positive enactment in the clearest possible terms, purporting to confer upon certain tribunals and officers power to administer oaths. Prima facie if that power were removed from the Statute Book, and nothing put in its place, it would cease to exist. The question then was whether the power could be derived from any other quarter. For the purpose of determining this question it had been necessary to read the Acts of Parliament and ten charters, and to read some of these documents very carefully, since they were framed on the most perplexing of all principles, the principle of declaring void all previous inconsistent provisions. So that you had to read through the whole document to see what was and what was not inconsistent. The result was that the power of administering an oath would remain with the High Courts, but would not remain therein mentioned. It was, therefore, in clear and extensive an authority as simplest way of doing that in the present emergency was by continuing the existence of that section. When the time came for dealing with the matter finally, the proper place for it would be found in an Act relating to the subject of oaths and affirmations, rather than in one relating to the general subject of evidence.

Previously to this year, the incapacity to administer an oath would have vitiated many legal proceedings. But in the present year, an Act (No VI of 1872) was passed, which had two objects—one was to respect and bind the conscience of witnesses, and the other, to prevent the entire vitiation of legal proceedings by omissions and irregularities in the administration of oaths. The first object had nothing to do with the present question. An oath was an oath, whatever might be the form of it, and the person who administered it must be duly qualified. The misadministration of an oath by a person upon being sworn to do so, would deal with the case. Certainly, many a Commission made by a person have, by reason of perjury to the giving of false testimony under such circumstances. On this point Sections 178 and 179 of the Penal Code showed the importance attached to the legal administration of oaths. For the foregoing reasons, the continuation of the section, which was the subject of the judicial proceedings, on which day Act I of 1872 was to come into force, whereas no person would be done by continuing the section in question the only suggestion against it.

As they would not be remarked upon in themselves and were intended to cover obvious printing or of drafting. We had now received several criticisms on Act I of 1872, and there was little doubt that, after it had been tested in actual practice it would, like most laws of great magnitude and difficulty and especially those passed on subjects new to legislation, require amendment in several particulars.

29th August 1872

Act III of 1887

OBJECTS AND REASONS.

'The object of this Bill is to prevent officers of any department concerned with any branch of the public revenue from being compelled to say whence or of any offence. In England information as to frauds on the revenue (See Russel on Crimes, 5th Ed Vol III, p 553)

The law on the subject is further stated in Bell's Laws of Excise as follows — It is a rule of evidence applicable to criminal cases and the same rule has always been held to apply to penal informations at the suit of the Revenue, that a witness is not permitted to disclose privileged communications brought to his knowledge for the use of the witness, but may be put on a principle of public policy

272) Hence those questions which tend to the discovery of the truth which the disclosure was made to the officers of justice are not permitted to be asked (Rez v Hardy 24 How St Tr 753—per Eyre C J) If the name of the informer were to be disclosed would be defeated (Ibid p 81

v Bryant it was held that a witness could not give the information? (15 M & W 169) It cannot be ascertained from the records why the English law was not incorporated in the Indian Evidence Act The omission has caused much inconvenience'

11th August 1886

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE

'We the undersigned members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the Indian Evidence Act 1872 was referred have considered the Bill and have the honour to submit this our Report

'We have so altered the section which it was proposed to substitute for section 125 as to follow the plan an Explanation to 11th January 1886

Act III of 1891

OBJECTS AND REASONS

"The principal object of this Bill is to amend section 54 of the Indian Evidence Act 1872 so as to render the previous conviction of an accused person irrelevant when it is sought to prove the conviction with the object merely of showing that the accused is a man of bad character and is therefore more fact that the accused person has been previously convicted of any offence is relevant The result of this amendment of the law will be that the rule as to the relevancy of a previous conviction will be contained in section 43 of the Act The existence of the judgment convicting the accused will be relevant only if the fact of the conviction is a fact in issue or is relevant under some provision of the Act

It is also necessary to amend the Act so as to show first that in criminal cases the fact of a previous conviction is relevant only if it is relevant to the knowledge of the jury and secondly that in civil cases the fact of a previous conviction is relevant only if it is relevant to the knowledge of the jury and thirdly that in criminal cases the fact of a previous conviction is relevant only if it is relevant to the knowledge of the jury and fourthly that in civil cases the fact of a previous conviction is relevant only if it is relevant to the knowledge of the jury

In English law for the purpose of proving guilty and in other acts of a nature similar to that charged may be given in cases of uttering false coins or disposing of forged bank notes (1 Russel, 233) On the whole evidence of this nature has been confined to cases of coinage and forgery, but there is one case, Reg. v. Francis, (13 L. J. M. C. 47) in which evidence was admitted on a charge of obtaining money on false pretences. In that case Lord Coleridge C. J. said "It seems clear upon principle that when the fact that the prisoner has done the thing charged is proved, and the only remaining question is, whether at the time he did it he had guilty knowledge of the quality of his act, or acted under a mistake, evidence of the class received must be admissible." This case probably goes further than any other case, and the amendment which has been proposed of section 13 seems to provide sufficiently for the class of cases in which the peculiar nature of the offence makes this question the crucial test.

"As regards the admission of evidence of other similar acts to prove guilty knowledge, it is thought that such evidence might be admitted in cases in which an accused person is charged with a long series of offences. Pro. Code, with and tried that is to say it is proposed the three offences to be as the act

an opportu-
not raised

"Briefly stated the amendments proposed to be made by the Bill are as follows—

(1) the provision allowing a previous conviction to be proved in all cases will be repealed;

(2) a previous conviction will be relevant under section 43 when it is a fact in the Act;

it relevant as evidence or bad character

(3) a previous conviction will be relevant to prove guilty knowledge or intention,

(5) the fact that an act formed part of a series of similar occurrences, in each of which the person doing the act was concerned, will be relevant to prove guilty knowledge or intention."

4th July 1890

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

"We the Committee have the honor to report to the House of Commons which the Bill was referred, and to submit this our report with

We generally approve the Bill and consider that the object can be attained by adding to section 14 an Explanation suggested by the High Court

We consider it desirable to indicate more particularly the classes of persons exercising magisterial functions who are not to be held to be magistrates for the purpose of section 26

We have added a clause to remove a difficulty which has been experienced in the construction of the words 'for the same offence' in section 30 of the same Act"

6th February, 1891.

Act V of 1899

OBJECTS AND REASONS

"It has been found that in the case of Queen Empress v. ... that the ... v. op un me de th ob

'The opportunity has been taken to suggest the amendment of two other sections. Section 37 fails to render relevant statements as to the facts of a public nature made in the Acts of certain legislatures. Cl 2 will remove what is now an obvious lacuna. The remaining amendment is of a purely formal character.'

8th October, 1898

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE

'We, the undersigned members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to further amend the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 was referred, have considered the Bill and have now the honour to submit this our Report with the Bill as amended by us annexed hereto.

We have added a sub section making a consequential amendment in section 73 of the Act.'

1st February, 1899

APPENDIX F.

THE BANKERS' BOOKS EVIDENCE ACT

Act XVIII of 1891

Received the assent of the Governor-General on the 1st October, 1891

An Act further to amend the Law of Evidence with respect to Bankers' Books

Whereas it is expedient to amend the Law of Evidence with respect to Bankers' Books, It is hereby enacted as follows —

Title extent and commencement 1. (1) This Act may be called the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1891

(2) It extends to be whole of British India

(3) [Repealed by Act X of 1914 Schedule II]

Notes This Act is primarily intended for the convenience of bankers and to facilitate proof of their transaction—R v Dono, 29 T L R 635, Arnott v Hayes, 86 Ch D 731, Kissan v Lank, (1896) 1 Q B 574, Pollock v Earle (1898) 1 Ch 1

2 In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in Definitions the subject or context,—

(1) 'Company' means a company registered under any of the enactments relating to companies for the time being in force in the United Kingdom or in any of the Colonies or Dependencies thereof or in British India or incorporated by an Act of Parliament or of the Governor-General in Council, or by Royal Charter or Letters Patent.

(2) 'bank' and 'banker' mean—

(a) any company carrying on the business of bankers

(b) any partnership or individual to whose books the provisions of this Act shall have been extended as hereinafter provided.

(c) any post office savings bank or money order office,

(3) "bankers' books" include ledgers day-books, cash-books, account-books, and all other books used in the ordinary business of a bank,

(4) "legal proceeding" means any proceeding or inquiry in which evidence is, or may be given and includes an arbitration

(5) "The Court" means the person or persons before whom legal proceeding is held or taken,

(6) "Judge" means a Judge of a High Court,

(7) "trial" means any hearing before the Court at which evidence is taken, and

(8) "certified copy" means a copy of any entry in the books of a bank together with a certificate written at the foot of such copy that it is a true copy of such entry, that such entry is contained in one of the ordinary books of the bank, and was made in the usual and ordinary course of business; and that such book is still in the custody of the bank, such certificate being dated and subscribed by the principal accountant or manager of the bank with his name and official title

Origin This Act is based on the English Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1879, (43 & 44 Vict C 11)

Certified copy of a document which does not come within section (1), though it is not admissible in evidence. Patrick, 4 C W N

Banker means a person who is a banker and banker' mean on the business of bankers of Inland Revenue and Banking to Savings Banks and Banks' connotes the business of banking money received for purposes of promissory notes. It is a mere fact that a Government Treasury receives money from a District Board and respects orders issued to it for payment does not constitute the Treasury a Bank. Rangaswami v Sankaralingam, 43 M 816-39 M L J 327-58 Ind Cas 893, Tolsey v Hill, 2 H L C 28, (43) per Lord Brougham

Banker In Halifax Union v Wheelright 10 Ex 183-44 L J Ex 121, Baron Cleasby said "First, it is said that taking that statute together with several other statutes the word banker' was not to be restricted to any person or to the person upon whom the money is received, but who in the ordinary course of his business receives money from and for whom he receives money" Hart's Law of Banking

3. The Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, extend the provisions of this Act to the books of any partnership or individual carrying on the business of bankers within the territories under its administration, and keeping a set of not less than three ordinary account-books, namely, a cash book, a day book, a journal, and a ledger, and may in like manner rescind any such notification

4 Subject to the provisions of this Act, a certified copy of any entry in a banker's book shall, in all legal proceedings, be received as prima facie evidence of the existence of such entry, and shall be admitted as evidence of the matters, transactions, and accounts therein recorded in every case where, and to the same extent as, the original entry itself is now by law admissible, but not further or otherwise

Origin This section is based on section 3 of the English Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1879, which runs as follows "Subject to the provisions of this Act, a copy of any entry in a banker's book shall in all legal proceedings be received as prima facie evidence of such entry, and of the matters, transactions, and accounts therein recorded"

Principle "Then if they are not removable, on the ground of public inconvenience, that is upon the same footing in point of principle as in the case of that which is not removable by the physical nature of the thing itself. . . The necessity of the case in the one instance, and in the other case the general public inconvenience which would follow from the books being removed, supplies the reason of the rule" Per Alderson B in Mortimer v McCallan, 6 M & W 58, 67

Scope and object of the section "The Act was passed mainly for the relief of bankers to avoid the serious inconvenience occasioned to them by their having to produce books which were in constant use in their business" Parnell v Wood, (1892) P 187 "Banks are subject to the performance of duties to the public which might be seriously interfered with if they were compelled to carry the books needed in their business into every Court or tribunal where testimony is to be introduced concerning them. Books belonging in public offices cannot be removed from their legal custody without some strong necessity for their production. While bank-books are not public to the same extent, yet the business which the corporations are required to transact cannot be done unless the books are usually preserved where they belong" Per Campbell C J in People v Hurst, 41 Mich 328 (Am) This Act makes copies of such entries evidence against any one thus the entries in a defendant's banker's books are made evidence against the plaintiff Harding v Williams, 14 Ch D 197, see also London & W Bank v Bolton, 51 Sol Jo 466 The Act applies to all books kept by the bank, even although not in daily use, and applies to the successors of a bank by whom the entries were made Asylum for Idiots v Handysides, (1906) 22 T L R 573 The main object of this Act is to enable evidence to be procured and given Arnott v Hayes, (1887) 36 Ch D at 737, Emmott v Star News paper Co, 62 L J Q B 77, R v Bona and Another, (1912) 99 T R 223 and to enable a party to the proceedings to attend and to be examined on them, to obtain an order for leave to inspect and take copies of them Re Marshfield, 32 Ch D 499

5. No officer of a bank shall in any legal proceeding to which the bank is not a party be compellable to produce any bankers' book, the contents of which can be proved under this Act, or to appear as a witness to

Case in which officer of bank not compellable to produce books prove the matters, transactions, and accounts therein recorded unless by order of the Court or a Judge made for a special cause

Scope This section corresponds to section 6 of the English Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict 11) By this section a banker is exonerated from personal attendance in Court See also Emmott v Star News Paper Co 62 L J K B 77.

6. (1) On the application of any party to a legal proceeding, the Court or Judge may order by order of Court or Judge that such party be at liberty to inspect and take copies of any entries in a banker's book for any of the purposes of such proceeding, or may order the bank to prepare and produce, within a time to be specified in the order, certified copies of all such entries, accompanied by a further certificate that no other entries are to be found in the books of the bank relevant to the matters in issue in such proceedings and such further certificate shall be dated and subscribed in manner hereinbefore directed in reference to certified copies.

(2) An order under this or the preceding section may be made either with or without summoning the bank, and shall be served on the bank three clear days (exclusive of bank holidays) before the same is to be obeyed, unless the Court or Judge shall otherwise direct.

(3) The bank may, at any time before the time limited for obedience to any such order as aforesaid, either offer to produce their books at the trial, or give notice of their intention to show cause against such orders and thereupon the same shall not be enforced without further order.

Scope This section corresponds to section 7 of the English Act A magistrate before whom criminal proceedings are pending is a Court within the meaning of it. It is so made an order under this section R.

but the Judge ought to be satisfied that the application is necessary, but the Judge must be satisfied that the application is admissible in evidence in the action, and if required Arnott v Hayes, 36 Ch D 731, Poultney v Hayes, 36 Ch D 131, London & Lancashire Insurance Co v London & Lancashire Insurance Co, 29 T L R 675, or alter the principles of law or the practice with regard to discovery (Pollock v Larle, 1898, 1 Ch 4) or take away any previously existing ground of privilege [South Staffordshire Tramways Co v Lbbs Smith, (1895) 2 Q B 669 C A; Parnell v Wood, (1893) P 139] An order under this section should be made on sufficient ground only Perry v Phosphor Bronze Co, (1894) 71 L T. 854. Where a defendant applied for inspection to assist him to justify a libel imputing pecuniary embarrassment inspection was refused Emmot v Star Newspaper Co 62 L J Q B 77 Similarly in Pollock v Earle, (1893) 1 Ch 1 the C A refused to make an order in the case of third persons who were neither actual nor constructive parties to the case, e g, as to the bank its directors for inducing as to such balance. Phip he Court should take care n" The order should only be made where the entries of which inspection is sought will be admissible in evidence at the trial Houard v Tall 23 Q B D at p 2

It seems that the Court has jurisdiction to order inspection of the accounts of third parties Houard v Tall 23 Q B D 1, South Staffordshire v Dibbsmith, (1895) 2 Q B 669, M'Gorman v Aheras 35 Ir L T R 84, Agra Bank v Kashi Ram, P L R 1900, p 237 But this power should not be exercised ordinarily Pollock v Earle (1893) 1 Ch 1 But when order for inspecting the accounts of third parties is sought a notice should be given to him South Staffo

not i were doubt mea 284
his

an order to inspect the banker's book, and in a fit case an order will be made Perry v Phosphor Co, (1894) 71 L T 854, Yearly Practice, (1921) 459 The qualifications of the cor and customer are (a) there is a duty to th nk, even when they are bank by whom the entries T L R 573 But it is Books come within the ok in

ting
The
re
k
or Provincial Banks, (1924)
n order under section 6 behalf, the Court ought party the Court ought Tricunial v Lalhm

7 (1) The costs of any application to the Court or a Judge, under or for the purposes of this

Costs

Act, and the costs of anything done or to be done under an order of the Court or a Judge made under or for the purposes of this Act, shall be in the discretion of the Court or Judge, who may further order such costs or any part thereof to be paid to any party by the bank if they have been incurred in consequence of any fault or improper delay on the part of the bank.

(2). Any order made under this section for the payment of costs to or by a bank may be enforced as if the bank were a party to the proceeding.

(3) Any order under this section awarding costs may, on application to any Court of Civil Jurisdiction designated in the order, be executed by such Court as if the order were a decree for money passed by itself

Provided that nothing in this sub section shall be construed to derogate from any power which Court or Judge making the order may possess for the enforcement of its or his discretions with respect to the payment of costs.

APPENDIX G.

THE INDIAN OATHS ACT.

ACT X OF 1873

Received the assent of the Governor General on the 8th April, 1873

An Act to consolidate the law relating to Judicial oaths, and for other purposes.

Whereas it is expedient to consolidate the law relating to judicial oaths, affirmations and declarations and to repeal the law relating to official oaths, affirmations and declarations; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1 PRELIMINARY

Short title 1. This Act may be called "The Indian Oaths Act 1873".

It extends to the whole of British India, and so far as regards subjects of Her Majesty, to the territories of Native Princes and States in alliance with Her Majesty ;

[Commencement]—Repealed by the Repealing Act, 1873 (II of 1873).

history
tive civ adminis
single P modes o
'Judiciu
his plea

The progress from this the 1800 s in some of the common modes of procedure) to the second stage of a test of security for credibility was marked in the 1700 s in some of the 1800 s stage of come full marked in
of complete application feature by

Theory
be termed objective whereby w

... a modern common law, may be termed swearing
they know

if they testify falsely Gobind Ram v Empress, 18 P R 1893 Cr The procedure of the arbitrator is not governed by the Oaths Act Bhagrat v Ram Ghulam, 4 A 283-A W N 1882, 31 A Magistrate is not competent to administer oath in the course of a non-judicial inquiry Allahwaray v Crown, 17 Cr L J 368-35 Ind Cas 672

III PERSON BY WHOM OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS MUST BE MADE

Oaths or affirmations to be made by— 5 Oaths or affirmations shall be made by the following persons:—

(a) All witnesses, that is to say, all persons who may lawfully be examined, or give, or be required to give evidence by or before any Court or person having by law or consent of parties authority to examine such persons or to receive evidence;

Interpreters (b) interpreters of questions put to, and evidence given by witnesses;

Jurors. (c) jurors.

Nothing herein contained shall render it lawful to administer in a criminal proceeding, an oath or affirmation to accused person, or necessary to administer to the official interpreter of any Court, after he has entered on the execution of the duties of his office, an oath or affirmation that he will faithfully discharge those duties.

Noting that the said provisions of the Act are not applicable to the said persons.

Miller
Omiche
Supren
whom I
It is tence
said,

punish a s, 4 Jones

n be upon which requires a
The purpose of
the attention of
in appeal to the
the avenger of

Persons subjected to the oath this section requires that oaths or affirmations shall be made by the three following classes of persons, namely (1) witnesses (2) interpreters, and (3) jurors. So oath or affirmation is requisite in all testimonial statements made in Court. An interpreter is a kind of witness and must be sworn. Wigmore § 1824, R v Douglas, 13 Q B D 42, 59, 66, 72. A juror should also be sworn. Queen v. Ramsodoy, 20 W. R Cr 19.

Accused person. "Originally an accused person was allowed to produce no witnesses; later, he might produce them, but they testified without oath, and finally he was allowed to be sworn." Wigmore § 1824. This section as well as section (4) lays down that no oath shall be administered in sub section (4) that no oath shall be administered in reference only to the statement made by him.

It has no power to make an oath under also Reg v. Emperor, 22 Q, All India Emperor v. King Emperor, 23 B 213, Nga Nque v. K E, 20 Cr L J. 312, Q E v. Tribuni, 20 Durani, 23 B 213, Nga Nque v. K E, 20 Cr L J. 265; K E v. Annya, 3 Bom L R 437 A 426; Joseph v. Emperor, 3 Bur L J 265; K E v. Annya, 3 Bom L R 437. The term "accused" means a person under trial. Hinanda v. Emperor, 2 C L J 149, see also Emperor v. Govind, 18 Corporation of Calcutta, 31 C. W. N 306 = no power to administer an oath or affirm records under s 164 Cr Pro Code. Lalu 10 C P L R Cr 16.

Scope of the section. The direction in s 164 Cr Pro Code that the statement at all be recorded in one of the manners prescribed for recording procedure. The statement itself is one which is made before the Court by a witness, and is therefore part of the Evidence Act. The person making it is not a witness. Queen Empress v. Alagu, 16 M L J 161 = 22 Ind 18 Act is imperative, some person is not a witness. Whether a person is examined as a witness or not is a question of fact regarding the case. In any option, it is evidence, but to the case may be Queen Empress v. Alagu, 16 M L J 161 = 22 Ind 18 Act is imperative, some person is not a witness. Whether a person is examined as a witness or not is a question of fact regarding the case. In any option, it is evidence, but to the case may be Queen Empress v. Alagu, 16 M L J 161 = 22 Ind 18 Act is imperative, an interpreter under the prosecution to Al v. King Emperor, 20 W. R Cr 19. prove that the interpretation was made accurately, 9 C L J 690 = 13 C W. N 942.

An enquiry on an application under s 100 Cr Pro Code, 1898, in issue of a search warrant is judicial inquiry and proceedings preliminary to the issue of a search warrant under s 100 are judicial proceedings. In the course of such proceedings to examine persons 5 of the Oaths Abdul Aziz v. Abdul Aziz.

6. Where the witness, interpreter or juror is a Hindu or Muhammadan, or has objection to making an oath, he shall, instead of making an oath, make an affirmation.

Affirmation by natives or by persons objecting to oaths

In every other case, the witness, interpreter, or juror shall make an oath

Hindu and Mahomedan law on the subject. 'If we turn to India even prior to the introduction of English rule, we find that the Laws of Menu had their oath too, and in point of form, that prescribed by Menu is not very different from the English one.—The imprecatory part too of the oath of Menu, if not framed exactly in conformity with the varying Code of the religious belief of the swearer, was nevertheless in a form adopted to the peculiarities of the influence by which each individual might be presumed to be most affected. Let the Judge cause a Priest to swear by elephant and his weapons, a Merchant by or servile man imprecating on his own crimes. The meaning is he shall adjure: falsely your truth will be destroyed, a Cashetree by saying your horse or elephant and weapon become useless, a Vaisya 'your cattle, seeds and gold will be unproductive.' A Sudra he shall adjure by saying, 'if you speak falsely all sins will be imprecations punishment have been swearing sanctioned.

19 C 355.

IV FORM OF OATHS AND AFFIRMATIONS

7. All oaths and affirmations made under section 5 shall be administered according to such forms as the High Court may from time to time prescribe.

And until any such forms are prescribed by the High Court, such oaths and affirmations shall be administered according to the forms now in use

Explanation—Repealed by the Lower Burma Courts Act (VI of 1900) s. 48. Schedule II.

swear according to his own notion of the oath in the same case L. C. sud. "The next thing is the form of the oath It is laid down by all clerk of arraigns or of the peace to desire the witness to take the book in his hand and, that done to say to him 'The evidence you shall give between prisoner at the bar shall be the truth, the truth; So help you God', upon which the usual form of words in civil cases differred shall give to the Court and Jury, touching the oath, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth

So help you God 18
the administration of the oath is immaterial, provided that it bringing to bear of this apprehension of oaths or ceremonies are used in imposing as binding by his belief Indar Prasad Ind Cas 314 beginnings of capacity for various purposes Pl Cr I, 302, 634 Buller, Nisi Frius, 293, Young v Slaughter 22 Pl Cr 228, R v Trauers 1 Stra 700 But this view was finally repudiated in R v Drasier, East Pleas of the 'Crown, 1, 443 After much deliberation, where the Court said 'An infant, though under the age of seven years may be sworn in a criminal prosecution, provided such infant appears on strict examination by the Court, but is the evidence cannot be received' See also R v Perkins 2 Moo Cr, C 139; Braddon's Trial 9 How St Tr 1127, R v Holmes 2 F & F 788, Wignmore § 1821, Nafar v Emperor, 18 C W N 147-41 C 406, Iatu v Emperor, 6 Pat L J 147-61 Ind Cas 705 Evidence of child witnesses can be admitted without oath or affirmations In re Chinarenaladu, 33 M 550, Hussain v Emperor, 76 Ind Cas 1037, Hari Ramji v Emperor, 20 Bom L R 365-45 Ind Cas 497 In the case of a child witness the Judge is bound first to ascertain by questioning the child whether it is by tender years prevented from understanding the questions or from giving rational answers to those questions Then if the Judge intend so doing, on the ground solemn affirmation under child will be admissible

Emperor v Kusha, 5 Bom L R 551

8 If any party to, or witness in, any judicial proceeding offers to give evidence on oath or solemn affirmation in any form common amongst or held binding by, persons of the race or persuasion to which he belongs, and not repugnant to justice or decency and not purporting to affect any third person, the Court may, if it thinks fit, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, tender such oath or affirmation to him.

Scope of the parties C L J 77-78 any judicial proceedings in this section does not mean the complainant in a criminal proceeding nor the accused. Sections 811 of the Oaths Act do not apply to criminal proceedings. Queen Empress v. Murari 13 B 359, Imperator v. Hyt Ali, 5 S L R 129-13 Ind Cas 215-13 Cr L J 23, 1 Weir 822, Emperor v. Chitman 22 Bom L R 898-58 Ind Cas 147. Under the provisions of this Act, an oath proposed in a form which could affect a third party can not under . . . Ram Narain v. Babu Singh, 18 A 4 . . . 1916-7 Ind L J 513 . . . as 448, 23 A

1873 Irsu Meah v Aalaram, 2 C L R 176, Ulagappa v Peria, 15 Ind Cas 195. But where defendant also refuses no presumption arises Sukdeo v Ganesh, 10 Ind Cas 472=7 N L R. 50

Where in a suit, the parties put in a joint application evidencing an agreement to abide by the statement on oath of a certain person, but one of the parties led them to withdraw from the reference on the ground that the statement was not correct, and the other party with the other party and no collusion was allowed to do so. Chuddu v. Kuar Sen, 1914, 10 C.L.J. 100.

An agreement to a case decided on the evidence of a third person given on oath, in Code, and would join in it. The such a case. Law

Neither an invocation nor an oath or affirmation in the technical sense of the words is in any way an essential part of the special oath or solemn affirmation provided for in section 8 of the Indian Oaths Act of 1873. The

the first from its very nature, and must be in the form held deponent belongs. The special is a complete substitute for the o supplemented by it or any pr used in respect of the special procedure provided for in section 8 are merely descriptive of the nature and suggestive of the consequences of the ritual—linking it up with ordinary oaths and affirmations—but are in no way connected with what its form should be. Indar Prasad v Jogmohan Das, 31 C W. N 1053=54 I A 301=2 Luck 316=46 C L J 13=39 M L. T. 618=53 M L J. 1 (P C)=54 I A 301.

abide
very d
Code
guardian although given without the leave of the Court, provided there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the guardian Muhammad v. Behary Lal, A I R 1930 Cal 463.

9. If any party to any judicial proceeding offers to be bound by any such oath or solemn affirmation as is mentioned in section 8, if such oath or affirmation is made by the other party to, or by any witness in, such proceeding, the Court may, if it thinks fit, ask such party or witness, or cause him to be asked, whether or not he will make such oath or affirmation.

Court may ask party or witness whether he will make oath proposed by opposite party.

witness, or cause him to be asked, whether or not he will make the oath or affirmation

G. Provided that no party or witness shall be compelled to attend personally in Court solely for the purpose of answering such question.

Scope Under §§ 8 and 9 of the Act, it is not necessary that the form of oath should be specified before it can be held binding on the parties agreeing to be bound by it. It is sufficient if the oath is common among, and held binding by the class to which the parties belong. Ahmad Ali v Hanuman, 29 P R 1887. If in the course of a suit, the plaintiff offers to bind himself by the oath of a witness and the witness, after consenting to the offer, refused afterwards to take oath, the Court cannot decree the suit in the plaintiff's favour, even though the defendant had agreed to it in case the witness refused to take the oath. Such an act on the part of the Court is not sanctioned by the Oaths Act. Bawa Suchat v Ratna, 31 P R 18. to record evidence in a case cannot

tion between Court and P s not include persons authorised to

Puran Chand v Chabar, 69 P R,

1909. Pleader has no power to bind client by oath. Perag v Ram, 75 P R 1900. Ordinarily, it is the party himself that can make an offer contemplated under this section. If, however, a party specially authorises his pleader, or an agent, to make an offer to be bound by a particular oath, he might be estopped from retracting the step he had taken if his offer were acted on. Sadasiv v Maruti, 14 B 455. A offer by

or absence of the Court's sanction to the agreement under s 4b2, the minor defendant is barred by the consent of his guardian, if there is no fraud or defendant offered

s 1 at which the Act, agrees to be bound by an o be bound by an oath is in effect, an der the oath is the evidence in the

If the party who has agreed to be bound prevents the oath being taken, the other party is entitled to a decree the result of
on is that there
M L J. 99,
Thoyr Ammal v

Where the defendant takes oath proposed by the plaintiff, the oath is J 244=31 A. 315=2 Ind bound by the oath of the other party and to have the case decided in accordance therewith. Wasir zaman v Fata Dib, 11 A L J 39=38 A 131=32 Ind Cas 318

Where the agreement proves abortive, a suit can be decided on evidence taken Seshagiri v Sankany Setti, 1 L W 258=1917 M W N 101=36 Ind Cas 1001 Where an offer is made by plaintiff to be bound by oath the Court has full discretion to call upon the defendant to accept or refuse the offer, and, subject to the exercise of that discretion, the offer once made stands, and if the defendant eventually accepts it, the plaintiff is bound by the result Ahaway Din v M. Nur 6 Ind Cas 701 See also S. S. v. S. S. 1926 Loh 240

Ordinarily a party cannot resile from his offer, but he can do so with the permission of the Court Ram Bhai v Dhuni 92 Ind Cas 813; Narayan v Srilantha 4 Mys L J 217, Sahib v Wali, 49 A 388=25 A L J 297=A. I R. 1927 All 590 If a party after agreeing to abide by an oath satisfies the Court that there is good ground for retracting, the Court would exercise a wise discretion in refusing to administer the oath and it is only when a party puts forward frivolous reasons for retracting that the Court would be justified in administering the oath notwithstanding the retraction Ramdeo v Naipal, A. I. R. 1933 All 184

Where in certain divorce proceedings among Mahomedans the plea for the wife applied that both parties should be put on special oath and the Court granted the application directing the application to be put on special oath prescribed 'or Tann' under Mahon that the other party agreed to abide by not be conclusive because of secti Umar Saheb, 52 B 295=110 Ind Cas 151=30 Bom L R 441=A. I. R. 1928 B 268

The word "party" in this section includes a duly authorised representative such as a pleader and that he can make the offer contemplated by the section Amir v Mohammad 5 O W N 10, see also Hata v Samai 187 Ind Cas 810=33 P L R 470=A I R 1932 Lah 414

A party cannot add new condition to his original offer and the other party can take the oath in accordance with the original offer. Kinhi v Kunnath, 1928 M W N 113=A I R 1928 Mad 488=109 Ind Cas 758

10 If such party or witness agrees to make such oath or affirmation, the Court may proceed to ad-

Administration of oath if accepted minister it or, if it is of such a nature that it may be more conveniently made out of Court, the Court may issue a commission to any person to administer it, and authorize him to take the evidence of the person to be sworn or affirmed and return it to the Court.

the oath itself, must issue a Commission to some person to administer it and to be sworn and return it to the Court, see also Dir Bux v. Dir Meah, as Evidence conclusive against person offering to be bound

Scope of the section provisions of the Act is proceedings. Keshava examined under the usual form of oath
of
the

person who offered to do so and by stated Maddhogir v Gopal Bhasin, 7 C P L R 122, Su in v 100, 1898, Hamid v Naqvi 84 Ind Crs 729, Gramathul v Sidlayya, 90 Ind Crs 577 (2) - 49 M L J 379. A statement by a witness that a party is in possession is in point of law admissible evidence of the fact that such party was in possession under section 11 of the Oaths Act, it is conclusive proof of the matters stated. The expression "conclusive proof" in s 11 is to be understood in the sense in which it is defined by s 4 of the Indian Evidence Act 1872. Vithu v Pampy 8 Bom L R 19-1 M L J 63.

The parties to a suit agreed to be bound by the deposition of a referee in the manner contemplated by the decree. The referee died afterwards and did not fully cover the questions to be usual procedure. Mahe usual procedure Mah

There is nothing in the Indian Oaths Act constraining a Court to follow a decision in favour of a particular party. If a party to a suit says that he would be bound by the oath of a particular person under the provisions of section 11 of the Act, it means no more than this that pro tanto he will be bound, that is to say, in so far as the matter of that evidence is concerned, and that evidence will be conclusive as to its truth, and the truth of such evidence will be conclusive as against him throughout the whole of the litigation. But it does not, in any way, compel the Court to accept that evidence as conclusive. Muhammad Zahu

An attorney empowered to be decided accordingly

P R 1903; see also Gharib v

Under this section the oath is not conclusive to the suit but is so only na v Bala Shela, 3 M L T 163 might be made by the plaintiff upon oath as prescribed by law. The plaintiff accordingly was examined on oath administered in the usual manner. Held, that though the statement then made by the plaintiff might not be binding, nevertheless, 1873, the decision of the Muhammad, A ed under the provisions of sections 8 11 of subsequent proceeding Badiuddin v Niram 31

It confirms the decree of the first Court on the strength of the claim of a party to the suit on a question of fact, the decree of the Court is none the less a final adjudication. Ahmed v. Mohidin, 24 M 441.

Where the plaintiff originally agreed to be bound by the oath of the defendant, if taken in a particular form and subsequently varied the agreement by attaching further conditions as to the way in which the oath should be made, opportunity must be given to the defendant to take the oath in the manner originally agreed upon between the parties. If the defendant does so, the evidence so given will be the defendant refuses to take the oath on the merits Thulku.

An adjudication by a Court on an oath made by one of the parties to the suit would make the matter or issue covered by the adjudication res judicata in a subsequent litigation between the same parties, though the subject matter of the suit is different Sanyal v Artu Suaro, 13 M L T 261=24 M L J 331=36 M 257=18 Ind Cas 835.

An oath is under s 11 of the Oaths Act conclusive only as against the person against one who never joined in the oath. Right of appeal against the decision =50 P W R 1918=45 Ind.

C 230

Where the agreement was to take the oath on a particular day, but the oath was taken on a later day the burden lies on the person who relies on the oath to show that the oath was taken on the day specified in the contract Athermantuth v Chandroth, 1.

When a defendant takes an oath by the defendant, the Court is bound to decide in favour of plaintiff Jamna v Nanda, 118 P. R 1919=57 P L R 1919=49 Ind Cas 1005.

An oath taken by a minor defendant to the effect that he is the son of the minor defendant is bound to be taken on the specified oath Porbhu v Jamil.

When a statement is made by the defendant in the presence of the witness, the statement being made on oath was conclusive proof of the facts set forth in it. Dilsukh v Bawa Bama, 1, R 5 A 147.

When a statement is made by the defendant in the presence of the witness, the statement being made on oath was conclusive proof of the facts set forth in it. Dilsukh v Bawa Bama, 1, R 5 A 147.

When a statement is made by the defendant in the presence of the witness, the statement being made on oath was conclusive proof of the facts set forth in it. Dilsukh v Bawa Bama, 1, R 5 A 147.

There is nothing in the Oaths Act which requires that the reference to the referee comes to an end as soon as the referee has once been examined. The referee can be re-examined if all the points which would be necessary to be examined are not examined. Shen v Kashi Nath, 48 A 276=A I R 1927 A 11 676.

When a statement is made by the defendant in the presence of the witness, the statement being made on oath was conclusive proof of the facts set forth in it. Dilsukh v Bawa Bama, 1, R 5 A 147.

When a statement is made by the defendant in the presence of the witness, the statement being made on oath was conclusive proof of the facts set forth in it. Dilsukh v Bawa Bama, 1, R 5 A 147.

When a statement is made by the defendant in the presence of the witness, the statement being made on oath was conclusive proof of the facts set forth in it. Dilsukh v Bawa Bama, 1, R 5 A 147.

12 If the party or witness refuses to make the oath or solemn affirmation referred to in section 8, he shall not be compelled to make it, but the Court shall record, as part of the proceedings, the nature of the oath or affirmation proposed, the facts

Admission—continued

if subject to rules of testimonial qualifications, 307
 if to be taken as a whole, 309 503 improper, or rejection of evidence, English and Indian law, differentiated, 1199 improper or rejection of evidence, in civil cases, 1500 improper or rejection of evidence criminal cases 1502
 in civil cases when relevant 372
 in criminal cases, 841
 indirect meaning of, 301
 in divorce cases 843
 in pleadings, nature of, 503
 in pleadings when conclusive, 504 judicial, and extrajudicial, contracted in probative force, 312 judicial, and functions of the Court, 846 judicial, future of the doctrine of, 846
 judicial made by mistake, 845 law as to, if a general procedural requirement, 319
 meaning of, 301, 499
 not conclusive proof, but may operate as estoppel, 499 not put to party if evidence 1433
 of ancestor against heir etc, if evidence, 349 of evidence, grounds of objection to, 88 of evidence nature of the objection to 87
 of evidence, time of objection to, 88
 of evidence to show intent or plan applicable both in civil and criminal cases, 294 of evidence waiver of objection to, 88
 of execution by party to attested document, 930, of improper evidence by consent, if evidence, 617
 of insolvents, if evidence, 351 of landlord and tenant, mortgagor, and mortgagee, if evidence, 350 of liability, onus in, 1130
 of life estate holder and remainder man, if evidence, 350 of the previous owner if binding on the auction purchaser, 347 of vendor or assignor of personality, if evidence 351 on matter of law, 361
 other judicial, if evidence, 564
 previous, if evidence, 269
 principles of exclusion, 372 principles of exclusion of if analogous to that of privileged ———— 372

Admission—continued

principles of exclusion of if based on public policy 373 principles on which received, 304 probative force of, 309 probative status Wigmore's views as to, 305 to whom to be made, 314
 true reason of the exclusion of, 374.
 when to be made, 938
 written, as to the contents of an

distin-

cases, 144
 evidence under section 7, illustrative cases of, 123, 125, 127, 128
 evidence under section 10, illustrative cases of, 187
 evidence under section 11, illustrative cases of, 199
 evidence under section 13, illustrative cases of, 249
 evidence under section 14, illustrative cases of, 282
 evidence under section 14, in English cases 280
 evidence under section 15, illustrative cases of, 294
 evidence under section 16, illustrative cases of, 300
 evidence under section 18, illustrative cases of, 351
 evidence under section 19, illustrative cases of, 354
 evidence under section 21, illustrative cases of, 368
 evidence under section 24, illustrative cases of, 378

Admission, made under constraint or duress, 317

10,

Adverse possession, onus in, 1130
 possessor's declaration, if relevant in, 106

witness, meaning of, 1451
Advice sought for miscellaneous non-legal purpose, if privileged, 1341

Affecting himself and some other, meaning of, 489

Affidavits, if admissible, 617
 if to be treated as evidence, 32.

- Agent, onus in case of, 1131
 proof of good faith in case of, 1181
 Agreement, parol proof of subsequent, 1071
 parol proof of subsequent, when the document, is reduced to writing 107
 Agree to admit at the hearing, meaning of, 840
 Agriculturist, onus in case of 1131
 Alibi, nature of the theory of, 130
 theory of, 192
 Alluvion and diluvion, onus in case of, 1131
 Alteration, presumption as to, 1219
 Altered instrument, burden of proof in, 1159
 Ambiguities, blanks and, 1093
 extrinsic evidence of, 1091
 extrinsic evidence, when not admissible in 1096
Lord Bacon's Rule, original scope of in, 1090 patent and latent differentiated, 1001 rule as laid down in Colpoys v Colpoys, 1092 similar law as to 1091
 Starkie's classification of patent, 1093
 two sorts of, per Lord Bacon, 1089
 Ambiguity, document plain in itself, evidence if, of, 1098 evidence of intention, if admissible in, 1108
 intention in, 1098
 meaning, if to be ascertained from the whole document, 1099
 Ancient document, corroborative evidence of, 996
 possession, evidence as to, 608
 'And of no others' meaning of, 85
 Antecedent, meaning of, 142
 Antedating onus in, 1131.
 'Any fact' meaning of, 456
 Any matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, meaning of, 1009, 1029
 Any obligation, meaning of, 1068
 Anything said or done, etc, if admissible under section 10, 186
 Appropriation, onus in, 1131
 Arbitration, onus in, 1131
 Artists and scientists, opinion of, 741
 'As between the parties to such instrument' meaning of, 1027
 Ask any question meaning of, 1491
 Assent presumption as to, 1220
 Attachment, onus in, 1132
 Attempts previously made to commit an offence nature of, 142.
 to escape if affects the actor only, 148
 to escape if relevant, 148
 Attestation, by a scribe, 924
 by a sub registrar, 925
 meaning of, 921
 presumption as to, 1220
 requisites of valid, 923
 Attesting witness denies, evidence if, 940
 witness does not recollect, evidence if, 941 Attestor, if unavailable for illness, failure of memory, 936
 to be competent at the time of attestation, 936
 Attestor's, hearsay statement how admissible, 933
 Auction purchaser, onus in case of, 1132.
 Authentication, general principle of, 912
 Avoidance of encumbrance, onus in case of, 1132
 Award, onus in 1132
 B
 Bailment, onus, in 1132
 Bankrupt's declaration, if relevant, 107
 Barrister, Attorney or Vakil, meaning of, 1341.
 Batwara, Khasra, if admissible, 658
 papers, if admissible, 247
 Belief or consciousness how evidenced from external circumstances standard of, in evidence, 54
 Benami, presumption as to, 1220
 transaction, onus in, 1132
 Best evidence, presumption as to, 1220
 Bill of exchange, onus in, 1133
 of exchange, presumption as regards, 1208
 of bill of exchange, 1133
 B, British India, definition of, in the Evidence Act, 30
 C
 C, Chief Report of the select committee, 1522
 C Act II of 1855, 1556
 D, liability to damages for refusing to give evidence, 1563.
 F Amending Act, 1563
 I Banker's Books Evidence Act 1568
 G, Indian Oaths Act, 1573
 f Her 505
 D, Chief Report of the select committee, 1522
 C Act II of 1855, 1556
 D, liability to damages for refusing to give evidence, 1563.
 F Amending Act, 1563
 I Banker's Books Evidence Act 1568
 G, Indian Oaths Act, 1573
 exclusive 1921
 presumption as to, 1221
 Books referred to by Court, 836
 Boundaries, meaning of, 578
 disputes, onus in, 1133
 British India, definition of, in the Evidence Act, 30

him to justify a libel imputing pecuniary embarrassment, inspection was refused Emmot v Star Newspaper Co 62 L J Q B 77 Similarly in Pollock v Earle, (1898) 1 Ch 1 the C A refused to make an order in the case of third persons who were neither actual nor constructive parties to the case, e g, as to the bank inst one of its directors for inducing representation as to such balance Phip R said "The Court should take care of oppression" The order should only be made where the entries of which inspection is sought will be admissible in evidence at the trial Howard v Peall 23 Q B D at p 2

It seems that the Court has jurisdiction to order inspection of the accounts of third parties Howard v Peall 23 Q B D 1, South Staffordshire v Ebbsmith, (1895) 2 Q B 669, M'Gorman v Kierans, 35 Ir L T R 84, Agia Bank v Kashi Rim, P L R 1900, p 237 But this power should not be exercised ordinarily Pollock v Earle, (1898) 1 Ch 1 But when order for inspecting the accounts of third parties is sought, a notice should be given to him South B 669

kept by the bank, even when they are successors of the bank by whom the entries doubtful whether the meaning of the Bankers' 284=8 Q W N 125 his affidavit of documents

But it is thin the b, 31 C book in getting fit case an order will be made Yearly Practice, (1921) 450 The implied in the relation of banker and customer are (a) where disclosure is under compulsion by law, (b) where there is a duty to the public to disclose, (c) where the interest of the bank required disclosure, and (d) where the disclosure is made by the express or implied consent of the customer Tournier v National Provincial Banks, (1924) 1 K B 461=93 L J K B 449 Where a party desires an order under section 6 of the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1891 on his own behalf, the Court ought to grant it ex parte, but where he applies against the other party the Court ought not to make the order without notice to the other party Tricunlai v Lakshmi chand, 5 Bom L R 865

7. (1) The costs of any application to the Court or a

Costs

Judge, under or for the purposes of this Act, and the costs of anything done or to be done under an order of the Court or a Judge made under or for the purposes of this Act, shall be in the discretion of the Court or Judge, who may further order such costs or any part thereof to be paid to any party by the bank if they have been incurred in consequence of any fault or improper delay on the part of the bank.

(2). Any order made under this section for the payment of costs to or by a bank may be enforced as if the bank were a party to the proceeding.

(3) Any order under this section awarding costs may, on application to any Court of Civil Judicature designated in the order, be executed by such Court as if the order were a decree for money passed by itself:

Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall be construed to derogate from any power which Court or Judge making the order may possess for the enforcement of its or his discretions with respect to the payment of costs.

APPENDIX G.

A1

THE INDIAN OATHS ACT.

ACT X OF 1873

Received the assent of the Governor General on the 8th April, 1873

An Act to consolidate the law relating to Judicial oaths, and for other purposes.

Whereas it is expedient to consolidate the law relating to judicial oaths, affirmations and declarations and to repeal the law relating to official oaths, affirmations and declarations; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. PRELIMINARY

Short title 1. This Act may be called "The Indian Oaths Act 1873".

Local extent. It extends to the whole of British India, and so far as regards subjects of Her Majesty, to the territories of Native Princes and States in alliance with Her Majesty ;

[Commencement]—Repealed by the Repealing Act, 1873 (II of 1873).

History "takes our history 1 all primi tive civ t part in the adminis as only a single and supplants the place of the general resort to oaths the early Germanic modes of the early Germanic
'Judicial
his plea sworn & made wi
was att notions of the oath at large (which left its traces as late as the 1000 in some of the common modes of)

marked injustice, an
of competent witness
application of the c feature by rendering

— modern common law may

him to justify a libel imputing pecuniary embarrassment, inspection was refused Emmot v Star Newspaper Co 62 L J Q B 77 Similarly in Pollack v Earle, (1898) 1 Ch 1, the C A refused to make an order in the case of third persons who were neither actual nor constructive parties to the case, e.g., as to the bank balance of a company, in an action against one of its directors for inducing a purchase of its shares by " " " " " " " " which balance Phy Ev 352 In the above cases " " " " " " " " should take care that this section is not : e order should only be made where the entries of which inspection is sought will be admissible in evidence at the trial Houard v Iell 23 Q B D at p 2

of the (1895 Kashu
ordin accou

kept by the bank, even when they are

were made. Asylum it doubtful whether the meaning of the Banker
 284-8 C W N 125
 his affidavit of docume an order to inspect the Perry v Phosphor C
 qualifications of the contractual duty of secrecy implied in the relation of banker and customer are (a) Where disclosure is under compulsion by law, (b) where there is a duty to the public to disclose, (c) where the interest of the bank required disclosure, and (d) where the disclosure is made by the express or Banks, (1924)
 under section 6
 Court ought Court ought
 v Lakhmi

7. (1) The costs of any application to the Court or a Judge, under or for the purposes of this Act, and the costs of anything done or to be done under an order of the Court or a Judge made under or for the purposes of this Act, shall be in the discretion of the Court or Judge, who may further order such costs or any part thereof to be paid to any party by the bank if they have been incurred in consequence of any fault or improper delay on the part of the bank.

(2). Any order made under this section for the payment of costs to or by a bank may be enforced as if the bank were a party to the proceeding.

(3) Any order under this section awarding costs may, on application to any Court of Civil Judicature designated in the order, be executed by such Court as if the order were a decree for money passed by itself :

Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall be construed to derogate from any power which Court or Judge making the order may possess for the enforcement of its or his discretions with respect to the payment of costs.

APPENDIX G.

App.

THE INDIAN OATHS ACT.

ACT X OF 1873.

Received the assent of the Governor General on the 6th April, 1873

An Act to consolidate the law relating to Judicial oaths, and for other purposes.

Whereas it is expedient to consolidate the law relating to judicial oaths, affirmations and declarations and to repeal the law relating to official oaths, affirmations and declarations, It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. PRELIMINARY

1. This Act may be called "the Indian Oaths Act 1873".

Short title.

It extends to the whole of British India, and so far as regards subjects of Her Majesty, to the territories of Native Princes and States in alliance with Her Majesty ;

Local extent.

[Commencement]—Repealed by the Repealing Act, 1873 (II of 1873).

History. 'The employment of oaths' says Prof. Wigmore "takes our — back to the origins of Germanic law and custom, whereas in all primi

- I. Applicability The provisions of the Indian Oaths Act are not intended to be utilized in such a manner as would abrogate the provisions of the Evidence Act, but if what is deposited to is not the Evidence Act the fact of a special oath will Jamu v Muhammad, 90 Ind Cas 378 = A I R

2. [Repeal of Enactment] Repealed by Act XII of 1873

3 Nothing herein contained applies to proceedings before Saving of certain Courts Martial or to oaths, affirmations or declarations prescribed "by or under any instructions under the Royal Sign Manual of His Majesty or" by any law which, under the provisions of the Indian Councils Act, 1861, the Governor General in Council has no power to repeal.

II AUTHORITY TO ADMINISTER OATHS AND AFFIRMATIONS

4 The following Courts and persons are authorized to Authority to administer oaths and affirmations administer, by themselves, or by an officer empowered by them, in this behalf, oaths and affirmations in discharge of the duties or in exercise of the powers imposed or conferred upon them respectively by law —

- (a) all Courts and persons having by law or consent of parties authority to receive evidence,
- (b) the commanding officer of any military station occupied by troops in the service of Her Majesty

Provided .

(1) that the oath or affirmation be administered within the limits of the station, and

(2) that the oath or affirmation be such as a Justice of the Peace is competent to administer in British India.

Scope A Magistrate holding an enquiry as to the fitness of a surety has power to record evidence on oath in the exercise of the power and duty conferred upon him Emperor v Ghulam, 26 A 371 = A W N 1904 52 There is no provision of law which requires a Court examining a witness to record the fact that an oath was administered Syed Ahmed v King Emperor 11 A L J 933 = 35 A 575 Under the rules framed under the Steam Vessels Act, a Meah, 4 of the Indian evidence duties are null or in exercise of the powers imposed or conferred on them by law King Emperor v Pakist 2 L B R 272 A Sub magistrate acting under ch XIV of the Criminal Procedure Code is a Court acting in the discharge of a duty imposed on him by law and is therefore authorized to administer oath under this section Tevan v Emperor 29 M 59 = 3 Cr L J 370 Witnesses examined before a Commissioner appointed under Act XXXVII of 1800 to hold an enquiry into the behaviour of a certain Judicial officer are bound to state the truth and render themselves liable to be punished under s 193 I P C

If they testify falsely Gobind Ram v Empress, 18 P R 1893 Cr The procedure of the arbitrator is not governed by the Oaths Act Bhagirath v Ram Ghulam, 4 A 283=A W N 1882, 31 A Magistrate is not competent to administer oath in the course of a non-judicial inquiry Allahu arayo v Crown, 17 Cr L J 368=35 Ind Cas 672

III PERSON BY WHOM OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS MUST BE MADE

Oaths or affirmations to be made by— 5 Oaths or affirmations shall be made by the following persons—

(a) All witnesses, that is to say, all persons who may lawfully be examined, or give, or be required to give evidence by or before any Court or person having by law or consent of parties authority to examine such persons or to receive evidence,

(b) interpreters of questions put to, and evidence given by, witnesses;

(c) jurors

Nothing herein contained shall render it lawful to administer in a criminal proceeding, an oath or affirmation to accused person, or necessary to administer to the official interpreter of any Court, after he has entered on the execution of the duties of his office, an oath or affirmation that he will faithfully discharge those duties.

Nature of the — universally establish it is sufficient, for L O J in Omichand
said "Nothing but
according to our dea L O added "All that is necessary to an oath is an appeal to the Supreme Being, as thinking him the rewarder of Miller v Salomons, 7 Exch 535, M Omichand v Barker), was that the es Supreme Being in whose existence whom he also believed to be a rewarder of truth and an avenger of falsehood" V R
that

Supreme Being as thinking him the rewarder of truth and the avenger of falsehood Indar v Jog Mohan 1924 Oudh 412

Persons subjected to the oath. This section lays down that oaths or affirmations shall be made by the three following classes of persons, namely (1)

G witnesses (2) interpreters and (3) jurors. So oath or affirmation is requisite in all testimonial statements made in Court. An interpreter is a kind of witness and must be sworn. Hignore § 1824, R v Douglas 13 Q B D 49 59 66 72. A juror should also be sworn. Queen v Ramsdoy 20 W R Cr 19.

Accused person. Originally an accused person was allowed to produce no witnesses, later he might produce them but they testified without oath and finally they were allowed to be sworn. Hignore § 1824. This section as well as section 342 (4) of the Cr Pro Code lays down that no oath shall be administered to the accused. The provision in sub-section (4) that no oath shall be administered to the accused has reference only to the statement made by him in answers to questions put to him by the Court under this section. It has no reference to any other act of the accused, and therefore the accused can make an affidavit on oath in support of the case under section 526. Ghulam v King Emperor 9 P R 399, see also Peg v Hanmantha, 1B 610, Emp C W N 740, Alshoy v K E 45 C 720, Q F v Dalgna, 10 B 190, Allada v King Emperor 9 P R 1906, Bannu v Emperor, 33 C 1353, Emperor v Durant 23 B 213, Nga Ngue v K E 20 Cr L J 319, Q E v Tribuni 20 A 426, Joseph v Emperor 3 Bur L J 260, K E v Annya, 3 Bom L R 437. The term accused means a person under trial. Hinanda v Emperor 2 C L J 149 see also Emperor v Govind 18 Bom L R 266, Krishna Deoal v Corporation of Calcutta 31 C V N 506-28 Cr L J 407. A magistrate has no power to administer an oath or affirmation to a person whose statements he records under s 164 Cr Pro Code. Lalu v Empress, 2 P R 1893 Cr, see also 10 C P L R Cr 16.

Scope of the section. The direction in s 164 Cr Pro Code that the — shall be recorded in one of the manners prescribed for recording procedure re the Court of the Evid is Act Qu of obtaining information upon not before the Court he can witness. Hari Charan v Queen child understands the nature for the sake son of a era 13 A 10 C v Sheorath 10 C 1000 giving regard to the has any option as evidence but to the case may be Queen Empress v 161-22 Ind imperative

refer under prosecution to Kathai v King Emperor

100 Cr Pro Code, 1893, to issue binds preliminary to the issue of proceedings. In the course of such empowered to examine persons take oath under s 164 of the Oaths Act and under s 14 of the Indian Evidence Act to state the truth. Abdul A v Crown, 34 P R 1916 Cr 17 Cr L J 491-36 Ind Cas 171.

6 Where the witness, interpreter or juror is a Hindu or Muhammadan, Affirmation by him or by persons objecting to oaths or has objection to making an oath, he shall, instead of making an oath, make an affirmation.

In every other case, the witness, interpreter, or juror shall Ap make an oath.

Hindu and Mahomedan law on the subject "If we turn to India even prior to the introduction of English rule, we find that the Laws of Menu had their oath too, and in point of form, that prescribed by Menu is not very different from the English one —The imprecatory part too of the oath of Menu, if not framed exactly in conformity with the varying Code of the religious belief of the swearer, was nevertheless in a form adopted to the peculiarities of the influences by which each individual might be presumed to be most affected 'Let the Judge cause a Priest to swear by his veracity, a Soldier by his horse or elephant or servil crimes falsely y
and weapon become useless, a Yaisya 'your cattle, seeds and gold will be unproductive.' A Sudra he shall adjure by saying, 'if you speak falsely all sins will be on your head (Macnaughten's Hindu Law Vol I, 248) A course of imprecation though, by the way, which seems to address itself rather to the punishment of a present life, than a future one This however appears not to have been the only cause of swearing According to Mr Beaufort, the form of swearing by the water of the Ganges, and by copper and toolsy is virtually sanctioned by many shastras, but other prescribed forms are of equal validity; and all oaths, made by laying the hand on any symbol or image of the Diety
In
cas
Hi
tio
ext
R.
per
19 C 306.

IV FORM OF OATHS AND AFFIRMATIONS

7. All oaths and affirmations made under section 5 shall be administered according to such forms as the High Court may from time to time prescribe.

Forms of oaths and affirmations

And until any such forms are prescribed by the High Court, such oaths and affirmations shall be administered according to the forms now in use

Explanation—Repealed by the Lower Burma Courts Act (VI of 1900) s. 48. Schedule II.

Forms of oath In Omichund v Barker 1 Atk 45 Wills L C J. said.
"T
tion
Or
be swt
L
v
i
c
?
him his own cor
V. Solomons, 7 I

1578 THE INDICIA
1 Teach Cr L 4th Ed 412, Walker's Case
N Pleas 23, W v Extrehan, C & M 219, the usual form of oath in criminal cases at common law was as follows. The form at the assizes or sessions is, for the clerk of arraigns or of the peace to desire the witness to take the book in his hand, and, that done to say to him 'The evidence you shall give between our sovereign lord the king and the prisoner at the bar shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; So help you God', upon which the witness kisses the book' The usual form of words in civil cases differed slightly 'The evidence that you shall give to the Court and Jury, touching the matters in question, shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth' 11 Hamore § 1818 provided that it

† Lala Jogmohan, 11 U L J 400-02 114 0

Capacity to take oath—Children It was formerly thought that for children there was an age below which the incapacity to take the oath was beyond doubt and was to be regarded as always wanting. This notion was probably due to the unwarranted transfer into the law of Evidence of some principles of substantive law, by which certain ages, specially seven years, were thought to mark the beginnings of capacity for various purposes. Vide Co Litt 6 b, 2476, Hale Pl Cr 1, 302, 634 Buller, Nisi Prius, 293, Young v Slaughterford 11 Mod 228, R v Travers 1 Stra 700. But this view was finally repudiated in R v Drasier, East Pleas of the Crown, 1, 443. After much deliberation where the Court said 'An infant, though under the age of seven years may be sworn in a criminal prosecution, provided such infant appears on strict examination by the Court to possess a sufficient knowledge of the nature and consequences of an oath. For there is no precise or fixed rule as to the time within which infants are excluded from giving evidence, but their admissibility depends upon the sense and reason they entertain of the danger and impiety of falsehood, which is to be collected from their answers to questions propounded to them by the Court, but if they are found incompetent to take an oath, their testimony cannot be received. See also R v Perkins 2 Moo Cr, C 189, Braddon's Trial 9 How St Tr 1127, R v Holmes 2 F & F 788, Wigmore § 1821, Nasar v Emperor, 18 C W N 147-41 C 406, Fatu v Emperor, 6 Pat L J 147-61 Ind Cas 705. Evidence of child witnesses can be admitted without oath or affirmations. In re Chinatal adu, 38 M 550, Hussain v Emperor, 70 Ind Cas 1037, Hari Rany v Emperor, 20 Bom L R 365-45 Ind Cas 497. In the case of a child witness the Judge is bound first to ascertain by questioning the child whether it is by tender years prevented from understanding the questions put or from giving rational answers to those questions. Then if the Judge intend not to do so, he should proceed to administer so doing, on the ground solemn affirmation under child will be admissible.

section 13 of the Oaths Act the deposition of
Emperor v Kusha, 5 Bom L R 551

8 If any party to, or witness in, any judicial proceeding offers to give evidence on oath or solemn affirmation in any form common amongst, or held binding by, persons of the race or persuasion to which he belongs, and not repugnant to justice or decency and not purporting to affect any third person, the Court may, if it thinks fit, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, tender such oath or affirmation to him.

Scope of the section Under the parties and not from the Court C L J 77-36 C W N 786-A. I any judicial proceedings in this

-- should come from Cas 836-66
'party' to dominant in a criminal proceeding nor the accused Sections 8 11 of the Oaths Act do not apply to criminal proceedings Queen Empress v Murari 13 B 389, Imperial v. Haj Ali, 5 S L R 129=13 Ind Cas 215=13 Cr L J 23, 1 Weir 822, Emperor v Chaman, 22 Bom L R 898=58 Ind Cas 147 Under the provisions of this Act, an oath proposed in a form which could affect a third party can not under any circumstances be lawfully administered Ram Narain v Babu Singh, 18 A 46, Nabi Balsh v Ram Janaya, 66 P R 1916=7 Ind Cas 479=114 P L R 1910, Tulsi Ram v Dayaram, 88 Ind Cas 448 23 A L J 513 Where the lower appellate Court at the instance of the defendant, called a witness, the witness was found to be false, the Court was justified in setting aside the verdict of the trial Court, and in ordering a new trial. 1871 195. But where defendant also refuses no presumption arises Sukdeo v Ganesh, 10 Ind Cas 472=7 N L R 50

Where in a suit, the parties put in a joint application evidencing an agreement to abide by the statement on oath of a certain person, but one of the parties thereto subsequently, asked them to withdraw from the reference on the ground of collusion of that person with the other party and no collusion was proved Held, he could not be allowed to do so Chuddu v Kuar Sen, 2 A L J 654=29 A 49

on evidence of a third person given Cod
join
such a case Lakshraj Singh v Dulhama, 21 A 100

Neither an invocation nor an oath or affirmation in the technical sense of the words is in any way an essential part of the special oath or solemn affirmation provided for in section 8 of the Indian Oaths Act of 1873 The words "oath" and "affirmation" in section 8 of the Act is descriptive of the nature and suggestive of the consequences of the ritual—
the High Court prescribes, and must be in the form held deponent belongs The special is a complete substitute for the o supplemented by it or any part of it The words "oath" and "affirmation" used in respect of the special procedure provided for in section 8 are merely descriptive of the nature and suggestive of the consequences of the ritual—way connected

as, 31 C W N
618=53 M L

The offer of the guardian of a minor defendant on behalf of the minor to abide by the deposition to be given by a plaintiff on a special oath stands on a footing equal to that of the offer of the plaintiff to be examined on oath contemplated by C P. Code, section 251, and the consent of his guardian is not required provided there is no fraud or collusion. ammad v. Behary

9. If any party to any judicial proceeding offers to be bound by any such oath or solemn affirmation as is mentioned in section 8, if such oath or affirmation is made by the other party to, or by any witness in, such proceeding, the Court may, if it thinks fit, ask such party or witness, or cause him to be asked, whether or not he will make the oath or affirmation.

Court may ask party or witness whether he will make oath proposed by opposite party.

i. Provided that no party or witness shall be compelled to attend personally in Court solely for the purpose of answering such question.

Scope. Under ss 8 and 9 of the Act, it is not necessary that the form of oath should be specified before it can be held binding on the parties agreeing to be bound by it. It is sufficient if the oath is common among, and held binding by the class to which the parties belong. Ahmad Ali v Hanuman, 29 P R. 1837. If in the course of a suit, the plaintiff offers to bind himself by the oath of a witness and the witness, after consenting to the offer, refused afterwards to take oath, the Court cannot decree the suit in the plaintiff's favour, even though the defendant had agreed to it in case the witness refused to take the oath. Such an act on the part of the Court is not sanctioned by the Oaths Act. Bawa Suchat v Ratna, 31 P R 1838. A local commissioner appointed to record evidence in a case cannot administer an oath to one of the parties, under the provisions of ss 8, 9 and 10 of the Oaths Act. As the distinction between "Court" and persons is not include persons authorised to administer oaths. Puran Chand v Chabar, 89 P R.

client by oath. Perag v R himself that can make an offer a party special-bound by a
had taken if he
by the guar-
taken in a pa-
or compromi-
absence of the Court's sanction to the agreement under s 462, the minor defendant is barred by the consent of his guardian, if there is no fraud or negligence on the part of the latter. Shoo Narain v. Sukh Lal, 27 C 229-4 C W N 327, Chengal Reddi v Venkata, 12 M 483.

A person, who under s 9 of the Oaths Act, agrees to be bound by an oath cannot retract. The agreement to be bound by an oath is in effect, an agreement to treat the evidence given under the oath as the evidence in the case, and to dispense with other evidence. If the party who has agreed to be bound prevents the oath being taken, the other party is entitled to a decree. M L J. 99, Thoy: Ammal v

Subbaraya, 22 M. 231

Where the defendant takes oath proposed by the plaintiff, the oath is conclusive. Chhed: Lal v Jauala Prasad, 6 A L J 241-31 A. 315-2 Ind C.A. 111. to be
the
of
by

matter stated in the agreement is sufficient as the ground of a decision, a judgment may be passed, for then it would be conclusive evidence [under the Oaths Act. Vasudeva v. Naraina, 2 M 356. A duly authorized agent holding a special power-of-attorney from a party to a suit enabling him to conduct it in a manner he may deem fit can make an offer under s 9 of the Oaths Act, to be bound by the oath of the other party and to have the case decided in accordance therewith. Wasir-zaman v. Farza Bibi, 11 A L J 33-39 A. 131-32 App

Ind Cas 348

Where the agreement proves abortive, a suit can be decided on evidence taken Seshagiri v. Sankaraj Setti, 1 L W 258-1917 M W N 104-36 Ind Cas 1001. Where an offer is made by plaintiff to be bound by oath the Court it seems that under to refuse to refer

A 65; but see Mith
596-74 Ind Cas
1926 Lab 240

Ordinarily a party cannot renege from his offer, but he can do so with the permission of the Court Ram Bhaj v. Dhun 92 Ind Cas 813, Narayan v. Sriantha, 4 Mys L J 217, Salik v. Wali, 49 A 388-25 A L J 297-A I R. 1927 All 590 If a party after agreeing to abide by an oath satisfies the Court would exercise a wise is only when a party puts the Court would be justified in administering the oath notwithstanding the retraction Ramdeo v. Naipal, A I. R 1933 All 184

Where in certain divorce proceedings among Mahomedans the pleader not be conclusive because of section 11 of the Oaths Act Ahalya Bibi v. Umar Sahib, 52 B 295-110 Ind. Cas. 131-30 Bom L R 447-A I, R 1928 B 268

The word "party" in this section includes a duly authorised representative such as a pleader and that he can make the offer contemplated by the section Amir v. Mohammad, 5 O. W N 10, see also Hala v. Samail 137 Ind Cas 810-33 P L R 470-A I R 1932 Lab 414

- offer and the other party Kunnath, 1928

10 If such party or witness agrees to make such oath or affirmation, the Court may proceed to administer it or, if it is of such a nature that it may be more conveniently made out of Court, the Court may issue a commission to any person to administer it, and authorize him to take the evidence of the person to be sworn or affirmed and return it to the Court.

Administration of oath if accepted

Court, the Court may issue a commission to any person to administer it, and authorize him to take the evidence of the person to be sworn or affirmed and return it to the Court.

to be sworn or affirmed and return it to the Court.
to be adminis-
in any form
he requirements
J. 618 The
is only when 10 of the Act, to iminary to the administer the oath proposed the Krishna Rao v. Srinivasa Rao, 7 M L T. agreement must be adopted Krishna Rao v. Srinivasa Rao, 7 M L T. Under this section, the Court if it does not administer a commission to some person to administer it and the person to be sworn and return it to the Court. L N 122, see also Dar But v. Dar Meah,

11. The evidence so given shall, as against the person

{ Evidence conclusive who offered to be bound as aforesaid, as against person be conclusive proof of the matter offering to be bound stated.

Scope of the section. The decision of an issue arrived at, under the provisions of the Act is not an adjudication operating as an estoppel in any future proceedings. Akshara v Rulram, 5 M 259. This section does not apply to the evidence of a defendant who has been examined under the usual form of oath and not under any oath or form of affirmation under s 8. Ram Jaladar v Ram Kishen, 23 W R 397, see also Kashiram v Bhulu A W N 188, 188.

Under section 11, it is "the evidence so given" which shall, as against the person who offered to be bound, be conclusive proof of the matter stated. Maddhogir v Gopal, 45 P R 1598, Hamid v Nazim 84 Ind Cas 577 (2)=49 M L J 379 A.

It is in point of law admissible evidence of the fact that such party was in possession under section 11 of the Oaths Act, it is conclusive proof of the matters stated. The expression 'conclusive proof' in s 11 is to be understood in the sense in which it is defined by s 4 of the Indian Evidence Act 1872. Vithu v Ramji 8 Bom L R 19=1 M L T 63.

The parties to a suit agreed to be bound by the deposition of a referee in the manner contemplated by ss 10 and 11 of the Oaths Act, and a decree was passed in favour of one of the parties on the strength of that deposition. The referee died afterwards. The deposition did not fully cover the quest was, therefore, to be in usual procedure. Maha.

There is nothing in the Indian Oaths Act constraining a Court to pass a decision in favour of a particular party. If a party to a suit says that he would be bound by the oath of a particular person under the provisions of section 11 of the Act, it means no more than this that pro tanto he will be bound, that is to say in so far as the matter of that evidence is concerned and that evidence will be conclusive as to its truth, and the truth of such evidence will be conclusive in litigation. But it does not accept that evidence as a whole. A W N 1892, 3. The case and specifically to the client may bind him by offering the opposite party to take oath and the suit to be decided accordingly. Ganga Dissen v Matna, 143 P L R 1903=85 P R 1903; see also Gharib v Karim 72 P R 1874.

Under this section the oath is not conclusive to the suit, but is so only as to the facts deposed to in the oath. Jaitama v Bala Sheka, 3 M L T 163. Abdul Nussein v Badruddin, 1 Bom L R 531.

A defendant to a civil suit agreed to be bound by whatever statement might be made by the plaintiff upon oath as prescribed by law. The plaintiff accordingly was examined on oath administered in the usual manner. Held, that though the statement then made by the plaintiff might not be binding.

in 21 1893, 200

The oath taken in one proceeding under the provisions of sections 8 11 of the Act is not binding in any subsequent proceeding. Badiuddin v Nizamuddin, 33 C 386=10 C W N 501.

Where an appellate Court confirms the decree of the first Court on the strength of the oath of a party to the suit on a question of fact the decree of the Court is none the less a final adjudication. Ahmed v Mordin, 21 M 444.

Where the plaintiff originally agreed to be bound by the oath of the defendant, if taken in a particular form and subsequently varied the agreement by attaching further conditions as to the way in which the oath should be made, opportunity must be given to the defendant to take the oath in the manner originally agreed upon between the parties. If the defendant does so, the evidence so given will be conclusive evidence of the facts to which it relates. If the o

suit
a subsequent litigation between the same parties though the subject matter of the suit is different Sanjari v Artu Suaro, 13 M L T 261=24 M L J 321=36 M 237=18 Ind Cas 83.

only as against the one who never joined if appeal against the W R 1918=45 Ind

Cas 230

Where the agreement was to take the oath on a particular day but the oath was taken on a later day the burden lies on the person who relies on the oath t the contract Athermankuthi v

by the defendant, the Court is bound to decide in favour of plaintiff Jamna v Nanda, 118 P R 1919=57 P L R 1919=49 Ind Cas 1005

Where an offer is made by the guardian of the minor defendant to the plaintiff as regards the truth of a certain fact the minor defendant is bound by the statement of the plaintiff made under specified oath Porbhu v Jamil, 19 A L J 911

acc
anc
being made on oath was conclusive proof of the facts set forth in it Dusun v Raja Rama, L R. 5 A 147

This section does not provide that the evidence given on oath shall be

There is nothing in the Oaths Act which says that the reference to the referee comes to an end as The referee can be re examined if to be established are not put to him I R 1926 All 266=24 A L J 241

For the application of section 11 of the Oaths Act it is necessary that the "evidence" of the fact in contro- reidca, 103 Ind Cas 349=A I R.

de by the oath taken by a parti afterwards say that id Cas 864=A though the other parties do not agree to it. bound and the case must be tried only as against the others Bim Lalani v Hamill, 27 A L J 1095=118 Ind Cas 183=A I R 1929 A 759

12 If the party or witness refuses to make the oath or solemn affirmation referred to in section 8,

Procedure in case of refusal to make oath he shall not be compelled to make it, but the Court shall record, as part of the proceedings, the nature of the oath or affi- nropo ed, the facts that he was asked whether he would make it, and that he refused it, together with any reason which he may assign for his refusal

Scope of the section Under section 12 of the Act, it is only when a party refuses to make the oath proposed that the Court is bound to record that he was asked if he would make it and that he refused to do so Madhogir v Gopal, 7 C P L R 122 This section directs the Court to record as part of the proceedings the nature of the oath proposed, the fact that the party was asked to make the oath and refused, together with any reason assigned for the refusal. The section seems to contemplate that the Court shall give such weight as it may think fit, to the fact that a party has offered to make an oath, and has afterwards refused to make it, whilst it negatives the view that the refusal to make the oath is in itself a ground for dismissing the suit or giving the plaintiff a decree as the case may be Mryan v Pathu Kuli, 17 M L J 515 = 31 M 1, per White C J It may be doubted whether this section was intended to the defendant as to his indebtedness in the plaintiff's book the failure on the part of the plaintiff to produce the account book was equivalent to failure to take an oath, or refusal to be bound by an oath Amirchand v Govind Sahai 5 P R 1003 = 37 P L R 1903

A Court is not entitled to presume because a party refuses to take a special oath that his case is false In the absence of anything on the record to show the reasons for the refusal, no inference can be drawn Amantulla v Chhattoo, 93 Ind Cas 830 oath in conduct
in the case by positive evidence
1933 Nag 52

Where the plaintiff after agreeing to abide by the oath of a third person subsequently declined to abide by it, the Court has no power to dismiss the case on the ground that the plaintiff has failed to take a special oath but must allow the case to go to the jury with an inference that the plaintiff's case is true Lah 78

V MISCELLANEOUS

13 No omission to take any oath or make any affirmation, no substitution of any one for any other of them, and no irregularity whatever in the form in which any one of them is administered, shall invalidate any proceeding or render inadmissible any evidence whatever, in or in respect of which such omission, substitution or irregularity took place or shall affect the obligation of a witness to state the truth.

Scope The evidence of a boy aged 10, to whom no oath or affirmation was advisedly administered, was held admissible Budha v Lmpress, 31 P R 1889 Cr limited to R Cr 16, Chinna v omission and is not
v Sanbhai 11 C P L per Parker J, Golla
Queen v Sheo Bhogla,

23 W II Cr 12; Emperor v Kasha 5 Bom L R 351, Queen Empress v Shari, 16 B 359; Queen v Ananta, 22 W II Cr 1, Q v Perumal, 1 Weir 827 (1 B); Queen v Itarya, 22 W. R Cr 11; Bulchand v Tarak Nath, 18 C W. N. 1523; Nasir v Emperor, 18 C W N 147-41 C 406, Dhanu v Emperor, 13 A L J 1072, Emperor v Hari, 20 Bom L R 365, Emperor v Sashi, 24 C W N 767, Pulu v Emperor, 6 Pat L J 147, Hussain v Emperor, 1913 Lah 332, but see Queen Empress v ... ollins
C J; Queen v Masu, 10 A 207-A King
Emperor, 2 L R 322; Daya v King, 11 468
 If the jury in a Sessions trial are not sworn could be covered by this section Queen v This section has no application to the evidence of a witness taken on commission in a foreign territory Kadambini v Kumudini, 30 C 931-7 C W N 806
 This section applies to deposition taken by Registrar of the Presidency Court of Small Causes at Calcutta Bulchand v Tarak Nath, 18 C W N. 1323.

Asking whether a person would take oath and not recording the fact and not actually offering the oath are irregularities vitiating the trial Afsar Kahan v Shahu, 1922 Cal 148

14. Every person giving evidence on any subject before any Court or person hereby authorised to administer oaths and affirmations shall be bound to state the truth on such subject.

Scope Section 132 of the Evidence Act, read with s 14 of the Oaths Act compels a witness to answer criminating questions, and he is protected by the proviso to s 132 from a criminal prosecution for any offence for which he eliminates himself directly or indirectly by his answer except a prosecution for giving false evidence by such answer Queen Empress v Ganu Singh, 12 B 440

15. The Indian penal Code, sections 178 and 181 shall be construed as if, after the word "oath" the words "or affirmation" were inserted

Amendment of Penal Code ss 178 and 181

16. Subject to the provisions of sections 3 and 5, no person appointed to any office shall, before entering on execution of the duties of his office, be required to take any oath, or to make or subscribe to any affirmation or declaration whatever.

Official oaths abolished.

G. that he was asked whether he would make it, and that he refused it, together with any reason which he may assign for his refusal.

Scope of the section Under section 12 of the Act, it is only when a party refuses to make the oath proposed that the Court is bound to record that he was asked if he would make it and that he refused to do so. Madhogir v Gopal, 7 C P L R 122. This section directs the Court to record, as part of the proceedings, the nature of the oath proposed, the fact that the party was asked to make the oath and refused, together with any reason assigned for the refusal that the Court shall give such weight, as it may think fit, to the fact that the party has offered to make an oath, and has not refused to do so. This does not negatives the view that the refusal to make the oath is, in itself a ground for dismissing the suit or giving the plaintiff a decree, as the case may be. Miyar v Pathu Kuli, 17 M L J 545 = 31 M 1, per White C J. It may be doubted whether this section was intended to apply to a case, in which the parties have arrived at an agreement that one of them shall take an oath. Ibid per Miller J. By an agreement between the parties to a suit, the plaintiff agreed that he should take an oath, and that, on Patthakuli, 17 M L J 545 = 31 M L T 91 = 31 M 1.

Where the plaintiff offered to be bound by any statement recorded by the defendant as to his indebtedness in the plaintiff's book the failure on the part of the plaintiff to produce the account-book was equivalent to failure to take an oath, or refusal to be bound by an oath. Amurchand v. Govind Sahai, 5 P R 1003 = 37 P. L R 1903.

A Court is not entitled to presume because a party refuses to take a special oath that he is guilty of the offence charged. See Amurchand v. Govind Sahai, 5 P R 1003 = 37 P. L R 1903.

positive evidence which has been adduced. Rameshorday v. Gopy, A 1 R 1933 Nag 52.

Where the plaintiff after agreeing to abide by the oath of a third person subsequently declined to abide by it, the Court has no power to dismiss the case in accordance with the oath drawing such inference as may be drawn from the facts of the case. See Amurchand v. Govind Sahai, 5 P R 1003 = 37 P. L R 1903.

Lah 78

V. MISCELLANEOUS

13. No omission to take any oath or make any affirmation, no substitution of any one for any other of them, and no irregularity whatever in the form in which any one of them is administered, shall invalidate any proceeding or render inadmissible any evidence whatever, in or in respect of which such omission, substitution or irregularity took place or shall affect the obligation of a witness to state the truth.

Scope The evidence of a boy aged 10, to whom no oath or affirmation was advisedly administered, was held admissible. Budha v Empress, 31 P. R. 1889 Cr 71. The section does not include any omission and is not limited to. Empress v Sanbhai, 11 C P. L. M 105, per Parker J, Golla Cas 737; Queen v. Sheo Bhogta, 11 C P. L. M 105, per Parker J, Golla Cas 737.

23 W R Cr 12, Emperor v. Kasha 2 Bom L R 11, Queen Empress v. Shari 16 B 309, Queen v. Ananta 22 W R Cr 1, O v. Perumal, 1 Weir
 r 11 Bulchand v. Tirik Nath 18 3 C W N 147-11 C 406 Prin v
 20 Bom L R 305 Emperor v
 1 Pat L 1 147, Husain v. Emperor, Perumal 16 M 105 per Chinn
 W N 1888 86 Pan Ngun v. King

Emperor, 1 L R R 322; Daya v. King, 9 Bur L 1 133-36 Ind C 18 408
 If the jury in a Sessions trial are not sworn the omission is one which could be covered by this section Queen v. Purnaloy 20 W R Cr 19 This section has no application to the evidence of a witness taken on commission in a foreign territory Kalamani v. Kumulini, 30 C 134-7 C W N 806
 This section applies to deposition taken by Registrar of the Presidency Court of Small Causes at Calcutta Bulchand v. Tarak Nath, 18 C W N 1374

Asking whether a person would take oath and not recording the fact and not actually offering the oath are irregularities vitiating the trial 1/ai Ar 11 v Shabu 1922 Cal 148

14 Every person giving evidence on any subject before Person giving ev any Court or person hereby authorised to dence bound to state administer oaths and affirmations shall be the truth bound to state the truth on such subject

Scope Section 132 of the Evidence Act, read with s 14 of the Oaths Act compels a witness to answer proviso to s 132 from a cri minates himself directly giving false evidence by such

15 The Indian penal Code, sections 179 and 181 shall be construed as if, after the word Amendment of Penal "oath" the words "or affirmation" were Code as 178 and 181 inserted

16 Subject to the provisions of sections 3 and 5, no Official oaths abo person appointed to any office shall, before lished entering on execution of the duties of his office, be required to take any oath, or to make or subscribe to any affirmation or declaration whatever

Admission—continued

if subject to rules of testimonial qualifications, 307
 if to be taken as a whole, 309 503
 improper, or rejection of evidence, English and Indian law, "differentiated, 1499
 improper, or rejection of evidence,
 in civil cases, 1500
 improper, or rejection of evidence,
 criminal cases 1502
 in civil cases when relevant 373
 in criminal cases, 811
 indirect meaning of, 301
 in divorce cases 813
 in pleadings, nature of, 503
 in pleadings, when conclusive, 501 judicial, and extrajudicial, contracted in probative force, 312 judicial, and functions of the Court, 846
 judicial, future of the doctrine of, 816
 judicial made by mistake, 845 law as to, if a general probational requirement, 319
 meaning of, 301, 499
 not conclusive proof, but may operate as estoppel, 499
 not put to party if evidence 1433
 of ancestor against heir etc, if
 evidence, 349
 of evidence, grounds of objection
 to, 88
 of evidence nature of the objection
 to 87
 of evidence, time of objection to 89
 of evidence to show intent or plan applicable both in civil and criminal cases, 294
 of evidence waiver of objection to, 89
 of execution by party to attested
 document, 936,
 of improper evidence by consent
 if evidence, 617
 of insolvents, if evidence, 351
 of landlord and tenant, mortgagor and mortgagee, if evidence, 359
 of liability, onus in, 1130
 of life estate holder and remainder man, if evidence, 350
 of the previous owner if binding on the auction purchaser 347 of vendor or assignor of personality,
 if evidence 351
 on matter of law, 361
 other judicial, if evidence, 564
 previous, if evidence, 969
 principles of exclusion, 372
 principles of exclusion of if analogous to that of privileged communication, 372
 principles of exclusion of, if analogous to the notion of contract, 373

Admission—continued

principles of exclusion of, if based
 on
 to whom to be made, 314
 true reason of the exclusion of, 374
 when to be made 938
 written, as to the contents of an

distin

conditions of 316 725
 of evidence, meaning of 87 under section 37, requisites of 514 what is multiple, 86

Admissible, and inadmissible evidence under section 8, illustrative

 cases, 141
 evidence under section 7, illustra-
 tive cases of 123, 124, 127 128
 evidence under section 10, illustra-
 tive cases of, 187
 evidence under section 11, illustra-
 tive cases of 199
 evidence under section 13, illustra-
 tive cases of 249
 evidence under section 14, illustra-
 tive cases of 282
 evidence under section 14, in English cases 280
 evidence under section 15, illustra-
 tive cases of 294
 evidence under section 16, illustra-
 tive cases of 300
 evidence under section 18 illustra-
 tive cases of 321
 evidence under section 19 illustra-
 tive cases of, 351
 evidence under section 21 illustra-
 tive cases of, 368
 evidence under section 24, illustra-
 tive cases of, 378
 Admission, made under constraint or duress, 317

(o

Adverse possession, onus in, 1130 possessor's declaration, if relevant
 in, 106
 witness, meaning of, 1451
 Advice sought for miscellaneous non-legal purpose, if privileged, 1341 Affecting himself and some other
 meaning of, 493
 Affidavits of admissible 617
 if to "evidence, 32

Agent, onus in case of, 1131
 proof of good faith in case of, 1181 Agreement, parol proof of subsequent, 1071 parol proof of subsequent, when the document, is reduced to
 writing 107
 Agree to admit at the hearing, meaning
 of, 840
 Agriculturist, onus in case of 1131
 Alibi, nature of the theory of, 130
 theory of, 192
 Alluvion and diluvion, onus in case
 of, 1131
 Alteration, presumption as to, 1219
 Altered instrument, burden of proof
 in, 1159
 Ambiguities, blanks and, 1093
 extrinsic evidence of, 1091
 extrinsic evidence, when not admissible in 1096
Lord Bacon's Rule, original scope of in, 1090
 patent and latent differentiated, 1901 rule as laid down in Colpoys v Colpoys, 1092
 similar law as to 1091
 starkie's classification of patent, 1093
 two sorts of, per Lord Bacon, 1089 Ambiguity, document plain in itself, evidence if, of, 1098
 evidence of intention, if admissible
 in, 1108
 intention in, 1098
 meaning, if to be ascertained from the whole document, 1099 Ancient document, corroborative evidence of, 996
 possession, evidence as to, 608
 'And of no others' meaning of, 85
 Antecedent, meaning of, 142
 Antedating onus in, 1131.
 'Any fact' meaning of, 456
 Any matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, meaning of, 1009, 1029
 Any obligation, meaning of, 1068
 Anything said or done, etc, if admissible under section 10, 186
 Any time, meaning of, 1344 committee, 10 -
 C, Act II of 1855, 1556
 D, liability to damages for refusing to give evidence, 1563
 F Amending Acts 1563
 G, Banker's Books Evidence Act 1568
 G, Indian Oaths Act, 1573.

Her
 elect

Appropriation, onus in, 1131
 Arbitration, onus in, 1131
 Assent - presumption as to, 1220
 Attachment, onus in, 1132
 Attempts, previously made to commit an offence nature of, 142
 to escape if affects the actor only, 148
 to escape if relevant, 148
 Attestation, by a scribe, 924
 by a sub registrar, 925
 meaning of, 921
 presumption as to, 1220
 requisites of valid, 923
 Attesting witness denies, evidence
 if, 940
 witness does not recollect, evidence
 if, 941
 Attestor, if unavailable for illne-failure of memory, 936
 to be competent at the time of
 attestation, 936
 Attestor's hearsay statement how
 admissible, 933
 Auction purchaser, onus in case of, 1132.
 Authentication, general principle of 912 Avoidance of encumbrance, onus in case of, 1132
 Award, onus in, 1132
 B Bailment, onus in 1132
 Bankrupt's Declaration, if relevant, 107
 Barrister, Attorney or Vakil, meaning
 of, 1341.
 Batwara, Khasara, if admissible, 658
 papers, if admissible, 247 Belief or consciousness how evidenced from external circumstances standard of, in evidence, 51
 Bill of exchange, onus in, 1220.
 of exchange, presumption as regards, 1208
 of lading, onus in, 1133 Birth, during marriage conclusive proof of legitimacy, 1190
 Register, if admissible, 658
 Blank paper, presumption as to, 1221 Bond, onus in, 1133
 presumption as to, 1221.
 Books, referred to by Courts 836 Boundaries, meaning of, 578
 disputes, onus in, 1133
 British India, definition of, in the Evidence Act, 30.

Broker's book and bought and sold notes if evidence, 1016
 Bullet marks, its value as evidence, 75
 Burden, of proof, 1119
 of proof and negative allegations, 1126
 of proof, as meaning the duty of one party or the other to introduce evidence, 1122 of proof to ownership, 1176 of proof to particular fact, 1127 of proof to particular fact, illustration of, 1126 of proof relationship in the case of partners, landlord and tenant principal and agent, 1174
 of proof, general principles as regards, 1128
 of proof, if a general rule 1151
 of proof if it belongs to Law of Evidence, 1120
 of proof, illustrations of 1119
 of proof, illustrative cases of 1129
 of proof, its origin and place in the law of evidence, 1119
 of proof, meaning of, 1120
 of proof, whether shifts, 1123
 of proving death of person known to have been alive within thirty years 1160
 of proving fact especially within knowledge, 1153 of proving fact to be proved to make evidence admissible 1127 of proving fact to be proved to make evidence admissible, illustrations of, 1127 of proving fact especially within knowledge, illustrations of, 1154
 of proving that case of accused comes within exception, 1149
 of proving that case of accused comes within exception, illustration of, 1149
 of proving that person is alive who has not been heard for seven years, 1162
 Business, course of, meaning of, 298
 By, or on behalf of his client, meaning of, 1345
 Persons who would naturally have heard of him meaning of, 1171

C

Carrier, onus in, 1131
 Cases and also matters of public history in Cause
 or effect meaning of, 122
 Certified copy, entry in, if admissible, 659
 copies of public documents, 258

Circumstances, from which the Court can infer, 378
 if create presumptions of death at earlier period 1165
 of the accused sudden change in, if evidence, 151
 of the crime and contradictory account of, if relevant, 151 Circumstantial and direct evidence, advantages and disadvantages of 50
 and direct evidence meaning of, 17
 and presumptive evidence, distinction between 50 evidence, danger of, in jury trial, 51
 evidence two kinds of, 51
 evidence value of, 48
 evidence where to be resorted to 51
 evidence if all's explanation of, 50
 Civil procedure onus in 1134
 Chapter III (facts which need not be proved) scope of 814
 XI scope of, 1497
 Character as affecting damages 803
 bad of accused person, if relevant 800
 bad, of accused person inadmissible unless evidence of good character given, 80 evidence of English law as to, 807
 evidence of except as provided in section 54 811
 evidence of if admissible except so far as such appears from fact relevant 783 evidence if admissible in suits for defamation 804 evidence if relevant in a charge for adultery, 795
 evidence if relevant in a charge for arson 795
 evidence if relevant in a charge for assault 795 evidence if relevant in a charge for breach of promise of marriage, 806 evidence if relevant in a charge for burglary, 795 evidence, if relevant in a charge for carrying concealed weapons 796 fraud, if relevant in a charge for evidence, if relevant in a charge for homicide 796 evidence if relevant in a charge for indecent assault, 796, 806 evidence, if relevant in a charge for infanticide, 796 evidence if relevant in a charge for

- Agent, onus in case of, 1131
proof of good faith in case of, 1181
- Agreement, parol, proof of subsequent, 1071
parol proof of subsequent, when the document, is reduced to writing 1072
- Agree to admit at the hearing, meaning of 840
- Agriculturist, onus in case of 1131
- Alibi, nature of the theory of, 130
theory of, 102
- Alluvion and diluvion, onus in case of 1131
- Allegation presumption as to, 1219
- Altered instrument, burden of proof in 1159
- Ambiguities, blanks and, 1093
extrinsic evidence of 1094
extrinsic evidence, when not admissible in 1096
Lord Bacon's Rule, original scope of in, 1090
patent and latent differentiated, 1901
rule as laid down in Colpons v Colpons, 1092 similar law as to 1091
starkie's classification of patent, 1093
two sorts of per Lord Bacon, 1089
- Ambiguity document plain in itself evidence if of, 1098
evidence of intention, if admissible in, 1108
intention in, 1098
meaning if to be ascertained from the whole document, 1099
- Ancient, document, corroborative evidence of, 996
possession evidence as to, 608
And of no others' meaning of, 85
- Antecedent meaning of, 142
- Antedating onus in, 1131
- 'Any fact' meaning of, 456
- Any matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, meaning of, 1009 1029
- Any obligation, meaning of, 1013
- Anything said or done etc if admissible under section 10, 186
- Appropriation, onus in, 1131
- Arbitration, onus in, 1131
- Artists and scientists opinion of, 744
'As between the parties to such instrument' meaning of 1027
- Ask any question meaning of, 1494
- Assent presumption as to, 1220
- Attachment, onus in, 1132
- Attempts, previously made to commit in offence nature of, 142
to escape if affects the actor only, 148
to escape if relevant, 148
- Attestation, by a scribe, 924
by a sub registrar, 925
meaning of, 921
presumption as to, 1220
requisites of valid, 923
- Attesting witness denies, evidence if 910
witness does not recollect, evidence if, 941
- Attestor, if unavailable for illness, failure of memory, 936
to be competent at the time of attestation, 936
- Attestor's hearsay statement how admissible, 933.
- Auction purchaser, onus in case of, 1132.
- Authentication, general principle of 912
- Avoidance of encumbrance, onus in case of, 1132
- Award, onus in 1132

B

- B Draft Report of the select committee 1522
- C Act II of 1855 1556
- D liability to damages for refusing to give evidence 1563
- F Amending Act 1563
- I Bankers Books Evidence Act 1568
- G, Indian Oaths Act, 1573

- Bailment onus in 1132
- Bankrupt's declaration, if relevant, 107
- Barrister, Attorney or Vakil, meaning of, 1841.
- Batwara, Khazana, if admissible, 658
papers, if admissible, 247
- Belief or consciousness how evidenced from external circumstances standard of, in evidence, 51
- Benami, presumption as to 1220
transaction, onus in, 1132
- Best evidence, presumption as to 1220
- Bill of exchange, onus in, 1133
of exchange, presumption as regards, 1208

Ier

clusive

- presumption as to, 1221
- Books referred to by Court 536
- Boundaries, meaning of, 578
disputes, onus in, 1133
- British India definition of, in the Evidence Act, 30

Broker's book and bought and sold notes, if evidence, 1016
 Bullet marks, its value as evidence, 71
 Burden, of proof, 1119
 of proof and negative allegations, 1126
 of proof, as meaning the duty of one party or the other to introduce evidence, 1122 of proof to -

non or, 1126
 of proof relationship in the cases of partners, landlord and tenant, principal and agent, 1174
 of proof, general principles as regards, 1128
 of proof, if a general rule, 1151
 of proof if it belongs to Law of Evidence, 1120
 of proof, illustrations of, 1119
 of proof, illustrative cases of, 1129
 of proof, its origin and place in the law of evidence, 1119
 of proof, meaning of, 1120
 of proof, whether shifts, 1123
 of proving death of person known to have been alive within thirty years, 1160
 of proving fact especially within knowledge, 1153
 of proving fact to be proved to make

or, 1127
 of proving fact especially within knowledge, illustrations of, 1154
 of proving that case of accused comes within exception 1149
 of proving that case of accused comes within exception, illustration of, 1149
 of proving that person is alive who has not been heard for seven years, 1162
 Business, course of, meaning of, 298
 By, or on behalf of his client, meaning of, 1345 persons who would naturally have heard of him meaning of, 1171

C

Carrier, onus in, 1131
 Cases and also matters of public history, evidence in all, 830 in which secondary evidence relating to document may be given 891 Cause of death if presumed 1174,
 or effect meaning of, 122
 Certified copy, entry in, if admissible, 659
 copies of public documents, 938

Circumstances, from which the Court can infer, 378
 if create presumptions of death at earlier period, 1165
 of the accused sudden change in, if evidence, 151
 of the accused -

Circu

50
 and direct evidence, meaning of, 47
 and presumptive evidence, distinction between 50
 evidence, danger of, in jury trial, 51
 evidence two kinds of, 51
 evidence value of, 48
 evidence where to be resorted to 51
 evidence, Hill's explanation of, 10
 Civil procedure onus in, 1131
 Chapter III, (Facts which need not be proved) scope of 814
 XI scope of, 1497
 Character, as affecting damages 803
 bad of accused person if relevant, 800
 bad, of accused person, inadmissible unless evidence of good character given, 80
 evidence of English law as to, 807
 evidence of except as provided in section 54 811
 evidence of if admissible except so far as such appears from fact relevant, 788
 evidence if admissible in suits for defamation 804
 evidence if relevant in a charge for adultery, 795
 evidence if relevant in a charge for arson, 795
 evidence if relevant in a charge for assault 795
 evidence if relevant in a charge for breach of promise of marriage, 806
 evidence if relevant in a charge for burglary, 795
 evidence if relevant in a charge for fraud, if relevant in a charge for evidence, if relevant in a charge for Character—continued

evidence, if relevant in a charge for libel, 796 evidence, if relevant in a charge of

for

e of

perjury, 800

evidence if relevant in a charge for rape, 796 evidence if relevant in a charge for receiving stolen property, 797 evidence if relevant in a charge for seduction, 797, 806 evidence if relevant in a charge for train wrecking, 797 evidence of, in libel and slander, if admissible, 202 evidence of prosecutor, when relevant, 803 evidence rule under the Indian kind of, veracity as the fundamental quality, 1453

meaning of, 781, 1431

meaning of, under the Act, 785

presumption as to, 1221

previous bad, not relevant except in reply, 797 previous bad, relevant in criminal cases, 791

to prove conduct imputed, irrelevant in civil cases, 786

Chemical examiner, report of, value of, 755

Child bearing age, presumption as to, 1221

Chittas, entries in, if relevant, 863

maps etc., if public document, 951

Coercion, or intimidation, if exclude oral evidence, 1054

Collusion in Judicial proceedings, effect in, 715

onus in, 1135

Commission of crime by a third person if evidence, 193

Common, course of business, presumption as regards, 1213

Communication, made in the course and purpose of employment,

Complaint by prosecutor how relevant, 149

if relevant 153

in answer to question, if relevant 155

in cases of rape, criminal acts etc., if evidence, 153

Complaint—continued

in some cases, if evidence, 150

its details, if relevant, 151 time for making, if evidence, 151

Comparison of signature, writing or seal with others admitted or proved, 913

Compromise decree fraud in 714

Conclusion, as involution of reasoning 724

Conclusive, proof meaning of, 73

proof, meaning of in the Evidence Act, 69

Concomitant, events, as the basis of inference, if relevant, 122

Conduct as characterised by the words independently material, if relevant, 101

if evidence of consciousness of innocence, 149 its criminality, if material, if it is otherwise relevant, 141 of any party, if relevant, 140 of blood bonds if evidence, 168

meaning of, 141

of the accused in attempting to stifle or thwart investigation if relevant, 150 or intention for varying, contradicting etc., evidence of, 1041.

presumption as to, 1222

regarding a document, if relevant, 151 subsequent to the event, if relevant, 146

when relevant, 103

Confession, admissible if the inducement be at an end 423 advice to tell the truth, nature of, 427 against such other persons as well as against the person making the, 497 artificial rule to 'person' in authority, repudiated by American law, 418 assurance in, 429

assurance that you had better confess, in, 430 burden of proof in,—American view, 412 burden of proof in English law to, 412

by accused while in custody of police not to be proved against him 116 by a person in the police custody, 460 caused by inducement, threat, if irrelevant, 378 child like, feeble minded, 425 circumstances strengthening money to admissions or, 397.

Confession—continued

circumstances weakening testimony to admissions or 397 conclusions from witness to be accepted 392 consideration of proved, affecting person making it, 179 consideration of proved illustration of 479 declarations to be voluntary 103 definition of, 141
 division of, 389
 evidence in, 1013
 extra judicial proof of corpus delicti in corroboration 390 extra judicial to whom to be made 390 False, the reason of making, 386 how construed, 397
 how mental state of the accused to be established 424
 if caused by inducement, threat or promise 419 if it appears, meaning of 410 if made before coroner 418
 if made by misleading inducement, hope, 429 if made by misleading inducement, power of fear, 423 if the inducement sufficient by possibility to elicit an untrue meaning of 414 if voluntary, to be determined on hearing the accused, 413 implicating the confessing prisoner etc meaning of 490 implicating the maker in a lesser degree 480 in answer to questions if evidence, 477 inducement if to have reference to the charge against the accused 423 inducement involving higher punishment etc in, 429 inducement to be material in, 426 inducement to be sufficient in the opinion of the Court, 423 inducement to be sufficient to give accused ground etc 424 in evidence, use of—its history and development, 383 influence of a religious or of a moral nature, 426 its introduction into Evidence, 412 made after removal of impression caused by inducement, threat or promise, 470 made by accused person, meaning of 409 made by signs or gestures if admissible 393 made in police custody, if admissible, 119,

Confession—continued,

made in the presence of a magistrate, if admissible, 450 made, meaning of 409
 made to a police officer, if admissible 443 made when drunk effect of, 477
 meaning of 379
 meaning of, American view, 382 meaning of, English law as to, 389 meaning of, the term 'voluntary', 404 motives of 386
 necessity for determining actual mental statement of accused by of accused taken in accordance with law, 368 of a co accused and evidence of an accomplice 497 of a co accused if to be corroborated, 493 of a guilt, narration is affected by motives of, 385 of a prisoner in another case how proved 397
 onus in, 1135
 otherwise relevant become irrelevant because of promise of secrecy, 476
 'person in authority to elicit a confession' meaning of, 414 principle, of admission of, 383 proceedings meaning of, 430 promise of cessation of prosecution release from arrest, in, 429 promise of pardon in, 423 retracted, corroboration of, 431 subjective consideration of intoxication of the accused, 388, 425 subjective consideration of mental state of the accused in 425 Confessions, admissions not amounting to confession, if made to police officer, 445 and section 80 of the Evidence Act, 402
 and section 161 of the Cr Pro Code 397
 and section 361 of the Cr Pro Code, 401
 and section 553 of the Cr Pro Code, 401
 test of truth of, 593
 the history of the evolution of reason as to, 381 threat of corporal violence in 423 threats made but not influenced the accused in, 427 to be taken as a whole, 393, op

Confessions—continue

- to police officer, difference between English and Indian law as to, 136
 - to police officer, Reason of the rule as to, 137
 - to police officer not to be proved, 136
 - true motive for, 387
 - un corroborated, evidentiary value of, 395
 - value of retraction against the maker, 496
 - weight of, 391
 - what are not 399
 - what it is, 197
 - when becomes involuntary, 122
 - when made, without warning, eff ct of, 179
 - where its admissibility is to be object ed to, English practice as to, 435
 - where the accused is made an approver, 436
 - writing form of—Best evidence rule, 390
- Confidence, position of active meaning of, 1183
- relation of if presumed, to continue, 1184
- Confidential communication with legal adviser, 1356
- official business, if privileged communications, 1335
- Consideration, onus in, 1135
- Considerations different from that in recital, if exclude oral evidence, 1058
- Conspiracy, acquittal of some in a case of, 189
- agreement to commit breach of contract in a, 179
- American law as to, 189
- combination to commit crime in a, 178
- combination to commit torts in a, 178
- combination to do outrageous acts in a, 179
- evidence admissible in, English and Indian distinguished, 182
- existence of reasonable ground in, 183
- nature of, 176
- order of proof in, 184
- proof of, 179
- union of wills in a, 178

Contemporaneous conduct, meaning of, 114

Contention, onus in, 1136

Continuance, of things or state of things, presumption as to, 1203,

Contract, grant or disposition of property, terms of any, 1029

or grant etc., when the terms of is reduced to writing, 1002

onus in, 1136

terms of a, 1004

Conversion, onus in, 1137

Conversation, meaning of, 678

through an interpreter, if admission, 870

Copyright infringement, evidence in 391

onus in, 1137.

Corporeal effects as evidence, instances of, 127

Corpus delicti, proof of in cases of murder, 127

nature and extent of, 1379

Corroborative evidence, meaning of, 65, 1467

reasons of objection under English law, as to, before impeachment, 1463

time for giving 1470

Co sharer's possession, presumption as to, 1202

Court, definition of, in the Evidence Act, 31, 35

if can direct the person to write, 950

judicial interpretation of, in connection with other Acts, 36

may in its discretion, meaning of, 1456

may presume existence of certain facts, 1200

may presume existence of certain facts, illustration of, 1200

meaning of, 491

to decide when question shall be asked and when witness compelled to answer, 1433 character in, 790

Cross examination, 1395

art of 1409

as a distinctive and vital feature of English law, 1402

as to previous statements in writing 1427

by Court, 1406

David Paul Brown's golden rules for, 1410

its failure, effect of, 629

length of, 1406

Cross examination—continued

nature of, 1401
 of expert witness, 1416
 of flippant witness, 1413
 of person called to produce document, 1419
 of police witness 1415
 of the canting hypocrite, 1411
 of the cunning witness, 1414
 of the hesitating witness, 1413
 of the nervous witness, 1414
 of the perjured witness, 1411
 of the positive witness 1414
 of spy as a witness, 1415
 of truthful witness, 1413
 of woman witness 1417.
 on answers given to the Court, 1195
 opportunity of when equivalent to actual cross examination 1103
 preliminary warring in, 1461.
 questions in, 1411
 right of, 1404
 theory of, 1403
 what facts are not relevant in 1409
 what facts are relevant in 1409

or

to

relevant facts, 1406
Cumulative and continuous transactions, admission of, 99 Custom and usage distinguished, 212 ambiguity of, 214
 caste or class custom, meaning of, 214
 certainty of, 215
 continuity of, 216
 evidence as to, 808
 family, how proved, 213
 if immoral or unreasonable 216
 if local, requisites of, 214
 if occurring under conditions substantially similar 218
 if valid, requisites of, 214
 local, requisites of, 214
 meaning of, under section 13, 212
 onus in, 1137
 or usage to be consistent with the contract, 1080
 or usage, proof of, 1080
 reasonableness of, 215
Customary right in land etc., nature of, 219
Customs, classification of, into legal and conventional, 211
 what is a, 773
 when conventional or usage, 212
 when general, 214
 when obligatory, 216
 when private usage of a single family, 213

D

Dakhilas, if admissible, 552
Damage, definition of, 201

I E A—200

Damages—continued

Damages aggravation and mitigation of, 202
 ascertainment of amount of, 201
 defendant's fortune if admissible in ascertaining 204
 if affected by time and place, 205
 in breach of promise of marriages, 204
 in cases of breach of contracts, 201
 in cases of torts, 201
 in divorce suits, 204
 mitigation of in breach of contract, 202
 onus in, 1137
 plaintiff's financial standing in, 1137

Debt, and debtor, onus in case of, 1137

Debts, presumption as to, 1223

Deception, effect of, 475

Declarant, of pedigrees, means of knowledge, 591 of pedigrees, qualification of, 593

Declaration, act or omission, nature of, 1246 act or omission, if to be unequivocal and ambiguous 1268

as

as

as

ment, 574

as to public and general interest, if admit of circumstantial guarantee of truth, 574

by accused found with stolen goods, if relevant, 109

by agent, effect of, 329

of a testator, if relevant, 107

of intention, threats, etc., if admissible, 142

missions, 601

Declarations, accompanying facts, if relevant, 101

affecting revocation of will, if relevant, 106 against interest, difference between English and Indian law as to, 555 against interest, and admissions, distinguished, 567.

Confessions—continue

- to police officer, difference between English and Indian law as to, 436
- to police officer, Reason of the rule as to, 137
- to police officer not to be proved, 436
- true motive for, 397
- uncorroborated, evidentiary value of, 395
- value of retraction against the maker, 496
- weight of, 391
- what are not 399
- what it is, 197
- when becomes involuntary, 422
- when made, without warning, effect of, 479
- where its admissibility is to be objected to, English practice as to, 435
- where the accused is made an approver 436
- writing form of—Best evidence rule, 390
- Confidence, position of active meaning of, 1183
- relation of if presumed, to continue, 1184
- Confidential communication with legal advisers, 1356
- official business, if privileged communications, 1335
- Consideration, onus in, 1135
- Considerations, different from that in recital, if exclude oral evidence, 1058
- Conspiracy acquittal of some in a case of, 189
- agreement to commit breach of contract in a 179
- American law as to, 189
- combination to commit crime in a 178
- combination to commit torts in a, 178
- combination to do outrageous acts in a, 179
- evidence admissible in, English and Indian distinguished, 182
- existence of reasonable ground in, 183
- nature of 176
- order of proof in, 184
- proof of, 179
- union of wills in a, 178
- Conspirator, communication between, if admissible, 184
- to be taken into consideration of 99

- Contemporaneous conduct, meaning of, 114
- Contention, onus in, 1136
- Continuance, of things or state of things, presumption as to, 1203.
- Contract, grant or disposition of property, terms of any, 1029
- or grant etc, when the terms of, is reduced to writing, 1002
- onus in, 1136
- terms of a, 1001
- Conversion, onus in, 1137
- Conversation meaning of, 678
- through an interpreter, if admission, 870
- Copyright infringement, evidence in 291
- onus in, 1137
- Corporeal effects as evidence, instances of, 127
- Corpus, delicti, proof of in cases of circumstantial evidence, 68
- Corroboration, amount of, 1393
- as regards the identity of prisoner, 1376
- nature and extent of, 1379
- Corroborative evidence, meaning of, 65, 1467
- reasons of objection under English law, as to, before impeachment 1163
- time for giving 1470
- Co sharer's possession, presumption as to 1222
- Court, definition of, in the Evidence Act, 31, 35
- if can direct the person to write, 950
- judicial interpretation of, in connection with other Acts, 36
- may in its discretion, meaning of, 1456
- may presume existence of certain facts, 1200
- may presume existence of certain facts, illustration of, 1200
- meaning of, 491
- to decide when question shall be asked and when witness compelled to answer, 1439
- martial and the Evidence Act 31
- Criminal cases onus in, 1137
- charges in civil cases, evidence of character in, 790
- Cross examination, 1395
- art of 1409
- as a distinctive and vital feature of English law, 1402
- as to previous statements in writing 1437
- by Court, 1406
- David Paul Brown's golden rules for, 1410
- its failure, effect of, 629
- length of, 1406

Cross examination—continued

nature of, 1401
 of expert witness, 1416
 of flippant witness, 1413
 of person called to produce document, 1419
 of police witness, 1415
 of the canting hypocrite, 1414
 of the cunning witness, 1414
 of the hesitating witness, 1413
 of the nervous witness, 1414
 of the perjured witness, 1411
 of the positive witness, 1414
 of spy as a witness, 1415
 of truthful witness, 1413
 of woman witness, 1417
 on answers given to the Court, 1495
 opportunity of when equivalent to actual cross examination, 1403
 preliminary warring in, 1461
 questions in, 1441
 right of, 1404
 theory of, 1403
 what facts are not relevant in, 1409
 what facts are relevant in, 1409
 when the writing is lost or destroyed, 1432 whether should be confined to relevant facts, 1406

caste or class custom, meaning of, 214

certainty of, 215

continuity of, 216

evidence as to, 608

family, how proved, 213

if immoral or unreasonable, 216

if local, requisites of, 214

if occurring under conditions substantially similar, 218

if valid, requisites of, 214

local, requisites of, 214

meaning of under section 13, 212

onus in, 1137

or usage to be consistent with the contract, 1080

or usage, proof of, 1080

reasonableness of, 215

Customary right in land etc., nature of, 219

Customs, classification of, into legal and conventional, 211

what is a 773

when conventional or usage, 212

when general, 214

when obligatory, 216

when private usage of a single family, 213

D

Dakulas, if admissible, 552

Damage, definition of, 201.

I E A—200

Damages—continued

Damages, aggravation and mitigation of, 202

ascertainment of amount of, 201

defendant's fortune if admissible in ascertaining, 204

if affected by time and place, 205
 in breach of promise of marriages, 204

in cases of breach of contracts, 201

in cases of torts, 201

in divorce suits, 204

mitigation of in breach of contract, 202
 onus in, 1137

plaintiff's financial standing in, American rule as to, 205

Dealer, with a partnership, if knowledge of dissolution presumed, 265

DEED

act or omission, if to be unequivocal and unambiguous, 1268

and acts, when relevant, 105

as to pedigree if to consist only of personal knowledge, 591

as to public and general interest, if admit of administrative requirement, 574

as to public and general interest, if admit of circumstantial guarantee of truth, 574

by accused found with stolen goods, if relevant, 109

by agent, effect of, 328

of a testator, if relevant, 107

of intention threats, etc., if admissible, 142

of pedigree, if comes within principle of authentication, 605 of pedigree, if to be deposed on special means of knowledge, 592 of relationship in will or deed if admissible, 601

Declarations, accompanying facts, if relevant, 101

affecting revocation of will, if relevant, 106

Declarations—continued

against interest English law as to 553 against interest, origin of the rule as to, 556 against interest, principle as to, 555 against public interest if to be ante litem motam 580

as to domicile if relevant, 108

as to pedigree and circumstantial

Indian

583

as to pedigree, if to be made before

if

as to public or general interest if

Delay, in enforcing rights presumption
as to, 1228

or expense, meaning of, 519

Demeanour, during trial, if relevant 147

when charged, of accused, if relevant 148

Deposed to, meaning of, 456

Deposition, before committing magistrate, if admissible for corroboration of evidence 1472

previous, how proved, 617

Depositions by witnesses if admissible, 357

Design or system theory of evidencing 261

Diligence necessary, if witness be absent 935

Direct and circumstantial evidence advantages and disadvantages of 50

and circumstantial evidence classification into 47

and circumstantial evidence, meaning of, 47

Discovered, meaning of, 456

Disinterested, witness who is, 852

Disproved, meaning, of in the Evidence Act, 13

Distinctly, meaning of, 468

Divorce, proceedings witness in, 1321

Document authentication of a by contents, 915

contents of, if can be proved by oral evidence, 847

extrinsic evidence to control, if admissible, 1031 formality of, under section 92 provided (3) 1063

if in possession of any persons out of reach, evidence as to, 891 illustrations of, in the Evidence Act 43 integration of bilateral documents 1024 in virtue of which he holds the property as pledges, meaning of, 1360

meaning of 43, 678 887

not properly attested, effect, of, 929 partial integration, general test for

as to the effect of 1020

India of, 351

recitals in admissible, 243

secrecy of, who to determine the necessity of, 1331

the production of which might tend to criminate him, meaning of, 1360

as to the law and oral evidence statements

ing of

between strangers, if relevant, 195

as to the effect of 1020

modes of authenticating 912 ability

required to be continued, if admissible 962

untamped, secondary evidence of 837

Domicile presumption as to, 1224

Dumb witness 1318

Duty, presumption as to 1223

Dying declarant, mental state of if evidence 536 testimonial qualification of 528

161 of Entry—continued

if admissible under the English law, 520
 if rule against opinion evidence apply to, 525
 if subject to testimonial impeachment, 528
 its impeachment, weight for the jury, 535
 made by accomplice, if admissible, 530
 proof of, 530

Dy-
 ner,
 if to be in the form of questions and answers 538
 nature of, 539

VALUE OF IN JURY, 530

E

Easement, onus in 1130
 Effects on human conduct instances of mental and moral effects as evidence, 127
 Ejectment, onus in 1139
 Embezzlement, evidence in action for, 292
 Enactments repealed by the Evidence Act, 1504
 Encroachment by tenant presumption in to, 1224
 Enhancement of rent onus in, 1140
 Entry, in book, admission of absence of, 197
 in other official book, register or record if relevant, 654 in public book, register or record, 654

ABLE 654

in public record, English law as to 651
 in public record, errors of interest, if admissible, 656
 in public record, if personal knowledge of the official making of, is necessary, 649
 in public record stating a fact in issue or relevant fact if relevant, 663

in public record to be made, in discharge of official duty 655
 Entries in books of account, American rule as to, 636
 in books of account, declarant of, if to possess adequate knowledge 646
 in books of account, English law as to, 635
 in books of account, English rule as to history of the exception 635
 in books of account, how to be proved, 644
 in books of account if some of them proved bogus the whole book if discredited 647
 in books of account, illustration of 633
 in books of account old law under Act II of 1855 as to, 636
 in books of account, statements alone of, if to be evidence, 646
 in books of account time of making if required, 642
 in books of account to be regularly kept in the course of business 639 in books of account when relevant, 633

Escrow meaning of, 1068

Estoppel, 1236

against assignee of landlord 1300 against attestator of a document, 1266

— — — — — 1200

— — — — — 1200

— — — — — 1200

as to person claiming through tenant, 1296

as to tenant 1294

basis of, on equity, 1238

between bailor and bailee 1305

between mortgagor and mortgagee, 1303

by acts of agent, 1231

by acts of government officer, 1

by conduct nature of, 1254

by deed nature of, 1230

by election nature of, 1

by landlord, 1303

Estoppel—continued

by matter of record, nature of, 1239
 by negligence, nature of, 1283
 by omission, nature of, 1272
 by representation change of position brought about by it, 1252
 by silence, nature of, 1270
 by waiver, nature of, 1273
 constructive, nature of, 1277
 different kinds of, according to English law, 1239
 doctrine of, in modern times, 1241 equitable estoppel, if applies in case of part performance, 1273 if admission or presumption, 1238 if at the beginning of tenancy, 1297 if can arise when document is admissible, 1277
 if created by mistake, 1262
 if to be during the continuance of tenancy, 1296
 illustration of, 1636
 in acceptance of lease under coercion, 1269
 in Benami, 1282
 in cases of recital in document, nature of, 1240
 in equity, nature of, 1245
 in licenses of patentee etc, 1307 in negotiable instruments, 1294

possession, 1291
 one against another, 1282
 other cases of, 1283
 rule of, if applicable in criminal cases, 1288
 when truth of the matter known to both the parties, 1251
 whether should be pleaded, 1250

Evidence Act, and the proceedings
 before Arbitrator, 32
 the Court's martial, 31
 the commencement of the, 29
 the extent and application of, 29
 if a complete code, 34
 its application in places outside British India, 30 its nature appearing from the preamble to it, 3
 its repeal of enactments, 33
 its short title, 29

evi

and proof, it distinguished, 40

Evidence—continued

as to application of language, which can apply to one only of several per one, 1105 as to application of language, which

as to document unmeaning in reference to existing facts, 1109 as to document unmeaning in reference as to existing facts, illustration of, 1100
 as to matters in writing, 1427
 as to matters in writing, illustration of, 1427 as to meaning of illegible characters etc, 1111 as to meaning of illegible characters etc, illustration of, 1112 before any person authorised by law, if admissible, 618 corroborative English law as to, 1467 difference between oral and documentary, 47 different meanings of, 44
 direct and circumstantial, meaning of, 47 English law of, its origin, growth and peculiarity, 24 gradual change in the law of, 25
 hearsay nature of, 52
 if affected by subsequent pardon, 1447
 in judicial proceedings if admissible, 618 its several classification, 47
 its classification into direct and circumstantial, defective, 48 the definition of, 47
 law of and jury trial, 25
 law of, and other factors, 20
 law of, and things excluded from, 27
 law of, lex fori, 29
 law of, what is, 27
 may be given, meaning of, in section 5, 83 meaning of, in the Evidence Act, 44, 45
 meaning of the word generally, 45.
 of accused, effect of, 498
 of a person who saw it or heard it, 868
 of facts in issue and relevant facts, 82
 of facts in issue and relevant facts, explanation of, 82 of facts in issue and relevant facts, illustration of, 82 of facts in issue and relevant facts, principle of, 83

Evidence—continued

of facts in issue and relevant facts, scope of, 83
of former inconsistent statement, 1462
of terms of contracts etc reduced to form of document, 997 of terms of contracts etc reduced to form of document, illustration of, 990 of the commission by the accused of previous or subsequent offences, 287.
original and unoriginal, meaning of, 52
'proved' meaning of, in connection with, 53 quantum and weight of, 771

effect of, 516
secondary evidence as to contents, 905

withholding evidence, presumption from, 1214.

Evidential fact analysis of the possibilities of, 64

of oral agreement, 1019
of oral agreement, illustration of, 1020
to contradict answers to questions

documents, 1089
to explain or amend, ambiguous documents, illustration of, 1089

Execution, not disputable because of estoppel or other substantive law, rule in, 938 not disputable because of opponent's claim under the same instrument, rule in, 938.
onus in, 1140
Executive, proclamations, if relevant, 671.

Existence, as distinguished from terms of course of business, when relevant illustration of, 296

739

witness, may be witness of both the parties, 740 witness, testing the credit of, 739
Experts, modes of examination of hypothetical questions, 937 on agriculture opinion of, 741
their reports, if evidence, 756
value of, 740

Explanation, I of section 8, nature of, 152

II of section 8 nature of, 156

Explanatory facts, basis for its admission, 162 facts, if relevant 158

Expression, of emotion, if evidence, 133

External, stimulus, if evidence, 133

Extortion, and blackmail, evidence of 293

F

for-

if discovered in consequence of information, 453

if includes judgment, 102

if relevant when right or custom is in question, 205

illustration of, 41

matter of, and matter of law distinguished, 41

meaning of, 37

meaning of, in understanding a statute, 40

nature of physical and psychological, 39

of a public nature, meaning of, 672

real meaning of, 25

relevancy of meaning of, 41.

relevant, nature of, 41

Facts, accompanying, admission of, 100 admitted before the arbitrators, if admissible, 378

admitted, need not be proved, 533

as evidence, nature of, 120

as occasion, cause of facts in issue, if relevant, 119

Facts—continued

as occasion, cause of, facts in issue, illustration of 119
 as occasion, cause of facts in issue, limits of the rule of 121
 as occasion, cause of facts in issue, nature of, 121.
 as occasion, cause of facts in issue, principle underlying 119
 as occasion, cause of facts in issue, scope of, 123 as occasion, cause of facts in issue, Whitworth's criticism as to, 120 bearing on question whether act was accidental or intentional, 283 bearing on question whether act was accidental or intentional, if relevant, 283 bearing upon opinion of experts, 753
 bearing upon opinion of experts illustrations of, 753
 constituent, admission of, 99
 declared to be relevant meaning of, 83
 division of into events and state of things, 40
 division of into positive and negative, 40
 different meanings of, 37
 especially within the knowledge of any person, burden of proof of, 1157
 forming part of the same transaction, classification of, 99
 inconsistent with any facts in issue, if evidence, 192
 in issue, explanation of, in the Evidence Act 43
 in issue, illustration of, in the Evidence Act, 43
 in issue, meaning of 43, 83
 in issue, Stephen's definition of, considered, 79
 in issue what are they, 48
 judicially noticeable, need not be proved, 814 necessary to explain or introduce relevant facts, if relevant, 158
 necessary to explain or introduce relevant facts, illustration of, 158
 not directly discovered, if evidence, 468
 not otherwise relevant, in section 11, meaning of, 192
 of social life, evidence in, 834
 otherwise not relevant when become relevant, 189
 relevancy of, reasons of the exclusionary rule as to, 42 relevant when right or custom in question, illustration of, 205

Facts—continued

showing existence of state of mind, or of body or bodily feeling, if admissible, 250 251 tending to enable court to determine amount of damages, if relevant, 100
 what may be proved by oral evidence, 847
 which court must take judicial notice of, 818
 which court must take judicial notice of, if the test of, complete 820 which need not be proved, meaning of, 815
 which support or rebut an inference if relevant, 161.
 Factum, probandum and Factum probans, distinction between, 63
 Faculties, necessary for testimony of the witness, loss of, effect of, 631
 Fact witness, scope of opinion rule debarring a 720
 Failure, to produce evidence if relevant, 149
 to produce or destruction of documents if evidence, 150
 to prosecute, if relevant, 149 to testify by the party if relevant, 150
 Falsehood, fraud, fabrication and suppression of evidence etc, if relevant, 144 False, personation, effect of, 476 representation and cheating, illustrative cases of, 290 representation and cheating, principle of admitting of other 1-299
 if 37
 nt
 Finger—impression, evidence of, 500
 Finger-impressions testimony on, if admissible, 751
 First, information report, admissibility and value of, 1431
 information report, if admissible, 579
 information report, if admissible to 1470
 . med
 away, 140
 Forgery, and counterfeiting nature of the offences, 275
 presumption as to, 1224
 Foreign, expressions not commonly intelligible, meaning of 1113 judgment if induced by fraud, 714 judgment, if relevant, 682

Foreign—continued.

judgment, if relevant as judgment in probate etc, 690
judgment how impeached under Indian law, 715 law, how proved, 673.
law proof of, 740
law proof of, Justice Story on, 741.
Fraud, by agent, if relevant, 146
if exclude oral evidence, 1053
if necessary to give rise to estoppel, 1277.
in compromise decree, 714
instances of, 711
instances of, in Probate case, 711.
meaning of, 708.
onus in, 1140
or collusion if the party can plead his own, 716
or collusion in obtaining judgment or incompetency of court may be proved, 704
or collusion, who can plead, 716.
presumption as to 1224

G

Gazette, its genuineness if assumed, 672
of India, if admissible, 672
what is, 970
General, disposition, meaning of, 813
Genuineness, presumption as to, 1224
Giving, as evidence of document called though never conclusive if acquit, 784
Good faith, meaning of, 267.
onus in, 1141.
presumption as to, 1224
Good will, meaning of, 272
Government, Gazette, if admissible, 661.
revenue, onus in, 1141
Grant, presumption as to, 1224
terms of a, 1004
Grounds, of opinion, when relevant, 783
of opinion, when relevant, illustration of, 783
Guardian, and ward, onus in, 1141
Guardianship certificate, if evidence, 659
Guilt, presumption as to, 1224

H

Handwriting—continued.

evidence, objection on the principle of confusion of issues, as to, 747.
evidence, objection when based on unfair selection of specimen as to, 746
evidence of, 745
experts, who are, 749
knowledge of, acquired for the purpose of testifying, 7700
other means of acquaintance with a person, 769
signature, meaning of, 763.
value of expert testimony as regards, 750
when expert evidence is admissible in proving, 750 witnesses acquaintance with, whether shifts the burden of proof, 770

Handwritten copies to what

and

it is

exceptions and circumstantial guarantee of trustworthiness, 541, if applied where there is administrative requirements, 519
nature of, as an extra judicial testimonial assertion, 507.
of the family as to particular facts, if excluded, 596
rule and circumstantial guarantee, 519
rule and declarations under section 6, 109 rule and its exceptions, its historical development, etc, 503

Law
rule, exception to, history of English law as to, 522

of circumstantial guarantee etc 556 rule, its exception if considered from subjective relevancy, 556
rule, reason for, inherent weakness, absence of cross-examination, 511.
rule, second principle of, circumstantial guarantee of trustworthiness, 513.
rule, statements under exceptions to, if admit of witness qualification, 513

Hearsay—continued

rule, theory of 510

Highly, probable in section 11,
meaning, of 193

probable or improbable in section 11,
illustrative cases of 197

Hindu law, adoption, onus in, 1111

adoption, presumption as to, 1224 alienation by Hindu widow, onus

in, 1141

alienation by manager or guardian,
onus in, 1142

alienation by shebait, onus in 1142 applicability of presumption as to, 1225 endowment in, presumption as to, 1225 inheritance, onus in, 1142

joint family, onus in, 1142

joint family, presumption as to, 1225 joint family, legitimacy of child in, 1198

joint family partition, onus in, 1143 joint family, self-acquisition, onus

in, 1143

joint family, stridhan, onus in, 1143

Indian law as a matter of fact 199

1100 witness leading questions to, 1452

Hindu, onus in, 1143

Husband and wife, onus in 1143

and wife, old rule excluding evidence of 1326

and wife presumption as to, 1226

and wife proof of good faith in case
of 1185

and wife to party, if witness, 1311

or wife of person in civil cases if
witness, 1319

or wife of person in criminal cases
if witness, 1320

or wife of person under criminal trial, 1319

I.

Identification cases of in other proceedings 171

of prisoner's act, nature of, 163

Identity, admission of other evidence in question of, 172

as a probandum other principles discriminated 162

as the test of admissibility, 164

caution and precaution dealing with testimony to, 170

evidence and opinion rule, 171

Identity—continued

evidence, circumstantial and testi-

63 evidence in section 9, scope of 164

171

if

presumption, 166

mental conditions recognising if
evidence, 169

of a person by voice or appearance
presumption in, 167

of name of persons but of different person, presumption in, 166

of name, presumption in, 166

of person by photograph, if admis-
sible, 167

of person, circumstances favouring 164 of person, criminality of act in material in, 165

of things, presumption in, 167

presumption as to, 1226

qualification of observer if evidence 170 question of paternity, if admissible, 172

testimony, if evidence, 728

thumb impression admissible in 173

If, it shall appear to the Court etc,
meaning 1500

Illegality if exclude oral evidence 1055 as of 1113

testi

1

690

Illwill meaning and nature of, 270

Immovable, property meaning of 1291

Impeaching credit of witnesses 1453

credit of witness, illustration of 1459

Improper admission or rejections of evidence, material error in, if leads
to new trial under English law, 1497

admission or rejection of evidence
retrospect in English law, 1497

Inaccurate description of a bequest
evidence, 1105

Inadmissible, evidence under section 7,
illustrative cases of, 123 126 127

evidence under section 11, illustra-
tive cases of, 200

evidence under section, 13 illustra-
tive cases of, 250,

evidence under section 14 illustra-
tive cases of, 282

evidence under section 15 illustra-
tive cases of, 295

evidence under section, 16, illustra-
tive cases of, 300

Inadmissible—continued
 evidence under section 19, illustrative cases of, 351
 evidence under section 19 illustrative cases of, 369
 evidence under section 24 illustrative cases of, 378
Incapable to give evidence meaning of, 519
Incident constituent admission of, 99
Incidents, other than declarations when relevant 101
Includes meaning of 36
Income tax onus in, 1143
Inconsistent places meaning of 1275
Indecent and scandalous questions 1411
 exposures evidence in action for, 294
Inducement, if it comes into existence 471
 if it be irrevocable 472
 if it can be put an end to 472.
 if it was brought to an end 471 if the subsequent ending of it, proper inducement be evidence, 471 what is its removal, in the opinion of the court, 478
 what suffices in general to end an inducement 472
Infancy presumption as to, 1326
Inference and proof distinction between, 59
 as involution of reasoning, 724 condition of admissibility, necessity for, 727
 entire elimination of, if possible, 723
 form of, occasional deductive form, 61
 process, from the view of the opponent of evidence, 63
 process, from the view of the proponent of evidence, 69
 process, method of agreement as a test, 64
 process method of difference as a test 64
 process, occasional subordinate tests of, 64 process practical requirements, to avoid fallacious inference, 61 Infidels and atheists, if witnesses, 1310 Information, as to commission of offence, 1336 of the accused if includes mere statements, 137
 presumption as to, 1226
 received from accused how much of it may be proved, 130.
 1, E. A.—201

Information—continued
 so much as relates distinctly to facts thereby discovered if admissible, 461 Insanity, of the witness effect of 621
 presumption as to 1229
Insolvency, jurisdiction of a court, nature of 694
 onus in 1143
Instance nature of, 217
Instances number of, 218
Instruments extrinsic evidence of admissible, to annex incidents 1077
Insurance onus, 114
Insurers and insurance experts, opinion 744
Intentionality nature of 1247
 anonymous, instances to prove if relevant, 261 credibility of, 725
 fraudulent, proof of, 281
 if admissible in legacies, 1104
 if to be presumed from act, 260
 meaning of 257
 mens rea, criminal knowledge etc distinguished 259
 mode of proving, 259
Interest meaning of, 578
Interpretation clause, nature of, 35, 36 of statutes, absurdity or obvious injustice to be avoided in, 4 of statutes, a general enactment not to cover or affect in any way by implication special enactment 7
 of statutes all the parts together and not one part only by itself to be construed in 6
 of statutes, American cases and
 :
 in construing an Indian statute 22 23
 of statutes equity and good conscience when to be applied, 16
 of statutes every word to receive its notation, 16 statute, 13
 of statute, if the rule as to the consideration of the intention conveyed by the language only, admits of exception, 5

Hearsay—continued

- rule, theory of, 510
- Highly, probable in section 11, meaning, of 193
- probable or improbable in section 11, illustrative cases of 197.
- Hindu law, adoption, onus in, 1111
- adoption, presumption as to, 1224
- alienation by Hindu widow, onus in, 1141
- alienation by manager or guardian, onus in, 1142
- alienation by shebait, onus in, 1142
- applicability of presumption as to, 1225
- endowment in presumption as to, 1225
- inheritance, onus in, 1142
- joint family, onus in, 1142
- joint family, presumption as to, 1225
- joint family, legitimacy of child in, 1198
- joint family partition, onus in, 1143
- joint family, self-acquisition, onus in, 1143
- joint family, stridhan, onus in, 1143

Pr - - -
1

1400 .

- of, 1185
- and wife to party if witness, 1311
- or wife of person in civil cases, if witness, 1319
- or wife of person in criminal cases if witness, 1320
- or wife of person under criminal trial, 1319

I

- Identification cases of, in other proceedings, 171
- of prisoner's act, nature of, 168
- Identity, admission of other evidence in question of, 172
- as a probandum other principles discriminated, 162
- as the test of admissibility, 164
- caution and precaution dealing with testimony to, 170
- evidence and opinion rule, 171

Identity—continued

st:

- presumption, 166
- mental conditions recognising if evidence, 169
- of a person by voice or appearance presumption in, 167
- of name of persons bit of different person presumption in, 166
- of name, presumption in, 166
- of person by photograph, if admissible, 167
- of person, circumstances favouring, 164
- of person, criminality of act in material in, 165
- of things, presumption in, 167
- presumption as to, 1226
- qualification of ob error if evidence, 170
- question of paternity, if admissible, 172

testimony for locus 728

73

to,

ice

1065

- illegible, evidence in case of, 1113
- illiterate's letter, typewriting test, money in, 915

effect of 900

391

is

of 1400

- Improper, admission or rejection of evidence, material error in, if leads to new trial under English law, 1497
- admission or rejection of evidence retrospect in English law, 1497
- Inaccurate description of a bequest, evidence, 1105
- Inadmissible, evidence under section 7, illustrative cases of, 123 126, 127
- evidence under section 11, illustrative cases of, 200
- evidence under section 13, illustrative cases of, 250
- evidence under section 14, illustrative cases of, 282
- evidence under section 15, illustrative cases of, 295
- evidence under section 16, illustrative cases of, 300

Inadmissible—continued
 evidence under section 18, illustrative cases of, 351
 evidence under section 19, illustrative cases of, 351
 evidence under section 20, illustrative cases of, 358
 evidence under section 21, illustrative cases of, 360
 evidence under section 24, illustrative cases of, 378
Incapable to give evidence, meaning of, 519
Incident constituent admission of, 99
Incidents, other than declarations when relevant, 101
Includes meaning of, 36
Income tax onus in, 1143
Inconsistent, places, meaning of, 1275
Indecent, and scandalous questions, 1441
Exposures, evidence in action for, 294
Inducement if it comes into existence, 471
 if it be irrevocable 472
 if it can be put an end to 472.
 what suffices in general to end an inducement 472
Infancy presumption as to, 1326
Inference, and proof, distinction between, 59
 as evolution of reasoning 724
 condition of admissibility, necessity for, 727
 entire elimination of, if possible, 723
 form of, occasional deductive form, 61
 process, from the view of the opponent of evidence, 63
 process, from the view of the proponent of evidence, 62
 process, method of agreement as a test, 64
 process method of difference as a test, 64
 process, occasional subordinate tests of, 61 process, practical requirements, to 10
 of
 of the accused, it includes mere statements, 457
 presumption as to, 1226
 received from accused how much of it may be proved, 130.
 I, E. A.—201

Information—continued
 so much as relates distinctly to facts thereby discovered if admissible, 461
Insanity, of the witness effect of 621 presumption as to, 1229 Insolvency, jurisdiction of a court, nature of, 694
 onus in, 1143
Instance, nature of, 217
Instances, number of, 218
Instruments extrinsic evidence of admissible, to annex incidents 1077
Insurance onus, 141
Insurers and insurance experts, opinion, 744
Intentionality, nature of 1247
 anonymous, instances to prove if relevant, 261
 credibility of, 725
 fraudulent, proof of, 281
 if admissible in legacies, 1104
 if to be presumed from act, 260
 meaning of 257
 mens rea, criminal knowledge etc distinguished 259
 mode of proving, 259
Interest meaning of, 578
Interpretation clause, nature of, 35 36
 of statutes, absurdity or obvious construed in, 6 of statutes American cases and authorities, value of, interpreting, English and Indian law, 23 of statutes commisus or facti jus
 in construing an Indian Statute 22, 23
 of statutes equity and good conscience when to be applied, 16
 of statutes, every word to receive
 statute, 13
 of statutes, if the rule as to the consideration of the intention controlled by the language only, admits of any exception, 5

Interpretation—continued

- of the law in operation or the law itself, 14 15
- of statutes, intention of the legislature conveyed by the language only considered in, 4 5
- of statutes, legislative proceedings as a mode of ascertaining the intention of the legislature 11
- of statutes, mandatory provision, effect of, 21
- of statutes, marginal notes, punctuation, if a part of the enactment, 13 14
- of statutes, meaning of 'may', 16
- of statutes, meaning of 'or' and '16
- of statutes 'means and includes' implicating 21
- of statutes, new words to be read in a statute, to clear the context, 16
- of statutes, no addition in the codified law of some of the provisions of the English common law is to be allowed in 5
- of statutes, no clause, sentence or word to be superfluous, void or insignificant in, 4
- of statutes, no reading of words absent or omitted in any act allowed in, 5
- of statutes no reference to what is just expedient or reasonable or good in, 4, 5
- of statutes, no retrospective effect to be given in a pending action or in its appeal unless so mentioned specially 9
- of statutes, no retrospective operation of a statute, dealing with vested right when to be presumed 8
- of statutes no single enactment in a body of codified law rendering the express provisions of another enactment absolutely nugatory in, 10
- of statutes no supposed intention of the legislature or any general inference from the nature of the objects dealt with by the statute allowed in 4
- of statutes, objects and reasons of the Bill, reports of the select committee rules as to if different in India, 12
- of statutes, objects and reasons of the bill reports of the select committee, rule as to 12
- of statutes, penal, how to be construed, 13, 19

Interpretation—continued

- of statutes, proviso when to be referred to in construing the substantive enactment, 12 11
- of statutes, reference to previous state of law when allowed in cases of codifying law in 11
- of statutes, reference to terms of 0
- of 1
- statutes not excluded in cases of codifying act in, 10
- of statutes, repeal by implication, effect of, 16
- of statutes retrospective effect to be given to the law of evidence as a procedural law in, 9
- of statutes retrospective operation of a statute, dealing with the procedure, the general rule in, 8
- of statutes retrospective operation of a statute, dealing with the procedure, the general rule in, 8
- of statutes rule as to, 3
- of statutes rule as to, when language is plain, 4
- of statutes, rules of evidence and Evidence Act, how to be construed, 21, 22
- of statutes, same effect to be given to the codifying Act which does not alter or amend the previous state of law in, 10
- of statutes 'saving clause', interpretation of, 21
- of statutes, schedule if a part of enactment and when to be taken into consideration in construing an enactment 14
- of statutes, 'stare decisis', scope of the doctrine of, 20
- of statutes, 'stare decisis', the doctrine if admits of exception, 20
- of statutes, ousting the court's jurisdiction how to be construed 10
- tion of, 14 10
- of statutes the maxim novus constitutio futuris formam imponere debet non praeteritis, 8
- of statutes, the language and words to be taken generally in their ordinary plain and grammatical senses in 3, 11
- of statutes the principle of ejusdem generis, application of 13
- of statutes the re enactment of statutes if means the recognition of the correctness of its earlier interpretation 11

Knowledge—continued
which is common if potential, 818

L

Lakshray, and rent-free land, onus in, 1144 elation

and tenant, onus in 1111

if a benamdar, 1293

Landlords and tenants, presumption
in case of, 1176

Latent, ambiguity, origin of extrinsic evidence in cases, of, 1101

ambiguity, what is, 1100

Lawful non production by third per on English law as to 892

Law purporting to be published, if sufficient, 673

Leading question, 1419

meaning of, 1419

Legal character, meaning of, 695

proof, what is, 51

Legitimacy, by conduct, evidence as to, 779

if a question of evidence 1193

of child,—conduct of supposed
father and mother in 1196

of child declaration of husband and
wife in 1197

of child when parents had no access 1 of child, under the Mahomedan Law.

1198

onus in, 1144

part of 679

Life inference of continuance of life nature

M

Made's meaning of 488

Magistrate meaning of 36, 450

Mahomedan law, legitimacy of child
in 1198

Ma's —

Ma

Ma

Ma

Material effects, if excluded as evi dence, 125

Matrimonial, jurisdiction of a court,
nature of, 693

Matter, of fact and matter of law, dis tinguished, 41

Matters before it (the court) meaning
of, 56

of opinion, meaning of 720

of science and art evidence in 830

May, meaning of 491

presume, meaning of 72

presume meaning of, under section 90, 991

presume, meaning of in the Evi dence Act 69

take consideration of, meaning of 491

Mechanics, and mechanists as experts, 743

Medical attendant and patients proof of good faith in case of, 1187

evidence, value of, 755

inference probative weight of, 707

inference result of autopsy, 757

testimony importance of, 706

witness, deposition of 755

witness, qualifications of, 756

witness, to be asked questions 706

Memory, and recollection, general
theory of, 864

differences of, capacity for, 865

if to be refreshed by any writing 1478

if to be refreshed by referring to confession by the magistrate 1480

if to be refreshed by referring to
copies of documents 1480

if to be refreshed by referring to in admissible documents, 1480

if to be refreshed by referring to police diary, 1482

if to be refreshed by referring to
special diaries 1482

if to be refreshed by referring to statements reduced to writing by police officer 1481

if to be refreshed by referring to writing made at the time of tran saction 1479

if to be refreshed by referring to writing made by any other person 1480

if to be refreshed by referring to writing made by the witness him self, 14759

of the witness loss of effect of, 621

Mercantile usage onus in, 1145

Mesne profits, onus in 1145

Mind state of, importance of in civil
and criminal cases 207

state of, or bodily feeling, how proved 255

state of, proved by three species of
evidence, 257

Minor, onus in 1145

Misleading inducements, illegality of 476 of fact, and section 31 of the Specific Relief Act, 1937

of fact, if exclude oral evidence, 1028

of law, if exclude oral evidence, 1059

Mixed presumption, meaning of, 72

Motive absence of proof of, if material 131

as relevant, nature of, 173

how to be proved 177.

if essential as evidence, 131

if proved by conduct, 137

if to be adequate as evidence, 131

judicial proof of 173

preparation and previous or subsequent conduct, if relevant, 130

preparation and previous or subsequent conduct, if relevant, illustration of, 131 relevancy of circumstances tending to excite, 135

Motives as evidence, principle of admission, 133

Mortgage, evidence in 1010

onus in, 1145

N.

Narration, general principles of, 565

Necessity, principle and declarations, to pedigree, 565

principle and section 32 clause II, 540

principle and declaration against interest, 555

Negligence, if can be inferred from

Not

Newspaper, what is, 970

Non-access, of husband if evidence of illegitimacy of offspring, 193

or

I

Not, been heard of, meaning of, 1171.

"Not heard of" -

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

effect of production or non production after service of 906

onus in, 1146

such notice as is prescribed by law, 905

when after notice to opponent he does not produce it, evidence in, 594

Number, of witnesses, 1357

O

Objection, in second appeal, if permissible, 1501

to question by other party, when to be made, 1101

waver of, inadmissibility, 929

Obsolete, expressions, nature of, 1111

Of, any person bound to produce it, meaning of, 597

Official acts, regularity of, presumption as to 1212

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

"

of witness, scope of the rule rejecting, 725

on relationship, if relevant, 777

on relationship, illustrations of, 777

rule, gradual growth of, 721

rule, principle underlying the new, 722

when admissible, 869

Opposition, of impulses, if evidence, 133

Opportunity, for the happening of the fact, it can be explained away, 129

for the happening of the fact, if equal to all, value of, 129

for the happening of the fact, if, evidence, 128.

Knowledge—continued
which is common if potential, 818

L

Lakhiraj and rent free land onus in, 1144
Land acquisition, onus in, 1144
Landlord and tenant how a relation ship is created, 1293
and tenant, onus in 1111
if a benamdar, 1293
Landlords and tenants, presumption in case of, 1176
Lawful non production by third per on English law as to 892
Law purporting to be published, if sufficient, 673
Leading question, 1119
meaning of, 1419
Legal character, meaning of, 695
proof, what is, 51
Legitimacy, by conduct, evidence as to, 779
if a question of evidence 1198
of child,—conduct of supposed father and mother in 1196
of child, declaration of husband and wife in, 1197
of child when parents had no access 1100

onus in, 1144
presumption of, 1192, 1732
Letters, or papers, forming part of correspondence if evidence, 679
Lie psychology of, kind of lies 865
Life inference, of continuance of life if rebuttable, 1161
Limitation, onus in, 1144
Local, and provincial expression, nature of, 1116

M

Malice, meaning and nature of, 270
Malicious prosecution, onus in, 1145
Maps chittas if relevant, 248
Marriage onus in, 1145
presumption as to, 1232
Material effects, if excluded as evidence 125
Matrimonial, jurisdiction of a court, nature of, 693
Matter, of fact and matter of law, distinguished, 41

Matters before it (the court) meaning of, 56
of opinion, meaning of 720
of science and art evidence in 830
May, meaning of, 491
presume, meaning of, 72
presume meaning of, under section 90, 931
presume, meaning of in the Evidence Act 69
take consideration of, meaning of 491
Mechanics, and mechanists as experts, 743
Medical attendant and patients proof of good faith in case of, 1187
evidence, value of, 755
inference, probative weight of, 757
inference result of autopsy 767
testimony, importance of, 766
witness, deposition of, 755
witness, qualifications of, 750
witness, to be asked questions 756
Memory, and recollection, general theory of, 864 differences of, capacity for, 865
if to be refreshed by any writing 1478
if to be refreshed by experts by referring to professional treatise, 1481
if to be refreshed by referring to arbitration 1482
if to be refreshed by referring to confession by the magistrate 1480
if to be refreshed by referring to copies of documents 1480
if to be refreshed by referring to in admissible documents, 1480
if to be refreshed by referring to police diary 1482
if to be refreshed by referring to special diaries 1482
if to be refreshed by referring to statements reduced to writing by police officer 1481
if to be refreshed by referring to writing made at the time of transaction 1479
if to be refreshed by referring to writing made by any other person 1480
if to be refreshed by referring to writing made by the witness himself 14759
of the witness loss of effect of, 621
Mercantile usage onus in, 1145
Mesne profits, onus in 1145
Mind state of, importance of in civil and criminal cases 257
state of or bodily feeling how proved 255
state of proved by three species of evidence 257
Minor, onus in 1145

Misleading inducements, illegality of 476
 of fact, and section 31 of the Specific Relief Act, 1059
 of fact, if exclude oral evidence, 1059
 of law, if exclude oral evidence, 1059
 Mixed presumption meaning of, 72
 Motive absence of proof of, if material 131
 ■ relevant, nature of, 133
 how to be proved 137
 if essential as evidence 131
 if proved by conduct, 137
 if to be adequate as evidence, 131
 judicial proof of 133
 preparation and previous or subsequent conduct, if relevant, 130
 preparation and previous or subsequent conduct, if relevant, illustration of, 131 relevancy of circumstances tending to excite, 135
 Motives as evidence, principle of admission, 133
 Mortgage, evidence in 1010
 onus in, 1145

N

Narration, general principles of, 865
 Necessity, principle and declaration, to pedigree 2 II principle and section 32 clause II, 540
 principle and declaration against interest, 555 Negligence, if can be inferred from repair of machine etc, 269 if proved by habit, 269
 presumption as to, 1233
 Neither, he nor his representatives, meaning of, 1275
 Newspaper, what is, 970
 Non access, of husband if evidence of illegitimacy of offspring, 193
 No, new trial for improper admission or rejection of evidence 1496
 Notary, public evidence, 980
 Not, been heard of, meaning of, 1171
 'Not competent' meaning of, 706
 Not proved meaning of 52
 No
 tion after service of 906
 onus in, 1146
 such notice as is prescribed by law, 906
 when after notice to opponent he does not produce it, evidence in, 891
 Number, of witnesses, 1357.

Objection, in second appeal, if permissible, 1501
 to question by other party, when to be made, 1101
 waiver of, inadmissibility, 929
 Obsolete, expressions, nature of, 1111
 Of, any person bound to produce it, meaning of, 893
 Official acts, regularity of, presumption as to 1212
 communications, 1333
 printed copies, if admissible, 962
 public book, absence of entries in, 663
 records relating to affairs of state, if evidence, 1330
 reports, register etc, value of, 663
 Old copies, meaning of, 993
 Omission, to sue for the whole of the claim effect of, 686
 On, whom burden of proof lies, 1125
 whom burden of proof lies, illustration of, 1125 Opinion, and fact, distinguished, 722
 as to existence of right or custom when relevant, 772
 as to existence of right or custom as to, public interest it to be of competent person, 580
 as to public or general interest, if admissible, 578
 as to usages, tenants &c, when relevant, 774
 evidence, if excluded, 720
 evidence, of expert, if admissible, 732
 evidence, pre requisites of, by expert, 734
 from necessity, if admissible, 730 of experts if relevant, 731 of experts, illustration of, 731 of third persons if relevant, 710
 of witness, scope of the rule rejecting, 725
 on relationship, if relevant, 777
 on relationship, illustrations of, 777
 rule, gradual growth of, 721
 rule principle underlying the new, 722
 when admissible, 869
 Opposition, of impulses, if evidence, 133
 Opportunity, for the happening of the fact, it can be explained away, 129
 for the happening of the fact, if equal to all, value of, 129
 for the happening of the fact, if, evidence, 128.

Knowledge—continued
which is common if potential, 818

L

Lakhray and rent free land, onus in, 1144
Land acquisition, onus in, 1141
Landlord, and tenant, how a relation ship is created, 1298
and tenant, onus in 1141
if a benamdar, 1298
Landlords and tenants, presumption in case of, 1176
Tenant on his part of extrinsic

Lawful non production by third person
English law as to 892
Law purporting to be published, if sufficient, 678
Leading question, 1419
meaning of, 1419
Legal character, meaning of 695
proof, what is, 51
Legitimacy, by conduct, evidence as to, 779
if a question of evidence 1198
of child,—conduct of supposed father and mother in 1196
of child, declaration of husband and wife in 1197
of child when parents had no access 1104

1108

onus in, 1144
presumption of, 1192 1232
Letters, or papers forming part of correspondence if evidence, 679
Lie psychology of, kind of lies 865
Life inference of continuance of life if rebuttable, 1161
Limitation, onus in, 1144
Local, and provincial expression, nature of, 1116

M

Made' meaning of 488
Magistrate' meaning of, 36, 450
Mahomedan law, legitimacy of child in 1198
" " " " 45
"

Material effect, in extrinsic evidence, 125
Matrimonial jurisdiction of a court nature of, 693
Matter, of fact and matter of law, distinguished, 41

Matters before it (the court), meaning of, 56
of opinion, meaning of 720
of science and art evidence in 830
May, meaning of, 491
presume, meaning of, 72
presume meaning of, under section 90, 991
presume, meaning of in the Evidence Act 69
take consideration of, meaning of 491
Mechanics, and mechanists as experts 743
Medical attendant and patients proof of good faith in case of 1187
evidence, value of, 755
inference, probative weight of, 757
" " " " 757

706

general

differences of, capacity for, 605
if to be refreshed by any writing 1478
if to be refreshed by experts by referring to professional treatise, 1481
if to be refreshed by referring to arbitration 1482
if to be refreshed by referring to confession by the magistrate 1480
if to be refreshed by referring to copies of documents 1480
if to be refreshed by referring to in admissible documents 1480
if to be refreshed by referring to police diary, 1482
if to be refreshed by referring to special diaries 1482
if to be refreshed by referring to statements reduced to writing by police officer 1481
if to be refreshed by referring to writing made at the time of transaction 1479
if to be refreshed by referring to writing made by any other person 1480
if to be refreshed by referring to writing made by the witness himself 14759
of the witness loss of, effect of 621
Mercantile usage, onus in, 1145
Meane profits onus in 1145
Mind state of, importance of in civil and criminal cases 257
state of or bodily feeling, how proved 255
state of, proved by three species of evidence, 257
Minor, onus in 1145

Oral, admission as to the contents of documents, English law as to, 370
 admission as to the contents of documents, if relevant, 369
 admission, of contents, origin of the rule, 369
 admission, of contents, nature of, 371
 admission of contents, rule of, in the United States, 371 evidence and documentary evidence difference between 47
 evidence admissible, cases where 1036
 evidence, to be direct, 854
 evidence, weight and value of 848
 evidence, what is, 846
 evidence, when the informal and in complete document is silent, 1063
Order, of examination, 1395
 of production and examination of witnesses, 1390
Original and unoriginal evidence, meaning of, 52
 loss and destruction of—sufficiency of search in, 897 Originality, of document, meaning of 655
 non production of, for any other reason, 899
 when it is a public document 900
 when it is, not easily moveable, 899
 when, original has been lost or destroyed, evidence in, 896
Other, maps entries in if relevant, 668
 persons, proof of good faith in case of, 1187
Owner, of vicious animal, evidence against, 274

P

Palm impression, if evidence, 756
Parent and child, proof of good faith, in case of 1185
Parol evidence rule, nature of 1026 proof as to execution and delivery 1026 husbands, 1318
 to the suit, if witness, 1311
Partition onus in, 1146
Partnership firm, signature of, 767
 onus in, 1146
Partners presumption in case of, 1175
Party and document, identity of 913
 meaning of, 905
Patwar, his deposition, if admissible, 553

Peculiar, or technical terms, evidence to explain, 1079
Pecuniary, capacity if relevant, 195
Perception as a stage in testimony, general theory of, 861
Perpetual, and permanent settlements onus in, 1146
Person, alleging the case to prove it duty of, 1121
 meaning of, 518 1233
Personal acknowledgment, meaning of, 51
 and real evidence, meaning of, 51
 appearance, presumption as to, 1233
Persons, peculiarly interested if witnesses, 1311 who could be likely to know, opinion of, if evidence, 774
Physicians and others, testimony as to poisons 743
 and surgeons, expert testimony of 742
Plaint and counter-claimants decrees
Plans
Plea, element in estoppel, 1268
Poisons physicians and others' testimony as to, 743
Police, custody, meaning of, 449 duties, if admissible, 1480 officer, meaning of, 441, 450
 burden of proof in, 1179
 property, 1204
 of property, if recent, 1204
 of property if, to be exclusive, 1207
 of property, when unexplained, 1203
 onus in 1146
 or ancient instrument, if admissible, 48
 presumption as to, 1233
 presumption of continuance of, 1180
 what constitutes 1181
Possibility, capacity, tendency and cause as the object of evidence distinguished, 123
Posting, of letter, onus in, 1147
Power, of jury or assessors to put questions, 1496
Preamble, 1
Preamble, its interpretation as to the intention of the legislature, 2 its limitation in interpreting an Act 2
 its nature, 2
 to the Indian Evidence Act its significance, 3

Pre-emption, onus in, 2117.
 Preparation, absence of proof of, effect of, 135
 for an event, if relevant 135
 to accomplish the crime charged or other act, if relevant, 135
 to aid escape if relevant 135
 to avert suspicion from himself if relevant, 135
 to prevent discovery of crime if relevant 135
 when leading to guilt 135
 Presence, meaning of signature of purdannah lady how to be attested 923
 President District Board order of, if relevant, 217
 Presumption, as to book, maps and charts, 983
 as to certified copies of foreign judicial records, 981
 as to collections of laws and reports of decisions, 978
 as to document admissible in England without proof of seal or signature, 971
 as to due execution etc. of documents not produced 984
 as to gazetted news papers, private acts of Parliament and other documents 969
 as to genuineness of certified copies, 965
 as to maps or plans made by authority of Government, 975
 as to powers of attorney, 978
 as rule of law—process of development, 74
 as to telegraphic messages, 983
 'may presume' meaning of, 72
 mixed, meaning of 72
 of facts, meaning of, 70
 nature of, 1234
 of death, when does not arise, 1166
 of death, according to Hindu and Mahomedan law, 1167
 of genuineness by original court, 995
 of genuineness if presumption also of executant's authority to sign or grant 995
 of law, if rebuttable, 72
 of law meaning of, 71
 of origin of rules of, 70
 of proper official character, 965
 of survivorship 1173
 relation of, to the law of evidence, 74
 shall presume, meaning of, 73

Presumption—continued
 under section 90 if applicable in Probate Court, 992
 what kind of is raised, 991
 Previous acquittals or convictions effect of, 686
 conviction when relevant, 802
 deposition, how to be recorded, 619
 deposition if relevant when the witness is dead 619
 deposition, where it can be used, 619 judgment, if relevant to bar a second suit or trial, 672 683 offences, evidence of, 287
 Primary evidence and hearsay rule, 517
 evidence, illustration of, 872
 evidence meaning of, 873
 evidence what is 872
 Principal and Agent presumption in case of, 1176
 Printed matter—newspaper evidence of, 915
 Prior cause as the basis of inference, if relevant, 121
 vate documents, 958
 documents, nature of, 958
 firms, course of business if evidence, 299
 Privileged communication contents or condition of any, 1340
 communication, express comment, if required, 1344
 communication, nature of the claim in, 1325
 communication relevancy or necessity of 1346
 communications, cases of 1354
 communications general principles of 1325
 communications, not privileged, 1254
 in any advice given, 1351
 in communications in crown case, 1351
 nature of, 1355

Privilege—continued

no adverse reference from claims of, 1349
not waived by volunteering evidence, 1355

the judge to determine, 1319

Probability, other tests of, 831

test of—Sir J Fitz James Stephen's statement as to, 850

Probable meaning of, 63

Probate, jurisdiction of a court nature of, 690

Probative value, principle of rule as to, 122

Procedure of court in case of question being asked without reasonable grounds, 1441

Proceedings, before Arbitrator—if necessary, 1441 having possession of, 1366

1228

irres
con templated, 1221

Promissory note, onus in, 1147

note, proof of oral contract of loan, 1005

Proof, and inference, distinction between, 59

in civil and criminal cases nature of, 65

meaning of, 814

of cession of territory, 1199

of contents of documents, 871

of corpus delicti in cases of circumstantial evidence 68

of document not required by law to be attested, 943

of documents by primary evidence 882

of documents by production of certified copies, 959

of execution of document required

c

wills, 1187

of good faith in transactions when one party is in relation of active confidence, 1181

of good faith in transactions when one party is in relation of active confidence illustrations of, 1181

of other official documents, 961

of signature and handwriting of person alleged to have signed or written document produced 911

onus of, 1251

real foundation of, nature of, 59

Proof—continued

stricter degree of, in criminal cases 67

when attesting witness denies the execution, 959

where no attesting witness for 932

Proper, custody, meaning of, 989

Protection of title deeds by party not party to suit, 1359

"Proved", meaning of, 53, 490

"Prudent man" meaning of, 58

Public, custom, meaning of, 578 documents, 911

documents, if evidence, 1019,

documents, value of, 957

documents, what are also 956

office regularity in, if evidence of servant, meaning of, 651

Purdanashin, lady, onus in 1146

fully, proof of good faith in case 1187

Purporting, meaning of, 958

Put any question to him etc. meaning of, 1450,

Q

Quasi, criminal cases, evidence in, 78

Queen's case, objections to the rule laid down in, 1428

Question, by party to his own witness 1419

not to be asked without reasonable grounds, 1440

not to be asked without reasonable grounds, illustration of, 1440

Questions, assisting memory, if allowed 1423

form of, 738

intimidating and annoying in nature by cross examination 1436

lawful in cross examination, 1433

misleading, if may be taken 1126 objected to, procedure when, 1423

of identification, if allowed 1424

on introductory matters, if allowed 1423

on other matters not in dispute, allowed, 1423 tending to corroborate evidence relevant fact admissible, 1467 tending to corroborate evidence relevant fact, admissible, illustration of 1467

"and 1424

R

Railway, cases, onus in, 1147

Rape, evidence in action for, 293

Real and personal evidence, meaning of, 51

Privilege—continued

- no adverse reference from claims of, 1349
- not waived by volunteering evidence, 1355
- the judge to determine, 1349
- Probability, other tests of, 851
- test of—Sir J Fitz James Stephen's statement as to, 850
- Probable meaning of, 53
- Probate jurisdiction of a court nature of, 690
- Privative value, principle of rule as to, 122
- Procedure, of court in case of question being asked without reasonable grounds, 1411
- Proceedings, before Arbitrator—if Trial of

- Production, of documents, 1495
- of documents which another person having possession could refuse, 1366

irres
con

- Promissory note, onus in, 1147
- note, proof of oral contract of loan, 1005

- Proof, and inference, distinction between, 59
- in civil and criminal cases nature of, 65
- meaning of, 814
- of cession of territory, 1199
- of contents of documents, 871
- of corpus delicti in cases of circumstantial evidence, 68
- of document not required by law to be attested, 943
- of documents by primary evidence, 882
- of documents by production of certified copies, 959
- of execution of document required

- of good faith in transactions when one party is in relation of active confidence, 1181
- of good faith in transactions when one party is in relation of active confidence illustrations of, 1181
- of other official documents, 961
- of signature and handwriting of person alleged to have signed or written document produced, 911
- onus of, 1251
- real foundation of, nature of, 59

Proof—continued

- stricter degree of, in criminal cases, 67.
- when attesting witness denies the execution, 959
- where no attesting witness found, 937
- Proper, custody, meaning of, 989
- Protection of title deeds by persons not party to suit, 1359
- "Proved", meaning of, 53, 490
- "Prudent man" meaning of, 53
- Public, custom, meaning of, 578
- documents, 911
- documents, if evidence, 1019,
- documents, value of, 957
- documents, what are, 956
- office regularity in, if evidence, 293
- servant, meaning of, 651
- Pardanashin, lady, onus in, 1140
- lady, proof of good faith in case of, 1187
- Purporting, meaning of, 958
- Put any question to him etc., meaning of, 1450.

Q

- Quali, criminal cases, evidence in, 789
- Queen's, case, objections to the rule as laid down in, 1428
- Question, by party to his own witness, 1419
- not to be asked without reasonable grounds, 1440
- not to be asked without reasonable grounds, illustration of, 1440
- Questions, assisting memory if allowed, 1423
- form of, 739
- intimidating and annoying in nature by cross examination, 1436
- lawful in cross examination, 1433
- misleading, if may be asked, 1126
- objected to, procedure when, 1423
- of identification, if allowed, 1424
- on introductory matters, if allowed, 1423
- on other matters not in dispute, if allowed, 1423
- tending to corroborate evidence if relevant fact admissible, 1467
- tending to corroborate evidence if relevant fact, admissible, illustration of, 1467
- to adverse witness if allowed, 1424
- to be allowed if at the discretion of the court, 1424

R

- Railway, cases, onus in, 1147
- Rape, evidence in action for, 293
- Real and personal evidence, meaning of, 51

Real evidence, meaning of, 61
Receiving stolen property—proof of knowledge in, 274 Recital, in deed or other instrument onus in, 1147 in old document, if evidence, 196 Recollection of witness, if there should be any fixed rules of limitation as to present, 1475 Record of right—draft of, if admissible, 247 of rights if admissible 679 of rights onus in, 1147 Re examination 139,
direction of 139,
nature of 1417
Referee, if his death affect the admissibility of testimony 380 what questions may be referred to, 356 Refreshing memory, 1471
Refusal to answer, presumption in, 1217
Registered deed, onus in, 1149 letter, refusal of, if evidence 364 Register, or record, meaning of, 651 Registers, which are not public documents 937 Relationship, by marriage evidence as to 778 Release, onus in 1149
Relevancy, and admissibility, distinguished, 82

... section 41, illustration of, (36 degree of probative value required in, 195 in demand, 107,
in libel and slander, 107 of a bankrupt's declaration, 107 of acts in issue, 101
of certain evidence for proving in subsequent proceeding the truth of facts etc,
the in

I case, 103
of conduct when equivocal 103 of declaration by accused found with stolen goods 109 of declaration of a testator, 107 of declarations accompanying facts, 101 of declarations affecting revocation of will, 106 Relevancy, of declarations and acts of by the same person, 103
I. E. A.—202

Relevancy—contd
of declarations as to domicile, 108 of declarations by by-standers, 112 of declarations of acts in issue, 101 of entry in public record made in performance of duty, 117 of facts forming part of the same transaction, 90 of facts, forming part of the same transaction, illustration of, 90 of facts, forming part of the same transaction, scope of, 90
of facts, meaning of, 76
of facts, nature of, 23, 41 of incidents other than declaration, 101 of knowledge, belief, good faith, etc., 108 of other kinds of declarations, 109 of possessor's declaration in cases of adverse possession, 106 of statement as to any law contained in law books, 72 of statement as to fact of public nature contained in certain Acts or notifications, 69 of statement by agent, 107 of statements as regards state of health and bodily feelings, 104 of statements in maps, charts and plans, 661 of words accompanying the conduct in time, 101 of words aiding in completing the conduct, 103 scope of sections 11 to 57, dealing with, 90
Stephen's definition of, considered, 78
Stephen's definition of, fundamental confusion, 79
Stephen's definition of, inference and observation, 80
Stephen's definition of, resulting difficulties, obscuring the scope of evidence, 80
Stephen's theory of, criticism, 77 Relevant, classification of excluded relevant facts, 125 facts, what are, 516
facts, when excluded, 124
if to be of existing facts, 149 Reputation as evidence of character, 811

Dying declaration and section 161 of the Cr Pro Code, 532 conditions for receiving 533
 form of, 528
 if admissible under the English law, 520
 if rule against opinion evidence apply to, 525
 if subject to testimonial impeachment, 528
 its impeachment, weight for the jury, 535
 made by accomplice, if admissible, 530
 proof of, 530

Dying declarations cases as to 540
 if admissible, 969
 if admissible in favour of prisoner, 539
 if to be in the form of questions and answers, 538
 nature of, 539
 principles of admission, 519 scope of and inference, 537 scope of, if emotion excluded, 537 stage at which to be made, 534 not to be a capital case as a whole 539

E

Easement, onus in, 1139
 Effects, on human conduct instances of mental and moral effects as evidence 127
 Ejectment, onus in, 1139
 Embezzlement evidence in action for, 292
 Enactments repealed by the Evidence Act, 1504
 Encroachment by tenant presumption as to, 1224
 Enhancement of rent, onus in, 1140
 Entry, in book, admission of absence of, 197
 in other official book, register or record if relevant, 654
 in public book, register or record, if relevant, 653 in public record by any other person in performance of duty, if admissible 655
 in public record, English law as to 651
 in public record, errors of interest if admissible, 656
 in public record, if personal knowledge of the official making of, is necessary, 649
 in public record stating a fact in issue or relevant fact, if relevant, 653

Entry—continued

in public record to be made, in discharge of official duty 655
 Entries in books of account, American rule as to 636
 in books of account, declarant of, if to possess adequate knowledge, 646
 in books of account, English law as to 635
 in books of account English rule as to history of the exception 635
 in books of account, how to be proved, 641
 in books of account, if some of them proved bogus, the whole book if discredited, 647
 in books of account, illustration of 633
 in books of account, old law under Act II of 1855 as to, 638
 in books of account statements alone of, if to be evidence, 646
 in books of account time of making if required, 642
 in books of account to be regularly kept in the course of business 639
 in books of account when relevant, 633

Escrow, meaning of, 1068

Estoppel, 1236

against assignee of landlord 1300 against attestation of a document, 1266

as to, 1266

as to, 1266

as to, 1266

as to tenant 1294

basis of, on equity, 1238

between bailor and bailee 1305

between mortgagor and mortgagee, 1303

by acts of agent, 1231

by acts of government officer, 1275

by conduct nature of 1254

by deed nature of 1239

by election nature of, 1233

by landlord, 1303

Estoppel—continued

by matter of record, nature of, 1239
 by negligence, nature of, 1283
 by omission, nature of, 1272
 by representation—change of position brought about by it, 1252
 by silence, nature, of, 1270
 by waiver nature of, 1273
 constructive, nature of, 1277 different kinds of, according to English law, 1239
 doctrine of, in modern times, 1241
 equitable estoppel, if applies in case of part performance, 1273

if created by mistake, 1262
 if to be during the continuance of tenancy, 1296
 illustration of, 1636
 in acceptance of lease under coercion, 1239
 in Benami, 1282
 in cases of recital in document,
 nature of, 1240
 in equity, nature of, 1245

one against another, 1282
 other cases of, 1283
 rule of, if applicable in criminal
 cases 1288
 when truth of the matter known to both the parties 1251
 whether should be pleaded, 1250

Evidence Act, and the proceedings
 before Arbitrator, 32
 the Court martial, 31
 the commencement of the, 29
 the extent and application of, 29
 if a complete code, 34
 its application in places outside British India, 30
 its nature appearing from the preamble to it, 3
 its repeal of enactments, 33
 its short title 29

Evidence—continued

as to application of language which can apply to one only of several persons 1105
 as to application of language which

as to document unmeaning in reference to existing facts, 1109

as to document unmeaning in reference as to existing facts,
 illustration of, 1100

as to matters in writing 1427

as to matters in writing, illustration
 of, 1427

as to meaning of illegible characters etc., 1111

as to meaning of illegible characters etc., illustration of, 1112

before any person authorised by law, if admissible, 618

corroborative English law as to, 1467 difference between oral and documentary, 47

different meanings of, 44

direct and circumstantial meaning
 of, 47

English law of, its origin, growth and peculiarity, 24

gradual change in the law of, 25

hearsay, nature of, 52

if affected by subsequent pardon 1447

in judicial proceedings if admis-
 sible, 618

its several classification, 47

its classification into direct and circumstantial, defective, 48

the definition of, 47

law of and jury trial, 25

law of, and other factors 26

law of, and things excluded from 27

law of lex fori 29

law of, what is, 27

may be given, meaning of, in
 section 5, 83

meaning of, in the Evidence Act 44, 45

meaning of the word generally, 45

of accused, effect of, 499

of a person who saw it or heard it 868 of facts in issue and relevant

 facts, 82

of facts in issue and relevant facts, explanation of, 82

of facts in issue and relevant facts,
 illustration of, 82

of facts in issue and relevant facts,
 principle of, 83

Evidence—continued

of facts in issue and relevant facts,
scope of, 83
of former inconsistent statement, 1402 of terms of contracts etc. reduced to form of document 997 of terms of contracts etc reduced to form of document, illustration of, 990 of the commission by the accused of previous or subsequent offences, 287,
original and unoriginal, meaning
of, 52
'proved' meaning of, in connection
with, 53
quantum and weight of, 771

of, 516
secondary evidence as to contents, 905 withholding evidence, presumption

from, 1214.

Evidential fact analysis of the possibilities of, 64

Examination in chief 1395

duty of counsel in, 1397

importance of 1397

nature of, 1396

of, 1396

1000

of oral agreement, 1019

of oral agreement, illustration of, 1020

to contradict answers to questions
testing veracity, 1443

to contradict answer to questions testing veracity, illustration of 1443

to explain or amend ambiguous
documents, 1089

to explain or amend ambiguous documents, illustration of, 1089

Execution, not disputable because of estoppel or other substantive law, rule in, 938

not disputable because of opponent's claim under the same instrument, rule in, 938.

onus in 1140

Executive, proclamations, if relevant, 671

Existence, as distinguished from terms of contracts or of a grant or any other disposition of property, 1018
of course of business, when relevant, 296
of course of business when relevant

witness, may be witness of both the
parties, 740

witness, testing the credit of, 739

Experts, modes of examination of hypothetical questions, 937

on agriculture, opinion of, 744

their reports, if evidence, 756

value of, 740

Explanation, I of section 8, nature of, 152

II of section 8, nature of, 156

Explanatory, facts, basis for its admission, 162

facts if relevant 158

Expression, of emotion, if evidence, 133

External, stimulus, if evidence, 133

Extortion, and blackmail, evidence of 293

F

Fact Bentham's classification of, 39

Bentham's definition of, 39

discovered in consequence of information, if received from a person, 459

if discovered in consequence of information, 459

if includes judgment 192

if relevant when right or custom in question, 205

illustration of, 41

matter of, and matter of law distinguished, 41

meaning of, 37

meaning of, in understanding a statute, 40

nature of physical and psychological, 39

admissible, 310

Facts—continued

as occasion, cause of, facts in issue, illustration of, 119
 as occasion, cause of facts in issue limits of the rule of 121
 as occasion, cause of facts in issue, nature of, 121
 as occasion, cause of facts in issue, principle underlying 119
 as occasion, cause of facts in issue, scope of, 123
 bearing upon opinion of experts, 753
 bearing upon opinion of experts illustrations of, 758
 constituent, admission of, 99
 declared to be relevant, meaning of, 83
 division of into events and state of things, 40
 division of, into positive and negative, 40
 different meanings of 37
 especially within the knowledge of any person, burden of proof of, 1157
 forming part of the same transaction, classification of, 99
 inconsistent with any facts in issue, if evidence, 192
 in issue, explanation of, in the Evidence Act 43
 in issue, illustration of, in the Evidence Act 43
 in issue, meaning of 43, 83
 in issue, Stephen's definition of, considered, 79
 in issue what are they, 48
 judicially noticeable, need not be proved, 814
 necessary to explain or introduce relevant facts, if relevant, 158
 necessary to explain or introduce relevant facts, illustration of, 158
 not directly discovered, if evidence, 468
 not otherwise relevant, in section 11, meaning of, 192
 of social life, evidence in, 834
 otherwise not relevant when become relevant, 189 otherwise not relevant when become relevant illustration of, 189 psychological, how proved, 40 relevancy of, English law as to, 42
 relevancy of, reasons of the exclusionary rule as to, 42
 relevant when right or custom in question, illustration of, 205

Facts—continued

showing existence of state of mind, or of body or bodily feeling, if admissible, 250, 251
 tending to enable court to determine amount of damages, if relevant 100
 what may be proved by oral evidence, 847
 which court must take judicial notice of, 818
 which court must take judicial notice of, if the test of, complete 820
 which need not be proved, meaning of, 815
 which support or rebut an inference if relevant, 161
 Factum, probandum and Factum probans, distinction between, 58
 Faculties necessary for testimony of the witness, loss of, effect of, 621
 Fact witness, scope of opinion rule debaring a 726
 Failure, to produce evidence if relevant 149
 to produce or destruction of documents if evidence, 150 Fal 50
nd
if
 relevant, 144
 False, per-oration, effect of, 476 representation and cheating, illustrative cases of, 290 representation and cheating, principle of admitting of other evidence in action for, 280 Family, pedigree, if admissible 602 usage, evidence as to, 776
 Fear, exhibited by the accused, if relevant 150
 Feelings, at other times if relevant, 137
 Financial standing of the defendant, if admissible, 204
 Finger—impression, evidence of, 950
 Finger impressions testimony on, if admissible, 751
 First, information report, admissibility and value of, 1431
 information report, if admissible, 529
 information report if admissible to corroborate, 1470 Flight, from justice, if relevant, 147 from justice, if to be explained away, 148 Forgery, and counterfeiting nature of the offences, 275
 presumption as to, 1224
 Foreign expressions not commonly intelligible meaning of 1113
 judgment, if induced by fraud 714
 judgment, if relevant, 682

Foreign—continued

- judgment if relevant as judgment in probate etc., 690
- judgment how impeached under Indian law, 715
- law, how proved, 673
- law proof of, 710
- law proof of, Justice Story on, 741
- Fraud, by agent, if relevant, 146
- if exclude oral evidence, 1053
- if necessary to give rise to estoppel, 1277
- in compromise decree, 714
- instances of, 711
- instances of, in Probate case, 711
- meaning of, 709.
- onus in, 1140
- or collusion if the party can plead his own, 716
- or collusion in obtaining judgment or incompetency of court may be proved, 704
- or collusion, who can plead, 716
- presumption as to 1224

G

- Gazette, its genuineness if assumed, 672
- of India, if admissible 672
- what is, 970
- General, disposition, meaning of, 813
- Genuineness, presumption as to, 1224
- Giving, as evidence of document called for and produced on notice, 1487
- Ghee presumption as to, 1224
- Good character, effect and operation of evidence of, 791
- though never conclusive if acquit, 791
- Good faith, meaning of, 267
- onus in 1141
- presumption as to, 1224
- Good will, meaning of, 272
- Government, Gazette, if admissible, 661
- revenue, onus in, 1141
- Grant, presumption as to, 1224
- terms of a, 1004
- Grounds, of opinion, when relevant 783
- of opinion, when relevant, illustration of, 783
- Guardian and ward, onus in, 1141
- Guardianship certificate, if evidence, 659
- Guilt, presumption as to, 1224

HHandwriting—continued

- evidence, objection on the principle of confusion of issues, as to, 747
- evidence, objection when based on unfair selection of specimen as to, 746
- evidence of, 745
- experts, who are, 749
- knowledge of, acquired for the purpose of testifying, 7700
- other means of acquaintance with a person, 769
- signature meaning of, 762
- value of expert testimony in regard to, 750
- when expert evidence is admissible in proving, 750
- witnesses acquainted with, whether shifts the burden of proof, 770
- and
- it is
- exceptions and circumstantial guarantee of trustworthiness, 541,
- if applied where there is administrative requirements, 519
- nature of, as an extra judicial testimonial assertion, 507
- of the family as to particular facts, if excluded, 596
- rule and circumstantial guarantee, 519
- rule and declarations under section 6, 109
- rule and its exceptions its historical development, etc., 508
- rule and res gestae declaration, 112
- rule, exception to, 511
- rule, exception to, difference between English and Indian law as to, 522
- rule, exception to, history of English law as to, 522
- rule, its exception if considered from subjective relevancy, 556
- rule, reason for, inherent weakness, absence of cross-examination, 511
- rule second principle of, circumstantial guarantee of trustworthiness 513
- rule, statements under exceptions to, if admit of witness qualification, 513

rule, theory of, 510
Highly, probable in section 11,
meaning, of 103
probable or improbable in section 11, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838,

evidence—continued
evidence circumstantial and testimonial, distinguished 168 evidence general principle of, 163 evidence in foot prints, 168
evidence in section 9, scope of, 164 evidence value of, based on personal impression as regards, 170 from family name and initial, if presumption, 166
mental conditions recognising, if
evidence, 169
of a person by voice or appearance,
presumption in, 167
of name of persons, but of different person, presumption in, 166
of name, presumption in, 166
of person by photograph, if admis-
sible, 167
of person, circumstances favouring 164 of person, criminality of act im-
material in, 165
of things, presumption in, 167
presumption as to, 1226
qualification of observer if evidence 170 question of paternity, if admissible 172

to,
12-4 alienation by Hindu widow, onus
in, 1141
alienation by manager or guardian,
onus in, 1142
alienation by shebait, onus in 1142 applicability of, presumption as to, 1225 endowment in, presumption as to, 1225 inheritance, onus in, 1143
joint family, onus in, 1143
joint family, presumption as to, 1225 joint family, legitimacy of child in, 1198
joint family, partition, onus in, 1143 joint family, self acquisition, onus
in, 1143
joint family, stridhan, onus in, 1143.
Hindu, widow, presumption as to 1225
History, of the family, if evidence, 197
Horoscope, evidentiary value of, 604
Hostile, witness, English law as regards 1450

1450
witness, leading questions to, 1452
Hundi onus in, 1143
Husband, and wife, onus in, 1143
and wife, old rule excluding evidence of, 1320
and wife presumption as to, 1226
and wife, proof of good faith in case
of, 1185
and wife, to party, if witness, 1311
or wife of person in civil cases, if
witness, 1319
or wife of person in criminal cases,
if witness, 1320
or wife of person under criminal trial, 1319

I.

- Identification, cases of, in other proceedings, 171
- of prisoner's act, nature of, 168
- Identity, admission of other evidence in question of, 172
- as a probandum, other principles discriminated, 162
- as the test of admissibility, 164
- caution and precaution dealing with testimony to, 170
- evidence and opinion rule, 171

172
 testimony, if evidence, 729
 thumb impression admissible in, 173
 If, it shall appear to the Court etc,
 meaning, 1500
 Illegality, if exclude oral evidence, 1055
 Illegible, evidence in case of, 1113
 Illiterate's letter, typewriting testimony in, 915
 Illness, of the witness, effect of 620
 Illwill, meaning and nature of, 270
 Immoveable, property, meaning of 1294 Impeachment, credit of witnesses, 1458 credit of witness, illustration of,
 1459 Improper, admission or rejections of
 evidence, material error in, if leads
 to new trial under English law, 1497.
 admission or rejection of evidence
 retrospect in English law, 1497 Inaccurate description of a bequest
 evidence, 1105
 Inadmissible, evidence under section 7,
 illustrative cases of, 123, 126 127
 evidence under section 11, illustra-
 tive cases of, 200
 evidence under section, 13, illustra-
 tive cases of, 250,
 evidence under section 14 illustra-
 tive cases of, 283
 evidence under section 15, illustra-
 tive cases of, 295
 evidence under section, 16, illustra-
 tive cases of, 300.

Inadmissible—continued
 evidence under section 19, illustrative cases of, 351
 evidence under section 19, illustrative cases of, 351
 evidence under section 20, illustrative cases of, 375
 evidence under section 21, illustrative cases of, 369
 evidence under section 21, illustrative cases of, 378
Incapable to give evidence, meaning of, 519
Incident constituent admission of, 99
Incidents, other than declarations when relevant 101
Includes, meaning of, 36
Income tax, onus in, 1143
Inconsistent places, meaning of, 1275
Indecent, and scandalous questions, 1411
 exposures, evidence in action for, 294
Inducement if it comes into existence, 471
 if it be irrevocable 472
 if it can be put an end to 472.
 of the court 473
 what suffices in general to end an inducement 472
Infancy presumption as to, 1226
Inference and proof, distinction between, 59
 as an evolution of reasoning, 724
 condition of admissibility, necessity for, 727
 entire elimination of if possible 723
 form of, occasional deductive form, 61
 process, from the view of the opponent of evidence 63
 process, from the view of the proponent of evidence, 62
 process, method of agreement as a test, 64
 process method of difference as a test, 64 process, occasional subordinate tests of, 64
 of
 of the accused, if includes mere statements, 457
 presumption as to, 1226
 received from accused, how much of it may be proved, 450.
 I, E A—201

Information—continued
 so much as relates distinctly to facts thereby discovered if admissible, 461 Insanity, of the witness effect of 621
 presumption as to, 1229
Insolvency jurisdiction of a court, nature of, 694
 onus in, 1143
Instance nature of, 217
Instances, number of, 218
Instruments extrinsic evidence of admissible, to annex incidents, 1077
Insurance, onus, 114
Insurers and insurance experts, opinion, 744
Intentionality, nature of 1217.
 as to 1220
 anonymous, instances to prove if relevant, 261
 credibility of, 725
 fraudulent, proof of, 281
 if admissible in legacies, 1104
 if to be presumed from act, 260.
 meaning of 257
 mens rea, criminal knowledge etc
 of statutes, a general enactment not to cover or affect in any way by implication special enactment ?
 of statutes, all the parts together and not one part only by itself to be construed in, 8 of statutes, American cases and authorities, value of interpreting, English and Indian laws, 23 of statutes compulser or facit jus
 in construing an Indian statute 22, 23
 of statutes, equity and good conscience when to be applied, 16
 of statutes, every word to receive
 be looked to for impeaching the statute, 13 of statutes, if the rule as to the consideration of the intention conveyed by the language only, admits of any exception, 5

- of statutes, intention of the legislature conveyed by the language only considered in, 4, 5
- of statutes, legislative proceedings as a mode of ascertaining the intention of the legislature 11
- of statutes, mandatory provision, effect of, 21
- of statutes, marginal notes punctuation, if a part of the enactment, 13, 14
- of statutes, meaning of "may", 16
- of statutes, meaning of "or" and '16
- of statutes, "means and includes" implicating, 21
- of statutes, new words to be read in a statute, to clear the context, 16
- of statutes, no addition in the codified law of some of the provisions of the English common law is to be allowed in, 5
- of statutes no clause, sentence or word to be superfluous, void or insignificant in, 4
- of statutes, no reading of words absent or omitted in any act allowed in, 5
- of statutes no reference to what is just, expedient or reasonable or good in, 4, 5
- of statutes, no retrospective effect to be given in a pending action or in its appeal, unless so mentioned specially, 9
- of statutes, no retrospective operation of a statute, dealing with vested right when to be presumed, 8
- of statutes, no single enactment in a body of codified law rendering the express provisions of another enactment absolutely nugatory in 10
- of statutes, objects and reasons of the Bill, reports of the select committee, rules as to, if different in India, 12
- of statutes, objects and reasons of the bill, reports of the select committee, rule as to, 12
- of statutes penal, how to be construed, 18, 19

Interpretation—continued

- of statutes, proviso when to be referred to in construing the substantive enactment, 12, 14,
- of statutes, reference to previous state of law when allowed in cases of codifying law in, 9
- of statutes, reference to terms of other statutes, if allowed in, 4
- of statutes references to earlier law on the subjects covered by the statutes not excluded in cases of codifying act in, 10
- of statutes repeal by implication, effect of, 16
- of statutes retrospective effect to be given to the law of evidence, as a procedural law in, 9
- of statutes, the operation of
- of statutes, the operation of
- of statutes rule as to, when language is plain, 4
- of statutes, rules of evidence and Evidence Act how to be construed, 21, 22
- of statutes, same effect to be given to the codifying Act which does not alter or amend the previous state of law in, 10
- of statutes, saving clause, interpretation of, 21
- of statutes, schedule, if a part of enactment and when to be taken into consideration in construing an enactment 14
- of statutes, 'stare decisis', scope of the doctrine of, 20.
- of statutes, 'stare decisis', the doctrine if admits of exception, 20
- of statutes, ousting the court's jurisdiction how to be construed 16
- of statutes, the maxim non constitutio futuris formam imponere debet non praeteritis, 8
- of statutes, the language and words to be taken generally in their ordinary plain and grammatical senses in, 3, 6
- of statutes, the principle of eiusdem generis, application of, 19
- of statutes the reenactment of statutes if means the recognition of the correctness of its earlier interpretation, 11.

Knowledge—continued
which is common if potential, 818

L

Lakshray and rent-free land, onus in, 1144
Land acquisition, onus in, 1144
Landlord and tenant how a relationship is created, 1298
and tenant, onus in 1111
if a benamdar, 1298
Landlords and tenants, presumption
in case of, 1176
Tenant's onus in case of extrinsic per on,

shed, if

Leading question, 1419
meaning of, 1419
Legal character, meaning of 695
proof, what is, 54
Legitimacy, by conduct, evidence as to, 779
if a question of evidence 1198
of child,—conduct of supposed
father and mother in 1196
of child, declaration of husband and
wife in, 1197
of child when parents had no access 1198

onus in, 1144

presumption of, 1192 1232

Letters, or papers, forming part of correspondence if evidence 679

Lie, psychology of, kind of lies 865

Life inference, of continuance of life
if rebuttable 1161

Limitation, onus in, 1144

Local, and provincial expression, nature
of, 1116

M

Made' meaning of 488

Magistrate meaning of, 36, 450

Mahomedan law, legitimacy of child
in 1198

Malice meaning and nature of, 270

Malicious prosecution, onus in, 1145

Maps chittas if relevant, 249

Marriage onus in, 1145

presumption as to 1232

Material effects, if excluded as evidence 125

Matrimonial jurisdiction of a court,
nature of, 693

Matter, of fact and matter of law, distinguished, 41

Matters, before it (the court) meaning
of, 56

of opinion, meaning of 720

of science and art evidence in 830

May, meaning of, 491

presume, meaning of, 72

presume meaning of, under section 90, 991

presume, meaning of, in the Evidence Act 69

take consideration of, meaning of 491

Mechanics and mechanists as experts 743 plaint and patient's proof

witness, deposition of 100

witness, qualifications of, 756

witness, to be asked questions 706

Memory, and recollection, general
theory of 864

differences of, capacity for 865

if to be refreshed by any writing 1478

if to be refreshed by experts by referring to professional treatise, 1481

if to be refreshed by referring to arbitration 1482

if to be refreshed by referring to
confession by the magistrate 1482

if to be refreshed by referring to
copies of documents 1480

if to be refreshed by referring to in-
admissible documents, 1480

if to be refreshed by referring to
police diary, 1482

if to be refreshed by referring to
special diaries 1482

if to be refreshed by referring to statements reduced to writing by
police officer 1481

if to be refreshed by referring to writing made at the time of transaction 1479

if to be refreshed by referring to writing made by any other person 1480

if to be refreshed by referring to writing made by the witness himself 14759

of the witness loss of, effect of 621

Mercantile usage, onus in, 1145

Mesne profits, onus in 1145

Mind, state of, importance of in civil
and criminal cases 257

state of, or bodily feeling, how proved, 255

state of, proved by three species of
evidence, 257

Minor, onus in 1145

Misleading inducements, illegality of, 476
 of fact, and section 31 of the Specific Relief Act, 1059
 of fact, if exclude oral evidence, 1059
 of law, if exclude oral evidence, 1059
 Mixed presumption meaning of, 72
 Motive absence of proof of, if material, 131
 relevant, nature of, 133
 how to be proved, 137
 if essential as evidence, 131
 if proved by conduct, 137
 if to be adequate as evidence, 131
 judicial proof of, 133
 preparation and previous or subsequent conduct if relevant, 130
 preparation and previous or subsequent conduct, if relevant, illustration of, 131 relevancy of circumstances tending to excite, 135
 Motives as evidence, principle of admission, 133
 Mortgage, evidence in, 1010
 onus in, 1145

N

Notary, public evidence, 980
 Not, been heard of, meaning of, 1171
 "Not come to," meaning of, 706 rejection of evidence, 1496
 Notary, public evidence, 980
 Not, been heard of, meaning of, 1171
 "Not come to," meaning of, 706
 effect of production or non production after service of 906
 onus in, 1146
 such notice as is prescribed by law, 905
 when after notice to opponent he does not produce it, evidence in, 894
 Number, of witnesses, 1387.

O

Objection, in second appeal, if permissible, 1501
 to question by other party, when to be made, 1101
 waiver of inadmissibility, 929
 Obsolete, expressions nature of, 1111
 Of, any person bound to produce it, meaning of, 893
 Official acts, regularity of, presumption as to, 1212
 communications, 1333
 printed copies, if admissible, 962
 public book, absence of entries in, 663
 records relating to affairs of state, if evidence, 1330
 reports, register etc, value of, 603
 Old copies, meaning of, 893
 Omission, to sue for the whole of the claim effect of, 636
 On, whom burden of proof lies, 1125
 whom burden of proof lies illustration of, 1125 Opinion and fact, distinguished, 722
 as to existence of right or custom when relevant, 772
 as to existence of right or custom when relevant, illustration of, 772 as to, handwriting if relevant, 760 as to, handwriting, if relevant, illustration of, 760 as to, public interest if to be of competent person, 680
 as to public or general interest, if admissible, 678
 as to, usages, tenants &c, when relevant, 774
 evidence, if excluded, 720
 evidence, of expert, if admissible, 732
 evidence, pre requisites of, by expert, 731
 of witness, scope of the rule rejecting, 725
 on relationship, if relevant, 777
 on relationship, illustrations of, 777
 rule, gradual growth of, 721
 rule principle underlying the new, 722
 when admissible, 899
 Opposition, of impugners, if evidence, 133 Opi
 for the happening of the fact, if evidence, 124

Opportunity—contra uel

for the happening of the fact, exclusive to one, value of, 129

Oral, admission as to the contents of documents, English law as to, 370

admission as to the contents of documents, if relevant, 369

admission, of contents, origin of the rule 369

admission, of contents nature of 371

admission, of contents, rule of, in the United States 371

evidence and documentary evidence difference between 47

evidence admissible, cases where 1036

evidence, to be direct, 854

evidence, weight and value of 848

evidence, what is 846

evidence, when the informal and in complete document is silent, 1063

Order of examination, 1395

of production and examination of witnesses, 1390

Original and unoriginal evidence, meaning of 52

loss and destruction of—sufficiency of search in 897

Originality, of document, meaning of 655

non production of, for any other reason, 899

when it is a public document 900

when it is, not easily moveable, 899

when, original has been lost or destroyed, evidence in, 896

Other maps entries in if relevant, 668

persons, proof of good faith in case of 1187

Owner, of vicious animal, evidence against, 274P*Palm impression, if evidence 756

Parent and child, proof of good faith, in case of, 1180

Parol evidence rule, nature of 1026

proof as to execution and delivery and suspension of operation, 1068 proof, English law as to, 1075

Part II (on proof) scope of 814

Parties, to civil suit and their wives or husbands, 1318

to the suit if witness, 1311

Partition onus in, 1146

Partnership, firm, signature of a, 767

onus in, 1146

Partners presumption in case of, 1175

Party and document, identity of 913

meaning of, 905

Patwari his deposition, if admissible, 553Peculiar or technical terms, evidence to explain, 1079

Pecuniary, capacity, if relevant, 195

Perception as a stage in testimony general theory of, 861

Perpetual, and permanent settlements onus in, 1146

Person, alleging the case to prove it duty of, 1121

meaning of, 518, 1233

Personal acknowledgment, meaning of, 51

and real evidence, meaning of, 51

appearance, presumption as to 1233

Persons, pecuniary interested if witness, 1311

who could be likely to know, opinion of, if evidence, 774

Physicians and others' testimony as to poisons 743

and surgeons, expert testimony of 742

Plaints and written statements decrees etc, if public document, 954,

Plans, and intentions as to wills, contracts, deeds, if relevant 144

Plea, of acquiescence, if a necessary element in estoppel, 1268

Poisons physicians and others' testimony as to, 743

Police, custody, meaning of, 448

diaries, if admissible, 1430

officer, meaning of, 441, 450

burden of proof in, 1170

Possession, meaning of, 1179

of fruits of crime, if evidence, 151 of property explanation of, if consistent with the identity of the property, 1204

of property, if recent, 1204

of property if, to be exclusive 1207

of property, when unexplained, 1203

onus in 1146

or ancient instrument, if admissible, 48

presumption as to, 1233

presumption of continuance of, 1160

what constitutes 1181

Possibility, capacity, tendency and cause as the object of evidence distinguished, 123

Posting of letter, onus in, 1147

Power, of jury or assessors to put questions, 1496

Preamble, 1

Preamble, its interpretation as to the intention of the legislature, 2

its limitation in interpreting an Act 2

its nature, 2

to the Indian Evidence Act, its significance, 3

Pre-emption, onus in, 2117.
 Preparation, absence of proof of, effect of, 138
 for an event, if relevant, 138
 to accomplish the crime charged or other act, if relevant, 138
 to aid escape, if relevant, 133
 to avert suspicion from himself, if relevant, 139
 to prevent discovery of crime if relevant, 139
 when leading to guilt, 139
 Presence, meaning of, signature of purdannah lady, how to be attested, 923
 President District Board, order of, if relevant, 247
 Presumption, as to book, maps, and charts, 983
 as to certified copies of foreign judicial records, 981
 as to collections of laws and reports of decisions, 978
 as to document admissible in England without proof of seal or signature, 971
 as to documents produced as records
 as to due execution etc. of documents not produced, 984
 as to gazettes, news papers, private acts of Parliament and other documents, 969
 as to genuineness of certified copies, 963
 as to maps or plans made by authority of Government, 976
 as to powers of attorney, 978
 as rule of law—process of development, 74
 as to telegraphic messages, 993
 ‘may presume’ meaning of, 72
 mixed, meaning of, 72
 of facts, meaning of, 70
 nature of, 1234
 of death, when does not arise, 1166
 of death, according to Hindu and Mahomedan law, 1167
 of genuineness by original court, 995
 of genuineness if presumption also of executant’s authority to sign or grant, 995
 of law, if rebuttable, 72
 of law meaning of, 71
 of origin of rules of, 70
 of proper official character, 965
 of survivorship, 1173
 relation of, to the law of evidence, 71
 shall presume, meaning of, 73

Presumption—continued
 under section 90 if applicable in Probate Court, 992
 what kind of is raised, 991
 Previous acquittals or convictions effect of, 686
 conviction when relevant, 802
 deposition, how to be recorded, 619
 deposition, if relevant when the witness is dead, 619
 deposition, where it can be used, 619
 judgment, if relevant to bar a second suit or trial, 672, 683
 offences, evidence of, 287
 Primary evidence and hearsay rule, 517
 evidence, illustration of, 872.
 evidence, meaning of, 873
 evidence what is, 872
 Principal, and Agent, presumption in case of, 1176
 Printed matter—newspaper evidence of, 915
 Prior cause as the basis of inference, if relevant, 121.
 vate, documents, 953
 documents, nature of, 953
 firms, course of business, if evidence, 299
 Privileged communication, contents or condition of any, 1346
 communication, express comment, if required, 1344 1347 communication, nature of the claim in, 1325
 communication relevancy or necessity of, 1346
 communications, cases of, 1351
 communications general principles of, 1325
 communications, not privileged, 1251
 communication, when the judge considers that the public interest
 in any advice given, 1351.
 in communications in crown case, 1351
 nature of, 1355.

Privilege—continued

no adverse reference from claims of, 1349
not waived by volunteering evidence, 1355

Stephen's

statement as to, 850

Probable meaning of, 58

Probate jurisdiction of a court nature
of, 690

Primitive value principle of rule as to,
122

Procedure of court in case of question being asked without reasonable grounds, 1441

Proceedings before Arbitrator—if Evi
of

Production of documents, 1485

of documents which another person having possession could refuse 1866

F - - - - -
irres
con

Promissory note, onus in, 1147

note, proof of oral contract of loan, 1005

Proof and inference, distinction be tween 59
in civil and criminal cases nature
of, 65
meaning of, 814

stantial evidence 68

of document not required by law to be attested 948

of documents by primary evidence 882 of documents by production of certi fied copies, 909

of execution of document required
by law to be attested, 915 of facts by oral evidence, 846 of good faith if applies to cases of wills, 1187

of good faith in transactions when
one party is in relation of active confidence, 1181

of good faith in transactions when
one party is in relation of active confidence illustrations of 1181

of other official documents, 961

of signature and handwriting of person alleged to have signed or written document produced 911

onus of, 1251

real foundation of, nature of, 59

Proof—continued

stricter degree of, in criminal cases 67 when attesting witness denies the execution, 909

where no attesting witness found 932

Proper, custody meaning of 989

Protection of title deeds by persons not party to suit 1359

"Proved" meaning of, 53, 490

"Prudent man" meaning of 58

Public, custom, meaning of, 578
documents, 901

documents, if evidence 1010,

documents value of, 907

documents what are 906

office regularity in if evidence 293

servant meaning of 651

Purdanashah lady, onus in 1146

lady proof of good faith in case of 1187

Purporting, meaning of, 908

Put any question to him etc meaning
of, 1450,

Q

Quasi, criminal cases, evidence in 789

Queen's, case, objections to the rule as laid down in, 1498

Question by party to his own witness 1449

not to be asked without reasonable
grounds 1440

not to be asked without reasonable grounds, illustration of, 1440

Questions, assisting memory, if allowed 1423

form of, 738

intimidating and annoying in nature by cross examination 1436

lawful in cross examination, 1433

misleading, if may be asked 1426 objected to procedure when, 1423

of identification, if allowed 1424

on introductory matters, if allowed, 1423

on other matters not in dispute, if allowed, 1423

tending to corroborate evidence if relevant fact admissible, 1467

tending to corroborate evidence if relevant fact admissible, illustra tion of, 1467

to adverse witness if allowed 1424

to be allowed if at the discretion of
the court 1424

R

Railway, cases onus in 1147

Rape, evidence in action for, 293

Real and personal evidence, meaning
of, 51

Reputation—contd

- cross examination of a witness to, 812
- meaning of, 812
- nature and formation of, 811
- of the plaintiff if admissible in a prosecution without probable cause, 260
- person qualified to testify, 812
- Reputation, time and character of, 811
- Representation, who can take advantage of, 1249
- "Required by law to be attested" meaning of, 928
- Res gestae, as a phrase inexact and indefinite, 92
- basis of the theory of, 98
- declarations, evidence is primary in, 111
- Res gestae, declarations if subject to limitation of Hearsay rule, 112
- if containing written declaration as its part, 98
- meaning of, 91
- scope and limits of facts forming, 96

Res

- law, 683
- the law as to, 684
- Retracted, confession and the position of the co accused, 496
- confession, corroboration of 431
- confession, value of against the maker, 496
- Right, meaning of, 209
- of adverse party as to writing used to refresh memory, 1483
- to begin nature of, 1392
- what is 774
- Riway 1 am entry in, admissible, 657
- entries in, if proof of custom 248
- Road cess, papers, if admissible, 247, 552
- return if admissible in favour of a party making it, 365
- Rule, if to be applied with proper care and caution, 996

- Sale, evidence in, 1011
- for arrears of revenue, onus in, 1148
- onus in, 1148
- Sanity opinion as to, if admissible, 730
- presumption as to, 1233
- Saving, of provisions of Indian Succession Act relating to wills, 1119
- Science or Art nature of, 742
- Search, list, evidence in, 1013

Secondary, evidence and hearsay rule,

- 517
- evidence if necessarily admissible, 616
- evidence illustration of, 872
- evidence meaning of, 873
- evidence no preference as regards any kind of, 880
- evidence objections by opponents to, 616
- evidence time for objecting to the
- 4, text of, 69
- 5, text of, 82
- 6, text of, 90

- 9, illustration (f) nature of, 175
- 9 text of 153, 159
- 10, principle of, 181
- 10, scope of, 180
- 10, text of, 175, 176
- 11, if controlled by section 32 191
- 11, illustration (b) nature of 195
- 11, scope of 189
- 11 text of, 189
- 12, scope of, 201
- 12, text of, 200
- 13, clause (a) nature of, 207
- 13 clause (b), nature of, 208
- 13 scope and principle of, 205
- 13 text of, 205
- 14, principle underlying, 251
- 14, scope of, 252
- 14, text of, 250
- 15, scope of 283
- 15, text of, 283
- 16, principle underlying 296
- 16, scope of, 297
- 16, text of, 296
- 17, text of, 301

Section 1,—contd

- 20, principle underlying, 355
 - 20, text of, 355
 - 21, clause (1) nature of, 363
 - 21, clause (2), nature of, 365
 - 21, clause (2) principles underlying, 366
 - 21, clause (2), nature of, 367
 - 21, principles underlying, 359
 - 21, text of, 355
 - 22, text of, 369
 - 22, scope of, 371
 - 22, explanation nature of, 376
 - 23, scope of, 375
 - 23, text of, 372
 - 24, if erroneously criticised, 413
 - 24, principle underlying, 103
 - 24, scope of, 404
 - 24, text of, 379
- Sections, 24 to 27, if require re drafting, 455

Section 25, origin of, 438

- 25, scope of, 439
- 25, text of, 436
- 26, origin of, 447
- 26, reason of the rule in, 447
- 26, scope of, 447
- 26, text of, 446
- 27 and section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 469
- 27, explanation, nature of, 450
- 27, origin of, 451
- 27, principle underlying, 451
- 27, scope of, 452
- 28, principle underlying, 470
- 28, scope of, 470
- 28, text of, 470
- 29, rule in, criticised, 474
- 29, scope of, 474
- 29, text of, 473
- 30, explanation nature of, 493
- 30, if to be construed strictly, 483
- 30, principle underlying, 480
- 30, scope of, 481
- 30, text of, 479
- 31, principle underlying, 499
- 31, scope of, 500
- 31, text of, 499
- 32, clause II, and section 34 of the Evidence Act distinguished, 545
- 32, clause II, cases under, 551
- 32, clause II, principles underlying, 540
- 32, clause II, scope of, 540
- 32, clause III, declarations held admissible under, 568
- 32, clause III, declarations held not admissible under, 570
- 32, clause III, nature of, 553
- 32, clause IV, principle underlying, 574
- 32, clause IV, statement admissible under, 592
- 32, clause V, cases under, 597.

Section 1—contd

- 32, clause V, form of, 587.
- 32, clause V, scope of, 583
- 32, clause VI, cases under, 600
- 32, clause VI, scope of, 584
- 32, clause, VII cases under, 610
- 32, clause VII, scope of, 606
- 32, clause VIII, condition of admissibility of, 611
- 32, clause VIII, scope of, 610
- 32, clauses (V) and (VI), differentiated, 586
- 32, clauses (V) and (VI), history of, 582
- 32, clauses (V) and (VI), value of statements under, 605
- 32, illustration (n), nature of, 611.
- 32, origin of the rule of, 575
- 32, scope of, 575
- 33, admission of evidence under, procedure as to, 617.
- 33, text of, 612
- 34, origin of, 635
- 34, principle underlying, 633
- 34, scope of, 637.
- 34, text of, 633
- 35, documents admissible under, 660
- 35, documents inadmissible under, 662
- 35, general principle underlying, 647
- 35, scope of, 650
- 35, text of, 647
- 36, principle underlying, 664
- 36, scope of, 664
- 36, text of, 664
- 37, principle underlying, 669
- 37, text of, 669
- 38, principle underlying, 673
- 38, scope of, 673
- 38, text of, 672
- 39, principle underlying, 676
- 39, scope of, 676
- 40, principle, underlying, 682,
- 40, scope of, 681
- 40, text of, 679
- 41, principle underlying, 688
- 41, scope of, 688
- 41, text of, 687.
- 42, origin of the rule in, 697
- 42, scope of, 696
- 42, text of, 696
- 43, principle underlying, 700
- 43, scope of, 700
- 44, principle underlying, 701
- 44, scope of, 704
- 44, text of, 704
- 45, origin of the rule in, 731.

Reputation—contd

cross examination of a witness to 812
 meaning of, 812
 nature and formation of 811
 of the plaintiff if admissible in a prosecution without probable cause 266 person qualified to testify, 812
 Reputation, time and character of, 811
 Representation, who can take advantage of, 1249
 "Required by law to be attested," meaning of, 928
 Res gestae, as a phrase inexact and indefinite 92
 basis of the theory of, 93
 declarations evidence is primary in, 111
 Res gestae declarations if subject to limitation of Hearsay rule, 112
 if containing written declaration as its part, 93
 meaning of, 91
 scope and limits of facts forming, 96 territorial limits and, 93 time, space and causation and, 97 Res judicata, if a general principle of law, 683
 the law as to, 684
 Retracted, confession and the position of the co accused, 496
 confession corroboration of 431
 confession, value of against the maker, 496
 Right, meaning of, 209
 of adverse party as to writing used to refresh memory, 1483
 to begin nature of, 1392
 what is, 774
 Riway i am entry in, admissible, 657
 entries in, if proof of custom 246
 Road cess, papers, if admissible, 247, 552
 return if admissible in favour of a party making it, 365
 Rule if to be applied with proper care and caution, 996
 T
 I
 S
 Sale, evidence in 1011
 for arrears of revenue onus in, 1148
 onus in, 1118
 Sanity opinion as to if admissible, 730
 presumption as to, 1233
 Sav
 Sci
 Set

Secondary, evidence and hearsay rule

517
 evidence if necessarily admissible, 616
 evidence illustration of 872
 evidence meaning of, 873
 evidence no preference as regards any kind of 880
 evidence objections by opponents to, 616
 evidence time for objecting to the
 .
 3 text, of, 35, 37, 41 43, 44 53
 4, text of, 69
 5, text of, 87
 6 text of, 90
 7 "definition of nature of 130
 of,
 175 11
 11, scope of 189
 11 text of, 189
 12, scope of, 201
 12, text of 200
 13 clause (a) nature of 207
 13 clause (b) nature of, 208
 13 scope and principle of, 205
 13 text of, 205
 of
 14, principle underlying 204
 14, scope of, 252
 14, text of, 250
 15, scope of 283
 15 text of, 283
 16 principle underlying 296
 16, scope of 297
 16, text of, 296
 17 text of, 301
 18 principle underlying, 318
 18 scope of 318

Section 1,—contd.

- 20, principle underlying, 355
 - 20, text of, 355
 - 21, clause (1) nature of, 363
 - 21, clause (2), nature of, 365
 - 21, clause (2), principles underlying, 366
 - 21, clause (2), nature of, 367
 - 21, principles underlying, 359
 - 21, text of, 358
 - 22, text of, 369
 - 22, scope of, 371
 - 23, explanation nature of, 376
 - 23, scope of, 375
 - 23, text of, 372
 - 24, if erroneously criticised, 413
 - 24, principle underlying, 403
 - 24, scope of, 404
 - 24, text of, 378
- Sections, 21 to 27, if require re draft
ing, 455

Section 25, origin of, 438

- 25, scope of, 439
- 25, text of, 436
- 26, origin of, 447
- 26, reason of the rule in, 447
- 26, scope of, 447
- 26, text of, 446
- 27 and section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 469
- 27, explanation, nature of, 450
- 27, origin of, 451
- 27, principle underlying, 451
- 27, scope of, 452
- 28, principle underlying, 470
- 28, scope of, 470
- 28, text of, 470
- 29, rule in, criticised, 474
- 29, scope of, 474
- 29, text of, 473
- 30, explanation nature of, 493
- 30, if to be construed strictly, 493
- 30, principle underlying, 480
- 30, scope of, 481
- 30, text of, 479
- 31, principle underlying, 499

- 32, clause II, cases under, 531
- 32, clause II, principles underlying, 540
- 32, clause II, scope of, 540
- 32, clause III, declarations held admissible, 540

- 32, clause IV, statement admissible
under, 592
- 32, clause V, cases under, 597

Section 1 —contd.

- 32, clause V, form of, 587.
- 32, clause V scope of, 584
- 32, clause VI, cases under, 600
- 32, clause VI, scope of, 584
- 32, clause, VII cases under, 610
- 32, clause VII, scope of, 606.
- 32, clause VIII, condition of admissibility of, 611
- 32, clause VIII, scope of, 610
- 32, clauses (V) and (VI), differentiated 586
- 32, clauses (V) and (VI), history of,
592
- 32, clauses (V) and (VI), value of statements under, 605
- 32, illustration (n), nature of, 611
- 32, origin of the rule of, 575
- 32, scope of, 575
- 33, admission of evidence under,
procedure as to, 617.

- 34, principle underlying, 633
- 34, scope of, 637.
- 34, text of, 633
- 35, documents admissible under, 660
- 35, documents inadmissible under, 662
- 35, general principle underlying, 647.
- 35, scope of, 650
- 35, text of, 647
- 36, principle underlying, 664
- 36, scope of, 664
- 36, text of, 664
- 37, principle underlying, 669
- 37, text of, 669
- 38, principle underlying, 673
- 38, scope of, 673
- 38, text of, 672
- 39, principle underlying, 676
- 39, scope of, 676
- 40, principle, underlying, 682,
- 40, scope of, 681
- 40, text of, 679
- 41, principle underlying, 688
- 41, scope of, 688
- 41, text of, 687
- 42, origin of the rule in, 697
- 42, scope of, 696
- 42, text of, 696
- 43, principle underlying, 700
- 43, scope of, 700
- 44, principle underlying, 701
- 44, scope of, 701
- 44, text of, 701
- 45, origin of the rule in, 731.

Section—contd

- 45, principle underlying, 733
- 45 text of, 731
- 46, scope of, 759
- 46 text of, 758
- 47, principle underlying, 760
- 47, scope of, 761
- 48 explanation, nature of 774
- 48, principle underlying 772
- 48, scope of, 772
- 48, text of, 772
- 49, principle underlying 775
- 49, scope of, 775
- 49 text of, 775
- 50, principle underlying, 777
- 50, proviso nature of 780
- 50, scope of, 777
- 50 text of 775
- 51, principle underlying 783
- 51, scope of, 783
- 51 text of, 783
- 52, principle underlying, 787
- 52, scope of, 787
- 52, text of 786
- 53 origin of the rule in, 791
- 53, principle underlying, 791
- 53, scope of 792
- 53 text of, 791
- 54 and old section, 798
- 54, explanation I nature of 803
- 54, explanation II, nature of, 802
- 54 principle underlying 797
- 54, text of, 797
- 54 scope of, 798
- 55, explanation nature of 807
- 55 principle underlying, 803
- 55, scope of, 804
- 55, text of, 803
- 56 meaning of, 818
- 56, principle underlying, 817
- 56 text of, 814
- 57, clause I, nature of, 821
- 57, clause II nature of, 822

- 57 text of 818
- 58 principle underlying, 838
- 58, proviso nature of, 815
- 58, scope of, 838
- 58 text of, 838
- 59, if happily worded, 847
- 59 text of, 846
- 60 principle underlying, 855
- 60, proviso I nature of, 869
- 60, proviso II, nature of, 869

Section—contd

- 60, scope of 867
- 60, text of, 854
- 61, text of, 871
- 62 explanation I nature of 875
- 62 explanation II, nature of 875
- 62 text of 872
- 62 scope of, 874
- 63 clause I nature of 876
- 63 clause II nature of 877
- 63 clause III nature of 877
- 63' clause IV nature of 878
- 63 clause V, nature of, 879
- 63 scope of 872 875
- 63 text of 872
- 64 origin of the rule in 882
- 64 principle underlying 882
- 64 scope of, 882
- 64 text of 882
- 65 and section 19 of the Registration Act 888
- 65 clause A original document if in the possession or power of adversary, 889
- 65 clause I, nature of 901
- 65, clause G nature of, 902
- 65 principle underlying 884
- 65 scope of 884
- 65, text of 884
- 66 principle underlying 904
- 66 proviso para (1) when the document to be proved is itself a notice 907
- 66 proviso para (2) when the adverse party must know that he will be required to produce document 907
- 66 proviso para (3) when the opponent has fraudulent possession of document 909
- 66 proviso para (4) when the adverse party has the original document in Court, 909
- 66 proviso para (5) when the adverse party or his pleader has admitted loss of the document 910
- 66 proviso, para (6) when the person in possession of the document is out of the reach of, or not subject to the process of the Court 910
- 66 scope of 904
- 66 text of, 903
- 67 principle underlying, 911
- 67, scope of, 911
- 67, text of 911
- 68 before amendment by Act XXXI of 1926 926
- 68, departure from old rule and principle underlying 918
- 68 history of rule in 916
- 68 proviso, nature of, 931.

Section—cont'd

- 68 reason and policy of the old rule in, 917
- 68, rules in general nature and policy of, in 916
- 68 scope of 919
- 68, text of 917
- 69 principle underlying 932
- 69 scope of 931
- 69, text of, 932
- 70 principle underlying 936
- 70 scope of, 936
- 70, text of, 936
- 71 principle underlying 936
- 71 scope of 939
- 71, text of 939
- 72 principle and scope of 943
- 72, text of 943
- 73 English law and origin of the rule in 947
- 73 principle underlying 944
- 73 scope of 944
- 73, text of 944
- 74 scope of, 951,
- 74, text of 952
- 75, text of, 958
- 76 scope of, 958
- 76, text of, 958
- 77 principle underlying 959
- 77 scope of, 960
- 77, text of 960
- 78, clause I, nature of, 962
- 78, clause II nature of 962
- 78, clause III nature of 962
- 78, clause IV nature of 963
- 78, clause V nature of, 963
- 78, clause VI nature of, 963
- 78, text of, 961
- 79, principle underlying 964
- 79, text of 963
- 80 principle underlying 966
- 83 scope of, 966
- 81 principle underlying 969
- 81, text of, 969
- 82, and English law, 972
- 82, origin of 972
- 82, scope of, 974
- 82, text of 972
- 83 principle underlying, 975,
- 83, scope of, 976
- 83, text of 975
- 84 principle underlying 978
- 84 scope of 979
- 84, text of, 978
- 85 principle underlying 979
- 85 scope of, 979
- 85, text of 978
- 86 underlying 961
- 86 scope of, 982
- 86, text of 981
- 87 scope of 983
- 87, text of, 983
- 88, scope of, 983
- 88, text of, 983

Section—cont'd

- 89 principle underlying, 984
- 89 scope of 984
- 89, text of, 984
- 90 explanation nature of 997
- 90 scope of, 986
- 90, text of, 985
- 91 application of to an oral statement made by witness to a police officer 1013
- 91 exception I nature of 1011
- 91 exception II, nature of 1011
- 91 explanation I nature of 1015
- 91 explanation II nature of 1017
- 91, explanation III nature of 101
- 91 principle underlying, 998
- 91 scope of 999
- 91, text of 997
- 92 illustrations nature of 1059
- 92 principle underlying, 1021
- 92 proviso I, scope of 1051
- 92, proviso II scope of 1060
- 92, proviso III scope of 1065
- 92, proviso IV, scope of 1070
- 92, proviso V, scope of, 1076
- 92, proviso VI, scope of, 1081
- 92, proviso, scope of, 1050
- 92, rule in and application to other documents, 1055
- 92, rule in, and application to will cases 1052
- 92 scope of 1022
- 92, text of 1019
- 93 principle underlying 1091
- 93 scope of 1091
- 93, text of 1089
- 94 scope of 1096
- 94, text of 1096
- 95 application of, 1101
- 95, application of maxim of, in different classes of cases, 1101
- 95, extension of the rule in, 1101
- 95, general principle and scope in, 1103
- 95 illustrative cases under, 1101
- 95 principle underlying 1101
- 95, text of, 1100
- 96 and similar law 1105
- 96 principle underlying, 1107
- 96 rule in, application of the 1107
- 96 scope of 1105
- 96, text of 1105
- 97 cases under, 1110
- 97 principle underlying, 1109
- 97 scope of, 1109
- 97, text of, 1109
- 98, principle underlying 1112
- 98 scope of 1112
- 98, text of 1111
- 99, principle underlying, 1117.
- 99, scope of 1118.
- 99, text of 1117
- 100 scope of 1119
- 100, text of, 1119

Section—contd

- 45 principle underlying 732
- 45 text of, 731
- 46 scope of 759
- 46 text of 758
- 47, principle underlying, 760
- 47, scope of, 761
- 48 explanation, nature of 774
- 48, principle underlying 772
- 48, scope of, 772
- 48, text of 772
- 49, principle underlying, 775
- 49, scope of 775
- 49 text of 775
- 50, principle underlying 777
- 50 proviso nature of 780
- 50 scope of, 777
- 50 text of 778
- 51, principle underlying 783
- 51 scope of, 783
- 51 text of, 783
- 52, principle underlying, 787
- 52, scope of, 787
- 52, text of 786
- 53 origin of the rule in 791
- 53 principle underlying, 791
- 53, scope of 792
- 53 text of, 791
- 54 and old section, 798
- 54, explanation I nature of 803
- 54 explanation II, nature of 802
- 54 principle underlying 797
- 54 text of, 797
- 54 scope of, 798
- 55 explanation nature of 807
- 55 principle underlying 803
- 55, scope of 801
- 55 text of, 803
- 56 meaning of 818
- 56, principle underlying 817
- 56, text of, 814
- 57 clause I, nature of 821
- 57 clause II nature of 822
- 57 clause III nature of, 823
- 57, clause IV, nature of 823
- 57 clause V nature of, 823
- 57, clause VI, nature of, 823
- 57, clause VII nature of 824
- 57, clause, VIII, nature of 824
- 57 clause IX nature of, 826
- 57, clause X nature of, 828
- 57 clause XI nature 829
- 57 clause XII, nature of 829
- 57 clause XIII, nature of 829
- 57 text of 818
- 58 principle underlying 838
- 58, proviso nature of, 815
- 58, scope of, 835
- 58 text of, 838
- 59, if happily worded, 817
- 59 text of, 816
- 60 principle underlying, 855
- 60, proviso I nature of, 869
- 60 proviso II, nature of, 869

Section—contd

- 60, scope of 867
- 60, text of, 854
- 61, text of, 871
- 62 explanation I nature of 875
- 62 explanation II nature of 875
- 63 text of 872
- 63 scope of, 874
- 63 clause I nature of 876
- 63 clause II nature of 877
- 63 clause III nature of 877
- 63 clause IV nature of 878
- 63 clause V, nature of 879
- 63 scope of 872 875
- 63 text of 872
- 64 origin of the rule in 882
- 64 principle underlying 882
- 64 scope of 882
- 64 text of 882
- 65 and section 49 of the Registration Act 888
- 65 clause A original document if in the possession or power of adversary 889
- 65 clause I, nature of 901
- 65, clause G nature of 902
- 65 principle underlying 884
- 65 scope of 884
- 65, text of 884
- 66 principle underlying 904
- 66 proviso para (1) when the document to be proved is itself a notice 907
- 66 proviso para (2) when the adverse party must know that he will be required to produce document 907
- 66 proviso para (3) when the opponent has fraudulent possession of document 909
- 66 proviso para (4) when the adverse party has the original document in Court, 909
- 66 proviso para (5) when the adverse party or his pleader has admitted loss of the document 910
- 66 proviso para (6) when the person in possession of the document is out of the reach of or not subject to the process of the Court 910
- 66 scope of 904
- 66 text of 903
- 67 principle underlying 911
- 67 scope of, 911
- 67 text of 911
- 68 before amendment by Act XXXI of 1926 916
- 68 departure from old rule and principle underlying 918
- 68 history of rule in 916
- 68, proviso nature of 931

Section—contd

- 68 reason and policy of the old rule in, 917
- 68, rules in general nature and policy of, in 916
- 68 scope of, 919
- 68, text of 915
- 69 principle underlying 932
- 69 scope of 934
- 69, text of, 932
- 70 principle underlying 936
- 70 scope of, 936
- 70, text of, 936
- 71 principle underlying 936
- 71 scope of 939
- 71, text of 939
- 72 principle and scope of 943
- 72, text of 943
- 73 English law and origin of the rule in 947
- 73 principle underlying 941
- 73 scope of 944
- 73, text of 944
- 74 scope of 951,
- 74, text of 952
- 75, text of, 955
- 76 scope of, 958
- 76, text of, 958
- 77 principle underlying 959
- 77 scope of 960
- 77, text of 950
- 78 clause I nature of, 962
- 78, clause II nature of 962
- 78 clause III nature of 962
- 78 clause IV nature of 963
- 78 clause V nature of 963
- 78 clause VI nature of 963
- 78, text of, 961
- 79 principle underlying 964
- 79, text of 963
- 80 principle underlying 966
- 83 scope of, 966
- 81 principle underlying 969
- 81, text of, 969
- 82 and English law, 972
- 82 origin of 972
- 82 scope of, 974
- 82, text of 972
- 83 principle underlying, 975,
- 83, scope of, 976
- 83, text of 975
- 84 principle underlying, 976
- 84 scope of 979
- 84, text of, 978
- 85 principle underlying 979
- 85 scope of, 979
- 85, text of 976
- 86 underlying 981
- 86, scope of, 982
- 86, text of 981
- 87 scope of 983
- 87, text of 983
- 88 scope of, 983
- 88, text of, 983

Section—contd

- 89 principle underlying, 981
- 89 scope of 984
- 89, text of, 981
- 90 explanation nature of 997
- 90 scope of, 986
- 90, text of, 985
- 91 application of to an oral statement made by witness to a police officer, 1013
- 91, exception I nature of 1014
- 91 exception II, nature of 1014
- 91 explanation I nature of 1015
- 91 explanation II nature of 1017
- 91, explanation III nature of, 1017
- 91 principle underlying, 998
- 91 scope of 999
- 91, text of 997
- 91 illustrations nature of 1089
- 92 principle underlying, 1021
- 92 proviso I, scope of 1051
- 92, proviso II scope of 1060
- 92 proviso III scope of 1065
- 92 proviso IV, scope of 1070
- 92 proviso V, scope of, 1076
- 92, proviso VI, scope of 1081
- 92 provisos scope of, 1050
- 92 rule in and application to other documents, 1089
- 92 rule in, and application to will cases 1082
- 92 scope of 1022
- 92, text of 1019
- 93 principle underlying 1001
- 93, scope of 1091
- 93, text of 1089
- 94 scope of 1096
- 94, text of 1096
- 95 application of, 1101
- 95, application of maxim of in different classes of cases, 1101
- 95, extension of the rule in, 1101
- 95 general principle and scope in, 1103
- 95 illustrative cases under, 1104
- 95 principle underlying, 1101
- 95, text of, 1100
- 96 and similar law 1105
- 96 principle underlying, 1105
- 96 rule in application of the 1107
- 96 scope of 1105
- 96, text of 1105
- 97 cases under, 1110
- 97 principle underlying, 1109
- 97 scope of, 1109
- 97, text of, 1109
- 98 principle underlying 1112
- 98 scope of 1112
- 98, text of 1111
- 99 principle underlying 1117
- 99, scope of 1116
- 99, text of 1117
- 100 scope of 1119
- 100, text of, 1119

Section—could

- 101, scope of, 1121
- 101, text of, 1119
- 102, scope of, 1125
- 102, text of, 1125
- 103, scope of, 1126.
- 103, text of, 1125
- 104, scope of, 1127
- 104, text of, 1127
- 105, general exceptions under, 1152
- 105, scope of, 1149
- 105, special exceptions under, 1152
- 105, text of, 1149
- 106, principle underlying, 1153
- 106, scope of, 1151
- 106, text of, 1153
- 107, principle underlying, 1160
- 107, scope of, 1160
- 107, text of, 1160
- 108, origin and growth of the rule in, 1162
- 108, principle underlying, 1162
- 108, scope of, 1164
- 108, text of, 1162
- 109, principle underlying, 1174
- 109, scope of, 1175
- 109, text of, 1174
- 110, principle underlying, 1176
- 110, scope of, 1176.
- 110, text of, 1176
- 111, principle underlying, 1181
- 111, scope of, 1182
- 111, text of, 1181
- 112, origin and growth of the rule in, 1190
- 112, principle underlying, 1190
- 112, scope of, 1192
- 112, text of, 1190
- 113, scope of, 1199.
- 113, text of, 1199
- 114, scope of, 1200
- 114, text of, 1201
- 115, and section 43 T. P. Act distinguished, 1282
- 115, if exhaustive of all kinds of estoppel, 1245.
- 115, principle underlying, 1237
- 115, requisites of, 1246
- 115, text of, 1236
- 116
- 117, principle underlying, 1304
- 117, text of, 1303
- 118, scope of, 1311
- 118, text of, 1309
- 119
- 120
- 121, principle underlying, 1321
- 121, scope of, 1322
- 121, text of, 1321
- 122, scope of, 1327.

Section—could

- 122, text of, 1325
- 123, principle underlying 1329
- 123, scope of, 1329
- 123, text of, 1329
- 124, principle underlying 1332.
- 124, scope of, 1334.
- 124, text of, 1333
- 125, principle underlying, 1336
- 125, scope of, 1336
- 125, text of, 1336
- 126, principle underlying, 1339
- 126, proviso I, nature of, 1351
- 126, proviso II, nature of, 1353
- 126, scope of, 1340
- 126, text of, 1338
- 126, to apply to interpreters etc 1355
- 127
- 128, text of, 1355
- 129, principle underlying, 1357.
- 129, scope of, 1357
- 129, text of, 1356
- 130, principle underlying, 1358
- 130, text of, 1358
- 131, principle underlying, 1361
- 131, scope of, 1361
- 131, text of, 1361
- 132, principle underlying, 1362
- 132, proviso, 1362
- 132, proviso nature of, 1361
- 132, scope of, 1363
- 132, text of, 1361
- 133
- 134, text of, 1387
- 135, scope of, 1390.
- 135, text of, 1390
- 136, para (1), nature of, 1394
- 136, para (2), nature of, 1394
- 136, para (3), nature of, 1395
- 136, text of, 1393
- 137, text of, 1393
- 138, scope of, 1395
- 138, text of, 1395
- 139, scope of, 1419
- 139, text of, 1419
- 140, scope of, 1419
- 140, text of, 1419
- 141, text of, 1419
- 142
- 143
- 144
- 145
- 146
- 147
- 148
- 149
- 150
- 151
- 152
- 153
- 154
- 155
- 156
- 157
- 158
- 159
- 160
- 161
- 162
- 163
- 164
- 165
- 166
- 167
- 168
- 169
- 170
- 171
- 172
- 173
- 174
- 175
- 176
- 177
- 178
- 179
- 180
- 181
- 182
- 183
- 184
- 185
- 186
- 187
- 188
- 189
- 190
- 191
- 192
- 193
- 194
- 195
- 196
- 197
- 198
- 199
- 200

Section—contd

- 145, object of, 1423
- 145, scope of, 1129
- 145, text of, 1127.
- 146, scope of, 1133
- 146, text of, 1133
- 147, meaning of, 1137
- 147, text of, 1437.
- 148 clause II, nature of, 1110
- 148, scope of, 1138
- 148, text of, 1138
- 149, text of, 1110
- 150, text of, 1111
- 151 text of, 1411
- 152, text of, 1411.
- 153, Exception I, nature of 1445
- 153, Exception II, nature of, 1447
- 153, principle underlying 1111
- 153, scope of, 1411
- 153, text of, 1412
- 157, it affected by section 162 or the Criminal Procedure Code, 1471
- 157, if violated Hearsay Rule 1468
- 157, scope of, 1468
- 157, text of, 1467.
- 158, scope of, 1474.
- 158, text of, 1474
- 159, and section 160 difference between, 1482
- 159, principle underlying, 1175
- 159, scope of, 1476
- 159, text of, 1474
- 160, scope of, 1182
- 160, text of, 1482
- 161, principle underlying 1183
- 161, scope of, 1483
- 161, text of, 1483
- 162, scope of, 1485
- 162 text of, 1485
- 163, principle underlying 1483
- 163 scope of, 1483
- 163, text of, 1487.
- 164, principle underlying 1189
- 164 scope of, 1489
- 164, text of, 1489
- 165, construction of, 1191
- 165 English rule as to, 1490
- 165, principle underlying, 1190
- 165, proviso (1), nature of, 1191
- 165 proviso (2), nature of, 1191
- 165, scope of, 1491
- 165, text of, 1490

Section—contd

- 166, scope of, 1496.
- 166, text of, 1496
- 167, if equally applicable to civil and criminal cases, 1500
- 176, scope of, 1499
- 167, text of, 1496
- Section 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000
- 1478
- Seditious, speeches, intention how to be inferred in, 279
- Self implications, of harm, if relevant, 193
- Senses of hearing general considerations as to, 862
- of sight, general considerations as to, 862
- of smell general considerations as to, 863
- of taste, general considerations as to, 863
- of touch, general considerations as to, 864
- Senses, as a stage in testimony, general considerations as to, 864
- in
- if
- relevant, 149
- Solicitor, or pleader and client, proof of good faith in case of, 1180
- Solvency, presumption as to, 1234
- Special means of knowledge if, evidence, 776
- Specific, things, meaning of, 695
- performance, onus in, 1148
- Spiritual adviser, proof of good faith in case of, 1185
- Spontaneous, exclamations and knowledge, infancy, etc., 117
- exclamations and verbal act doctrine, 113
- exclamations and reasons for its admission, 115
- exclamations and requisites for admission of, 116
- exclamations, if an exception to the Hearsay Rule, 111
- Standard of belief if any, for sufficiency of evidence, 51
- of comparison, genuineness of, 919
- treatise, whether can be used in corroborating or contradicting an expert, 760
- Statement, affecting the conduct, if a lapse, 155.

Section—contd

- 101, scope of, 1124
- 101, text of, 1119
- 102, scope of, 1125
- 102, text of, 1125
- 103 scope of, 1126.
- 103, text of, 1125
- 104, scope of, 1127
- 104, text of, 1127
- 105, general exceptions under, 1152
- 105, scope of, 1149
- 105, special exceptions under, 1152
- 105, text of, 1149
- 106, principle underlying, 1153
- 106, scope of, 1154
- 106, text of, 1153
- 107 principle underlying 1160
- 107, scope of, 1160
- 107, text of, 1160
- 108, origin and growth of the rule in, 1162
- 108, principle underlying 1162
- 108, scope of, 1164
- 108, text of, 1162
- 109, principle underlying 1174
- 109, scope of, 1175
- 109, text of, 1174
- 110, principle underlying 1176
- 110, scope of, 1176
- 110, text of, 1176
- 111, principle underlying 1181
- 111, scope of, 1182
- 111, text of, 1181
- 112, origin and growth of the rule in, 1190
- 112 principle underlying 1190
- 112, scope of, 1192
- 112, text of, 1190
- 113, scope of, 1199
- 113, text of, 1199
- 114, scope of, 1200
- 114, text of, 1201
- 115, and section 43 T P Act distinguished, 1282
- 115, if exhaustive of all kinds of estoppel, 1245
- 115, principle underlying, 1237
- 115, requisites of, 1246
- 115, text of, 1236

Section—contd

- 122, text of, 1 25
- 123, principle underlying 1329
- 123, scope of, 1329
- 123, text of, 1329
- 124, principle underlying 1333.
- 124, scope of 1334
- 124, text of, 1333
- 125, principle underlying, 1336
- 125 scope of, 1336
- 125, text of 1336
- 126, principle underlying 1339
- 126, proviso I nature of, 1351
- 126, proviso II nature of, 1353
- 126 scope of 1340
- 126, text of 1338
- 126, to apply to interpreters etc 1355
- 127, text of, 1355
- 129, principle underlying 1357.
- 129 scope of, 1357
- 129, text of, 1356
- 130, principle underlying, 1356
- 130, text of, 1358
- 131 principle underlying, 1361
- 131, scope of, 1361
- 131 text of, 1361
- 132, principle underlying, 1361
- 132, proviso, 1362
- 132, proviso nature of, 1361
- 132 scope of, 1363
- 132, text of 1361
- 133, principle underlying 1361
- 133, scope of, 1369
- 133, text of, 1365

- 117, principle underlying, 1304
- 117, text of, 1303
- 118, scope of, 1311
- 118, text of, 1309
- 119, scope of, 1318
- 119, text of, 1318
- 120, reason of the rules in, 1319
- 120, text of, 1319
- 121, principle underlying 1321
- 121, scope of, 1322
- 121, text of, 1321
- 122, scope of, 1327

Section—cont'd

- 115, object of, 1123
- 115, scope of, 1129
- 115, text of, 1127
- 116, scope of, 1133
- 116, text of, 1133
- 117, meaning of, 1137
- 117, text of, 1137
- 148 clause II, nature of, 1110
- 148 scope of, 1138
- 148 text of, 1138
- 149, text of, 1110
- 150, text of, 1111
- 151 text of, 1111
- 152, text of, 1111
- 153 Exception I, nature of, 1115
- 153, Exception II, nature of, 1117
- 153 principle underlying, 1111
- 153 scope of, 1111
- 153, text of, 1113
- 154, principle underlying, 1119
- 154, scope of, 1119
- 154, text of, 1119
- 155, clause I, nature of, 1160
- 155, clause II, nature of, 1160

157, if directed by section 10, of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1471

157, if violated Hearsay Rule, 1468

157, scope of, 1468

157, text of, 1167

158, scope of, 1474.

158, text of, 1474

159, and section 160 difference between, 1192

159, principle underlying, 1175

159, scope of, 1476

159, text of, 1474

160, scope of, 1192

160, text of, 1482

161, principle underlying, 1193

161, scope of, 1483

161, text of, 1483

162, scope of, 1485

162 text of, 1485

163, principle underlying, 1488

163 scope of, 1188

163, text of, 1487.

164 principle underlying, 1189

164 scope of, 1489.

164, text of, 1489

165, construction of, 1191

165, English rule as to, 1490

165, principle underlying, 1190

165, proviso (1), nature of, 1196

165, proviso (2), nature of, 1196

165, scope of, 1191

165, text of, 1490

Section—cont'd

166, scope of, 1196.

166, text of, 1496

167, if equally applicable to civil and criminal cases, 1500

176, scope of, 1499

167 text of, 1496

Section 12 to 17, scope of, 727

Seditious, speeches, intention how to be inferred in, 279

Self implications, of harm, if relevant, 193

Senses of hearing general considerations as to, 862

of sight, general considerations as to, 862

of smell general considerations as to, 863

of taste, general considerations as to, 863

of touch, general considerations as to, 861

Senses, as a stage in testimony, general

in

if

relevant, 149

Solicitor, or pleader and client, proof of good faith in case of, 1186

Solvency, presumption as to, 1234

Special means of knowledge if, evidence, 776

Specific, things, meaning of, 695 performance, onus in, 1148

Spiritual adviser, proof of good faith in case of, 1185

Spontaneous, exclamations and knowledge, infancy, etc, 117

exclamations and verbal act doctrine, 113

exclamations and reasons for its admission, 115

exclamations and requisites for admission of, 116

of evidence, 116

of evidence, 116

of evidence, 116

of evidence, 116

of evidence, 116

of evidence, 116

of evidence, 116

of evidence, 116

of evidence, 116

of evidence, 116

Statement, affecting the conduct, if admissible, 153

Section—contd

- 101, scope of, 1121
- 101, text of, 1119
- 102, scope of, 1125
- 102, text of, 1125
- 103, scope of, 1126.
- 103, text of, 1125
- 104, scope of, 1127
- 104, text of, 1127
- 105, general exceptions under, 1152
- 105, scope of, 1149
- 105, special exceptions under, 1152
- 105, text of, 1149
- 106, principle underlying, 1153
- 106, scope of, 1154
- 106, text of, 1153
- 107, principle underlying, 1160
- 107, scope of, 1160
- 107, text of, 1160
- 108, origin and growth of the rule in, 1162
- 108, principle underlying, 1162
- 108, scope of, 1164
- 108, text of, 1162
- 109, principle underlying, 1174
- 109, scope of, 1175
- 109, text of, 1174
- 110, principle underlying, 1176
- 110, scope of, 1176
- 110, text of, 1176
- 111, principle underlying, 1181
- 111, scope of, 1182
- 111, text of, 1181
- 112, origin and growth of the rule in, 1190
- 112, principle underlying, 1190
- 112, scope of, 1192
- 112, text of, 1190
- 113, scope of, 1190.
- 113, text of, 1199
- 114, scope of, 1200
- 114, text of, 1201
- 115, and section 43 T. P. Act distinguished, 1282
- 115, if exhaustive of all kinds of estoppel, 1245.
- 115, principle underlying, 1237
- 115, requisites of, 1246
- 115, text of, 1236
- 116, principle underlying, 1291.
- 116, scope of, 1291
- 116, text of, 1291

Section—contd

- 122, text of, 1-25
- 123, principle underlying, 1329
- 123, scope of, 1329
- 123, text of, 1329
- 124, principle underlying, 1332.
- 124, scope of, 1334
- 124, text of, 1333
- 125, principle underlying, 1336
- 125, scope of, 1336
- 125, text of, 1336
- 126, principle underlying, 1339
- 126, proviso I nature of, 1351.
- 126, proviso II nature of, 1353
- 126, scope of, 1340
- 126, text of, 1338
- 126, to apply to interpreters etc 1355
- 127, principle underlying, 1355
- 127, scope of, 1355
- 127, text of, 1355
- 128, nature of, 1356
- 128, text of, 1355
- 129, principle underlying, 1357.
- 129, scope of, 1357
- 129, text of, 1356
- 130, principle underlying, 1358
- 130, text of, 1358
- 131, principle underlying, 1361
- 131, scope of, 1361
- 131, text of, 1361
- 132, principle underlying, 1362
- 132, proviso, 1362
- 132, proviso nature of, 1364
- 132, scope of, 1363
- 132, text of, 1361
- 133, principle underlying, 1364
- 133, scope of, 1369
- 133, text of, 1365
- 134, principle underlying, 1367.
- 134, scope of, 1389
- 134, text of, 1387
- 135, scope of, 1390
- 135, text of, 1390
- 136, para (1), nature of, 1394
- 136, para (2), nature of, 1394
- 136, para (3) nature of, 1395
- 136, text of, 1393
- 137, text of, 1393
- 138, scope of, 1395
- 138, text of, 1395
- 139, scope of, 1419
- 139, text of, 1419
- 140, scope of, 1419
- 140, text of, 1419
- 141, text of, 1419
- 142, principle underlying, 1420
- 142, scope of, 1421.
- 142, text of, 1419
- 143, principle underlying, 1425
- 143, scope of, 1425.
- 143, text of, 1425
- 144, object of, 1427.
- 144, text of, 1427

Statement—contd

made under an official duty if to depend on the nature of the duty, 65 made while pointing out the scene of the crime nature of 457
of admission if admissible 106
of past events and conditions if excluded as evidence, 366
of persons who cannot be called as witnesses meaning of 607
of sundry facts against interest, 752
preceding finding upon search or enquiry nature of 457 relating to existence of relationship if relevant 607
which cannot be used as corroborative evidence 1173
who may testify as to 366
Statements accompanying production of articles nature of 157
as regards state of health and bodily feelings if relevant 103
by persons who can not be called as witnesses illustration of, 606
Post litem motam if evidence 362
State, of body or bodily feeling if relevant 272 274
state of body or bodily feeling, statement as to if exception to Hearsay Rule 273 state of things under which the fact happened 157 159 Statue
Statute
Statute
78, 79 80
Stolen, property, recent possession of if exclude 1202
Subjective relevancy absence of controlling motive to misrepresent in 517
if require adequate knowledge of, 517
in hearsay statement, meaning of, 516
Subject to contrary intention in, context meaning of 35
Subsequent, conduct if relevant 146
conduct of the accused, if admissible 108
effect as the basis of inference, if relevant, 121 existence, if evidence of existence 1210
Sudden flight of the accused if relevant, 160
Suspicion conjecture etc, probative force of, 65

Suspicion—contd

in will cases rate of 77
of fraud only, effect of 77
Suspicious circumstances whatever 77
Survey map, entries in if relevant 667
Survival of the deceased if relevant, 193
T
Technical expressions, nature of, 1114
Telegrams if evidence, 1615
Telegrams, time of delivery, if evidence, 360
Telephone communications if evidence, 870
Tenancy nature of, presumption as to, 1234
Tenets of any body of men, evidence as to 776
Testimony, as to market value, 870
Evidence and proof differentiated 47
if affected by generic human traits, 856
if influenced by character psychology of the liar 858
if influenced by emotion, 859
if influenced by experience 860
if influenced by mental derangement, 859
if influenced by race, 896
if influenced by sex, 858
if influenced by temperament, 859
meaning of, 46
Receipt of money for, 1463
to facts stated in documents mentioned in section 159, 1182
to facts stated in documents mentioned in section 159, illustration of, 1482 written testimony, Rule of preference, 533 Thakbust map and survey map, if in conflict 667
maps, entries in, if relevant, 666
Things said or done by conspirator in reference to common design, if admissible, 176 said or done by conspirator in reference to common design, if admissible, illustrations of, 176
Thirty, years, mode of reckoning, 988
Title of an Act, if a part of the Act, 1 of an Act, if a part of the Act, 1 Index
of an Act, 1

Statement—could

against interest and criminal prosecution and suit for damages, 561 against interest—admissible for all facts contained in it, 564 against interest if preponderance of interest in, 563 against interest if, when it is, 565 against pecuniary interest, if admissible, 558 against proprietary interest, if admissible, 560 against interest,—meaning of, 563 against interest,—personal knowledge of its declarant, 567 against interest—to be contemporaneous with entry, 567 against interest—to be made ante litem motam, 566 against interest—to be spontaneous, 566 against interest—to be verbal or written, 566
 as regards boundaries if admissible, 571
 as to pedigree if to be contemporaneous with the event, 596 as to pedigree if to contain a certain kind of facts as its subject, 595
 as to public or general interest if admissible, 576 before police by accused if admissible, 119
 by agent if relevant, 107
 by party interested in subject matter, if admissible, 318 by party to proceeding or his agent, if admissible, 318 by party from whom interest derived, 318 by party who is dead or can not be found, 505.
 by persons who can not be called as witnesses, 505 by suitor in representative character, if admissible, 318 entirely exonerating, the making and inculcating his co-prisoners, 490 former if can be given as corroborative evidence, 1472 former of witness may be proved to corroborate later testimony as to some fact, 1467 forming part of a conversation, if to be verbal or written, 678 forming part of a conversation, document, book by whom such evidence to be given and how much, 677

Statement—could

forming part of a conversation document, book, series of letters or papers, evidence of, 676 forming part of a conversation, the Court to consider necessity for admission of, 679 form of articulate, 366
 form of hearsay, 508
 giving opinion as to public right or custom if relevant, 505.
 if admissible to prove that the fact contained in the statement or any is sue, 594
 if it relates to cause of death, 505
 if document relating to transaction in section 13, cl (a), if relevant, 506 made against interest of maker, if relevant, 505 made by agents if admissible, 322 made by party to the proceeding if admissible, 320 made by nominal parties, if admissible, 322 made by several persons and expressing feeling etc., if relevant, 506 made by testator to prove the will, if admissible, 196 made in the ordinary course of business, 542 made in the ordinary course of business, contemporaneous if required in Indian law, 548 made in the ordinary course of business, duty to a third person if a necessity in, 547 made in the ordinary course of business English law as to, 546 made in the ordinary course of business English rules if there is a duty to a third person in, 547 made in the ordinary course of business extrinsic proof if required, 550 made in the ordinary course of business if include verbal statement, 544 made in the ordinary course of business if relevant, 505 made in the ordinary course of business origin of the rule of, 546 made in the ordinary course of business, personal knowledge if required in, 549 made in the will or deed, if relevant, 506 made in the writing, form or mark of the entry, 551 made to police by the parties in the course of investigation if admissible for corroboration, 1471

Statement—contd

made under an official duty if to depend on the nature of the duty, 675
 while pointing out the scene of the crime, nature of 457
 of admission if admissible, 196
 of past events and conditions if excluded as evidence, 366
 of persons who cannot be called as witnesses meaning of, 507
 of sundry facts against interest, 562
 preceding finding upon search or enquiry, nature of 457
 relating to existence of relationship if relevant 505
 which cannot be used as corroborative evidence 1173
 who may testify as to 366
 Statements accompanying production of articles nature of 157
 as regards state of health and bodily feelings, if relevant 108
 by persons who can not be called as witnesses illustration of, 506
Post litem motam if evidence, 362
 State, of body or bodily feeling if relevant 272, 274
 state of body or bodily feeling, statement as to, if exception to Hearsay Rule 273

Stat
Stat

document, 953

78, 79, 80

Stolen, property, recent possession of, if exclude, 1202

Subjective relevancy absence of controlling motive to misrepresent in 517

if require adequate knowledge of, 517

in hearsay statement, meaning of, 516

'Subject to contrary intention in, context, meaning of, 35

Subsequent, conduct if relevant, 146
conduct of the accused, if admissible 158

effect as the basis of inference, if relevant, 121

existence, if evidence of existence 1210

Sudden flight of the accused if relevant, 160

Suspicion conjecture etc., probative force of, 55

Suspicion—contd

in will cases, nature of, 16

of fraud only, effect of, 15

Suspicious, documents, what are, 990

Survey, map, entries in, if relevant, 661

Survival of the deceased, II evidence, 193.

T

Technical expressions, nature of, 1114

Telegrams if evidence, 1015

Telegrams, time of delivery, if evidence, 700

Telephone communications if evidence, 870

Tenancy, nature of, presumption as to, 1234

Tenets of any body of men, evidence as to 776

Test identifications and corroboration, 1170

Testimony, as to market value, 870

Evidence and proof differentiated 47

if affected by generic human traits, 856

if influenced by character psycho-

if influenced by mental derangement, 858

if influenced by race, 856

if influenced by sex, 858

if influenced by temperament, 859
meaning of, 46

receipt of money for, 1462

to facts stated in documents mentioned in section 159, 1182

to facts stated in documents mentioned in section 159, illustration of, 1482

written testimony, Rule of preferring, 533

Thakbust map and survey map, if in conflict 667

maps entries in, if relevant, 666

Things said or done by conspirator in reference to common design, II admissible, 175 said or done by conspirator in reference to Thirt

Title " " " " part of the

Act, 1

of an Act, if a part of the Indian laws as to, 1.

of an Act, its nature, 1.

Title of an Act, its origin 1
 Time and place admission of facts
 verifying 173
 of threats, if evidence, 143
 Topographical survey map, if relevant 667
 Trade customs proved by particular instances 218
 Trait to be relevant, 795
 Transaction, if includes judgment, 220
 meaning of, 93, 217
 meaning of, in the Criminal Procedure Code, 95
 meaning of, in cases of transaction
 which is required by law to be
 in writing and registered 1073
 what facts form parts of, 95
 Transactions, cumulative and continuous admission of 99
 documentary, admission of, 100
 Transfer, of Property Amendment Act
 (XXVII of 1926), if retrospective, 930
 Transfers, to defraud creditors, evidence in actions of, 281
 Translation, of documents, 1485
 "Tried jointly", meaning of, 483.

U

Uncontradicted, testimony nature of, 852
 Undue, influence if exclude oral evidence, 1055
 'Unless he agreed in writing etc'
 meaning of, 1860
 Unoriginal, and original evidence,
 meaning of, 52
 'Unsuspecting, appearance' meaning
 of, 992
 Usage of trade, agriculture etc, evidence as to 775
 Usage must be known, 1079
 Using as evidence, of document production of which was refused on
 notice, 1489
 as evidence of document production
 of which was refused on notice,
 illustration of, 1489

V

Value, how to be proved, 729
 Vendor, and purchaser, onus in, 1148 Veneral disease, as evidence of adultery, 195
 Verbal, act doctrine and spontaneous
 exclamations, 113
 act doctrine application of, in cases
 of sale, 105
 act doctrine certain spurious limitation drawn from, 118
 act doctrine interpretation of, 112

W

Waiver, and Relevancy 616
 Wajub ul arz entry in, if admissible, 656
 entries in, evidentiary value of, 246
 Want of capacity of the contracting parties, if exclude oral evidence, 1056 of due execution, if exclude oral
 evidence, 1056
 of failure of consideration if exclude oral evidence 1056
 What matters may be proved in connection with proved statement relevant under section 32 or 33, 1474
 When, documents are silent and terms
 not inconsistent with the terms
 of the contract, oral evidence, 1063
 in the ordinary course of business, documents purporting to be written etc, Exemptio olim testis,
 if evidence 767.
 leading questions may be asked, 1425 leading questions must not be asked, 1470
 the person has received documents
 etc, Exemptio olim viso, if
 evidence, 765
 the person has seen the person
 write, Exvisu scriptoris, if evidence, 763
 they (leading questions) may be
 asked, 1425
 'Who cannot be found' meaning of, 518
 'is dead', meaning of, 518
 'Whole of it does not apply correctly
 to another' meaning of, 1111
 Who may give evidence of agreement varying terms of document, 1117
 may give evidence of agreement
 vary in terms of document, illustration of, 117
 may testify, 1309
 Wills, onus in, 1149
 Witness accused if a competent witness, 1316 allowing witness to tell in his own way, meaning of, 1400
 attendance of, 1390
 bold and zealous, nature of, 1399
 calling the other party as 1454.
 child witness, nature of, 1314 competency of, how to ascertain, 1312 continuous narration by witness 1400.

Witness--contd.

discrepancies between, 853.
disinterestedness of, if required, 1408 estimate of, in another case 1461

exclusion of, from court room, 1390 foundation for discrediting a, 1461

of

if can not be obtained without delay
or expense, 623
if to be competent, 1309
if unavailable for official duty,
effect of, 623
if unavailable, proof of, 622
impeaching credit of one's own, 1466 impeaching one's own, 1453
incapable of giving evidence, effect
of, 622
insanity of witness, effect of, 1315
Judge may restrict number of
counsel in the examination of, 1408
knowledge, observation, memory etc., if required to enhance the testimony of, 1407
miscellaneous kind of, 1318
necessary witness, not called, presumption in, 1261.

Witness--contd

necessary witness, who are, 1455.
not excluded from answering on ground that answer will crimi-
nate, 1361

oath of a witness, nature of, 1311.
of tender years, duty of Court, in
case of 1313

prior self contradiction in party's
own, 1461

re-examination of, 1302

timid and self-conscious, nature of, 1398

when may use copy of document to refresh memory, 1474

when kept out of the way by adverse party, effect of, 622

where cannot be found, effect of, 620

loss
evi-

quency when, 936
in

, if

meaning of, 776

used in a peculiar sense, nature of, 1116

Writing, comparison of, meaning of, 919

comparison of, value of, 950.
if really a contract, 103.

Title of an Act, its origin, 1
 Time and place, admission of facts
 verifying 173
 of threats, if evidence, 143
 Topographical survey map, if relevant 667
 Trade customs proved by particular instances 218
 Trait, to be relevant, 795
 Transaction, if includes judgment, 220
 meaning of, 93, 217
 meaning of in the Criminal Proce- dure Code, 93
 meaning of, in cases of transaction
 which is required by law to be
 in writing and registered 1073
 what facts form parts of, 93
 Transactions cumulative and continuous admission of, 99
 documentary, admission of, 100
 Transfer, of Property Amendment Act
 (XXVII of 1926), if retrospective, 930
 Transfers, to defraud creditors, evidence in actions of, 281
 Translation, of documents, 1485
 "Tried jointly", meaning of, 483.

U

Uncontradicted, testimony nature of,
 852
 Undue, influence, if exclude oral evidence, 1055
 'Unless, he agreed in writing etc'
 meaning of, 1360
 Unoriginal and original evidence,
 meaning of, 52
 'Unsuspicious, appearance' meaning
 of, 992
 Usage of trade, agriculture etc, evidence as to 775
 Usage must be known, 1079
 Using as evidence, of document production of which was refused on
 notice, 1489
 as evidence of document production
 of which was refused on notice,
 illustration of, 1489

V

Value, how to be proved, 729
 Vendor, and purchaser, onus in, 1148
 Venereal disease, as evidence of adultery, 195
 Verbal act doctrine and spontaneous
 exclamations, 113
 act doctrine application of, in cases
 of sale 105
 act doctrine certain spurious limitation drawn from, 118
 act doctrine interpretation of, 112

W

Waiver, and Relevancy 616
 Wajub ul arz, entry in, if admissible, 656
 entries in, evidentiary value of, 246
 Want of capacity of the contracting parties, if exclude oral evidence, 1056
 of due execution, if exclude oral
 evidence, 1056
 of failure of consideration, if ex-
 clude oral evidence 1056
 What matters may be proved in connection with proved statement
 relevant under section 32 or 33, 1474
 When, documents are silent and terms
 not inconsistent with the terms
 of the contract, oral evidence, 1063
 in the ordinary course of business,
 documents purporting to be written etc, Exscriptio olim visis,
 if evidence, 767
 leading questions may be asked, 1425 leading questions must not be asked, 1420
 the person has received documents
 etc Exscriptio olim visis, if
 evidence, 765
 the person has seen the person
 write, Exvisu scriptoris if evidence, 763
 they (leading questions) may be
 asked, 1425
 'Who cannot be found' meaning of, 518
 'is dead', meaning of, 518
 'Whole of it does not apply correctly
 to another' meaning of, 1111
 Who may give evidence of agreement
 varying terms of document, 1117
 may give evidence of agreement varying terms of document, illustration of, 117
 may testify, 1309
 Wills, onus in, 1149
 Witness accused if a competent witness, 1316 allowing witness to tell in his own
 way, meaning of, 1400
 attendance of, 1390
 bold and zealous, nature of, 1399
 calling the other party as 1451
 child witness, nature of, 1314
 competency of, how to ascertain, 1312 continuous narration by witness
 without question, 1400
 counsel engaged in a case if a, 1317 death of, after, examination in chief, 1405

Witness—cont'd

discrepancies between, 873
 disinterestedness of, if required, 1308 drunkenness, effect of, 1316
 dull and stupid nature of 1308
 effect of cross-examining his own, 1457
 estimate of, in another case 1461

if offered or withheld as evidence of bribe, proof of, 1462

if can not be obtained without delay
 or expense, 623

if to be competent, 1309

if unavailable for official duty,
 effect of, 623

if unavailable, proof of, 622

impeaching credit of one's own, 1466

impeaching one's own, 1453

incapable of giving evidence, effect
 of, 622

insanity of witness, effect of, 1315

Judge may restrict number of
 counsel in the examination of, 1408

Witness—cont'd

necessary witness, who are, 1455

not excluded from answering on ground that answer will crimi-
 nate, 1361

oath of a witness, nature of, 1311

of tender years duty of Court, in
 case of 1313

prior self-contradiction in party's
 own, 1451

rambling nature of, 1308

re-establishment of credit of, 1461.

to testify orally, meaning of, 1306

timid and self-conscious, nature of, 1398

when may use copy of document to

ad-

of,

620

Witnesses, to character, 1410

Witness's name unknown through loss or illegibility of document, evidence when, 936

in

if

relevant, 100

meaning of, 776

used in a peculiar sense, nature of,

Title of an Act, its origin 1
 Time and place admission of facts
 verifying, 173
 of threats, if evidence, 143
 Topographical survey map, if relevant, 667
 Trade customs proved by particular instances 218
 Trait to be relevant, 795
 Transaction, if includes judgment, 220
 meaning of, 93, 217
 meaning of, in the Criminal Procedure Code, 93 meaning of, in cases of transaction which is required by law to be in writing and registered 1073
 what facts form parts of, 95
 Transactions cumulative and continuous, 93
 Transfers, to defraud creditors, evidence in actions of, 281
 Translation, of documents, 1485
 "Tried jointly", meaning of, 483

U

Uncontradicted testimony nature of, 852
 Undue influence, if exclude oral evidence, 1055
 'Unless, he agreed in writing etc' meaning of, 1360 Unoriginal, and original evidence, meaning of, 52
 'Unsuspecting, appearance' meaning of, 902 Usage of trade, agriculture etc, evidence as to, 775
 Usage must be known, 1079
 Using as evidence, of document production of which was refused on notice, 1489 as evidence of document production of which was refused on notice, illustration of, 1489

V

Value, how to be proved, 729
 Vendor, and purchaser, onus in, 1149
 Verbal declaration, as evidence of adultery, 195
 Verbal, act doctrine and spontaneous exclamation 113 act doctrine application of, in cases of sale 105 act doctrine certain spurious limitation drawn from, 115 interpretation of, 112

W

Waiver, and Relevancy 616
 Wajib ul arz, entry in, if admissible, 656
 entries in, evidentiary value of, 246
 Want of capacity of the contracting parties if exclude oral evidence, 1056 of due execution, if exclude oral evidence, 1056 in contemplation of death, if exclude oral evidence, 1056 1474
 When, documents are silent and terms not inconsistent with the terms of the contract, oral evidence, 1063 in the ordinary course of business, documents purporting to be written etc, Excriptio olim existit, if evidence, 767
 leading questions may be asked, 1425
 leading questions must not be asked, 1420
 the person has received documents etc, Excriptio olim existit, if evidence, 765 the person has seen the person write, Exscriptio scriptoris, if evidence, 763 they (leading questions) may be asked, 1425
 'Who cannot be found' meaning of, 518
 'is dead', meaning of, 518
 'Whole of it does not apply correctly to another' meaning of, 1111
 Who may give evidence of agreement varying terms of document, 1117 may give evidence of agreement varying terms of document, illustration of, 1117
 may testify, 1149
 Wills, onus in, 1149
 Witness accused, if a competent witness, 1316 allowing witness to tell in his own way meaning of, 1100
 attendance of, 1100
 hold an ideal view of, 1399
 calling the other party as, 1151
 child witness nature of, 1314
 competency of, how to ascertain 1112 certain a variation by witness without question, 1100 characterized in a case if a, 1317 death of, a competent witness of, 1100

Section—contd

- 115, object of 1428
- 115, scope of, 1129
- 115, text of, 1127
- 116, scope of 1434
- 116, text of, 1433
- 117, meaning of 1437
- 117, text of, 1437
- 148 clause II, nature of 1440
- 148, scope of, 1434
- 148, text of, 1433
- 149 text of, 1440
- 150 text of, 1441
- 151 text of, 1441
- 152, text of, 1441
- 153 Exception I, nature of 1445
- 153, Exception II, nature of, 1447
- 153 principle underlying, 1444
- 153, scope of, 1444
- 153 text of 1443
- 154, principle underlying, 1449
- 154, scope of, 1449
- 154, text of, 1449
- 155, clause I, nature of, 1460
- 155, clause II, nature of, 1462
- 155 clause III, nature of, 1462
- 155 clause IV, nature of, 1465
- 155, explanation, nature of, 1466
- 155, scope of, 1459
- 155 text of, 1468
- 156, scope of 1467
- 156 text of, 1467
- 157, if affected by section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1472

159, and section 160 : difference between, 1482

159, principle underlying, 1475

159, scope of, 1476

159, text of, 1474

160, scope of, 1482

160, text of, 1482

161, principle underlying, 1483

161, scope of, 1483

161, text of, 1483

162, scope of 1485

162 text of, 1485

163, principle underlying, 1488

163, scope of, 1488

163, text of, 1487.

164, principle underlying 1489

164 scope of, 1439.

164, text of, 1489

165, construction of, 1491

165, English rule as to, 1490

165, principle underlying, 1490

165, proviso (1), nature of, 1496

165, proviso (2), nature of, 1496

165, scope of, 1491

165, text of, 1490

Section—contd

166, scope of, 1496.

166, text of, 1496

167, if equally applicable to civil and criminal cases, 1500

176, scope of, 1499

167, text of, 1496

Seditions, speeches, intention how to be inferred in, 279

1478

Seditious, speeches, intention how to be inferred in, 279

Self implications, of harm, if relevant, 193

Senses of hearing general considerations as to, 862

of sight, general considerations as to, 862

of smell general considerations as to, 863

of taste, general considerations as to, 863

of touch, general considerations as to, 864

Senses as a whole in test many cases

in

if

relevant, 149

Solicitor, or pleader and client, proof of good faith in case of, 1180

Solvency, presumption as to, 1234

Special means of knowledge if, evidence, 776

Specific, things, meaning of, 695

performance, onus in, 1148

Spiritual adviser, proof of good faith in case of, 1185

Spontaneous, exclamations and knowledge, infancy, etc, 117

exclamations and verbal act doctrine, 113

exclamations and reasons for its admission, 115

exclamations and requisites for admission of, 116

of comparison, genuineness of, 919

treatise, whether can be used in corroborating or contradicting an expert, 760

Statement, affecting the conduct, if admissible, 153

Section—contd

- 101, scope of, 1124
- 101, text of, 1119
- 102, scope of, 1125
- 102, text of, 1125
- 103 scope of, 1126.
- 103, text of, 1125
- 104, scope of, 1127
- 104, text of, 1127
- 105 general exceptions under, 1152
- 105, scope of, 1149
- 105, special exceptions under, 1152
- 105, text of, 1149
- 106, principle underlying, 1153
- 106, scope of, 1154
- 106, text of, 1153
- 107, principle underlying, 1160
- 107, scope of, 1160
- 107, text of, 1160
- 108, origin and growth of the rule in, 1162
- 108, principle underlying 1162
- 108 scope of, 1164
- 108, text of, 1162
- 109, principle underlying 1174
- 109, scope of, 1175
- 109, text of, 1174
- 110, principle underlying, 1176
- 110, scope of, 1176
- 110, text of, 1176
- 111, principle underlying, 1181
- 111, scope of, 1182
- 111, text of, 1181
- 112, origin and growth of the rule in, 1190
- 112, principle underlying 1190
- 112, scope of, 1192
- 112, text of, 1190
- 113, scope of, 1199.
- 113, text of 1199
- 114, scope of, 1200
- 114, text of, 1201
- 115, and section 43 T. P. Act distinguished 1282
- 115, if exhaustive of all kinds of estoppel, 1245
- 115, principle underlying, 1237
- 115, requisites of, 1246
- 115, text of, 1236
- 116, principle underlying, 1291
- 116 scope of, 1291
- 116, text of, 1291
- 117, principle underlying, 1304
- 117, text of, 1303
- 118, scope of, 1311
- 118, text of, 1309
- 119 scope of, 1318
- 119 text of, 1318
- 120, reason of the rules in, 1319
- 120, text of, 1319
- 121, principle underlying, 1321
- 121, scope of, 1322
- 121, text of, 1321
- 122, scope of, 1327

Section—contd

- 122, text of, 1-25
- 123, principle underlying 1329
- 123 scope of, 1329
- 123, text of, 1329
- 125, principle underlying, 1336
- 125 scope of, 1336
- 125, text of, 1336
- 126, principle underlying 1339
- 126, proviso I nature of, 1371
- 126, proviso II nature of 1353
- 126, scope of 1340
- 126, text of, 1338
- 126, to apply to interpreters etc 1355
- 127, principle underlying, 1355
- 127, scope of, 1355
- 127, text of, 1355
- 128, nature of 1356
- 128 text of, 1355
- 129, principle underlying 1357
- 129 scope of, 1357
- 129, text of, 1356
- 130, principle underlying, 1358
- 130, text of, 1358
- 131 principle underlying, 1361
- 131, scope of, 1361
- 131 text of, 1361
- 132, principle underlying 1362
- 132, proviso, 1362
- 132 proviso nature of, 1361
- 132 scope of, 1363
- 132, text of, 1361
- 133, principle underlying, 1363
- 133, scope of, 1369
- 133, text of, 1365
- 134 principle underlying 1357
- 134 scope of 1389
- 134, text of, 1387
- 135, scope of, 1390
- 135, text of, 1390
- 136, para (1), nature of, 1394
- 136 para (2), nature of 1394
- 136, para (3) nature of, 1395
- 136, text of, 1393
- 137, text of, 1393
- 138, scope of, 1395
- 138, text of, 1395
- 139, scope of, 1419
- 139, text of, 1419
- 140, scope of 1419
- 140, text of, 1419
- 141, text of, 1419
- 142, principle underlying, 1420
- 142, scope of, 1421.
- 142, text of, 1419
- 143, principle underlying, 1425
- 143 scope of 1425
- 143, text of, 1425
- 141, object of, 1427
- 141, text of, 1427

Statement—contd.

made under an official duty if to depend on the nature of the duty, 655
 made while pointing out the scene of the crime, nature of, 457
 of admission if admissible, 196
 of past events and conditions, if excluded as evidence, 366
 of persons, who cannot be called as witnesses meaning of, 507
 of sundry facts against interest, 562
 preceding finding upon search or enquiry, nature of, 457
 relating to existence of relationship, if relevant, 505
 which cannot be used as corroborative evidence, 1473
 who may testify as to, 366
 Statements, accompanying production of articles, nature of 457
 as regards state of health and bodily feelings, if relevant, 103
 by persons who can not be called as witnesses, illustration of, 506
Post item motam, if evidence, 362
 State, of body or bodily feeling if relevant 272, 274
 state of body or bodily feeling, statement as to, if exception to Hearsay Rule 273 state of things under which the fact happened, if evidence, 128 Statutes recital in, if conclusive 671
 Statutes, and state paper, if public document 953 Statutory, presumptions, 1934
 Stay, of suits, meaning of, 186
 Stephen's definition of Relevancy—its criticism and consideration, 77, 78, 79, 80 Stolen, property, recent possession of, if exclude, 1202
 Subjective relevancy, absence of controlling motive to misrepresent in 517
 if require adequate knowledge of, 517
 in hearsay statement, meaning of, 516
 'Subject to contrary intention in, context meaning of, 35
 Subsequent, conduct if relevant, 146
 conduct of the accused, if admissible, 158
 effect as the basis of inference, if relevant, 121
 existence, if evidence of existence 1210
 Sudden flight of the accused if relevant, 160
 Suspicion, conjecture etc., probative force of, 55

Suspicion—contd.

in will cases, nature of, 56
 of fraud only, effect of, 55
 Suspicious, documents, what are, 996
 Survey, map, entries in, if relevant, 661
 Survival, of the deceased, if evidence, 193

T

Technical expressions, nature of, 1114
 Telegrams if evidence, 1015
 Telegrams, time of delivery, if evidence, 300
 Telephone communications if evidence, 870
 Tenancy, nature of, presumption as to, 1234
 Tenets, of any body of men, evidence as to 776
 Testimonial, elements, nature of, 855.
 Testimonials, evidence as regards time, if evidence, 174
 Test, identifications and corroboration, 1470
 Testimony, as to market value, 870
Evidence and proof differentiated 47
 if affected by generic human traits, 866
 if influenced by character psychology of the liar 838
 if influenced by emotion, 859
 if influenced by experience, 860
 if influenced by mental derangement, 858
 if influenced by race, 596
 if influenced by sex, 858
 if influenced by temperament, 859
 meaning of, 46
 receipt of money for, 1402
 to facts stated in documents mentioned in section 159, 1182
 to facts stated in documents mentioned in section 159, illustration of, 1482
 written testimony, Rule of preferring, 533
 Thakbust map and survey map, if in conflict, 667
 maps, entries in, if relevant, 666
 Things said or done by conspirator in reference to common design, if admissible, 175
 said or done by conspirator in reference to common design, if admissible, illustrations of, 176
 Thirty, years, mode of reckoning, 938
 Title of an Act, if a part of the Act, 1
 of an Act, if a part of the Act, Indian laws as to, 1
 of an Act, its nature, 1.

statement—could
 against interest and criminal pro secution and suit for damages, 561. against interest—admissible for all facts contained in it, 564 against interest if preponderance of interest in, 563
 against interest if, when it is 565 against pecuniary interest if admis
 sible, 559
 against proprietary interest if ad missible 560

Statement—could fo

poraneous with event, " against interest—to be made ante litam motam, 568
 against interest—to be spontaneous 566 against interest—to be verbal or written, 566
 as regards boundaries if admissible 571

claim
 object

595 as to public or general interest

 if admissible, 576
 before police by accused if admis
 sible, 119
 by agent if relevant, 107
 by party interested in subject matter, if admissible 318 by party to proceeding or his agent
 if admissible, 318
 by party from whom interest de rived, 318
 by party who is dead or can not be
 found 505.
 by persons who can not be called as witnesses, 505
 by suitor in representative charac ter, if admissible, 318 entirely exonerating, the making and inculpating his co-prisoners, 490 former if can be given as corro
 borative evidence, 1472
 former of witness may be proved to corroborate later testimony as to some fact 1467 forming part of a conversation, if
 to be verbal or written 678 forming part of a conversation, document, book by whom such evidence to be given and how much 677

forming part of a conversation, Court to consider necessity for admission of, 679

form of, articulate, 366
 form of hearsay, 503
 giving opinion as to public right or custom if relevant, 505
 if admissible to prove that the fact contained in the statement or any
 is sue, 594
 if it relates to cause of death, 505
 if document relating to transaction in section 13, cl (a), if relevant 506 made against interest of maker, if
 relevant 505
 made by agents if admissible, 322
 made by party to the proceeding,
 if admissible, 320
 made by nominal parties, if admis
 sible 322
 made by several persons and expres sing feeling etc, if relevant, 506 made by testator to prove the will
 if admissible, 196
 made in the ordinary course of
 business, 542
 made in the ordinary course of business, contemporaneous if re quired in Indian law, 548
 made in the ordinary course of business, duty to a third person if a necessity in 547
 made in the ordinary course of business, English law as to 546
 made in the ordinary course of business, English rules if there is a duty to a third person in, 547
 made in the ordinary course of business extrinsic proof if re quired 550
 made in the ordinary course of business if include verbal state ment 544
 made in the ordinary course of business if relevant, 505
 made in the ordinary course of business origin of the rule of 546
 made in the ordinary course of business, personal knowledge if required in 549
 made in the will or deed, if relevant 506 made in the writing, form or mark of the entry, 651
 made to police by the parties in the course of investigation if admissible for corroboration, 1171

Statement—contd

made under an official duty if to depend on the nature of the duty, 655
made while pointing out the scene of the crime, nature of, 157
of admission, if admissible, 196
of past events and conditions if excluded as evidence, 366
of persons who cannot be called as witnesses meaning of 507
of su
prece
or relating to existence of relationship if relevant 505
which cannot be used as corroborative evidence 1173
who may testify as to, 366
Statements accompanying production of evidence at trial of 477

Rule 273

Sta
Sta

document 053

78, 79, 80

Stolen, property, recent possession of, if exclude, 1902

Subjective relevancy absence of controlling motive to misrepresent in 517

if require adequate knowledge of, 517

in hearsay statement, meaning of, 516

'Subject to contrary intention in, context meaning of, 35

Subsequent, conduct if relevant 146

conduct of the accused, if admissible, 158

effect as the basis of inference, if relevant, 121

existence, if evidence of existence 1210

Sudden flight of the accused if relevant, 160

Suspicion conjecture etc., probative force of, 55

I E A -203

Suspicion—contd

in will cases nature of, 56
of fraud only, effect of, 55

Suspicious, documents what are, 996

Survey map, entries in, if relevant, 661

Survival of the deceased, if evidence, 193

T

Technical expressions, nature of, 1114

Telegrams if evidence, 1015

Telegrams, time of delivery, if evidence, 300

Telephone communications if evidence, 870

Tenancy, nature of, presumption as to, 1234

Tenets of any body of men, evidence as to 776

Test identifications and corroboration, 1470

Testimony, as to market value, 870

Evidence and proof differentiated 47

if affected by generic human traits, 856

if influenced by character psychology of the liar 858

if influenced by emotion, 859

if influenced by experience 860

if influenced by mental derangement 858

1 kw page 596

meaning of, as receipt of money for, 1462

to facts stated in documents mentioned 150 1400

of, 140-

written testimony, Rule of preferring, 533

Thakbust map and survey map, if in conflict 667

maps entries in, if relevant, 666

Things said or done by conspirator in reference to common design, if admissible, 175

said or done by conspirator in reference to common design, if admissible, illustrations of, 176

Thirty, years, mode of reckoning, 988

Title of an Act, if a part of the Act 1

of an Act if a part of the Act, Indian laws as to, 1

of an Act, its nature, 1.

Witness—cont'd

discrepancies between, 873
disinterestedness of, if required, 1408

• 0500.

1457

estimate of, in another case, 1461
exclusion of, from court room, 1390
foundation for discrediting a, 1161
hostile, treatment of, 1399
idiotic of, effect of, 1316
if bribed or has accepted the offer of
bribe proof of, 1462
if can not be obtained without delay
or expense, 623
if is competent, 1309
if unavailable for official duty,
effect of, 623
if unavailable, proof of, 623
impeaching credit of one's own, 1466 impeaching one's own, 1453
incapable of giving evidence, effect
of, 622
insanity of witness, effect of, 1316
Judge may restrict number of
counsel in the examination of, 1408
knowledge, observation, memory etc.,
if required to enhance the testimony of, 1407
miscellaneous kind of, 1318
necessary witness, not called, presumption in, 1261.

Witness—cont'd

necessary witness, who are, 1155.
not excluded from answering on
ground that answer will crimi-
nate. 1361

orth of a witness, nature of, 1311.

of tender years, duty of Court, in
case of 1313

prior self-contradiction in party's
own. 1451

OWN, 1971
 family no. not rec'd of 1900

[illegible]

when may use copy of document to refresh memory. 1474

when kept out of the way by adverse party, effect of, 622

where cannot be found, effect of, 620

loss
ex-

in

meaning of, 776

used in a peculiar sense, nature of, 1116

Writing, comparison of, meaning of,

comparison of, value of, 950.
if really a contract, 103.

Title of an Act, its origin 1
 Time and place admission of facts
 verifying, 173
 of threats, if evidence, 143 Topographical survey map, if relevant 667
 Trade customs proved by particular instances, 218
 Trait to be relevant, 795
 Transaction, if includes judgment, 220
 meaning of, 93, 217
 meaning of in the Criminal Procedure Code, 93
 ion
 be uti-
 nuous admission of 99
 Tr. Act
 pro

 Transfers to defraud creditors, evidence in actions of, 281
 Translation, of documents 1485
 "Tried jointly", meaning of, 483.

U

Uncontradicted testimony nature of, 852 Undue influence, if exclude oral evidence 1055
 'Unless, he agreed in writing etc'
 meaning of, 1360
 Unoriginal, and original evidence,
 meaning of, 52
 'Unsuspecting, appearance' meaning
 of, 992
 Usage of trade, agriculture etc, evidence as to, 775
 pro-
 d on
 notice, 1489
 as evidence of document production
 of which was refused on notice,
 illustration of, 1489

V

Value, how to be proved, 729
 Vendor, and purchaser, onus in, 1148
 Veneral disease, as evidence of adultery, 195
 Verbal, act doctrine and spontaneous
 exclamations, 113
 act doctrine application of, in cases
 of sale, 105
 act doctrine certain spurious limitation drawn from, 118
 act doctrine interpretation of, 112

W

Waiver, and Relevancy 616
 Wajib ul arz, entry in, if admissible, 656
 entries in, evidentiary value of, 246
 Want of capacity of the contracting parties if exclude oral evidence, 1056
 of due execution, if exclude oral
 evidence, 1056
 of failure of consideration, if ex-
 clude oral evidence 1056
 What matters may be proved in connection with proved statement
 relevant under section 32 or 33, 1474
 When, documents are silent and terms
 not inconsistent with the terms
 of the contract, oral evidence, 1063
 in the ordinary course of business,
 documents purporting to be written etc, Excriptio olim visis,
 if evidence, 787.
 leading questions may be asked, 1425
 leading questions must not be asked, 1420
 the person has received documents
 etc, Excriptio olim viso, if
 evidence, 785
 the person has seen the person
 write Exisu scriptiois, if evidence, 763
 they (leading questions) may be
 asked, 1425
 'Who cannot be found' meaning of, 518
 'is dead', meaning of, 518
 'Whole of it does not apply correctly
 to another' meaning of 1111
 Who may give evidence of agreement
 varying terms of document, 1117
 may give evidence of agreement
 vary in terms of document, illustration of, 117
 may testify, 1309
 Wills, onus in, 1149
 Witness accused if a competent witness, 1316 allowing witness to tell in his own
 way, meaning of, 1400
 attendance of, 1390
 bold and zealous, nature of, 1399
 calling the other party as 1454
 child witness, nature of, 1314
 competency of, how to ascertain, 1312 continuous narration by witness 1400

SUBJECT INDEX.

Witness—contd

discrepancies between, 553
disinterestedness of, if required, 1408 drunkenness, effect of, 1316
dull and stupid, nature of, 1393
effect of cross-examining his own, 1457.
estimate of, in another case 1461
exclusion of, from court room, 1490
foundation for discrediting a, 1461
hostile, treatment of 1399
idiotcy of, effect of, 1316
if bribed or has accepted the offer of
bribe, proof of, 1462
if can not be obtained without delay
or expense, 623
if to be competent, 1309
if unavailable for official duty,
effect of, 623
if unavailable, proof of, 622
impeaching credit of one's own, 1466 impeaching one's own, 1453
incapable of giving evidence, effect
of, 622
insanity of witness, effect of, 1315
Judge may restrict number of
counsel in the examination of, 1408
sumption in, 1401.

Witness—contd

necessary witness, 1408
not excluded from jury ground that answers
name, 1361
oath of a witness, nature of
of tender years, duty of,
case of 1313
prior self contradiction
own, 1451
when may use copy of
refresh memory, 1474
when kept out of the way
verse party, effect of, 622
where cannot be found, 620 Writing, comparison of, me 949 comparison of, value of, 94
if really a contract, 103

